1 Foreign Wives Are Put Away Now when Esdras was thus praying, and beseeching, and weeping, and lying before the temple of God, there was gathered to him of Israel an exceeding great assembly of men and women and children, and the 2 people wept with much lamentation. | And Sechenias the son of Jehiel of the sons of Elam answered, and said to Esdras: We have sinned against our God, and have taken strange wives of the people of the land: and now if there be repentance in Israel 3 concerning this, | let us make a covenant with the Lord our God, to put away all the wives, and such as are born of them, according to the will of the Lord, and of them that fear the commandment of the Lord our God: let it be done according 4 to the law. | Arise, it is your part to give orders, and we will 5 be with you. Take courage, and do it. | So Esdras arose, and made the chiefs of the priests and of the Levites, and all Israel, to swear that they would do according to this word. And 6 they swore. | And Esdras rose up from before the house of God, and went to the chamber of Johanan the son of Eliasib, and entered it. He ate no bread, and drank no water: for he mourned for the transgression of them that had come out of the captivity.

7 And proclamation was made in Juda and Jerusalem to all the children of the captivity, that they should assemble to- 8 gether into Jerusalem. | And that whosoever would not come within three days, according to the counsel of the princes and the ancients, all his substance should be taken away, and he should be cast out of the company of them that had returned 9 from captivity. | Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin gathered themselves together to Jerusalem within three days, in the ninth month, the twentieth day of the month: and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling, because 10 of the sin and the rain. | And Esdras the priest stood up, and said to them: You have transgressed, and taken strange wives,

10, 1-44: Mixed marriages were not forbidden in ancient Israel. See, e.g., David's foreign wives (2 Sm 3, 3). Later, the law (see Dt 7, 3-4) forbids marriage with foreign wives, who were usually more tenacious about their religion than their husbands were about Yahweh's religion.

11 to add to the sins of Israel. | And now make confession to the Lord the God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and separate yourselves from the people of the land, and from your strange 12 wives. | And all the multitude answered and said with a loud 13 voice: According to your word unto us, so be it done. | But as the people are many, and it is time of rain, and we are not able to stand outdoors, and it is not a work of one day or two (for 14 we have exceedingly sinned in this matter), | let rulers be appointed in all the multitude. And in all our cities, let them that have taken strange wives come at the times appointed, and with them the ancients and the judges of every city, until the wrath of 15 our God be turned away from us for this sin. | Then Jonathan the son of Azahel, and Jaasia the son of Thecua were appointed over this, and Mesollam and Sebethai, Levites, helped them. | 16 And the children of the captivity did so. And Esdras the priest, and the men heads of the families in the houses of their fathers, and all by their names, went and sat down in the first day of the 17 tenth month to examine the matter. | And they made an end with all the men that had taken strange wives by the first day of the first month.

18 The Names of the Guilty And there were found among the sons of the priests that had taken strange wives: of the sons of Josue the son of Josedec, and his brethren, Maasia, and 19 Eliezer, and Jarib, and Godolia. | And they gave their hands to put away their wives, and to offer for their offense a ram of 20 the flock. | And of the sons of Emmer, Hanani, and Zebedia. | 21 And of the sons of Harim, Maasia, and Elia, and Semeia, and 22 Jehiel, and Ozias. | And of the sons of Pheshur, Elioenai, Maa-
23 sia, Ismael, Nathanael, Jozabed, and Elasa. | And of the sons of the Levites, Jozabed, and Semei, and Celaia, the same is 24 Calita, Phataia, Juda, and Eliezer. | And of the singing men, Eliasib. And of the porters, Sellum, and Telem, and Uri. | 25 And of Israel, of the sons of Pharos, Remeia, and Jezia, and Melchia, and Miamin, and Eliezer, and Melchia, and Banea. | 26 And of the sons of Elam, Mathania, Zacharias, and Jehiel, and 27 Abdi, and Jerimoth, and Elia. | And of the sons of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jerimuth, and Zabad, and Aziaza. |
28 And of the sons of Babai, Johanan, Hanania, Zabbai, Athalai. |
29 And of the sons of Bani, Mosollam, and Melluch, and Adaia, 30 Jasub, and Saal, and Ramoth. | And of the sons of Phahath, Moab, Edna, and Chalal, Banaias, and Maasias, Mathanias, 31 Beseleel, Bennui, and Manasse. | And of the sons of Herem,

10, 19: Gave their hands: took an oath.

32 Eliezer, Josue, Melchias, Semeias, Simeon, | Benjamin, Mal-
33 och, Samarias. | And of the sons of Hasom, Mathanai, Matha-
34 tha, Zabad, Eliphelet, Jermai, Manasse, Semei. | Of the sons
35 of Bani, Maaddi, Amram, and Uel, | Baneas, and Badaias,
36.37 Cheliau, | Vania, Marimuth, and Eliasib, | Mathanias, Math-
38.39 ania, and Jasi, | and Bani, and Bennui, Semei, | and Sal-
40 mias, and Nathan, and Adaias, | and Mechnedebai, Sisai,
41.42 Sarai, | Ezrel, and Selemiau, Semeria, | Sellum, Amaria,
43 Joseph. | Of the sons of Nebo, Jehiel, Mathathias, Zabad, Za-
44 bina, Jeddu, and Joel, and Banaia. | All these had taken strange wives, and there were among them women that had borne children.

THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAS

1 Nehemias Mourns, Fasts, and Prays The words of Nehemias the son of Helchias. And it came to pass in the month of Casleu, in the twentieth year, as I was in the castle
2 of Susa, | that Hanani one of my brethren came, he and some men of Juda; and I asked them concerning the Jews, that remained and were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem
3 | And they said to me: They that have remained, and are left of the captivity there in the province, are in great affliction and reproach, and the wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the
4 gates thereof are burned with fire. | And when I had heard these words, I sat down, and wept, and mourned for many days: and I fasted, and prayed before the face of the God of heaven.

5 And I said: I beseech you, O Lord God of heaven, strong, great, and terrible, who keeps covenant and mercy with those that love you and keep your commandments:

6 Let your ears be attentive, and your eyes open, to hear the prayer of your servant, which I pray before you now, night and day, for the children of Israel your servants. And I confess the sins of the children of Israel, by which they have sinned against you: I and my father's house have sinned.

7 We have been seduced by vanity, and have not kept your commandments, and ceremonies and judgments, which you have commanded your servant Moses.

8 Remember the word that you have commanded to Moses your servant, saying: If you shall transgress, I will scatter you abroad among the nations:

9 But if you return to me, and keep my commandments, and do them, though you should be led away to the uttermost parts of the world, I will gather you from everywhere, and bring you back to the place which I have chosen for my name to dwell there.

10 And these are your servants, and your people: whom you have redeemed by your great strength, and by your mighty hand.

11 I beseech you, O Lord, let your ear be attentive to the prayer of your servant, and to the prayer of your servants who desire to fear your name. And direct your servant this day: and give him mercy before this man. For I was the king's cupbearer.

1 Nehemias Goes to Jerusalem And it came to pass in the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king, that wine was before him: and I took up the wine, and gave it to the king. And I was as one languishing away before his face.
2 | And the king said to me: Why is your countenance sad, though you do not appear to be sick? This is not without cause, but some evil, I know not what, is in your heart. And I was
3 seized with an exceeding great fear, | and I said to the king: O king, live for ever. Why should not my countenance be sorrowful, seeing the city of the place of the sepulchers of my fathers is desolate, and the gates thereof are burned with fire? |
4 Then the king said to me: For what do you make request? And 5 I prayed to the God of heaven, and I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, and if your servant has found favor in your sight, that you would send me into Judea to the city of 6 the sepulcher of my father, and I will build it. | And the king said to me, and the queen that sat by him: For how long shall your journey be, and when will you return? And it pleased the king, and he sent me: and I fixed him a time.

7 Nehemias Presents the King's Letters And I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors of the country beyond the river, that they convey 8 me over till I come into Judea. | And a letter to Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, to give me timber that I may cover the gates of the tower of the house, and the walls of the city, and the house that I shall enter into. And the king gave me according to the good hand of my God with me.
9 And I came to the governors of the country beyond the river, and gave them the king's letters. And the king had sent 10 with me captains of soldiers, and horsemen. | And Sanaballat

2, 10: "Sanaballat, governor of Samaria" found in the Elephantine papyri, is believed to be the same as the Sanaballet in vv. 10 and 19. These papyri, named after an island in southern Egypt where a Jewish colony in the fifth century B.C. was employed as mercenary soldiers for the Persian army, have confirmed much of the history in Esdras and Nehemias.

the Horonite, and Tobias the servant, the Ammonite, heard it, and it grieved them exceedingly, that a man had come, who 11 sought the prosperity of the children of Israel. | And I came
12 to Jerusalem, and was there three days. | And I arose in the night, I and some few men with me, and I told not any man what God had put in my heart to do in Jerusalem: and there
13 was no beast with me, but the beast that I rode upon. | And I went out by night by the gate of the valley, and before the dragon fountain, and to the dung gate: and I viewed the wall of Jerusalem which was broken down, and the gates thereof which
14 were consumed with fire. | And I passed to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's aqueduct: and there was no place
15 for the beast on which I rode to pass. | And I went up in the night by the torrent, and viewed the wall, and going back I
16 came to the gate of the valley, and returned. | But the magistrates knew not whither I went, or what I did: neither had I as yet told any thing to the Jews, or to the priests, or to the nobles, or to the magistrates, or to the rest that did the work.

17 Appeal of Nehemias to Rebuild the Wall Then I said to them: You know the affliction wherein we are, because Jerusalem is desolate, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire. Come, and let us build up the walls of Jerusalem, and let 18 us be no longer a reproach. | And I showed them how the hand of my God was good with me, and the king's words which he had spoken to me. And I said: Let us rise up, and build. And their hands were strengthened in good.
19 But Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobias the servant, the Ammonite, and Gossem the Arabian heard of it, and they scoffed at us, and despised us, and said: What is this thing that 20 you do? Are you going to rebel against the king? | And I answered them, and said to them: The God of heaven he helps us, and we are his servants. Let us rise up and build: but you have no part, nor justice, nor remembrance in Jerusalem.

1 The Wall Is Rebuilt Then Eliasib the high priest arose, and his brethren the priests, and they built the flock gate: they sanctified it, and set up the doors thereof: even unto the tower of a hundred cubits they sanctified it, unto the tower of Hana-2 neel. | And next to him the men of Jericho built. And next to 3 them built Zachur the son of Amri. | But the fish gate the sons of Asnaa built: they covered it, and set up the doors thereof,

3, 1-31: The Chronicler incorporates in Nehemias' memoirs this official list of forty-two groups of builders.

and the locks, and the bars. And next to them built Marimuth 4 the son of Urias the son of Accus. | And next to him built Mosollam the son of Barachias, the son of Merezebel. And 5 next to them built Sadoc the son of Baana. | And next to them the Thecuites built: but their great men did not put their 6 necks to the work of their Lord. | And Joiada the son of Pha-sea, and Mosollam the son of Besodia built the old gate: they covered it and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the 7 bars. | And next to them built Meltias the Gabaonite, and Jadon the Meronathite, the men of Gabaon and Maspha, for 8 the governor that was in the country beyond the river. | And next to him built Eziel the son of Araia the goldsmith, and next to him built Ananias the son of the perfumer: and they left 9 Jerusalem unto the wall of the broad street. | And next to him built Raphaia the son of Hur, lord of the street of Jerusalem. | 10 And next to him Jedaia the son of Haromaph, over against his own house, and next to him built Hattus the son of Hasebonia. | 11 Melchias the son of Herem, and Hasub the son of Phahath
Moab, built half the street, and the tower of the furnaces. | 12 And next to him built Sellum the son of Alohes, lord of half 13 the street of Jerusalem, he and his daughters. | And the gate of the valley Hanun built, and the inhabitants of Zanoe: they built it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars, and a thousand cubits in the wall unto the gate of the 14 dunghill. | And the gate of the dunghill Melchias the son of Rechab built, lord of the street of Bethacharam: he built it, 15 and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars. | And the gate of the fountain Sellum the son of Cholhoza built, lord of the street of Maspha: he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and the bars; and the walls of the pool of Siloe unto the king's garden, and unto the steps that go down from the city of David.
16 After him built Nehemias the son of Azboc, lord of half the street of Bethsur, as far as over against the sepulcher of David, and to the pool that was built with great labor, and to 17 the house of the mighty. | After him built the Levites, Rehum the son of Benni. After him built Hasebias, lord of half the 18 street of Ceila in his own street. | After him built their brethren Bavai the son of Enadad, lord of half Ceila.
19 And next to him Aser the son of Josue, lord of Maspha, built another measure, over against the going up of the strong 20 corner. | After him, in the mount, Baruch the son of Zachai built another measure, from the corner to the door of the house 21 of Eliasib the high priest. | After him Merimuth the son of Urias the son of Haccus, built another measure from the door of the house of Eliasib to the end of the house of Eliasib. | 22 And after him built the priests, the men of the plains of the 23 Jordan. | After him built Benjamin and Hasub, over against their own house. And after him built Azarias the son of Ma-

24 asias the son of Ananias, over against his house. | After him built Bennui the son of Hanadad another measure, from the 25 house of Azarias unto the bending, and unto the corner. | Phalel, the son of Ozi, over against the bending and the tower, which lies out from the king's high house, that is, in the court of the prison. After him Phadaia the son of Pharos.
26 And the Nathinites dwelt in Ophel, as far as over across the water gate toward the east, and the tower that stood out. |
27 After him the Thecuites built another measure opposite the great tower that stands out unto the wall of the temple. |
28 And upward from the horse gate the priests built, every man 29 next to the other's house. | After them built Sadoc the son of Emmer opposite his house. And after him built Semaia the son
30 of Sechenias, keeper of the east gate. | After him built Hanania the son of Selemia, and Hanun the sixth son of Seleph, another measure. After him built Mosollam the son of Barachias opposite his treasury. After him Melchias the goldsmith's son built unto the house of the Nathinites and of the sellers of small wares, across the judgment gate, and up to the chamber
31 of the corner. | And within the chamber of the corner of the flock gate, the goldsmiths and the merchants built.

1 The Work Is Carried onward And it came to pass, that when Sanaballat heard that we were building the wall he was angry: and being moved exceedingly he scoffed at the Jews, |
2 and said before his brethren, and the multitude of the Samaritans: What are the silly Jews doing? Will the Gentiles let them alone? Will they sacrifice and make an end in a day? Are they able to raise stones out of the heaps of the rubbish, 3 which are burned? | Tobias also the Ammonite who was by him said: Let them build; if a fox go up, he will leap over their stone wall.
4 Hear you, our God, for we are despised: turn their reproach upon their own head, and give them to be despised in a land of 5 captivity. | Cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be

THE JERUSALEM OF NEHEMIAS

The vague and incomplete description in the biblical narrative accounts for the different views of archeologists. For the same reason, the map is but a rough guide to the reconstruction of the wall. It began with the Flock Gate (3,1), and the procession at the dedication of the wall followed more or less the building route. See 12,31-39 n. (All references to the Book of Nehemias.)

blotted out from before your face, because they have mocked your builders.

6 So we built the wall, and joined it all together unto the half thereof: and the heart of the people was excited to work. |
7 And it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and the Arabians, and the Ammonites, and the Azotians heard that the walls of Jerusalem were made up, and the breaches began 8 to be closed, that they were exceedingly angry. | And they all assembled themselves together, to come, and to fight against Jerusalem, and to prepare ambushes.

9 Nehemias Appoints Guards And we prayed to our God, and set watchmen upon the wall day and night against them. |
10 And Juda said: The strength of the bearer of burdens is decayed, and the rubbish is very much; and we shall not be
11 able to build the wall. | And our enemies said: Let them not know, nor understand, till we come in the midst of them,
12 and kill them, and cause the work to cease. | And it came to pass, that when the Jews that dwelt by them came and told us ten times, out of all the places from where they came to us, |
13 I set the people in the place behind the wall round about in 14 order, with their swords, and spears, and bows. | And I looked and rose up, and I said to the chief men and the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: Be not afraid of them. Remember the Lord who is great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, and your wives,
15 and your houses. | And it came to pass, when our enemies heard that the thing had been told us, that God defeated their counsel. And we returned all of us to the walls, every man to his work.

16 The Laborers Are Armed And it came to pass from that day forward, that half of their young men did the work, and half were ready for to fight, with spears, and shields, and bows, and coats of mail: and the rulers were behind them in all the 17 house of Juda. | Of them that built on the wall and that carried burdens, and that loaded, with one of his hands he did
18 the work, and with the other he held a sword. | For every one of the builders was girded with a sword about his reins.
19 And they built, and sounded with a trumpet by me. | And I said to the nobles, and to the magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: The work is great and wide, and we are sep-20 arated on the wall one far from another. In whatever place you shall hear the sound of the trumpet, rally all unto us: our 21 God will fight for us. | And let us do the work: and let one half of us hold our spears from the rising of the morning till 22 the stars appear. | At that time also I said to the people: Let every one with his servant stay in the midst of Jerusalem;

and let us take our turns in the night, and by day, to work. | 23 Now I and my brethren, and my servants, and the watchmen that followed me, did not put off our clothes: only every man stripped himself when he was to be washed.

1 Nehemias Exhorts the Usurers Now there was a great cry of the people, and of their wives against their brethren the 2 Jews. | And there were some that said: Our sons and our daughters are very many. Let us take up corn for the price of 3 them, and let us eat and live. | And there were some that said: Let us mortgage our lands, and our vineyards, and our 4 houses, and let us take corn because of the famine. | And others said: Let us borrow money for the king's tribute, and 5 let us give up our fields and vineyards. | And now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, and our children as their children. Behold we bring into bondage our sons and our daughters, and some of our daughters are bondwomen already:
neither have we the means to redeem them; and our fields and our vineyards other men possess.
6 And I was exceedingly angry when I heard their cry ac-7 cording to these words. | And my heart thought with myself; and I rebuked the nobles and magistrates, and said to them: Do you every one exact usury of your brethren? And I gathered to-8 gether a great assembly against them, | and I said to them:
We, as you know, have redeemed according to our ability our brethren the Jews, that were sold to the Gentiles; and will you then sell your brethren, for us to redeem them? And they held 9 their peace, and found not what to answer. | And I said to them: The thing you do is not good. Why do you not walk in the fear of our God, that we be not exposed to the reproaches of 10 the Gentiles our enemies? | Both I and my brethren, and my servants, have lent money and corn to many: let us all agree not to call for it again, let us forgive the debt that is owing to 11 us. Restore to them this day their fields, and their vineyards, and their oliveyards, and their houses; and the hundredth part of the money, and of the corn, the wine, and the oil, which you ship, it is most likely displaced. In spite of a newly born community, the

were wont to exact of them, give it rather for them. | And they said: We will restore, and we will require nothing of them: and we will do as you say. And I called the priests and took an oath of them to do according to what I had said. | Moreover I shook my lap, and said: So may God shake every man that shall not accomplish this word, out of his house, and out of his labors. Thus may he be shaken out and become empty. And all the multitude said: Amen. And they praised God. And the people did according to what was said.

The Generosity of Nehemias And from the day, in which the king commanded me to be governor in the land of Juda, from the twentieth year even to the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, for twelve years, I and my brethren did not eat the yearly allowance that was due to the governors. | But the former governors that had been before me, were chargeable to the people; and took of them in bread, and wine, and in money, every day forty sicles: and their officers also oppressed the people. But I did not so for the fear of God. | Moreover I built in the work of the wall, and I bought no land, and all my servants were gathered together to the work. | The Jews also and the magistrates to the number of one hundred and fifty men, were at my table, besides them that came to us from among the nations that were round about us. | And there was prepared for me day by day one ox, and six choice rams, besides fowls, and once in ten days I gave store of divers wines, and many other things. Yet I did not require my yearly allowance as governor; for the people were very much impoverished. | Remember me, O my God, for good according to all that I have done for this people.

The Enemies Threaten Nehemias And it came to pass, when Sanaballat, and Tobias, and Gossem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, heard that I had built the wall, and that there was no breach left in it (though at that time I had not set up the doors in the gates), Sanaballat and Gossem sent to me, saying: Come, and let us make a league together in the villages, in the plain of Ono. But they thought to do me mischief. | And I sent messengers to them, saying: I am doing a great work, and I cannot come down, lest it be neglected while I come and go down to you. | And they sent to me, according to this word, four times: and I answered them after

fifth time according to the former word, and he had a letter 6 in his hand written in this manner: ¶ It is reported among the Gentiles, and Gasmu has said it, that you and the Jews think to rebel; and therefore you build the wall and have a mind 7 to set yourself king over them. For which end ¶ you have also set up prophets, to preach of you at Jerusalem, saying: There is a king in Judea. The king will hear of these things. Therefore 8 come now, that we may take counsel together. ¶ And I sent to them, saying: There is no such thing done as you say, but you feign these things out of your own heart.

9 All these men thought to frighten us, thinking that our hands would cease from the work, and that we would leave 10 off. Wherefore I strengthened my hands the more. ¶ And I went into the house of Samaia the son of Delaia the son of Metabeel, privately. And he said: Let us consult together in the house of God in the midst of the temple. And let us shut the doors of the temple; for they will come to kill you, and in 11 the night they will come to slay you. ¶ And I said: Should such a man as I flee? And who is there that being as I am, 12 would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in. ¶ And I understood that God had not sent him: but that he had spoken to me as if he had been prophesying: and Tobias, and Sanaballat 13 had hired him. ¶ For he had taken money, that I being afraid should do this thing and sin; and they might have some evil to 14 upbraid me withal. ¶ Remember me, O Lord, for Tobias and Sanaballat, according to their works of this kind: and Noadias the prophet, and the rest of the prophets that would have put me in fear.

15 The Wall Is Finished But the wall was finished the five and twentieth day of the month of Elul, in two and fifty days. ¶ 16 And it came to pass when all our enemies heard of it, that all nations which were round about us were afraid and were cast down within themselves, for they perceived that this work was the work of God.

17 Moreover in those days many letters were sent by the principal men of the Jews to Tobias, and from Tobias came letters to 18 them. | For there were many in Judea sworn to him, because he was the son-in-law of Sechenias the son of Area, and Joha-nan his son had taken to wife the daughter of Mosollam the 19 son of Barachias. | And they praised him also before me, and they related my words to him. And Tobias sent letters to put me in fear.

1 Jerusalem's Gates Are Secured Now after the wall was built, and I had set up the doors, and numbered the porters and 2 singing men, and Levites, I commanded Hanani my brother, and Hananias ruler of the house of Jerusalem (for he seemed as a 3 sincere man, and one that feared God above the rest), and I said to them: Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened till the sun be hot. And while they were yet standing by, the gates were shut, and barred: and I set watchmen of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one by their courses, and every man before his house that faced the wall.

4 And the city was very wide and great and the people few 5 in the midst thereof, and the houses were not built. | But God had put in my heart, and I assembled the princes and magistrates and common people, to number them; and I found a book of the number of them who came up at first, and therein it was found written:

6 Those Who Came First from Babylon These are the children of the province, who came up from the captivity of them that had been carried away, whom Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had carried away, and who returned into Judea, 7 every one into his own city. | Who came with Zorobabel:
Josue, Nehemias, Azarias, Raamias, Nahamani, Mardochai, Belsam, Mespharath, Begoia, Nahum, Baana. The number of 8 the men of the people of Israel: | The children of Pharos, two
9 thousand one hundred seventy-two. | The children of Sephatia,
10 three hundred seventy-two. | The children of Area, six hun-

7, 2: Ruler of the house: probably means captain of the fortress.

7, 3: The gates of the city were usually opened at sunrise and closed at sunset, but they were opened later and closed earlier lest the Jerusalemites be attacked. Yet standing: before retiring to bed. By their courses: by their stations.

7, 4-69: Since Jerusalem needed more people and more dwellings, Nehemias thought it best to select one man out of ten (11, 1). He was about to take a census to carry out his plan when he found a register of the repatriated Jews. The list is almost the same as that in Esd 2.

11 dred fifty-two. | The children of Phahath Moab of the children of Josue and Joab, two thousand eight hundred eighteen. |
12 The children of Elam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four. | 13.14 The children of Zethua, eight hundred forty-five. | The 15 children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty. | The children of Ban-
16 nui, six hundred forty-eight. | The children of Bebai, six hun-
17 dred twenty-eight. | The children of Azgad, two thousand 18 three hundred twenty-two. | The children of Adonicam, six
19 hundred sixty-seven. | The children of Beguai, two thousand
20 sixty-seven. | The children of Adin, six hundred fifty-five. |
21 The children of Ater, children of Hezechias, ninety-eight. |
22.23 The children of Hasem, three hundred twenty-eight. | The 24 children of Besai, three hundred twenty-four. | The children of Hareph, a hundred and twelve.
25.26 The children of Gabaon, ninety-five. | The children of Beth-27 lehem, and Netupha, a hundred eighty-eight. | The men of 28 Anathoth, a hundred twenty-eight. | The men of Bethaz-29 moth, forty-two. | The men of Cariathiarim, Cephira, and Be-
30 roth, seven hundred forty-three. | The men of Rama and Geba, 31 six hundred twenty-one. | The men of Machmas, a hundred 32 twenty-two. | The men of Bethel and Hai, a hundred twenty-
33.34 three. | The men of the other Nebo, fifty-two. | The men 35 of the other Elam, one thousand two hundred fifty-four. | The 36 children of Harem, three hundred and twenty. | The children 37 of Jericho, three hundred forty-five. | The children of Lod, of 38 Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty-one. | The children of Senaa, three thousand nine hundred thirty.
39 The priests: the children of Idaia in the house of Josue, nine 40 hundred and seventy-three. The children of Emmer, one thou-41 sand fifty-two. | The children of Phashur, one thousand two 42 hundred forty-seven. | The children of Arem, one thousand
43 and seventeen. The Levites: | the children of Josue and Ced-
44 mihel, the sons | of Oduia, seventy-four. The singing men: |
45.46 the children of Asaph, a hundred forty-eight. | The porters: The children of Sellum, the children of Ater, the children of Telmon, the children of Accub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai, a hundred thirty-eight.
47 The Nathinites: the children of Soha, the children of Ha-
49 the children of Hagaba, the children of Selmai. | The children
50 of Hanan, the children of Geddel, the children of Gaher. | The children of Raaia, the children of Rasin, the children of Ne-51 coda. The children of Gezem, the children of Asa, the children 52 of Phasea. | The children of Besai, the children of Munim, the

53 children of Nephussim. | The children of Bacbuc, the chil-54 dren of Hacupha, the children of Harhur. | The children of 55 Besloth, the children of Mahida, the children of Harsa. | The children of Bercos, the children of Sisara, the children of The-56.57 ma. The children of Nasia, the children of Hatipha. | The children of the servants of Solomon: the children of Sothai, 58 the children of Sophereth, the children of Pharida. | The children of Jahala, the children of Darcon, the children of Jeddel. | 59 The children of Saphatia, the children of Hatil, the children of 60 Phochereth, who was born of Sabaim the son of Amon. | All the Nathinites, and the children of the servants of Solomon, three hundred ninety-two.

61 And these are they that came up from Telmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, Addon, and Emmer; and could not show the house of 62 their fathers, nor their seed, whether they were of Israel: | the children of Dalaia, the children of Tobia, the children of Ne-63 coda, six hundred forty-two. | And of the priests: the children of Habia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai the Galaadite; and 64 he was called by their name. | These sought their writing in the record, and found it not: and they were cast out of the priest-65 hood. | And Athersatha said to them, that they should not eat of the holies of holies, until there stood up a priest learned and skillful.

66 All the multitude as it were one man, forty-two thousand 67 three hundred sixty, | besides their menservants and women-servants, who were seven thousand three hundred thirty-seven; and among them singing men, and singing women, two hundred 68 forty-five. | Their horses, seven hundred thirty-six. Their mules, 69 two hundred forty-five; | their camels, four hundred thirty-five.
Their asses, six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

70 Contributions of the People And some of the heads of the families gave unto the work. Athersatha gave into the treasure a thousand drams of gold, fifty bowls, and five hundred and 71 thirty garments for priests. | And some of the heads of families gave to the treasure of the work, twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand two hundred pounds of silver. | 72 And that which the rest of the people gave, was twenty thousand drams of gold, and two thousand pounds of silver, and 73 sixty-seven garments for priests. | And the priests, and the Levites, and the porters, and the singing men, and the rest of the common people, and the Nathinites, and all Israel dwelt in their cities.

1 Esdras Reads the Law to the People And the seventh month came: and the children of Israel were in their cities. And all the people were gathered together as one man to the street which is before the water gate: and they spoke to Esdras the scribe, to bring the book of the law of Moses, which the Lord
2 had commanded to Israel. | Then Esdras the priest brought the law before the multitude of men and women, and all those that could understand, in the first day of the seventh month. |
3 And he read it plainly in the street that was before the water gate, from the morning until midday, before the men, and the women, and all those that could understand: and the ears of all
4 the people were attentive to the book. | And Esdras the scribe stood upon a step of wood, which he had made to speak upon. And there stood by him Mathathias, and Semeia, and Ania, and Uria, and Helcia, and Maasia, on his right hand: and on the left, Phadaia, Misael, and Melchia, and Hasum, and Hasbad-
5 ana, Zacharia and Mosollam. | And Esdras opened the book before all the people: for he was above all the people. And
6 when he had opened it, all the people stood. | And Esdras blessed the Lord the great God. And all the people answered: Amen, Amen, lifting up their hands. And they bowed down, and
7 adored God with their faces to the ground. | Now Josue, and Bani, and Serebia, Jamin, Accub, Sephtai, Odia, Maasia, Celtia, Azarias, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalaia, the Levites, made silence among the people to hear the law: and the people stood in their
8 place. | And they read in the book of the law of God distinctly and plainly to be understood: and they understood when it was read.

9 The Feast of Tabernacles Celebrated And Nehemias (he is Athersatha) and Esdras the priest and scribe, and the Levites who interpreted to all the people, said: This is a holy 8—10: Two reasons among others for placing these chapters on the religious reform elsewhere are: 1) Esdras reappears here in the leading role. 2) These chapters break the sequence of Nehemias' story which resumes in 11, 1. Some scholars leave 8—10 where they are, but others place them after Esd 8 or 10.

8, 1-12: See "Judaism's" birth in Introduction to Esdras and Nehemias.

day to the Lord our God. Do not mourn, nor weep. For all the 10 people wept, when they heard the words of the law. | And he said to them: Go, eat fat meats, and drink sweet wine, and send portions to them that have not prepared for themselves, because it is the holy day of the Lord, and be not sad: for the 11 joy of the Lord is our strength. | And the Levites stilled all the people, saying: Hold your peace, for the day is holy, and be not
12 sorrowful. | So all the people went to eat and drink, and to send portions, and to make great mirth: because they understood the words that he had taught them.

13 And on the second day the chiefs of the families of all the people, the priests, and the Levites were gathered together to Esdras the scribe, that he should interpret to them the words of 14 the law. | And they found written in the law, that the Lord had commanded by the hand of Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in tabernacles, on the feast, in the seventh
15 month. | And that they should proclaim and publish the word in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying: Go forth to the mount, and fetch branches of olive, and branches of beautiful wood, branches of myrtle, and branches of palm, and branches of thick trees, to make tabernacles, as it is written. |
16 And the people went forth, and brought. And they made themselves tabernacles every man on the top of his house, and in their courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim.
17 | And all the assembly of them that were returned from the captivity made tabernacles, and dwelt in tabernacles: for since the days of Josue the son of Nun the children of Israel had not done so, until that day. And there was exceeding great joy. |
18 And he read in the book of the law of God day by day, from the first day till the last. And they kept the solemnity seven days, and in the eighth day a solemn assembly according to the manner.

1 The People Repent And in the four and twentieth day of the month the children of Israel came together with fasting and
2 with sackcloth, and earth upon them. | And the seed of the children of Israel separated themselves from every stranger: and they stood, and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of
3 their fathers. | And they rose up to stand: and they read in the book of the law of the Lord their God, four times in the day, and four times they confessed, and adored the Lord their 4 God. | And there stood up upon the step of the Levites, Josue, and Bani, and Cedmihel, Sabania, Bonni, Sarebias, Bani, and Chanani: and they cried with a loud voice to the Lord their

5 God. | And the Levites, Josue and Cedmihel, Bonni, Hasebnia, Serebia, Oduia, Sebnia, and Phathahia, said: Arise, bless the Lord your God from eternity to eternity: and blessed be the high name of your glory with all blessing and praise.

6 Prayer of the Levites You, O Lord, have made heaven, and the heaven of heavens, and all the host thereof: the earth and all things that are in it: the seas and all that are therein. And you gave life to all these things, and the hosts of heaven adore you.

7 You, O Lord God, are he who chose Abram, and brought him forth out of the fire of the Chaldeans, and gave him the name of Abraham.

8 And you did find his heart faithful before you. And you made a covenant with him, to give him the land of the Chanaanite, of the Hethite, and of the Amorrite, and of the Pherezite, and of the Jebusite, and of the Gergezite, to give it to his seed. And you have fulfilled your words, because you are just.

9 And you saw the affliction of our fathers in Egypt: and you did hear their cry by the Red Sea.

10 And you showed signs and wonders upon Pharao, and upon all his servants, and upon the people of his land: for you knew that they dealt proudly against them. And you made yourself a name, as it is at this day.

11 And you did divide the sea before them, and they passed through the midst of the sea on dry land: but their persecutors you threw into the depth, as a stone into mighty waters.

12 And in a pillar of a cloud you were their leader by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, that they might see the way by which they went.

13 You came down also to mount Sinai, and you spoke with them from heaven: and you gave them right judgments, and the law of truth, ceremonies, and good precepts.

14 You made known to them your holy sabbath, and you prescribed to them commandments, and ceremonies, and the law, by the hand of Moses your servant.

9, 6-37: The liturgical prayer is a summarized history (mainly by allusions to Gn, Ex, Dt) of the nation's infidelity to God.

9, 6-11: These verses are part of the present Jewish daily morning prayers.

9, 7: Out of the fire: out of the city of Ur.

15 And you gave them bread from heaven in their hunger, and brought forth water for them out of the rock in their thirst. And you said to them that they should go in, and possess the land, upon which you had lifted up your hand to give it them.
16 But they and our fathers dealt proudly, and hardened their necks, and hearkened not to your commandments.
17 And they would not hear, and they remembered not your wonders which you had done for them. And they hardened their necks, and gave the head to return to their bondage, as it were by contention. But you, a forgiving God, gracious, and merciful, long-suffering, and full of compassion, did not forsake them.
18 Yea, when they had made also to themselves a molten calf, and had said: This is your God, that brought you out of Egypt, and had committed great blasphemies:
19 You, in your many mercies, did not leave them in the desert. The pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day to lead them in the way, and the pillar of fire by night to show them the way by which they should go.
20 And you gave them your good Spirit to teach them; and your manna you did not withhold from their mouth; and you gave them water for their thirst.
21 Forty years did you feed them in the desert, and nothing was wanting to them: their garments did not grow old, and their feet were not worn.
22 And you gave them kingdoms, and nations, and you divided lots for them. And they possessed the land of Sehon, and the land of the king of Hesebon, and the land of Og king of Basan.
23 And you did multiply their children as the stars of heaven: and brought them to the land concerning which you had said to their fathers, that they should go in and possess it.
24 And the children came and possessed the land: and you humbled before them the inhabitants of the land, the Chanaanites, and gave them into their hands, with their kings, and the people of the land, that they might do with them as it pleased them.
25 And they took strong cities and a fat land, and possessed houses full of all goods: cisterns made by others, vineyards, and oliveyards, and fruit trees in abundance. And they ate, and were filled, and became fat, and abounded with delight in your great goodness.
26 But they provoked you to wrath, and departed from you, and threw your law behind their backs. And they killed your prophets, who admonished them earnestly to return to you. And they were guilty of great blasphemies.

27 And you gave them into the hands of their enemies, and they afflicted them. And in the time of their tribulation they cried to you; and you heard from heaven. And according to the multitude of your tender mercies you gave them saviors, to save them from the hands of their enemies.

28 But after they had rest, they returned to do evil in your sight: and you left them in the hand of their enemies, and they had dominion over them. Then they returned, and cried to you: and you heard from heaven, and you delivered them many times in your mercies.

29 And you did admonish them to return to your law. But they dealt proudly, and hearkened not to your commandments, but sinned against your judgments, which, if a man do, he shall live in them. And they withdrew the shoulder, and hardened their neck, and would not hear.

30 And you did forbear with them for many years, and you testified against them by your spirit, by the hand of your prophets. And they heard not; and you did deliver them into the hand of the people of the lands.

31 Yet in your very many mercies you did not utterly consume them, nor forsake them: because you are a merciful and gracious God.

32 Now therefore our God, great, strong, and terrible, who keeps covenant and mercy, turn not away from your face all the labor which has come upon us: upon our kings, and our princes, and our priests, and our prophets, and our fathers, and all the people, from the days of the king of Assur, until this day.

33 And you are just in all things that have cŏme upon us: because you have done truth, but we have done wickedly.

34 Our kings, our princes, our priests and our fathers have not kept your law and have not minded your commandments, and your testimonies which you have testified among them.

35 And they have not served you in their kingdoms, and in your manifold goodness, which you gave them, and in the large and fat land, which you delivered before them: nor did they return from their most wicked devices.

36 Behold we ourselves this day are bondmen: and the land, which you gave our fathers, to eat the bread thereof, and the good things thereof, and we ourselves are servants in it.

9, 29: Which, if a man do, he shall live in them: that is, if a man obeys your commandments, he will find life in them. They withdrew the shoulder: like an ox refusing to be yoked.

37 And the fruits thereof grow up for the kings, whom you have set over us for our sins; and they have dominion over our bodies, and over our beasts, according to their will, and we are in great tribulation.

38 And because of all this we ourselves make a covenant, and write it, and our princes, our Levites, and our priests sign it.

1 The Subscribers to the Covenant And the subscribers were Nehemias Athersatha the son of Hachelai, and Sedecias, | 2.3 Saraias, Azarias, Jeremias, | Pheshur, Amarias, Melchias, 4.5 Hattus, Sebenia, Melluch, | Harem, Merimuth, Obdias, | 6.7 Daniel, Genthon, Baruch, | Mosollam, Abia, Miamin, | 8 Maazia, Belgia, Semeia: these were priests.

9 And the Levites; Josue the son of Azanias, Bennui, of the 10 sons of Henadad, Cedmihel, | and their brethren, Sebenia, 11 Oduia, Celita, Phalaia, Hanan, | Micha, Rohob, Hasebia, | 12.13 Zachur, Serebia, Sabania, | Odaia, Bani, Baninu.

14 The heads of the people: Pharos, Phahath Moab, Elam, 15.16 Zethu, Bani, | Bonni, Azgad, Bebai, | Adonia, Begoai, 17.18 Adin, | Ater, Hezecia, Azur, | Odaia, Hasum, Besai, | 19.20 Hareph, Anathoth, Neba, | Megphias, Mosollam, Hazir, | 21.22 Mesizabel, Sadoc, Jeddua, | Pheltia, Hanan, Anaia, | 23-25 Osee, Hanania, Hasub, | Alohes, Phalea, Sobec, | Re- 26.27 hum, Hasebna, Maasia, | Echaia, Hanan, Anan, | Melluch, Haran, Baana.

28 And the rest of the people, priests, Levites, porters, and singing men, Nathinites, and all that had separated themselves from the people of the lands of the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters.

29 The Covenant All that could understand promising for their brethren, with their chief men. And they came to promise and swear that they would walk in the law of God, which he gave in the hand of Moses the servant of God: that they would do and keep all the commandments of the Lord our God, 30 and his judgments and his ceremonies. | And that we would not give our daughters to the people of the land, nor take their 31 daughters for our sons. | And if the people of the land bring in things to sell, or any things for use, to sell them on the sabbath day, that we would not buy them of them on the sabbath, or on the holy day. And that we would leave the seventh year, 32 and the exaction of every hand. | And we made ordinances for ourselves, to give the third part of a sicle every year for the work 33 of the house of our God, | for the loaves of proposition, and for the continual sacrifice, and for a continual holocaust on the sabbaths, on the new moons, on the set feasts, and for the holy things, and for the sin offering: that atonement might be made 34 for Israel, and for every use of the house of our God. | And we cast lots among the priests, and the Levites, and the people for the offering of wood, that it might be brought into the house of our God by the houses of our fathers at set times, from year to year: to burn upon the altar of the Lord our God, as it 35 is written in the law of Moses. | And that we would bring the firstfruits of our land, and the firstfruits of all fruit of every 36 tree, from year to year, in the house of our Lord. | And the firstborn of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written in the law, and the firstlings of our oxen, and of our sheep, to be offered in the house of our God, to the priests who minister in 37 the house of our God. | And that we would bring the firstfruits of our meats, and of our libations, and the fruit of every tree, of the vintage also and of oil to the priests, to the storehouse of our God, and the tithes of our ground to the Levites.

The Levites also shall receive the tithes of our works out of 38 all the cities. | And the priest, the son of Aaron, shall be with the Levites in the tithes of the Levites, and the Levites shall offer the tithe of their tithes in the house of our God, to the 39 storeroom into the treasure house: | for the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall carry to the treasury the firstfruits of corn, of wine, and of oil. And the sanctified vessels shall be there, and the priests, and the singing men, and the porters and ministers. And we will not forsake the house of our God.

1 The Inhabitants of Jerusalem And the princes of the people dwelt at Jerusalem: but the rest of the people cast lots, to take one part in ten to dwell in Jerusalem the holy city; and 2 nine parts in the other cities. | And the people blessed all the men that willingly offered themselves to dwell in Jerusalem. | 3 These therefore are the chief men of the province, who dwelt in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And every one dwelt in his possession, in their cities: Israel, the priests, the Levites, the 4 Nathinites, and the children of the servants of Solomon. | And in Jerusalem there dwelt some of the children of Juda, and some of the children of Benjamin. Of the children of Juda, Athaias the son of Aziam, the son of Zacharias, the son of Amarias, the son of Saphatias, the son of Malaleel. Of the sons of 5 Phares, Maasia the son of Baruch, the son of Cholhoza, the son of Hazia, the son of Adaia, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zachar-6 ias, the son of the Silonite. | All these the sons of Phares, who dwelt in Jerusalem, were four hundred sixty-eight valiant men.

7 | And these are the children of Benjamin: Sellum the son of Mosollam, the son of Joed, the son of Phadaia, the son of Col-8 aia, the son of Masia, the son of Etheel, the son of Isaia. | And 9 after him Gebbai, Sellai, nine hundred twenty-eight. | And Joel the son of Zechri their ruler, and Judas the son of Senua was second over the city.

10.11 And of the priests: Idaia the son of Joarib, Jachin, | Saraia the son of Helcias, the son of Mosollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Meraioth, the son of Achitob, the prince of the house 12 of God. | And their brethren that do the works of the temple, eight hundred twenty-two. And Adaia the son of Jeroham, the son of Phelelia, the son of Amsi, the son of Zacharias, the son 13 of Pheshur, the son of Melchias. | And his brethren the chiefs of the fathers, two hundred forty-two. And Amassai the son of Azreel, the son of Ahazi, the son of Mosollamoth, the son of 14 Emmer, | and their brethren who were very mighty, a hundred twenty-eight. And their ruler Zabdiel son of the mighty.

15 And of the Levites, Semeia the son of Hasub, the son of 16 Azaricam, the son of Hasabia, the son of Boni, | and Sabathai and Jozabed, who were over all the outward business of the 17 house of God, of the princes of the Levites. | And Mathania the son of Micha, the son of Zebedei, the son of Asaph, was the principal man to praise, and to give glory in prayer, and Becbecia the second, one of his brethren, and Abda the son of 18 Samua, the son of Galal, the son of Idithun. | All the Levites 19 in the holy city were two hundred eighty-four. | And the porters, Accub, Telmon, and their brethren, who kept the doors, a hundred seventy-two.

20 The Inhabitants of other Cities And the rest of Israel, the priests and the Levites were in all the cities of Juda, every 21 man in his possession. | And the Nathinites that dwelt in 22 Ophel, and Siaha, and Gaspha of the Nathinites. | And the overseer of the Levites in Jerusalem, was Azzi the son of Bani, the son of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the son of Micha. Of the sons of Asaph, were the singing men in the ministry of the 23 house of God. | For the king's commandment was concerning

24 them, and an order among the singing men day by day. | And Phathahia the son of Mesezebel of the children of Zara the son of Juda was at the hand of the king, in all matters concerning the people.

25 And in the houses through all their countries, of the children of Juda, some dwelt at Cariath-Arbe, and in the villages thereof: and at Dibon, and in the villages thereof: and at Cab-26 seel, and in the villages thereof, | and at Jesue, and at Moloda, 27 and at Bethphaleth, and at Hasersual, and at Bersabee, and in 28 the villages thereof. | And at Siceleg, and at Mochona, and in 29 the villages thereof. | And at Remmon, and at Saraa, and at 30 Jerimuth, | Zanoa, Odollam, and in their villages, at Lachis and its dependencies, and at Azeca and the villages thereof. And
31 they dwelt from Bersabee unto the valley of Ennom. | And the children of Benjamin from Geba, at Mechmas, and at Hai,
32 and at Bethel, and in the villages thereof, | at Anathoth, Nob, 33.34 Anania, | Asor, Rama, Gethaim, | Hadid, Seboim, and 35.36 Neballat, Lod, and Ono the valley of craftsmen. And of the Levites were portions of Juda and Benjamin.

1 The Priests and Levites Now these are the priests and the Levites, that went up with Zorobabel the son of Salathiel,
2 and Josue: Saraia, Jeremias, Esdras, | Amaria, Melluch, Hat-
3.4 tus, | Sebenias, Rheum, Merimuth, | Addo, Genthon, Abia,
5.6 Miamin, Madia, Belga, | Semeia, and Joiarib, Idaia, Sellum, 7 Amoc, Helcias, Idaia. These were the chief of the priests, and 8 of their brethren in the days of Josue. | And the Levites, Jesua, Bennui, Cedmihel, Sarebia, Juda, Mathanias. They and their
9 brethren were over the hymns. | And Becbecia, and Hanni, 10 and their brethren every one in his office. | And Josue begot Joacim, and Joacim begot Eliasib, and Eliasib begot Joiada, |
11 and Joiada begot Jonathan, and Jonathan begot Jeddoa. |
12 And in the days of Joacim the priests and heads of the families 13 were: of Saraia, Maraia: of Jeremias, Hanania. | Of Esdras,
14 Mosollam; and of Amaria, Johanan. | Of Milicho, Jonathan;
15 of Sebenia, Joseph. | Of Haram, Edna; of Maraioth, Helci. |
16.17 Of Adaia, Zacharia; of Genthon, Mosollam. | Of Abia, 18 Zechri; of Miamin and Moadia, Phelti. | Of Belga, Sammua
19 of Semaia, Jonathan. | Of Joiarib, Mathanai; of Jodaia, Azzi.
20.21 | Of Sellai, Celai; of Amoc, Heber. | Of Helcias, Hasebia;

12, 1: Went up: from Babylon.

22 of Idaia, Nathanael. | The Levites, the chiefs of the families in the days of Eliasib, and Joiada, and Johanan, and Jeddoa, were recorded, and the priests in the reign of Darius the Persian. | 23 The sons of Levi, heads of the families, were written in the book of Chronicles, even unto the days of Jonathan the son of Eliasib.
24 Now the chief of the Levites were Hasebia, Serebia, and Josue the son of Cedmihel, and their brethren by their courses:
to praise and to give thanks according to the commandment of 25 David the man of God, and to wait equally in order. | Mathania, and Becbecia, Obedia, and Mosollam, Telmon, Accub, were keepers of the gates and of the entrances before the gates.
26 | These were in the days of Joacim the son of Josue, the son of Josedec, and in the days of Nehemias the governor, and of Esdras the priest and scribe.

27 Solemn Dedication of the Wall And at the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought the Levites out of all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem, and to keep the dedication, and to rejoice with thanksgiving, and with singing, and with 28 cymbals and psalteries and harps. | And the sons of the singing men were gathered together out of the plain country about Jeru-29 salem, and out of the villages of Nethuphati, | and from the house of Galgal, and from the countries of Geba and Azmaveth: for the singing men had built themselves villages round 30 about Jerusalem. | And the priests and the Levites were purified, and they purified the people, and the gates, and the wall.
31 And I made the princes of Juda go up upon the wall, and I appointed two great choirs to give praise. And they went on the 32 right hand upon the wall toward the dunghill gate. | And after 33 them went Osaias and half of the princes of Juda, | and Azarias, Esdras, and Mosollam, Judas, and Benjamin, and 34 Semeia, and Jeremias. | And of the sons of the priests with trumpets, Zacharias the son of Jonathan, the son of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia, the son of Zechur, the son 35 of Asaph, | and his brethren Semeia, and Azareel, Malalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Judas, and Hanani, with the musical instruments of David the man of God: and Esdras the 36 scribe before them at the fountain gate. | And they went up across them by the stairs of the city of David, at the going up 12, 24: By their courses: opposite them.

12, 27-43: The Chronicler apparently took this description principally from the memoirs of Nehemias. The symbolic meaning of the dedication was to surrender the wall to Yahweh, their protector.

12, 31-39: The two choirs walking on the city walls and meeting in front of the temple must have made an impression on the people.

of the wall of the house of David, and to the water gate eastward.

37 And the second choir of them that gave thanks went on the opposite side, and I after them; and the half of the people upon the wall, and upon the tower of the furnaces, even to the broad 38 wall, | and above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the fish gate and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Emath, and even to the flock gate. And they stood still
39 in the watch gate. | And the two choirs of them that gave praise stood still at the house of God, and I and the half of the 40 magistrates with me. | And the priests, Eliachim, Maasia, Miamin, Michea, Elioenai, Zacharia, Hanania with trumpets,
41 | and Maasia, and Semeia, and Eleazar, and Azzi, and Johanan, and Melchia, and Elam, and Ezer. And the singers sang loud,
42 and Jezraia was their overseer. | And they sacrificed on that day great sacrifices, and they rejoiced: for God had made them joyful with great joy. Their wives also and their children rejoiced; and the joy of Jerusalem was heard afar off.

43 They appointed also in that day men over the storehouses of the treasure, for the libations, and for the firstfruits, and for the tithes: that the rulers of the city might bring them in by them in honor of thanksgiving, for the priests and Levites: for
44 Juda was joyful in the priests and Levites that assisted. | And they kept the watch of their God, and the observance of expiation. And the singing men, and the porters, according to the
45 commandment of David, and of Solomon his son: | for in the days of David and Asaph from the beginning there were chief singers appointed, to praise with canticles and give thanks to 46 God. | And all Israel, in the days of Zorobabel, and in the days of Nehemias, gave portions to the singing-men, and to the porters, day by day. And they sanctified the Levites: and the Levites sanctified the sons of Aaron.

1 Nehemias Reforms Abuses And on that day they read in the book of Moses in the hearing of the people. And therein was found written that the Ammonites and the Moabites should not
2 come in to the church of God for ever, | because they met not the children of Israel with bread and water: and they hired against them Balaam, to curse them, and our God turned the
3 curse into blessing. | And it came to pass, when they had heard
4 the law, that they separated every stranger from Israel. | And over this thing was Eliasib the priest, who was set over the treasury of the house of our God, and was near akin to Tobias.

5 | And he made him a great storeroom, where before him they laid up gifts, and frankincense, and vessels, and the tithes of the corn, of the wine, and of the oil, the portions of the Levites, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and the firstfruits of the priests.
6 But in all this time I was not in Jerusalem, because in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon, I went to the 7 king, and after certain days I asked the king: | and I came to Jerusalem, and I understood the evil that Eliasib had done for Tobias, to make him a storehouse in the courts of the house of
8 God. | And it seemed to me exceeding evil. And I cast forth
9 the vessels of the house of Tobias out of the storehouse. | And I commanded and they cleansed the storehouses. And I brought thither again the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice, and
10 the frankincense. | And I perceived that the portions of the Levites had not been given them: and that the Levites, and the singing men, and they that ministered had fled away every
11 man to his own country. | And I pleaded the matter against the magistrates, and said: Why have we forsaken the house of God? And I gathered them together, and I made them to stand
12 in their places. | And all Juda brought the tithe of the corn,
13 and the wine, and the oil into the storehouses. | And we set over the storehouses Selemias the priest, and Sadoc the scribe, and of the Levites Phadaia, and next to them Hanan the son of Zachur, the son of Mathania: for they were approved as faithful and to them were committed the portions of their brethren.
14 | Remember me, O my God, for this thing, and wipe not out my kindnesses, which I have done relating to the house of my God and his ceremonies.

15 Sabbath Violations Condemned In those days, I saw in Juda some treading the presses on the sabbath, and carrying sheaves, and loading asses with wine, and grapes, and figs, and all manner of freights, and bringing them into Jerusalem on the sabbath day. And I charged them that they should sell on a day
16 on which it was lawful to sell. | Some Tyrians also dwelt there, who brought fish, and all manner of wares. And they sold them
17 on the sabbaths to the children of Juda in Jerusalem. | And I rebuked the chief men of Juda, and said to them: What is this
18 evil thing that you are doing, profaning the sabbath day? | Did not our fathers do these things, and our God brought all this 13, 6ff.: After twelve years in Jerusalem, Nehemias returned to the Persian court.

evil upon us, and upon this city? And you bring more wrath 19 upon Israel by violating the sabbath. | And it came to pass, that when the gates of Jerusalem were at rest on the sabbath day, I spoke. And they shut the gates: and I commanded that they should not open them till after the sabbath. And I set some of my servants at the gates, that none should bring in freights on 20 the sabbath day. | So the merchants, and they that sold all 21 kinds of wares, stayed without Jerusalem once or twice. | And I charged them, and I said to them: Why do you stand before the wall? If you do so another time, I will lay hands on you. And 22 from that time they came no more on the sabbath. | I spoke also to the Levites that they should be purified, and should come to keep the gates, and to sanctify the sabbath day. For this also remember me, O my God, and spare me according to the multitude of your tender mercies.

23 Mixed Marriages Banned In those days also I saw Jews that married wives, women of Azotus, and of Ammon, and of 24 Moab. | And their children spoke half in the speech of Azotus, and could not speak the Jews' language, but they spoke accord-25 ing to the language of this and that people. | And I chided them, and laid my curse upon them. And I beat some of them, and shaved off their hair, and made them swear by God that they would not give their daughters to their sons, nor take their 26 daughters for their sons, nor for themselves, saying: | Did not Solomon king of Israel sin in this kind of thing? And surely among many nations, there was not a king like him. And he was beloved of his God, and God made him king over all Israel:
and yet women of other countries brought even him to sin. | 27 And shall we also be disobedient and do all this great evil, trans-28 gressing against our God, and marry strange women? | And one of the sons of Joiada the son of Eliasib the high priest, was son-in-law to Sanaballat the Horonite: and I drove him from 29 me. | Remember them, O Lord my God, that defile the priesthood and the law of priests and Levites.
30 So I separated from them all strangers, and I appointed the courses of the priests and the Levites, every man in his ministry: 31 | and for the offering of wood at times appointed, and for the firstfruits. Remember me, O my God, unto good. Amen.

THE BOOK OF TOBIAS

INTRODUCTION

During the fourth and third centuries B.C. an anonymous Jew wrote the Book of Tobias (or Tobit) probably in the Hebrew or Aramaic language. Since the original text of Tobias is lost, scholars work from different Greek translations. The disagreement on what must have constituted the original text is reflected in the variety of translations of Tobias into modern languages. Notwithstanding the disagreement about the original text, Catholics consider the Book of Tobias inspired, but Jews and Protestants do not.

The book tells the story of Tobias, a wealthy, law-abiding Jew, and of Tobias, his son. With his family, Tobias was deported to Ninive (in modern Iraq) after the Assyrians captured Samaria, the capital of the northern kingdom, in 722-21 B.C. In the middle of his life of charity to his fellow exiles, Tobias is struck blind. He prays for death. The scene shifts immediately to a pious relative, Sara, who also prays for death because a demon killed her seven consecutive husbands. God delivers both Tobias and Sara through the angel Raphael. The author intersperses the story with exhortations, e.g., in 4, 3-20.

The Jewish writer penned his story about four centuries after the historical setting he used. The historical setting is Ninive and the land of Media, from 734 B.C.—when the tribe of Nephthali was deported into captivity—to the fall of Ninive in 612 B.C. No one today considers this to be strict history because many historical, chronological, and geographical inaccuracies are in evidence. It seems safe to say that there is hardly anything historical except the historical setting. The scholars who claim more historicity for the book admit that they do not know where history ends and fiction begins.

The Book of Tobias is generally categorized as edifying religious literature since its most obvious purpose is to teach good deeds, such as the burial of the dead, and almsgiving. Family virtues and trust in Divine Providence are taught through the angel Raphael. The deeper purpose of the book seems to be the encouragement to the exiles to practice their faith in the face of persecution and obstacles.

The principal sources used by the writer were Old Testament books, especially Genesis, the Psalms, Proverbs, Job. Other sources were The Story of Ahikar (see 11, 20 n.); The Fable of the Grateful Dead; The Egyptian Essay of Khons.

Ahikar was the "prime minister" of king Sennacherib of Assyria. Nadan, overanxious to become prime minister, framed his kind uncle Ahikar as a betrayer to the king, but the ungrateful nephew himself was sentenced to death for his crime. This story originated in Babylon; it spread through numerous literatures of the ancient Orient. In Arabic literature the Ahikar story is adapted in A Thousand and One Nights. In Greek literature it is found in The Life of Aesop, whence, finally breaking out of the Orient, it entered French literature through La Fontaine's Fables. The oldest extant copy of the Ahikar story is an Aramaic papyrus of the fifth century B.C. from the Jews of Elephantine (see Neh 2, 10 n.). Even though scholars cannot prove the historicity of Tobias as well as that of Ahikar, the inspiration and religious teaching of the former book is in no way dimmed thereby.

The Fable of the Grateful Dead is a series of variant folklore stories with a basic theme, namely, that of a merchant who risks dangers by giving a decent burial to a debtor's corpse. The debtor comes back to life as a mysterious stranger to save the merchant from peril and finds a bride for him. Other variants of the Fable speak of a dragon that kills bridegrooms, and a dog helping the hero. Cicero's De Divinatione is the oldest extant account of the Fable of the Grateful Dead. Since it is not known which of the two writings appeared first in time, it is therefore unknown whether Tobias was influenced by the Fable.

Scholars note the similarity between the cure of Sara (see 6, 8; 8, 2), and the Egyptian essay of Khons, according to which an Egyptian god exorcises a devil from a princess at Ecbatana.

It is difficult to ascertain the precise type of dependence which the author of Tobias had on his sources. One thing is clear: he made a unified story of his own and thoroughly transformed the matter he borrowed from extrabiblical literature to give his readers a spiritually fruitful book.

The Book of Tobias is a favorite in the liturgy. Some occasions when it is used are: The Mass of the Feast of the Guardian Angel; the Nuptial Mass; three different places in the Mass of the Holy Trinity, and, most fitting of all, in the Mass of the Feast of St. Raphael, the Archangel.

Main divisions of the Book of Tobias are:

1. Tobias loses his sight and wealth. Sara loses her seven husbands. God hears their prayers from different places, 1—3
2. Raphael leads young Tobias on his journey to collect his father's loan to Gabelus. On the way Tobias marries Sara, and Raphael completes the journey to the home of Gabelus, 4—9
3. The parents of Tobias lament his absence but are finally comforted at his return when Raphael restores the eyesight of the elder Tobias. Raphael identifies himself, 10—12
4. Epilogue, 13—14

1 The Piety and Mercy of Tobias Tobias of the tribe and city of Nephtali (which is in the upper parts of Galilee above Naasson, beyond the way that leads to the west, having on the 2 right hand the city of Sephet), | when he was made captive in the days of Salmanasar king of the Assyrians, even in his cap-
3 tivity, forsook not the way of truth, | but every day gave all

1, 2: Salmanasar: if the author meant strict history, he would not be referring to Salmanasar V (727-722 B.C.), but to Sargon II (721-705 B.C.).

he could get to his brethren, his fellow captives, that were of 4 his kindred. | And when he was younger than any of the tribe of Nephtali, he did no childish thing in his work.
5 Moreover when all went to the golden calves which Jeroboam king of Israel had made, he alone fled the company of all, | 6 and went to Jerusalem to the temple of the Lord, and there adored the Lord God of Israel, offering faithfully all his first-7 fruits, and his tithes, | so that in the third year he gave all his 8 tithes to the proselytes and strangers. | These and such like things did he observe when but a boy according to the law of 9 God. | But when he was a man, he took to wife Anna of his own tribe, and had a son by her, whom he called after his own 10 name. | And from his infancy he taught him to fear God, and to abstain from all sin.
11 And when by the captivity he with his wife and his son and 12 all his tribe was come to the city of Ninive, | (when all ate of the meats of the Gentiles) he kept his soul and never was de-13 filed with their meats. | And because he was mindful of the Lord with all his heart, God gave him favor in the sight of 14 Salmanasar the king. | And he gave him leave to go wherever 15 he would, with liberty to do whatever he had a mind. | He therefore went to all that were in captivity, and gave them 16 wholesome admonitions. | And when he came to Rages a city of the Medes, and had ten talents of silver of that with which 17 he had been honored by the king | and when, among a great multitude of his kindred, he saw Gabelus in want, who was one of his tribe, taking a note of his hand he gave him the aforesaid sum of money.
18 But after a long time, Salmanasar the king being dead, when Sennacherib his son, who reigned in his place, had a hatred 19 for the children of Israel, | Tobias daily went among all his kindred and comforted them, and distributed to every one as he was able, out of his goods.

20 Tobias Feeds the Hungry and Buries the Dead He fed the hungry and gave clothes to the naked, and was careful 21 to bury the dead, and they that were slain. | And when king Sennacherib had come back, fleeing from Judea by reason of the slaughter that God had made about him for his blasphemy, and being angry slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias

22 buried their bodies. | But when it was told the king, he commanded him to be slain, and took away all his substance. |
23 But Tobias fleeing naked away with his son and with his wife, 24 lay concealed, for many loved him. | But after forty-five days,
25 the king was killed by his own sons. | And Tobias returned to his house, and all his substance was restored to him.

1 Tobias Loses His Sight But after this, when there was a festival of the Lord, and a good dinner was prepared in Tobias'
2 house, | he said to his son: Go, and bring some of our tribe that
3 fear God, to feast with us. | And when he had gone, returning he told him, that one of the children of Israel lay slain in the street. And he forthwith leaped up from his place at the table,
4 and left his dinner, and came fasting to the body. | And taking it up he carried it privately to his house that, after the sun was down, he might bury him cautiously.
5 And when he had hidden the body, he ate bread with mourn-6 ing and fear, remembering the word which the Lord spoke by Amos the prophet: Your festival days shall be turned into 7 lamentation and mourning. | So when the sun was down, he
8 went and buried him. | Now all his neighbors blamed him, saying: Once already commandment was given for you to be slain because of this matter, and you scarcely escaped the sen-
9 tence of death: and yet you do again bury the dead? | But Tobias fearing God more than the king, carried off the bodies of them that were slain, and hid them in his house, and at midnight buried them.
10 Now it happened one day that, being wearied with burying, he came to his house and cast himself down by the wall and
11 slept. | And as he was sleeping, hot dung out of a swallow's
12 nest fell upon his eyes, and he was made blind. | Now this trial the Lord therefore permitted to happen to him, that an example might be given to posterity of his patience, as also of holy Job.

13 The Patience of Tobias For whereas he had always feared God from his infancy, and kept his commandments, he repined not against God because the evil of blindness had befallen him,
14 | but continued immovable in the fear of God, giving thanks
15 to God, all the days of his life. | For as the kings insulted over

2, 6: A reference to Amos 8, 10.
2, 15: Kings: this implies that Job's three friends were princes in their respective lands.

holy Job, so his relations and kinsmen mocked at his life, saying: | Where is your hope, for which you gave alms, and buried the dead? | But Tobias rebuked them, saying: Speak not so. | For we are the children of saints, and look for that life which God will give to those that never change their faith from him.

Now Anna his wife went daily to weaving work, and she brought home what she could get for their living by the labor of her hands. | Whereby it came to pass that she received a young kid, and brought it home. | And when her husband heard it bleating, he said: Take heed, lest perhaps it be stolen. Restore it to its owners, for it is not lawful for us either to eat or to touch anything that comes by theft. | At these words his wife being angry answered: It is evident your hope has come to nothing, and your alms now appear. | And with these and other such like words she upbraided him.

The Prayer of Tobias Then Tobias sighed, and began to pray with tears, | saying: You are just, O Lord, and all your judgments are just; and all your ways mercy, and truth, and judgment. | And now, O Lord, think of me, and take not revenge of my sins: neither remember my offenses, nor those of my parents, | for we have not obeyed your commandments. Therefore are we delivered to spoil, and to captivity and death, and are made a fable, and a reproach to all nations, among which you have scattered us. | And now, O Lord, great are your judgments, because we have not done according to your precepts, and have not walked sincerely before you. | And now, O Lord, do with me according to your will, and command my spirit to be received in peace: for it is better for me to die, than to live.

Now it happened on the same day that Sara daughter of Raguel, in Rages a city of the Medes, received a reproach from one of her father's servant maids, | because she had been given to seven husbands, and a devil named Asmodeus had killed them, at their first going in unto her. | So when she reproved the maid for her fault, she answered her, saying: May we never see son, or daughter of yours upon the earth, you murderer of your husbands. | Will you kill me also, as you have already killed seven husbands? At these words she went into an upper chamber of her house, and for three days and three nights did 11 neither eat nor drink. | But continuing in prayer with tears, she besought God that he would deliver her from this reproach.

12 Sara's Prayer And it came to pass on the third day, when 13 she was making an end of her prayer, blessing the Lord, | she said: Blessed is your name, O God of our fathers: who when you have been angry, will show mercy, and in the time of tribu-
14 lation will forgive the sins of them that call upon you. | To 15 you, O Lord, I turn my face, to you I direct my eyes. | I beg, O Lord, that you loose me from the bond of this reproach, or else
16 take me away from the earth. | You know, O Lord, that I never coveted a husband, and have kept my soul clean from all
17 lust. | Never have I joined myself with them that play: neither have I made myself partaker with them that walk in lightness.
18 | But a husband I consented to take, with your fear, not with 19 | my lust. And either I was unworthy of them, or they perhaps were not worthy of me: because perhaps you have kept me for 20.21 another man: | for your counsel is not in man's power. | But of this every one is sure who worships you: that his life, if it be under trial, shall be crowned, and if it be under tribulation, it shall be delivered, and if it be under correction, it shall be 22 allowed to come to your mercy: for you are not delighted in our being lost: because after a storm you make a calm, and after 23 tears and weeping you pour in joyfulness. | Be your name, O God of Israel, blessed for ever.
24 At that time the prayers of them both were heard in the sight
25 of the glory of the most high God. | And the holy angel of the Lord, Raphael, was sent to heal them both, whose prayers at one time were re-rehearsed in the sight of the Lord.

1 Tobias Counsels His Son Therefore when Tobias thought that his prayer was heard that he might die, he called to him
2 Tobias his son. | And he said to him: Hear, my son, the words of my mouth and lay them as a foundation in your heart. |
3 When God shall take my soul, you shall bury my body: and 4 you shall honor your mother all the days of her life. | For you must be mindful what and how great perils she suffered for 5 you in her womb. | And when she also shall have ended the 6 time of her life, bury her by me. | And all the days of your life have God in your mind. And take heed you never consent to sin, nor transgress the commandments of the Lord our God.

3, 17: Play: sensually.

7 | Give alms out of your substance, and turn not away your face from any poor person: for so it shall come to pass that the face 8 of the Lord shall not be turned from you. | According to your 9 ability be merciful. | If you have much, give abundantly; if you 10 have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little. | For thus you store up to yourself a good reward for the day of 11 necessity. | Because alms deliver from all sin and from death, 12 and will not suffer the soul to go into darkness. | Alms shall be a great confidence before the most high God, to all them that give it.
13 Take heed to keep yourself, my son, from all fornication: and 14 besides your wife never endure to know a crime. | Never suffer pride to reign in your mind, or in your words: for from it all 15 perdition took its beginning. | If any man has done any work for you, immediately pay him his hire: and let not the wages 16 of your hired servant stay with you at all. | See that you never do to another what you would hate to have done to you by 17 another. | Eat your bread with the hungry and the needy: and 18 with your garments cover the naked. | Lay out your bread and your wine upon the burial of a just man: and do not eat and 19 drink thereof with the wicked. | Seek counsel always of a wise 20 man. | Bless God at all times: and desire of him to direct your ways, and that all your counsels may abide in him.
21 I tell you also, my son, that I lent ten talents of silver, while you were yet a child, to Gabelus in Rages, a city of the Medes, 22 and I have a note of his hand with me. | Now therefore inquire how you may go to him, and receive of him the foresaid 23 sum of money, and restore to him the note of his hand. | Fear not, my son: we lead indeed a poor life; but we shall have many good things, if we fear God, and depart from all sin, and do that which is good.

1 Young Tobias Seeks a Guide Then Tobias answered his father, and said: I will do all things, father, which you have 2 commanded me. | But how I shall get this money, I cannot tell. He does not know me, and I do not know him. What token shall I give him? Nor did I ever know the way which leads 3 there. | Then his father answered him, and said: I have a note

4, 7: Face of the Lord . . . you: you will not lose God's favor.
4, 18: One of several interpretations understands this as a recommendation to partake in the customary funeral feasts to console the of his hand with me, which when you shall show it to him, he 4 will presently pay. | But go now, and seek out some faithful man, to go with you for his hire: that you may receive it, while 5 I yet live. | Then Tobias going forth, found a beautiful young man, standing girded, and as it were ready to walk.

6 The Angel Raphael And not knowing that he was an angel of God, he saluted him, and said: From where are you, 7 good young man? | But he answered: Of the children of Israel. And Tobias said to him: Do you know the way that leads 8 to the country of the Medes? | And he answered: I know it, and I have often walked through all the ways thereof; and I have abode with Gabelus our brother, who dwells at Rages a city of the Medes, which is situated in the mount of Ecbatana.
9 | And Tobias said to him: Stay for me, I beseech you, till I tell these same things to my father.
10 Then Tobias going in told all these things to his father. Upon which his father, being in admiration, desired that he would 11 come in unto him. | So going in he saluted him, and said: Joy 12 be to you always. | And Tobias said: What manner of joy shall be to me, who sits in darkness, and sees not the light of heaven?
13 | And the young man said to him: Be of good courage; your 14 cure from God is at hand. | And Tobias said to him: Can you conduct my son to Gabelus at Rages, a city of the Medes? And 15 when you shall return, I will pay you your hire. | And the angel said to him: I will conduct him there and bring him back 16 to you. | And Tobias said to him: I pray you, tell me, of what 17 family, or what tribe are you? And Raphael the angel answered:
Do you seek the family of him that you hire, or the hired servant
18 himself to go with your son? | But lest I should make you un-19 easy, I am Azarias, the son of the great Ananias. | And Tobias answered: You are of a great family. But I pray you be not 20 angry that I desired to know your family. | And the angel said to him: I will lead your son safe, and bring him to you again 21 safe. | And Tobias answering, said: May you have a good journey; and God be with you in your way; and his angel ac-

5, 8: Rages a city of the Medes . . . Ecbatana: "Rages," the city of Gabelus (1, 16f; 9, 3), is the modern Rai a few miles south of Teheran, Iran. "Ecbatana," city of Sara and Raguel, also called Rages in 3, 7; 6, 11, is the modern Hamadan (Iran), 180 miles southwest of Rai. These geographical facts do not accord with the text which situates Rages at the mount of Ecbatana. But the writer was writing fiction not strict history.

22 company you. | Then all things being ready, that were to be carried in their journey, Tobias bade his father and his mother farewell: and they set out both together.
23 And when they had departed, his mother began to weep, and to say: You have taken the staff of our old age, and sent him
24 away from us. | I wish the money for which you have sent him, 25 had never been. | For our poverty was sufficient for us, that we 26 might account it as riches, that we saw our son. | And Tobias said to her: Weep not. Our son will arrive there safe, and will
27 return safe to us; and your eyes shall see him. | For I believe that the good angel of God does accompany him, and does order all things well that are done about him, so that he shall return
28 to us with joy. | At these words the mother ceased weeping, and held her peace.

1 The Angel Advises Young Tobias And Tobias went forward; and the dog followed him. And he lodged the first night
2 by the river of Tigris. | And he went out to wash his feet, and
3 behold a monstrous fish came up to devour him. | And Tobias being afraid of him, cried out with a loud voice, saying: Sir, he
4 comes upon me. | And the angel said to him: Take him by the gill, and draw him to you. And when he had done so, he drew him out upon the land; and he began to pant before his feet. |
5 Then the angel said to him: Take out the entrails of this fish, and lay up his heart, and his gall, and his liver for you; for 6 these are necessary for useful medicines. | And when he had done so, he roasted the flesh thereof, and they took it with them in the way. The rest they salted as much as might serve them, till they came to Rages the city of the Medes.
7 Then Tobias asked the angel, and said to him: I beseech you, brother Azarias, tell me what remedies are these things good for,
8 which you bid me to keep of the fish? | And the angel answering, said to him: If you put a little piece of its heart upon coals, the smoke thereof drives away all kind of devils, either from 9 man or from woman, so that they come no more to them. | And the gall is good for anointing the eyes, in which there is a white speck: and they shall be cured.
10 And Tobias said to him: Where will you that we lodge? | 11 And the angel answering, said: Here is one whose name is Raguel, a near kinsman of your tribe. And he has a daughter named Sara: but he has no son nor any other daughter besides

her. | All his substance is due to you, and you must take her to wife. | Ask her therefore of her father, and he will give her to you as wife.
Then Tobias answered, and said: I hear that she has been given to seven husbands, and they all died. Moreover I have heard, that a devil killed them. | Now I am afraid, lest the same thing should happen to me also; and whereas I am the only child of my parents, I should bring down their old age with sorrow to hell. | Then the angel Raphael said to him: Hear me, and I will show you who they are, over whom the devil can prevail: | They who in such manner receive matrimony, as to shut out God from themselves, and from their mind, and to give themselves to their lust, as the horse and mule which have not understanding, over them the devil has power. | But you, when you shall take her, go into the chamber, and for three days keep yourself continent from her, and give yourself to nothing else but to prayers with her. | And on that night lay the liver of the fish on the fire: and the devil shall be driven away. | But the second night, you shall be admitted into the society of the holy Patriarchs. | And the third night, you shall obtain a blessing that sound children may be born of you. | And when the third night is past, you shall take the virgin with the fear of the Lord, moved rather for love of children than for lust: that in the seed of Abraham you may obtain a blessing in children.

Tobias Asks Sara in Marriage And they went to Raguel, and Raguel received them with joy. | And Raguel looking upon Tobias, said to Anna his wife: How like is this young man to my cousin! | And when he had spoken these words, he said: From where are you, young men, our brethren? | But they said: We are of the tribe of Nephtali, of the captivity of Ninive. | And Raguel said to them: Do you know Tobias my brother? And they said: We know him. | And when he was speaking many good things of him, the angel said to Raguel: Tobias, concerning whom you are inquiring, is this young man's father. | And Raguel went to him, and kissed him with tears;
and weeping upon his neck, said: A blessing be upon you, my son, because you are the son of a good and most virtuous man.
And Anna his wife, and Sara their daughter wept.
And after they had spoken, Raguel commanded a sheep to be killed, and a feast to be prepared. And when he desired them to 10 sit down to dinner, | Tobias said: I will not eat nor drink here this day, unless you first grant me my petition, and promise to 11 give me Sara your daughter. | Now when Raguel heard this, he was afraid, knowing what had happened to those seven husbands that went in unto her. And he began to fear lest it might happen to him also in like manner. And as he was in 12 suspense, and gave no answer to his petition, | the angel said to him: Be not afraid to give her to this man, for to him who fears God is your daughter due to be his wife. Therefore an-13 other could not have her. | Then Raguel said: I doubt not 14 but God has regarded my prayers and tears in his sight. | And I believe he has therefore made you come to me, that this maid might be married to one of her own kindred, according to the law of Moses: and now doubt not but I will give her to you. | 15 And taking the right hand of his daughter, he gave it into the right hand of Tobias, saying: The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you. And may he join you together, and fulfill his blessing in you.

16 And taking paper they made a writing of the marriage. |
17.18 And afterward they made merry, blessing God. | And Raguel called to him Anna his wife, and bade her prepare another 19 chamber. | And she brought Sara her daughter into it, and she 20 wept. | And she said to her: Be of good cheer, my daughter.
The Lord of heaven give you joy for the trouble you have undergone.

1 Tobias and Sara Saved from the Devil And after they 2 had supped, they brought in the young man to her. | And Tobias, remembering the angel's word, took out of his bag part 3 of the liver, and laid it upon burning coals. | Then the angel Raphael took the devil, and bound him in the desert of upper 4 Egypt. | Then Tobias exhorted the virgin, and said to her:
Sara, arise, and let us pray to God today, and tomorrow, and 7, 12: The author gives the symbolic meaning of why the husbands died.

7, 14: Some Catholic scholars believe that the writer's lesson here is: the demon is God's instrument in punishing those who disobey His marriage laws. The "seven husbands" were not supposed to marry Sara because they would be violating the law spoken of in Nm 36, 8: "Therefore, every daughter who inherits property in any of the Israelite tribes shall marry someone belonging to a clan of her own ancestral tribe, in order that all the Israelites may remain in possession of their own ancestral heritage."

8, 3: It was according to the ideas of the day that devils inhabited deserts.

the next day: because for these three nights we are joined to God. And when the third night is over, we will be in our own 5 wedlock. | For we are the children of saints: and we must not
6 be joined together like heathens that know not God. | So they both arose, and prayed earnestly both together that health
7 might be given them, | and Tobias said: Lord God of our fathers, may the heavens and the earth, and the sea, and the fountains, and the rivers, and all your creatures that are in them,
8 bless you. | You made Adam of the slime of the earth, and 9 you gave him Eve for a helper. | And now, Lord, you know that not for fleshly lust do I take my sister to wife, but only for the love of posterity, in which your name may be blessed for 10 ever and ever. | Sara also said: Have mercy on us, O Lord, have mercy on us: and let us grow old both together in health.
11 And it came to pass about the cock-crowing, Raguel ordered his servants to be called for. And they went with him together
12 to dig a grave. | For he said: Lest perhaps it may have happened to him, in like manner as it did to the other seven hus-
13 bands, that went in unto her. | And when they had prepared
14 the pit, Raguel went back to his wife, and said to her: | Send one of your maids, and let her see if he is dead, that I may bury
15 him before it be day. | So she sent one of her maidservants, who went into the chamber, and found them safe and sound, sleeping both together.

16 Raguel and Anna Rejoice And returning she brought the good news. And Raguel and Anna his wife blessed the Lord, |
17 and said: We bless you, O Lord God of Israel, because it has 18 not happened as we suspected. | For you have shown mercy to us, and shut out from us the enemy that persecuted us. |
19 And you have taken pity upon two only children. Make them, O Lord, bless you more fully: and to offer up to you a sacrifice of your praise, and of their health, that all nations may know: you alone are God in all the earth.
20 And immediately Raguel commanded his servants to fill up 21 the pit they had made, before it was day. | And he spoke to his wife to make ready a feast, and prepare all kind of pro-
22 visions that are necessary for such as go on a journey. | He caused also two fat kine, and four wethers to be killed, and a banquet to be prepared for all his neighbors, and all his friends.
23 | And Raguel adjured Tobias, to abide with him two weeks. | 24 And of all things which Raguel possessed, he gave one half to 8, 22: Wethers: castrated rams.

Tobias: and made a writing, that the half that remained should after their decease come also to Tobias.

1 The Angel Raphael Goes to Gabelus Then Tobias called the angel to him, whom he took to be a man, and said to
2 him: Brother Azarias, I pray you hearken to my words: | If I should give myself to be your servant, I should not make a
3 worthy return for your care. | However, I beseech you, to take with you beasts and servants, and to go to Gabelus, to Rages the city of the Medes: and to restore to him his note of hand, and receive of him the money, and desire him to come to my
4 wedding. | For you know that my father is numbering the days; and if I stay one day more, his soul will be afflicted. |
5 And indeed you see how Raguel has adjured me, whose adjuring I cannot despise.
6 Then Raphael took four of Raguel's servants, and two camels, and went to Rages the city of the Medes: and finding Gabelus, gave him his note of hand, and received of him
7 all the money. | And he told him concerning Tobias, the son of Tobias, all that had been done: and made him come with
8 him to the wedding. | And when he came into Raguel's house he found Tobias sitting at the table. And he leaped up, and they kissed each other. And Gabelus wept, and blessed God, |
9 and said: The God of Israel bless you: because you are the son of a very good and just man that fears God, and does alms-
10 deeds. | And may a blessing come upon your wife and upon
11 your parents. | And may you see your children, and your children's children, unto the third and fourth generation. And may your seed be blessed by the God of Israel, who reigns for ever
12 and ever. | And when all had said, Amen, they went to the feast: but the marriage feast they celebrated also with the fear of the Lord.

1 The Lament of Tobias' Parents But as Tobias made longer stay upon occasion of the marriage, Tobias his father was solicitous, saying: Why do you think my son does tarry, or why
2 is he detained there? | Is Gabelus dead, do you think, and no
3 man will pay him the money? | And he began to be exceeding sad, both he and Anna his wife with him. And they began both to weep together, because their son did not return to them on 4 the day appointed. | But his mother wept and was quite dis-

consolate, and said: Woe, woe to me! My son, why did we send you to go to a strange country, the light of our eyes, the staff of our old age, the comfort of our life, the hope of our posterity? | 5 We having all things together in you alone, ought not to have 6 let you go from us. | And Tobias said to her: Hold your peace, and be not troubled: our son is safe. That man with whom we 7 sent him is very trusty. | Yet she could by no means be comforted, but daily running out looked round about, and went into all the ways by which there seemed any hope he might return, that she might if possible see him coming afar off.

8 But Raguel said to his son-in-law: Stay here, and I will send a messenger to Tobias your father, that you are in health. | 9 And Tobias said to him: I know that my father and mother now count the days, and their spirit is grievously afflicted within 10 them. | And when Raguel had pressed Tobias with many words, and he by no means would hearken to him, he delivered Sara unto him, and half of all his substance in menservants and womenservants, in cattle, in camels, and in kine, and in much money, and sent him away safe and joyful from him, | 11 saying: The holy angel of the Lord be with you in your journey, and bring you through safe, and that you may find all things well about your parents, and my eyes may see your children be- 12 fore I die. | And the parents taking their daughter kissed her, 13 and let her go, | admonishing her to honor her father and mother in-law, to love her husband, to take care of the family, to govern the house, and to behave herself irreprehensibly.

1 Tobias Returns And as they were returning they came to Charan, which is in the midway to Ninive, the eleventh day. | 2 And the angel said: Brother Tobias, you know how you left 3 your father. | If it pleases you, therefore, let us go before: and let the family follow softly after us, together with your wife, and 4 with the beasts. | And as this their going pleased him, Raphael said to Tobias: Take with you of the gall of the fish, for it will be necessary. So Tobias took some of that gall and departed. | 5 But Anna sat beside the way daily, on the top of a hill, from 6 whence she might see afar off. | And while she watched his coming from that place, she saw him afar off, and presently perceived it was her son coming. And returning she told her husband, saying: Behold your son is coming.

7 And Raphael said to Tobias: As soon as you shall come into your house, forthwith adore the Lord your God; and giving 8 thanks to him, go to your father and kiss him. | And immediately anoint his eyes with this gall of the fish, which you carry with you. For be assured that his eyes shall be presently opened, and your father shall see the light of heaven, and shall rejoice in the sight of you.

9 Then the dog, which had been with them in the way, ran before; and coming as if he had brought the news, showed his 10 joy by his fawning and wagging his tail. | And his father who was blind, rising up, began to run, stumbling with his feet: and
11 giving a servant his hand, went to meet his son. | And receiving him kissed him, as did also his wife. And they began to 12 weep for joy. | And when they had adored God, and given him thanks, they sat down together.

13 Tobias Restores His Father's Sight Then Tobias taking 14 of the gall of the fish, anointed his father's eyes. | And he stayed about half an hour: and a white skin began to come
15 out of his eyes, like the skin of an egg. | And Tobias took hold of it, and drew it from his eyes. And immediately he recovered
16 his sight. | And they glorified God both he and his wife and all
17 that knew him. | And Tobias said: I bless you, O Lord God of Israel, because you have chastised me, and you have saved me. And behold I see Tobias my son.

18 And after seven days Sara his son's wife, and all the family arrived safe, and the cattle, and the camels, and an abundance of money of his wife's: and that money also which he had re-
19 ceived of Gabelus. | And he told his parents all the benefits of God, which he had done to him by the man that conducted him.
20 | And Achior and Nabath the kinsmen of Tobias came, rejoicing for Tobias, and congratulating with him for all the good 21 things that God had done for him. | And for seven days they feasted and rejoiced all with great joy.

1 Raphael Makes Himself Known Then Tobias called to him his son, and said to him: What can we give to this holy 2 man, that has come with you. | Tobias answering, said to his father: Father, what wages shall we give him? Or what can be
3 worthy of his benefits? | He conducted me and brought me

11, 13: This reflects the ancient belief that the gall of fish was a curative of diseases and eye irritations.

11, 20: This is the only quotation from the Story (or Wisdom) of Ahikar in the Douay version (which follows the Latin Vulgate). In other versions of Tobias, Ahikar appears in 1, 22; 2, 10; 11, 18; 14, 10 (some Greek versions have a long reference to Ahikar's story here). In these other versions the author of Tobias changes Ahikar into the nephew of old Tobias. (See Introduction to Tobias.)

safe again, he received the money of Gabelus, he caused me to have my wife, and he chased from her the evil spirit. He gave joy to her parents, myself he delivered from being devoured by the fish, you also he has made to see the light of heaven; and we are filled with all good things through him. What can we 4 give him sufficient for these things? | But I beseech you, my father, to desire him, that he would vouchsafe to accept one half of all things that have been brought.
5 So the father and the son calling him, took him aside, and began to desire him that he would vouchsafe to accept half of 6 all things that they had brought. | Then he said to them secretly: Bless the God of heaven, give glory to him in the sight
7 of all that live, because he has shown his mercy to you. | For it is good to hide the secret of a king: but honorable to reveal
8 and confess the works of God. | Prayer is good with fasting
9 and alms: more than to lay up treasures of gold; | for alms delivers from death: and the same is that which purges away
10 sins, and makes to find mercy and life everlasting. | But they that commit sin and iniquity are enemies to their own soul.
11 I discover then the truth unto you: and I will not hide the 12 secret from you. | When you prayed with tears and buried the dead, and left your dinner, and hid the dead by day in your house, and buried them by night, I offered your prayer to the 13 Lord. | And because you were acceptable to God, it was neces-
14 sary that temptation should prove you. | And now the Lord has sent me to heal you, and to deliver Sara your son's wife
15 from the devil: | for I am the angel Raphael, one of the seven, who stand before the Lord.
16 And when they had heard these things, they were troubled, and being seized with fear they fell upon the ground on their 17 face. | And the angel said to them: Peace be to you, fear not. | 18 For when I was with you, I was there by the will of God: bless 19 him, and sing praises to him. | I seemed indeed to eat and to drink with you: but I use an invisible meat and drink, which 20 cannot be seen by men. | It is time therefore that I return to him that sent me: but you bless your God, and publish all his 21 wonderful works. | And when he had said these things, he was 22 taken from their sight, and they could see him no more. | Then they, lying prostrate for three hours upon their face, blessed God: and rising up, they told all his wonderful works.

12, 15: Of the seven angels, the Bible names two others besides Raphael, namely, Gabriel and Michael, both found in Daniel and the New Testament. The relationship between angels in other religions and those of the Old Testament is still not clear to scholars.

1 Tobias, the Father, Praises God And Tobias the elder opening his mouth, blessed the Lord, and said: You are great,
2 O Lord, for ever, and your kingdom is unto all ages. | For you scourge, and you save; you lead down to hell, and you bring up
3 again; and there is none that can escape your hand. | Give glory to the Lord, you children of Israel: and praise him in the sight
4 of the Gentiles: | because he has therefore scattered you among the Gentiles, who know him not, that you may declare his wonderful works, and make them know that there is no other al-
5 mighty God besides him. | He has chastised us for our iniqui-
6 ties; and he will save us for his own mercy. | See then what he has done with us, and with fear and trembling give glory to him:
7 and extol the eternal King of worlds in your works. | As for me, I will praise him in the land of my captivity: because he
8 has shown his majesty toward a sinful nation. | Be converted, therefore, all you sinners, and do justice before God, believing 9 that he will show his mercy to you. And I and my soul will 10 rejoice in him. | Bless the Lord, all his elect: keep days of joy, and give glory to him.
11 Jerusalem, city of God, the Lord has chastised you for the 12 works of your hands. | Give glory to the Lord for your good things, and bless the God eternal: that he may rebuild his tabernacle in you, and may call back all the captives to you: and
13 you may rejoice for ever and ever. | You shall shine with a glorious light: and all the ends of the earth shall worship you. |
14 Nations from afar shall come to you: and shall bring gifts: and shall adore the Lord in you: and shall esteem your land as 15 holy. | For they shall call upon the great name in you. | 16 They shall be cursed that shall despise you: and they shall be condemned that shall blaspheme you: and blessed shall they 17 be that shall build you up. | But you shall rejoice in your children: because they shall all be blessed, and shall be gathered
18 together to the Lord. | Blessed are all they that love you, and 19 that rejoice in your peace. | My soul, bless you the Lord: because the Lord our God has delivered Jerusalem his city from 20 all her troubles. | Happy shall I be if there shall remain of my 21 seed, to see the glory of Jerusalem. | The gates of Jerusalem shall be built of sapphire, and of emerald: and all the walls

he reign over it for ever and ever. Amen.

1 The Elder Tobias Dies And the words of Tobias were ended. And after Tobias was restored to his sight, he lived two and forty years, and saw the children of his grandchildren. | 2 And after he had lived a hundred and two years, he was buried 3 honorably in Ninive. | For he was six and fifty years old when he lost the sight of his eyes, and sixty when he recovered it 4 again. | And the rest of his life was in joy, and with great increase of the fear of God he departed in peace.
5 And at the hour of his death he called unto him his son Tobias and his children, seven young men, his grandsons, and 6 said to them: | The destruction of Ninive is at hand: for the word of the Lord must be fulfilled. And our brethren, that are scattered abroad from the land of Israel, shall return to it. | 7 And all the land thereof that is desert shall be filled with people, and the house of God which is burned in it, shall again be re-8 built: and all that fear God shall return to it. | And the Gentiles shall leave their idols, and shall come into Jerusalem, and 9 shall dwell in it. | And all the kings of the earth shall rejoice
10 in it, adoring the King of Israel. | Hearken therefore, my children, to your father: serve the Lord in truth, and seek to do 11 the things that please him. | And command your children that they do justice and almsdeeds, and that they be mindful of God, and bless him at all times in truth, and with all their power. | 12 And now, children, hear me, and do not stay here: but as soon as you shall bury your mother by me in one sepulcher, without 13 delay direct your steps to depart from here, | for I see that its iniquity will bring it to destruction.

14 Young Tobias Departs from Ninive And it came to pass that after the death of his mother, Tobias departed out of Ninive with his wife, and children, and children's children, and 14, 1: He lived two and forty years: even when all the manuscripts and translations are compared, it is too difficult to learn Tobias' chronology.

14, 6-7: According to the apocalyptic style of these verses, written in the third and fourth centuries B.C., the author teaches past history, e.g., the fall of Ninive in 612 B.C., by "foretelling" it. This style is in conformity with the way the accounts of the death of the patriarchs are written in Genesis.

THE BOOK OF JUDITH

INTRODUCTION

Most scholars maintain the view that an anonymous Palestinian author wrote the story of Judith, probably in Hebrew, at the end of the second century or the beginning of the first century B.C. The original Hebrew text is lost but it survives in three divergent Greek editions. This divergence accounts for the variety of translations into modern languages. However, the basic story is the same. Tiny Israel is confronted with a superior invading enemy (chs. 1—7) who is struck dead by "the hand of Juda" (chs. 8—16).

The reader of Judith easily observes historical and geographical inaccuracies. Nabuchodonosor, e.g., is called king of the Assyrians, but historically he was king of the neo-Babylonians. He began to reign about eight years after the Assyrian empire fell. In the Judith story, Nabuchodonosor, whose general is a Persian named Holofernes, defeats Arphaxad, an unknown king of Media (1, 5). [An equivalent distortion of history in our times would be to say: Kaiser Wilhelm II, emperor of the French, defeated an unknown Danish king. The Kaiser's commander in chief was General Pershing.]

The geographical inaccuracies are no less glaring. The route of Holofernes' campaigns defy the experts. Bethulia, the main city of the story, is carefully located but cannot be identified in the district where the author places it. Scholars believe that these inaccuracies would even be found in the original Hebrew text if it were extant. The inaccuracies prompt the quest for the type of literature in which Judith is written.

Hardly anyone today reads Judith as strict history. Some believe that there is an historical nucleus, embellished by various historical periods. But the existence of a precise episode forming the historical nucleus is strongly doubted. The most probable episode proposed is an expedition against Egypt by a Persian general, Holofernes, under his king, Artaxerxes III (358-336 B.C.), and some scholars believe that the author spun his Judith story from this verifiable historical incident. Another possible episode proposed is Assurbanipal's campaign in 648 B.C. against Phoenicia and Arabia. Still others believe that the author of Judith re-edited the story of Jahel, the heroine who spiked the head of Sisara, the general of the enemy forces (Jgs 4, 11-24).

Most scholars today hold that the writer had no particular historical episode in mind around which he wove his Judith story, and that he had only a semblance of an historical background. The writer did not choose the historical background of one period, e.g., the eighth to the seventh century Assyria (as in Tobias), or fifth century Persia (as in Esther). The texture of his historical backdrop was formed from Assyrian, Babylonian, Median, and Persian periods. Apparently, the writer deliberately and frequently twisted history and geography to direct his reading audience toward his religious message without historical distractions. His message seems to be: no matter how formidable the enemy is, God can crush him by choosing the most feeble of instruments—"the hand of a woman" (9, 15). The unobtrusively recurring "hand" motif seems to bear out this religious lesson. Nabuchodonosor, through his general Holofernes, is represented as a personification of all-overwhelming human forces that are anti-God (e.g., 5, 29). Judith is a representation of the people of God. Her very name seems to symbolize it, for it means "The Jewess" (see 8, 1 n). It is odd that Judith and her exploits are not mentioned in any other biblical book. However, even if Judith never existed, the writer's inspired message would not lose one sparkle of its luster.

Those advocating the view that there is no particular historical episode, say: even if there had been one, the writer has obscured it in order to show that he is not interested in history but in theology. There is a variety of finer opinions among scholars in recent and present debates. Questions are raised whether it is an allegory, a parable, or a different kind of midrash. One reason why modern scholars have not settled on a definitive opinion is that there is no modern parallel to the type of literature as we have it in the Book of Judith.

Although the Jews and Protestants do not consider Judith an inspired book, the former read it in their liturgical feast of dedication, instituted by Judas Machabee, to celebrate the purification of the temple and the liberation of the nation.

Catholics use Judith in their liturgy, especially in some Marian Masses, e.g., the Epistle of the Feast of the Assumption. This is in harmonious continuity with the belief of some of the Fathers of the Church that Judith was foreshadowing the Blessed Virgin. Just as Judith cut off the head of Holofernes, so did Mary crush the head of the serpent. Just as the people of Bethulia praised Judith for generations (13, 25), so will people praise Mary for generations to come.

Main divisions of the Book of Judith are:

1. The Assyrian Invasion, 1—3
2. The Siege of Bethulia, 4—7
3. Judith's Liberation of Bethulia, 8—15
4. The Canticle of Judith, 16, 1-21
5. Victory Celebration, 16, 22-31

1 Nabuchodonosor's Victory over Arphaxad Now Arphaxad king of the Medes had brought many nations under his dominions: and he built a very strong city, which he called towers. | And he glorified as a mighty one in the force of his army and in the glory of his chariots.

Now in the twelfth year of his reign, Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians, who reigned in Ninive the great city, fought against Arphaxad and overcame him, | in the great plain which he called Ragua, about the Euphrates, and the Tigris, and the Jadason, in the plain of Erioch the king of the Elicians.
Then was the kingdom of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his heart was elevated. And he sent to all that dwelt in Cilicia and Damascus, and Libanus, | and to the nations that are in Carmelus, and Cedar, and to the inhabitants of Galilee in the great plain of Asdrelon, | and to all that were in Samaria, and beyond the river Jordan even to Jerusalem, and all the land of Jesse till you come to the borders of Ethiopia. | To all these Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians, sent messengers. | But they all with one mind refused, and sent them back empty, and rejected them without honor. | Then king Nabuchodonosor being angry against all that land, swore by his throne and kingdom that he would revenge himself of all those countries.

Holofernes Leads Nabuchodonosor's Campaigns In the thirteenth year of the reign of Nabuchodonosor, the two and twentieth day of the first month, the word was given out in the house of Nabuchodonosor, king of the Assyrians, that he would revenge himself. | And he called all the ancients, and all the governors, and his officers of war, and communicated to them the secret of his counsel. | And he said that his thoughts were to bring all the earth under his empire. | And when this saying pleased them all, Nabuchodonosor, the king, called Holofernes the general of his armies, | and said to him: Go out against all the kingdoms of the west, and against them especially that despised my commandment. | Your eye shall not spare any kingdom: and all the strong cities you shall bring under my yoke.
Then Holofernes called the captains, and officers of the power of the Assyrians: and he mustered men for the expedition, as the king commanded him, a hundred and twenty thousand fighting men on foot, and twelve thousand archers, horsemen. | And he made all his warlike preparations to go before with a multitude of innumerable camels, with all provisions sufficient for the armies in abundance, and herds of oxen, and 9 flocks of sheep, without number. | He appointed corn to be

10 prepared out of all Syria in his passage. | But gold and silver
11 he took out of the king's house in great abundance. | And he went forth he and all the army, with the chariots, and horsemen, and archers, who covered the face of the earth, like lo-
12 custs. | And when he had passed through the borders of the Assyrians, he came to the great mountains of Ange, which are on the left of Cilicia: and he went up to all their castles, and took all the strong places.

13 War of Destruction And he took by assault the renowned city of Melothus, and pillaged all the children of Tharsis, and the children of Ismahel, who were over against the 14 face of the desert, and on the south of the land of Cellon. | And he passed over the Euphrates, and came into Mesopotamia: and he forced all the stately cities that were there, from the 15 torrent of Mambre, till one comes to the sea. | And he took the borders thereof, from Cilicia to the coasts of Japheth, which
16 are toward the south. | And he carried away all the children of Madian, and stripped them of all their riches, and all that 17 resisted him he slew with the edge of the sword. | And after these things he went down into the plains of Damascus in the days of the harvest, and he set all the corn on fire, and he
18 caused all the trees and vineyards to be cut down. | And the fear of them fell upon all the inhabitants of the land.

1 Submission of Many to Holofernes Then the kings and the princes of all the cities and provinces, of Syria, Mesopotamia, and Syria, Sobol, and Libya, and Cilicia sent their am-2 bassadors, who coming to Holofernes, said: | Let your indignation toward us cease: for it is better for us to live and serve Nabuchodonosor the great king, and be subject to you, than
3 to die and to perish, or suffer the miseries of slavery. | All our cities and our possessions, all mountains and hills, and fields, and herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, and goats, and horses,

7 Then he came down from the mountains with horsemen, in great power, and made himself master of every city, and all the 8 inhabitants of the land. | And from all the cities he took 9 auxiliaries, valiant men, and chosen for war. | And so great a fear lay upon all those provinces that the inhabitants of all the cities, both princes and nobles, as well as the people, went 10 out to meet him at his coming. | And received him with gar-11 lands, and lights, and dances, and timbrels, and flutes. | And though they did these things, they could not for all that miti-12 gate the fierceness of his heart. | For he both destroyed their 13 cities, and cut down their groves. | For Nabuchodonosor the king had commanded him to destroy all the gods of the earth, that he only might be called god by those nations which could 14 be brought under him by the power of Holofernes. | And when he had passed through all Syria, Sobal, and all Apamea, and all Mesopotamia, he came to the Idumeans into the land of Ga-15 baa, and he took possession of their cities, and stayed there for thirty days in which days he commanded all the troops of his army to be united.

1 The Children of Israel Prepare to Resist Then the children of Israel, who dwelt in the land of Juda, hearing these 2 things, were exceedingly afraid of him. | Dread and horror seized upon their minds, lest he should do the same to Jerusalem and to the temple of the Lord that he had done to other 3 cities and their temples. | And they sent into all Samaria round about, as far as Jericho, and seized upon all the tops of the 4 mountains. | And they compassed their towns with walls, and 5 gathered together corn for provision for war. | And Eliachim the priest wrote to all that were opposite Esdrelon, which faces the great plain near Dothain, and to all by whom there might be a passage of way, that they should take possession of the ascents of the mountains, by which there might be any way to Jerusalem, and should keep watch where the way was nar-6 row between the mountains. | And the children of Israel did

7 as the priest of the Lord Eliachim had appointed them. | And all the people cried to the Lord with great earnestness, and they humbled their souls in fastings, and prayers, both they and their wives.
8 And the priests put on haircloths, and they caused the little children to lie prostrate before the temple of the Lord: and 9 the altar of the Lord they covered with haircloth. | And they cried to the Lord the God of Israel with one accord, that their children might not be made a prey, and their wives carried off, and their cities destroyed, and their holy things profaned, and 10 that they might not be made a reproach to the Gentiles. | Then Eliachim the high priest of the Lord went about all Israel and 11 spoke to them, saying: Know you that the Lord will hear your prayers, if you continue with perseverance in fastings and 12 prayers in the sight of the Lord. | Remember Moses the servant of the Lord, who overcame Amalec that trusted in his own strength, and in his power, and in his army, and in his shields, and in his chariots, and in his horsemen, not by fighting with 13 the sword, but by holy prayers. | So shall all the enemies of Israel be, if you persevere in this work which you have begun.
14 | So they, being moved by this exhortation of his, prayed to 15 the Lord, and continued in the sight of the Lord. | So that even they who offered the holocausts to the Lord, offered the sacrifices to the Lord girded with haircloths, and with ashes upon 16 their head. | And they all begged of God with all their heart, that he would visit his people Israel.

1 Holofernes Is Angered And it was told Holofernes the general of the army of the Assyrians, that the children of Israel prepared themselves to resist, and had shut up the ways 2 of the mountains. | And he was transported with exceeding great fury and indignation, and he called all the princes of 3 Moab and the leaders of Ammon. | And he said to them: Tell me what is this people that besets the mountains, or what are their cities, and of what sort, and how great? Also what is their power, or what is their multitude, or who is the king over their 4 warfare? | And why they above all that dwell in the east, have despised us, and have not come out to meet us, that they might receive us with peace?

5 Achior Informs Holofernes about the Israelites Then

4, 12: Amalec: a reference to Ex 17, 8ff.
5, 5: Achior: Ahikar, the pious pagan, reappears here. He sum-

Achior captain of all the children of Ammon answering, said: If you vouchsafe, my lord, to hear, I will tell the truth in your sight concerning this people, that dwells in the mountains. 6 And there shall not a false word come out of my mouth. | This 7 people is of the offspring of the Chaldeans. | They dwelt first in Mesopotamia, because they would not follow the gods of 8 their fathers, who were in the land of the Chaldeans. | Wherefore forsaking the ceremonies of their fathers, which consisted 9 in the worship of many gods, | they worshiped one God of heaven, who also commanded them to depart from there, and to dwell in Charan. And when there was a famine over all the land, they went down into Egypt, and there for four hundred years were so multiplied that the army of them could not be 10 numbered. | And when the king of Egypt oppressed them, and made slaves of them to labor in clay and brick, in the building of his cities, they cried to their Lord, and he struck the 11 whole land of Egypt with divers plagues. | And when the Egyptians had cast them out from them, and the plague had ceased from them, and they had a mind to take them again, and 12 bring them back to their service, | the God of heaven opened the sea to them in their flight, so that the waters were made to stand firm as a wall on either side, and they walked through 13 the bottom of the sea and passed it dry foot. | And when an innumerable army of the Egyptians pursued after them in that place, they were so overwhelmed with the waters that there was not one left, to tell what had happened to posterity.

14 And after they came out of the Red Sea, they abode in the deserts of mount Sinai, in which never man could dwell, or son 15 of man rested. | There bitter fountains were made sweet for them to drink, and for forty years they received food from heav- 16 en. | Wheresoever they went in, without bow and arrow and without shield and sword, their God fought for them and over- 17 came. | And there was no one that triumphed over this people, but when they departed from the worship of the Lord their 18 God. | But as often as besides their own God, they worshiped any other, they were given to spoil, and to the sword, and to re- 19 proach. | And as often as they were penitent for having revolted from the worship of their God, the God of heaven gave 20 them power to resist. | So they overthrew the king of the Chanaanites, and of the Jebusites, and of the Pherezites, and of the Hethites, and of the Hevites, and of the Amorrites, and all the mighty ones in Hesebon, and they possessed their lands and their cities.

21 And as long as they sinned not in the sight of their God, it
22 was well with them: for their God hates iniquity. | And even some years ago when they had revolted from the way which God had given them to walk therein, they were destroyed in battles by many nations; and very many of them were led away
23 captive into a strange land. | But of late returning to the Lord their God, from the different places wherein they were scattered, they have come together and have gone up into all these mountains, and possess Jerusalem again, where their holies are. |
24 Now therefore, my lord, search if there be any iniquity of theirs in the sight of their God. Let us go up to them, because their God will surely deliver them to you: and they shall be brought 25 under the yoke of your power. | But if there be no offense of this people in the sight of their God, we cannot resist them, because their God will defend them; and we shall be a reproach to the whole earth.

26 And it came to pass, when Achior had ceased to speak these words, all the great men of Holofernes were angry. And they
27 had a mind to kill him, saying to each other: | Who is this, that says the children of Israel can resist king Nabuchodonosor, and his armies: men unarmed, and without force, and without 28 skill in the art of war? | That Achior therefore may know that he deceives us, let us go up into the mountains. And when the bravest of them shall be taken, then shall he with them be
29 stabbed with the sword, | that every nation may know that Nabuchodonosor is god of the earth, and besides him there is no other.

1 Achior Taken to Bethulia And it came to pass when they had left off speaking, that Holofernes being in a violent
2 passion, said to Achior: | Because you have prophesied unto us saying, that the nation of Israel is defended by their God, to
3 show you that there is no God, but Nabuchodonosor, | when we shall slay them all as one man, then you also shall die with them by the sword of the Assyrians; and all Israel shall perish
4 with you. | And you shall find that Nabuchodonosor is lord of the whole earth. And then the sword of my soldiers shall pass through your sides; and you shall be stabbed and fall among the wounded of Israel; and you shall breathe no more 5 till you be destroyed with them. | But if you think your prophecy true, let not your countenance sink. And let the paleness that is in your face, depart from you, if you imagine these my

6 words cannot be accomplished. | And that you may know that you shall experience these things together with them, behold from this hour you shall be associated to their people, that when they shall receive the punishment they deserve from my sword, you may fall under the same vengeance.
7 Then Holofernes commanded his servants to take Achior, and to lead him to Bethulia, and to deliver him into the hands
8 of the children of Israel. | And the servants of Holofernes taking him, went through the plains: but when they came near
9 the mountains, the slingers came out against them. | Then turning out of the way by the side of the mountain, they tied Achior to a tree, hand and foot, and so left him bound with 10 ropes and returned to their master. | And the children of Israel coming down from Bethulia, came to him, and loosing him they brought him to Bethulia, and setting him in the midst of the people, asked him what was the matter that the Assyrians had left him bound.
11 In those days the rulers there were Ozias the son of Micha of the tribe of Simeon, and Charmi, called also Gothoniel. |
12 And Achior related in the midst of the ancients, and in the presence of all the people, all that he had said, being asked by Holofernes: and how the people of Holofernes would have 13 killed him for this word. | And how Holofernes himself being angry had commanded him to be delivered for this cause to the Israelites: that when he should overcome the children of Israel, then he might command Achior also himself to be put to death by diverse torments, for having said: The God of heaven is
14 their defender. | And when Achior had declared all these things, all the people fell upon their faces, adoring the Lord, and all of them together mourning and weeping poured out
15 their prayers with one accord to the Lord, | saying: O Lord God of heaven and earth, behold their pride, and look on our low condition, and have regard to the face of your saints, and show that you forsake not them that trust in you, and that you humble them that presume of themselves, and glory in their own strength.

16 The People Comfort Achior So when their weeping ended, 6, 7: Bethulia: the name is unknown.

9 Wherefore, that you may overcome them without joining battle, set guards at the springs that they may not draw water out of them, and you shall destroy them without sword, or at least being wearied out they will yield up their city, which they suppose, because it is situated in the mountains, to be impregnable.
10 | And these words pleased Holofernes, and his officers: and he placed all round about a hundred men at every spring.

11 The Distress and Prayer of the People And when they had kept this watch for full twenty days, the cisterns and the reserve of waters failed among all the inhabitants of Bethulia, so that there was not within the city enough to satisfy them, no not for one day, for water was daily given out to 12 the people by measure. | Then all the men and women, young men, and children, gathering themselves together to Ozias,
13 all together with one voice, | said: God be judge between us and you, for you have done evil against us, in that you would not speak peaceably with the Assyrians, and for this cause
14 God has sold us into their hands. | And therefore there is no one to help us, while we are cast down before their eyes in
15 thirst, and sad destruction. | And now assemble, all of you that are in the city, that we may of our own accord yield
16 ourselves all up to the people of Holofernes: | for it is better, that being captives we should live and bless the Lord, than that we should die, and be a reproach to all flesh, after we have
17 seen our wives and our infants die before our eyes. | We call to witness this day heaven and earth, and the God of our fathers, who takes vengeance upon us according to our sins, conjuring you to deliver now the city into the hand of the army of Holofernes, that our end may be short by the edge of the sword, which is made longer by the drought of thirst.
18 And when they had said these things, there was great weeping and lamentation of all in the assembly, and for many hours
19 with one voice they cried to God, saying: | We have sinned with our fathers, we have done unjustly, we have committed
20 iniquity. | Have you mercy on us, because you are good, or punish our iniquities by chastising us yourself: and deliver not
21 them that trust in you to a people that know you not, | that they may not say among the Gentiles: Where is their God? |
22 And when being wearied with these cries, and tired with these 23 weepings, they held their peace, | Ozias rising up all in tears, said: Be of good courage, my brethren, and let us wait these 24 five days for mercy from the Lord. | For perhaps he will put 7, 16: Flesh: people.

and the people's prayer, in which they continued all the 17 day, was concluded, they comforted Achior, | saying: The God of our fathers, whose power you have set forth, will make this return to you, that you rather shall see their destruction. | 18 And when the Lord our God shall give this liberty to his servants, let God be with you also in the midst of us: that as it shall please you, so you with all yours may converse with us.
19 Then Ozias, after the assembly was broken up, received him 20 into his house, and made him a great supper. | And all the ancients were invited, and they refreshed themselves together 21 after their fast was over. | And afterward all the people were called together, and they prayed all the night long within the church, desiring help of the God of Israel.

1 Holofernes Besieges Bethulia But Holofernes on the next day gave orders to his army, to go up against Bethulia. | 2 Now there were in his troops a hundred and twenty thousand footmen, and two and twenty thousand horsemen, besides the preparations of those men who had been taken, and who had been brought away out of the provinces and cities of all the 3 youth. | All these prepared themselves together to fight against the children of Israel. And they came by the hillside to the top, which looks toward Dothain, from the place which is called Belma, unto Chelmon, which is opposite Esdrelon.
4 | But the children of Israel, when they saw the multitude of them, prostrated themselves upon the ground, putting ashes upon their heads, praying with one accord that the God of Is-5 rael would show his mercy upon his people. | And taking their arms of war, they posted themselves at the places, which by a narrow pathway lead directly between the mountains, and they guarded them all day and night.
6 Now Holofernes, in going round about, found that the fountain which supplied them with water, ran through an aqueduct outside the city on the south side. And he commanded 7 their aqueduct to be cut off. | Nevertheless there were springs not far from the walls, out of which they were seen secretly to draw water, to refresh themselves a little rather than to 8 drink their fill. | But the children of Ammon and Moab came to Holofernes, saying: The children of Israel trust not in their spears, nor in their arrows; but the mountains are their defense, and the steep hills and precipices guard them. |

a stop to his indignation, and will give glory to his own name. | 25 But if after five days be past there comes no aid, we will do the things which you have spoken.

1 The Intervention of Judith Now it came to pass, that Judith a widow heard these words; she was the daughter of Merari, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Ozias, the son of Elai, the son of Jamnor, the son of Gedeon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Achitob, the son of Melchias, the son of Enan, the son of Nathanias, the son of Salathiel, the son 2 of Simeon, the son of Ruben, | and her husband was Ma-3 nasses, who died in the time of the barley harvest: | for he was standing over them that bound sheaves in the field, and the heat came upon his head, and he died in Bethulia his own 4 city, and was buried there with his fathers. | And Judith his 5 relict was a widow now three years and six months. | And she made herself a private chamber in the upper part of her house, 6 in which she abode shut up with her maids. | And she wore haircloth upon her loins, and fasted all the days of her life, except the sabbaths, and new moons, and the feasts of the 7 house of Israel. | And she was exceedingly beautiful, and her husband left her great riches and very many servants, and large 8 possessions of herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep. | And she was greatly renowned among all, because she feared the Lord very much, neither was there any one that spoke an ill word of her.

9 When therefore she had heard that Ozias had promised that he would deliver up the city after the fifth day, she sent 10 to the ancients Chabri and Charmi. | And they came to her, and she said to them: What is this word, by which Ozias has consented to give up the city to the Assyrians, if within five days there should come no aid to us?

11 Judith Rebukes the Ancients And who are you that 12 tempt the Lord? | This is not a word that may draw down mercy, but rather that may stir up wrath, and enkindle indig 13 nation. | You have set a time for the mercy of the Lord: and 8, 1: Judith: the name accords well with the fictitious intent of the author because Judith is unknown in the Bible except as a name of one of Esau's Hittite wives in Gn 26, 34. In the preceding seven chapters, the author has carefully prepared the historical and psychological backdrop for Judith's first appearance.

8, 8: The French see in this verse a parallel to their national heroine, St. Joan of Arc.

you have appointed him a day, according to your pleasure. | 14 But forasmuch as the Lord is patient, let us be penitent for this 15 same thing, and with many tears let us beg his pardon. | For God will not threaten like man, nor be inflamed to anger like 16 the son of man. | And therefore let us humble our souls be-17 fore him, and continue in an humble spirit in his service. | Let us ask the Lord with tears, that according to his will so he would show his mercy to us: that as our heart is troubled by 18 their pride, so also we may glorify in our humility. | For we have not followed the sins of our fathers, who forsook their 19 God, and worshiped strange gods, | for which crime they were given up to their enemies, to the sword, and to pillage and to 20 confusion: but we know no other God but him. | Let us humbly wait for his consolation, and the Lord our God will require our blood of the afflictions of our enemies, and he will humble all the nations that shall rise up against us, and bring them to disgrace.

21 And now, brethren, as you are the ancients among the people of God, and their very soul rests upon you: comfort their hearts by your speech, that they may be mindful how our fathers were tempted that they might be proved, whether they 22 worshiped their God truly. | They must remember how our father Abraham was tempted, and being proved by many tribu-23 lations, was made the friend of God. | So Isaac, so Jacob, so Moses, and all that have pleased God, passed through many 24 tribulations, remaining faithful. | But they that did not receive the trials with the fear of the Lord, but uttered their impatience and the reproach of their murmuring against the Lord, 25 | were destroyed by the destroyer, and perished by serpents. |
26 As for us therefore let us not revenge ourselves for these things 27 which we suffer. | But esteeming these very punishments to be less than our sins deserve, let us believe that these scourges of the Lord, with which like servants we are chastised, have happened for our amendment, and not for our destruction.

28 And Ozias and the ancients said to her: All things which you have spoken are true; and there is nothing to be repre-29 hended in your words. | Now therefore pray for us; for you 30 are a holy woman, and one fearing God. | And Judith said to them: As you know that what I have been able to say is of 31 God, | so that which I intend to do prove to be of him, pray

8, 18: If the author really meant this to be the era of Nabuchodonosor, then Judith would be wrong in saying that the people did not practice idolatry.

you that God may strengthen my design. | You shall stand at the gate this night, while I will go out with my maid servant, and pray that, as you have done before, in five days the Lord may look down upon his people Israel. | But I desire that you search not into what I am doing; and till I bring you word let nothing else be done but to pray for me to the Lord our God. | And Ozias the prince of Juda said to her: Go in peace; and the Lord be with you to take revenge of our enemies. So returning they departed.

Judith's Prayer And when they had left, Judith went into her oratory, and putting on haircloth, laid ashes on her head, and falling down prostrate before the Lord, she cried to the Lord, saying: | O Lord God of my father Simeon, who gave him a sword to execute vengeance against strangers, who had defiled by their uncleanness, and uncovered the virgin unto confusion, | and who gave their wives to be made a prey, and their daughters into captivity, and all their spoils to be divided to your servants, who were zealous with your zeal: assist,
I beseech you, O Lord God, me a widow. | For you have done the things of old, and you have devised one thing after another;
and what you have designed has been done: | for all your ways are prepared; and in your providence you have placed your judgments.

Look upon the camp of the Assyrians now, as you were pleased to look upon the camp of the Egyptians, when they pursued armed after your servants, trusting in their chariots, and in their horsemen, and in a multitude of warriors. | But you looked over their camp, and darkness wearied them. | The deep held their feet, and the waters overwhelmed them. | So may it be with these also, O Lord, who trust in their multitude, and in their chariots, and in their pikes, and in their shields, and in their arrows, and glory in their spears, | and know not that you are our God, who destroys wars from the begin-

8, 34: Ozias: Judith towers above him as the true spiritual, and even military, leader.

9, 2: Simeon: a reference to Judith's ancestor who rallied the people to take vengeance with the "sword" for the violation of his sister Dina in Gn 34. In the Genesis episode, the people took vengeance for Dina; in the present episode, Judith obtains revenge for the people. To the author of Judith the sword of vengeance plays the same role in both episodes.

9, 10: Destroys: puts an end to.

11 ning. And the Lord is your name. | Lift up your arm as from the beginning, and crush their power with your power. Let their power fall in their wrath, who promise themselves to violate your sanctuary, and defile the dwelling place of your name, and to beat down with their sword the horn of your altar.
12 Bring to pass, O Lord, that his pride may be cut off 13 with his own sword. | Let him be caught in the net of his own eyes in my regard: and do you strike him by the 14 graces of the words of my lips. | Give me constancy in my mind, that I may despise him: and fortitude that I may over-15 throw him. | For this will be a glorious monument for your 16 name, when he shall fall by the hand of a woman. | For your power, O Lord, is not in a multitude, nor is your pleasure in the strength of horses, nor from the beginning have the proud been acceptable to you: but the prayer of the humble and the meek 17 has always pleased you. | O God of the heavens, creator of the waters, and Lord of the whole creation, hear me a poor wretch, making supplication to you, and presuming of your 18 mercy. | Remember, O Lord, your covenant, and put you words in my mouth, and strengthen the resolution in my 19 heart: that your house may continue in your holiness. | And all nations may acknowledge that you are God: and there is no other besides you.

1 Judith Goes into the Assyrian Camp And it came to pass, when she had ceased to cry to the Lord, that she rose from the place wherein she lay prostrate before the Lord. | 2 And she called her maid, and going down into her house she took off her haircloth, and put away the garments of her wid-3 owhood. | And she washed her body, and anointed herself with the best ointment, and plaited the hair of her head, and put a bonnet upon her head, and clothed herself with the garments of her gladness, and put sandals on her feet, and took her bracelets, and lilies, and earlets, and rings, and adorned 4 herself with all her ornaments. | And the Lord also gave her more beauty: because all this dressing up did not proceed from sensuality, but from virtue. And therefore the Lord increased this her beauty, so that she appeared to all men's eyes 5 incomparably lovely. | And she gave to her maid a bottle of 9, 11: The horn of the altar: these were four protuberances on the corners of the altar. Holofernes intended to suppress the worship to Yahweh.

wine to carry, and a vessel of oil, and parched corn, and dry figs, and bread and cheese, and went out.

6 And when they came to the gate of the city, they found 7 Ozias, and the ancients of the city waiting. | And when they saw her they were astonished, and admired her beauty exceed-
8 ingly. | But they asked her no question, only they let her pass, saying: The God of our fathers give you grace. And may he strengthen all the counsel of your heart with his power, that Jerusalem may glory in you; and your name may be in the 9 number of the holy and just. | And they that were there said, all with one voice: So be it, so be it.

10 But Judith praying to the Lord, passed through the gates, she 11 and her maid. | And it came to pass, when she went down the hill, about break of day, that the watchmen of the Assyrians met her, and stopped her, saying: Where do you come from?
12 Or where do you go? | And she answered: I am a daughter of the Hebrews, and I have fled from them, because I knew they would be made a prey to you, because they despised you, and would not of their own accord yield themselves, that they might
13 find mercy in your sight. | For this reason I thought with myself, saying: I will go to the presence of the prince Holofernes, that I may tell him their secrets, and show him by what way he
14 may take them, without the loss of one man of his army. | And when the men had heard her words, they beheld her face. And their eyes were amazed, for they wondered exceedingly at her beauty.

15 Judith Is Brought to Holofernes And they said to her: You have saved your life by taking this resolution, to come 16 down to our lord. | And be assured of this, that when you shall stand before him, he will treat you well: and you will be most acceptable to his heart. And they brought her to the tent of
17 Holofernes, telling him of her. | And when she came into his 18 presence, forthwith Holofernes was caught by his eyes. | And his officers said to him: Who can despise the people of the Hebrews, who have such beautiful women, that we should not think it worth our while for their sakes to fight against them?
19 | And Judith seeing Holofernes sitting under a canopy, which was woven of purple and gold, with emeralds and precious
20 stones, | after she had looked on his face, bowed down to him,

10, 7: Other references to her beauty in vv. 14, 17, 18, manifest the gifted pen of the writer who never describes Judith's beauty directly but indirectly through admirers. This effective technique has been compared to Homer who similarly "describes" Helen of Troy.

prostrating herself to the ground. And the servants of Holofernes lifted her up, by the command of their master.

1 Judith's Speech to Holofernes Then Holofernes said to her: Be of good comfort, and fear not in your heart, for I have never hurt a man that was willing to serve Nabuchodonosor 2 the king. | And if your people had not despised me, I would 3 never have lifted up my spear against them. | But now tell me, for what cause have you left them, and why has it pleased you 4 to come to us? | And Judith said to him: Receive the words of your handmaid; for if you will follow the words of your hand-5 maid, the Lord will do with you a perfect thing. | For as Nab-uchodonosor the king of the earth lives, and his power lives which is in you for chastising of all straying souls: not only men serve him through you, but also the beasts of the field obey him, 6 | for the industry of your mind is spoken of among all nations:
and it is told through the whole world that you only are excellent, and mighty in all his kingdom; and your discipline is cried up in all provinces.
7 It is known also what Achior said, nor are we ignorant of 8 what you have commanded to be done to him. | For it is certain that our God is so offended with sins, that he has sent word by his prophets to the people that he will deliver them up for 9 their sins. | And because the children of Israel know they have 10 offended their God, your dread is upon them. | Moreover also a famine has come upon them: and for drought of water they are 11 already to be counted among the dead. | And they have a design even to kill their cattle, and to drink the blood of them. | 12 And the consecrated things of the Lord their God, which God forbade them to touch, in corn, wine, and oil, these have they purposed to make use of, and they design to consume the things

11, 1ff: The classical moral problem in the Book of Judith is: how can an author, who is inspired by God, praise Judith's lie? If the book is interpreted as fictitious history, the difficulty loses some of its sting, but it still remains. It is argued that Judith does not lie but is adroitly ambiguous. Besides, some translations lend themselves more than others to making Judith lie. Perhaps the best answer is: The revelation of the moral evil of telling a lie in delicate circumstances was not yet made known. Even today moralists dispute just what is a lie in such delicate circumstances as espionage in war.

11, 4: Holofernes thinks of his victory over the Jews; Judith thinks of her victory over him.

11, 6: The industry of your mind: your resourceful mind. Your discipline . . . provinces: your ability in warfare is well known.

11, 12: Only the priests were allowed to eat the first fruits of corn, wine, oil, and the showbread. See Lv 24, 5-9.

which they ought not to touch with their hands. Therefore, because they do these things, it is certain they will be given up to 13 destruction. | And I, your handmaid, knowing this, have fled from them, and the Lord has sent me to tell you these very
14 things. | For I, your handmaid, worship God even now that I am with you: and your handmaid will go out, and I will pray
15 to God, | and he will tell me when he will repay them for their sins. And I will come and tell you, so that I may bring you through the midst of Jerusalem, and you shall have all the people of Israel, as sheep that have no shepherd; and there shall 16 not so much as one dog bark against you. | Because these
17 things are told me by the providence of God. | And because God is angry with them, I am sent to tell these very things to you.

18 And all these words pleased Holofernes, and his servants, and they admired her wisdom; and they said one to another:
19 | There is not such another woman upon earth in look, in 20 beauty, and in sense of words. | And Holofernes said to her: God has done well who sent you before the people, that you
21 might give them into our hands. | And because your promise is good, if your God shall do this for me, he shall also be my God, and you shall be great in the house of Nabuchodonosor, and your name shall be renowned through all the earth.

1 Judith in the Company of the Assyrians Then he ordered that she should go in where his treasures were laid up, and bade her tarry there. And he appointed what should be given
2 her from his own table. | And Judith answered him and said: Now I cannot eat of these things which you command to be given me, lest sin come upon me; but I will eat of the things
3 which I have brought. | And Holofernes said to her: If these things which you have brought with you fail you, what shall
4 we do for you? | And Judith said: As your soul lives, my lord, your handmaid shall not spend all these things till God do by my hand that which I have purposed. And his servants brought
5 her into the tent which he had commanded. | And when she was going in, she desired that she might have liberty to go out at 6 night and before day, to prayer, and to beseech the Lord. | And 11, 19: Sense of words: a better translation is "understanding of things."

12, 4: See 11, 4 n, and notice the same studied ambiguity here. Hand: as stated in the Introduction, the hand-of-Judith motif weaves in and out of the story to teach that God can crush opposing giant forces by the mere hand of a woman.

he commanded his chamberlains, that she might go out and in, 7 to adore her God as she pleased, for three days. | And she went out in the nights into the valley of Bethulia, and washed herself 8 in a fountain of water. | And as she came up, she prayed to the Lord the God of Israel, that he would direct her way to the de-9 liverance of his people. | And going in, she remained pure in the tent, until she took her own meat in the evening.

10 Holofernes Invites Judith to a Banquet And it came to pass on the fourth day, that Holofernes made a supper for his servants, and said to Vagao his eunuch: Go, and persuade that Hebrew woman to consent of her own accord to dwell with 11 me. | For it is looked upon as shameful among the Assyrians, if a woman mock a man, by doing so as to pass free from him. | 12 Then Vagao went in to Judith, and said: Let not my good maid be afraid to go in to my lord, that she may be honored before his face, that she may eat with him and drink wine and be merry.
13 | And Judith answered him: Who am I, that I should gainsay 14 my lord? | All that shall be good and best before his eyes, I will do. And whatsoever shall please him, that shall be best to me 15 all the days of my life. | And she arose and dressed herself out with her garments, and going in she stood before his face.
16 | And the heart of Holofernes was smitten, for he was burning
17 with the desire of her. | And Holofernes said to her: Drink now: and sit down and be merry; for you have found favor be-18 fore me. | And Judith said: I will drink my lord, because my life
19 is magnified this day above all my days. | And she took and ate and drank before him what her maid had prepared for her. | 20 And Holofernes was made merry on her occasion, and drank exceeding much wine, so much as he had never drunk in his life.

1 Judith Slays Holofernes And when it had grown late, his servants made haste to their lodgings: and Vagao shut the 2 chamber doors, and went his way. | And they were all over-
3 charged with wine. | And Judith was alone in the chamber. | 4 But Holofernes lay on his bed, fast asleep, being exceedingly 5 drunk. | And Judith spoke to her maid to stand outside before
6 the chamber, and to watch. | And Judith stood before the bed 7 praying with tears, and the motion of her lips in silence, | saying: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and in this hour look on the works of my hands, that as you have promised, you may raise up Jerusalem your city. And that I may bring to pass that which I have purposed, having a belief that it might be done 8 by you. | And when she had said this, she went to the pillar that was at his bed's head, and loosed his sword that hung tied

9 upon it. | And when she had drawn it out, she took him by the hair of his head, and said: Strengthen me, O Lord God, at this
10 hour. | And she struck twice upon his neck, and cut off his head, and took off his canopy from the pillars, and rolled away
11 his headless body. | And after a while she went out and delivered the head of Holofernes to her maid, and bade her put it into her wallet.

12 Judith Returns to Her People And they two went out according to their custom, as it were to prayer, and they passed the camp, and having compassed the valley, they 13 came to the gate of the city. | And Judith from afar off cried to the watchmen upon the walls: Open the gates, for
14 God is with us, who has shown his power in Israel. | And it came to pass, when the men had heard her voice, that they called
15 the ancients of the city. |. And all ran to meet her from the least to the greatest: for they now had no hopes that she would
16 come. | And lighting up lights they all gathered round about her. And she went up to a higher place, and commanded silence
17 to be made. And when all had held their peace, | Judith said: Praise the Lord our God, who has not forsaken them that hope
18 in him. | And by me his handmaid he has fulfilled his mercy, which he promised to the house of Israel: and he has killed the
19 enemy of his people by my hand this night. | Then she brought forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and showed it them, saying: Behold the head of Holofernes the general of the army of the Assyrians, and behold his canopy, wherein he lay in his drunkenness, where the Lord our God slew him by the 20 hand of a woman. | But as the same Lord lives, his angel has been my keeper both going there and abiding there, and returning from thence. And the Lord has not suffered me his handmaid to be defiled: but has brought me back to you without pollution of sin, rejoicing for his victory, for my escape, and for your because his mercy endures for ever.

22 And they all adored the Lord, and said to her: The Lord has blessed you by his power, because by you he has brought our 23 enemies to nought. | And Ozias, the prince of the people of Israel, said to her: Blessed are you, O daughter, by the Lord the 24 most high God, above all women upon the earth. | Blessed be the Lord who made heaven and earth, who has directed you to 25 the cutting off the head of the prince of our enemies. | Because he has so magnified your name this day, that your praise shall not depart out of the mouth of men who shall be mindful of the power of the Lord, for ever, for that you have not spared your life, by reason of the distress and tribulation of your people, but have prevented our ruin in the presence of our God. | 26 And all the people said: So be it. So be it.
27 And Achior being called for came, and Judith said to him:
The God of Israel, to whom you gave testimony, that he revenges himself of his enemies, he has cut off the head of all the 28 unbelievers this night by my hand. | And that you may find that it is so, behold the head of Holofernes, who in the contempt of his pride despised the God of Israel, and threatened you with death, saying: When the people of Israel shall be taken, I 29 will command your sides to be pierced with a sword. | Then Achior seeing the head of Holofernes, being seized with a great fear he fell on his face upon the earth, and his soul swooned 30 away. | But after he had recovered his spirits, he fell down at 31 her feet, and reverenced her, and said: | Blessed are you by your God in every tabernacle of Jacob, for in every nation which shall hear your name, the God of Israel shall be magnified on occasion of you.

1 The Israelites' Assault on the Assyrians And Judith said to all the people: Hear me, my brethren; hang up this head upon 2 our walls. | And as soon as the sun shall rise, let every man take his arms: and rush out, not as going down beneath, but as 3 making an assault. | Then the watchmen must needs run to 4 awake their prince for the battle. | And when the captains of them shall run to the tent of Holofernes, and shall find him without his head, wallowing in his blood, fear shall fall upon 5 them. | And when you shall know that they are fleeing, go after them securely, for the Lord will destroy them under your feet.

6 And Achior seeing the power that the God of Israel had wrought, leaving the religion of the Gentiles, he believed God, and circumcised the flesh of his foreskin, and was joined to the people of Israel, with all the succession of his kindred until this present day.
7 And immediately at break of day, they hung up the head of Holofernes upon the walls, and every man took his arms, and 8 they went out with a great noise and shouting. | And the 9 watchmen seeing this, ran to the tent of Holofernes. | And they that were in the tent came, and made a noise before the door of the chamber to awake him: endeavoring by art to break his rest, that Holofernes might awake, not by their calling him, but
10 by their noise. | For no man dared knock, or open and go into 11 the chamber of the general of the Assyrians. | But when his captains and tribunes had come, and all the chiefs of the army of the king of the Assyrians, they said to the chamberlains: |
12 Go in, and awake him; for the mice, coming out of their holes, 13 have presumed to challenge us to fight. | Then Vagao going into his chamber, stood before the curtain, and made a clapping with his hands, for he thought that he was sleeping with Judith.
14 | But when, with hearkening, he perceived no motion of one lying, he came near to the curtain, and lifting up, and seeing the body of Holofernes, lying upon the ground, without the head, weltering in his blood, he cried out with a loud voice, with
15 weeping, and rent his garments. | And he went into the tent
16 of Judith; and not finding her, he ran out to the people, | and said: One Hebrew woman has made confusion in the house of king Nabuchodonosor, for behold, Holofernes lies upon the 17 ground; and his head is not upon him. | Now when the chiefs of the army of the Assyrians had heard this, they all rent their garments, and an intolerable fear and dread fell upon them, and
18 their minds were troubled exceedingly. | And there was a very great cry in the midst of their camp.

1 The Assyrians Defeated And when all the army heard that Holofernes was beheaded, courage and counsel fled from them, and being seized with trembling and fear, they thought 2 only to save themselves by flight: | so that no one spoke to his neighbor, but hanging down the head, leaving all things behind,

they made haste to escape from the Hebrews, who, as they heard, were coming armed upon them, and fled by the ways of 3 the fields, and the paths of the hills. | So the children of Israel seeing them fleeing, followed after them. And they went
4 down sounding with trumpets and shouting after them. | And because the Assyrians were not united together, they went without order in their flight, but the children of Israel pursuing in
5 one body, defeated all that they could find. | And Ozias sent
6 messengers through all the cities and countries of Israel. | And every country, and every city, sent their chosen young men armed after them, and they pursued them with the edge of the sword until they came to the extremities of their confines. |
7 And the rest that were in Bethulia went into the camp of the Assyrians and took away the spoils which the Assyrians in their flight had left behind them: and they were laden exceedingly.
8 | But they that returned conquerors to Bethulia, brought with them all things that were theirs, so that there was no numbering of their cattle, and beasts, and all their movables, insomuch that from the least to the greatest all were made rich by their spoils.

9 Judith Is Praised And Joachim the high priest came from Jerusalem to Bethulia with all his ancients to see Judith. |
10 And when she had come out to him, they all blessed her with one voice, saying: You are the glory of Jerusalem, you are the 11 joy of Israel, you are the honor of our people. | For you have done manfully, and your heart has been strengthened, because you have loved chastity, and after your husband have not known any other. Therefore also the hand of the Lord has strengthened you, and therefore you shall be blessed for ever.
12 | And all the people said: So be it. So be it.
13 And thirty days were scarce sufficient for the people of Is-
14 rael to gather up the spoils of the Assyrians. | But all those things that were proved to be the peculiar goods of Holofernes, they gave to Judith in gold, and silver and garments and precious stones, and all household stuff, and they all were deliv-
15 ered to her by the people. | And all the people rejoiced with the women, and virgins, and young men, playing on instruments and harps.

15, 8: The extrabiblical facts indicate that Holofernes was not decapitated, but returned victorious and was decorated by his king, Artaxerxes.

15, 10: See 13, 23 n.

1 The Canticle of Judith Then Judith sang this canticle to the Lord, saying:
2 Begin to give praise to the Lord with timbrels, sing to the Lord with cymbals, tune unto him a new psalm: extol and call upon his name.
3 The Lord puts an end to wars, the Lord in his name.
4 He has set his camp in the midst of his people, to deliver us from the hand of all our enemies.
5 The Assyrian came out of the mountains from the north in the multitude of his strength: his multitude stopped up the torrents, and their horses covered the valleys.
6 He bragged that he would set my borders on fire, and kill my young men with the sword, to make my infants a prey, and my virgins captives.
7 But the almighty Lord has struck him, and has delivered him into the hands of a woman, and has slain him.
8 For their mighty one did not fall by young men, neither did the sons of Titan strike him, nor tall giants oppose themselves to him, but Judith the daughter of Merari weakened him with the beauty of her face.
9 For she put off her the garments of widowhood, and put on her the garments of joy, to give joy to the children of Israel.
10 She anointed her face with ointment, and bound up her locks with a crown, and took a new robe to deceive him.
11 Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty made his soul her captive, with a sword she cut off his head.
12 The Persians quaked at her constancy, and the Medes at her boldness.
13 Then the camp of the Assyrians howled, when my lowly ones appeared, parched with thirst.
14 The sons of the damsels have pierced them through, and they have killed them like children fleeing away: they perished in battle before the face of the Lord my God.
15 Let us sing a hymn to the Lord, let us sing a new hymn to our God.
16 O Adonai, Lord, greatest are you, and glorious in your power: and no one can overcome you.
17 Let all your creatures serve you: because you have spoken, and they were made: you sent forth your spirit, and they were created. And there is no one that can resist your voice.
18 The mountains shall be moved from the foundations with the waters, the rocks shall melt as wax before your face.
19 But they that fear you, shall be great with you in all things.
20 Woe be to the nation that rises up against my people: for the Lord almighty will take revenge on them. In the day of judgment he will visit them:

21 For he will give fire, and worms into their flesh, that they may burn, and may feel for ever.

22 Celebration of the Victory And it came to pass after these things, that all the people, after the victory, came to Jerusalem to adore the Lord: and as soon as they were purified, they all offered holocausts, and vows, and their promises. |
23 And Judith offered for an anathema of oblivion all the arms of Holofernes, which the people gave her, and the canopy that
24 she had taken away out of his chamber. | And the people were joyful in the sight of the sanctuary, and for three months
25 the joy of this victory was celebrated with Judith. | And after those days every man returned to his house. And Judith was made great in Bethulia; and she was most renowned in all the
26 land of Israel. | And chastity was joined to her virtue, so that she knew no man all the days of her life, after the death of 27 Manasses her husband. | And on festival days she came forth with great glory.

28 Judith's Death And she abode in her husband's house a hundred and five years, and made her handmaid free. And she 29 died, and was buried with her husband in Bethulia. | And all
30 the people mourned for seven days. | And all the time of her life there was none that troubled Israel, nor many years after 31 her death. | But the day of the festivity of this victory is received by the Hebrews in the number of holy days, and is religiously observed by the Jews from that time until this day.

16, 21: May feel for ever: the sense is: May they feel pain as long as they burn.

16, 22: According to Nm 31, 19 they had to purify themselves after killing the enemy in war.

16, 23: Offered for an anathema of oblivion: an offering to completely destroy all the belongings of Holofernes.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

INTRODUCTION

The Book of Esther was written in Hebrew by an anonymous Jew, about 350 B.C., against the background of the Persian capital of Susa at the time of Xerxes I (486-465 B.C.). Esther, a Jewess, became queen of Persia. The grand vizier, or "prime minister," Aman, fixes a date to exterminate all Jews. Esther intervenes with the king, and the Jews destroy their enemies. This victorious day was henceforth celebrated as the feast of Purim.

The author's purpose was to show God's Providence over His threatened people, and to explain the origin of the feast of Purim or "lots." (See 9, 20-32 n.) Hardly anyone today interprets Esther as a strict historical document. Some consider it pure fiction from beginning to end.

There are numerous historical inaccuracies (as pointed out in several annotations), but many scholars concede that the author freely adorned some historical facts from the court life of Xerxes. The most certain historical fact is thought to be the liberation of a group of persecuted Jews in the eastern Middle East. Yet there is no evidence outside the Bible of the massacre of Jews during the reign of Xerxes. The situation of the Jews in Susa at the time of Xerxes is historical, and the portrayal of this ruler accords well with Herodotus' sketch of him.

The influence of the Book of Esther upon the New Testament is nil. Nor does it seem to have been popular among the people who left us the Dead Sea Scrolls, for it is the only book of the Hebrew Old Testament of which not even one fragment has been found. Among the Fathers of the Church, however, Esther is considered a type of Mary. In Western literature, Jean Racine has perhaps immortalized Esther best in his moving tragedy of the same name.

Main divisions of the Book of Esther are:

1. Esther Replaces Queen Vasthi, 1—2
2. The Feud between Aman and Mardochai, 3—7
3. The Victory of Mardochai, Esther and the Jews, 8, 1—10, 3
4. Appendices, 10, 4—16, 24

1 The Feast of King Assuerus In the days of Assuerus, who reigned from India to Ethiopia, over a hundred and 2 twenty-seven provinces, | when he sat on the throne of his
3 kingdom, the city Susan was the capital of his kingdom. | Now

1, 3-4: The Persian wine banquets were famous for their extravagance.

in the third year of his reign he made a great feast for all the princes, and for his servants, for the most mighty of the Persians, and the nobles of the Medes, and the governors of the 4 provinces in his sight, | that he might show the riches of the glory of his kingdom, and the greatness, and boasting of his power, for a long time: to wit, for a hundred and fourscore
5 days. | And when the days of the feast were expired, he invited all the people that were found in Susan, from the greatest to the least; and commanded a feast to be made seven days in the court of the garden, and of the wood, which was planted by
6 the care and hand of the king. | And there were hung up on every side sky-colored, and green, and violet hangings, fastened with cords of silk, and of purple, which were put into rings of ivory, and were held up with marble pillars. The beds also were of gold and silver, placed in order upon a floor paved with porphyry and white marble, which was embellished with paint-
7 ing of wonderful variety. | And they that were invited, drank from golden cups; and the meats were brought in divers vessels, one after another. Wine also in abundance and of the best was presented, as was worthy of a king's magnificence. |
8 Neither was there any one to compel them to drink that were not willing, but as the king had appointed, who set over every table one of his nobles, that every man might take what he would. |
9 Also Vasthi the queen made a feast for the women in the palace, where king Assuerus used to dwell.

10 Now on the seventh day, when the king was merry, and after very much drinking was well warmed with wine, he commanded Mauman, and Bazatha, and Harbona, and Bagatha, and Abgatha, and Zethar, and Charcas, the seven eunuchs that 11 served in his presence, | to bring in queen Vasthi before the king, with the crown set upon her head, to show her beauty to all the people and the princes: for she was exceeding beautiful.

12 The Disgrace of Queen Vasthi But she refused, and would not come at the king's commandment, which he had sig-

1, 6: Pillars . . . floor: archeologists have unearthed marble pillars and mosaic pavement, not of Xerxes' palace, which was burned, but of his successors'.

1, 9: Vasthi: authors agree that Vasthi is a fictitious queen for, according to Herodotus, the real queen was the haughty and superstitious Amestris.

The separate banquets for the men and women were held because of large numbers, not because of any law.

1, 12: She refused: the author does not say why. Perhaps poetic license is used here to find an excuse to divorce her and prepare the way for Esther.

nified to her by the eunuchs. Whereupon the king, being angry, 13 and inflamed with a very great fury, | asked the wise men, who according to the custom of the kings, were always near his person, and all he did was by their counsel, who knew the 14 laws, and judgments of their forefathers. | (Now the chief and nearest him were, Charsena, and Sethar, and Admatha, and Tharsis, and Mares, and Marsana, and Mamuchan, seven princes of the Persians, and of the Medes, who saw the face of 15 the king, and were used to sit first after him): | What sentence ought to pass upon Vasthi the queen, who had refused to obey the commandment of king Assuerus, which he had sent to her 16 by the eunuchs? | And Mamuchan answered, in the hearing of the king and the princes: Queen Vasthi has not only injured the king, but also all the people and princes that are in all 17 the provinces of king Assuerus. | For this deed of the queen will go abroad to all women, so that they will despise their husbands and will say: King Assuerus commanded that queen 18 Vasthi should come in to him, and she would not. | And by this example all the wives of the princes of the Persians and the Medes will slight the commandments of their husbands: where-19 fore the king's indignation is just. | If it pleases you, let an edict go out from your presence, and let it be written according to the law of the Persians and of the Medes, which must not be altered: that Vasthi come in no more to the king, but another 20 that is better than her, be made queen in her place. | And let this be published through all the provinces of your empire (which is very wide), and let all wives, as well of the greater as of the lesser, give honor to their husbands.
21 His counsel pleased the king and the princes. And the king 22 did according to the counsel of Mamuchan. | And he sent letters to all the provinces of his kingdom, as every nation could hear and read, in divers languages and characters, that the husbands should be rulers and masters in their houses: and that this should be published to every people.

1 Esther Is Chosen Queen After this, when the wrath of king Assuerus was appeased, he remembered Vasthi, and what

1, 14: Who saw the face of the king: that is, they could approach him freely.

1, 22: In divers languages and characters: the three official languages were Persian, Elamite, and Akkadian (old Babylonian).

2, 1: The king cannot reinstate his divorced wife because his edict "must not be altered" (1, 19).

she had done and what she had suffered. | And the king's servants and his officers said: Let young women be sought for the king, virgins and beautiful, | and let some persons be sent through all the provinces to look for beautiful maidens and virgins. And let them bring them to the city of Susan, and put them into the house of the women under the hand of Egeus the eunuch, who is the overseer and keeper of the king's women.
And let them receive women's ornaments, and other things necessary for their use. | And whosoever among them all shall please the king's eyes, let her be queen instead of Vasthi. The word pleased the king: and he commanded it should be done as they had suggested.

There was a man in the city of Susan, a Jew, named Mar-dochai, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the race of Jemini, | who had been carried away from Jerusalem at the time that Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon carried away Jechonias king of Juda. | And he had brought up his brother's daughter Edissa, who by another name was called Esther. Now she had lost both her parents, and was exceeding fair and beautiful. And her father and mother being dead, Mardochai adopted her for his daughter. | And when the king's ordinance was noised abroad, and according to his commandment many beautiful virgins were brought to Susan, and were delivered to Egeus the eunuch, Esther also among the rest of the maidens was delivered to him to be kept in the number of the women. | And she pleased him, and found favor in his sight. And he commanded the eunuch to hasten the women's ornaments, and to deliver to her her part and seven of the most beautiful maid-ens of the king's house, and to adorn and deck out both her and her waiting maids. | And she would not tell him her people nor her country, for Mardochai had charged her to say nothing at all of that. | And he walked every day before the court of 2, 2-4: According to Herodotus, Persian kings married Persians in conformity with the custom.

The motif of searching the empire for the most beautiful maiden to become the queen is common in folklore throughout the world.

2, 5: Mardochai: archeologists have found a text referring to a certain Mardochai who held a high position under king Xerxes I at Susa.

2, 6: The author here is making use of fiction, for if Mardochai was a boy at the time of his deportation in 597 B.C., he would have been over a century old when Xerxes became king in 486.

2, 7: Edissa: or in Hebrew, Hadassah, which is presently the name of the world's largest Jewish women's organization, so called because Esther is a symbol of loyalty to her people.

The Douay, following the Latin Vulgate, makes Mardochai the uncle of Esther, but other versions make him a cousin.

the house, in which the chosen virgins were kept, having a care for Esther's welfare, and desiring to know what would befall her.

12 Now when every virgin's turn came to go in to the king, after all had been done for setting them off to advantage, it was the twelfth month. So that for six months they were anointed with oil of myrrh; and for other six months they used certain 13 perfumes and sweet spices. ⌊ And when they were going in to the king, whatsoever they asked to adorn themselves they received. And being decked out, as it pleased them, they passed 14 from the chamber of the women to the king's chamber. | And she that went in at evening, came out in the morning; and from thence she was conducted to the second house, that was under the hand of Susagaz the eunuch, who had the charge over the king's concubines. Neither could she return any more to the king, unless the king desired it, and had ordered her by name to come.

15 And as the time came orderly about, the day was at hand, when Esther, the daughter of Abihail the brother of Mardochai, whom he had adopted for his daughter, was to go in to the king. But she sought not women's ornaments, but whatsoever Egeus the eunuch, the keeper of the virgins, had a mind, he gave her to adorn her: for she was exceeding fair, and her incredible beauty made her appear agreeable and amiable in the eyes
16 of all. | So she was brought to the chamber of king Assuerus, the tenth month, which is called Tebeth, in the seventh year of
17 his reign. | And the king loved her more than all the women; and she had favor and kindness before him above all the women. And he sat the royal crown on her head, and made her
18 queen instead of Vasthi. | And he commanded a magnificent feast to be prepared for all the princes, and for his servants, for the marriage and wedding of Esther. And he gave rest to all the provinces, and bestowed gifts according to princely magnificence.

19 Mardochai Detects a Plot to Kill the King And when the virgins were sought the second time, and gathered together,

2, 12: The one-year beauty treatment is common in ancient folklore.

2, 14: The whole process of wedding night, promotion to the concubine quarters of the harem, and recall only at the command of the king is found in the Arabian Nights.

2, 18: He gave rest: a specific kind of amnesty, which is not made clear.

2, 19: The second gathering of virgins here seems without purpose.

20 Mardochai stayed at the king's gate: | neither had Esther as yet declared her country and people, according to his commandment: for whatsoever he commanded, Esther observed.
And she did all things in the same manner as she was wont at 21 that time when he brought her up, a little one. | At that time, therefore, when Mardochai abode at the king's gate, Bagathan and Thares, two of the king's eunuchs, who were porters, and presided in the first entry of the palace, were angry. And they 22 designed to rise up against the king, and to kill him. | And Mardochai had notice of it, and immediately he told it to queen Esther, and she to the king in Mardochai's name, who had re-23 ported the thing unto her. | It was inquired into, and found out: and they were both hanged on a gibbet. And it was put in the histories, and recorded in the chronicles before the king.

1 Mardochai Offends Aman After these things, king As-suerus advanced Aman, the son of Amadathi, who was of the race of Agag. And he sent his throne above all the princes that 2 were with him. | And all the king's servants that were at the doors of the palace, bent their knees and worshiped Aman: for so the emperor had commanded them. Only Mardochai did 3 not bend his knee, nor worship him. | And the king's servants that were chief at the doors of the palace said to him: Why is it 4 that you alone do not observe the king's commandment? | And when they were saying this often, and he would not hearken to them, they told Aman, desirous to know whether he would continue in his resolution: for he had told them that he was a 5 Jew. | Now when Aman had heard this, and had proved by

2, 20: Commentators usually agree that a Persian king would hardly marry an unidentified queen, but interpret this lack of identity as a literary necessity for the plot of the story.

2, 21: Mardochai abode at the king's gate: he seems to have held some official position, in view of 3, 2-3.

2, 23: Historically, Xerxes was assassinated in a court conspiracy. Before the king: in accordance with the king's orders.

3, 1: Aman . . . who was of the race of Agag: Aman was a descendant of king Agag of the Amalecites, against whom the Jews were engaged in a perennial racial feud (Dt 25, 17-19). He set his throne . . . him: the king suddenly made Aman his vizier or "prime minister."

3, 4: For he had told them that he was a Jew: it is difficult to understand why Mardochai refused a simple act of courteous homage ("worship," v. 2) to a superior when this was not against Jewish law or customs. Even later on, as vizier, Mardochai would certainly have had to "bend his knees" before the king. He refused either because Aman was an enemy of the Jews, or because of the racial feud. See 3, 1 n.

experience that Mardochai did not bend his knee to him, nor 6 worship him, he was exceeding angry. | And he counted it nothing to lay his hands upon Mardochai alone. For he had heard that he was of the nation of the Jews, and he chose rather to destroy all the nation of the Jews that were in the kingdom of Assuerus.

7 The Decree against the Jews In the first month (which is called Nisan) in the twelfth year of the reign of Assuerus, the lot was cast into an urn, which in Hebrew is called Phur, before Aman, on what day and what month the nation of the Jews should be destroyed. And there came out the twelfth
8 month, which is called Adar. | And Aman said to king Assuerus: There is a people scattered through all the provinces of your kingdom, and separated one from another, that use new laws and ceremonies, and moreover despise the king's ordinances: and you know very well that it is not expedient for your king-
9 dom that they should grow insolent by impunity. | If it pleases you, decree that they may be destroyed: and I will pay ten thou-
10 sand talents to your treasurers. | And the king took the ring that he used, from his own hand, and gave it to Aman, the son of Amadathi of the race of Agag, the enemy of the Jews. | 11 And he said to him: As to the money which you promise, keep it for yourself. And as to the people, do with them as seems 12 good to you. | And the king's scribes were called in the first month Nisan, on the thirteenth day of the same month: and they wrote, as Aman had commanded, to all the king's lieutenants, and to the judges of the provinces, and of divers nations, as every nation could read, and here according to their different languages, in the name of king Assuerus. And the
13 letters, sealed with his ring, | were sent by the king's messengers to all provinces, to kill and destroy all the Jews, both young and old, little children, and women, in one day, that is, on the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is called Adar, and to
14 make a spoil of their goods. | And the contents of the letters were to this effect, that all provinces might know and be ready

3, 7: The lot was cast . . . which is called Adar: substitute: "Pur, that is the lot, was cast in the presence of Aman every day for months till finally the lot fell on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month Adar." Pur is an Akkadian (old Babylonian) word meaning lot or destiny. See 9, 20-32 n. (Pur and Purim are considered more modern spelling than Phur and Phurim.)

3, 9: Ten thousand talents: this equals $18,000,000, according to some estimates.

15 for that day. | The couriers that were sent made haste to fulfill the king's commandment. And immediately the edict was hung up in Susan: the king and Aman feasting together, and all the Jews that were in the city weeping.

1 Esther Learns of the Decree Now when Mardochai had heard these things, he rent his garments, and put on sackcloth, strewing ashes on his head. And he cried with a loud voice in the street in the midst of the city, showing the anguish of his 2 mind. | And he came lamenting in this manner even to the gate of the palace: for no one clothed with sackcloth might 3 enter the king's court. | And in all provinces, towns, and places, to which the king's cruel edict had come, there was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting, wailing, and weeping, many using sackcloth and ashes.
4 Then Esther's maids and her eunuchs went in, and told her.
And when she heard it she was in consternation. And she sent a garment, to clothe him, and to take away the sackcloth, but 5 he would not receive it. | And she called for Athach the eu-nuch, whom the king had appointed to attend upon her, and she commanded him to go to Mardochai, and learn of him why 6 he did this. | And Athach going out went to Mardochai, who was standing in the street of the city, before the palace gate. | 7 And Mardochai told him all that had happened, how Aman had promised to pay money into the king's treasures, to have the Jews destroyed.

8 Mardochai Asks Esther to Intervene He gave him also a copy of the edict which was hanging up in Susan: that he should show it to the queen, and admonish her to go in to the 9 king, and to entreat him for her people. | And Athach went 10 back and told Esther all that Mardochai had said. | She an-11 swered him, and bade him say to Mardochai: | All the king's servants, and all the provinces that are under his dominion, know that whosoever, whether man, or woman, comes into the king's inner court, who is not called for, is immediately to be put to death without any delay: except the king shall hold out the golden scepter to him, in token of clemency, that so he may live. How then can I go in to the king, who for these thirty days now have not been called unto him?

3, 15: It is historically unlikely that the Persians ever issued such a decree against the Jews because Esdras and Nehemias depict the Persians as clement toward the Jews.

4, 1: These are the customary mourning rites.

12.13 And when Mardochai had heard this, | he sent word to Esther again, saying: Think not that you may save your life only, because you are in the king's house, more than all the 14 Jews. | For if you will now hold your peace, the Jews shall be delivered by some other occasion: and you, and your father's house, shall perish. And who knows whether you have not therefore come to the kingdom, that you might be ready in such a time as this?
15 And again Esther sent to Mardochai in these words: | 16 Go, and gather together all the Jews whom you shall find in Susan, and pray for me. Neither eat nor drink for three days and three nights; and I with my handmaids will fast in like manner, and then I will go in to the king, against the law, not 17 being called, and expose myself to death and to danger. | So Mardochai went, and did all that Esther had commanded him.

1 The King Receives Esther Graciously And on the third day Esther put on her royal apparel, and stood in the inner court of the king's house, opposite the king's hall. Now he sat upon his throne in the hall of the palace, across the door of the 2 house. | And when he saw Esther the queen standing, she pleased his eyes, and he held out toward her the golden scepter which he held in his hand. And she drew near, and kissed the 3 top of his scepter. | And the king said to her: What is your wish, queen Esther? What do you request? If you should even 4 ask one half of the kingdom, it shall be given to you. | But she answered: If it pleases the king, I beseech you to come to me this day, and Aman with you, to the banquet which I have prepared.
5 | And the king said forthwith: Call Aman quickly, that he may obey Esther's will. So the king and Aman came to the banquet 6 which the queen had prepared for them. | And the king said to her, after he had drunk wine plentifully: What do you desire that I shall give to you? And for what thing do you ask? Even if you should ask the half of my kingdom, you shall have it. | 7.8 And Esther answered: My petition and request in this: | If I have found favor in the king's sight, and if it pleases the king to give me what I ask, and to fulfill my petition, let the king and 4, 14: By some other occasion: some other way. Scholars do not know to what this alludes. And who knows whether you have not therefore come: maybe, Providence has made you queen to save your people at a critical moment.

4, 16: Expose myself to death and danger: Esther's decision of supreme self-sacrifice.

5, 8: The writer has Esther delay her request to create more suspense.

Aman come to the banquet which I have prepared them, and tomorrow I will open my mind to the king.
9 So Aman went out that day joyful and merry. And when he saw Mardochai sitting before the gate of the palace, and that he not only did not rise up to honor him, but did not so much as move from the place where he sat, he was exceedingly angry. |
10 But dissembling his anger, and returning into his house, he 11 called together to him his friends, and Zares his wife. | And he declared to them the greatness of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and with how great glory the king had advanced
12 him above all his princes and servants. | And after this he said: Queen Esther also has invited no other to the banquet with the king but me. And with her I am also to dine tomorrow with the
13 king. | And whereas I have all these things, I think I have nothing, so long as I see Mardochai the Jew sitting before the king's 14 gate. | Then Zares his wife and the rest of his friends answered him: Order a great beam to be prepared, fifty cubits high, and in the morning, speak to the king that Mardochai may be hanged upon it. And so you shall go full of joy with the king to the banquet. The counsel pleased him, and he commanded a high gibbet to be prepared.

1 The King Honors Mardochai That night the king passed without sleep, and he commanded the histories and chronicles of former times to be brought him. And when they were reading
2 them before him, | they came to that place where it was written how Mardochai had discovered the treason of Bagathan and
3 Thares the eunuchs, who sought to kill king Assuerus. | And when the king heard this, he said: What honor and reward has Mardochai received for this fidelity? His servants and minister
4 said to him: He has received no reward at all. | And the king said immediately: Who is in the court? For Aman was coming in to the inner court of the king's house, to speak to the king that he might order Mardochai to be hanged upon the gibbet which was
5 prepared for him. | The servants answered: Aman stands in the court. And the king said: Let him come in.

5, 9: Esther invites Aman to swell his pride, so that its bursting will be all the more dramatically humiliating.
5, 10-12: The author heightens the contrast between Aman's boasting here and his imminent degradation.
5, 14: Fifty cubits: about eighty-three feet. A literary exaggeration.
6, 1: The king's inability to sleep is necessary for the development of the plot. Histories and chronicles: see 2, 23.
6, 4: Aman must have arrived very early in the morning.

6 And when he came in, he said to him: What ought to be done to the man whom the king is desirous to honor? But Aman thinking in his heart, and supposing that the king would honor 7 no other but himself, | answered: The man whom the king
8 desires to honor, | ought to be clothed with the king's apparel, and to be set upon the horse that the king rides upon, and to 9 have the royal crown upon his head. | And let the first of the king's princes and nobles hold his horse, and going through the street of the city, proclaim before him and say: Thus shall he be 10 honored whom the king has a mind to honor. | And the king said to him: Make haste and take the robe and the horse, and do as you have spoken to Mardochai the Jew, who sits before the gates of the palace. Beware you do not pass over any of those things which you have spoken.
11 So Aman took the robe and the horse, and arraying Mar-dochai in the street of the city, and setting him on the horse, went before him, and proclaimed: This honor is he worthy of, 12 whom the king has a mind to honor. | But Mardochai returned to the palace gate; and Aman made haste to go to his house, 13 mourning and having his head covered. | And he told Zares his wife, and his friends, all that had befallen him. And the wise men whom he had in counsel and his wife answered him: If Mardochai be of the seed of the Jews, before whom you have begun to fall, you can not resist him, but you shall fall in his 14 sight. | As they were yet speaking, the king's eunuchs came, and compelled him to go quickly to the banquet which the queen had prepared.

1 Esther Saves Her People So the king and Aman went in,
2 to drink with the queen. | And the king said to her again the second day, after he was warm with wine: What is your petition, Esther, that it may be granted you? And what will you have me do? Even if you should ask half of my kingdom, you

6, 6: Making Aman decide the honors for his arch-enemy reveals the fine touch of the artist.

6, 8: Upon his head: upon the head of the horse. Pointed turbans on the horses of the king are visible on excavated Assyrian reliefs.

6, 11: Xerxes honored Mardochai, after he had agreed to dispatching an anti-Jewish edict, because the king did not realize that he had consented to the massacre of the Jews, or that Mardochai was a Jew. Aman did not name the Jews in his complaint against them (3, 8-11).

3 shall have it. | Then she answered: If I have found favor in your sight, O king, and if it pleases you, give me my life for 4 which I ask, and my people for which I request. | For we are given up, I and my people, to be destroyed, to be slain, and to perish. And would God we were sold for bondmen and bond-women! The evil might be borne with, and I would have mourned in silence, but now we have an enemy, whose cruelty 5 redounds upon the king. | And king Assuerus answered and said: Who is this, and of what power, that he should do these 6 things? | And Esther said: It is this Aman that is our adversary and most wicked enemy. Aman hearing this was forthwith astonished, not being able to bear the countenance of the king and of the queen.
7 But the king being angry rose up, and went from the place of the banquet into the garden set with trees. Aman also rose up to entreat Esther the queen for his life: for he understood that 8 evil was prepared for him by the king. | And when the king came back out of the garden set with trees, and entered into the place of the banquet, he found Aman was fallen upon the bed on which Esther lay. And he said: He will force the queen also in my presence, in my own house. The word was not yet gone out of the king's mouth, and immediately they covered his face.
9 | And Harbona, one of the eunuchs that stood waiting on the king said: Behold the gibbet which he has prepared for Mar-dochai, who spoke for the king, stands in Aman's house, being fifty cubits high. And the king said to him: Hang him upon it.
10 | So Aman was hanged on the gibbet, which he had prepared for Mardochai; and the king's wrath ceased.

1 Aman's Letters Are Reversed On that day king Assuerus gave the house of Aman, the Jews' enemy, to queen Esther, and Mardochai came in before the king: for Esther had confessed to 2 him that he was her uncle. | And the king took the ring which he had commanded to be taken again from Aman, and gave it 3 to Mardochai. And Esther set Mardochai over her house. | And 7, 3-7: Aman had deceived the king into ordering the extinction of a people which included his own queen. It is for this reason that the king is angry. He still does not realize that Esther and the condemned people are Jews. Even in Esther's request (vv. 3-4), she does not tell the king that she is Jewish. See 6, 11 n.

7, 8: Aman was fallen upon the bed: he was most likely pleading at the feet of the queen as she lay on her dining couch. This is a common gesture of supplication. See 8, 3; 4 Kgs 4, 27. The king purposely misconstrues the situation as an excuse to execute him. They covered his face: the sign of capital punishment.

not content with these things, she fell down at the king's feet and wept, and speaking to him besought him that he would give orders that the malice of Aman the Agagite, and his most wicked devices which he had invented against the Jews, should 4 be of no effect. | But he, as the manner was, held out the golden scepter with his hand, which was the sign of clemency: and she
5 arose up and stood before him, | and said: If it pleases the king, and if I have found favor in his sight, and my request be not disagreeable to him, I beseech you, that the former letters of Aman the traitor and enemy of the Jews, by which he commanded that they should be destroyed in all the king's provinces,
6 may be reversed by new letters: | for how can I endure the 7 murdering and slaughter of my people? | And king Assuerus answered Esther the queen, and Mardochai the Jew: I have given Aman's house to Esther, and I have commanded him to be hanged on a gibbet, because he dared lay hands on the Jews.
8 | Write therefore to the Jews, as it pleases you, in the king's name, and seal the letters with my ring: for this was the custom that no man dared gainsay the letters which were sent in the king's name, and were sealed with his ring.

9 Then the king's scribes and secretaries were called for (now it was the time of the third month which is called Sîban) the three and twentieth day of the month, and letters were written, as Mardochai had a mind, to the Jews, and to the governors, and to the deputies, and to the judges, who were rulers over the hundred and twenty-seven provinces, from India even to Ethiopia: to province and province, to people and people, according to their languages and characters, and to the Jews, ac-
10 cording as they could read and hear. | And these letters which were sent in the king's name, were sealed with his ring, and sent by posts: who were to run through all the provinces, to prevent the former letters with new messages.

11 The Revenge of the Jews And the king gave orders to them, to speak to the Jews in every city, and to command them to gather themselves together, and to stand for their lives, and to kill and destroy all their enemies with their wives and chil-12 dren and all their houses, and to take their spoil. | And one day of revenge was appointed through all the provinces, to wit, the
13 thirteenth of the twelfth month Adar. | And this was the content of the letter, that it should be notified in all lands and peo-

8, 11: Scholars agree that the author is penning fiction here when he has a Persian king ordering the execution of his own people, which amounted to "75,000" in 9, 16.

ples that were subject to the empire of king Assuerus, that the 14 Jews were ready to be revenged of their enemies. | So the swift posts went out carrying the messages: and the king's edict was hung up in Susan.
15 And Mardochai, going forth out of the palace and from the king's presence, shone in royal apparel, to wit, of violet and sky color, wearing a golden crown on his head, and clothed with a cloak of silk and purple. And all the city rejoiced and was glad.
16 | But to the Jews a new light seemed to rise: joy, honor, and 17 dancing. | And in all peoples, cities, and provinces, wherever the king's commandments came, there was wonderful rejoicing, feasts and banquets, and keeping holy day: insomuch that many of other nations and religion joined themselves to their worship and ceremonies. For a great dread of the name of the Jews had fallen upon all.

1 The Sons of Aman Killed So on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which as we have said above is called Adar, when all the Jews were designed to be massacred, and their enemies were greedy after their blood, the case being altered, the Jews began to have the upper hand, and to revenge themselves 2 of their adversaries. | And they gathered themselves together in every city, and town, and place, to lay their hands on their enemies, and their persecutors. And no one dared withstand them: for the fear of their power had gone through every people.
3 | And the judges of the provinces, and the governors, and lieutenants, and every one in dignity, that presided over every place 4 and work, extolled the Jews for fear of Mardochai: | for they knew him to be prince of the palace, and to have great power.
And the fame of his name increased daily, and was spread abroad through all men's mouths.
5 So the Jews made a great slaughter of their enemies, and killed them, repaying according to what they had prepared to 6 do to them. | Insomuch that even in Susan they killed five hundred men, besides the ten sons of Aman the Agagite, the enemy 7 of the Jews. Whose names are these: | Pharsandatha, and 8 Delphon, and Esphatha, | and Phoratha, and Adalia, and Arid-
9 atha, | and Phermesta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Jezatha. |
10 And when they had slain them they would not touch the spoils 11 of their goods. | And presently the number of them that were killed in Susan was brought to the king. | And he said to the queen: The Jews have killed five hundred men in the city of Susan, besides the ten sons of Aman. How many do you think they have slain in all the provinces? What else do you ask, and what will you have me to command to be done? | And she answered: If it pleases the king, let it be granted to the Jews to do tomorrow in Susan as they have done today, and that the ten sons of Aman may be hanged upon gibbets. | And the king commanded that it should be so done. And forthwith the edict was hung up in Susan: and the ten sons of Aman were hanged. | And on the fourteenth day of the month Adar, the Jews gathered themselves together and they killed in Susan three hundred men. But they took not their substance. | Moreover through all the provinces that were subject to the king's dominion, the Jews stood for their lives and slew their enemies and persecutors. Insomuch that the number of them that were killed amounted to seventy-five thousand: and no man took any of their goods.

The Feast of Purim Now the thirteenth day of the month Adar was the first day with them all of the slaughter, and on the fourteenth day they left off: which they ordained to be kept holy day, so that all times hereafter they should celebrate it with feasting, joy, and banquets. | But they that were killing in the city of Susan were employed in the slaughter on the thirteenth and fourteenth day of the same month: and on the fifteenth day they rested. And therefore they appointed that day to be a holy day of feasting and gladness. | But those Jews that dwelt in towns not walled and in villages, appointed the fourteenth day of the month Adar for banquets and gladness, so as to rejoice on that day, and send one another portions of their banquets and meats. | And Mardochai wrote all these things, and sent them comprised in letters to the Jews that abode in all the king's provinces, both those that lay near and those afar off, | that they should receive the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the month Adar for holy days, and always at the return of the 9, 20-32: This section is often interpreted thus: the inspired writer, by a literary fictional license, has Mardochai and Esther "institute" the feast of Purim. This institution by such eminent personages was the author's manner of legalizing and justifying the feast which the Jews had long been celebrating as a secular holiday in rowdy Mardi Gras fashion. (The problem of the origin of the feast itself remains unsolved.) On the occasion of adding vv. 20-32 to enlist the feast of Purim in the official Jewish calendar, where it remains to the present day, the author apparently also added 3, 7 and for the same reason.

9, 21: In the provinces or rural areas the slaughter took place on 22 year should celebrate them with solemn honor: | because on those days the Jews revenged themselves of their enemies, and their mourning and sorrow were turned into mirth and joy, and that these should be days of feasting and gladness, in which they should send one to another portions of meats, and should give gifts to the poor.

23 And the Jews undertook to observe with solemnity all they had begun to do at that time, which Mardochai by letters had 24 commanded to be done: | for Aman, the son of Amadathi of the race of Agag, the enemy and adversary of the Jews, had devised evil against them, to kill them and destroy them, and had 25 cast Phur, that is, the lot. | And afterward Esther went in to the king, beseeching him that his endeavors might be made void by the king's letters; and the evil that he had intended against the Jews might return upon his own head. And so both he and 26 his sons were hanged upon gibbets. | And since that time these days are called Phurim, that is, of lots: because Phur, that is, the lot, was cast into the urn. And all things that were done are contained in the volume of this epistle, that is, of this book: | 27 and the things that they suffered, and that were afterward changed, the Jews took upon themselves and their seed, and upon all that had a mind to be joined to their religion, so that it should be lawful for none to pass these days without solemnity which the writing testifies, and certain times require, as the years 28 continually succeed one another. | These are the days which shall never be forgot: and which all provinces in the whole world shall celebrate throughout all generations. Neither is there any city wherein the days of Phurim, that is, of lots, must not be observed by the Jews, and by their posterity, which is bound to these ceremonies.
29 And Esther the queen, the daughter of Abihail, and Mar-dochai the Jew, wrote also a second epistle, that with all diligence this day should be established a festival for the time to 30 come. | And they sent to all the Jews that were in the hundred and twenty-seven provinces of king Assuerus, that they should 31 have peace, and receive truth. | And observe the days of lots, and celebrate them with joy in their proper time, as Mardochai

9, 26-27: Because Phur, that is, the lot, was cast into the urn: . . . And all things . . . of this book: . . . And the things afterward changed: this is best read thus: "Therefore, because of all the words of this letter and of that which they had seen concerning this matter and that which had come to them, the Jews took upon themselves. . . ."

and Esther had appointed. And they undertook them to be observed by themselves and their seed: fasts, and cries, and the days of lots. And all these things are contained in the history of this book, which is called Esther.

1 The Dream of Mardochai And king Assuerus made all
2 the land, and all the islands of the sea, tributary. | And his strength and his empire, and the dignity and greatness wherewith he exalted Mardochai, are written in the books of the 3 Medes, and of the Persians: and how Mardochai, of the race of the Jews, was next after king Assuerus, and great among the Jews, and acceptable to the people of his brethren, seeking the good of his people, and speaking those things which were for the welfare of his seed.
4.5 Then Mardochai said: God has done these things. | I remember a dream that I saw which signified these same things;
6 and nothing thereof has failed. | The little fountain which grew into a river, and was turned into a light, and into the sun, and abounded into many waters, is Esther, whom the king married,
7.8 and made queen. | But the two dragons are I and Aman. | The nations that were assembled are they that endeavored to destroy
9 the name of the Jews. | And my nation is Israel, who cried to the Lord, and the Lord saved his people: and he delivered us from all evils, and has wrought great signs and wonders among
10 the nations. | And he commanded that there should be two lots, one of the people of God, and the other of all the nations. |
11 And both lots came to the day appointed already from that time
12 before God to all nations. | And the Lord remembered his peo-
13 ple, and had mercy on his inheritance. | And these days shall be observed in the month of Adar, on the fourteenth, and fifteenth day of the same month, with all diligence, and joy of

10, 2: Either the author is referring to some Persian or Jewish chronicles, or he is imitating the ending of each reign in the books of Kings.

10, 4—16, 24: St. Jerome placed these chapters of unknown origin as an appendix because they were not in the Hebrew text but only in the Greek text. It is true that they are largely repetitious of 1, 1—10, 3 but the appendix was added most probably to give more of a religious tone to the book in which God is not even mentioned. The common modern Catholic opinion is that the appendix was added after the original Hebrew text (1, 1—10, 3) was written. The Church considers this appendix inspired, but the Jews and Protestants do not.

1 Mardochai's Dream Foretold In the fourth year of the reign of Ptolemy and Cleopatra, Dositheus, who said he was a priest, and of the Levitical race, and Ptolemy his son brought this epistle of Phurim, which they said Lysimachus the son of
2 Ptolemy had interpreted in Jerusalem. | In the second year of the reign of Artaxerxes the Great, in the first day of the month Nisan, Mardochai the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of 3 Cis, of the tribe of Benjamin, a Jew who dwelt in the city of Susan, a great man and among the first of the king's court, had 4 a dream. | Now he was of the number of the captives whom Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon had carried away from Jerusalem with Jechonias king of Juda.
5 And this was his dream: Behold there were voices, and tumults, and thunders, and earthquakes, and a disturbance upon 6 the earth. | And behold two great dragons came forth ready to 7 fight one against another. | And at their cry all nations were 8 stirred up to fight against the nation of the just. | And that was a day of darkness and danger, of tribulation and distress, and
9 great fear upon the earth. | And the nation of the just was troubled fearing their own evils, and was prepared for death. |
10 And they cried to God: and as they were crying, a little fountain grew into a very great river, and abounded into many waters.
11 | The light and the sun rose up, and the humble were exalted, and they devoured the glorious.
12 And when Mardochai had seen this, and arose out of his bed, he was thinking what God would do: and he kept it fixed in his mind, desirous to know what the dream should signify.

1 The Conspiracy against the King Recorded And he abode at that time in the king's court, with Bagatha and Thara
2 the king's eunuchs, who were porters of the palace. | And when he understood their designs, and had diligently searched into their projects, he learned that they went about to lay violent
3 hands on king Artaxerxes: and he told the king thereof. | Then the king had them both examined, and after they had confessed, 4 commanded them to be put to death. | But the king made a record of what was done: and Mardochai also committed the 5 memory of the thing to writing. | And the king commanded him to abide in the court of the palace, and gave him presents 6 for the information. | But Aman the son of Amadathi the Bugite was in great honor with the king, and sought to hurt Mardochai and his people, because of the two eunuchs of the king who were put to death.

1 Text of the Letter Sent by Aman And this was the copy of the letter: Artaxerxes, the great king who reigns from India to Ethiopia, to the princes and governors of the hundred and twenty-seven provinces, that are subject to his empire, greeting.
2 Whereas I reigned over many nations, and had brought all the world under my dominion, I was not willing to abuse the greatness of my power, but to govern my subjects with clemency and lenity that they might live quietly without any terror, and 3 might enjoy peace, which is desired by all men. | But when I asked my counselors how this might be accomplished, one that excelled the rest in wisdom and fidelity, and was second after 4 the king, Aman by name, | told me that there was a people scattered through the whole world, which used new laws, and acted against the customs of all nations, despised the commandments of kings, and violated by their opposition the concord of 5 all nations. | Wherefore having learned this, and seeing one nation in opposition to all mankind using perverse laws, and going against our commandments, and disturbing the peace and 6 concord of the provinces subject to us, | we have commanded that all whom Aman shall mark out, who is chief over all the provinces, and second after the king, and whom we honor as a father, shall be utterly destroyed by their enemies, with their wives and children, and that none shall have pity on them, on the fourteenth day of the twelfth month Adar of this present 7 year. | And that these wicked men going down to hell in one day, may restore to our empire the peace which they had disturbed.

13, 1-7: An expansion of the king's decree in 3, 12-13.

13, 7: Hell: abode of all the dead.

9 remembering all his works, | and said: O Lord, Lord, almighty King, for all things are in your power, and there is none that 10 can resist your will, if you determine to save Israel. | You have made heaven and earth, and all things that are under the 11 cope of heaven. | You are Lord of all: and there is none that 12 can resist your majesty. | You know all things: and you know that it was not out of pride and contempt, or any desire of glory, 13 that I refused to worship the proud Aman, | (for I would willingly and readily for the salvation of Israel have kissed even the 14 steps of his feet), | but I feared lest I should transfer the honor of my God to a man, and lest I should adore any one except my 15 God. | And now, O Lord, O King, O God of Abraham, have mercy on your people, because our enemies resolve to destroy us, 16 and extinguish your inheritance. | Despise not your portion,
17 which you have redeemed for yourself out of Egypt. | Hear my supplication, and be merciful to your lot and inheritance, and turn our mourning into joy, that we may live and praise your name, O Lord, and shut not the mouths of them that sing to you.
18 And all Israel with like mind and supplication cried to the Lord, because they saw certain death hanging over their heads.

1 The Prayer of Esther Queen Esther also, fearing the dan-2 ger that was at hand, had recourse to the Lord. | And when she had laid away her royal apparel, she put on garments suitable for weeping and mourning. Instead of divers precious ointments, she covered her head with ashes and dung, and she humbled her body with fasts: and all the places in which before she 3 was accustomed to rejoice, she filled with her torn hair. | And she prayed to the Lord the God of Israel, saying: O my Lord, who alone are our king, help me, a desolate woman, who has no 4.5 other helper but you. | My danger is in my hands. | I have heard of my father that you, O Lord, have taken Israel from among all nations, and our fathers from all their predecessors, to possess them as an everlasting inheritance. And you have 6 done to them as you have promised. | We have sinned in your sight, and therefore you have delivered us into the hands of 7 our enemies: | for we have worshiped their gods. You are just,
8 O Lord. | And now they are not content to oppress us with most hard bondage, but attributing the strength of their hands to the 9 power of their idols, | they design to change your promises, and destroy your inheritance, and shut the mouths of them that praise you, and extinguish the glory of your temple and altar, 10 | that they may open the mouths of the Gentiles, and praise the strength of idols, and magnify for ever a carnal king.

11 Give not, O Lord, your scepter to them that are not, lest they laugh at our ruin, but turn their counsel upon themselves, and 12 destroy him that has begun to rage against us. | Remember, O Lord, and show yourself to us in the time of our tribulation and give me boldness, O Lord, king of gods, and of all power. |
13 Give me a well ordered speech in my mouth, in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart to the hatred of our enemy that both he himself may perish, and the rest that consent to him. |
14 But deliver us by your hand, and help me, who has no other helper, but you, O Lord, who has the knowledge of all things. |
15 And you know that I hate the glory of the wicked, and abhor
16 the bed of the uncircumcised, and of every stranger. | You know my necessity: that I abominate the sign of my pride and glory, which is upon my head in the days of my public appearance, and detest it as a menstruous rag, and wear it not in the 17 days of my silence; | and that I have not eaten at Aman's table nor has the king's banquet pleased me; and that I have not
18 drunk the wine of the drink offerings, | and that your handmaid has never rejoiced, since I was brought here unto this day, but
19 in you, O Lord, the God of Abraham. | O God, who are mighty above all, hear the voice of them, that have no other hope: and deliver us from the hand of the wicked. And deliver me from my fear.

1 Esther before the King And he commanded her (no doubt but he was Mardochai) to go to the king, and petition
2 for her people, and for her country. | Remember (said he) the days of your low estate, how you were brought up by my hand, because Aman, the second after the king, has spoken against us
3 unto death. | And do you call upon the Lord, and speak to the king for us, and deliver us from death.
4 And on the third day she laid away the garments she wore,
5 and put on her glorious apparel. | And glittering in royal robes, after she had called upon God the ruler and savior of all, she 6 took two maids with her, | and upon one of them she leaned, as if for delicateness and overmuch tenderness she were not able to
7 bear up her own body. | And the other maid followed her lady,
8 bearing up her train flowing on the ground. | But she with a rosy color in her face, and with gracious and bright eyes, hid a mind full of anguish and exceeding great fear.

9 So going in she passed through all the doors in order, and stood before the king, where he sat upon his royal throne, clothed with his royal robes, and glittering with gold and precious 10 stones: and he was terrible to behold. | And when he had lifted up his countenance, and with burning eyes had shown the wrath of his heart, the queen sunk down, and her color turned pale:
11 and she rested her weary head upon her handmaid. | And God changed the king's spirit into mildness, and all in haste and in fear he leaped from his throne, and holding her up in his arms, 12 till she came to herself, caressed her with these words: | What 13 is the matter, Esther? I am your brother, fear not. | You shall not die: for this law is not made for you, but for all others. | 14.15 Come near then; and touch the scepter. | And as she held her peace, he took the golden scepter, and laid it upon her neck, and 16 kissed her, and said: Why do you not speak to me? | She answered: I saw you, my lord, as an angel of God: and my heart 17 was troubled for fear of your majesty. | For you, my lord, are 18 very admirable, and your face is full of graces. | And while she was speaking, she fell down again, and was almost in a 19 swoon. | But the king was troubled, and all his servants comforted her.

1 The King's Letter in Favor of the Jews The great king Artaxerxes, from India to Ethiopia, to the governors and princes of a hundred and twenty-seven provinces, which obey our com-2 mand, sends greeting. | Many have abused unto pride the goodness of princes and the honor that has been bestowed upon 3 them. | And they not only endeavor to oppress the king's subjects, but not bearing the glory that is given them, take in hand 4 to practice also against them that gave it. | Neither are they content not to return thanks for benefits received, and to violate in themselves the laws of humanity, but they think they can 5 also escape the justice of God who sees all things. | And they break out into so great madness, as to endeavor to undermine by lies such as observe diligently the offices committed to them, and do all things in such manner as to be worthy of all men's 6 praise, | while with crafty fraud they deceive the ears of princes that are well meaning, and judge of others by their own nature.
7 | Now this is proved both from ancient histories, and by the things which are done daily, how the good designs of kings are depraved by the evil suggestions of certain men. | Wherefore we must provide for the peace of all provinces. | Neither must you think, if we command different things, that it comes of the levity of our mind, but that we give sentence according to the quality and necessity of times, as the profit of the commonwealth requires.

Now that you may more plainly understand what we say, Aman the son of Amadathi, a Macedonian both in mind and country, and having nothing of the Persian blood, but with his cruelty staining our goodness, was received being a stranger by us: | and found our humanity so great toward him, that he was called our father, and was worshiped by all as the next man after the king. | But he was so far puffed up with arrogancy as to go about to deprive us of our kingdom and life. | For, with certain new and unheard of devices, he has sought the destruction of Mardochai, by whose fidelity and good services our life was saved, and of Esther the partner of our kingdom, with all their nation: thinking that after they were slain, he might work treason against us left alone without friends, and might transfer the kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians. | But we have found that the Jews, who were by that most wicked man appointed to be slain, are in no fault at all, but contrariwise, use just laws, | and are the children of the highest and greatest, and the ever living God, by whose benefit the kingdom was given both to our fathers and to us, and is kept unto this day.

Wherefore know you that those letters which he sent in our name, are void and of no effect: for which crime both he himself that devised it, and all his kindred hang on gibbets before the gates of this city Susan, not we, but God repaying him as he deserved. | But this edict, which we now send, shall be published in all cities, that the Jews may freely follow their own laws. | And you shall aid them that they may kill those who had prepared themselves to kill them, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is called Adar. | For the almighty God has turned this day of sadness and mourning into joy to them. | Wherefore you shall also count this day among other festival days, and celebrate it with all joy that it may be known also in times to come, | that all they who faithfully obey the Persians, receive a worthy reward for their fidelity. But they that are traitors to their kingdom, are destroyed for their wickedness. | And let every province and city, that will not be partaker of this solemnity, perish by the sword and by fire, and be destroyed in such manner as to be made unpassable, both to men and beasts, for an example of contempt and disobedience

INTRODUCTION TO THE BOOKS OF WISDOM

There are seven inspired Wisdom (sapiential) books: Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes (called Coheleth in the Hebrew Bible), Canticle of Canticles or Song of Songs, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (called Sirach or Ben Sirah in the Hebrew Bible). The last two are not recognized as inspired by Jews and Protestants.

The Israelites were born into a world wherein people already read Mesopotamian and Egyptian classics on wisdom literature. The wisdom learned by the Hebrews in Egypt may be loosely termed: "How to win friends and influence people." This included a code of private, social, and business conduct. The Hebrews baptized the Egyptian wisdom with the belief in the one true God. Skilled workers, artists, and judges who collaborated with Moses were called wise men. Later, in the tenth century, wisdom reached a new peak in king Solomon. Although Solomon himself must have written some proverbs, it is very difficult to identify them. His reputation as a wise administrator, organizer, and man of sound inborn judgment impressed his people to such an extent that future wisdom writers ascribed four of their Wisdom books to him. In the light of this, Solomon may be called the initiator of Israel's literary sapiential movement. What was said of Moses as "author" of the Pentateuch (see Introduction to the Pentateuch) goes for Solomon as author of the Wisdom Books.

After 538 B.C. wisdom literature enjoyed its golden age. Wisdom in Israel has been practical, ethical, and religious. Wisdom has been characteristically identified as "fear of the Lord," which means rendering to God his due, i.e., in practice, sanctity. Now we may understand the "leitmotiv" of sapiential literature: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning (essence) of wisdom." How superior this wisdom was in comparison with the sophisticated wisdom of the contemporary Greek philosophers! The themes most discussed by the wise men or sages were suffering and retribution, or: "why does God allow the just to suffer and the wicked to prosper?" The complete answer was to be found in the concept of eternal retribution in the last two centuries B.C. and in the New Testament. The Wisdom Books treat wisdom not only as a human quality but, more especially, as a divine quality. As an attribute of God, its first characteristic is that it is the synthesis of all divine attributes. The roles commonly assigned to omnipotence, justice, mercy, love of predilection for Israel, are indiscriminately attributed to divine wisdom. Its second characteristic is the personification of God's wisdom, e.g., like God, wisdom pre-existed and collaborated "as an architect" at the formation and in the governing of the universe.

We may have been wondering how the wise men fitted in with the other community leaders, the priests and the prophets (Jer 18, 18). Priests taught the law and carried out the ceremonies. The prophets preached what God revealed to them directly. The sages did not insist on the cult and the law, but they were the M.A.'s of Israel, the learned scribes. They instructed, corrected, and counseled. The counseling included, at times, such diverse subjects as how to fare best in politics, and proper etiquette in child pedagogy. The pedagogical hallmark was the "mashal," i.e., a comparison, teaching a practical lesson. The mashal can be broken down to proverbs, parables, allegories, riddles, etc. What syllogism is in the pedagogy of Aristotle and of the scholastic philosophers, the mashal is in the pedagogy of the wise men.

THE BOOK OF JOB

INTRODUCTION

The ancient Semites usually embroidered upon a tale rather than created it entirely anew. Therefore, there probably was an historical Job who was known for his resignation to God.

According to the majority of scholars, a brilliant anonymous Israelite poet wrote the Book of Job in the fifth century B.C., after having found an ancient tale, written or oral, which he used as the setting of his problem in the poetic dialogue (3—31). The old story (the prose prologue in chapters 1—2 and epilogue, in 42, 7-17), was about a certain Job who was the type of an innocent sufferer.

It is too difficult to trace the modifications of this tale and how the fifth century author altered the story. There is no Old Testament book that depends so much on analysis for its meaning as Job does. Since there is no agreement on much of the analysis, there is naturally not much agreement on the finer points, at least, on the meaning of Job. The poor order of some parts and numerous unintelligible words do not help the interpretation. In the prose prologue (1—2), Satan alleges that Job is holy only because he is prosperous. God allows Satan to test Job by depriving him of everything, including his health.

In the poetic dialogue (3—31), three friends of Job try to convince him that his sufferings are punishment for his sins and that he should accept it. This is according to the teaching of the traditional view. Job denies it. Unexpectedly, Eliu enters (32—37) and tries to improve on the arguments of the three friends. Then God answers Job in two poetic speeches and Job repents (38, 1—42, 6). In the prose epilogue (42, 7-17), God rebukes the three friends and answers Job.

The literary form has been called a debate, a dialogue, or a psychological drama. None of these opinions affect the meaning of the book. What was the author's purpose in writing the book? What question was he trying to solve? In general, it was the problem of human suffering. The traditional theory of Israel and of the wisdom writers or sages was: man is, in an earthly way, rewarded for a virtuous life and punished for an evil life. The author asked the question that was on the lips of many before, during, and after his time: Why do the just suffer and the wicked prosper? The question, therefore, may be put thus: Is God just?

Job ends by making an act of faith in God's justice. Job cannot answer his question, but he repudiates the traditional teaching of the three friends. Parenthetically, Plato reached the conclusion through the sheer logic of justice, namely, since man is not punished in this life for his evil deeds, he must be so punished in an afterlife, not just for retaliation, but for the purification of sinners. Job arrived at this brink but never made the leap.

The fuller answer to Job's problem was to come only in the New Testament, i.e., the eternal reward of the beatific vision and the resurrection of the body. And even for us, the question remains unanswered on a rational level.

If there is one biblical work which can take its place with the masterpieces of world literature, it is the Book of Job. It is the greatest poetic work of the Bible. The theme of the Book of Job, the innocent sufferer, and its literary presentation were common in the literature of antiquity. Egyptian parallels date as far back as about 800 B.C., such as The Egyptian Tale of the Eloquent Peasant. The most famous Mesopotamian parallel, dating from 1,000 B.C., is entitled: "I Will Praise the Lord of Wisdom." One important difference is that Job stresses his innocence; the "Babylonian Job," as the Mesopotamian parallel is often called, stresses his ritual acts. A recently discovered Sumerian poem resembles the Job motif even more closely than any Mesopotamian parallel. The "Sumerian Job" dates from about 1,800 B.C.

India's story of Hariscandra resembles Job. Of all the Greek tragedies of Aeschylus, Sophocles, and Euripides, the closest parallel is Aeschylus' Prometheus Bound. The probability that the biblical author depended on the Egyptian, Mesopotamian, Indian, and Greek works is remote. His roots seem to stretch back into the Old Testament. Although many of these parallels are older than the biblical Job, they are inferior in depth of insight and, almost always, even in literary style.

Job's influence on modern poets is worthy of lengthy investigation. Dante's Divine Comedy comes closer to Job in the description of Nature than Goethe or Milton. In Goethe's Faust the greatness of his hero lies in his intellect; in Job, it lies in his virtue (Cheyne). Perhaps the closest parallel in English literature to Job is Milton's Paradise Lost. The common ground of these masterpieces is: intense emotion, sensitiveness to nature, high ideals and an elevated style. A more modern literary work is Herman Melville's Moby Dick.

Main divisions of the Book of Job are:

1. Prologue, 1—2
2. First Cycle of Speeches, 3—14
3. Second Cycle of Speeches, 15—21
4. Third Cycle of Speeches, 22—28
5. Job's Final Summary of His Cause, 29—31
6. Eliu's Speeches, 32—37
7. The Lord's Speech, 38, 1—42, 6
8. Epilogue, 42, 7-17

1 Job's Wealth and Piety In the land of Us there was a blameless and upright man named Job, who feared God and 2 avoided evil. Seven sons and three daughters were born to him; 3 and he had seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred she-asses, and a great number of work animals, so that he was greater than any of the men 4 of the East. His sons used to take turns giving feasts, sending invitations to their three sisters to eat and drink with them.
5 And when each feast had run its course, Job would send for them and sanctify them, rising early and offering holocausts for every one of them. For Job said, "It may be that my sons have sinned and blasphemed God in their hearts." This Job did habitually.

6 One day, when the sons of God came to present themselves 7 before the Lord, Satan also came among them. And the Lord said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" Then Satan answered the Lord and said, "From roaming the earth and patrolling it." 8 And the Lord said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, blameless and up-9 right, fearing God and avoiding evil?" But Satan answered the 10 Lord and said, "Is it for nothing that Job is God-fearing? | Have you not surrounded him and his family and all that he has with your protection? You have blessed the work of his hands, and 11 his livestock are spread over the land. But now put forth your hand and touch anything that he has, and surely he will blas-12 pheme you to your face." And the Lord said to Satan, "Behold, all that he has is in your power; only do not lay a hand upon his person." So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord.

1—2: The prologue is written for edification and not as history, since, e.g., the numbers are inflated, Satan is cast with a dash of the humoresque, which is in Goethe's Faust transferred in exaggerated form to Mephistopheles. In each of the four catastrophes that occur within one day, one person escapes to tell Job. Most important of all, Job is not punished, but the disinterestedness of his devotion is tested. Yet, Job upholds Yahweh's honor by remaining devoted to him. (1, 22).

1, 1: Us: an ancient town of Edom, probably in modern Jordan or Saudi Arabia.

1, 2-5: The background of this folktale seems to be similar to that of the patriarchs of about the fifteenth century B.C.: Job is a patriarch wealthy in material things as well as in piety.

1, 3: Of the East: of Palestine.

1, 6: Sons of God: angels file before God, who is seated on his throne like an oriental potentate.

1, 10-11: Satan here is not a tempter to evil.

13 The First Trial And so one day, while his sons and his daughters were eating and drinking wine in the house of their 14 eldest brother, a messenger came to Job and said, "The oxen 15 were plowing and the asses grazing beside them, | and the Sabeans carried them off in a raid. They put the herdsmen to 16 the sword, and I alone have escaped to tell you." While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Lightning has fallen from heaven and struck the sheep and their shepherds and con-17 sumed them; and I alone have escaped to tell you." While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "The Chaldeans formed three columns, seized the camels, carried them off, and put those tending them to the sword, and I alone have escaped 18 to tell you." While he was yet speaking, another came and said, "Your sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in 19 the house of their eldest brother, when suddenly a great wind came across the desert and smote the four corners of the house. It fell upon the young people and they are dead; and I alone 20 have escaped to tell you." Then Job began to tear his cloak and cut off his hair. He cast himself prostrate upon the ground, 21 and said, "Naked I came forth from my mother's womb, and naked I shall go back again. The Lord gave and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"
22 In all this Job did not sin, nor did he say anything disrespectful of God.

1 The Second Trial Once again the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord, and Satan also came with 2 them. And the Lord said to Satan, "Whence do you come?" And Satan answered the Lord and said, "From roaming the 3 earth and patrolling it." And the Lord said to Satan, "Have you noticed my servant Job, and that there is no one on earth like him, faultless and upright, fearing God and avoiding evil? He still holds fast to his innocence although you incited me against

1, 15: Sabeans: the term is used to mean Arabic nomads rather than raiders from the land of the Queen of Sheba.

1, 17: Chaldeans: the term is used to mean desert tribes who came from the Chaldeans of Babylonia, rather than the Chaldeans of Nabuchodonosor.

1, 20: These are the customary expressions of grief.

1, 21: We may consider this verse a parallel to Gn 3, 19, "dust you are. . . ." The deep truth embedded in this often quoted verse is that God is free to do what he wants with his gifts.

The proverbial patience of Job in the New Testament and among the early Christian writings comes in part from the folktale, which is best expressed by this verse.

him to ruin him without cause." And Satan answered the Lord 4 and said, "Skin for skin! All that a man has will he give for his 5 life. But now put forth your hand and touch his bone and his 6 flesh, and surely he will blaspheme you to your face." And the Lord said to Satan, "He is in your power; only spare his life." 7 So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord and smote Job with severe boils from the soles of his feet to the crown of 8 his head. And he took a potsherd to scrape himself, as he sat 9 among the ashes. Then his wife said to him, "Are you still hold-10 ing to your innocence? Curse God and die." | But he said to her, "Are even you going to speak as senseless women do? We accept good things from God; and should we not accept evil?" Through all this, Job said nothing sinful.

11 Job's Three Friends Now when three of Job's friends heard of all the misfortune that had come upon him, they set out each one from his own place: Eliphaz from Theman, Baldad from Sue, and Sophar from Naama. They met and journeyed 12 together to give him sympathy and comfort. But when, at a distance, they lifted up their eyes and did not recognize him, they began to weep aloud; they tore their cloaks and threw dust 13 upon their heads. Then they sat down upon the ground with him seven days and seven nights, but none of them spoke a word to him; for they saw how great was his suffering.

II. FIRST CYCLE OF SPEECHES

1 Job's Plaint After this, Job opened his mouth and cursed 2 his day. Job spoke out and said: 3 Perish the day on which I was born, the night when they 4 said, "The child is a boy!" | May that day be darkness: let not
5 God above call for it, nor light shine upon it! | May darkness

2, 4: Skin for skin: a proverb here meaning that Job, due to his losses, has become pious so as not to lose more, and in the hope for a greater reward if he continues in his piety.

2, 5: Satan suggests that God now touch Job himself for the crucial test.

2, 7: Boils: the Hebrew word means any skin eruption. The ancients used generic words for diseases because their knowledge of medicine was very limited. It does not seem rewarding to piece together all Job's symptoms to identify the illness.

2, 8: Ashes: Job may have sat here to arrest the itching. In some eastern towns the "town dump" on the outskirts of town is still seen.

2, 11-13: These verses may have been aided by the author to introduce his dialogue in 3—31. The names are mostly Edomite.

and gloom claim it, clouds settle upon it, the blackness of night 6 affright it! | May obscurity seize that day; let it not occur among the days of the year, nor enter into the count of the 7 months! | May that night be barren; let no joyful outcry greet
8 it! | Let them curse it who curse the sea, the appointed dis-
9 turbers of Leviathan! | May the stars of its twilight be darkened; may it look for daylight, but have none, nor gaze on the 10 eyes of the dawn, | because it kept not shut the doors of the womb to shield my eyes from trouble!
11 Why did I not perish at birth, come forth from the womb
16 and expire? | Or why was I not buried away like an untimely 12 birth, like babes that have never seen the light? | Wherefore did the knees receive me? or why did I suck at the breasts?
13 For then I should have lain down and been tranquil; had I 14 slept, I should then have been at rest | with kings and counselors 15 of the earth who built where now there are ruins, or with princes who had gold and filled their houses with silver; | 17 there the wicked cease from troubling, there the weary are at 18 rest. | There the captives are at ease together, and hear not the 19 voice of the slave driver. | Small and great are there the same, and the servant is free from his master.
20 Why is light given to the toilers, and life to the bitter in 21 spirit? | They wait for death and it comes not; they search for 22 it rather than for hidden treasures, | rejoice in it exultingly, 23 and are glad when they reach the grave: | men whose path is hidden from them, and whom God has hemmed in!
24 For sighing comes more readily to me than food, and my 25 groans well forth like water. | For what I fear overtakes me,

3, 8: Leviathan: a frequent term in the Old Testament, here meaning a mythological sea dragon, personified as the primeval chaos at the time of the creation of the world.

The ancients always feared the awakening of the dragon because of an efficacious curse against the existing order of things. This is the background against which Job asks that those who curse with the hope of having Leviathan reign again, which would mean the destruction of the world, may also curse the day of his birth.

3, 16: This verse has been placed between vv. 11 and 12 where it probably stood originally. There is reason to believe that here, as well as in several other places in Job, the original order of the poetic lines was accidentally disturbed in the early transmission of the text; so in chs. 12—15; 19—21; 24—31; 34; 36; 38—42. The verse numbers given in such cases are always those of the current Hebrew text, though the arrangement may differ.

3, 13: Been tranquil: in the nether world.

3, 20: This means: why does God make miserable people live who want to die?

3, 23: Hemmed in: prevented from escaping life's sorrows.

26 and what I shrink from comes upon me. | I have no peace nor ease; I have no rest, for trouble comes!

1 Eliphaz's First Speech Then spoke Eliphaz the Themanite, who said:
2 If someone attempts a word with you, will you mind? For how 3 can anyone refrain from speaking? | Behold, you have instructed many, and have made firm their feeble hands. | 4 Your words have upheld the stumbler; you have strengthened 5 his faltering knees. | But now that it comes to you, you are 6 impatient; when it touches yourself, you are dismayed. | Is not your piety a source of confidence, and your integrity of life your hope?
7 Reflect now, what innocent person perishes? Since when are 8 the upright destroyed? | As I see it, those who plow for mischief 9 and sow trouble, reap the same. | By the breath of God they perish, and by the blast of his wrath they are consumed. | 10 Though the lion roars, though the king of beasts cries out, yet 11 the teeth of the young lions are broken; | the old lion perishes for lack of prey, and the cubs of the lioness are scattered.
12 For a word was stealthily brought to me, and my ear caught 13 a whisper of it. | In my thoughts during visions of the night,
14 when deep sleep falls on men, | fear came upon me, and shud-
15 dering, that terrified me to the bones. | Then a spirit passed 16 before me, and the hair of my flesh stood up. | It paused, but its likeness I could not discern; a figure was before my eyes, and I heard a still voice: 17 "Can a man be righteous as against God? Can a mortal be 18 blameless against his Maker? | Lo, he puts no trust in his

3, 26: It seems that already Job's first complaint is not about physical but about mental suffering.

4, 1: Eliphaz is the oldest and wisest, the most dignified and the best speaker of the three friends.

4, 7-9: Eliphaz here insinuates that Job is being punished for some wrong he did. The traditional theory of retribution underlies Eliphaz's thinking.

4, 10-11: A metaphorical way of saying that though Job roars with complaint against God (10a), his children still died (10b, 11b).

4, 12-21: The poet has Eliphaz undergo a nightly vision (12-16) in which he learns the lesson: if angels are faulty in comparison with God, how much more, then, is man who can die so fast (20-21a). Hence, accept punishment no matter how blameless you think your life was.

4, 18: He: God. Servants: a synonym for angels. The underlying popular belief here is that angels, even though superior to man, are limited in intellect and will. This is true, but we know more today about how superior angels are to man than the Israelites knew at this time.

19 servants, and with his angels he can find fault. | How much more with those that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundation is in the dust, who are crushed more easily than the moth! | 20 Morning or evening they may be shattered; with no heed 21 paid to it, they perish forever. | The pegs of their tent are plucked up; they die without knowing wisdom."

1 Call now! Will anyone respond to you? To which of the holy 2 ones will you appeal? | Nay, impatience kills the fool and
3 indignation slays the simpleton. | I have seen a fool spreading
4 his roots, but his household suddenly decayed. | His children shall be far from safety; they shall be crushed at the gate with-5 out a rescuer. | What they have reaped the hungry shall eat up; [or God shall take it away by blight;] and the thirsty shall swallow their substance.
6 For mischief comes not out of the earth, nor does trouble 7 spring out of the ground; | but man himself begets mischief,
8 as sparks fly upward. | In your place, I would appeal to God, 9 and to God I would state my plea. | [He does great things and 10 inscrutable, marvelous things without number;] | he gives rain
11 upon the earth and sends water upon the fields; | he sets up on high the lowly, and those who mourn he exalts to safety.
12 He frustrates the plans of the cunning, so that their hands 13 achieve no success; | he catches the wise in their own ruses, and 14 the designs of the crafty are routed. | They meet with darkness in the daytime, and at noonday they grope as though it were 15 night. | But the poor from the edge of the sword and from the 16 hand of the mighty, he saves. | Thus the unfortunate have hope, and iniquity closes her mouth.
17 Happy is the man whom God reproves! The Almighty's 18 chastening do not reject. | For he wounds, but he binds up;
19 he smites, but his hands give healing. | Out of six troubles he will deliver you, and at the seventh no evil shall touch you. |

4, 21a: This is an apt example for nomads to express how fast a person can die.
4, 21b: One probable meaning is: they die prematurely.
5, 1: Holy ones: angels.
5, 3a: A moral fool prospering.
5, 4b: Gate: of the city where court trials are held.
5, 6-7: Just as easily as sparks fly upward, man himself, not things, causes moral trouble.
5, 9: This verse is accidentally repeated here from 9, 10.
5, 17-26: Man is happy if he can profit from God's punishment.
5, 19: A proverbial expression for "many." If you are submissive, God will rescue you from many troubles.

20 In famine he will deliver you from death, and in war from the 21 threat of the sword; | from the scourge of the tongue you shall be hidden, and shall not fear approaching ruin.
22 At destruction and want you shall laugh; the beasts of the 23 earth you need not dread. | You shall be in league with the stones of the field, and the wild beasts shall be at peace with 24 you. | And you shall know that your tent is secure; taking 25 stock of your household, you shall miss nothing. | You shall know that your descendants are many, and your offspring as 26 the grass of the earth. | You shall approach the grave in full 27 vigor, as a shock of grain comes in at its season. | Lo, this we have searched out; so it is! This we have heard, and you should know.

1 Job's First Reply Then Job answered and said:
2 Ah, could my anguish but be measured and my calamity
3 laid with it in the scales, | they would now outweigh the sands 4 of the sea! Because of this I speak without restraint. | For the arrows of the Almighty pierce me, and my spirit drinks in their 5 poison; the terrors of God are arrayed against me. | Does the wild ass bray when he has grass? Does the ox low over his 6 fodder? | Can a thing insipid be eaten without salt? Is there 7 flavor in the white of an egg? | I refuse to touch them; they are loathsome food to me.
8 Oh, that I might have my request, and that God would grant 9 what I long for: | even that God would decide to crush me, 10 that he would put forth his hand and cut me off! | Then I should still have consolation and could exult through unremitting pain, because I have not transgressed the commands of the 11 Holy One. | What strength have I that I should endure? and 12 what is my limit that I should be patient? | Have I the strength
13 of stones, or is my flesh of bronze? | Have I no helper, and 5, 23a: An allusion to the numerous stones which impeded farming. If you are submissive, the stones will not accumulate to ruin your farm lands.

5, 27: Searched out: studied carefully.

6—7: Job's replies are not according to the logic of a modern debater who answers one charge after another in orderly succession. Job elaborates his own view.

6, 5-6: Just as satisfied animals are quiet, so would Job be quiet if he had nothing to complain about (5), but his life is as disagreeable as eating tasteless food.

6, 8-10: Job hopes for death.

6, 11-13: Job has no more strength to live.

has advice deserted me? | A friend owes kindness to one in despair, though he have forsaken the fear of the Almighty.
My brethren are undependable as a brook, as streams that run dry in the wadies; | though they may be black with ice, and absorb the snows, | yet once they shrink, they vanish; in the heat, they disappear from their place. | Caravans turn aside from their routes; they go into the desert and perish. |
The caravans of Thema search, the companies of Saba have hopes; | they are disappointed, though they were confident;
they come there and are frustrated.
It is thus that you have now become for me; you see a terrifying thing and are afraid. | Have I asked you to give me anything, to offer a gift for me from your possessions, | or to deliver me from the enemy, or to redeem me from oppressors? | Teach me, and I will be silent; prove to me wherein I have erred. How sickly are your self-righteous words; how unconvincing is your argument! | Do you consider your words as proof, but the sayings of a desperate man as wind? | You would even cast lots for the orphan, and would barter away your friend!
Come, now, give me your attention; surely I will not lie to your face. | Think it over; let there be no injustice. Think it over; I still am right. | Is there insincerity on my tongue, or cannot my taste discern falsehood?

Is not man's life on earth a drudgery? Are not his days those of a hireling? | He is a slave who longs for the shade, a hireling who waits for his wages. | So I have been assigned months of misery, and troubled nights have been told off for me.
If in bed I say, "When shall I arise?" Then the night drags on; I am filled with restlessness until the dawn. | My flesh is clothed with worms and scabs; my skin cracks and festers; | my days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle; they come to an end without hope. | Remember that my life is like the wind; I shall not see happiness again. | The eye that now sees me shall no more behold me; as you look at me, I shall be gone. |

6, 15-20: Job's friends are as disappointing as a desert brook that is dry just when caravans need it most.

6, 27: Job compares the hardness of his friends to creditors who would bargain for the orphan of a debtor to sell the child into slavery (27a), or to men who bargain over a friend (27b).

6, 28-30: Job explicitly challenges his friends. He is really innocent and he is reliable when he claims he has not sinned.

7, 1-10: Job soliloquizes on his miserable state.

9 As a cloud dissolves and vanishes, so he who goes down to the nether world shall come up no more.
10 He shall not again return to his house; his place shall know 11 him no more. | My own utterance I will not restrain; I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitter-12 ness of my soul. | Am I the sea, or a monster of the deep, that 13 you place a watch over me? | When I say, "My bed shall 14 comfort me, my couch shall ease my complaint," | then you 15 affright me with dreams and with visions terrify me, | so that 16 I should prefer choking and death rather than my pains. | I waste away: I cannot live forever; let me alone, for my days are but a breath.
17 What is man, that you make much of him, or pay him any 18 heed? | You observe him with each new day and try him at 19 every moment! | How long will it be before you look away from me, and let me alone long enough to swallow my spittle?
20 | Though I have sinned, what can I do to you, O watcher of men? Why have you set me up as an object of attack; or why 21 should I be a burden to you? Why do you not pardon my offense, or take away my guilt? For soon I shall lie down in the dust; and should you seek me I shall then be gone.

1 Baldad's First Speech Baldad the Sueite spoke out and said:
2 How long will you utter such things? The words from your 3 mouth are like a mighty wind! | Does God pervert judgment,

7, 11-21: Job, turning from his friends, addresses God and asks why He tortures him so much.

7, 12: The sea, or deep, is personified. For the Hebrew idea of the world, see chart on p. 8.

The verse alludes to the Babylonian mythological stories of the creation. The sea was personified as a goddess (Tiamat) who gave birth to gods, one of whom defeated Tiamat and her monster helpers. The sacred writers adapted this imagery by conceiving Yahweh as defeating the personified primeval chaos. Yahweh defeats chaos, establishes order and emerges as the victor of creation. This is a poetic way of saying that God created the world. To continue the poetic imagery, Yahweh thereafter kept strict watch over the conquered sea and its monsters. See Gn 1, 2 n.

7, 18-19: Job feels that God treats him like an enemy, and rebels against the idea of a God who is only just.

7, 19: To swallow my spittle: this expression is still used in Arabic. It means "for a moment."

7, 20a: God cannot be harmed by any sin of man.

8, 2-3: Blunt in speech, Baldad is shocked at Job's questioning the justice of God.

4 and does the Almighty distort justice? | If your children have sinned against him and he has left them in the grip of their 5 guilt, | still, if you yourself have recourse to God and make 6 supplication to the Almighty, | should you be blameless and upright, surely now he will awake for you and restore your 7 rightful domain; | your former state will be of little moment, for in time to come you will flourish indeed.
8 If you inquire of the former generations, and give heed to the 9 experience of the fathers | (as we are but of yesterday and have no knowledge, because our days on earth are but a 10 shadow), | will they not teach you and tell you and utter their 11 words of understanding? | Can the papyrus grow up without 12 mire? Can the reed grass flourish without water? | While it is 13 yet green and uncut, it withers quicker than any grass. | So is the end of everyone who forgets God, and so shall the hope of the godless man perish.
14 His confidence is but a gossamer thread and his trust is a 15 spider's web. | He shall rely upon his family, but it shall not 16 last; he shall cling to it, but it shall not endure. | He is full of sap before sunrise, and beyond his garden his shoots go 17 forth; | about a heap of stones are his roots entwined; among 18 the rocks he takes hold. | Yet if one tears him from his place, 19 it will disown him: "I have never seen you!" | There he lies rotting beside the road, and out of the soil another sprouts.
20 Behold, God will not cast away the upright; neither will he 21 take the hand of the wicked. | Once more will he fill your 22 mouth with laughter, and your lips with rejoicing. | They that hate you shall be clothed with shame, and the tent of the wicked shall be no more.

1 Job's Second Reply Then Job answered and said:
2 I know well that it is so; but how can a man be justified

8, 4-7: Baldad hints that Job's misfortunes are due to the sins of his children. However, if Job repents, God will restore his prosperity. The same idea is repeated in vv. 20-22.

8, 8-10: Baldad claims to base his teaching on the forefathers of their nation.

8, 11-13: As plants need water to grow, so does man need God.

8, 14-15: The confidence of the evil man is weak.

8, 16-19: Although the evil man may prosper (v. 16), yet he will be later like fast growing roots which are speedily torn out and made to wither (17-19).

8, 20-22: See 8, 4-7 n.

9, 2b-12: Job acknowledges Baldad's statements (see 8, 3) about the justice of the Almighty and admits that no one can complain against God in court and win (2b-4; 13-21), because God is too powerful

3 before God? | Should one wish to contend with him, he could
4 not answer him once in a thousand times. | God is wise in heart and mighty in strength; who has withstood him and remained unscathed?
5 He removes the mountains before they know it; he overturns 6 them in his anger. | He shakes the earth out of its place, and 7 the pillars beneath it tremble. | He commands the sun, and it rises not; he seals up the stars.
8 He alone stretches out the heavens and treads upon the crests 9 of the sea. | He made the Bear and Orion, the Pleiades and the 10 constellations of the south; | he does great things past finding out, marvelous things beyond reckoning.
11 Should he come near me, I see him not; should he pass by,
12 I am not aware of him; | should he seize me forcibly, who can say him nay? Who can say to him, "What are you doing?"
13 He is God and he does not relent; the helpers of Rahab bow 14 beneath him. | How much less shall I give him any answer, or 15 choose out arguments against him! | Even though I were right, I could not answer him, but should rather beg for what was due me.
16 If I appealed to him and he answered my call, I could not 17 believe that he would hearken to my words; | with a tempest he might overwhelm me, and multiply my wounds without 18 cause; | he need not suffer me to draw breath, but might fill me with bitter griefs.
19 If it be a question of strength, he is mighty; and if of judg-20 ment, who will call him to account? | Though I were right, my own mouth might condemn me; were I innocent, he might put 21 me in the wrong. | Though I am innocent, I myself cannot know it; I despise my life.
22 It is all one! therefore I say: Both the innocent and the 23 wicked he destroys. | When the scourge slays suddenly, he 24 laughs at the despair of the innocent. | The earth is given into the hands of the wicked; he covers the faces of its judges. If it is not he, who then is it?
25 My days are swifter than a runner, they flee away; they see

(5-10). As nature proves, He is vastly superior to man because He can act invisibly (11) and can treat man as He wishes with impunity (12).

9, 13: Does not relent: his anger. Rahab: most likely a personification of the primeval chaos. See 7, 12 n.

9, 20-21: Job is not consistent with his previous declaration of innocence. He muses about God's apparent arbitrariness (20b).

9, 24: Job who knows precisely that God is provident of nature and man (12, 7-10), nevertheless allows himself to challenge God with his emotional outburst: If it is not God who makes the wicked prosperous, who does?

26 no happiness; | they shoot by like skiffs of reed, like an eagle
27 swooping upon its prey. | If I say: I will forget my complain-
28 ing, I will lay aside my sadness and be of good cheer, | then
I am in dread of all my pains; I know that you will not hold me innocent.
29 If I must be accounted guilty, why then should I strive in 30 vain? | If I should wash myself with snow and cleanse my 31 hands with lye, | yet you would plunge me in the ditch, so that my garments would abhor me.
32 For he is not a man like myself, that I should answer him, 33 that we should come together in judgment. | Would that there were an arbiter between us, who could lay his hand upon us 34 both | and withdraw his rod from me. Would that his terrors
35 did not frighten me; | that I might speak without being afraid of him. Since this is not the case with me, I loathe my life.

1 I will give myself up to complaint; I will speak from the 2 bitterness of my soul. | I will say to God: Do not put me in the 3 wrong! Let me know why you oppose me. | Is it a pleasure for you to oppress, to spurn the work of your hands, and smile on the plan of the wicked?
4.5 Have you eyes of flesh? Do you see as man sees? | Are your 6 days as the days of a mortal, and are your years as a man's 7 lifetime, | that you seek for guilt in me and search after my sins, | even though you know that I am not wicked, and that none can deliver me out of your hand?
8 Your hands have formed me and fashioned me; will you 9 then turn and destroy me? | Oh, remember that you fashioned me from clay! Will you then bring me down to dust again? | 10 Did you not pour me out as milk, and thicken me like cheese?
11 | With skin and flesh you clothed me, with bones and sinews 12 knit me together. | Grace and favor you granted me, and your providence has preserved my spirit.
13 Yet these things you have hidden in your heart; I know that 14 they are your purpose: | If I should sin, you would keep a watch against me, and from my guilt you would not absolve 15 me. | If I should be wicked, alas for me, filled with ignominy

9, 27-28: Even if Job forgets his misery and gives up complaining about it (27), God will still judge him guilty (28).
9, 29-31: The same idea as in the two preceding verses.
10, 1-12: Does God oppress me because He is a sadist (3)? Or erroneously (4-7)? Or is He repentant of what He gave me (8-12)?
10, 10: The embryonic formation in the womb.

and sodden with affliction! If righteous, I dare not hold up my 16 head; | should I raise it, you hunt me like a lion. Repeatedly 17 you show your wondrous power against me, | bringing new witnesses to confront me; while you continue your displeasure with me, in waves your troops come against me.
18 Why then did you bring me forth from the womb? I should 19 have died and no eye have seen me. | I should be as though I had never lived; I should have been taken from the womb to 20 the grave. | Are not the days of my life few? Let me alone, that 21 I may recover a little | before I go whence I shall not return, to 22 the land of darkness and of gloom, | the black, disordered land where darkness is the only light.

1 Sophar's First Speech And Sophar the Naamaite spoke out and said: 2 Should not the man of many words be answered, or must 3 the garrulous man necessarily be right? | Shall your babblings keep men silent, and shall you deride and no one give rebuke?
4 | Shall you say: "My teaching is pure, and I am clean in your 5 sight"? | But oh, that God would speak and open his lips
6 against you | and declare to you the secrets of wisdom, that so you might know God will require of you twofold for all your guilt.
7 Can you penetrate the designs of God? Dare you vie with the 8 perfection of the Almighty? | It is higher than the heavens; what can you do? It is deeper than the nether world; what can 9 you know? | It is longer than the earth in measure, and broader
10 than the sea. | If he seize and imprison or call to judgment, 11 who then can say him nay? | For he knows the worthlessness of 12 men and sees iniquity; will he then ignore it? | Will empty man then gain understanding, and the wild jackass be made docile?
13 If you set your heart aright and stretch out your hands 14 toward him, | if you remove all iniquity from your conduct,
15 and let not injustice dwell in your tent, | surely then you may lift up your face in innocence; you may stand firm and unafraid.
16 | For then you shall forget your misery, or recall it like waters that have ebbed away.
17 Then your life shall be brighter than the noonday; its gloom 18 shall become as the morning, | and you shall be secure, because there is hope; you shall look round you and lie down in safety,
19 | and you shall take your rest with none to disturb. Many shall 11, 1-20: Sophar, the least original of the three friends, flatly diagnoses Job's misfortunes as God's punishment for his sins (e.g., v. 14).

20 entreat your favor, | but the wicked, looking on, shall be consumed with envy. Escape shall be cut off from them, they shall wait to expire.

1 Job's Third Reply Then Job replied and said:

2 No doubt you are the intelligent folk, and with you wisdom
3 shall die! | But I have intelligence as well as you; for who does
4 not know such things as these? | I have become the sport of my neighbors: "The one whom God answers when he calls upon him, | the just, the perfect man," is a laughingstock;
5 "the one whom God had taken into his hand!" | The undisturbed esteem my downfall a disgrace such as awaits unsteady
6 feet; | yet the tents of robbers are prosperous, and those who provoke God are secure.

7 But now ask the beasts to teach you, and the birds of the air
8 to tell you; | or the reptiles on earth to instruct you, and the fish
9 of the sea to inform you. Which of all these does not know 10 that the hand of God has done this? | In his hand is the soul of every living thing, and the life breath of all mankind. |
11 Does not the ear judge words as the mouth tastes food? | 12 So with old age is wisdom, and with length of days understanding.

13 With him are wisdom and might; his are counsel and under-14 standing. | If he breaks a thing down, there is no rebuilding;
15 if he imprisons a man, there is no release. | He holds back the waters and there is drought; he sends them forth and they
16 overwhelm the land. | With him are strength and prudence;
18 the misled and the misleaders are his. | He loosens the bonds imposed by kings and leaves but a waistcloth to bind the king's 19.17 own loins. | He sends counselors away barefoot, | and of judges he makes fools.

20 He silences the trusted adviser, and takes discretion from the 21 aged. | He breaks down the barriers of the streams and lets
22 their never-failing waters flow away. | The recesses of the darkness he discloses, and brings the gloom forth to the light. |
23 He makes nations great and he destroys them; he spreads
24 peoples abroad and he abandons them. | He takes understand-12, 4-6: God punishes Job but makes the wicked prosperous.

12, 7-10: Even the dumb beasts know all that is said before (vv. 4-6).
12, 13-25: Job admits God's power but not the interpretation which his friends put on it.
12, 18: He demotes kings to slaves.

25 ing from the leaders of the land, | till they grope in the darkness without light; he makes them stagger like drunken men.

1 Lo, all this my eye has seen; my ear has heard and perceived
2 it. | What you know, I also know; I fall not short of you. | 3 But I would speak with the Almighty; I wish to reason with 4 God. | You are glossing over falsehoods and offering vain
5 remedies, every one of you! | Oh, that you would be altogether
6 silent! This for you would be wisdom. | Hear now the rebuke
I shall utter and listen to the reproof from my lips.
7 Is it for God that you speak falsehood? Is it for him that you 8 utter deceit? | Is it for him that you show partiality? Do you 9 play advocate on behalf of God? | Will it be well when he shall search you out? Would you impose on him as one does on men?
10 He will openly rebuke you if even in secret you show
11 partiality. | Surely will his majesty affright you and the dread 12 of him fall upon you. | Your reminders are ashy maxims, your fabrications are mounds of clay.
13 Be silent, let me alone! that I may speak and give vent to 14 my feelings. | I will carry my flesh between my teeth, and take 15 my life in my hand. | Slay me though he might, I will wait for 16 him; I will defend my conduct before him. | And this shall be my salvation, that no impious man can come into his presence.
17 Pay careful heed to my speech, and give my statement a 18 hearing. | Behold, I have prepared my case, I know that I am 19 in the right. | If anyone can make a case against me, then I shall be silent and die.
20 These things only do not use against me, then from your 21 presence I need not hide: | withdraw your hand far from me,
22 and let not the terror of you frighten me. | Then call me, and I 23 will respond; or let me speak first, and answer me. | What are my faults and my sins? My misdeeds and my sins make known to me!
24 Why do you hide your face and consider me your enemy?
25 | Will you harass a wind-driven leaf, or pursue a withered
26 straw? | For you draw up bitter indictments against me, and

13, 4-12: Job berates the friends for mouthing traditional explanations of his suffering and thereby think they are defending God.

13, 14: Most probably 14b explains the metaphor of 14a.

13, 20—14, 22: Job, addressing God directly, proclaims his innocence in spite of sins committed in his youth (v. 26), which apparently he does not consider important.

27 punish in me the faults of my youth. | You put my feet in the stocks; you watch all my paths and trace out all my footsteps.

1 Man, born of woman, is short-lived and full of trouble. |
2 Like a flower that springs up and fades, swift as a shadow that 13,28 does not abide, | even so he wastes away like a rotten thing;
14,3 like a garment that the moth has consumed. | Upon such a one will you cast your eyes so as to bring me into judgment
4 before you? | Can a man be found who is clean of defilement?
5 There is none, | however short his days. You know the number of his months; you have fixed the limit which he cannot pass.
6 | Look away from him and let him be, while, like a hireling, he completes his day.
7 For a tree there is hope, if it be cut down, that it will sprout
8 again and that its tender shoots will not cease. | Even though its root grow old in the earth, and its stump die in the dust, | 9 yet at the first whiff of water it may flourish again and put 10 forth branches like a young plant. | But when a man dies, all
11 vigor leaves him; when man expires, where then is he? | As when the waters of a lake fail, or a stream grows dry and
12 parches, | so men lie down and rise not again. Till the heavens are no more, they shall not awake, nor be roused out of their sleep.
13 Oh, that you would hide me in the nether world and keep me sheltered till your wrath is past; would fix a time for me, 14 and then remember me! | When a man has died, were he to live again, all the days of my drudgery I would wait, until my
15 relief should come. | You would call, and I would answer
16 you; you would esteem the work of your hands. | Surely then you would count my steps, and not keep watch for sin in me. |
17 My misdeeds would be sealed up in a pouch, and you would cover over my guilt.
18 But as a mountain falls at last and its rock is moved from its 19 place, | as waters wear away the stones and floods wash away
20 the soil of the land, so you destroy the hope of man. | You prevail once for all against him and he passes on; with changed
21 appearance you send him away. | If his sons are honored, he is not aware of it; if they are in disgrace, he does not know

14, 3-22: Ch. 14 develops the idea that man's conduct should not overconcern God since creatures are so unimportant. V. 4 does not speak about original sin. Vv. 13-17 show that Job does not wish to return from sheol after death. In dire straits Job can think of no better refuge than sheol where he can wait till God's anger spends itself after which he would be in God's favor again.

22 about them. Only his own flesh pains him, and his soul grieves for him.

III. SECOND CYCLE OF SPEECHES

1 Second Speech of Eliphaz Then Eliphaz the Themanite spoke and said:

2 Should a wise man answer with airy opinions, or puff him-
3 self up with wind? | Should he argue in speech which does not
4 avail, and in words which are to no profit? | You in fact do away with piety, and you lessen devotion toward God, |
5 because your wickedness instructs your mouth, and you choose 6 to speak like the crafty. | Your own mouth condemns you, not I; your own lips refute you.

7 Are you indeed the first-born of mankind, or were you 8 brought forth before the hills? | Are you privy to the counsels
9 of God, and do you restrict wisdom to yourself? | What do you know that we do not know? What intelligence have you which
10 we have not? | There are gray-haired old men among us more
11 advanced in years than your father. | Are the consolations of God not enough for you, and speech that deals gently with you?

12 Why do your notions carry you away, and why do your eyes 13 blink, | so that you turn your anger against God and let such 14 words escape your mouth! | What is a man that he should be blameless, one born of woman that he should be righteous? |
15 If in his holy ones God places no confidence, and if the heavens 16 are not clean in his sight, | how much less so is the abominable, the corrupt: man, who drinks in iniquity like water!

17 I will show you, if you listen to me; what I have seen I will 18 tell— |what wise men relate and have not contradicted since
19 the days of their fathers. | To whom alone the land was given, when no foreigner moved among them.

20 The wicked man is in torment all his days, and limited years 21 are in store for the tyrant; | the sound of terrors is in his ears;
22 when all is prosperous, the spoiler comes upon him. | He despairs of escaping the darkness, and looks ever for the sword;
23 | a wanderer, food for the vultures, he knows that his destruc-
24 tion is imminent. | By day the darkness fills him with dread; distress and anguish overpower him.

25 Because he has stretched out his hand against God and bade 15: Eliphaz restates his diagnosis more forcefully: Job is suffering because he is guilty.

26 defiance to the Almighty, | one shall rush sternly upon him with the stout bosses of his shields, like a king prepared for the 27 charge. Because he enveloped himself in his crassness and 28 made a mask for his folly, | he shall dwell in ruinous cities, in 29 houses that are deserted, that are crumbling into clay | with no shadow to lengthen over the ground. He shall not be rich, 31 and his possessions shall not endure; | for vain shall be his hopes.
30 A flame shall wither him up in his early growth, and with the 32 wind his blossoms shall disappear. | His stalk shall wither 33 before its time, and his branches shall be green no more. | He shall be like a vine that sheds its grapes unripened, and like an 34 olive tree casting off its bloom. | For the breed of the impious shall be sterile, and fire shall consume the tents of extortioners.
35 | They conceive malice and bring forth emptiness; they give birth to failure.

1 Job's Fourth Reply Then Job answered and said:
2 I have heard this sort of thing many times. Wearisome com-3 forters are you all! | Is there no end to windy words? Or what 4 sickness have you that you speak on? | I also could talk as you do, were you in my place. I could declaim over you, or wag my 5 head at you; | I could strengthen you with talk, or shake my 6 head with silent lips. | If I speak, this pain I have will not be checked; if I leave off, it will not depart from me.
7 But now that I am exhausted and stunned, all my company
8 has closed in on me. | My traducer speaks openly against me;
9 | I am the prey his wrath assails, he gnashes his teeth against 10 me. My enemies lord it over me; | their mouths are agape to bite me. They smite me on the cheek insultingly; they are all 11 enlisted against me. | God has given me over to the impious; into the clutches of the wicked he has cast me.
12 I was in peace, but he dislodged me; he seized me by the neck and dashed me to pieces. He has set me up for a target; | 13 his arrows strike me from all directions, he pierces my sides 14 without mercy, he pours out my gall upon the ground. | He pierces me with thrust upon thrust; he attacks me like a warrior.
15 | I have fastened sackcloth over my skin, and have laid my 16 brow in the dust. | My face is inflamed with weeping and there 17 is darkness over my eyes, | although my hands are free from violence, and my prayer is sincere.
18 O earth, cover not my blood, nor let my outcry come to rest!

16—17: Weary Job appeals to God since his friends are of no comfort.

19 | Even now, behold, my witness is in heaven, and my spokesman 20 is on high. | My friends it is who wrong me; before God my 21 eyes drop tears, | that he may do justice for a mortal in his 22 presence and decide between a man and his neighbor. | For my years are numbered now, and I am on a journey from which I shall not return.

1 My spirit is broken, my lamp of life extinguished; my burial 2 is at hand. | I am indeed mocked, and, as their provocation mounts, my eyes grow dim.
3 Grant me one to offer you a pledge on my behalf: who is 4 there that will give surety for me? | You darken their minds to 5 knowledge; therefore they do not understand. | My lot is de-6 scribed as evil, | and I am made a byword of the people; their 7 object lesson I have become. | My eye has grown blind with 8 anguish, and all my frame is shrunken to a shadow. | Upright men are astonished at this, and the innocent aroused against the 9 wicked. | Yet the righteous shall hold to his way, and he who has clean hands increase in strength.
10 But turn now, and come on again; for I shall not find a wise 11 man among you! | My days are passed away, my plans are at 12 an end, the cherished purposes of my heart. | Such men change the night into day; where there is darkness they talk of 13 approaching light. | If I look for the nether world as my 14 dwelling, if I spread my couch in the darkness, | if I must call corruption "my father," and the maggot "my mother" and "my 15 sister," | where then is my hope? and my prosperity, who shall 16 see? | Will they descend with me into the nether world? Shall we go down together into the dust?

1 Baldad's Second Speech Then Baldad the Sueite replied and said:
2 When will you put an end to words? Reflect, and then we 3 can have discussion. | Why are we accounted like the beasts, 4 their equals in your sight? | You who tear yourself in your anger, shall the earth be neglected on your account [or the rock be moved out of its place]?
5 Truly, the light of the wicked is extinguished; no flame 6 brightens his hearth. | The light is darkened in his tent; in 18, 5-21: Baldad, hinting at Job, describes the fate of the "impious man . . . who knows not God" (v. 21). The first-born of death: this means a disease (v. 13). The king: of sheol, i.e., most likely death (v. 14).

7 spite of him, his lamp goes out. | His vigorous steps are hemmed in, and his own counsel casts him down.
8 For he rushes headlong into a net, and he wanders into a 9 pitfall. | A trap seizes him by the heel, and a snare lays hold of 10 him. | A noose for him is hid on the ground, and the toils for him on the way.
11.12 On every side terrors affright him; | destruction is ready at 13 his side. | The first-born of death consumes his limbs; | 14 terror conducts him to the king. He is plucked from the 15 security of his tent; | over his abode brimstone is scattered.
16 Below, his roots dry up, and above, his branches wither. | 17 His memory perishes from the land, and he has no name on the 18 earth. | He is driven from light into darkness, and banished out of the world.
19 He has neither son nor grandson among his people, nor any 20 survivor where once he dwelt. | They who come after shall be appalled at his fate; they who went before are struck with 21 horror. | So is it then with the dwelling of the impious man, and such is the place of him who knows not God!

1 Job's Fifth Reply Then Job answered and said:
2 How long will you vex my soul, grind me down with words?
3 | These ten times you have reviled me, have assailed me with-
4 out shame! | Be it indeed that I am at fault and that my fault
5 remains with me, | even so, if you would vaunt yourselves
6 against me and cast up to me my reproach, | know then that God has dealt unfairly with me, and compassed me round with his net.
7 If I cry out "Injustice!" I am not heard. I cry for help, but 8 there is no redress. | He has barred my way and I cannot pass;
9 he has veiled my path in darkness; | he has stripped me of my 10 glory, and taken the diadem from my brow. | He breaks me down on every side, and I am gone; my hope he has uprooted 11 like a tree. | His wrath he has kindled against me; he counts 12 me among his enemies. | His troops advance as one man; they build up their road to attack me, and they encamp around my tent.
13 My brethren have withdrawn from me, and my friends are 14 wholly estranged. My kinsfolk and companions neglect me, and 19, 1-29: Job believes that God has only temporarily stopped being his friend. V. 9 contains two metaphors that express the humiliation of Job by God. My flesh between my teeth: may mean his lips have wasted away to a very thin layer between his teeth (v. 20).

15 my guests have forgotten me. | Even my handmaids treat me
16 as a stranger; I am an alien in their sight. | I call my servant, but he gives no answer, though in my speech I plead with him. | 17 My breath is abhorred by my wife; I am loathsome to the men of my family.
18 The young children, too, despise me; when I appear, they 19 speak against me. | All my intimate friends hold me in horror;
20 those whom I loved have turned against me! | My bones cleave to my skin, and I have escaped with my flesh between my teeth.
21 | Pity me, pity me, O you my friends, for the hand of God has 22 struck me! | Why do you hound me as though you were divine, and insatiably prey upon me?
23 Oh, would that my words were written down! Would that 24 they were inscribed in a record: | that with an iron chisel and 25 with lead they were cut in the rock forever! | But as for me, I know that my Vindicator lives, and that he will at last stand 27 forth upon the dust | whom I myself shall see, and not another 26 — | and from my flesh I shall see God; my inmost being is con-28 sumed with longing. | But you who say, "How shall we persecute him, seeing that the root of the matter is found in him?" | 29 Be afraid of the sword for yourselves, for these crimes deserve the sword; that you may know that there is a judgment.

1 Sophar's Second Speech Then Sophar the Naamaite spoke and said:

3.2 A rebuke which puts me to shame I hear, | and because of this I am disturbed. So now my thoughts provide me with an answer, and from my understanding a spirit gives me a reply.
4 Do you not know this from olden time, since man was placed 5 upon the earth, | that the triumph of the wicked is short and 6 the joy of the impious but for a moment? | Though his pride

19, 25-27: The Hebrew text is poorly preserved and scholars differ therefore in their translation of this passage. The problem is: when and how will God be Job's vindicator? Scholars agree that the Latin Vulgate and the Douay translation, and even this aria in Handel's Messiah, are incorrect in making Job express a belief in the Redeemer, presumably Christ, who will physically resurrect Job after death. There is no unanimity of opinion of what Job really means beyond his belief that God, his vindicator ("goel"), will defend the cause of his innocence. (For other uses of "goel," see Ruth 4, 4 n.) This act of faith is one of the peaks of the book. Scholars seek more specific meanings of this text, such as: Is Job wishing for a cure? For God to proclaim him innocent on earth or after his death?

20, 1-29: Sophar repeats the traditional thesis that Job suffers because of his sins. Oil (v. 17): olive oil which, together with "honey or milk," express agricultural prosperity.

7 mount up to the heavens and his head reach to the clouds, | yet he perishes forever like the fuel of his fire, and the onlookers 8 say, "Where is he?" | Like a dream he takes flight and is not 9 found again; he fades away like a vision of the night. | The eye which saw him does so no more; nor shall his dwelling again 11 behold him. | Though his frame is full of youthful vigor, this shall lie with him in the dust.
12 Though wickedness is sweet in his mouth, and he hides it 13 under his tongue, | though he retains it and will not let it go
14 but keeps it still within his mouth, | yet in his stomach the food 15 shall turn; it shall be venom of asps inside him. | The riches he swallowed he shall disgorge; God shall compel his belly to 16 disown them. | The poison of asps he shall drink in; the viper's fangs shall slay him.
17 He shall see no streams of oil, no torrents of honey or milk. |
18 Restoring his gains, he shall not enjoy them; though his wealth 19 increases, he shall not rejoice. | Because he has oppressed the 21 poor, and stolen a patrimony he had not built up, | therefore 20 his prosperity shall not endure, and his hands shall yield up his 20 riches. | Though he has known no quiet in his greed, his 22 treasures shall not save him. | When he abounds to overflowing, he shall be brought into straits, and nought shall be left of his goods.
23 God shall send against him the fury of his wrath and rain 24 down his missiles of war upon him. | Should he escape the 25 iron weapon, the bow of bronze shall pierce him through; | the dart shall come out of his back; terrors shall fall upon him. | 26 Complete darkness is in store for him; the fire which shall con-27 sume him needs not to be fanned. The heavens shall reveal his 28 guilt, and the earth shall rise up against him. | . . . . . | 29 This is the portion of a wicked man, and the heritage appointed him by God.

1 Job's Sixth Reply Then Job made reply and said:
2 At least listen to my words, and let that be the consolation 4 you offer. | Bear with me while I speak; and after I have 4 spoken, you can mock! | Is my complaint toward man? And 5 why should I not be impatient? | Look at me and be astonished,
6 put your hands over your mouths. | When I think of it, I am dismayed, and horror takes hold on my flesh.
7 Why do the wicked survive, grow old, become mighty in 21, 1-34: Job rejects the traditional theory of his friends that God punishes the wicked on earth.

8 power? | Their progeny is secure in their sight; they see before
9 them their kinsfolk and their offspring. | Their homes are safe 10 and without fear, nor is the scourge of God upon them. | Their bulls gender without fail; their cows calve and do not miscarry.
11 | These folk have infants numerous as lambs, and their children 12 dance. | They sing to the timbrel and harp, and make merry to the sound of the flute.
13 They live out their days in prosperity, and tranquilly go 14 down to the nether world. | Yet they say to God, "Depart 15 from us, for we have no wish to learn your ways! | What is the Almighty that we should serve him? And what gain shall 16 we have if we pray to him?" | If their happiness is not in their own hands and if the counsel of the wicked is repulsive to God, 17 | how often is the lamp of the wicked put out? How often does destruction come upon them, the portion he allots in his anger?
18 Let them be like straw before the wind, and like chaff which 19 the storm snatches away! | May God not store up the man's misery for his children; let him requite the man himself so that 20 he feels it, | let his own eyes see the calamity, and the wrath 21 of the Almighty let him drink! | For what interest has he in his family after him, when the number of his months is finished?
22 Can anyone teach God knowledge, seeing that he judges 23 those on high? | One dies in his full vigor, wholly at ease and 24 content; | his figure is full and nourished, and his bones are 25 rich in marrow. | Another dies in bitterness of soul, having 26 never tasted happiness. | Alike they lie down in the dust, and worms cover them both.
27 Behold, I know your thoughts, and the arguments you re-28 hearse against me. | For you say, "Where is the house of the 29 magnate, and where the dwelling place of the wicked?" | Have you not asked the wayfarers and do you not recognize their 30 monuments? | Nay, the evil man is spared calamity when it 32.31 comes; and on the day he is carried to the grave | who will charge him with his conduct to his face, and for what he has 33 done who will repay him? | Sweet to him are the clods of the valley, and over him the funeral mound keeps watch, while all the line of mankind follows him, and the countless others who 34 have gone before. | How then can you offer me vain comfort, while in your answers perfidy remains?

IV. THIRD CYCLE OF SPEECHES

1 Eliphaz's Third Speech Then Eliphaz the Themanite answered and said:

2 Can a man be profitable to God? Though to himself a wise 3 man be profitable, | is it of advantage to the Almighty if you are just? Or is it a gain to him if you make your ways perfect? | 4 Is it because of your piety that he reproves you—that he enters 5 with you into judgment? | Is not your wickedness manifold?
Are not your iniquities endless?
6 You have unjustly kept your kinsmen's goods in pawn, left 7 them stripped naked of their clothing. | To the thirsty you have given no water to drink, and from the hungry you have 8 withheld bread; | as if the land belonged to the man of might,
9 and only the privileged were to dwell in it. | You have sent widows away empty-handed, and the resources of orphans you 10 have destroyed. | Therefore snares are round about you, and 11 a sudden terror causes you dismay, | or darkness, in which you cannot see; a deluge of waters covers you.
12 Does not God, in the heights of the heavens, behold the stars, 13 high though they are? | Yet you say, "What does God know?
14 Can he judge through the thick darkness? | Clouds hide him so that he cannot see; he walks upon the vault of the heavens!" 15 Do you indeed keep to the ancient way trodden by worthless 16 men, | who were snatched away before their time; whose foun-
17 dations a flood swept away? | These men said to God, "Depart 18 from us!" and, "What can the Almighty do to us?" | [Yet he had filled their houses with good things! But far be from me 19 the mind of the impious!] | The just look on and are glad-20 dened, and the innocent deride them: | "Truly these have been destroyed where they stood, and such as were left, fire has consumed!"
21 Come to terms with him to be at peace. In this shall good 22 come to you: | receive instruction from his mouth, and lay up
23 his words in your heart. | If you return to the Almighty, you 24 will be restored; if you put iniquity far from your tent, | and treat raw gold like dust, and the fine gold of Ophir as pebbles 25 from the brook, | then the Almighty himself shall be your gold and your sparkling silver.
26 For then you shall delight in the Almighty and you shall lift 27 up your face toward God. | You shall entreat him and he will 28 hear you, and your vows you shall fulfill. | When you make a decision, it shall succeed for you, and upon your ways the light

22—27: The third cycle of speeches is generally considered to be disorderly in the Hebrew text.

22, 6-11: Eliphaz is straining here to find some misdeeds to explain Job's suffering and thus safeguard the traditional opinion that a person suffers because he did evil.

22, 18: This verse is partly from 21, 16.

29 shall shine. | For he brings down the pride of the haughty, but 30 the man of humble mien he saves. | God delivers him who is innocent; you shall be delivered through cleanness of hands.

1 Job's Seventh Reply Again Job answered and said:
2 Though I know my complaint is bitter, his hand is heavy upon 3 me in my groanings. | Oh, that today I might find him, that I
4 might come to his judgment seat! | I would set out my cause
5 before him, and fill my mouth with arguments; | I would learn the words with which he would answer, and understand what
6 he would reply to me. | Even should he contend against me with his great power, yet, would that he himself might heed
7 me! | There the upright man might reason with him, and I should once and for all preserve my rights.
8 But if I go to the east, he is not there; or to the west, I cannot 9 perceive him; | where the north enfolds him, I behold him not;
10 by the south he is veiled, and I see him not. | Yet he knows
11 my way; if he proved me, I should come forth as gold. | My foot has always walked in his steps; his way I have kept and
12 have not turned aside. | From the commands of his lips I have not departed; the words of his mouth I have treasured in my heart.
13 But he has decided, and who can say him nay? What he 14 desires, that he does. | For he will carry out what is appointed
15 for me; and many such things may yet be in his mind. | Therefore am I dismayed before him; when I take thought, I fear
16 him. | Indeed God has made my courage fail; the Almighty
17 has put me in dismay. | Yes, would that I had vanished in darkness, and that thick gloom were before me to conceal me.

1 Why are not times set by the Almighty, and why do his 2 friends not see his days? | The wicked remove landmarks; they 3 steal away herds and pasture them. | The asses of orphans they 4 drive away; they take the widow's ox for a pledge. | They force the needy off the road; all the poor of the land are driven into
5 hiding. | Like wild asses in the desert, these go forth to their task of seeking food; the steppe provides food for the young
6 among them; | they harvest at night in the untilled land.
7 They pass the night naked, without clothing, for they have 24, 1: Why does God not favor His friends by the speedy punishment of His enemies? (The text in order of verses in this chapter is not certain. Note the omission of v. 9 which duplicates words of vv. 2-4.)

8 no covering against the cold; | they are drenched with the rain of the mountains, and for want of shelter they cling to the 11 rock. | Between the rows they press out the oil; they glean in the vineyard of the wicked. They tread the wine presses, yet 10 suffer thirst, | and famished are those who carry the sheaves. | 12 From the dust the dying groan, and the souls of the wounded cry out [yet God does not treat it as unseemly].
13 There are those who are rebels against the light; they know 14 not its ways; they abide not in its paths. | When there is no
15 light the murderer rises, to kill the poor and needy. | The eye of the adulterer watches for the twilight; he says, "No eye will see me." In the night the thief roams about, and he puts a mask 16 over his face; | in the dark he breaks into houses. By day they 17 shut themselves in; none of them know the light, | for daylight they regard as darkness.

18.20 Their portion in the land is accursed, | and wickedness is 19.21.22 splintered like wood. | . . . . . | To him who rises 23 without assurance of his life | he gives safety and support. He sustains the mighty by his strength, and his eyes are on their 24 ways. | They are exalted for a while, and then they are gone; they are laid low and, like all others, are gathered up; like ears of grain they shrivel.

25 If this be not so, who will confute me, and reduce my argument to nought?

25

1 Baldad's Third Speech Then Baldad the Sueite answered and said:
2 Dominion and awesomeness are his who brings about har-3 mony in his heavens. | Is there any numbering of his troops?
4 Yet to which of them does not his light extend? | How can a man be just in God's sight, or how can any woman's child be 5 innocent? | Behold, even the moon is not bright and the stars
6 are not clear in his sight. | How much less man, who is but a maggot, the son of man, who is only a worm?

24, 17: The asterisks following this verse mark off a passage (vv. 18-24) that cannot be ascribed to Job with certainty. Vv. 17-24 are, in general, wholly preserved; and much of vv. 18-21 have not been translated because they are quite obscure.

24, 18—27, 21: This is the most disturbed part of the dialogue. The scholars have not yet explained it satisfactorily.

25, 2-6: Baldad wants to prove God's power which he believes has been attacked.

25, 3: Troops: may mean the angels.

1 Job's Reply Then Job spoke again and said: 2 What help you give to the powerless, what strength to the 3 feeble arm! | How you counsel, as though he had no wisdom;
4 how profuse is the advice you offer! | With whose help have you uttered those words, and whose is the breath that comes 5 forth from you? | The shades beneath writhe in terror, the 6 waters, and their inhabitants. | Naked before him is the nether world, and Abaddon has no covering.
7 He stretches out the North over empty space, and suspends 8 the earth over nothing at all; | he binds up the waters in his 9 clouds, yet the cloud is not rent by their weight; | he holds back the appearance of the full moon by spreading his clouds 10 before it; | he has marked out a circle on the surface of the deep as the boundary of light and darkness.
11 The pillars of the heavens tremble and are stunned at his 12 thunderous rebuke; | by his power he stirs up the sea, and by 13 his might he crushes Rahab; | his breath cleaves the waters; his 14 hand pierces the fleeing dragon. | Lo, these are but the outlines of his ways, and how faint is the word we hear!

2 Job's Reply As God lives, who withholds my deserts, the 3 Almighty, who has made bitter my soul, | so long as I still have 4 life in me and the breath of God is in my nostrils, | my lips
5 shall not speak falsehood, nor my tongue utter deceit! | Far be it from me to account you right; till I die I will not renounce 6 my innocence. | My justice I maintain and I will not relinquish it; my heart does not reproach me for any of my days.
11 I will teach you the manner of God's dealings, and the way
12 of the Almighty I will not conceal. | Behold, you yourselves have all seen it; why then do you spend yourselves in idle words!

26, 1-14: This is probably to be understood as Job's reply to Sophar's speech in 27, 7-21.

26, 5: Shades: the dead in sheol, the nether world, or Abaddon, of v. 6.

26, 7: The North: the firmament of the heavens.

26, 10: Circle: the horizon of the ocean, which serves as the boundary for the activity of light and darkness.

26, 11: The pillars: see the two pillars, upholding "the vault of the heavens" (22, 14), in the chart on p. 8.

26, 12: Rahab: see 9, 13 n.

26, 13: The fleeing dragon: a synonym for Leviathan. See 3, 8 n.

27, 2-6: This is probably to be read as Job's reply to Baldad's speech of 25, 1-6. In the current Hebrew text, the heading for this chapter (27, 1, here omitted) is identical with 29, 1.

7 Let my enemy be as the wicked and my adversary as the 8 unjust! | For what can the impious man expect when he is cut 9 off, when God requires his life? | Will God then attend to his 10 cry when calamity comes upon him? | Will he then delight in the Almighty and call upon him constantly?
13 This is the portion of a wicked man from God, the inheritance 14 an oppressor receives from the Almighty: | though his children be many, the sword is their destiny. His offspring shall not be 15 filled with bread. | His survivors, when they die, shall have no burial and their widows shall not be mourned.
16 Though he heap up silver like dust and store away mounds 17 of clothing, | what he has stored the just man shall wear, and 18 the innocent shall divide the silver. | He builds his house as of 19 cobwebs, or like a booth put up by the vine-keeper. | He lies down a rich man, one last time; he opens his eyes and nothing 20 remains to him. | Terrors rush upon him by day; at night the 21 tempest carries him off. | The storm wind seizes him and he disappears; it sweeps him out of his place.

1 There is indeed a mine for silver, and a place for gold which 2 men refine. | Iron is taken from the earth, and copper is melted
4.5 out of stone. | . . . . . | The earth, though out of it
6 comes forth bread, is in fiery upheaval underneath. | Its stones are the source of sapphires, and there is gold in its dust.
12 But whence can wisdom be obtained, and where is the place 13 of understanding? | Man knows nothing to equal it, nor is it to 15 be had in the land of the living. | Solid gold cannot purchase

27, 7-21: This is probably to be read as Sophar's third speech. The asterisks are present to indicate it is not likely that the sacred writer intended these words to be ascribed to Job.

27, 15: No burial: see Ct 6, 3 n.

27, 21: The Hebrew has two more verses: v. 22, "He hurls it against him relentlessly, though from its stroke he strives to flee," which does not fit the present context; and v. 23, which is a variant form of v. 21.

28, 1-28: Note the changed order of verses and the omission of the textually uncertain v. 4. Most scholars believe that the famous wisdom poem of this chapter, which is not connected with the rest of Job, was composed independently of the Book of Job by another hand and added later. The poem means that man cannot mine wisdom as he mines metals (vv. 1-6), nor buy it (vv. 13-19), nor find it "in the land of the living" (v. 13). Only God knows where wisdom is and He tells man where to find it, "in the fear of the Lord" (v. 28) for which expression see Prv 1, 7 n.

16 it, nor can its price be paid with silver. | It cannot be bought with gold of Ophir, with the precious onyx or the sapphire. | 17 Gold or crystal cannot equal it, nor can golden vessels reach its 18 worth. | Neither coral nor jasper should be thought of; it 19 surpasses pearls and | Arabian topaz.
20 Whence, then, comes wisdom, and where is the place of 21 understanding? | It is hid from the eyes of any beast; from the 7 birds of the air it is concealed. | The path to it no bird of prey
8 knows, nor has the hawk's eye seen that path. | The proud beasts have not trodden it, nor has the lion gone that way. | 14 The abyss declares, "It is not in me"; and the sea says, "I have 22 it not." | Abaddon and Death say, "Only by rumor have we heard of it."
23 God knows the way to it; it is he who is familiar with its 24 place. | For he beholds the ends of the earth and sees all that is 9 under the heavens. | He sets his hand to the flinty rock, and 10 overturns the mountains at their foundations. | He splits chan-
11 nels in the rocks; his eyes behold all that is precious. | He probes the wellsprings of the streams, and brings hidden things to light.
25 He has weighed out the wind, and fixed the scope of the 3 waters; | he has set a boundary for the darkness; to the farthest 26 confines he penetrates. | When he made rules for the rain and 27 a path for the thunderbolts, | then he saw wisdom and appraised 28 it, gave it its setting, knew it through and through. | And to man he said: Behold, the fear of the Lord is wisdom; and avoiding evil is understanding.

V. JOB'S FINAL SUMMARY OF HIS CAUSE

29

1 Job took up his theme anew and said: 2 Oh, that I were as in the months past! as in the days when 3 God watched over me, | while his lamp shone above my head, 4 and by his light I walked through darkness; | as I was in 5 my flourishing days, when God sheltered my tent; | when the Almighty was yet with me, and my children were round about 6 me; | when my footsteps were bathed in milk, and the rock flowed with streams of oil.
7 Then when I went forth to the gate of the city and set up 8 my seat in the square, | the young men saw me and withdrew,

29, 2-20: Job reminisces over the time when he was happy, respected, and influential.

29, 3: Lamp: just as a lamp illuminates a room, so did God illuminate Job's life.

29, 6: Hyperbolic expressions of prosperity as in 20, 17 n.

9 while the elders rose up and stood; | the chief men refrained 10 from speaking and covered their mouths with their hands; | the voice of the princes was silenced, and their tongues stuck to the 21 roofs of their mouths. | For me they listened and waited; they were silent for my counsel.
22 Once I spoke, they said no more, but received my pronounce-23 ment drop by drop. | They waited for me as for the rain; they 24 drank in my words like the late rains. | When I smiled on them
25 they were reassured; | mourners took comfort from my cheerful glance. I chose out their way and presided; I took a king's place in the armed forces.
11 Whoever heard of me blessed me; those who saw me com-12 mended me. | For I rescued the poor who cried out for help, 13 the orphans, and the unassisted; | the blessing of those in extremity came upon me, and the heart of the widow I made joyful.
14 I wore my honesty like a garment; justice was my robe and 15 my turban. | I was eyes to the blind, and feet to the lame was I;
16 | I was a father to the needy; the rights of the stranger I stud-
17 ied, | and I broke the jaws of the wicked man; from his teeth
I forced the prey.
18 Then I said: "In my own nest I shall grow old; I shall multi-19 ply years like the phoenix. | My root is spread out to the waters;
20 the dew rests by night on my branches. | My glory is fresh within me, and my bow is renewed in my hand!"

30

1 But now they hold me in derision who are younger in years than I; whose fathers I should have disdained to rank with the 2 dogs of my flock. | To me the strength of their hands meant nought; their vigor had perished through want and hunger. | 3 They fled to dry and barren ground, a land of waste and deso-4 lation. | They plucked saltwort and shrubs; the roots of the 5 broom plant were their food. | They were banished from 6 among men, with an outcry like that against a thief, | to dwell on the slopes of the wadies, in caves of sand and stone; |

29, 18: Phoenix: according to ancient fables, it lived long and perished with its nest.
29, 19: Symbols of prosperity.
29, 20: Bow: symbol of power.
30, 1-31: Describes Job's fall from glory.
30, 4: Saltwort . . . broom plant: saltwort is found in salt marshes and is very sour to the taste. It is eaten by the extremely poor as a cooked vegetable. Broom plant is the juniper or brushwood, a figure of bitterness and poverty, because its bitter-tasting roots are practically inedible.

among the bushes they raised their raucous cry; under the nettles they huddled together. | Irresponsible, nameless men, they were driven out of the land.
Yet now they sing of me in mockery; I am become a byword among them. | They abhor me, they stand aloof from me, they do not hesitate to spit in my face! | Indeed, they have loosed their bonds; they lord it over me, and have thrown off restraint in my presence. | To subvert my paths they rise up; they build their approaches for my ruin. | To destroy me, they attack with none to stay them; | as through a wide breach they advance. Amid the uproar they come on in waves; | over me rolls the terror. My dignity is borne off on the wind, and my welfare vanishes like a cloud. | One with great power lays hold of my clothing; by the collar of my tunic he seizes me: | he has cast me into the mire; I am leveled with the dust and ashes. |
I cry to you, but you do not answer me; you stand off and look at me, | then you turn upon me without mercy and with your strong hand you buffet me. | You raise me up and drive me before the wind; I am tossed about by the tempest.
Indeed I know you will turn me back in death to the destined place of everyone alive. | Yet should not a hand be held out to help a wretched man in his calamity? | Or have I not wept for the hardships of others; was not my soul grieved for the destitute? | Yet when I looked for good, then evil came; when I expected light, then came darkness.
My soul ebbs away from me; | within me is a seething that will not be stilled. | My gnawing pains take no rest by night; days of affliction have come upon me. | I go about in gloom, without the sun; I rise up in public to voice my grief. |
I have become the brother of jackals, companion to the ostrich. | My blackened skin falls away from me; the heat scorches my very frame. | My harp is turned to mourning, and my reed pipe to sounds of weeping.

But what is man's lot from God above, his inheritance from the Almighty on high? | Is it not calamity for the unrighteous, and woe for evildoers? | Does he not see my ways, and number 30, 18-23: God treats Job roughly.

31, 2-37: This is the famous soliloquy of Job's examination of conscience, one of the Old Testament ethical summits. Job again proclaims his innocence and, therefore, his suffering is unmerited. This solemn confession is comparable to the Negative Confession of the Egyptian Book of the Dead.

6 all my steps? | Let God weigh me in the scales of justice; thus will he know my innocence!
5 If I have walked in falsehood and my foot has hastened to 7 deceit; | if my steps have turned out of the way, and my heart
8 has followed my eyes, or any stain clings to my hands, | then may I sow, but another eat of it, or may my planting be rooted up!
38 If my land has cried out against me till its very furrows 40 complained; | if I have eaten its produce without payment and 10 grieved the hearts of its tenants; | then let the thistles grow instead of wheat and noxious weeds instead of barley!
1 If I have made an agreement with my eyes and entertained 9 any thoughts against a maiden; | if my heart has been enticed toward a woman, and I have lain in wait at my neighbor's door; 10 | then may my wife grind for another, and may others cohabit
11 with her! | For that would be heinous, a crime to be condemned;
12 | a fire that should burn down to the abyss till it consumed all my possessions to the roots.
13 Had I refused justice to my manservant or to my maid, when 14 they had a claim against me, | what then should I do when God rose up; what could I answer when he demanded an 5 account? | Did not he who made me in the womb make him?
Did not the same One fashion us before our birth?
6 Have I denied anything to the poor, or allowed the eyes of 7 the widow to languish | while I ate my portion alone, with no 8 share in it for the fatherless, | though like a father God has reared me from my youth, guiding me even from my mother's womb?
9 What wanderer have I seen without clothing, or poor man 10 without covering, | whose limbs have not blessed me when warmed with the fleece of my sheep?
11 If I have raised my hand against the innocent because I saw 12 that I had supporters at the gate, | then may my arm fall from 13 the shoulder, my forearm be broken at the elbow! | For the dread of God will be upon me, and his majesty will overpower me.
14 Had I put my trust in gold or called fine gold my security; | 15 or had I rejoiced that my wealth was great, or that my hand had acquired abundance—16 Had I looked upon the sun as it shone, or the moon in the 17 splendor of its progress, | and had my heart been secretly

31, 21: Gate; see 5, 4b n.
31, 26-28: Job was never a sun or moon worshiper. Waft them a kiss: an idolatrous gesture.

enticed to waft them a kiss with my hand; | this too would be a crime for condemnation, for I should have denied God above.
Had I rejoiced at the destruction of my enemy or exulted when evil fell upon him, | even though I had not suffered my mouth to sin by uttering a curse against his life—Had not the men of my tent exclaimed, "Who has not been fed with his meat!" | Because no stranger lodged in the street, but I opened my door to wayfarers—Had I, out of human weakness, hidden my sins and buried my guilt in my bosom | because I feared the noisy multitude and the scorn of the tribes terrified me—then I should have remained silent, and not come out of doors!
Oh, that I had one to hear my case, and that my accuser would write out his indictment! | Surely, I should wear it on my shoulder or put it on me like a diadem; | of all my steps I should give him an account; like a prince I should present myself before him. This is my final plea; let the Almighty answer me! The words of Job are ended.

VI. ELIU'S SPEECHES

Then the three men ceased to answer Job, because he was righteous in his own eyes. But the anger of Eliu, son of Barachel the Buzite, of the family of Ram, was kindled. He was angry with Job for considering himself rather than God to be in the right. He was angry also with the three friends because they had not found a good answer and had not condemned Job. But since these men were older than he, Eliu bided his time before addressing Job. When, however, Eliu saw that there was no reply in the mouths of the three men, his wrath was inflamed. So Eliu, son of Barachel the Buzite, spoke out and said:

I am young and you are very old; therefore I held back and was afraid to declare to you my knowledge. | Days should 31, 36: Wear it on my shoulder: wear it with pride.

31, 37: Prince: not like a cringing lawbreaker.

32—37: The majority of biblical scholars consider the six chapters of Eliu's four speeches (32—33; 34; 35; 36—37) as an addition to the book of Job by a different hand. Eliu's speeches interrupt Job's challenge to God (31, 37), and God's reply (ch. 38). Eliu's style and vocabulary differ from the rest of the book. The problem of the Eliu speeches is: Why did the author add these speeches here? Some say that Eliu's contribution to the traditional theory of the three friends against Job is the discipline of suffering, i.e., God instructs man through suffering. Other scholars say that this notion was already embodied in the dialogue. However, chs. 32—33 are the most important of Eliu's speeches.

8 speak, I thought, and many years teach wisdom! | But it is a spirit in man, the breath of the Almighty, that gives him under-9 standing. | It is not those of many days who are wise, nor the 10 aged who understand the right. | Therefore I say, hearken to me; let me too set forth my knowledge!
11 Behold, I have waited for your discourses, and have given 12 ear to your arguments. | Yes, I followed you attentively as you searched out what to say; and behold, there is none who has convicted Job, not one of you who could refute his statements. | 13 Yet do not say, "We have met wisdom. God may vanquish him 14 but not man!" | For had he addressed his words to me, I should not then have answered him as you have done.
15 They are dismayed, they make no more reply; words fail 16 them. | Must I wait? Now that they speak no more, and have 17 ceased to make reply, | I too will speak my part; I also will show my knowledge!
18 For I am full of matters to utter; the spirit within me com-19 pels me. | Like a new wineskin with wine under pressure,
20 my bosom is ready to burst. | Let me speak and obtain relief;
21 let me open my lips, and make reply. | I would not be partial 22 to anyone, nor give flattering titles to any. | For I know nought of flattery; if I did, my Maker would soon take me away.

1 Therefore, O Job, hear my discourse, and hearken to all my 2 words. | Behold, now I open my mouth; my tongue and my
3 voice form words. | I will state directly what is in my mind, 4 my lips shall utter knowledge sincerely; | for the spirit of God has made me, the breath of the Almighty keeps me alive.
5 If you are able, refute me; draw up your arguments and 6 stand forth. | Behold I, like yourself, have been taken from the 7 same clay by God. | Therefore no fear of me should dismay you, nor should my presence weigh heavily upon you.
8 But you have said in my hearing, as I listened to the sound of 9 your words: | "I am clean and without transgression; I am
10 innocent; there is no guilt in me. | Yet he invents pretexts
11 against me and reckons me as his enemy. | He puts my feet in the stocks; he watches all my ways!" 12 In this you are not just, let me tell you; for God is greater 13 than man. | Why, then, do you make complaint against him
14 that he gives no account of his doings? | For God does speak, perhaps once, or even twice, though one perceive it not.
15 In a dream, in a vision of the night, [when deep sleep falls 16 upon men] as they slumber in their beds, | it is then he opens

17 the ears of men and as a warning to them, terrifies them; | by turning man from evil and keeping pride away from him, | 18 he withholds his soul from the pit and his life from passing to the grave.
19 Or a man is chastened on his bed by pain and unceasing 20 suffering within his frame, | so that to his appetite food becomes repulsive, and his senses reject the choicest nourish-21 ment. | His flesh is wasted so that it cannot be seen, and his 22 bones, once invisible, appear; | his soul draws near to the pit, his life to the place of the dead.
23 If then there be for him an angel, one out of a thousand, a mediator, to show him what is right for him and bring the man 24 back to justice, | he will take pity on him and say, "Deliver him from going down to the pit; I have found him a ransom." 25 Then his flesh shall become soft as a boy's; he shall be again
26 as in the days of his youth. | He shall pray and God will favor
27 him; he shall see God's face with rejoicing. | He shall sing before men and say, "I sinned and did wrong, yet he has not 28 punished me accordingly. | He delivered my soul from passing to the pit, and I behold the light of life."
29 Lo, all these things God does, twice, or thrice, for a man, | 30 bringing back his soul from the pit to the light, in the land of 31 the living. | Be attentive, O Job; listen to me! Be silent and I
32 will speak. | If you have aught to say, then answer me. Speak 33 out! I should like to see you justified. | If not, then do you listen to me; be silent while I teach you wisdom.

34

1 Then Eliu continued and said:
2 Hear, O wise men, my discourse, and you that have knowl-
3 edge, hear me! | For the ear tests words, as the taste does food. | 4 Let us discern for ourselves what is right; let us learn between 5 us what is good. | For Job has said, "I am innocent, but God
6 has taken what is my due. | Notwithstanding my right I am set at nought; in my wound the arrow rankles, sinless though I am."
7 What man is like Job? He drinks in blasphemies like water, | 8 keeps company with evildoers and goes along with wicked 9 men, | when he says, "It profits a man nought that he is pleasing to God."
10 Therefore, men of understanding, hearken to me: far be it from God to do wickedness; far from the Almighty to do wrong!
11 | Rather, he requites men for their conduct, and brings home to 33, 18: Pit: used several times, and here meaning sheol.

12 a man his way of life. | Surely, God cannot act wickedly, the 13 Almighty cannot violate justice. | Who gave him government 14 over the earth, or who else set all the land in its place? | If he were to take back his spirit to himself, withdraw to himself his 15 breath, | all flesh would perish together, and man would return to the dust.
16 Now, do you, O Job, hear this! Hearken to the words I 17 speak! | Can an enemy of justice indeed be in control, or will 18 you condemn the supreme Just One, | who says to a king, "You
19 are worthless!" and to nobles, "You are wicked!" | Who neither favors the person of princes, nor respects the rich more 20 than the poor? For they are all the work of his hands: | in a moment they die, even at midnight. He brings on nobles, and takes them away, removing the powerful without lifting a 21 hand; | for his eyes are upon the ways of man, and he beholds all his steps.
22 There is no darkness so dense that evildoers can hide in it. |
23 Therefore he discerns their works; he turns at night and crushes
23 them. | For he forewarns no man of his time to come before 24 God in judgment. | Without a trial he breaks the mighty, and 27 sets others in their stead, | because they turned away from him
28 and heeded none of his ways, | but caused the cries of the poor to reach him, so that he heard the plea of the afflicted.
29 If he remains tranquil, who then can condemn? If he hides 30.31 his face who then can behold him? | ..... | When 32 anyone says to God, "I was misguided; I will offend no more. | Teach me wherein I have sinned; if I have done wrong, I will do 33 so no more," | would you then say that God must punish, since you reject what he is doing? It is you who must choose, not I; speak, therefore, what you know.
34 Men of understanding will say to me, every wise man who 35 hears my views: | "Job speaks without intelligence, and his 36 words are without sense." | Let Job be tried to the limit, since 37 his answers are those of the impious; | for he is adding rebellion to his sin by brushing off our arguments and addressing many words to God.

35

1 Then Eliu proceeded and said:
2 Do you think it right to say, "I am just rather than God?" |
3 To say, "What does it profit me; what advantage have I more 34, 29. 30: The extant Hebrew text of these verses (as also of v. 26, which is not contained in the CCD translation) gives several added phrases that either represent duplication or are very obscure.

than if I had sinned?" | I have words for a reply to you and your three companions as well. | Look up to the skies and behold; regard the heavens high above you. | If you sin, what injury do you do to God? Even if your offenses are many, how do you hurt him? | If you are righteous, what do you give him, or what does he receive from your hand? | Your wickedness can affect only a man like yourself; and your justice only a fellow human being.

In great oppression men cry out; they call for help because of the power of the mighty, | saying, "Where is God, my Maker, who has given visions in the night, | taught us rather than the beasts of the earth, and made us wise rather than the birds of the heavens?" | Though thus they cry out, he answers not against the pride of the wicked.

But it is idle to say God does not hear or that the Almighty does not take notice. | Even though you say that you see him not, the case is before him; with trembling should you wait upon him. | But now that you have done otherwise, God's anger punishes, nor does he show concern that a man will die. | Yet Job to no purpose opens his mouth, and without knowledge multiplies words.

36

Eliu proceeded further and said:

Wait yet a little and I will instruct you, for there are still words to be said on God's behalf. | I will bring my knowledge from afar, and to my Maker I will accord the right. | For indeed, my theme cannot fail me: the one perfect in knowledge I set before you.

Behold, God rejects the obstinate in heart; he preserves not the life of the wicked. | He withholds not the just man's rights, but grants vindication to the oppressed, | and with kings upon thrones he sets them, exalted forever.

Or if they are bound with fetters and held fast by bonds of affliction, | then he makes known to them what they have done and their sins of boastful pride. | He opens their ears to correction and exhorts them to turn back from evil.

If they obey and serve him, they spend their days in pros-

35, 4: A reply to you: Eliu refers to Job's statement that the innocent suffer as much as the wicked, and especially to Eliphaz's words in 22, 2-3.

35, 14-15: The text here is uncertain. It seems to indicate that Job should have realized God's indifference is only apparent, and that, because he has not done so, God will punish him.

36, 5-21: Perhaps this section should be read between vv. 6 and 7 of ch. 34.

12 perity, their years in happiness. | But if they obey not, they perish; they die for lack of knowledge.
13 The impious in heart lay up anger for themselves; they cry 14 not for help when he enchains them; | therefore they expire in 15 youth, and perish among the reprobate. | But he saves the unfortunate through their affliction, and instructs them through 16-21 distress. | . . . . . | Take heed, turn not to evil; for you have preferred carousal to affliction.
22 Behold, God is sublime in his power. What teacher is there 23 like him? | Who prescribes for him his conduct, or who can 24 say, "You have done wrong"? | Remember, you should extol
25 his work, which men have praised in song. | All men contemplate it; man beholds it from afar.
26 Lo, God is great beyond our knowledge; the number of his 27 years is past seaching out. | He holds in check the waterdrops
28 that filter in rain through his mists, | till the skies run with 31 them and the showers rain down on mankind. | For by these he nourishes the nations, and gives them food in abundance.
29-30 Lo! he spreads the clouds in layers as the carpeting of his 32 tent. | In his hands he holds the lightning, and he commands it 33 to strike the mark. | His thunder speaks for him and incites the fury of the storm.

1 At this my heart trembles and leaps out of its place, |
2 to hear his angry voice as it rumbles forth from his mouth! |
3 Everywhere under the heavens he sends it, with his lightning, 4 to the ends of the earth. | Again his voice roars—the majestic sound of his thunder.
5 He does great things beyond our knowing; wonders past our 6 searching out. | For he says to the snow, "Fall to the earth";
7 likewise to his heavy, drenching rain. | He shuts up all man-
8 kind indoors; | the wild beasts take to cover and remain quietly in their dens.
9 Out of its chamber comes forth the tempest; from the north 10 winds, the cold. | With his breath God brings the frost, and 11 the broad waters become congealed. | With hail, also, the clouds are laden, as they scatter their flashes of light. | He it is who changes their rounds, according to his plans, in their task upon the surface of the earth, | whether for punishment or mercy, as he commands.

Hearken to this, O Job! Stand and consider the wondrous works of God! | Do you know how God lays his commands upon them, and makes the light shine forth from his clouds? | Do you know how the clouds are banked, the wondrous work of him who is perfect in knowledge? | You, whom the streams of water fail when a calm from the south comes over the land, | do you spread out with him the firmament of the skies, hard as a brazen mirror?
Teach us then what we shall say to him; we cannot, for the darkness, make our plea. | Will he be told about it when I speak, or when a man says he is being destroyed? | Nay, rather, it is as the light which men see not while it is obscured among the clouds, till the wind comes by and sweeps the clouds away.
From the North the splendor comes, surrounding God's awesome majesty! | The Almighty! we cannot discover him, preeminent in power and judgment; his great justice owes no one an accounting. | Therefore men revere him, though none can see him, however wise their hearts.

VII. THE LORD'S SPEECH

38

Then the Lord addressed Job out of the storm and said:
Who is this that obscures divine plans with words of ignorance? | Gird up your loins now, like a man; I will question you, and you tell me the answers! | Where were you when I founded the earth? Tell me, if you have understanding. | Who 37, 22: North: God's dwelling. The splendor: of God.

38—41: The position of the two Yahweh speeches, 38—39, and 40—41, with Job's replies, is a stroke of genius. The polemic wrangling of the dialogue sprinkled with Job's obstinate intent to meet and dispute with God are artistic preparations for Yahweh to appear "out of the storm" (38, 1) and dwarf the eloquent Job into speechless submission. It seems that, for this dramatic reason, among others, it is better to maintain that the same author who wrote the dialogue also wrote these two Yahweh speeches. However, most scholars hold that at least some parts of these two speeches were by the original fifth century author.

The first speech of the Lord excels any other biblical or non-biblical description of God as creator. Behind the words of the Lord we see the author adoring in profound awe God's wisdom and power in creation—the purpose of the two Yahweh speeches. Perhaps the second speech is given to stress God's power. See 40, 15—41, 26 n.

38, 3: Gird up your loins: prepare yourself for the debate.

determined its size; do you know? Who stretched out the meas-6 uring line for it? | Into what were its pedestals sunk, and who 7 laid the cornerstone, | while the morning stars sang in chorus and all the sons of God shouted for joy?
8 And who shut within doors the sea, when it burst forth 9 from the womb; | when I made the clouds its garment and 10 thick darkness its swaddling bands? | When I set limits for it 11 and fastened the bar of its door, | and said: Thus far shall you come but no farther, and here shall your proud waves be stilled!
12 Have you ever in your lifetime commanded the morning and 13 shown the dawn its place | for taking hold of the ends of the 14 earth, till the wicked are shaken from its surface? | The earth is changed as is clay by the seal, and dyed as though it were a 15 garment; | but from the wicked the light is withheld, and the arm of pride is shattered.
16 Have you entered into the sources of the sea, or walked 17 about in the depths of the abyss? | Have the gates of death been shown to you, or have you seen the gates of darkness? | 18 Have you comprehended the breadth of the earth? Tell me, if 19 you know all: | which is the way to the dwelling place of light, 20 and where is the abode of darkness, | that you may take them to their boundaries and set them on their homeward paths? | 21 You know, because you were born before them, and the number of your years is great!
22 Have you entered the storehouse of the snow, and seen the 23 treasury of the hail | which I have reserved for times of stress, 24 for the days of war and of battle? | Which way to the parting of the winds, whence the east wind spreads over the earth?
25 Who has laid out a channel for the downpour and for the 26 thunderstorm a path | to bring rain to no man's land, the un-27 peopled wilderness; | to enrich the waste and desolate ground till the desert blooms with verdure?
28 Has the rain a father; or who has begotten the drops of 29 dew? | Out of whose womb comes the ice, and who gives the 30 hoarfrost its birth in the skies, | when the waters lie covered as though with stone that holds captive the surface of the deep?
31 Have you fitted a curb to the Pleiades, or loosened the bonds
32 of Orion? | Can you bring forth the Mazzaroth in their season, 33 or guide the Bear with its train? | Do you know the ordinances of the heavens; can you put into effect their plan on the earth?

38, 7: Sons of God: angels as in 1, 6.
38, 21: A masterly divine irony.
38, 32: Mazzaroth: a Hebrew word probably signifying a southern constellation.

34 Can you raise your voice among the clouds, or veil yourself
35 in the waters of the storm? | Can you send forth the lightnings 37 on their way, or will they say to you, "Here we are"? | Who counts the clouds in his wisdom? Or who tilts the water jars of 38 heaven | so that the dust of earth is fused into a mass and its clods made solid?
39 Do you hunt the prey for the lioness or appease the hunger 40 of her cubs, | while they crouch in their dens, or lie in wait in 41 the thicket? | Who provides nourishment for the ravens when their young ones cry out to God, and they rove abroad without food?

1 Do you know about the birth of the mountain goats, watch 2 for the birth pangs of the hinds, | number the months that they 3 must fulfill, and fix the time of their bringing forth? | They crouch down and bear their young; they deliver their progeny in 4 the desert. | When their offspring thrive and grow, they leave and do not return.
5 Who has given the wild ass his freedom, and who has loosed 6 him from bonds? | I have made the wilderness his home and 7 the salt flats his dwelling. | He scoffs at the uproar of the city,
8 and hears no shouts of a driver. | He ranges the mountains for pasture and seeks out every path of green.
9 Will the wild ox consent to serve you, and to pass the nights 10 by your manger? | Will a rope bind him in the furrow, and will 11 he harrow the valleys after you? | Will you trust him for his 12 great strength and leave to him the fruits of your toil? | Can you rely on him to thresh out your grain and gather in the yield of your threshing floor?
38,36 Who puts wisdom in the heart, and gives the cock its 39,13 understanding? | The wings of the ostrich beat idly; her
14 plumage is lacking in pinions. | When she leaves her eggs on 15 the ground and deposits them in the sand, | unmindful that a foot may crush them, that the wild beasts may trample them, | 16 she cruelly disowns her young and ruthlessly makes nought of 17 her brood; | for God has withheld wisdom from her and has 18 given her no share in understanding. | Yet in her swiftness of foot she makes sport of the horse and his rider.

splendor? | Do you make the steed to quiver while his thunderous snorting spreads terror? | He jubilantly paws the plain and rushes in his might against the weapons. | He laughs at fear and cannot be deterred; he turns not back from the sword.
| Around him rattles the quiver, flashes the spear and the javelin. | Frenzied and trembling he devours the ground; he holds not back at the sound of the trumpet, | but at each blast he cries, "Aha!" Even from afar he scents the battle, the roar of the chiefs and the shouting.

The Lord then said to Job: Will we have arguing with the Almighty by the critic? Let him who would correct God give answer!
Then Job answered the Lord and said:
Behold, I am of little account; what can I answer you? I put my hand over my mouth. | Though I have spoken once, I will not do so again; though twice, I will do so no more.
Then the Lord addressed Job out of the storm and said: Gird up your loins now, like a man. I will question you, and you tell me the answers! | Would you refuse to acknowledge my right? Would you condemn me that you may be justified?
Have you an arm like that of God, or can you thunder with a voice like his? | Adorn yourself with grandeur and majesty, and array yourself with glory and splendor. | Let loose the fury of your wrath; | tear down the wicked and shatter them.
Bring down the haughty with a glance; | bury them in the dust together; in the hidden world imprison them. | Then will I too acknowledge that your own right hand can save you.
See, besides you I made Behemoth, that feeds on grass like an ox. | Behold the strength in his loins, and his vigor in the sinews of his belly. | He carries his tail like a cedar; the sinews

40, 15: Behemoth: commonly interpreted as hippopotamus.

18 of his thighs are like cables. | His bones are like tubes of bronze; his frame is like iron rods.
19 He came at the beginning of God's ways, and was made the 20 taskmaster of his fellows; | for the produce of the mountains is brought to him, and of all wild animals he makes sport. |
21 Under the lotus trees he lies, in coverts of the reedy swamp. | 22 The lotus trees cover him with their shade; all about him are 23 the poplars on the bank. | If the river grows violent, he is not disturbed; he is tranquil though the torrent surges about his mouth.
25 Can you lead about Leviathan with a hook, or curb his 26 tongue with a bit? | Can you put a rope into his nose, or pierce
27 through his cheek with a gaff? | Will he then plead with you, 28 time after time, or address you with tender words? | Will he make an agreement with you that you may have him as a slave 29 forever? | Can you play with him, as with a bird? Can you put 30 him in leash for your maidens? | Will the traders bargain for him? Will the merchants divide him up?
31 Can you fill his hide with barbs, or his head with fish spears?

other conflict!

2 Is he not relentless when aroused; who then dares stand 1 before him? | Whoever might vainly hope to do so need only
3 see him to be overthrown. | Who has assailed him and come off safe—who under all the heavens?
4 I need hardly mention his limbs, his strength, and the fitness 5 of his armor. | Who can strip off his outer garment, or pene-6 trate his double corselet? | Who can force open the doors of 7 his mouth, close to his terrible teeth? | Rows of scales are on 8 his back, tightly sealed together; | they are fitted each so close
9 to the next that no space intervenes; | so joined one to another that they hold fast and cannot be parted.

40, 25: Leviathan: is here described as a crocodile for which the Hebrews had no term. Stripped of the poetic imagery (for which see 7, 12 n), the sense is: Can you, Job, create the world as I did?

from his mouth.
14 Strength abides in his neck, and terror leaps before him. |
15.16 His heart is hard as stone; his flesh, as the lower millstone. | 17 When he rises up, the mighty are afraid; the waves of the sea fall back.
18 Should the sword reach him, it will not avail; nor will the 19 spear, nor the dart, nor the javelin. | He regards iron as straw, 20 and bronze as rotten wood. | The arrow will not put him to 21 flight; slingstones used against him are but straws. | Clubs he esteems as splinters; he laughs at the crash of the spear.
22 His belly is sharp as pottery fragments; he spreads like a 23 threshing sledge upon the mire. | He makes the depths boil like 24 a pot; the sea he churns like perfume in a kettle. | Behind him he leaves a shining path; you would think the deep had the 25 hoary head of age. | Upon the earth there is not his like, in-26 trepid he was made. | All, however lofty, fear him; he is king over all proud beasts.

1 Then Job answered the Lord and said:
2 I know that you can do all things, and that no purpose of 3 yours can be hindered. | I have dealt with great things that I do not understand; things too wonderful for me, which I can-4 not know. | I had heard of you by word of mouth, but now my 6 eye has seen you. | Therefore I disown what I have said, and repent in dust and ashes.

VIII. EPILOGUE

7 Job's Restoration And it came to pass after the Lord had spoken these words to Job, that the Lord said to Eliphaz the Themanite, "I am angry with you and with your two friends;

41, 17: The text here is uncertain.

42, 2-6: In the current Hebrew text, this final utterance of Job is interrupted by words ascribed to God (vv. 3-4) which are in large part a duplication of 38, 2-3.

God does not answer Job's questions in His two speeches nor does He accept the traditional opinion of the friends (42, 7), but He overawes Job with examples of His wisdom and power. Therefore, because He does not punish the wicked, it does not mean that He is powerless or unjust. Job believes that God is acting correctly and his submissive attitude shows that he is consoled because he knows that God loves him, and not because his good conduct merited this love, for Yahweh never mentions his innocent conduct in spite of Job's insistence on it.

42, 7-17: Since the Prologue (chs. 1—2) and the Epilogue comprise for you have not spoken rightly concerning me, as has my 8 servant Job. Now, therefore, take seven bullocks and seven rams, and go to my servant Job, and offer up a holocaust for yourselves; and let my servant Job pray for you; for his prayer I will accept, not to punish you severely. For you have not 9 spoken rightly concerning me, as has my servant Job." Then Eliphaz the Themanite, and Baldad the Sueite, and Sophar the Naamite, went and did as the Lord had commanded them. And the Lord accepted the intercession of Job.

10 Also, the Lord restored the prosperity of Job, after he had prayed for his friends; the Lord even gave to Job twice as much 11 as he had before. Then all his brethren and his sisters came to him, and all his former acquaintances, and they dined with him in his house. They condoled with him and comforted him for all the evil which the Lord had brought upon him; and each one gave him a piece of money and a gold ring.
12 Thus the Lord blessed the latter days of Job more than his earlier ones. For he had fourteen thousand sheep, six thousand camels, a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she-asses.
13.14 And he had seven sons and three daughters, | of whom he called the first Jemima, the second Cassia, and the third Ceren-15 happuch. In all the land no other women were as beautiful as the daughters of Job; and their father gave them an inheritance 16 among their brethren. After this, Job lived a hundred and forty years; and he saw children, his grandchildren, and even his 17 great-grandchildren. Then Job died, old and full of years.

for the most part the prose folktale embodying the traditional teaching that God rewards the just and punishes the wicked on earth, what does the fifth century author mean by closing his work with this folktale? His whole dialogue (chs. 3—31) shows he does not hold the traditional theory taught in the Epilogue, namely: that God returns a doublefold temporal prosperity to Job as a reward for his virtue. Scholars are still searching for the answer. Some hypotheses are: perhaps the fifth century author wants his readers to understand this temporal prosperity as a symbol of God's love, or perhaps the author with masterly irony wants the readers to contrast the simple "solution" of the folktale with the profound "solution" of the Yahweh speeches.

42, 7: The three friends of Job (Eliu is ignored in the Epilogue) are criticized by the Lord because they had leveled false charges against him.

42, 11: Gold ring: for the nose or ear.

42, 14: Job's daughters had names symbolic of their charms: Jemima, dove; Cassia, precious perfume; Ceren-happuch, cosmetic jar.

42, 16: As his other rewards were twice as much as he had before (v. 10), so Job's hundred and forty years were double the expected span of human life.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS

INTRODUCTION

The Psalter is a collection of one hundred and fifty psalms written by mostly unknown authors. The psalms are divided into five books, perhaps intentionally modeled after the five books of the Pentateuch. Besides this artificial reason for the division there is no other.

The writing of the psalms began before the time of David. Their final incorporation into the Hebrew Bible dates from about 200 B.C. During the centuries they underwent retouches. The tide turns against the opinion that some psalms were composed during the second century B.C. Machabean era. Opposed to this view are scholars who claim that there were no new psalms written after the fifth century B.C. At first, the psalms existed separately, and only gradually they grew from small to large collections. The date of the writing of individual psalms is usually unknown. In the annotations to the psalms an attempt is made to state the general opinion of scholars on the date. When no date is mentioned it means that the scholars find the psalm too vague to be dated. Scholars admit that David organized the liturgy, took the initiative in the use of the psalm form, and wrote some of the psalms. Yet they do not know, even in round numbers, how many he wrote. David is regarded as the author of the whole Psalter, as Moses is considered to be the author of the Pentateuch (see Introduction to the Pentateuch).

The "titles" of the psalms are not considered inspired because they were written by later writers. These titles give information on the tone in which the psalm is to be sung, but it means nothing to us because we do not know anything about this ancient music. The titles also mention the musical instruments which are to accompany the psalm, the name of the composer, the "historical" occasion. Scholars do not readily give credence to these titles when they offer information about the date of the psalm. About one third of the psalms are not attributed to any author. The titles are printed here in smaller type.

The psalms are written in Hebrew poetry which has a line (stich) as its basic external unit. Two or three stichs form a verse. Strophes or stanzas vary in size because they are determined by the thought units or meaning. Perhaps the most fundamental quality of Hebrew poetry is its rhythm, that is, a succession of stressed and unstressed syllables, according to the rise and fall of the voice. There are usually three or four stresses (accents or beats) which determine a line. The amount of unstressed syllables between two stressed syllables is ruled by euphony and Hebrew laws of pronunciation. Therefore, Hebrew poetry has not a true meter as in western poetry, in which a standard number of long and short syllables determine a line. The most outstanding characteristic of Hebrew poetry is parallelism, i.e., the balance of the idea or the meaning corresponds with the verse or stanza construction. The parallelism may be synonymous when the second line, verse or stanza more or less repeats the first. An example of this is Ps 2, 4. There is an antithetic parallelism when the lines, verses or stanzas are contrasted (Ps 1, 6).

Lastly, the parallelism is called synthetic when the thought in the first line, verse or stanza is elaborated upon in the second and following lines (Ps 3, 5).

The classification of the psalms is a most complex problem. Thanks to H. Gunkel it is proven that the psalms follow a limited number of fixed patterns. The psalmists wrote according to these well-known traditional structures. Consequently, biblical students try to classify the psalms according to literary forms. In ascertaining the literary form the scholars are not only guided by literary characteristics of style and motifs but they are influenced, as the inspired psalmists were, by the situations of life which brought about the composition of the psalms and by influences liturgical or otherwise (see, e.g., Ps 23, 1-10 n). Regarding liturgical influence, it is not correct to say that all psalms were originally written for use in the temple liturgy, though some of them were. Many psalms were originally written for an individual; only by and by did they become community psalms (see, e.g., Ps 24, 22 n). In the fifth or fourth century B.C. the Psalter probably became the community hymnal of the temple.

Experts at times depart from classifying according to literary form and classify psalms in accordance with the content matter, for example, royal psalms are labeled thus because they deal with kings (see Pss 19—20). There is a wide diversion of opinion on the kinds and number of psalms. Some common categories are: hymns, laments, thanksgiving psalms, wisdom ("didactic," "sapiential") psalms, Messianic psalms, and mixed types, a category for the psalms that do not fit into a definite grouping. The second and third of the types are often divided into individual and collective ("public," "national"). Messianic (see Ps 2, 1-12 n) and wisdom psalms are so classified according to content. Usually wisdom psalms extol wisdom under one aspect or another as in the Wisdom books. Sometimes a lesson from history is proposed as wisdom (see, e.g., Ps 77, 1-72 n) but more often wisdom psalms are concerned with some aspect of the problem of evil or retribution. These psalms grapple with the problem of why the evil prosper and the just suffer. The numerous minor groups of psalms, for example, psalms of Yahweh-King, psalms of Sion, will be treated in their appropriate places in the annotations.

Hymns, or psalms of praise (e.g., Ps 28), are structured by an introduction (an invitation to praise God), a body (a development of the reason(s) for the praise), and a conclusion (often a reinvitation to praise God).

Laments are structured by an appeal to Yahweh, a complaint usually against enemies, a petition, and a vow to praise God. Often there is an abrupt transition from the petition to the vow of thanksgiving for the favorable reply to the petition. One theory to explain the abrupt change is that the psalm was written during the trouble in question, but spoken in the temple at a later time (see Ps 6, 2-11 n). Sometimes psalms of trust are differentiated from psalms of lament because the trust is more predominant than the complaint (see Ps 22).

Psalms of thanksgiving (see Ps 17) are structured according to an invitation, often veiled, to thank God, the account of the event for which the thanksgiving psalm was composed, and a concluding reinvitation to praise God.

The influence of the psalms is carried over into the New Testament where they are quoted 116 times. The early Church continued the tradition of praying the psalms which is still felt in the present liturgy. The piety of Christendom and the literature and arts of various Christian peoples bear the imprint of the Psalter. Even today, besides the Gelineau Psalms, the psalms are heard in recordings of Mendelssohn, Monteverdi, etc.

Main divisions of the Book of Psalms are:

1. Book One, Psalms 1—40
2. Book Two, Psalms 41—71
3. Book Three, Psalms 72—88
4. Book Four, Psalms 89—105
5. Book Five, Psalms 106—150

PSALM 1

1 True Happiness Happy the man who follows not the counsel of the wicked, nor walks in the way of sinners, nor 2 sits in the company of the insolent, | but delights in the 3 law of the Lord and meditates on his law day and night. | He is like a tree planted near running water, that yields its fruit in due season, and whose leaves never fade. [Whatever he does, prospers.]
4 Not so the wicked, not so; they are like chaff which the wind 5 drives away. | Therefore in judgment the wicked shall not 6 stand, nor shall sinners, in the assembly of the just. | For the Lord watches over the way of the just, but the way of the wicked vanishes.

PSALM 2

1 The Universal Reign of the Messia Why do the nations
2 rage and the peoples utter folly? | The kings of the earth rise

1, 1-6: The psalm was either composed independently or transposed here by the last editor of the Psalter as a preface to the entire collection of psalms. The purpose of the psalm is to encourage the readers or singers to practice the Mosaic Law in spite of hardships. Since the theme is on retribution of the good and wicked, we may classify this psalm as sapiential. See Introduction to the Book of Psalms.

2, 1-12: This is the first psalm which echoes and develops the royal Messianic prophecy of 2 Sm 7, 8-16 n; the others are Pss 44; 71; 88; and 109. Many moderns hold that this psalm does not predict that a divine Messia called Christ will come hundreds of years later and rule over a spiritual kingdom forever, but that the psalm speaks of a historical king, a successor of David, before the sixth century exile. In this modern view the psalm was most likely written to celebrate his accession to the throne of David. But—and this is characteristic of the up, and the princes conspire together against the Lord and 3 against his anointed: | "Let us break their fetters and cast their bonds from us!"

4 He who is throned in heaven laughs; the Lord derides them. |
5 Then in anger he speaks to them; he terrifies them in his wrath:
6 | "I myself have set up my king on Sion, my holy mountain."
7 I will proclaim the decree of the Lord: the Lord said to me, 8 "You are my son; this day I have begotten you. | Ask of me and I will give you the nations for an inheritance and the ends 9 of the earth for your possession. | You shall rule them with an iron rod; you shall shatter them like an earthen dish."

royal Messianic psalms—the poet describes the historical reigning king insofar as he embodies all the hopes and ideals of the Davidic line. See table: Royal Messianism, pp. 1265-1267.

2, 1-3: It was customary in ancient days that whenever a new king succeeded to the throne the subject nations would try to regain their liberty (v. 3). The poet puts vv. 1-2 on the lips of the new king. The question has often been asked among scholars: how explain such a bombastic style referring to a puny Judean king as though he were as great as the world rulers of Egypt and Babylon? The moderns answer that the royal psalmists borrowed this court style from their imperialistic neighbors because each Judean king was the successor of David and hence embodied the promise of God to David through Nathan that the dynasty would endure forever. The hyperbolic court style was a fit instrument to convey this divine promise.

2, 4-5: The poet pictures God in the strategic security of heaven scornfully laughing in the manner of a typical mighty oriental despot and bellowing in angry wrath, by alluding to Nathan's prophecy wherein God promised David an enduring line of kingly successors which no enemy would annihilate.

2, 7: The inspired poet then makes the king speak and repeat the decree or prophecy with which God adopted David and his successors as His sons in the moral sense. This is the meaning of "this day I have begotten you." God has adopted the whole Davidic dynasty on the day of David's enthronement; "this day" refers to the time of God's promise to David and his successors, through Nathan. The "day" is renewed each time a successor of David becomes king.

2, 8: The psalmist makes the historical king elaborate on the promise of Yahweh that the king will rule the "nations" and the "ends of the earth." This elaboration seems to be more than a hyperbole, more than an imitation of oriental court style, and suggests more than the greatest extensions of the kingdoms of David and of Solomon. Here the psalmist makes the kingdom of David co-extensive with God's world-wide domain. The psalmist hopes that some day the Davidic king will rule the world in the political sense, without excluding the spiritual sense, but under the protection of God and as His representative. This would be a partial fulfillment of God's promise to Nathan. This notion of world-wide rule is the first significant development of Nathan's prophecy.

2, 9: The king is described as an oriental conquerer ruling with an "iron rod," and shattering his enemies like a piece of pottery.

10 And now, O kings, give heed; take warning, you rulers of the 11 earth. | Serve the Lord with fear, and rejoice before him; with 12 trembling | pay homage to him, lest he be angry and you perish from the way, when his anger blazes suddenly. Happy are all who take refuge in him!

PSALM 3

Trust in God in Time of Danger

1 A psalm of David, when he fled from his son Absalom.
2 O Lord, how many are my adversaries! Many rise up against 3 me! | Many are saying of me, "There is no salvation for him
4 in God." | But you, O Lord, are my shield; my glory, you lift up my head!
5 When I call out to the Lord, he answers me from his holy 6 mountain. | When I lie down in sleep, I wake again, for the 7 Lord sustains me. | I fear not the myriads of people arrayed against me on every side.
8 Rise up, O Lord! Save me, my God! For you strike all my enemies on the cheek; the teeth of the wicked you break. | 9 Salvation is the Lord's! Upon your people be your blessing!

PSALM 4

Joyful Confidence in God

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm of David.
2 When I call, answer me, O my just God, you who relieve me when I am in distress; have pity on me, and hear my prayer!

2. 10-12: The psalmist turns to the rebel kings of the nations to exhort them to peace. The poet urges the peoples to pay "homage" (v. 12), which literally means in Hebrew "kiss his feet." In the Orient this is the highest mark of respect from subjects to their kings, for it is a sign of subjection. The last line—indicating happiness for those who take refuge in God—is inserted to avoid ending with a threat.

3. 2-9: This song centers on aging king David fleeing from Jerusalem, and his rebellious son, Absalom, who was marching upon Jerusalem to install himself as king. See 2 Sm 15—17. The dominating motif is David's profound trust in God. Hence this psalm may be categorized as a psalm of trust.

3. 3: When David quotes his enemies, who speak of him as abandoned by God, he is summarizing the curse of Shemei, a chauvinistic Benjaminite supporter of king Saul. Shemei cursed and pelted David on the road to exile (see 2 Sm 16, 5-13).

3. 8: Rise up: the opening word of an ancient Mosaic victory march (Dtn 10, 35). Since teeth are the weapons of beasts, the poet is metaphorically petitioning God to disarm his enemies.

4. 2-9: The psalmist thanks God for having recently helped him overcome a grave unidentified trial. He prayerfully encourages his close followers who seem shaken in their confidence in God for apparently

3 Men of rank, how long will you be dull of heart? Why do 4 you love what is vain and seek after falsehood? | Know that the Lord does wonders for his faithful one; the Lord will hear 5 me when I call upon him. | Tremble, and sin not; reflect, upon 6 your beds, in silence. | Offer just sacrifices, and trust in the Lord.
7 Many say, "Oh, that we might see better times!" O Lord, 8 let the light of your countenance shine upon us! | You put gladness into my heart, more than when grain and wine abound.
9 | As soon as I lie down, I fall peacefully asleep, for you alone,
O Lord, bring security to my dwelling.

PSALM 5

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; with wind instruments. A psalm of David.
2 Hearken to my words, O Lord, attend to my sighing. |
3 Heed my call for help, my king and my God! To you I pray, | 4 O Lord; at dawn you hear my voice; at dawn I bring my plea expectantly before you.

allowing such an unjust misfortune to befall the holy psalmist (v. 3). The underlying presupposition of the psalmist seems to be that God rewards the holy with material prosperity and punishes the wicked with poverty and troubles. Later revelation was to correct this earthly thinking.

4, 4: The Lord has favored the psalmist with a spectacular demonstration of mercy.

4, 5-6: The bard seems to say to his followers: "Don't sin by doubting God's faithfulness, but reflect in prayer upon your beds in the silence of the night. To return to God's good graces for doubting His help, offer the prescribed sacrifices."

4, 7: The discouraged doubters clamor for happier days (than those recently experienced) by alluding to the blessing of the high priest: "The Lord bless you and keep you . . . and let his face shine upon you" (Nm 6, 24-26).

4, 8: The pessimism of the poet's friends contrasts with the exuberance of the poet's personal experience of God, who makes him happier than the joy of the rich harvest. The loud festivities of harvest and wine treading were the most intense expression of joy for the peasants.

4, 9: In the original Hebrew of this verse, the rhythm is as reposeful as is the thought of this delicate expression of absolute confidence in God's help alone.

5, 2-13: After the reign of David in the tenth century B.C. the temple service continued to be well organized. Here an unknown Levite, engaged in temple service and an assistant of the priest in the temple, prays this psalm at dawn. He is lamenting because of his enemies, and because of the crimes committed against the Law of God. The Levite asks for guidance.

5, 4: The sacred songster pleads for God's attention and help at dawn because, according to several psalmists, it is the privileged time for divine favors.

5 For you, O God, delight not in wickedness; no evil man 6 remains with you; | the arrogant may not stand in your sight.
7 You hate all evildoers; | you destroy all who speak falsehood;
the bloodthirsty and the deceitful the Lord abhors.
8 But I, because of your abundant kindness, will enter your house; I will worship at your holy temple in fear of you, | 9 O Lord; because of my enemies, guide me in your justice; make straight your way before me.
10 For in their mouth there is no sincerity; their heart teems with treacheries. Their throat is an open grave; they flatter with their 11 tongue. | Punish them, O God; let them fall by their own devices; for their many sins, cast them out because they have rebelled against you.
12 But let all who take refuge in you be glad and exult forever.
Protect them, that you may be the joy of those who love your 13 name. | For you, O Lord, bless the just man; you surround him with the shield of your good will.

PSALM 6

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments, "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.
2 O Lord, reprove me not in your anger, nor chastise me in 3 your wrath. | Have pity on me, O Lord, for I am languishing;

5, 6: The poet represents God as a king forbidding a proud courtier to stand in his presence.

5, 9: In biblical terms, a holy man is one who follows the straight path.

5, 10: Although they flatter me outwardly, if thoughts could kill, they would swallow me to death.

5, 11: May God punish the evildoers because to harm a follower of Yahweh is to rebel against God Himself. This passage and many similar ones in the Psalter are known as the cursing or imprecatory psalms. See Jer 12, 3 n.

5, 12: The poet ends mildly by expressing with some certainty that God has answered him with joy and protection, as He answers everyone who seeks shelter in His name, i.e., in His Person.

6, 2-11: In this lamentation a sick man implored God for help against his enemies. It was probably written at the time of David in the tenth century B.C. The abrupt switch from pleading to the certainty that God has heard his prayer (v. 9) may be explained thus: This psalm was composed during the distress of the poet but it was delivered before the congregation in the temple after God had answered his plea.

This is the first of the seven Penitential Psalms. The others are: Pss 31, 37, 50, 101, 129, 142. Christian tradition from at least the sixth century has labeled them penitential because they arouse sorrow for sin. Hear the recording of The Seven Penitential Songs of David by Orlando di Lasso.

heal me, O Lord, for my body is in terror; | my soul, too, is utterly terrified; but you, O Lord, how long . . . ?
Return, O Lord, save my life; rescue me because of your kindness, | for among the dead no one remembers you; in the nether world who gives you thanks?
I am wearied with sighing; every night I flood my bed with weeping; I drench my couch with my tears. | My eyes are dimmed with sorrow; they have aged because of all my foes.
Depart from me, all evildoers, for the Lord has heard the sound of my weeping; | the Lord has heard my plea; the Lord has accepted my prayer. | All my enemies shall be put to shame in utter terror; they shall fall back in sudden shame.

PSALM 7

An Appeal to the Divine Judge

A plaintive song of David, which he sang to the Lord because of Chus the Benjaminite.
O Lord, my God, in you I take refuge; save me from all my pursuers and rescue me, | lest I become like the lion's prey, to be torn to pieces, with no one to rescue me.
O Lord, my God, if I am at fault in this, if there is guilt on my hands, | if I have repaid my friend with evil, I who spared those who without cause were my foes— | let the enemy pursue and overtake me; let him trample my life to the ground, and lay my glory in the dust.

6, 4: In an elliptical exclamation for "How long will it be before you answer my prayer?" the poet complains that not only his body (v. 5) but his soul is also in excruciating distress.

6, 5: He requests God to "return" and save his life because God seems to have abandoned him. The inspired composer appeals to God's description of Himself as "kind" in Ex 34, 6-7: "The Lord, the Lord, a merciful and gracious God, slow to anger, and rich in kindness and fidelity, continuing his kindness for a thousand generations. . . ."

6, 6: He urges his plea, which is found in several psalms: "Lord, if I die, you will be the loser, so to speak, because you will not receive any more praise or thanksgiving from me as you will if you let me live and frequent the temple." At that time the nether world was thought of as a dreary place where people led a weak, shadowy existence, and where there was no homage paid to God as in the lavish ceremonies of the temple.

6, 9: Suddenly, from deep desolation the songwriter passes to full confidence that God has heard his prayer. See Ps 6, 2-11 n.

6, 11: He considers himself as embarrassing his enemies because of his victory over them, insofar as God has answered him.

7, 2-18: This psalm may very well refer to that period of David's life when he was hunted by king Saul from cave to cave along the coast of the Dead Sea. The poem re-echoes the sentiments of David as an unjustly persecuted and calumniated man.

7 Rise up, O Lord, in your anger; rise against the fury of my 8 foes; wake to the judgment you have decreed. | Let the assembly of the peoples surround you; above them on high be enthroned.
9 | [The Lord judges the nations.] Do me justice, O Lord, because I am just, and because of the innocence that is mine. | 10 Let the malice of the wicked come to an end, but sustain the just, O searcher of heart and soul, O just God.
11 A shield before me is God, who saves the upright of heart;
12 | a just judge is God, a God who punishes day by day. | 13 Unless they be converted, God will sharpen his sword; he will 14 bend and aim his bow, | prepare his deadly weapons against them, and use fiery darts for arrows.
15 He who conceived iniquity and was pregnant with mischief, 16 brings forth failure. | He has opened a hole, he has dug it 17 deep, but he falls into the pit which he has made. | His mischief shall recoil upon his own head; upon the crown of his 18 head his violence shall rebound. | I will give thanks to the Lord for his justice, and sing praise to the name of the Lord Most High.

PSALM 8

The Majesty of God and the Dignity of Man

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of David.
2 O Lord, our Lord, how glorious is your name over all the earth! You have exalted your majesty above the heavens. | 3 Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings you have fashioned

7, 8-10: David calls for a public court hearing in front of all the nations and the Israelites to decide that he is not guilty.

7, 12-14: He depicts God as the warrior-judge who punishes daily. The "fiery darts" may refer to burning arrows discharged into a besieged town.

7, 18: On the sudden thank you of this closing doxology see Ps 6, 2-11 n.

8, 2-10: This psalm is a hymn celebrating God's glory as refracted through creation. It is possible that this hymn is a fragment of a larger poem. It was adapted to liturgical use by the addition of an antiphon at the beginning and at the end by a later hand. Notice that the antiphon is in the plural "our" and the body of the psalm is in the singular "I." The original author borrowed his ideas mostly from Genesis and Job. He was in contact with a milieu where these ideas circulated before being written down. His psalm emanates from the religious life of his people and the "publication" of his hymn reintroduces the psalm to the religious community. It was written shortly before the exile of the sixth century. It would be anachronistic to read the hymn as though the poet were intending to prove the existence of God through the works of creation.

8, 3: The implicit testimony of praise of the child is a silent refutation of God's foes who are hostile to His kingdom.

praise because of your foes, to silence the hostile and the vengeful. | When I behold your heavens, the work of your fingers,
the moon and the stars which you set in place— | what is man that you should be mindful of him, or the son of man that you should care for him?
You have made him little less than the angels, and crowned him with glory and honor. | You have given him rule over the works of your hands, putting all things under his feet: | all sheep and oxen, yes, and the beasts of the field, | the birds of the air, the fishes of the sea, and whatever swims the paths of the seas. | O Lord, our Lord, how glorious is your name over all the earth!

PSALM 9A

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Hostile Nations

For the leader; according to Muth labben. A psalm of David.
I will give thanks to you, O Lord, with all my heart; I will declare all your wondrous deeds. | I will be glad and exult in you; I will sing praise to your name, Most High, | because my enemies are turned back, overthrown and destroyed before you.
For you upheld my right and my cause, seated on your throne, judging justly. | You rebuked the nations and destroyed the wicked; their name you blotted out forever and ever. |

8, 7: The power of ruling is described by the Semitic gesture of victory—"putting all things under his feet."

8, 10: The antiphon is repeated as at the beginning. Notice that the antiphon sings the grandeur of God; the body of the hymn sings the goodness and magnificence of God.

9A, 2-21: Ps 9 of the Vulgate consists of two parts (A and B), each of which forms a separate psalm (Pss 9 and 10) in the current Hebrew text. In favor of the original unity of this psalm is its alphabetic character, now partially lost in the poorly preserved text; the first letter of each stanza (of two couplets apiece) originally followed the order of the Hebrew alphabet consecutively throughout both halves of the psalm. The poem speaks of the lot of the poor folk, the humble and faithful people of Yahweh who are oppressed by the merciless rich. In fact, this psalm, taken together with the following psalm, has been called "the canticle of the Poor Folk of Yahweh." See So 2, 3 n. The inspired song writer does not reason logically but rejoices lyrically, moans, prays, and hopes. The writer begins with his own case. After thanking God for deliverance from his enemies, he pens some general considerations of the misdeeds of the wicked. He asks God to punish them and he imparts hope for deliverance to the poor folk. The song may date from the Persian period (sixth-fourth centuries B.C.).

Because of the literary necessity of following the artificial alphabetic structure the thoughts are usually loosely connected. The other alphabetic psalms are: 24, 32, 33, 36, 110, 111, 118, 144.

9A, 6-7: Because of the personal victory God granted him, the bard

7 The enemies are ruined completely forever; the remembrance of the cities you uprooted has perished.
8 But the Lord sits enthroned forever; he has set up his throne
9 for judgment. | He judges the world with justice; he governs 10 the peoples with equity. | The Lord is a stronghold for the 11 oppressed, a stronghold in times of distress. | They trust in you who cherish your name, for you forsake not those who seek you, O Lord.
12 Sing praise to the Lord enthroned in Sion; proclaim among 13 the nations his deeds; | for the avenger of blood has remembered; he has not forgotten the cry of the afflicted.
14 Have pity on me, O Lord; see how I am afflicted by my foes, 15 you who have raised me up from the gates of death, | that I may declare all your praises and, in the gates of the daughter of Sion, rejoice in your salvation.
16 The nations are sunk in the pit they have made; in the snare 17 they set, their foot is caught; | in passing sentence, the Lord is manifest; the wicked are trapped by the work of their own hands.
18 To the nether world the wicked shall turn back, all the 19 nations that forget God. | For the needy shall not always be forgotten, nor shall the hope of the afflicted forever perish. | 20 Rise, O Lord, let not man prevail; let the nations be judged 21 in your presence. | Strike them with terror, O Lord; let the nations know that they are but men.

PSALM 9B (10)

1 Prayer for Help against Oppressors Why, O Lord, do 2 you stand aloof? Why hide in times of distress? | Proudly the wicked harass the afflicted, who are caught in the devices the wicked have contrived.

---

begins to recall numerous executions of the wicked, which Yahweh performed in the past, and the destruction of their cities.

9A, 12: Sion: Jerusalem is painted as the center of God's glorious world empire.

9A, 13-15: The reason for this exhortation is Yahweh's intervention in favor of the oppressed poor folk. The songster then returns to his personal case and to the motive of his thanksgiving: he was at the brink of death when God reprieved him so that he could sing His glory in Jerusalem (often called "the daughter of Sion"). Note the antithesis between the gates of death and the gates of Jerusalem.

9A, 16-17: The hymn continues with the renewed declaration (vv. 6-7) of the capitulation of the haughty whose snares have boomeranged, and of the triumph of Yahweh's justice, at least for the poet.

9B, 1-18: The background is the same as that of Psalm 9A since the two psalms are really one.

3 For the wicked man glories in his greed, and the covetous 4 blasphemes, sets the Lord at nought. | The wicked man boasts,
"He will not avenge it"; "There is no God," sums up his 5 thoughts. | His ways are secure at all times; your judgments 6 are far from his mind; all his foes he scorns. | He says in his heart, "I shall not be disturbed; from age to age I shall be without misfortune." 7 His mouth is full of cursing, guile and deceit; under his 8 tongue are mischief and iniquity. | He lurks in ambush near the villages; in hiding he murders the innocent; his eyes spy 9 upon the unfortunate. | He waits in secret like a lion in his lair; he lies in wait to catch the afflicted; he catches the afflicted 10 and drags them off in his net. | He stoops and lies prone till 11 by his violence fall the unfortunate. | He says in his heart,
"God has forgotten; he hides his face, he never sees." 12 Rise, O Lord! O God, lift up your hand! Forget not the 13 afflicted! | Why should the wicked man despise God, saying in 14 his heart, "He will not avenge it"? | You do see, for you behold misery and sorrow, taking them in your hands. On you the unfortunate man depends; of the fatherless you are the helper.
15 | Break the strength of the wicked and of the evildoer; punish their wickedness; let them not survive.
16 The Lord is king forever and ever; the nations have perished
17 out of his land. | The desire of the afflicted you hear, O Lord; 18 strengthening their hearts, you pay heed | to the defense of the fatherless and the oppressed, that man, who is of earth, may terrify no more.

9B, 4: Although the wicked live like practical atheists, it would be anachronistic to say that they did not believe in the existence of God.

9B, 7: Paul, in Rom 3, 14, says that we are all sinners whom God has freely redeemed.

9B, 12-13: Lift up your hand: the poet asks God to exercise His power both to strike down the impious and to protect the holy poor people.

9B, 15: Let them not survive: the poet is echoing the sentiments of his era about the working of God's justice, since he is not aware of the existence of hell in the afterlife and can think of no other way in which God's justice might be exercised in this life.

9B, 16-18: Since Yahweh-King is so powerful that He drove the original settlers of Palestine out of the land (v. 16), is He not powerful enough to punish the haughty wicked people who, after all, are only men "of earth"? (v. 18).

PSALM 10 (11)

Unshaken Confidence in God

1 For the leader. Of David.
2 In the Lord I take refuge; how can you say to me, "Flee to the mountain like a bird! For, see, the wicked bend the bow; they place the arrow on the string to shoot in the dark at the upright 3 of heart. | When the pillars are overthrown, what can the just man do?"
4 The Lord is in his holy temple; the Lord's throne is in heaven.
5 His eyes behold, his searching glance is on mankind. | The Lord searches the just and the wicked; the lover of violence he 6 hates. | He rains upon the wicked fiery coals and brimstone;
7 a burning blast is their allotted cup. | For the Lord is just, he loves just deeds; the upright shall see his face.

PSALM 11 (12)

Prayer against Evil Tongues

1 For the leader; "upon the eighth." A psalm of David.
2 Help, O Lord! for no one now is dutiful; faithfulness has 3 vanished from among men. | Everyone speaks falsehood to his neighbor; with smooth lips they speak, and double heart.
4 May the Lord destroy all smooth lips, every boastful tongue, 5 | those who say, "We are heroes with our tongues; our lips are our own; who is lord over us?"

10, 1-7: This is a psalm of trust. The poet is in dire straits and the wicked are apparently victorious. His advisers counsel flight, but instead of losing confidence he trusts in God.

Henceforth there will mostly be two different numbers for the psalms. The first number is the numeration of the Psalter according to the Vulgate and the Septuagint (Greek) Bible; the second number (in parenthesis) is the numeration according to the Hebrew Bible.

10, 1: The bard refuses the advice to flee like a bird.

10, 3: When these pillars, i.e., law, order and justice, are overthrown, as in this case, what can a just man do but flee?

10, 4-5: The poet answers that his counselor considers only human means, whereas he looks with trust to God.

10, 6: Alluding to the fate of Sodom and Gomorra, the poet exclaims that God rains fiery coals and brimstone on the wicked as their "allotted cup," i.e., as their destiny.

10, 7: The holy "will see his face" after the manner of a courtier admitted before his king.

11, 1-9: The psalm is an individual's lament. The poet is a poor man of Yahweh who bemoans the general corruption of his day. He asks God to remedy the situation. The song may very well have been written before the exile of the sixth century B.C.

11, 3: Double heart: their words do not express what they are really thinking.

11, 4: See Ps 5, 11 n.

6 "Because they rob the afflicted, and the needy sigh, now will I arise," says the Lord; "I will grant safety to him who longs for it."
7 The promises of the Lord are sure, like tried silver, freed 8 from dross, sevenfold refined. | You, O Lord, will keep us and 9 preserve us always from this generation, | while about us the wicked strut and in high place are the basest of men.

PSALM 12 (13)

Prayer of One in Sorrow

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 How long, O Lord? Will you utterly forget me? How long 3 will you hide your face from me? | How long shall I harbor sorrow in my soul, grief in my heart day after day? How long 4 will my enemy triumph over me? | Look, answer me, O Lord, my God!
Give light to my eyes that I may not sleep in death lest my 5 enemy say, | "I have overcome him"; lest my foes rejoice at 6 my downfall | though I trusted in your kindness. Let my heart rejoice in your salvation; let me sing of the Lord, "He has been good to me."

PSALM 13 (14)

A Lament over Widespread Corruption

1 For the leader. Of David.
The fool says in his heart, "There is no God." Such are corrupt; they do abominable deeds; there is not one who does 2 good. | The Lord looks down from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there be one who is wise and seeks God. | 3 All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse; there is not one who does good, not even one.

12, 2-6: This psalm is another lament of an individual. The composer has been suffering for a long time with no respite. Two items add salt to his wounds: the "obstinate" silence of God and the vigilance of his enemies.

This psalm it fittingly used in the Mass for a happy death.

13, 1-7: This is an individual lament about the general corruption of the day. It was probably written during the Babylonian exile of the sixth century B.C. This psalm is about the same as Ps 52.

13, 1: The psalmist laments that the fool thinks, "says in his heart," that God apparently does not reward the virtuous and punish the offenders. On the existence of God see Ps 9B, 4 n.

13, 2: Seeks God: to inquire what God prescribes and proscribes.

13, 3: Paul, in Rom 3, 11-12, sees in this verse the description of man's sin, which cannot be effaced except by the redeeming blood of Christ.

4 Will all these evildoers never learn, they who eat up my people just as they eat bread? They have not called upon the 5 Lord; | then they shall be in great fear, for God is with the 6 just generation. | You would confound the plans of the afflicted, but the Lord is his refuge.
7 Oh, that out of Sion would come the salvation of Israel!
When the Lord restores the well-being of his people, then shall Jacob exult and Israel be glad.

PSALM 14 (15)
The Guest of God

1 A psalm of David.
O Lord, who shall sojourn in your tent? Who shall dwell on your holy mountain?
2 He who walks blamelessly and does justice; who thinks the 3 truth in his heart | and slanders not with his tongue; who harms not his fellow man, nor takes up a reproach against his 4 neighbor; | by whom the reprobate is despised, while he honors those who fear the Lord; who, though it be to his loss, changes 5 not his pledged word; | who lends not his money at usury and accepts no bribe against the innocent.
He who does these things shall never be disturbed.

13, 7: Most probably a later poet added, for liturgical purposes, a supplication for the end of the exile in Babylon. This wish is a generalized yearning for salvation coming from Jerusalem. By salvation the poet means the restoration of that moral well-being which will truly rejoice the heart of Jacob, i.e., Israel.

14, 1-5: This sacred song was probably sung at the arrival of the pilgrims at Jerusalem but it is not a pilgrim song as described in Ps 119, 1-7 n. The pilgrims would sing the first verse and the priests and Levites would answer the rest of the psalm. It was originally written as a sort of catechism to facilitate learning and remembering. We may categorize this pre-exilic psalm as sapiential because of its rich moral instructions.

14, 1: The pilgrims ask God: "Who is worthy to live in your tent?" They allude to the ancient makeshift dwelling originally used during the sojourn in the Sinai desert, and are indirectly calling God's attention to themselves, since they will pitch their tents on the "holy mountain" of Jerusalem. A modern counterpart exists in the Arabs residing in Mecca near the Caaba. They are called "the clients of Allah."

14, 2-4: The priests and Levites answer the question of v. 1 by means of a little moral code.

14, 5: A true pilgrim does not engage in bribery nor in usury. The Jews were not allowed to practice usury among themselves but only with foreigners. Bribing in courts of law was a constant plague in the Orient. Usury and bribery were two of the most frequent violations of justice. The poet concludes that he who follows this moral code will never be disturbed because he will always experience the friendship of God.

PSALM 15 (16)

God the Supreme Good

A miktam of David.

Keep me, O God, for in you I take refuge; | I say to the Lord, "My Lord are you. Apart from you I have no good." | How wonderfully has he made me cherish the holy ones who are in his land! | They multiply their sorrows who court other gods. Blood libations to them I will not pour out, nor will I take their names upon my lips. | O Lord, my allotted portion and my cup, you it is who hold fast my lot. | For me the measuring lines have fallen on pleasant sites; fair to me indeed is my inheritance.

I bless the Lord who counsels me; even in the night my heart exhorts me. | I set the Lord ever before me; with him at my right hand I shall not be disturbed. | Therefore my heart is glad and my soul rejoices, my body, too, abides in confidence; | because you will not abandon my soul to the nether world, nor will you suffer your faithful one to undergo corruption. | You will show me the path to life, fullness of joys in your presence, the delights at your right hand forever.

PSALM 16 (17)

Prayer against Persecutors

A prayer of David.

Hear, O Lord, a just suit; attend to my outcry; hearken to 15, 1-11: Instead of laying his complaints before God the psalmist asserts his sincere trust in Him. This psalm of trust was probably written in the fifth century B.C.

15, 5: The poet implies that the idolators may choose their idols, but he chooses the Lord, "my allotted portion." God is compared to a choice parcel of land assigned to the poet. By "my cup" the poet compares God to food or sustenance, the preserver of man's life. He entrusts his destiny ("lot") to the Lord.

15, 6: This is a touching Semitic idiomatic verse to express complete surrender and dedication of oneself to God. The bard alludes to the custom of dividing the land into equal parts and then assigning a part to each claimant.

15, 8: At my right hand: with God as his protector.

15, 10: The poet is happy because God will not allow him to die and corrupt.

15, 11: The Hebrew text does not speak of resurrection. Not only will the psalmist be delivered from bodily death; he will be accorded life. The "fullness of joys in your presence" are those joys which God bestows upon His servants, especially those connected with His cult and temple service. All these joys will constitute the delights "at your right hand forever," i.e., the delights of the divine protection over him for the rest of his life.

16, 1-15: The psalmist, exposed to the hostility of wicked men, my prayer from lips without deceit. | From you let my judgment come; your eyes behold what is right. | Though you test my heart, searching it in the night, though you try me with fire, you shall find no malice in me. | My mouth has not transgressed | after the manner of man; according to the words of your lips I have kept the ways of the law. | My steps have been steadfast in your paths, my feet have not faltered.

I call upon you, for you will answer me, O God; incline your ear to me; hear my word. | Show your wondrous kindness, O savior of those who flee from their foes to refuge at your right hand. | Keep me as the apple of your eye; hide me in the shadow of your wings | from the wicked who use violence against me.

My ravenous enemies beset me; | they shut up their cruel hearts, their mouths speak proudly. | Their steps even now surround me; crouching to the ground, they fix their gaze, | like lions hungry for prey, like young lions lurking in hiding.

Rise, O Lord, confront them and cast them down; rescue me by your sword from the wicked, | by your hand, O Lord, from mortal men: from mortal men whose portion in life is in this world, where with your treasures you fill their bellies. Their sons are enriched and bequeath their abundance to their little ones. | But I in justice shall behold your face; on waking, I shall be content in your presence.

cries to God for assistance in the form of a psalmodic lament. Since some Hebrew terms in the psalm are similar to terms in the preceding one, both psalms have been considered as stemming from the same milieu but at different dates. This psalm was probably written some time after the exile.

16, 4: The author may remind a Christian of the Pharisee in Luke's Gospel (18, 11): "O God, I thank you that I am not like the rest of men, robbers, dishonest, adulterers." But the Pharisee thought he was holy because he observed the external minutiae of all the legal laws. The psalmist does not boast of legal purity but of interior rectitude, as is apparent from v. 3, where he bares the thoughts and desires of his heart to God for examination.

16, 8: In the song of Moses (Dt 32, 10-11), both images depict God's protecting love for His treasured people.

16, 11-12: These enemy-images are common in the psalms.

16, 13: The sword may refer to God's justice.

16, 14: This very obscure verse may mean that the enemies are prosperous and will bequeath their wealth to their progeny.

16, 15: In contrast, the bard sings in his righteousness that he shall "behold your face," a formula which means "to attend the temple services." "On waking" from my illness and troubles, "I shall be content in your presence" at the temple where I can contemplate you. Worshiping at the temple was a great joy to the pious Hebrews. The author is not thinking of the afterlife because vv. 8-9 and 11-13 show him solicitous about temporal life.

PSALM 17 (18)

Thanksgiving for Help and Victory

1 For the leader. Of David, the servant of the Lord, who sang to the Lord the words of this song when the Lord had rescued him from the grasp of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul.
2.3 I love you, O Lord, my strength, | O Lord, my rock, my fortress, my deliverer. My God, my rock of refuge, my shield, 4 the horn of my salvation, my stronghold! | Praised be the Lord,
I exclaim, and I am safe from my enemies.
5 The breakers of death surged round about me, the destroying 6 floods overwhelmed me; | the cords of the nether world en-
7 meshed me, the snares of death overtook me. | In my distress
I called upon the Lord and cried out to my God; from his temple he heard my voice, and my cry to him reached his ears.
8 The earth swayed and quaked; the foundations of the moun-9 tains trembled and shook when his wrath flared up. | Smoke rose from his nostrils, and a devouring fire from his mouth that 17, 2-51: The psalm, one of the longest and most beautiful of the Psalter, is an individual's song of thanksgiving. The author is a professional court poet. The hero of his song is one of the last kings of Juda, who lived about the seventh century B.C. Most modern commentators say that this psalm does not speak of David. The author makes the king speak throughout the psalm. The psalm itself was composed to be sung at a thanksgiving feast following a victory of great moment in which God had recompensed this kingly hero for his fidelity by granting him victory over his enemies. It has aptly been called a royal Te Deum. See 2 Sm 22 for another version of this psalm.

17, 2: I love you: an unusual Hebrew praying formula, especially at the beginning of a psalm.

17, 3: Horn of my salvation: it means powerful savior.

17, 5-6: The images of oceanic breakers, destroying floods, cords of the nether world, and snares of death, are familiar biblical figures to express imminent death or a "close call." The peculiar "cords of the nether world" suggest that the nether world, or sheol, is a mysterious hunter with nooses and nets. In all these images the dominant role of water stems from the concept of sheol as a place surrounded by threatening waters beneath the earth.

17, 8-20: The elaborate theophany or description of the appearance of God is not a divine physical miraculous appearance. Through the eyes of faith the king perceives that God has helped him militarily and politically; consequently, with full poetic license the psalmist presents this aid as an external divine intervention in which the physical world has been disturbed. During the earthquake the "foundations of the mountains" (vv. 8, 16) shook. This evokes the concept of Hebrew cosmography in which the foundations are the bases of the two column-shaped mountains, at the two extremities of the flat earth, which uphold the blue vault of the heavens.

17, 8-9: The wrath of God means that He has pronounced judgment against the king's enemies. The smoke from Yahweh's nostrils and

11 came down, with dark clouds under his feet. | He mounted a 12 cherub and flew, borne on the wings of the wind. | And he made darkness the cloak about him; dark, misty rain-clouds his 13 wrap. | From the brightness of his presence coals were kindled 14 to flame. | And the Lord thundered from heaven, the Most 15 High gave forth his voice; | he sent forth his arrows to put 16 them to flight, with frequent lightnings he routed them. | Then the bed of the sea appeared, and the foundations of the world were laid bare, at the rebuke of the Lord, at the blast of the 17 wind of his wrath. | He reached out from on high and grasped my mighty enemy and from my foes, who were too powerful the fire from His mouth do not signify, for the Hebrew bard, that his readers should try to visualize God physically as an angry deity. The poet wants to express as vividly as possible the mental concept of the awfulness of God's ire. This distinctive Hebraic symbolism should not mislead western readers into an interpretation of these verses as crass anthropomorphisms.

17, 10: Using "dark clouds" as His dais, Yahweh seems thereby to incline, or lower, the heavens. Yahweh is said to "come down" when He enters the world to show His powers.

17, 11: God is poetically shown seated on a cherub as a throne propelled through space by the wind.

17, 12: Yahweh is covered to hide Himself from human eyes; this symbolizes the mystery of His approach.

17, 14: The Most High: this title referring to God as the supreme ruler of the universe is used twenty-one times in the Psalter.

17, 16: At the command of the Lord, represented as an angry rebuking blast of wind, the hidden bases of the world are exposed. This delicately symbolizes the ownership of God.

17, 17-20: God drew the sinking ruler out of the overwhelming flood of enemies because "He loves me." This expression is fraught with meaning if we recall Ps 2, 7 wherein God says of the successors of David, such as the hero-king of this psalm, "You are my son."

17, 21-28: The king is not boasting about his own merits; he is declaring that God rewards those who are faithful to Him.

17, 21: The Lord rewarded the king for his "justice," i.e., for doing the right thing, and for cleanness of hands, an idiom for correct conduct.

26 sight. | Toward the faithful you are faithful, toward the 27 wholehearted you are wholehearted, | toward the sincere you
28 are sincere, but toward the crooked you are astute; | for lowly 29 people you save but haughty eyes you bring low; | you indeed, O Lord, give light to my lamp; O my God, you brighten the 30 darkness about me; | for with your aid I run against an armed 31 band, and by the help of my God I leap over a wall. | God's way is unerring, the promise of the Lord is fire-tried; he is a shield to all who take refuge in him.
32 For who is God except the Lord? Who is a rock, save our 33 God? | The God who girded me with strength and kept my 34 way unerring; | who made my feet swift as those of hinds and 35 set me on the heights; | who trained my hands for war and my arms to bend a bow of brass.
36 You have given me your saving shield; your right hand has 37 upheld me, and you have stooped to make me great. | You 38 made room for my steps; unwavering was my stride. | I pursued my enemies and overtook them, nor did I turn again till I 39 made an end of them. | I smote them and they could not rise;
they fell beneath my feet.
40 And you girded me with strength for war; you subdued my 41 adversaries beneath me. | My enemies you put to flight before 42 me, and those who hated me you destroyed. | They cried for help—but no one saved them; to the Lord—but he answered 43 them not. | I ground them fine as the dust before the wind; like the mud in the streets I trampled them down.
44 You rescued me from the strife of the people; you made me

17, 28: Haughty eyes: one of the seven things which Yahweh abominates. See Prv 6, 6-19.

17, 29-31: The foregoing general procedures of God with faithful men (vv. 21-28) are exemplified in the king's life.

17, 29: Light to my lamp: the Oriental lit his tent or house with a lamp, which came to represent the life and happiness of the family.

17, 30: Leap over a wall: very likely, it meant to overcome an obstacle, rather than to besiege a town.

17, 32-35: A reflection by the poet. That which guarantees the trustworthiness of God's word ("promise" in v. 31) is the oneness of God. He is the one master of the world who alone is capable of realizing all the king's desires.

17, 34: God gave him the advantageous "heights" in time of war.

17, 42: Although some of the enemies may have invoked Yahweh, the author does not mean that they were fellow Israelites: they could have been pagans who, seeing the powerlessness of their own gods, despairingly cried to Yahweh.

17, 44-46: The Lord rescued the king's land from civil war and made him head over surrounding peoples, who perhaps sought an alliance with him after they heard of his fame.

head over nations; a people I had not known became my slaves;

47 The Lord live! And blessed be my Rock! Extolled be God my 48 savior. | O God, who granted me vengeance, who made peoples
49 subject to me | and preserved me from my enemies, truly above my adversaries you exalt me and from the violent man you have
50 rescued me. | Therefore will I proclaim you, O Lord, among 51 the nations, and I will sing praise to your name, | you who gave great victories to your king and showed kindness to your anointed, to David and his posterity forever.

PSALM 18 (19)

God's Glory in the Heavens and in the Law

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament
3 proclaims his handiwork. | Day pours out the word to day,
4 and night to night imparts knowledge; | not a word nor a 5 discourse whose voice is not heard; | through all the earth their voice resounds, and to the ends of the world, their message.

17, 47-49: These verses resume and develop the thought of the prelude (vv. 2-4).

17, 47: The Lord live!: the expression contrasts the living Yahweh with the dead idols of the neighboring pagans.

17, 50: Rom 15, 9 quotes this verse in connection with the conversion of the Gentiles.

18, 2-15: The psalm is a hymn to God the creator (vv. 2-7) and to God the legislator (vv. 8-15). Different from ordinary hymns which exhort the reader to praise God, this hymn simply affirms the glory of Yahweh. The author seems to have written this a long time after the cult of the stars presented an idolatrous temptation to the Israelites (before the exile of the sixth century B.C.). The author would not have hymned so glowingly about the sun if his own people had been lured to worship it. For this and other reasons, e.g., Aramaisms, the psalm seems to be postexilic (after the sixth century). The same author seems to have upturned both sides of a single coin to reveal his theme: the glory and wisdom of Yahweh displayed in the heavens and in the Mosaic Law. Speaking fancifully, Ps 18 is a comparison between God's two tomes: the book of nature and the book of Scriptures.

18, 3: Like alternating choirs, each night and each day chants to the succeeding day and night its knowledge of the glory of God.

18, 4: Not by sound or by human language, but by the universal heavenly language of a loud shout of day and a loud shout of night are God's works proclaimed.

18, 5-7: The sun is the most glorious and most sparkling voice in the soundless firmament. The poet imagines God pitching a tent "there" at the horizon as the abode for the sun which, emerging from its tent in the east, is compared to a bridegroom stepping forth from his bridal

6 He has pitched a tent there for the sun, | which comes forth like the groom from his bridal chamber and, like a giant, joy-7 fully runs its course. | At one end of the heavens it comes forth, and its course is to their other end; nothing escapes its heat.
8 The law of the Lord is perfect, refreshing the soul; the decree 9 of the Lord is trustworthy, giving wisdom to the simple. | The precepts of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the command 10 of the Lord is clear, enlightening the eye; | the fear of the Lord is pure, enduring forever; the ordinances of the Lord are true, 11 all of them just; | they are more precious than gold, than a heap of purest gold; sweeter also than syrup or honey from the comb.
12 Though your servant is careful of them, very diligent in 13 keeping them, | yet who can detect failings? Cleanse me from 14 my unknown faults! | From wanton sin especially, restrain your servant; let it not rule over me. Then shall I be blameless 15 and innocent of serious sin. | Let the words of my mouth and the thought of my heart find favor before you, O Lord, my rock and my redeemer.

PSALM 19 (20)
Prayer for the King in Time of War

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 The Lord answer you in time of distress; the name of the God
3 of Jacob defend you! | May he send you help from the sanc-
4 tuary, from Sion may he sustain you. | May he remember all chamber. This comparison suggests the freshness and splendor of the sun. The simile changes abruptly and the sun now is like a track star: he runs from one end of the race course to the other and his heat spills all over the universe.

18, 8-10: Although to the Jewish audience of the poet the law meant above all the teaching part of the law, it also included the exhortatory part with its promises and threats. Here, law is expressed by six synonyms.

18, 15: The thought of my heart: a Hebrew phrase denoting most sincere interior sentiments that words cannot express. This last verse, representing the leave-taking of the poet's praying soul from the presence of the Lord, resembles the formula with which the rite of sacrifice was performed. The composer of this hymn seems to be in the most perfect state of justice possible in the time of the Old Testament.

19, 2-10: The psalm belongs to the small category of royal psalms. An unknown Davidic king is preparing for some imminent battle some time before the sixth century B.C. The psalm is a liturgical celebration. The priests offer the sacrifice while the temple choir sings the entreating part of the psalm (vv. 2-5). After the sacrifice is complete and the priests have sung their certainty of victory (vv. 7-9), the petition is resumed (v. 10).

This psalm is used in the feast of Corpus Christi.

5 your offerings and graciously accept your holocaust. | May he grant you what is in your heart and fulfill your every plan. | 6 May we shout for joy at your victory and raise the standards in the name of our God. The Lord grant all your requests!
7 Now I know that the Lord has given victory to his anointed, that he has answered him from his holy heaven with the 8 strength of his victorious right hand. | Some are strong in chariots; some, in horses; but we are strong in the name of the 9 Lord, our God. | Though they bow down and fall, yet we stand erect and firm.
10 O Lord, grant victory to the king, and answer us when we call upon you.

PSALM 20 (21)

Thanksgiving and Prayers for the King

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 O Lord, in your strength the king is glad; in your victory how 3 greatly he rejoices! | You have granted him his heart's desire;
4 you refused not the wish of his lips. | For you welcomed him with goodly blessings, you placed on his head a crown of pure 5 gold. | He asked life of you: you gave him length of days for-6 ever and ever. | Great is his glory in your victory; majesty and 7 splendor you conferred upon him. | For you made him a blessing forever; you gladdened him with the joy of your presence. | 8 For the king trusts in the Lord, and through the kindness of the Most High he stands unshaken.
9 May your hand reach all your enemies, may your right hand 10 reach your foes! | Make them burn as though in a fiery furnace, when you appear. May the Lord consume them in his anger;
11 let fire devour them. | Destroy their fruit from the earth and 20, 2-14: The preceding royal psalm was a prayer requesting God's help on the eve of battle. This companion royal psalm is its answer: it is a prayer of joy for having received victory in battle. Both psalms refer to the same historical Judean king and his battle some time before the sixth century B.C. Further details are unknown.

20, 7: In Hebrew thinking, the victory is a sign of God's favor and presence.

20, 9-14: After the first part of the liturgical ceremony, which consisted in thanksgiving for victory, the choir directs its attention to Yahweh and His enemies.

20, 9: For the Hebrew mind, to oppose God's chosen people is to oppose Him.

20, 10-11: Rather than of raw hatred, the inspired writer is thinking more of God's justice which could be executed only through temporal punishment since God had not yet revealed eternal punishment and the New Testament doctrine on love of enemies.

12 their posterity from among men. | Though they intend evil
13 against you, devising plots, they cannot succeed, | for you shall put them to flight; you shall aim your shafts against them. | 14 Be extolled, O Lord, in your strength! We will sing, chant the praise of your might.

PSALM 21 (22)

Passion and Triumph of the Messia

1 For the leader; according to "The hind of the dawn." A psalm of David.

2 My God, my God, why have you forsaken me, far from my 3 prayer, from the words of my cry? | O my God, I cry out by day, and you answer not; by night, and there is no relief for me.
4 | Yet you are enthroned in the holy place, O glory of Israel! |
5 In you our fathers trusted; they trusted, and you delivered 6 them. | To you they cried, and they escaped; in you they trusted, and they were not put to shame.

7 But I am a worm, not a man; the scorn of men, despised by 8 the people. | All who see me scoff at me; they mock me with 9 parted lips, they wag their heads: | "He relied on the Lord; let him deliver him, let him rescue him, if he loves him." | 10 You have been my guide since I was first formed, my security at 11 my mother's breast. | To you I was committed at birth, from my mother's womb you are my God.

12 Be not far from me, for I am in distress; be near, for I have 21, 2-32: The psalm is the lamentation of an individual (vv. 2-22) followed by his thanksgiving (vv. 23-32). This holy psalmist is violently and unjustly persecuted for reasons unknown to us. The public "officials," and public opinion are against him. He appears close to death and so he turns to God. In contrast with other psalmists, he neither says that these sufferings are a result of his sins nor that he is innocent, nor does he curse his enemies with a desire for vengeance. He has dispositions which make him a model of his century and which still arouse our admiration. The psalmist wrote this originally about the sixth century B.C., although vv. 28-32 were probably added for temple usage by another hand after the sixth century.

21, 2: The author is not despairing. This is an exclamation from one who is suffering greatly because God seems too distant to hear his prayer. See Ps 21, 28-32 n.

21, 3: In those days, whether it was day or night, one would pray in a loud voice, and even shout.

21, 7-8: In contrast with the patriarchs whose prayers were answered (vv. 5-6), the poet who is in a muddy ditch or in a deep prison well, suffers so keenly that he resembles a worm more than a man. They mock me with parted lips: a mocking smile. (The chorus of the mocking crowd in Handel's "Messiah" is a most vivid interpretation of vv. 7-8.)

21, 9: See Ps 21, 28-32 n.

13 no one to help me. | Many bullocks surround me; the strong 14 bulls of Basan encircle me. | They open their mouths against me like ravening and roaring lions.
15 I am like water poured out; all my bones are racked. My heart has become like wax melting away within my bosom. | 16 My throat is dried up like baked clay, my tongue cleaves to my jaws; to the dust of death you have brought me down.
17 Indeed, many dogs surround me, a pack of evildoers closes in 18 upon me; they have pierced my hands and my feet; | I can count all my bones. They look on and gloat over me; | they divide my garments among them, and for my vesture they cast lots.
20 But you, O Lord, be not far from me; O my help, hasten to 21 aid me. | Rescue my soul from the sword, my loneliness from 22 the grip of the dog. | Save me from the lion's mouth; from the horns of the wild bulls, my wretched life.
23 I will proclaim your name to my brethren; in the midst of the 24 assembly I will praise you: | "You who fear the Lord, praise him; all you descendants of Jacob, give glory to him; revere 25 him, all you descendants of Israel! | For he has not spurned nor disdained the wretched man in his misery, nor did he turn his face away from him, but when he cried out to him, he heard 26 him." | So by your gift will I utter praise in the vast assembly;

21, 13: The bullocks symbolize the influential opponents of the poet, and the lions the leaders of these opponents. Basan, east of the Lake of Tiberias, was famous for its cattle.

21, 15: A melting heart is a biblical term for excruciating torments. The psalmist undergoes the experience of dying. This experience recalls Newman's "Dream of Gerontius:" "This emptying out of each constituent—And natural force, whereby I come to be."

21, 17: They have pierced my hands and my feet: this is the translation of ancient versions because the Hebrew text does not make good sense here. The poet compares his enemies to dogs surrounding him and piercing his hands and feet. Hungry dogs are a common sight in oriental cities. This is one of several biblical instances illustrating that the dogs were not considered "man's best friend."

21, 18: Bones: the English idiom would say "ribs."

21, 19: The suffering bard already visualizes himself as dead and his enemies dividing his garments and casting dice for his tunic. See Ps 21, 28-32 n.

21, 21-22: "Dog" may refer to the executioner since the "lion" refers apparently to the leader and "bulls" to the rulers.

21, 23-27: This section refers to the custom, then prevalent, of offering a thanksgiving sacrifice in the temple and narrating the favor received, after which the thankful devotee would invite his fellow worshipers to his sacrificial banquet. Naturally, this part was written after the poet overcame his trial, but apparently before its delivery in the temple.

27 I will fulfill my vows before those who fear him. | The lowly shall eat their fill; they who seek the Lord shall praise him
"May your hearts be ever merry!" 28 All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the Lord; all the families of the nations shall bow down before 29 him. | For dominion is the Lord's, and he rules the nations.
30 To him alone shall bow down all who sleep in the earth; before him shall bend all who go down into the dust. And to 31 him my soul shall live; | my descendants shall serve him. Let 32 the coming generation be told of the Lord | that they may proclaim to a people yet to be born the justice he has shown

PSALM 22 (23)

The Lord, Shepherd and Host

1 A psalm of David.
2 The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. | In verdant pastures he gives me repose; beside restful waters he leads me; 3 he refreshes my soul. He guides me in right paths for his name's
4 sake. | Even though I walk in the dark valley I fear no evil

21, 28-32: The last section does not seem to belong to the preceding part because of its different content. It may have been appended later for temple usage. It deals with the conversion of the Gentiles and God's universal reign. For an explanation see Ps 137, 4-6 n.

Most modern scholars refer the original literal meaning of this psalm to the suffering just man, as interpreted above. The suffering psalmist was intended by the Holy Spirit as a type of Christ since the evangelists quote generously from this psalm, apparently in the typical sense. Christ on the cross quoted the cry of anguish (v. 2) in Mt 27, 46 and parallel. Mt 27, 35 and parallels quoted v. 19 on the dividing of the garments as fulfilled in Christ. Mt 27, 43 quotes the derision from v. 9, used by Christ's enemies.

This psalm is appropriately used on Good Friday.

22, 1-6: The psalm is one of trust, written perhaps in the Persian period (sixth-fourth centuries B.C.) by an Old Testament saint. He delineates Yahweh's solicitude for his devotees under the allegorical diptych of a shepherd's care for his sheep (vv. 1-4) and of a host's generosity toward his guest (vv. 5-6). The figures designate the quiet materially happy life as a gift of God, but they also signify God's spiritual joys for those who serve Him faithfully. This is a preparation for the doctrine of everlasting happiness in heaven not yet revealed.

22, 2: In the East the shepherd never drives but always leads his sheep.

22, 3: For his name's sake: in biblical thinking God is a good shepherd who upholds His reputation by proving that He is what He claims to be toward His servants, namely: merciful, gracious, kind faithful (Ex 34, 6).

22, 4: In these valleys the sun scarcely penetrates, and they are usually infested with wild beasts and brigands. Rod: the shepherd is armed with a club, made of solid oak. Large nails are driven into it for for you are at my side with your rod and your staff that give me courage.

5 You spread the table before me in the sight of my foes; you 6 anoint my head with oil; my cup overflows. | Only goodness and kindness follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for years to come.

PSALM 23 (24)

more efficient protection. The handle is trimmed to fit the shepherd's hand. The hole in the end makes it possible for the shepherd to tie the club to his belt or to his wrist. The shepherd also has a crozier-like "staff" made of the same wood, but about six feet long. It is used in climbing over rocks, in breaking small branches, in tapping lazy sheep, and in fighting wild goats. He leans on it as he watches the sheep. For a development of v. 4, see Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress."

22, 5: The poet pictures God as a host and himself as a guest. Because of the scarcity of inns during Old Testament times, hospitality was a serious responsibility. It followed definite regulations and traditions—welcoming the guest as soon as he appeared, offering him water to wash his feet, and then offering him food and lodging. Even bitter enemies dared not offend or strike the visitor. According to the law of the desert, the host was responsible for the protection of his guest. And should he be murdered, his host had to avenge the pilgrim's death. In this case, to show the sincerity of the welcome, the host pours a bit of olive oil mixed with expensive perfumes on the head of his guest. It is a sign of predilection. Besides, the guest's "cup" of wine is kept replenished.

22, 6: God is so good that the poet would like to "dwell in the house of the Lord," not in the physical sense of living in the temple precincts but in the sense of being His intimate friend.

In the feast of Corpus Christi and in the Office of the Dead the best Christian commentary of Ps 22 is the parable of the Good Shepherd in Jn 10, 1-18.

23, 1-10: Many scholars assert that this psalm dates from the time of David in the tenth century B.C. The origin of the psalm was the liturgical celebration of the carrying of the Ark of the Covenant from its temporary abode in a neighboring town to its permanent abode in Jerusalem. All the details are narrated in 2 Sm 6. We may classify the psalm as a processional hymn.

23, 1: Since the Lord is about to enter in solemn procession to take official possession of His city, it is most fitting to sing the reason for which He is doing this: He is the owner not only of Jerusalem but of the world with all its inhabitants.

23, 2: He owns the world because He created it "upon the seas," a phrase alluding to the creation account in Genesis.

3 Who can ascend the mountain of the Lord? or who may 4 stand in his holy place? | He whose hands are sinless, whose heart is clean, who desires not what is vain, nor swears deceit-
5 fully to his neighbor. | He shall receive a blessing from the 6 Lord, a reward from God his savior. | Such is the race that seeks for him, that seeks the face of the God of Jacob.
7 Lift up, O gates, your lintels; reach up, you ancient portals,
8 that the king of glory may come in! | Who is this king of glory?
9 The Lord, strong and mighty, the Lord, mighty in battle. | Lift up, O gates, your lintels; reach up, you ancient portals, that 10 the king of glory may come in! | Who is this king of glory? The Lord of hosts; he is the king of glory.

PSALM 24 (25)
Prayer for Guidance and Help

1 Of David.
2 To you I lift up my soul, O Lord, | my God. In you I trust let me not be put to shame, let not my enemies exult over me. |
3 No one who waits for you shall be put to shame; those shall be put to shame who heedlessly break faith.
4 Your ways, O Lord, make known to me; teach me your 23, 3: The participants of the liturgy ask if they are worthy to enter the house of God on the mountain of Jerusalem.

23, 4: The response presents the conditions of worthiness. Sinless hands mean upright deeds. A clean heart means sincerity of intention, not the virtue of purity.

23, 7: The procession with the ark is at the entrance of the city; now is the solemn moment of taking possession of Jerusalem. The ark bearers stop and the priests outside ask the gates to lift up their lintels to allow God to enter, for they are too low. In a poetic flight of fancy the poet addresses the lintels and the portals in order to express God's dominion over the inanimate nature they represent.

23, 8: The priests from within the city gates ask, "Who is this king of glory?" The Lord . . . in battle: the response.

23, 9: The priests outside the gates again ask to allow the king of glory to enter.

23, 10: Again the priests inside inquire who He is and receive the final response: "The Lord of hosts," He who conquered this city through His people (as narrated in 2 Sm 6) now wants to take possession of His city.

24, 1-22: The psalm is the lamentation of an individual who is asking God for help against his enemies. Since the poem is "alphabetic," i.e., each couplet begins with the succeeding letter of the Hebrew alphabet, the thoughts are loosely connected. The last verse is excluded from this alphabetic arrangement. See Ps 9A, 2-21 n. The ideas and the language probably indicate a fifth century B.C. date.

24, 4-5: The liturgy throws in bold relief the suppliant tone of these verses by using them several times in Advent and Lent as antiphons of supplication.

5 paths, | guide me in your truth and teach me, for you are God
6 my savior, and for you I wait all the day. | Remember that your 7 compassion, O Lord, and your kindness are from of old. | The sins of my youth and my frailties remember not; in your kindness remember me, because of your goodness, O Lord.
8 Good and upright is the Lord; thus he shows sinners the way.
9 | He guides the humble to justice, he teaches the humble his way.
10 | All the paths of the Lord are kindness and constancy toward 11 those who keep his covenant and his decrees. | For your name's sake, O Lord, you will pardon my guilt, great as it is.
12 When a man fears the Lord, he shows him the way he 13 should choose. | He abides in prosperity, and his descendants 14 inherit the land. | The friendship of the Lord is with those 15 who fear him, and his covenant, for their instruction. | My eyes are ever toward the Lord, for he will free my feet from the snare.
16 Look toward me, and have pity on me, for I am alone and 17 afflicted. | Relieve the troubles of my heart, and bring me out
18 of my distress. | Put an end to my affliction and my suffering, 19 and take away all my sins. | Behold, my enemies are many, and 20 they hate me violently. | Preserve my life, and rescue me; let 21 me not be put to shame, for I take refuge in you. | Let integrity and uprightness preserve me, because I wait for you, O Lord.
22 Redeem Israel, O God, from all its distress!

PSALM 25 (26)

Prayer of an Innocent Man

1 Of David.
Do me justice, O Lord! for I have walked in integrity, and 24, 11: For your name's sake: for the sake of your "reputation." See 22, 3 n.

24, 12-13: When a man "fears the Lord," he practices his religion. See Prv 1, 7 n.

24, 15: My eyes are ever toward the Lord: this signifies a prayerful attitude.

24, 16-21: Although the last section of the psalm is a cry for pardon in general terms, the situation of the poet appears more grave than in the first part (vv. 1-7). The composer regards his affliction as punishment for his sins and therefore he asks God to pardon him so that his suffering will cease (v. 18). This is part of the temporal-retribution theory. Only gradually did God reveal that suffering on earth is not necessarily the result of one's sins.

24, 22: The final verse was added to the original song when it was used in the Jewish liturgy to ask for the welfare of the nation.

25, 1-12: The psalm is a lament of an unknown priest or Levite who seems to be asking God to help him in his illness. Some indications point to a sixth to fourth century B.C. date.

PSALM 26 (27)

Trust in God

1 Of David.
The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom should I fear?
The Lord is my life's refuge; of whom should I be afraid? | 2 When evildoers come at me to devour my flesh, my foes and 3 my enemies themselves stumble and fall. Though an army encamp against me, my heart will not fear; though war be waged upon me, even then will I trust.
4 One thing I ask of the Lord; this I seek: to dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, that I may gaze on the loveli-
5 ness of the Lord and contemplate his temple. | For he will hide me in his abode in the day of trouble; he will conceal me in the 6 shelter of his tent, he will set me high upon a rock. | Even now my head is held high above my enemies on every side. And I will offer in his tent sacrifices with shouts of gladness; I will sing and chant praise to the Lord.
7 Hear, O Lord, the sound of my call; have pity on me, and 8 answer me. | Of you my heart speaks; you my glance seeks;
9 your presence, O Lord, I seek. | Hide not your face from me; do not in anger repel your servant. You are my helper: cast me
10 not off; forsake me not, O God my savior. | Though my father and mother forsake me, yet will the Lord receive me.
11 Show me, O Lord, your way, and lead me on a level path, 12 because of my adversaries. | Give me not up to the wishes of my foes; for false witnesses have risen up against me, and such

26, 1-14: The psalm is a composite of two originally complete and distinct songs. The first song (vv. 1-6), is a psalm of trust in God. The author may have been a temple singer (see vv. 4-5). A scholarly guess dates vv. 1-6 between the sixth and fourth centuries B.C. The second song (vv. 7-14), is a psalm of trust written between the sixth and fourth centuries B.C. The writer is in danger of false witnesses (v. 12). Ps 26 is considered one of the most beautiful in the Psalter both for its literary value and for its lofty spiritual ideas.

26, 1-3: The Introit of the fourth Sunday after Pentecost uses these verses to remind us of the theme of confidence permeating the Pentecostal season.

26, 1: My light: this verse is in the antiphon of the fourth, fifth, and sixth Sundays after Pentecost, perhaps because of the spiritual "light" received on Pentecost.

26, 4: The poet's climactic request is to be Yahweh's guest at the temple.

26, 7-14: See Ps 26, 1-14 n.

26, 8: The poet looks suppliantly for the "presence" of Yahweh, i.e., for His aid.

26, 10: The comparison is the expression of a most intense trust in God when one is cast into the most miserable situations imaginable.

26, 11: On a level path: a path of safety from his adversaries.

2 in the Lord I trust without wavering. | Search me, O Lord, and try me; test my soul and my heart.
3 For your kindness is before my eyes, and I walk in your truth.
4 | I stay not with worthless men, nor do I consort with hypo-
5 crites. | I hate the assembly of evildoers, and with the wicked
6 I will not stay. | I wash my hands in innocence, and I go 7 around your altar, O Lord, | giving voice to my thanks, and 8 recounting all your wondrous deeds. | O Lord, I love the house in which you dwell, the tenting-place of your glory.
9 Gather not my soul with those of sinners, nor with men of 10 blood my life. | On their hands are crimes, and their right
11 hands are full of bribes. | But I walk in integrity; redeem me, 12 and have pity on me. | My foot stands on level ground; in the assemblies I will bless the Lord.

25, 4-8: The author portrays the holy man of his day. First, negatively (vv. 4-5), then positively (vv. 6-8).

25, 4-5: Here, as in Prv 1, 10ff, conduct (evil or good) is not conceived in an individual way. A man forms part of a class which he voluntarily joins. Only gradually through revelation did it become abundantly clear that each man is responsible for his own actions. See Ez 18, 1-32 n. Even today, many feel less guilty because "everyone is doing it."

25, 6-8: The poet develops the positive aspects of virtue, namely, religion and piety, but preceded by and accompanied with perfect integrity. "I wash my hands in innocence" is a very truthful declaration of innocence. Fidelity to the cult of Yahweh is also a positive hallmark of the holy man. We would say, "a fervent church-goer."

25, 6: The allusion to the cultic procession around the altar most probably shows that the poet was a priest or a Levite.

25, 7: The procession around the altar, an ancient rite of many Semitic religions, was accompanied with hymns of thanksgiving and of praise for God's "wondrous deeds." These deeds most likely refer to the Exodus from Egypt and the work of creation, since they loomed high in the Jewish prayers of the time. These hymns were sung by the temple choir with the congregation joining in.

25, 8: Even today, generally speaking, the Oriental has a greater flare for the liturgy than has the Westerner.

25, 9-10: The holy author characterizes the sinners as "men of blood," who accept bribes to condemn people to death.

25, 11: The author contrasts his correct conduct with that of the wicked but not in a pharisaical manner. He is simply conscious of the help he has received from God. On level ground: this is figurative language to express integrity of life.

At the "Lavabo" of the Mass, vv. 6-12 are recited. In the western liturgy this washing was not placed in the Mass because the priest had just finished receiving gifts, but it always symbolically meant a request for worthiness to perform such a deed as the consecration. This is the same symbolic sense as that of the psalmist.

13 as breathe out violence. | I believe that I shall see the bounty
14 of the Lord in the land of the living. | Wait for the Lord with courage; be stouthearted, and wait for the Lord.

PSALM 27 (28)

Petition and Thanksgiving

1 Of David.

To you, O Lord, I call; O my Rock, be not deaf to me, lest, if you heed me not, I become one of those going down into the 2 pit. | Hear the sound of my pleading, when I cry to you, lifting
3 up my hands toward your holy shrine. | Drag me not away with the wicked, with those who do wrong, who speak civilly
4 to their neighbors though evil is in their hearts. | Repay them for their deeds, for the evil of their doings. For the work of their
5 hands repay them; give them their deserts. | Because they consider not the deeds of the Lord nor the work of his hands, may he tear them down and not build them up.

6 Blessed be the Lord, for he has heard the sound of my plead-7 ing; | the Lord is my strength and my shield. In him my heart trusts, and I find help; then my heart exults, and with my song I give him thanks.

8 The Lord is the strength of his people, the saving refuge of 9 his anointed. | Save your people, and bless your inheritance; feed them, and carry them forever!

PSALM 28 (29)

God's Majesty in the Storm

1 A psalm of David.

Give to the Lord, you sons of God, give to the Lord glory

26, 13: The land of the living: on earth.

26, 14: Later, when this private psalm was made use of by the liturgy of the temple, v. 14 was added and addressed to those praying this psalm to exhort them to hope ("wait") and to confide in the Lord.

27, 1-9: The psalm is a lament of an individual written during the period of the monarchy, i.e. between the tenth to the sixth centuries B.C. The composer has probably been afflicted with a grievous illness.

27, 2: Lifting up my hands: many of the ancient peoples and the "orantes," "the praying ones," of the Roman catacombs prayed with outstretched hands. Shrine: the Holy of Holies in the temple.

27, 5: Tear them down: may God deprive them of a long life and "not build them up" through their descendants.

27, 6-7: The reason for the abrupt transition of thanksgiving for his cure may be that he is pronouncing this psalm at the temple after his cure and recalling his supplication.

27, 8-9: When this song became a congregational song, the last two verses were added as a prayer of intercession for the "inheritance," i.e., the nation and for the "anointed" reigning king.

28, 1: Sons of God: virtuous men.

and praise, | give to the Lord the glory due his name; adore
the Lord in holy attire.
The voice of the Lord is over the waters, the God of glory thunders, the Lord, over vast waters. | The voice of the Lord is mighty; the voice of the Lord is majestic. | The voice of the Lord breaks the cedars, the Lord breaks the cedars of Lebanon. |
He makes Lebanon leap like a calf and Sarion like a young wild bull. | The voice of the Lord strikes fiery flames; | the voice of the Lord shakes the desert, the Lord shakes the wilderness of Cades. | The voice of the Lord twists the oaks and strips the forests, and in his temple all say, "Glory!"
The Lord is enthroned above the flood; the Lord is enthroned as king forever. | May the Lord give strength to his people; may the Lord bless his people with peace!

PSALM 29 (30)
Thanksgiving for Deliverance from Death

A psalm. A song for the dedication of the temple. Of David.
I will extol you, O Lord, for you drew me clear and did not let my enemies rejoice over me.
O Lord, my God, I cried out to you and you healed me. |

28, 1-11: This hymn deals with the glory and power of God as revealed in nature. It purposes to teach confidence in God's protection based on His omnipotence and majesty. To convey this message the ancient bard hymned it via the tempest theme of thunder, lightning, and earthquake because in Hebrew thinking these natural phenomena were the most eloquent spokesmen of God's power and glory. Although the date is unknown it is one of the oldest songs of the Psalter.

28, 3: The voice of the Lord: designates thunder. This expression is repeated seven times perhaps in imitation of the peals of thunder.

28, 6: Sarion: the Phoenician name for mount Hermon.

28, 8: The tempest seems to have originated from the Mediterranean Sea (v. 3) and struck Lebanon (v. 5) and then Cades in the Sinai Desert of southern Palestine. Thus the storm bypasses Israel. Perhaps the poet insinuates symbolically that God punishes the enemies of Israel to the North and to the South.

28, 11: The last verse may have been added later for recitation in the liturgy of the temple. Since God has command over the forces of nature, He will surely make them a source of peace, of happiness and of prosperity for His people.

29, 2-13: The song is a fifth (?) century B.C. thanksgiving psalm of an individual whose happy life was interrupted by a brief crisis of some sort in which he almost died. The psalmist reflects the common fund of sentiment with which the pious people of his day prayed. Perhaps after his time the psalm was applied to the whole nation on the feast of the Temple Dedication as the title of the psalm indicates. (v. 1).

29, 2-4: You drew me: out of the jaws of death "from the nether world" (v. 4).

4 O Lord, you brought me up from the nether world; you pre-5 served me from among those going down into the pit. | Sing praise to the Lord, you his faithful ones, and give thanks to his 6 holy name. | For his anger lasts but a moment; a lifetime, his good will. At nightfall, weeping enters in, but with the dawn, rejoicing.
7 Once, in my security, I said, "I shall never be disturbed." | 8 O Lord, in your good will you had endowed me with majesty and strength; but when you hid your face I was terrified.
9 To you, O Lord, I cried out; with the Lord I pleaded: | 10 "What gain would there be from my lifeblood, from my going down into the grave? Would dust give you thanks or proclaim 11 your faithfulness? | Hear, O Lord, and have pity on me; O Lord, be my helper." 12 You changed my mourning into dancing; you took off my 13 sackcloth and clothed me with gladness, | that my soul might sing praise to you without ceasing; O Lord, my God, forever will I give you thanks.

PSALM 30 (31)

Prayer in Distress and Thanksgiving for Escape

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 In you, O Lord, I take refuge; let me never be put to shame.
3 In your justice rescue me, | incline your ear to me, make haste to deliver me! Be my rock of refuge, a stronghold to give me 4 safety. | You are my rock and my fortress; for your name's
5 sake you will lead and guide me. | You will free me from the 6 snare they set for me, for you are my refuge. | Into your hands
I commend my spirit; you will redeem me, O Lord, O faithful 29, 6: Misfortune is as brief as nightfall; prosperity is as lasting as the day is long.

29, 10: In a typical example of oriental bargaining, the poet strives to make God feel, as it were, that it would be of profit to God Himself if the poet continued to live so that one more could glorify Him on earth. See Ps 6, 6 n.

29, 12-13: God granted his request.

30, 2-25: About the fifth century B.C. a poet wrote this lament on being ill and persecuted by enemies. Many of the phrases and notions of the psalm are found in other psalms and in Jeremia. Because of these generous borrowings, it strongly resembles a "cento." The psalm is clearly divided into three parts: a prayer of assured confidence in God against persecution by enemies (vv. 2-9); a description of his distress in terms of supplication and trust (vv. 10-19); and a calm thanksgiving (vv. 20-25).

30, 6: Into your hands I commend my spirit: a figure of speech expressing the unconditional surrender to God. These words are fittingly found in the night prayers of the liturgy (compline).

7 God. | You hate those who worship vain idols, but my trust is 8 in the Lord. | I will rejoice and be glad of your kindness, when you have seen my affliction and watched over me in my distress, 9 | not shutting me up in the grip of the enemy but enabling me to move about at large.
10 Have pity on me, O Lord, for I am in distress; with sorrow 11 my eye is consumed; my soul also, and my body. | For my life is spent with grief and my years with sighing; my strength has 12 failed through affliction, and my bones are consumed. | For all my foes I am an object of reproach, a laughingstock to my neighbors, and a dread to my friends; they who see me abroad 13 flee from me. | I am forgotten like the unremembered dead;
14 I am like a dish that is broken. | I hear the whispers of the crowd, that frighten me from every side, as they consult to-15 gether against me, plotting to take my life. | But my trust is in 16 you, O Lord; I say, "You are my God." | In your hands is my destiny; rescue me from the clutches of my enemies and my 17 persecutors. | Let your face shine upon your servant; save me
18 in your kindness. | O Lord, let me not be put to shame, for I call upon you; let the wicked be put to shame; let them be 19 reduced to silence in the nether world. | Let dumbness strike their lying lips that speak insolence against the just in pride and scorn.
20 How great is the goodness, O Lord, which you have in store for those who fear you, and which, toward those who take 21 refuge in you, you show in the sight of men. | You hide them in the shelter of your presence from the plottings of men; you screen them within your abode from the strife of tongues. | 22 Blessed be the Lord whose wondrous kindness he has shown 23 me in a fortified city. | Once I said in my anguish, "I am cut off from your sight"; yet you heard the sound of my pleading 24 when I cried out to you. | Love the Lord, all you his faithful ones! The Lord keeps those who are constant, but more than 25 requites those who act proudly. | Take courage and be stout-hearted, all you who hope in the Lord.

PSALM 31 (32)

Remission of Sin

1 Of David. A maskil.
Happy is he whose fault is taken away, whose sin is covered.

30, 13: A broken dish is a common biblical figure of something ruined and useless.

31, 1-11: This is an individual's fifth (?) century psalm of thanks-

2 | Happy the man to whom the Lord imputes not guilt, in whose spirit there is no guile.
3 As long as I would not speak, my bones wasted away with 4 my groaning all the day, | for day and night your hand was heavy upon me; my strength was dried up as by the heat of 5 summer. | Then I acknowledged my sin to you, my guilt I covered not. I said, "I confess my faults to the Lord," and you 6 took away the guilt of my sin. | For this shall every faithful man pray to you in time of stress. Though deep waters overflow, 7 they shall not reach him. | You are my shelter; from distress you will preserve me; with glad cries of freedom you will ring me round.
8 I will instruct you and show you the way you should walk;
9 I will counsel you, keeping my eye on you. | Be not senseless like horses or mules: with bit and bridle their temper must be curbed, else they will not come near you.
10 Many are the sorrows of the wicked, but kindness surrounds 11 him who trusts in the Lord. | Be glad in the Lord and rejoice, you just; exult, all you upright of heart.

PSALM 32 (33)

1 Praise of the Lord's Power and Providence Exult, you 2 just, in the Lord; praise from the upright is fitting. | Give thanks to the Lord on the harp; with the ten-stringed lyre chant 3 his praises. | Sing to him a new song; pluck the strings skill-4 fully, with shouts of gladness. | For upright is the word of the 5 Lord, and all his works are trustworthy. | He loves justice and right; of the kindness of the Lord the earth is full.
6 By the word of the Lord the heavens were made; by the giving for the pardon of his sins. It is the second penitential psalm. See Ps 6, 2-11 n.

31, 1-2: Rom 4, 7-8 quotes these verses to show that "God credits justice without works."

31, 6: Deep waters: this expression symbolizes danger of death in psalmodic imagery.

31, 8-11: An abrupt moral lesson of the psalmist as a wise man speaking to a disciple.

32, 1-22: This hymn of praise was composed sometime between the sixth and fourth centuries B.C. It may have been occasioned by a recent victory of Israel against an enemy attack (vv. 10, 16-19). The words are too general to specify further. Each of the twenty-two verses of this "alphabetic" hymn begins with a consecutive letter of the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. See Ps 9A, 2-21 n.

32, 3: Sing to him a new song: sing the latest song to thank God for His latest act of mercy. This latest song is composed and sung with an eye to surpassing the ancient hymns of national thanksgiving.

32, 6: Heavens . . . host: the sun, moon, stars.

breath of his mouth all their host. | He gathers the waters of the sea as in a flask; in cellars he confines the deep.
Let all the earth fear the Lord; let all who dwell in the world revere him. | For he spoke, and it was made; he commanded, and it stood forth. | The Lord brings to nought the plans of nations; he foils the designs of peoples. | But the plan of the Lord stands forever; the design of his heart, through all generations. | Happy the nation whose God is the Lord, the people he has chosen for his own inheritance.
From heaven the Lord looks down; he sees all mankind. |
From his fixed throne he beholds all who dwell on the earth, | he who fashioned the heart of each, he who knows all their works.
A king is not saved by a mighty army, nor is a warrior delivered by great strength. | Useless is the horse for safety;
great though its strength, it cannot provide escape. | But see, the eyes of the Lord are upon those who fear him, upon those who hope for his kindness, | to deliver them from death and preserve them in spite of famine.
Our soul waits for the Lord, who is our help and our shield,
| for in him our hearts rejoice; in his holy name we trust. | May your kindness, O Lord, be upon us who have put our hope in you.

PSALM 33 (34)

Praise of God, the Protector of the Just

Of David, when he feigned madness before Abimelech, who forced him to depart.
I will bless the Lord at all times; his praise shall be ever in 32, 7: The ancients marveled at the power which kept the mighty seas, so mysterious to them as was all nature, from flooding the earth. The pagans explained this mystery by a victory of the earth gods over the sea gods. The monotheistic Jews simply explained that, as far as their God was concerned, it was just as easy for Him to restrain the waters as it was for a flask to limit the waters it contained. Moreover, just as a man finds it easy to store wine in his cellar, so does God easily store away the immense subterranean ocean in the depths of the earth.

32, 13-14: God is pictured looking down on the earth from the balcony of heaven. It is a Semitic metaphor for God's omniscience.

32, 15: That God knows all the secrets of the human heart is a thought frequently found in the Old Testament.

32, 20: Waits: hopes.

33, 2-23: A Jewish poet about the fifth century B.C. wrote this individual poem of thanksgiving for some kind of favor received. Gradually the psalm develops into a poem on wisdom whereby the author gives advice on how to live properly in this world (vv. 9ff). This, too, is an "alphabetic," poem. See Ps 9A, 2-21 n.

33, 2: "Lord" stands emphatically at the beginning in the original

3 my mouth. | Let my soul glory in the Lord; the lowly will hear
4 me and be glad. | Glorify the Lord with me, let us together extol his name.
5 I sought the Lord, and he answered me and delivered me 6 from all my fears. | Look to him that you may be radiant with 7 joy, and your faces may not blush with shame. | When the afflicted man called out, the Lord heard, and from all his 8 distress he saved him. | The angel of the Lord encamps around 9 those who fear him, and delivers them. | Taste and see how good the Lord is; happy the man who takes refuge in him. | 10 Fear the Lord, you his holy ones, for nought is lacking to those 11 who fear him. | The great grow poor and hungry; but those who seek the Lord want for no good thing.
12 Come, children, hear me; I will teach you the fear of the 13 Lord. | Which of you desires life, and takes delight in pros-14 perous days? | Keep your tongue from evil and your lips from 15 speaking guile; | turn from evil, and do good; seek peace, and 16 follow after it. | The Lord has eyes for the just, and ears for 17 their cry. | The Lord confronts the evildoers, to destroy remem-18 brance of them from the earth. | When the just cry out, the Lord hears them, and from all their distress he rescues them. | 19 The Lord is close to the brokenhearted; and those who are 20 crushed in spirit he saves. | Many are the troubles of the just 21 man, but out of them all the Lord delivers him; | he watches

Hebrew text to stress that the psalmist will praise God and not creatures.

33, 3: The "lowly" form the poor class often mentioned in the psalms and in the prophets. See So 2, 3 n.

33, 8: The angel of the Lord: this is a circumlocution for God Himself, which is probably due to a theological scruple to avoid saying "God encamps." The latter expression would be too redolent of a sensible manifestation savoring of idolatry. The "angel encamps" evokes the image of God's angel heading an army which surrounds the lowly ones to protect them.

33, 9ff: The psalm gradually changes from a thanksgiving poem to a wisdom lesson on the meaning of life. Taste and see: share the poet's experience of a most spiritual intimacy with God. The intimacy of being with Christ in 1 Pt 2, 3 alludes perhaps to v. 9. St. Cyril of Jerusalem says that the first Christians were invited to receive Holy Communion at the recitation of this verse.

33, 10: Fear the Lord, you his holy ones: see Prv 1, 7 n on "Fear of the Lord." See So 2, 3 n on "holy ones," i.e., "anawim."

33, 12: The poet now completely turns teacher in the style of the Book of Proverbs.

33, 13-17: These verses are quoted in 1 Pt 3, 10-12 where St. Peter preaches Christian charity.

33, 21: This vivid metaphor of breaking bones alludes to a man's bodily frame on the rack. The verse is a promise God makes to the just man which was eminently fulfilled in His Son Christ, the just man (Jn

22 over all his bones; not one of them shall be broken. | Vice slays the wicked, and the enemies of the just pay for their guilt.
23 But the Lord redeems the lives of his servants; no one incurs guilt who takes refuge in him.

PSALM 34 (35)

Prayer for Help against Unjust Enemies

1 Of David.
Fight, O Lord, against those who fight me; war against those 1 who make war upon me. | Take up the shield and buckler, and 3 rise up in my defense. | Brandish the lance, and block the way in the face of my pursuers; say to my soul, "I am your salva-4 tion." | Let those be put to shame and disgraced who seek my life; let those be turned back and confounded who plot evil 5 against me. | Let them be like chaff before the wind, with the 6 angel of the Lord driving them on. | Let their way be dark and slippery, with the angel of the Lord pursuing them.
7 For without cause they set their snare for me, without cause 8 they dug a pit against my life. | Let ruin come upon them unawares, and let the snare they have set catch them; into the 9 pit they have dug let them fall. | But I will rejoice in the Lord, 10 I will be joyful because of his salvation. | All my being shall say, "O Lord, who is like you, the rescuer of the afflicted man from those too strong for him, of the afflicted and the needy 11 from their despoilers?" | Unjust witnesses have risen up; things
12 I knew not of, they lay to my charge. | They have repaid me evil for good, bringing bereavement to my soul.

19, 36: "Not a bone of him shall you break").

33, 23: This last verse is a liturgical addition to soften the preceding verse. The Jews avoided ending liturgical selections and books of the Bible with a threat.

34, 1-28: Around the fifth century B.C. a Jewish bard composed this lament on being unjustly persecuted and accused. He seems to have been a judge or an influential administrator. False witnesses prompted by his former ungrateful colleagues accused him of something illegal. The lament features several stereotyped formulas of supplication.

34, 5-6: In figurative language the poet asks God for the disgrace of his enemies by dispatching "the angel of the Lord" to rout them. "The angel of the Lord" is mentioned in the Psalter only here and in the preceding psalm 33, 8. According to the law of retaliation ("an eye for an eye," etc.), the poet has a right to wish that the snares laid by the enemies would boomerang. This is in keeping with the ancient notion of temporal retribution since total forgiveness is a New Testament doctrine. See Ps 5, 11 n.

34, 7-8: The imagery is that of a camouflaged net into which the prey ambulates and the hunter concealed in the surrounding shrubbery pulls the strings which encage the victim. The hunter's pit is the second metaphor.

3 of God before his eyes, | for he beguiles himself with the 4 thought that his guilt will not be found out or hated. | The words of his mouth are empty and false; he has ceased to 5 understand how to do good. | He plans wickedness in his bed;
he sets out on a way that is not good, with no repugnance for evil.
6 O Lord, your kindness reaches to heaven; your faithfulness, 7 to the clouds. | Your justice is like the mountains of God; your judgments, like the mighty deep; man and beast you save, O 8 Lord. | How precious is your kindness, O God! The children 9 of men take refuge in the shadow of your wings. | They have their fill of the prime gifts of your house; from your delightful 10 stream you give them to drink. | For with you is the fountain of life, and in your light we see light.
11 Keep up your kindness toward your friends, your just defense
12 of the upright of heart. | Let not the foot of the proud overtake 13 me nor the hand of the wicked disquiet me. | See how the evil-doers have fallen; they are thrust down and cannot rise.

ments of the sinner that explain his evil conduct. The other side of the diptych, a hymn, (vv. 6-13) portrays a pious Jew. The intended contrast is effective. The sinner does not believe that God punishes the wicked on this earth: the pious Jew does believe it together with its corollary, namely, that God rewards the pious on earth with temporal blessings. We must remember: it was not revealed at this time that God will reward the good and the evil in the afterlife of heaven and hell.

35, 2: The scene opens with sin personified, which tempts the sinner who succumbs because he does not fear God. Just as the fear or "dread of the Lord" is the essence of wisdom, so is its absence the essence of immorality. This seems to be the psalmist's underlying explanation of how the sinner thinks.

35, 3: From his experience the sinner may think that God is too distant to know of his sin, or he may think that God will not punish him, because He does not care what men do.

35, 5: The first side of the diptych (vv. 2-5) is kindred in thought to psalms 9B, 13, and Mal 2, 17.

35, 7: Man and beast you save, O Lord: in all the wisdom of the Greeks it is difficult to find a line as clear as this on the Providence of God. The kindness exhibited in God's Providence is precious.

35, 8: The children of men: the Jews.

35, 9: Their fill of the prime gifts of your house: an allusion to the sacrificial feast in the temple. Your delightful stream: by another allusion to a supposed stream at the temple, the poet says that God gives His people drink from it.

35, 10: The "light of Yahweh" is the light of His countenance gazing favorably upon His faithful ones. In this light the Jews see a long and happy life.

35, 13: A possible allusion to some recent disaster of the evildoers known to the poet's audience.

13 But I, when they were ill, put on sackcloth; I afflicted myself 14 with fasting and poured forth prayers within my bosom. | As though it were a friend of mine, or a brother, I went about, like one bewailing a mother, I was bowed down in mourning 15 | Yet when I stumbled they were glad and gathered together; they gathered together striking me unawares. They tore at me 16 without ceasing; | they put me to the test; they mocked me, gnashing their teeth at me.
17 O Lord, how long will you look on? Save me from the roaring 18 beasts; from the lions, my only life. | I will give you thanks in the vast assembly, in the mighty throng I will praise you. | 19 Let not my unprovoked enemies rejoice over me; let not my 20 undeserved foes wink knowingly. | For civil words they speak not, but against the peaceful in the land they fashion treacherous 21 speech. | And they open wide their mouths against me, saying,
22 "Aha, aha! We saw him with our own eyes!" | You, O Lord, 23 have seen; be not silent; Lord, be not far from me! | Awake, and be vigilant in my defense; in my cause, my God and my 24 Lord. | Do me justice, because you are just, O Lord; my God, 25 let them not rejoice over me. | Let them not say in their hearts,
"Aha! This is what we wanted!" Let them not say, "We have swallowed him up!"
26 Let all be put to shame and confounded who are glad at my misfortune. Let those be clothed with shame and disgrace who 27 glory over me. | But let those shout for joy and be glad who favor my just cause; and may they ever say, "The Lord be 28 glorified; he wills the prosperity of his servant!" | Then my tongue shall recount your justice, your praise, all the day.

Human Wickedness and Divine Providence

34, 15: They tore at me without ceasing: we would say: "They tore my reputation to bits."

34, 16: Gnashing their teeth at me: this is a psalmodic metaphor of a beast poised to pounce on its prey.

34, 25: Aha! This is what we wanted!: this decision of guilt is what we wanted. We have swallowed him up!: we obliterated him completely.

34, 27: The discomfiture of the enemies is an occasion for the joy of the "just cause" of the holy because it means that God rules through righteousness.

On Monday of Holy Week the liturgy aptly applies this psalm to the persecuted Christ.

35, 2-13: This fifth (?) century psalm resembles a diptych. The first side of it (vv. 2-5) portrays a sinner. We may categorize the psalm as a song of wisdom insofar as the poet characterizes the intimate senti-

PSALM 36 (37)

The Fate of Sinners and the Reward of the Just

1 Of David.

Be not vexed over evildoers, nor jealous of those who do 2 wrong; | for like grass they quickly wither, and like green herbs they wilt.
3 Trust in the Lord and do good, that you may dwell in the 4 land and enjoy security. | Take delight in the Lord, and he will grant you your heart's requests.
5 Commit to the Lord your way; trust in him, and he will act. | 6 He will make justice dawn for you like the light; bright as the noonday shall be your vindication.
7 Leave it to the Lord, and wait for him; be not vexed at the successful path of the man who does malicious deeds.
8 Give up your anger, and forsake wrath; be not vexed, it will 9 only harm you. | For evildoers shall be cut off, but those who wait for the Lord shall possess the land.
10 Yet a little while, and the wicked man shall be no more;
11 though you mark his place he will not be there. | But the meek shall possess the land, they shall delight in abounding peace.
12 The wicked man plots against the just and gnashes his teeth 13 at them; | but the Lord laughs at him, for he sees that his day is coming.
14 A sword the wicked draw; they bend their bow to bring down the afflicted and the poor, to slaughter those whose path is 15 right. | But their swords shall pierce their own hearts, and their bows shall be broken.
16 Better is the scanty store of the just than the great wealth of 17 the wicked, | for the power of the wicked shall be broken, but the Lord supports the just.
18 The Lord watches over the lives of the wholehearted; their 19 inheritance lasts forever. | They are not put to shame in an evil time; in days of famine they have plenty.

36, 1-40: The psalm is an alphabetic sapiential psalm written about the fifth century B.C. See Ps 9A, 2-21 n. The composer is speaking to a holy man who is toying with the temptation of abandoning the straight and narrow path of virtue because sinners seem to prosper. The psalmist stoutly defends the traditional opinion that the sinners are punished through temporal means and the virtuous are rewarded. See Introduction to the Book of Psalms on this problem of evil.

36, 7: Wait for him: be patient.

36, 11: The meek shall possess the land: and live in peace. Mt 5, 4 quotes it as a beatitude to mean the spiritual land of God's kingdom.

36, 18: The posterity of the good man will continue to inherit the family's wealth. This was a cherished hope of the Semites.

20 But the wicked perish, and the enemies of the Lord, like the beauty of the meadows, vanish; like smoke they vanish.
21 The wicked man borrows and does not repay; the just man is 22 kindly and gives, | but those whom he blesses shall possess the land, while those he curses shall be cut off.
23 By the Lord are the steps of a man made firm, and he 24 approves his way. | Though he fall, he does not lie prostrate, for the hand of the Lord sustains him.
25 Neither in my youth, nor now that I am old, have I seen a " just man forsaken nor his descendants begging bread. | All the day he is kindly and lends, and his descendants shall be blessed.
27 Turn from evil and do good, that you may abide forever; | 28 for the Lord loves what is right, and forsakes not his faithful ones.
Criminals are destroyed, and the posterity of the wicked is 29 cut off. | The just shall possess the land and dwell in it forever.
30 The mouth of the just man tells of wisdom and his tongue 31 utters what is right. | The law of his God is in his heart, and his steps do not falter.
32 The wicked man spies on the just, and seeks to slay him. | 33 The Lord will not leave him in his power nor let him be condemned when he is on trial.
34 Wait for the Lord, and keep his way; | he will promote you to ownership of the land; when the wicked are destroyed, you shall look on.
35 I saw a wicked man, fierce, and stalwart as a flourishing, 36 age-old tree. | Yet as I passed by, lo! he was no more; I sought him, but he could not be found.
37 Watch the wholehearted man, and mark the upright; for 38 there is a future for the man of peace. | Sinners shall all alike be destroyed; the future of the wicked shall be cut off.
39 The salvation of the just is from the Lord; he is their refuge 40 in time of distress. | And the Lord helps them and delivers them; he delivers them from the wicked and saves them, because they take refuge in him.

original writing. Although the psalm at first dealt with a sinful but repentant individual, it was later applied to the nation in the liturgy. To understand the thinking of the psalmist, we must recall that he knew nothing of reward and punishment in the afterlife. Consequently he thought that physical illness was a punishment for his past sins (v. 19). This is the third penitential psalm. See Ps 6, 2-11 n.

37, 12: In this abandoned condition he resembles Job.

37, 17: When my foot slips: a characteristic biblical term for "when misfortune strikes me."

37, 18: Very near to falling: a metaphor for any type of misfortune.

38, 2-14: This is a fifth (?) century lament of an individual whose grievous illness made him reflect meditatively on the mystery of evil was before me | I kept dumb and silent; I refrained from rash speech. But my grief was stirred up; | hot grew my heart within me; in my thoughts, a fire blazed forth. I spoke out with my tongue:

Let me know, O Lord, my end and what is the number of my days, that I may learn how frail I am. | A short span you have made my days, and my life is as nought before you; only a breath is any human existence. | A phantom only, man goes his ways; like vapor only are his restless pursuits; he heaps up stores, and knows not who will use them.
And now, for what do I wait, O Lord? In you is my hope. |
From all my sins deliver me; a fool's taunt let me not suffer.
I was speechless and opened not my mouth, because it was your doing; | take away your scourge from me; at the blow of your hand I wasted away. | With rebukes for guilt you chasten man; you dissolve like a cobweb all that is dear to him;
only a breath is any man. | Hear my prayer, O Lord; to my cry give ear; to my weeping be not deaf! For I am but a wayfarer before you, a pilgrim like all my fathers. | Turn your gaze from me, that I may find respite ere I depart and be no more.

PSALM 39 (40)

Gratitude and Prayer for Help

For the leader. A psalm of David.
I have waited, waited for the Lord, and he stooped toward and suffering: Why do the evil prosper and the good suffer? His answer is very similar to Job's: I don't understand the ways of God but I submit to Him. The composer of this psalm is original. Instead of the customary descriptions of the illness, of the enemies, and an abundance of references to his sins, he sketches a "psychological impression" of these elements. His psalm may be called a "philosophical meditation" on the problem of suffering.

38, 2-3: The ailing poet had resolved not to complain about the prospering evildoer, especially in the presence of the wicked man.

38, 4-7: His silence "blazed forth" into a prayer to understand the vanity of life and thus be directed away from criticizing God.

38, 9: The psalmist requests that he not suffer the taunt of a fool. The biblical fool is the exact opposite of the biblical wise man or sage. The fool is ignorant and usually morally depraved. He regards suffering as a sign of God's wrath and therefore a reason for taunting the afflicted one. See Is 32, 5-7 n.

38, 10: It: the illness of the psalmist.

38, 13: It seems that the composer refers to the three forms of prayer later distinguished in an ascending order of superior intercession by the Rabbinic saying: "Prayer is made in silence, crying with a loud voice, but tears surpass all."

39, 2-18: This song is generally admitted to be a composite psalm, but both parts were written by the same Jewish composer about the

5 Happy the man who makes the Lord his trust; who turns not 6 to idolatry or to those who stray after falsehood. | How numerous have you made, O Lord, my God, your wondrous deeds! And in your plans for us there is none to equal you; should I wish to declare or to tell them, they would be too many to recount.

fifth century. The first part (vv. 2-11) is a song of thanksgiving to God for having rescued the author from a grave danger of death. The second part (vv. 12-18) is a lament by the same psalmist who is now ill and persecuted. (All of psalm 69 is almost identical with this second part.) The contrast between the two parts of psalm 39 has been happily compared to the contrast between a Magnificat and a De Profundis.

39, 2-3: The psalmist recalls a favor received from God in answer to a prayer (v. 2). He escaped death, which may have involved a grave illness or a serious accident or imprisonment. He makes no mention of enemies or persecutors. The "pit" and "mud of the swamp" are familiar psalmodic figures for danger. God extricated the poet from danger and set him on a crag (v. 3) and made his steps "firm"—corresponding to a biblical symbol for safety.

39, 6-9: The thought seems to be that no one can praise God as He deserves (v. 6). How then shall the poet praise and thank God? He answers that it is not by sacrifice but by obedience (vv. 7-9). Mentally thumbing through his temple ritual, he searches the different types of sacrifices for the best one to praise God. Would it be through a "sacrifice" of slain animals or an "oblation" of the fruits of the earth? No, God prefers "ears open to obedience." In repetitious parallel style the poet continues: is it through "holocausts" which symbolize the dedication of the servant to God or "sin-offerings" which reconcile the offender to God (v. 7)? No. The poet replies, "Behold I come to obey." In fact, obedience is "prescribed" for him and for all the faithful "in the written scroll" of the Mosaic Law, especially in Deuteronomy (v. 8). Moreover, "To do your will, O my God, is my delight," because it is God's delight. "And your law is within my heart," a delicate expression for willing obedience (v. 9).

39, 7-9: These verses are unevenly quoted in Heb 10, 5-7. The author of Hebrews contrasts the inadequacy of the countless Old Testament sacrifices to redeem sin with Christ's one sacrifice of obedience to the Father in dying on the cross. In putting vv. 7-9 of the psalm on the lips of Christ, the writer of Hebrews underscored the purpose of our Lord's life: to obey the Will of His Father out of love. The psalmist went to the Bible for his example of obedience; the Christian goes to the Bible and to Christ Himself.

8 then said I, "Behold I come; in the written scroll it is prescribed 9 for me, | to do your will, O my God, is my delight, and your 10 law is within my heart!" | I announced your justice in the vast assembly; I did not restrain my lips, as you, O Lord, know. | 11 Your justice I kept not hid within my heart; your faithfulness and your salvation I have spoken of; I have made no secret of your kindness and your truth in the vast assembly.
12 Withhold not, O Lord, your compassion from me; may your 13 kindness and your truth ever preserve me. | For all about me are evils beyond reckoning; my sins so overcome me that I cannot see; they are more numerous than the hairs of my head, and my heart fails me.
14 Deign, O Lord, to rescue me; O Lord, make haste to help
15 me. | Let all be put to shame and confusion who seek to snatch away my life. Let them be turned back in disgrace who desire
16 my ruin. | Let them be dismayed in their shame who say to 17 me, "Aha, aha!" But may all who seek you exult and be glad in you, and may those who love your salvation say ever. "The 18 Lord be glorified." | Though I am afflicted and poor, yet the Lord thinks of me. You are my help and my deliverer; O my God, hold not back!

PSALM 40 (41)
Thanksgiving after Sickness

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 Happy is he who has regard for the lowly and the poor; in 3 the day of misfortune the Lord will deliver him. | The Lord will keep and preserve him; he will make him happy on the 4 earth, and not give him over to the will of his enemies. | The Lord will help him on his sickbed, he will take away all his ailment when he is ill.
5 Once I said, "O Lord, have pity on me; heal me, though I 6 have sinned against you. | My enemies say the worst of me:

39, 10-11: But the poet is not satisfied with praising God by obedience alone; he wants to thank God publicly.

39, 12: With grave solemnity the same composer abruptly begins his lament. Kindness . . . truth: fidelity. These two are often united in psalmodic formulas.

39, 18: Hold not back: your help.

40, 2-14: This is a thanksgiving song for deliverance from illness and from enemies.

40, 2-4: These verses are best commented upon by our Lord in Mt 5,7: "Blessed are the merciful for they shall obtain mercy." Our Lord has a more spiritual reward in view than the psalmist had.

40, 6: One of the worst disgraces which could befall a Jew was the prospect of his posterity vanishing.

7 'When will he die and his name perish?' | When one comes to see me, he speaks without sincerity; his heart stores up malice; 8 when he leaves he gives voice to it outside. | All my foes whisper together against me; against me they imagine the 9 worst: | 'A malignant disease fills his frame'; and 'Now that 10 he lies ill, he will not rise again.' | Even my friend who had my trust and partook of my bread, has raised his heel against 11 me. | But you, O Lord, have pity on me, and raise me up, that 12 I may repay them." | That you love me I know by this, that 13 my enemy does not triumph over me, | but because of my integrity you sustain me and let me stand before you forever.

14 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, from all eternity and forever. Amen. Amen.

40, 10: Even an intimate friend in whom he trusted "has raised his heel against me." This is a sign of disdain practiced among the Arabs even today. The verse is quoted in Jn 13, 18: "He who eats bread with me has lifted up his heel against me." There Christ refers to Judas' betrayal.

40, 13: Stand before: a biblical idiom meaning that he is certain of a long life.

40, 14: The last verse has nothing to do with the psalm. It is a doxology to mark the end of the first book of the Psalter.

41—42: Both psalms were originally written by the same author as one psalm of lament—one of the most lyrical poems in the Bible. This appears evident from the sameness of language and from the refrain in the last verse of each psalm. The thought sequence between both psalms cannot be broken without making one psalm incomplete without the other. The composer lived before the sixth century B.C. and somewhere in northern Palestine in a heavily pagan milieu. He is homesick for the Jerusalem temple services.

41, 3: Go and behold the face of God: a Hebraic expression for visiting the temple.

41, 4: Where is your God?: as a worshiper of the one true God he is downcast because the heathen neighbors accuse him of being an "atheist," since they do not see him offering sacrifice to some idol or performing any type of external ritual. For the pagans there is no god if there is no ritual.

soul within me, when I went with the throng and led them in procession to the house of God, amid loud cries of joy and 6 thanksgiving, with the multitude keeping festival. | Why are you so downcast, O my soul? Why do you sigh within me?
Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him, in the presence of my savior and my God.
7 Within me my soul is downcast; so will I remember you from the land of the Jordan and of Hermon, from Mount 8 Misar. | Deep calls unto deep in the roar of your cataracts; all 9 your breakers and your billows pass over me. | By day the Lord bestows his grace, and at night I have his song, a prayer 10 to my living God. | I sing to God, my Rock: "Why do you forget me? Why must I go about in mourning, with the enemy 11 oppressing me?" | It crushes my bones that my foes mock me, as 12 they say to me day after day, "Where is your God?" | Why are you so downcast, O my soul? Why do you sigh within me? Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him, in the presence of my savior and my God.

PSALM 42 (43)

1 Do me justice, O God, and fight my fight against a faithless 2 people; from the deceitful and impious man rescue me. | For you, O God, are my strength. Why do you keep me so far away?
Why must I go about in mourning, with the enemy oppressing 3 me? | Send forth your light and your fidelity; they shall lead me on and bring me to your holy mountain, to your dwelling-4 place. | Then will I go in to the altar of God, the God of my gladness and joy; then will I give you thanks upon the harp, 5 O God, my God! | Why are you so downcast, O my soul? Why do you sigh within me? Hope in God! For I shall again be thanking him, in the presence of my savior and my God.

41, 8: The psalmist imagines that the stormy waters of the roaring cataracts of the upper Jordan River are conspiring (echo-like—"deep calls unto deep") to dispatch waves to engulf him into a watery tomb.

41, 9: In retrospect the poet contrasts the sorrowful present with the past when God's steadfast love watched him by day like a guardian angel, and his prayerful song was with him at night.

41, 11: It crushes my bones: we would say: It hurts me to the marrow of my bones.

42, 3: The bard urges God to send His messengers, "light" and "fidelity" to lead him to His Holy Mount of Jerusalem.

Ps 42 is used at the beginning of Mass chiefly because of the appropriateness of v. 4. The liturgy suggests that just as the psalmist ardently desired God in the temple—the master idea of the entire psalm —so should we desire the Eucharistic Christ.

PSALM 43 (44)

Israel's Past Glory and Present Need

1 For the leader. A maskil of the sons of Core.
2 O God, our ears have heard, our fathers have declared to us,
3 | the deeds you did in their days, in days of old: | How with your own hand you rooted out the nations and planted them;
4 you smashed the peoples, but for them you made room. | For not with their own sword did they conquer the land, nor did their own arm make them victorious, but it was your arm and your right hand and the light of your countenance, in your love
5 for them. | You are my king and my God, who bestowed vic-
6 tories on Jacob. | Our foes through you we struck down;
7 through your name we trampled down our adversaries. | For 8 not in my bow did I trust, nor did my sword save me; | but you saved us from our foes, and those who hated us you put to 9 shame. | In God we gloried day by day; your name we praised always.
10 Yet now you have cast us off and put us in disgrace, and you
11 go not forth with our armies. | You have let us be driven back
12 by our foes; those who hated us plundered us at will, | you marked us out as sheep to be slaughtered; among the nations
13 you scattered us. | You sold your people for no great price;
14 you made no profit from the sale of them. | You made us the reproach of our neighbors, the mockery and the scorn of those 15 around us. | You made us a byword among the nations, a 16 laughingstock among the peoples. | All the day my disgrace is 43, 2-27: The psalm is a public lament (vv. 10-17) introduced by a hymn (vv. 2-9) and ending with a plea (vv. 18-27). Perhaps this psalm was written during the period of the monarchy (between the tenth to sixth century B.C.). The poet describes a time when Israel was independent enough to wage war. A national catastrophe is the situation of life that occasioned the national lament.

43, 2-3: An allusion to the conquest of the Promised Land.

43, 5: Henceforth the bard will alternate irregularly from the singular to the plural. When speaking in the singular, he is speaking in the name of the nation.

43, 6-8: For the same thought see 1 Mc 3, 19: "For the success of war is not in the multitude of the army, but strength comes from heaven."

43, 10: Go not forth with our armies: this psalmodic expression is rooted in early Israelite history when Yahweh, in the Ark of the Covenant, was carried to battle. When the ark was not transported Yahweh was nevertheless considered to accompany the Israelites in His war.

43, 13: To Israelites, who were fierce lovers of freedom and of their land, slavery was only a slight degree above death.

43, 14-17: A defeat of a people was interpreted by rivaling pagan neighboring countries as a quasi defeat of their god.

18 All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten 19 you, nor have we been disloyal to your covenant; | our hearts have not shrunk back, nor our steps turned aside from your 20 path, | though you thrust us down into a place of misery and 21 covered us over with darkness. | If we had forgotten the name of our God and stretched out our hands to a strange god, | 22 would not God have discovered this? For he knows the secrets 23 of the heart. | Yet for your sake we are being slain all the day; we are looked upon as sheep to be slaughtered.
24 Awake! Why are you asleep, O Lord? Arise! Cast us not off 25 forever! | Why do you hide your face, forgetting our woe and 26 our oppression? | For our souls are bowed down to the dust, 27 our bodies are pressed to the earth. | Arise, help us! Redeem us for your kindness' sake.

PSALM 44 (45)

Nuptial Ode for the Messianic King

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." A maskil of the sons of Core. A love song.
2 My heart overflows with a goodly theme; as I sing my ode to the king, my tongue is nimble as the pen of a skillful scribe.

43, 18-20: There is no other biblical passage that protests national innocence in such an assertive tone.

43, 20: Covered us over with darkness: a biblical idiom for misery and suffering.

43, 21: To forget God's name means to neglect the temple cult in which God's name was often spoken. To stretch out the hands to a strange god means to worship the gods. This description is taken from the gesture of praying by holding the palm of the hand open to the heavens.

43, 23: This verse is quoted in Rom 8, 36 to exemplify this: if the Old Testament saints were so steadfast in their faith to Yahweh, Paul's converts should be ready to die for our Lord's sake, if necessary.

43, 24: A daring expostulation found nowhere else in Scripture. The psalmist expresses how the nation felt emotionally rather than how it thought theologically.

44, 2-18: Most modern commentators safely place this psalm in the monarchic period from David's time to the sixth century B.C. The occasion for its composition was the marriage of one of the Davidic kings. Moderns generally understand that the author did not mean to ascribe all the qualities in this psalm to one definite historical king but only insofar as the king represented the hope for fulfillment of the promises God made to David's dynasty through Nathan (2 Sm 7). According to this opinion, the psalm is not literally and directly Messianic but typically Messianic, i.e., the reigning monarch is a type of

3 Fairer in beauty are you than the sons of men; grace is poured 4 out upon your lips; thus God has blessed you forever. | Gird your sword upon your thigh, O mighty one! In your splendor 5 and your majesty ride on triumphant | in the cause of truth and for the sake of justice; and may your right hand show you 6 wondrous deeds. | Your arrows are sharp; peoples are subject
7 to you; the king's enemies lose heart. | Your throne, O God, stands forever and ever; a tempered rod is your royal scepter. | 8 You love justice and hate wickedness; therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness above your fellow 9 kings. | With myrrh and aloes and cassia your robes are fra-10 grant; from ivory palaces string music brings you joy. | The daughters of kings come to meet you; the queen takes her place at your right hand in gold of Ophir.
11 Hear, O daughter, and see; turn your ear, forget your people 12 and your father's house. | So shall the king desire your beauty;
13 for he is your lord, and you must worship him. | And the city of Tyre is here with gifts; the rich among the people seek your 14 favor. | All glorious is the king's daughter as she enters; her
15 raiment is threaded with spun gold. | In embroidered apparel she is borne in to the king; behind her the virgins of her train 16 are brought to you. | They are borne in with gladness and joy;
they enter the palace of the king.

Christ the Messia. The quality stressed is justice (vv. 5, 8) of his rule. This and other qualities are Messianic.

44, 2: The psalmist's dedicatory prologue.

44, 3: Fairer in beauty are you than the sons of men: another probable translation is: fairest among the sons of men. Grace is poured out on your lips: an expression for: you are eloquent.

44, 7: Strictly speaking, only this verse is Messianic. In spite of the several disputed ways of translating "Your throne O God" the author is not attributing divinity to the king, but the Hebrew word for God "Elohim" here means "godlike" or "taking God's place."

44, 8: Ophir: a place renowned for its gold. God has anointed you with the oil of gladness: the psalmist does not mean God anointed him king but God congratulated him.

44, 10-16: The liturgy accommodates these verses to Mary and to the Virgins.

44, 10: These "daughters of kings" are either the virgins of the queen's train (v. 15) or they allude to the polygamy of oriental kings who in war took daughters of kings as secondary wives.

44, 12: Worship him: the biblical way of expressing deep homage.

44, 13: The city of Tyre: this may be a personification of the Gentile cities. Your favor: the favor of the king who is addressed here.

44, 15-16: The formal entrance of the queen into the king's palace marks the beginning of her conjugal life. To you: the king is addressed here.

17 The place of your fathers your sons shall have; you shall 18 make them princes through all the land. | I will make your name memorable through all generations; therefore shall nations praise you forever and ever.

PSALM 45 (46)
God the Refuge of Israel

1 For the leader. A song of the sons of Core; according to "Virgins." 2 God is our refuge and our strength, an ever-present help in 3 distress. | Therefore we fear not, though the earth be shaken
4 and mountains plunge into the depths of the sea; | though its waters rage and foam and the mountains quake at its surging. The Lord of hosts is with us; our stronghold is the God of Jacob.
5 There is a stream whose runlets gladden the city of God, the 6 holy dwelling of the Most High. | God is in its midst; it shall not be disturbed; God will help it at the break of dawn. |
7 Though nations are in turmoil, kingdoms totter, his voice
8 resounds, the earth melts away, | the Lord of hosts is with us; our stronghold is the God of Jacob.
9 Come! behold the deeds of the Lord, the astounding things 10 he has wrought on earth: | he has stopped wars to the end of the earth: the bow he breaks; he splinters the spears; he burns
11 the shields with fire. | Desist! and confess that I am God,
12 exalted among the nations, exalted upon the earth. | The Lord of hosts is with us; our stronghold is the God of Jacob.

45, 2-12: This song of Sion belongs to the subclassification of hymns because of the similarity of structure. The purpose of the Songs of Sion is to praise Jerusalem and God's plan for it. Experts differ on the precise number of these Songs of Sion but some commonly accepted ones are Pss 47 and 86.

A definite historical event of liberation from some foreign power originated this psalm. The master idea of Ps 45 is the Presence of Yahweh in Jerusalem which serves as the basis for happiness. The poet writes in the name of the people. One of the opinions as regards the historical event is Sennacherib's demand for the surrender of Jerusalem in 701 B.C. It was refused. He was forced to return home because of a plague. The first stanza (vv. 2-4) hymns God's trust; the second stanza (vv. 5-8) God's protection of Jerusalem; the third (vv. 9-12) God's victory.

This psalm is used in the Mass of Ascension Thursday and the Sunday after Pentecost.

45, 4: The Lord of hosts: see Is 1, 9 n. The Lord of hosts is with us . . . God of Jacob: at the end of the three strophes this refrain occurs. There is a stream: a symbol of God's presence.

45, 6: At the break of dawn: the most difficult hour of watch is the one before dawn because it is the darkest.

PSALM 46 (47)

The Lord the King of All Nations

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.
2 All you peoples, clap your hands, shout to God with cries of 3 gladness, | for the Lord, the Most High, the awesome, is the 4 great king over all the earth. | He brings peoples under us;
5 nations under our feet. | He chooses for us our inheritance, the glory of Jacob, whom he loves.
6 God mounts his throne amid shouts of joy; the Lord, amid 7 trumpet blasts. | Sing praise to God, sing praise; sing praise to our king, sing praise.
8 For king of all the earth is God; sing hymns of praise. |
9 God reigns over the nations, God sits upon his holy throne. | 10 The princes of the peoples are gathered together with the people of the God of Abraham. For God's are the guardians of the earth; he is supreme.

PSALM 47 (48)

Thanksgiving for Jerusalem's Deliverance

1 A psalm of the sons of Core; a song.
2 Great is the Lord and wholly to be praised in the city of our 3 God. His holy mountain, | fairest of heights, is the joy of all the earth; Mount Sion, "the recesses of the North," is the city
4 of the great King. | God is with her castles; renowned is he as a stronghold.
5.6 For lo! the kings assemble, they come on together; | they 7 also see, and at once are stunned, terrified, routed; | quaking
8 seizes them there; anguish, like a woman's in labor, | as though a wind from the east were shattering ships of Tharsis.

46, 2-10: This may be subclassified as a hymn on the kingship of Yahweh over all the world. See Ps 92, 1-5 n.

46, 2-5: All the Gentile nations must praise Yahweh as the one true God.

46, 6-10: When Yahweh shows He is God (vv. 6-7), then the nations will acknowledge Him (vv. 8-10).

46, 10: The princes of the peoples . . . The guardians of the earth: these may be the guardian angels of nations as in Dn 10, 13.

47, 2-15: A psalm of Sion. See Ps 45, 2-12 n.

47, 3: The recesses of the North: since this is the Olympus of the Syro-Phoenician gods, the sacred writer may be saying that the true abode of God is Jerusalem.

47, 5-6: Various guesses on an historical battle are made here, e.g., Sennacherib's defeat in 701 (see Is 36—37); the Syro-Ephraimite war against Juda in 734 B.C.

47, 8: Ships of Tharsis: we would say, "ocean liners." The text does not imply that the invasion was by sea.

9 As we had heard, so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God; God makes it firm forever. | 10.11 O God, we ponder your kindness within your temple. | As your name, O God, so also your praise reaches to the ends 12 of the earth. Of justice your right hand is full; | let Mount Sion be glad, let the cities of Juda rejoice, because of your judgments.
13.14 Go about Sion, make the round; count her towers. | Consider her ramparts, examine her castles, that you may tell a 15 future generation | that such is God, our God forever and ever;
he will guide us.

PSALM 48 (49)
The Vanity of Worldly Riches

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.
2 Hear this, all you peoples; hearken, all who dwell in the 3 world, | of lowly birth or high degree, rich and poor alike. |
4 My mouth shall speak wisdom; prudence shall be the utterance 5 of my heart. | My ear is intent upon a proverb; I will set forth my riddle to the music of the harp.
6 Why should I fear in evil days when my wicked ensnarers 7 ring me round? | They trust in their wealth; the abundance of 8 their riches is their boast. | Yet in no way can a man redeem
9 himself, or pay his own ransom to God; | too high is the price
10 to redeem one's life; he would never have enough | to remain
11 alive always and not see destruction. | For he can see that wise men die, and likewise the senseless and the stupid pass away, 12 leaving to others their wealth. | Tombs are their homes forever, their dwellings through all generations, though they have called 13 lands by their names. | Thus man, for all his splendor, does not abide; he resembles the beasts that perish.
14 This is the way of those whose trust is folly, the end of those 15 contented with their lot: | like sheep they are herded into the nether world; death is their shepherd, and the upright rule over them. Quickly their form is consumed; the nether world

47, 9: As we had heard: of the heroic exploits God worked through our ancestors. So have we seen: in our own recent experience (see vv. 5-6 n).

47, 15: He will guide us: through the ages.

48, 2-21: This is an evident wisdom psalm on the "riddle" (v. 5) or problem of evil. The psalmist asks himself how the wealthy people who persecuted him will be punished. His answer (vv. 8-10) is that death will make all men equal. Even wealth cannot prevent this leveling process of death.

48, 6-7: Since wealth was traditionally regarded as a sign of God's favor, the psalmist is taking a different view in belittling riches.

16 is their palace. | But God will redeem me from the power of the nether world by receiving me.
17 Fear not when a man grows rich, when the wealth of his 18 house becomes great, | for when he dies, he shall take none of 19 it; his wealth shall not follow him down. | Though in his lifetime he counted himself blessed, "They will praise you for 20 doing well for yourself," | he shall join the circle of his fore-21 bears who shall never more see light. | Man, for all his splendor, if he have not prudence, resembles the beasts that perish.

PSALM 49 (50)

The Acceptable Sacrifice

1 A psalm of Asaph.
God the Lord has spoken and summoned the earth, from the 2 rising of the sun to its setting. | From Sion, perfect in beauty,
3 God shines forth. | May our God come and not be deaf to us!
Before him is a devouring fire; around him is a raging storm. |
4 He summons the heavens from above, and the earth, to the trial 5 of his people: | "Gather my faithful ones before me, those 6 who have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." | And the heavens proclaim his justice; for God himself is the judge.
7 "Hear, my people, and I will speak; Israel, I will testify
8 against you; God, your God, am I. | Not for your sacrifices do 9 I rebuke you, for your holocausts are before me always. | I take 10 from your house no bullock, no goats out of your fold. | For mine are all the animals of the forests, beasts by the thousand 11 on my mountains. | I know all the birds of the air, and what-12 ever stirs in the plains, belongs to me. | If I were hungry, I should not tell you, for mine are the world and its fullness. | 13 Do I eat the flesh of strong bulls, or is the blood of goats my 14 drink? | Offer to God praise as your sacrifice and fulfill your 15 vows to the Most High; | then call upon me in time of distress;
I will rescue you, and you shall glorify me." 16 But to the wicked man God says: "Why do you recite my 17 statutes, and profess my covenant with your mouth, | though

48, 16: Although the psalmist does not yet know the reward of an eternal afterlife of bliss, he gropingly seems to conclude that the final lot of the good ought to be different from that of the wicked. Other opinions say that the psalmist is merely wishing God may save him from death, or that he wishes to be taken up to heaven like Elias.

49, 1-23: Irrespective of its category, the meaning of the psalm is clear, namely, God prefers prayerful praise and fulfillment of vows (v. 14), the right way of good conduct (v. 23) to external sacrifice. This is a traditional teaching of the prophets, e.g., Is 1, 10ff.

49, 2: The Advent liturgy uses vv. 2, 3, 5.

49, 16-21: The ways of the hypocrite.

18 you hate discipline and cast my words behind you? | When you see a thief, you keep pace with him, and with adulterers 19 you throw in your lot. | To your mouth you give free rein for 20 evil, you harness your tongue to deceit. | You sit speaking against your brother; against your mother's son you spread 21 rumors. | When you do these things, shall I be deaf to it? Or think you that I am like yourself? I will correct you by drawing them up before your eyes.
22 "Consider this, you who forget God, lest I rend you and 23 there be no one to rescue you. | He that offers praise as a sacrifice glorifies me; and to him that goes the right way I will show the salvation of God."

PSALM 50 (51)

The Miserere: Prayer of Repentance

1,2 For the leader. A psalm of David, | when Nathan the prophet came to him after his sin with Bethsabee.
3 Have mercy on me, O God, in your goodness; in the greatness 4 of your compassion wipe out my offense. | Thoroughly wash me from my guilt and of my sin cleanse me.
5 For I acknowledge my offense, and my sin is before me 6 always: | "Against you only have I sinned, and done what is evil in your sight"—that you may be justified in your sentence, 7 vindicated when you condemn. | Indeed, in guilt was I born,
8 and in sin my mother conceived me; | behold, you are pleased with sincerity of heart, and in my inmost being you teach me wisdom.
9 Cleanse me of sin with hyssop, that I may be purified; wash

---

50, 3-21: This lament of an individual for an unknown grievous sin is the fourth and most famous of the seven penitential psalms. See Ps 6, 2-11 n. It is a pre-eminent repentance song because among other reasons, the psalmist does not blame anyone, not even persecutors, as so many other psalmists do. The strongest argument against understanding this psalm as having been occasioned by David's adultery with Bethsabee (see title vv. 1-2) is verse 6: "Against you (God) only have I sinned." It is difficult to attribute this sentiment to David who also wronged Urias, the husband of Bethsabee. The psalm may be exilic.

50, 6: See 50, 3-21 n. This may be the only example in the whole Psalter where the sin is known only to the psalmist. That you may be justified in your sentence: the psalmist acknowledges his sin (v. 5), so that when people see God's sentence upon him (e.g., an illness in punishment for his sin, according to the ideas of the time), God will then be "justified" and "vindicated."

50, 7: The lamenting poet admits his inveterate propensity toward sin. This is not the revelation of original sin.

50, 9: Hyssop: a small brush with twigs of wood used as a sprinkler in the liturgy (Ex 12, 22) for symbolic cleansing. The penitent here asks to be literally "un-sinned," as the Hebrew word has it.

me, and I shall be whiter than snow. | Let me hear the sounds of joy and gladness; the bones you have crushed shall rejoice. |
Turn away your face from my sins, and blot out all my guilt.
A clean heart create for me, O God, and a steadfast spirit renew within me. | Cast me not out from your presence, and your holy spirit take not from me. | Give me back the joy of your salvation, and a willing spirit sustain in me.
I will teach transgressors your ways, and sinners shall return to you. | Free me from blood guilt, O God, my saving God;
then my tongue shall revel in your justice. | O Lord, open my lips, and my mouth shall proclaim your praise. | For you are not pleased with sacrifices; should I offer a holocaust, you would not accept it. | My sacrifice, O God, is a contrite spirit;
a heart contrite and humbled, O God, you will not spurn.
Be bountiful, O Lord, to Sion in your kindness by rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem; | then shall you be pleased with due sacrifices, burnt offerings and holocausts; then shall they offer up bullocks on your altar.

PSALM 51 (52)
The Deceitful Tongue

For the leader. A maskil of David, | when Doeg the Edomite went and told Saul, "David went to the house of Ahimelech." Why do you glory in evil, you champion of infamy? All the day | you plot harm; your tongue is like a sharpened razor, you practiced deceiver! | You love evil rather than good, falsehood rather than honest speech. | You love all that means ruin, you of the deceitful tongue!
God himself shall demolish you; forever he shall break you;
he shall pluck you from your tent, and uproot you from the land of the living.
The just shall look on with awe; then they shall laugh at him: | "This is the man who made not God the source of his strength, but put his trust in his great wealth, and his strength in harmful plots." | But I, like a green olive tree in the house of God, trust in the kindness of God forever and ever. | I will thank you always for what you have done, and proclaim the goodness of your name before your faithful ones.

50, 16: Blood guilt: the literal translation is "blood(s)" which may also mean death, and therefore the request would be the deliverance from a premature death.

50, 18-19: The same idea as in Ps 49.

50, 20-21: The majority opinion considers these verses a liturgical addition from exilic or postexilic times.

51, 3-11: This wisdom psalm is a complaint against a wealthy indi-

PSALM 52 (53)

Lament over Widespread Corruption

1 For the leader; according to Mahalath. A maskil of David.
2 The fool says in his heart, "There is no God." Such are corrupt, they do abominable deeds; there is not one who does 3 good.
God looks down from heaven upon the children of men 4 to see if there be one who is wise and seeks God.
All alike have gone astray; they have become perverse; there is not one who does good, not even one.
5 Will all these evildoers never learn, they who eat up my people just as they eat bread, who call not upon God?
There they were in great fear, where no fear was,
for God has scattered the bones of your besiegers; they are put to shame, because God has rejected them.
7 Oh, that out of Zion would come the salvation of Israel!
When God restores the well-being of his people, then shall Jacob exult and Israel be glad.

PSALM 53 (54)

Confident Prayer in Great Peril

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David, 2 when the Ziphites went and said to Saul, "David is hiding among us." 3 O God, by your name save me, and by your might defend my 4 cause.
O God, hear my prayer;
hearken to the words of my mouth.
5 For haughty men have risen up against me, and fierce men seek my life;
they set not God before their eyes.
7 Behold, God is my helper;
the Lord sustains my life.

wicked who cheats others. The psalmist forecasts that God will punish him with an early death. This is one of the stock answers to the traditional theme: God punishes the wicked on earth. Since v. 10 speaks of the temple ("the house of God") the title (vv. 1–2) is not regarded as the occasion for this psalm. The title refers to 1 Sm 21:8.

52. 3–7: This lament of an individual is on the general corruption of the day. The psalm is the same as Ps 13 except for a few differences, especially vv. 5–6. Besides, Ps 13 is called the Yahwistic version because it uses Yahweh for the name of God. Ps 52 is called the Elohistic version because it uses Elohim. Both versions were probably written during the exile in Babylon or the sixth century B.C. Ps 13 seems to be close to the original version, if it is not the original version itself.

52. 6 God has scattered the bones of your besiegers: probably a graphic way of saying that God shamed and rejected the besiegers.

53. 3–9: This is a lament of an individual against foes. The title (vv. 1–2) refers to an incident in David's life, as recounted in 1 Sm 23:19, but it is disputed whether the psalm really refers to it.

53. 3: By your name: a synonym for God's power.

7 Turn back the evil upon my foes; in your faithfulness destroy 8 them. | Freely will I offer you sacrifice; I will praise your name, 9 O Lord, for its goodness, | because from all distress you have rescued me, and my eyes look down upon my enemies.

PSALM 54 (55)

Complaint against Enemies and a Disloyal Companion

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. A maskil of David.
2 Hearken, O God, to my prayer; turn not away from my 3 pleading; | give heed to me, and answer me. I rock with grief,
4 and am troubled | at the voice of the enemy and the clamor of the wicked. For they bring down evil upon me, and with fury
5 they persecute me. | My heart quakes within me; the terror of 6 death has fallen upon me. | Fear and trembling come upon me,
7 and horror overwhelms me, | and I say, "Had I but wings like 8 a dove, I would fly away and be at rest. | Far away I would 9 flee; I would lodge in the wilderness. | I would hasten to find shelter from the violent storm and the tempest."
10 Engulf them, O Lord; divide their counsels, for in the city
11 I see violence and strife; | day and night they prowl about upon
12 its walls. Evil and mischief are in its midst; | [treachery is in its midst;] oppression and fraud never depart from its streets. |
13 If an enemy had reviled me, I could have borne it; if he who hates me had vaunted himself against me, I might have hidden 14 from him. | But you, my other self, my companion and my 15 bosom friend! | You, whose comradeship I enjoyed; at whose side I walked in procession in the house of God!
16 Let death surprise them; let them go down alive to the nether 17 world, for evil is in their dwellings, in their very midst. | But 18 I will call upon God, and the Lord will save me. | In the evening, and at dawn, and at noon, I will grieve and moan, and
19 he will hear my voice. | He will give me freedom and peace from those who war against me, for many there are who
20 oppose me. | God will hear me and will humble them from his eternal throne; for improvement is not in them, nor do they

54, 2-24: This psalm is an individual's lament. He wants to flee a wicked city and especially a former friend (vv. 14-15). He asks for the punishment of the wicked and for his own safety. It may date from the eighth to sixth century B.C.

54, 12: Treachery is in its midst: apparently this is merely a variant reading of the preceding line.

54, 16: The poet wishes them a premature death ("go down alive into the nether world"). See Jer 12, 3 n.

21 fear God. | Each one lays hands on his associates, and violates
22 his pact. | Softer than butter is his speech, but war is in his heart; his words are smoother than oil, but they are drawn
23 swords. | Cast your care upon the Lord, and he will support 24 you; never will he permit the just man to be disturbed. | And you, O God, will bring them down into the pit of destruction; men of blood and deceit shall not live out half their days. But I trust in you, O Lord.

PSALM 55 (56)
Trust in God, the Helper in Need

1 For the leader; according to Jonath . . . rehokim. A miktam of David, when the Philistines held him in Geth.

2 Have pity on me, O God, for men trample upon me; all the 3 day they press their attack against me. | My adversaries trample upon me all the day; yes, many fight against me. O Most High,
4.5 | when I begin to fear, in you will I trust. | In God, in whose promise I glory, in God I trust without fear; what can flesh do against me?

6 All the day they molest me in my efforts; their every thought 7 is of evil against me. | They gather together in hiding, they
8 watch my steps. As they have waited for my life, | because of their wickedness keep them in view: in your wrath bring down
9 the peoples, O God. | My wanderings you have counted; my tears are stored in your flask; are they not recorded in your 10 book? | Then do my enemies turn back, when I call upon you;
11 now I know that God is with me. | In God, in whose promise
12 I glory, | in God I trust without fear; what can flesh do against me?

13 I am bound, O God, by vows to you; your thank offerings I 14 will fulfill. | For you have rescued me from death, my feet, too, from stumbling; that I may walk before God in the light of the living.

54, 23: This verse is quoted in 1 Pt 5, 7 with the same meaning as here.

55, 2-14: The psalm is an individual lament of one who is wronged by his enemies. Trusting in God the psalmist vows a sacrifice of thanksgiving. The title refers to the historical incident of 1 Sm 21, 11f but there seems to be no reference in the psalm to this Davidic episode.

55, 5: Flesh: mortal man.

55, 9: My tears are stored in your flask: an unusual figure of God collecting the tears of the psalmist in a bottle with the intention of requiring recompense for them.

PSALM 56 (57)

Confident Prayer for Deliverance

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David, when he fled away from Saul into the cave.
2 Have pity on me, O God; have pity on me, for in you I take refuge. In the shadow of your wings I take refuge, till harm 3 pass by. | I call to God the Most High, to God, my benefactor.
4 | May he send from heaven and save me; may he make those a reproach who trample upon me; may God send his kindness 5 and his faithfulness. | I lie prostrate in the midst of lions which devour men; their teeth are spears and arrows, their tongue is a 6 sharp sword. | Be exalted above the heavens, O God; above all the earth be your glory!
7 They have prepared a net for my feet; they have bowed me down; they have dug a pit before me, but they fall into it.
8 My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast; I will 9 sing and chant praise. | Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and 10 harp! I will wake the dawn. | I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O Lord, I will chant your praise among the nations, 11 | for your kindness towers to the heavens, and your faithful-
12 ness to the skies. | Be exalted above the heavens, O God; above all the earth be your glory!

PSALM 57 (58)

Against Unjust Judges

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David.
2 Do you indeed like gods pronounce justice and judge fairly,
3 you men of rank? | Nay, you willingly commit crimes; on 4 earth you look to the fruits of extortion. | From the womb the wicked are perverted; astray from birth have the liars gone. | 5 Theirs is poison like a serpent's, like that of a stubborn snake

56, 2-12: A lament of an individual trustingly asking for help. It is doubtful that the title has anything to do with the psalm.

56, 1: Do not destroy: here, and in the next two psalms, as well as in Ps 74, this expression is probably a mere annotation by some early scribe who wished to keep his copy from being discarded.

56, 5: The poet compares his enemies to "lions." The false accusations of the enemies are compared to lions' teeth.

56, 6: The same refrain also ends the second stanza in v. 12.

56, 8-12: These verses reappear with slight variations in Ps 107, 2-6.

56, 10: I will wake the dawn: with my music.

57, 2-12: The psalm is a public lament against law-breaking judges whom God will punish for making society suffer.

57, 1: Do not destroy: see Ps 56, 1 n.

57, 2: Like gods: the sense is: Do you, in taking God's place in pronouncing judgment, judge fairly?

6 that stops its ears, | that it may not hear the voice of enchanters casting cunning spells.
7 O God, smash their teeth in their mouths; the jaw-teeth of 8 the lions, break, O Lord! | Let them vanish like water flowing off; when they draw the bow, let their arrows be headless 9 shafts. | Let them dissolve like a melting snail, like an untimely 10 birth that never sees the sun. | Unexpectedly, like a thorn-bush, 11 or like thistles, let the whirlwind carry them away. | The just man shall be glad when he sees vengeance; he shall bathe his 12 feet in the blood of the wicked. | And men shall say, "Truly there is a reward for the just; truly there is a God who is judge on earth!"

PSALM 58 (59)
Against Bloodthirsty Enemies

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A miktam of David when Saul sent men to watch his house and put him to death.
2 Rescue me from my enemies, O my God; from my adver-
3 saries defend me. | Rescue me from evildoers; from blood-4 thirsty men save me. | For behold, they lie in wait for my life; mighty men come together against me. Not for any offense or 5 sin of mine, O Lord; | for no guilt of mine they hurry to take 6 up arms. Rouse yourself to see it, and aid me, | for you are the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel. Arise; punish all the nations; have no pity on any worthless traitors.
7 Each evening they return, they snarl like dogs and prowl 8 about the city. | Though they bay with their mouths, and blasphemies are on their lips—"Who is there to listen?"— |
9 You, O Lord, laugh at them; you deride all the nations. | 10 O my strength! for you I watch; for you, O God, are my 11 stronghold, | my gracious God!
May God come to my aid; may he show me the fall of my 12 foes. | O God, slay them, lest they beguile my people; shake

57, 9: Like a melting snail: if the Hebrew text is clear it alludes to the ancient belief that snails melted away to nothing. Perhaps this idea originated from dead snails leaving nothing but empty shells.

57, 10: The Hebrew is obscure.

57, 11: Besides recalling the hardy realism of the Semites and their love of hyperbole, the psalmist knew no other way of expressing God's justice against the wicked than through temporal punishment.

58, 2-18: The psalm is a lament for God's help against enemies.

58, 1: Do not destroy: see Ps 56, 1 n.

58, 8: Who is there to listen?: the blasphemous enemies ask if God hears about their evil deeds.

58, 11b-14: In asking for God's help against the enemies this stanza is similar to the stanza of vv. 2-6.

them by your power, and bring them down, O Lord our shield! | 13 By the sin of their mouths and the word of their lips let them be caught in their arrogance, for the lies they have told under 14 oath. | Consume them in wrath; consume, till they are no more; that men may know that God is the ruler of Jacob, yes, to the ends of the earth.
15 Each evening they return, they snarl like dogs and prowl
16 about the city; | they wander about as scavengers; if they are 17 not filled, they howl. | But I will sing of your strength and revel at dawn in your kindness; you have been my stronghold, my 18 refuge in the day of distress. | O my strength! your praise will I sing; for you, O God, are my stronghold, my gracious God!

PSALM 59 (60)

Prayer after Defeat in Battle

1 For the leader; according to "The Lily of. . . ." A miktam of 2 David (for teaching) | when he fought against Aram Naharaim and Aram Soba; and Joab, coming back, killed twelve thousand Edomites in the "valley of salt."
3 O God, you have rejected us and broken our defenses; you 4 have been angry; rally us! | You have rocked the country and 5 split it open; repair the cracks in it, for it is tottering. | You have made your people feel hardships; you have given us 6 stupefying wine. | You have raised for those who fear you a 7 banner to which they may flee out of bowshot | that your loved ones may escape; help us by your right hand, and answer us!
8 God promised in his sanctuary: "Exultantly I will apportion 9 Sichem, and measure off the valley of Socchoth. | Mine is Galaad, and mine Manasse; Ephraim is the helmet for my head;

58, 14: See Ps 57, 11 n on vengeance.

58, 15-18: This refrain, in which the psalmist compares the enemies to dogs, resembles the refrain of vv. 7-11a.

59, 3-14: This national psalm laments a national military defeat. The people remind God of His promise of giving them Chanaan and victory over their neighbors (vv. 8-10). The title (vv. 1-2) refers to David's war in the North and his sending Joab to defeat the Edomites in the South (2 Sm 8). However, it is disputed if the title is the back ground for this psalm. One objection is that v. 9 speaks of only Ephraim and Juda, which seems to indicate a period after David and after the schism of the two kingdoms.

59, 3-7: The enemy did not destroy the army completely.

59, 8: I will apportion . . . and measure off: this is probably a summary statement of God's promise of Chanaan to His people (Gn 13, 14ff). V. 9 continues this idea.

59, 9: Galaad . . . Manasse: the land east of the Jordan River. Ephraim . . . Juda: the land west of the Jordan River. Ephraim is

10 Juda my scepter; | Moab shall serve as my washbowl; upon Edom I will set my shoe; I will triumph over Philistia." 11 Who will bring me into the fortified city? Who will lead me
12 into Edom? | Have not you, O God, rejected us, so that you go
13 not forth, O God, with our armies? | Give us aid against the 14 foe, for worthless is the help of men. | Under God we shall do valiantly; it is he who will tread down our foes.

PSALM 60 (61)

Prayer of the King in Exile

1 For the leader; with stringed instruments. Of David.
2.3 Hear, O God, my cry; listen to my prayer! | From the earth's end I call to you as my heart grows faint. You will set me high 4 upon a rock; you will give me rest, | for you are my refuge,
5 a tower of strength against the enemy. | Oh, that I might lodge in your tent forever, take refuge in the shelter of your wings!
6 You indeed, O God, have accepted my vows; you granted
7 me the heritage of those who fear your name. | Add to the days
8 of the king's life; let his years be many generations; | let him sit enthroned before God forever; bid kindness and faithfulness 9 preserve him. | So will I sing the praises of your name forever, fulfilling my vows day by day.

PSALM 61 (62)

Trust in God Alone

1 For the leader; 'al Idithun. A psalm of David.
2 Only in God is my soul at rest; from him comes my salva-3 tion. | He only is my rock and my salvation, my stronghold;
4 I shall not be disturbed at all. | How long will you set upon a man and all together beat him down as though he were a sagcalled the "helmet of my head" because it was the largest tribe and army in the North and Juda was the leader ("scepter").

59, 10: Moab is compared to a slave who washes his master's feet. Probably the "washbowl" refers to Moab's western border on the Dead Sea. Edom may be compared to a footstool, the sign of a conquered nation.

59, 11: The fortified city: probably the capital of Edom.

60, 2-9: The psalm is the lament of an exiled individual for the king (v. 7) which would probably date the psalm, or at least vv. 7-8, from the time of the monarchy.

60, 3: From the earth's end: this may refer to the extremity of Palestine or to the nether world.

60, 9: The vow is that he will praise God daily.

61, 2-13: The psalm is the lament of an individual who trusts in God as the rewarder of the just.

61, 2-3: This refrain is repeated in vv. 6-7.

5 ging fence, a battered wall? | Truly from my place on high they plan to dislodge me; they delight in lies; they bless with their mouths, but inwardly they curse.
6 Only in God be at rest, my soul, for from him comes my 7 hope. | He only is my rock and my salvation, my stronghold;
8 I shall not be disturbed. | With God is my safety and my glory, 9 he is the rock of my strength; my refuge is in God. | Trust in him at all times, O my people! Pour out your hearts before him.
God is our refuge!
10 Only a breath are mortal men; an illusion are men of rank; in a balance they prove lighter, all together, than a breath. | 11 Trust not in extortion; in plunder take no empty pride; though 12 wealth abound, set not your heart upon it. | One thing God said; these two things which I heard: that power belongs to 13 God, | and yours, O Lord, is kindness; and that you render to everyone according to his deeds.

PSALM 62 (63)

Ardent Longing for God

1 A psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Juda.
2 O God, you are my God whom I seek; for you my flesh pines and my soul thirsts like the earth, parched, lifeless and 3 without water. | Thus have I gazed toward you in the sanctuary
4 to see your power and your glory, | for your kindness is a greater good than life; my lips shall glorify you.
5 Thus will I bless you while I live; lifting up my hands, I 6 will call upon your name. | As with the riches of a banquet shall my soul be satisfied, and with exultant lips my mouth 7 shall praise you. | I will remember you upon my couch, and 8 through the night-watches I will meditate on you: | that you are my help, and in the shadow of your wings I shout for joy. | 9 My soul clings fast to you; your right hand upholds me.

61, 5: From my place on high they plan to dislodge me: socially.

61, 9: The poet, now addressing the people, exhorts them to learn from his experience.

61, 12: One thing . . . two things: this is a characteristic poetic device of numerical progression found in the Wisdom books.

61, 13: See 2 Tm 4, 14: "The Lord will render to him according to his deeds."

62, 2-12: The psalm is the lament of an individual longing to be in God's sanctuary (vv. 2-9). He is confident of victory over his enemies (vv. 10-11). It is doubtful whether these enemies refer to David's enemies of 2 Sm 15—17 in the title (v. 1).

62, 8: In the shadow of your wings: a probable reference to the wings of the Cherubim in the Holy of Holies.

10 But they shall be destroyed who seek my life, they shall go 11 into the depths of the earth; | they shall be delivered over to 12 the sword, and shall be the prey of jackals. | The king, however, shall rejoice in God; everyone who swears by him shall glory, but the mouths of those who speak falsely shall be stopped.

PSALM 63 (64)

Treacherous Conspirators Punished by God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 Hear, O God, my voice in my lament; from the dread enemy
3 preserve my life. | Shelter me against the council of malefactors,
4 against the tumult of evildoers, | who sharpen their tongues
5 like swords, who aim like arrows their bitter words, | shooting from ambush at the innocent man, suddenly shooting at him
6 without fear. | They resolve on their wicked plan; they conspire to set snares, saying, "Who will see us?"
7 They devise a wicked scheme, and conceal the scheme they have devised; deep are the thoughts of each heart.
8 But God shoots his arrows at them; suddenly they are 9 struck. | He brings them down by their own tongues, all who 10 see them nod their heads. | And all men fear and proclaim the 11 work of God, and ponder what he has done. | The just man is glad in the Lord and takes refuge in him; in him glory all the upright of heart.

PSALM 64 (65)

Thanksgiving for God's Blessings

1 For the leader. A psalm of David. A song.
2 To you we owe our hymn of praise, O God, in Sion; to you
3 must vows be fulfilled, you who hear prayers. | To you all

62, 10: They shall be destroyed: see Jer 17, 3 n on the notion of revenge. The depths of the earth: the nether world.

62, 11: Prey of jackals: a lack of proper burial as an abominable disgrace is common in the Bible.

62, 12: The king: this may indicate either that the poet of the psalm is the king, or the poet finishes his prayer by a reference to the king.

63, 2-11: The psalm is an individual lament against foes (vv. 5-7) whom God will punish (vv. 8-11).

63, 7ff: The Hebrew text is poorly preserved.

63, 9: Nod their heads: a common biblical gesture of ridicule.

64, 2-14: This is a national thanksgiving song of praise for rain which assured a bountiful harvest.

64, 2: Vows: the people usually vowed sacrifices to be carried out in the temple when God answered their requests.

64, 3: All flesh: all men.

flesh must come because of wicked deeds. We are overcome by our sins; it is you who pardon them. | Happy the man you choose, and bring to dwell in your courts. May we be filled with the good things of your house, the holy things of your temple!
With awe-inspiring deeds of justice you answer us, O God our savior, the hope of all the ends of the earth and of the distant seas. | You set the mountains in place by your power, you who are girt with might; | you still the roaring of the seas,
the roaring of their waves and the tumult of the peoples. |
And the dwellers at the earth's ends are in fear at your marvels;
the farthest east and west you make resound with joy.
You have visited the land and watered it; greatly have you enriched it. God's watercourses are filled; you have prepared the grain. | Thus have you prepared the land: drenching its furrows, breaking up its clods, softening it with showers, blessing its yield. | You have crowned the year with your bounty, and your paths overflow with a rich harvest; | the untilled meadows overflow with it, and rejoicing clothes the hills. | The fields are garmented with flocks and the valleys blanketed with grain. They shout and sing for joy.

PSALM 65 (66)

Praise of God, Israel's Deliverer

For the leader. A psalm; a song.
Shout joyfully to God, all you on earth, | sing praise to the 64, 4: Probably the people thought the drought that afflicted them was caused by their sins.

64, 5: Your courts . . . your house . . . your temple: three synonyms.

64, 6-9: The poet praises God by alluding to His creation of the world.

64, 12: Your paths overflow with a rich harvest: the Hebrew says literally: "Your wagon-wheel tracks drip with oil." The verse evokes the poetic picture of Yahweh voyaging through the land.

64, 13-14: Rejoicing clothes the hills . . . they shout and sing for joy: in a characteristic figure, nature is made to reflect the feelings of man.

65, 1-20: The psalm may have been originally two psalms. Part one (vv. 1-12) is a song of praise (vv. 1-7) thanking God for the avoidance of an unidentified national disaster (vv. 8-12). Experts differ on the date of this psalm according to their surmise of the event alluded to here. Perhaps it is best to abandon any hope of dating the psalm since the indications are too vague. Part two (vv. 13-20) is a thanksgiving song of an individual fulfilling his vows at the temple (vv. 13-15) and narrating how God heard his prayer (vv. 16-20).

65, 1: All you on earth: several psalms sing the universal acknowledgment of God's rule.

glory of his name; proclaim his glorious praise. | Say to God,
"How tremendous are your deeds! for your great strength your enemies fawn upon you. | Let all on earth worship and sing praise to you, sing praise to your name!" Come and see the works of God, his tremendous deeds among men. | He has changed the sea into dry land; through the river they passed on foot; therefore let us rejoice in him. | He rules by his might forever; his eyes watch the nations; rebels may not exalt themselves. | Bless our God, you peoples, loudly sound his praise; | he has given life to our souls, and has not let our feet slip. | For you have tested us, O God! You have tried us as silver is tried by fire; | you have brought us into a snare; you laid a heavy burden on our backs. | You let men ride over our heads; we went through fire and water, but you have led us out to refreshment.
I will bring holocausts to your house; to you I will fulfill the vows | which my lips uttered and my words promised in my distress. | Holocausts of fatlings I will offer you, with burnt offerings of rams; I will sacrifice oxen and goats. | Hear now, all you who fear God, while I declare what he has done for me. | When I appealed to him in words, praise was on the tip of my tongue. | Were I to cherish wickedness in my heart, the Lord would not hear; | but God has heard; he has hearkened to the sound of my prayer. | Blessed be God who refused me not my prayer or his kindness!

PSALM 66 (67)

Harvest Prayer that All Men May Worship God

For the leader; with stringed instruments. A psalm; a song.
May God have pity on us and bless us; may he let his face shine upon us. | So may your way be known upon earth; among all nations, your salvation. | May the peoples praise you, O God; may all the peoples praise you!
May the nations be glad and exult because you rule the peoples in equity; the nations on the earth you guide. | May 65, 6: Sea . . . river: God is praised by an allusion to the crossing of the Red Sea and the Jordan River.

65, 9: He has given life to our souls: this is fittingly accommodated in the Easter liturgy.

65, 17: The sense is: I hardly began making my request when I found myself thanking God for having heard my petition.

66, 2-8: This is a thanksgiving hymn for a plentiful harvest (v. 7) which prompts the poet to pray that the Gentiles recognize the wondrous deed and honor Yahweh.

66, 2: See the similarity in the priestly prayer of Nm 6, 24f.

66, 4: The refrain is repeated in v. 6.

the peoples praise you, O God; may all the peoples praise you!
7 The earth has yielded its fruits; God, our God, has blessed 8 us. | May God bless us, and may all the ends of the earth fear him!

PSALM 67 (68)

God's Triumphal Procession

1 For the leader. A psalm of David; a song.
2 God arises; his enemies are scattered, and those who hate
3 him flee before him. | As smoke is driven away, so are they driven; as wax melts before the fire, so the wicked perish before
4 God. | But the just rejoice and exult before God; they are glad and rejoice.
5 Sing to God, chant praise to his name, extol him who rides upon the clouds, whose name is the Lord; exult before him. |
6 The father of orphans and the defender of widows is God in 7 his holy dwelling. | God gives a home to the forsaken; he leads forth prisoners to prosperity; only rebels remain in the parched land.
8 O God, when you went forth at the head of your people,
9 when you marched through the wilderness, | the earth quaked; it rained from heaven at the presence of God, at the presence
10 of God, the God of Israel. [This is Sinai.] | A bountiful rain you showered down, O God, upon your inheritance; you re-
11 stored the land when it languished; | your flock settled in it; in your goodness, O God, you provided it for the needy.
12 The Lord gives the word; women bear the glad tidings, a 13 vast army: | "Kings and their hosts are fleeing, fleeing, and the 67, 2-36: All scholars acknowledge that this is one of the most difficult yet one of the most pulsating psalms in the Psalter. The poor condition of the Hebrew text has contributed to the variety of opinions on its date, ranging from the thirteenth to the second century B.C. Nevertheless, it is clearly a triumphant thanksgiving hymn of praise in which we should not expect close logical unity.

67, 2: This is patently modeled on Moses' prayer when the Ark of the Covenant began its trip into the desert (Nm 10, 35).

67, 3-4: The just defeat the wicked.

67, 5-7: God is praised.

67, 5: Extol him who rides upon the clouds: although the Hebrew text is obscure, it is clear that "the Rider of the Clouds" as an epithet of Yahweh in several biblical texts derives ultimately from the Chanaanites before the time of Moses.

67, 8-15: A glowing description of Yahweh leading His people from Egypt to Sinai (vv. 8-11) and conquering the Promised Land of Chanaan (vv. 12-15).

67, 12: A vast army of women herald the word of Yahweh.

household shall divide the spoils. | Though you rested among the sheepfolds, the wings of the dove shone with silver, and her pinions with a golden hue. | While the Almighty dispersed the kings there, snow fell on Salmon." High the mountains of Basan; rugged the mountains of Basan. | Why look you jealously, you rugged mountains, at the mountain God has chosen for his throne, where the Lord himself will dwell forever? | The chariots of God are myriad, thousands on thousands; the Lord advances from Sinai to the sanctuary. | You have ascended on high, taken captives, received men as gifts—even rebels; the Lord God enters his dwelling.
Blessed day by day be the Lord, who bears our burdens;
God, who is our salvation. | God is a saving God for us; the Lord, my Lord, controls the passageways of death. | Surely God crushes the heads of his enemies, the hairy crowns of those who stalk about in their guilt. | The Lord said: "I will fetch them back from Basan; I will fetch them back from the depths of the sea, | so that you will bathe your feet in blood;
the tongues of your dogs will have their share of your enemies." They view your progress, O God, the progress of my God, my King, into the sanctuary; | the singers lead, the minstrels follow, in their midst the maidens play on timbrels. | In your choirs bless God; bless the Lord, you of Israel's wellspring! |
There is Benjamin, the youngest, leading them; the princes of Juda in a body, the princes of Zabulon, the princes of Nephthali.
Show forth, O God, your power, the power, O God, with 67, 14-15: The obscure Hebrew text does not help in identifying the battle.

67, 14: Though you rested among the sheepfolds: though you were unable by yourselves, God saw to it that your armies ("dove"?) were victorious.

67, 15: Snow fell: probably means that the enemy fell as numerous as snowflakes. Salmon: probably a mountain near Basan, east of the Sea of Galilee (v. 16).

67, 16-19: God chose Jerusalem ("mountain," v. 17).

67, 19: On high: probably Jerusalem. Captives: the Chanaanites. Received men as gifts: as tokens of victory. Paul (Eph 4, 8) quotes this phrase according to the Septuagint (Greek translation of the Hebrew) thus: "He gave to men" and applies it to Christ giving charismatic gifts to the first Christians after His ascension into heaven. The liturgy of the Ascension frequently uses this expression, "He led captivity captive" to mean: He triumphed victoriously.

67, 20-24: God's victories.

67, 25-28: This is a rare biblical description of an actual ceremonial procession.

67, 29-32: The poet petitions Yahweh to extend His rule over the Gentiles.

30 which you took our part; | for your temple in Jerusalem let 31 the kings bring you gifts. | Rebuke the wild beast of the reeds, the herd of strong bulls and the bullocks, the nations. Let them prostrate themselves with bars of silver; scatter the peoples who 32 delight in war. | Let nobles come from Egypt; let Ethiopia extend its hands to God.
33 You kingdoms of the earth, sing to God, chant praise to the 34 Lord | who rides on the heights of the ancient heavens. Behold, 35 his voice resounds, the voice of power: | "Confess the power of God!" Over Israel is his majesty; his power is in the skies. | 36 Awesome in his sanctuary is God, the God of Israel; he gives power and strength to his people. Blessed be God!

PSALM 68 (69)

A Cry of Anguish in Great Distress

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Of David.
2.3 Save me, O God, for the waters threaten my life; | I am sunk in the abysmal swamp where there is no foothold; I have 4 reached the watery depths; the flood overwhelms me. | I am wearied with calling, my throat is parched; my eyes have failed 5 with looking for my God. | Those outnumber the hairs of my head who hate me without cause. Too many for my strength are they who wrongfully are my enemies. Must I restore what I did not steal?
6 O God, you know my folly, and my faults are not hid from 7 you. | Let not those who wait for you be put to shame through me, O Lord, God of hosts. Let not those who seek you blush 8 for me, O God of Israel, | since for your sake I bear insult, and 9 shame covers my face. | I have become an outcast to my 67, 31: The wild beast of the reeds: probably Egypt. Bars of silver: gifts or tribute.

67, 33-36: The whole world praises Yahweh.

67, 34: Who rides: see v. 5 n.

68, 2-37: Similar to Ps 21 this is an individual lament of a suffering just man. The psalm is not speaking literally and directly of the Messia, but of the unknown sufferer at the time of the psalm itself. However, the psalm is Messianic in this sense that this historical person is a type of Christ, the innocent sufferer pre-eminently. The psalm is often dated as pre-exilic but hardly Davidic, e.g., the temple (v. 10) came after David's time.

The Lenten liturgy applies this psalm to the Suffering Innocent Christ.

68, 2-13: The wretched condition of the poet (vv. 2-5) is unjustly inflicted upon him (vv. 6-13).

68, 2: Waters: a frequent figure for sorrows in the psalms.

68, 5: Who hates me without cause: Jn 15, 25 sees this phrase fulfilled in Christ.

10 brothers, a stranger to my mother's sons, | because zeal for your house consumes me, and the insults of those who blaspheme 11 you fall upon me. | I humbled myself with fasting, and this 12 was made a reproach to me. | I made sackcloth my garment, 13 and I became a byword for them. | They who sit at the gate gossip about me, and drunkards make me the butt of their songs.
14 But I pray to you, O Lord, for the time of your favor, O God! In your great kindness answer me with your constant 15 help. | Rescue me out of the mire; may I not sink! may I be 16 rescued from my foes, and from the watery depths. | Let not the flood-waters overwhelm me, nor the abyss swallow me up, 17 nor the pit close its mouth over me. | Answer me, O Lord, for bounteous is your kindness; in your great mercy turn toward 18 me. | Hide not your face from your servant; in my distress, 19 make haste to answer me. | Come and ransom my life; as an 20 answer for my enemies, redeem me. | You know my reproach, my shame and my ignominy; before you are all my foes. | 21 Insult has broken my heart, and I am weak, I looked for sympathy, but there was none; for comforters, and I found none. | 22 Rather they put gall in my food, and in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.
23 Let their own table be a snare before them, and a net for their 24 friends. | Let their eyes grow dim so that they cannot see, and 25 keep their backs always feeble. | Pour out your wrath upon 26 them; let the fury of your anger overtake them. | Let their encampment become desolate; in their tents let there be no one 27 to dwell. | For they kept after him whom you smote, and added
28 to the pain of him you wounded. | Heap guilt upon their guilt, 29 and let them not attain to your reward. | May they be erased from the book of the living, and not be recorded with the just!
30 But I am afflicted and in pain; let your saving help, O God, 68, 10: Zeal for your house consumes me: Jn 2, 17 interprets this phrase as fulfilled in Christ.

68, 10b: Rom 15, 3 quotes this to exemplify Christ's unselfishness.

68, 14-22: The poet seeks God's assistance.

68, 22: Gall: probably the juice of a bitter plant. Jn 19, 28-30 sees Christ fulfilling this text in the vinegar offered to Him on the cross.

68, 23-29: This is a stereotyped sketch of the unjust according to temporal retribution: prosperity of the wicked-misfortune-death-extinction of his posterity. On the psalmist's vengeance, see Jer 12, 3 n.

68, 23: Let them and their friends trip over their tablecloth ("table") which was spread on the ground.

68, 26: Peter (Acts 1, 20) applies this verse to Judas.

68, 29: God is pictured with a book which contains the names of all living persons. When they die their names are "erased."

68, 30-35: The psalmist will thank God through a sacrifice of praise.

31 protect me. | I will praise the name of God in song, and I will 32 glorify him with thanksgiving; | this will please the Lord more 33 than oxen or bullocks with horns and divided hooves: | "See, you lowly ones, and be glad; you who seek God, may your 34 hearts be merry! | For the Lord hears the poor, and his own 35 who are in bonds he spurns not. | Let the heavens and the earth praise him, the seas and whatever moves in them!" 36 For God will save Sion and rebuild the cities of Juda. They 37 shall dwell in the land and own it, | and the descendants of his servants shall inherit it, and those who love his name shall inhabit it.

PSALM 69 (70)

Prayer for Divine Help

1 For the leader; of David. For remembrance.
2 Deign, O God, to rescue me; O Lord, make haste to help me.
3 | Let them be put to shame and confounded who seek my life.
4 Let them be turned back in disgrace who desire my ruin. | Let 5 them retire in their shame who say to me, "Aha, aha!" | But may all who seek you exult and be glad in you, and may those 6 who love your salvation say ever, "God be glorified!" | But I am afflicted and poor; O God, hasten to me! You are my help and my deliverer; O Lord, hold not back!

PSALM 70 (71)

1 Humble Prayer in Time of Old Age In you, O Lord, I 2 take refuge; let me never be put to shame. | In your justice rescue me, and deliver me; incline your ear to me, and save 3 me. | Be my rock of refuge, a stronghold to give me safety, 4 for you are my rock and my fortress. | O my God, rescue me from the hand of the wicked, from the grasp of the criminal 5 and the violent. | For you are my hope, O Lord; my trust, 6 O God, from my youth. | On you I depend from birth; from 68, 31f: Sincere praise and thanksgiving will please God more than animal sacrifice.

68, 33-34: These verses refer to the poor folk spirituality (see So 2, 3 n).

68, 36f: The couplet was added in hope of the end of the Babylonian exile. See Ps 50, 20-21 n.

69, 2-6: The psalm is almost the same as Ps 39, 14-18.

70, 1-24: This psalm is a lament of an old psalmist (v. 9) afflicted by foes but he trusts in God. Many verses resemble other psalms. The descriptions in the psalm are too vague to identify the exact complaints and their background.

The Liturgy very appropriately uses this psalm in the Mass for a good death.

my mother's womb you are my strength; constant has been my 7 hope in you. | A portent am I to many, but you are my strong 8 refuge! | My mouth shall be filled with your praise, with your glory day by day.
9 Cast me not off in my old age; as my strength fails, forsake 10 me not, | for my enemies speak against me, and they who keep 11 watch against my life take counsel together. | They say, "God has forsaken him; pursue and seize him, for there is no one to 12 rescue him." | O God, be not far from me; my God, make 13 haste to help me. | Let them be put to shame and consumed who attack my life; let them be wrapped in ignominy and 14 disgrace who seek to harm me. | But I will always hope and 15 praise you ever more and more. | My mouth shall declare your justice, day by day your salvation, though I know not their 16 extent. | I will treat of the mighty works of the Lord; O God,
I will tell of your singular justice.
17 O God, you have taught me from my youth, and till the 18 present I proclaim your wondrous deeds; | and now that I am old and gray, O God, forsake me not till I proclaim your 19 strength to every generation that is to come. | Your power and your justice, O God, reach to heaven. You have done great 20 things; O God, who is like you? | Though you have made me feel many bitter afflictions, you will again revive me; from the depths of the earth you will once more raise me.
21 Renew your benefits toward me, and comfort me over and 22 over. | So will I give you thanks with music on the lyre, for your faithfulness, O my God! I will sing your praises with the harp, 23 O Holy One of Israel! | My lips shall shout for joy as I sing 24 your praises; my soul also, which you have redeemed, | and my tongue day by day shall discourse on your justice. How shamed and how disgraced are those who sought to harm me!

PSALM 71 (72)

The Kingdom of the Messia

1 Of Solomon.
Of God, with your judgment endow the king, and with your 2 justice, the king's son; | he shall govern your people with jus-

70, 20: From the depths of the earth: from the clutches of death.
71, 1-20: Although this psalm is never quoted in the New Testament there is general agreement, following upon a long Jewish and Christian tradition, that it is a royal Messianic psalm; but there is wide disagreement on its date and in what sense it is Messianic. A solid modern opinion regards this psalm as originally written, perhaps in pre-exilic times, for an unknown historical Davidic king upon the occasion of his accession to the throne or his birthday or some solemn

3 tice and your afflicted ones with judgment. | The mountains 4 shall yield peace for the people, and the hills justice. | He shall defend the afflicted among the people, save the children of the poor, and crush the oppressor.
5 May he endure as long as the sun, and like the moon through 6 all generations. | He shall be like rain coming down on the 7 meadow, like showers watering the earth. | Justice shall flower in his days, and profound peace, till the moon be no more.
8 May he rule from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends
9 of the earth. | His foes shall bow before him, and his enemies 10 shall lick the dust. | The kings of Tharsis and the Isles shall offer gifts; the kings of Arabia and Saba shall bring tribute. | 11 All kings shall pay him homage, all nations shall serve him.
12 For he shall rescue the poor man when he cries out, and the 13 afflicted when he has no one to help him. | He shall have pity for the lowly and the poor; the lives of the poor he shall save. | 14 From fraud and violence he shall redeem them, and precious shall their blood be in his sight.
15 May he live to be given the gold of Arabia, and to be prayed 16 for continually; day by day shall they bless him. | May there be an abundance of grain upon the earth; on the tops of the mountains the crops shall rustle like Lebanon; the city dwellers 17 shall flourish like the verdure of the fields. | May his name be festival. The historical king is described as representative of the Davidic dynasty which accounts for the exaggerated royal qualities. Later, perhaps in postexilic times, when the psalm may have been expanded, it was reread in the direct hope of a personal Messia.

The Advent liturgy uses this psalm to mean Christ.

71, 1: Of Solomon: scholars do not generally regard this title as indicative of the date of the psalm. The king . . . the king's son: this expression signifies the same person. Justice: notice the prevalence of this explicitly stated Messianic quality in this psalm (vv. 2, 3, 7).

71, 5: The perpetuity of the dynasty is proclaimed here and in v. 17.

71, 8-11: The world-wide rule of the king.

71, 8: The interpretation of this verse varies according to how this psalm is understood to be Messianic. In accordance with the explanation of Messianic given in 71, 1-20 n, this verse speaks of the universal kingdom to be governed by God through the Davidic dynasty, and later by the Messia. It took Christ in the New Testament to explain this universal rule as a spiritual one.

71, 10: Tharsis and the Isles: the West. Arabia and Saba: the South. There is a similar idea in Is 60, 5-9.

71, 14: Blood: life.

71, 15-17: The king will rule prosperously.

71, 15: May he live to be given the gold of Arabia: a wish resulting from ruling the poor kindly in vv. 12-14.

71, 17: See 71, 5 n. In him . . . be blessed: either, "Because of him all men shall receive God's blessings," or, "All men shall use his name blessed forever; as long as the sun his name shall remain. In him shall all the tribes of the earth be blessed; all the nations shall proclaim his happiness.

18 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, who alone does 19 wondrous deeds. | And blessed forever be his glorious name; may the whole earth be filled with his glory. Amen. Amen.
20 The prayers of David the son of Jesse are ended.

PSALM 72 (73)
The False Happiness of the Wicked

1 A psalm of Asaph.
How good God is to the upright; the Lord, to those who are 2 clean of heart! | But, as for me, I almost lost my balance; my
3 feet all but slipped, | because I was envious of the arrogant when I saw them prosper though they were wicked.
4 For they are in no pain; their bodies are sound and sleek; |
5 they are free from the burdens of mortals, and are not afflicted 6 like the rest of men. | So pride adorns them as a necklace; as 7 a robe violence enwraps them. | Out of their crassness comes 8 iniquity; their fancies overflow their hearts. | They scoff and 9 speak evil; outrage from on high they threaten. | They set their mouthings in place of heaven, and their pronouncements roam
10 the earth: | "So he brings his people to such a pass that they 11 have not even water!" | And they say, "How does God know?"
12 And, "Is there any knowledge in the Most High?" | Such,

in giving a blessing, saying 'May you be as blessed as this king.' " See Gn 48, 20.

71, 18-19: A later editor added this doxology to the psalm to end the Second Book of Psalms.

71, 20: Apparently this verse was added at a time when no more psalms followed and the collection of psalms ended here.

72, 1-28: This wisdom psalm on why the good suffer and the wicked prosper is usually dated as postexilic. The sacred writer answers in the traditional mold that God will punish the wicked and reward the just. The Mass of several confessors uses this psalm to show God's protection of the apparent weak and mocked man.

72, 1: Clean of heart: see Ps 23, 4 n.

72, 2-3: The poet was tempted to doubt the justice of God (v. 2) when he saw the wicked prosper (v. 3).

72, 4-12: The wicked blaspheme with apparent impunity.

72, 9: They set their mouthings in place of heaven: they talk as if they were God Almighty.

72, 10: The general sense of the poorly preserved Hebrew text is a mockery of God's justice.

72, 11: Does God really know or care about what we are doing?

then, are the wicked; always carefree, while they increase in wealth.
13 Is it but in vain I have kept my heart clean and washed my 14 hands as an innocent man? | For I suffer affliction day after day
15 and chastisement with each new dawn. | Had I thought, "I will speak as they do," I had been false to the fellowship of your 16 children. | Though I tried to understand this it seemed to me
17 too difficult, | till I entered the sanctuary of God and considered their final destiny.
18 You set them, indeed, on a slippery road; you hurl them 19 down to ruin. | How suddenly they are made desolate! They are 20 completely wasted away amid horrors. | As though they were the dream of one who had awakened, O Lord, so will you, when
21 you arise, set at nought these phantoms. | Because my heart
22 was embittered and my soul was pierced, | I was stupid and understood not; I was like a brute beast in your presence.
23 Yet with you I shall always be; you have hold of my right 24 hand; | with your counsel you guide me, and in the end you will
25 receive me in glory. | Whom else have I in heaven? And when I
26 am with you, the earth delights me not. | Though my flesh and my heart waste away, God is the rock of my heart and my
27 portion forever. | For indeed, they who withdraw from you
28 perish; you destroy everyone who is unfaithful to you. | But for me, to be near God is my good; to make the Lord God my refuge. I shall declare all your works in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

PSALM 73 (74)

Prayer in Time of National Calamity

1 A maskil of Asaph.
Why, O God, have you cast us off forever? Why does your anger 72, 13-16: The suffering of the just man.

72, 17: Till I entered the sanctuary of God: this may mean till I entered the temple in person or till I entered the temple in spirit.

72, 20: An obscure verse that has been diversely translated. When you arise: in judgment you will show that the apparent success of the wicked was only a bad dream.

72, 24: In the end: when you judge the wicked on earth. You will receive me in glory: you will reinstate me in happiness. The Hebrew is easily understood to speak of the present, not of the afterlife.

72, 25: The Hebrew does not refer to the future life but affirms belief in the one true God, and alludes to a denial of pagan heavenly gods.

72, 28: Daughter of Sion: Jerusalem.

73, 1-23: The better opinion understands this psalm as a public lament on the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. rather than on the desecration of the temple by Antiochus Epiphanes in 167 B.C.

2 smolder against the sheep of your pasture? | Remember your flock which you built up of old, the tribe you redeemed as your 3 inheritance, Mount Sion, where you took up your abode. | Turn your steps toward the utter ruins; toward all the damage the 4 enemy has done in the sanctuary. | Your foes roar triumphantly 5 in your shrine; they have set up their tokens of victory. | They 6 are like men coming up with axes to a clump of trees; | and now with chisel and hammer they hack at all its paneling. | 7 They set your sanctuary on fire; the place where your name 8 abides they have razed and profaned. | They said in their hearts,
"Let us destroy them; burn all the shrines of God in the land."
9 | Deeds on our behalf we do not see; there is no prophet now,
10 and no one of us knows how long. . . . | How long, O God, shall the foe blaspheme? Shall the enemy revile your name 11 forever? | Why draw back your hand and keep your right hand idle beneath your cloak?

12 Yet, O God, my king from of old, you doer of saving deeds
13 on earth, | you stirred up the sea by your might; you smashed
14 the heads of the dragons in the waters. | You crushed the heads
15 of Leviathan, and made food of him for the dolphins. | You released the springs and torrents; you brought dry land out of 16 the primeval waters. | Yours is the day, and yours the night;
17 you fashioned the moon and the sun. | You fixed all the limits
18 of the land; summer and winter you made. | Remember how the enemy has blasphemed you, O Lord, and how a stupid 19 people has reviled your name. | Give not to the vulture the life of your dove; be not forever unmindful of the lives of your 20 afflicted ones. | Look to your covenant, for the hiding places in 21 the land and the plains are full of violence. | May the humble not retire in confusion; may the afflicted and the poor praise 22 your name. | Arise, O God; defend your cause; remember how 23 the fool blasphemes you day after day. | Be not unmindful of the voice of your foes; the uproar of those who rebel against you is unceasing.

73, 5: The Hebrew text is unclear.

73, 9: No prophet now: Jeremia and Ezechiel may not have been at Jerusalem, or they may have been dead.

73, 12-17: It is customary in psalms of lament for the mood to switch abruptly as here.

73, 13-15: The creation by God is described as a victory over primeval chaos in the imagery of a Chanaanite myth. Compare Jb 7, 12 n.

73, 19: Dove: this symbol for Israel is also used in Ps 67, 14.

73, 20: Hiding places: every place is violated, even the caves.

PSALM 74 (75)

God the Just Judge of the Wicked

1 For the leader. (Do not destroy!) A psalm of Asaph; a song.
2 We give you thanks, O God, we give thanks, and we invoke your name; we declare your wondrous deeds.
3 "When I seize the appointed time, I will judge with equity. |
4 Though the earth and all who dwell in it quake, I have set firm 5 its pillars. | I say to the boastful: Boast not; and to the wicked:
6 Lift not up your horns." | Lift not up your horns against the 7 Most High; speak not haughtily against the Rock. | For neither from the east nor from the west, neither from the desert nor 8 from the mountains— | but God is the judge; one he brings 9 low; another he lifts up. | For a cup is in the Lord's hand, full of spiced and foaming wine, And he pours out from it; even to the dregs they shall drain it; all the wicked of the earth shall drink.
10 But as for me, I will exult forever; I will sing praise to the 11 God of Jacob. | And I will break off the horns of all the wicked; the horns of the just shall be lifted up.

PSALM 75 (76)

Thanksgiving for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 For the leader; a psalm with stringed instruments. A song of Asaph.
2 God is renowned in Juda; in Israel great is his name. |
3.4 In Salem is his abode; his dwelling is in Sion. | There he shattered the flashing shafts of the bow, shield and sword, and weapons of war.

74, 1: Do not destroy!: see Ps 56, 1 n.

74, 2-11: There is no clue to a definite historical situation. The general meaning is; God will judge the world. Many commentators understand this judgment as the one at the end of the world, but vv. 10-11 seem to speak of a judgment at the time of the psalmist. It is difficult to classify this psalm.

74, 2: The people praise Yahweh.

74, 3-5: The psalmist poetically has God predict the fall of the haughty.

74, 6-9: The poet develops the idea of vv. 3-5.

74, 5: Horns: a common biblical figure for power.

74, 6: Most High . . . Rock: frequent synonyms for Yahweh.

74, 7: From the mountains—: the sense demands the addition: "does justice come."

74, 9: Yahweh makes sinners drink from the "cup" of his anger.

75, 2-13: The psalm is a thanksgiving song of Sion which, according to many commentators, refers to Jerusalem's victory over Sennacherib in 701 B.C.

75, 3: Salem . . . Sion: synonyms for Jerusalem.

5 Resplendent you came, O powerful One, from the everlasting 6 mountains. | Despoiled are the stouthearted; they sleep their 7 sleep; the hands of all the mighty ones have failed. | At your rebuke, O God of Jacob, chariots and steeds lay stilled.
8 You are terrible; and who can withstand you for the fury
9 of your anger? | From heaven you made your intervention
10 heard; the earth feared and was silent | when God arose for judgment, to save all the afflicted of the earth.
11 For wrathful Edom shall glorify you, and the survivors of 12 Hamath shall keep your festivals. | Make vows to the Lord, your God, and fulfill them; let all round about him bring gifts
13 to the terrible Lord | who checks the pride of princes, who is terrible to the kings of the earth.

PSALM 76 (77)
Lament and Comfort in Time of Distress

1 For the leader; 'al Idithun. A psalm of Asaph.
2.3 Aloud to God I cry; aloud to God, to hear me; | on the day of my distress I seek the Lord. By night my hands are stretched
4 out without flagging; my soul refuses comfort. | When I remem-
5 ber God, I moan; when I ponder, my spirit grows faint. | You keep my eyes watchful; I am troubled and cannot speak. |
6.7 I consider the days of old; the years long past | I remember. In the night I meditate in my heart; I ponder, and my spirit broods:
8 | "Will the Lord reject forever and nevermore be favorable? | 9 Will his kindness utterly cease, his promise fail for all genera-10 tions? | Has God forgotten pity? Does he in anger withhold 11 his compassion?" | And I say, "This is my sorrow, that the 12 right hand of the Most High is changed." | I remember the 13 deeds of the Lord; yes, I remember your wonders of old. | And I meditate on your works; your exploits I ponder.
14 O God, your way is holy; what great god is there like our 75, 5: The everlasting mountains: from the ancient Jebusite city of Jerusalem.

75, 6: They sleep their sleep: of death. In the Bible "sleep" if often used for death.

75, 11: Edom . . . Hamath: another probable translation is: "For the wrath of man must be turned to your praise, and the survivors of fury shall keep your festivals."

76, 2-21: The psalm is an individual's lament that God is forgetting the nation (vv. 2-13). Usually psalms of lament are about something personal. In vv. 14-21 the psalm continues as a hymn of praise on God's past deeds in contrast with the present sad situation. There is no clue for the historical circumstances of the lament.

76, 11: The "sorrow" is that God no longer protects the people.

76, 14-21: This section is usually understood to refer to the crossing of the Red Sea in Ex 15.

15 God? | You are the God who works wonders; among the 16 peoples you have made known your power. | With your strong arm you redeemed your people, the sons of Jacob and Joseph. | 17 The waters saw you, O God; the waters saw you and shuddered; 18 the very depths were troubled. | The clouds poured down water;
the skies gave forth their voice; your arrows also sped abroad. | 19 Your thunder resounded in the whirlwind; your lightning 20 illumined the world; the earth quivered and quaked. | Through the sea was your way, and your path through the deep waters, 21 though your footsteps were not seen. | You led your people like a flock under the care of Moses and Aaron.

PSALM 77 (78)
God's Goodness despite Israel's Ingratitude

1 A maskil of Asaph.
Hearken, my people, to my teaching; incline your ears to the 2 words of my mouth. | I will open my mouth in a parable, I
3 will utter mysteries from of old. | What we have heard and 4 know, and what our fathers have declared to us, | we will not hide from their sons; we will declare to the generation to come the glorious deeds of the Lord and his strength and the wonders 5 that he wrought. | He set it up as a decree in Jacob, and established it as a law in Israel, that what he commanded our 6 fathers they should make known to their sons; | so that the generation to come might know, their sons yet to be born, that 7 they too may rise and declare to their sons | that they should put their hope in God, and not forget the deeds of God but 8 keep his commands, | and not be like their fathers, a generation wayward and rebellious, a generation that kept not its heart steadfast nor its spirit faithful toward God.
9 The sons of Ephraim, ordered ranks of bowmen, retreated in 10 the day of battle. | They kept not the covenant with God,
11 according to his law they would not walk; | and they forgot
12 his deeds, the wonders he had shown them. | Before their 77, 1-72: As Pss 104, 105, this is a wisdom historical psalm (see Introduction) telling the people not to imitate the disobedience of their ancestors in history. Scholars tend to date the psalm from the tenth century to the destruction of the temple in 587 B.C.

This psalm is used in the Masses of the third and fourth Sundays of Lent.

77, 1-8: It is important to pass on to future generations what God has taught.

77, 2: Mt 13, 35 applies this verse to Christ teaching in parables.

77, 9-11: Ephraim (the northern kingdom) disobeyed God.

77, 12-16: The ancestors in the Exodus were disloyal to God.

fathers he did wondrous things, in the land of Egypt, in the 13 plain of Soan. | He cleft the sea and brought them through,
14 and he made the waters stand as in a mound. | He led them 15 with a cloud by day, and all night with a glow of fire. | He cleft the rocks in the desert and gave them water in copious 16 floods. | He made streams flow from the crag and brought the waters forth in rivers.
17 But they sinned yet more against him, rebelling against the 18 Most High in the wasteland, | and they tempted God in their 19 hearts by demanding the food they craved. | Yes, they spoke against God, saying, "Can God spread a table in the desert? | 20 For when he struck the rock, waters gushed forth, and the streams overflowed; can he also give bread and provide meat 21 for his people?" | Then the Lord heard and was enraged; and fire blazed up against Jacob, and anger rose against Israel, | 22.23 because they believed not God nor trusted in his help. | Yet he commanded the skies above and the doors of heaven he 24 opened; | he rained manna upon them for food and gave them
25 heavenly bread. | The bread of the mighty was eaten by men; 26 even a surfeit of provisions he sent them. | He stirred up the east wind in the heavens, and by his power brought on the south 27 wind. | And he rained meat upon them like dust, and, like the 28 sand of the sea, winged fowl, | which fell in the midst of their 29 camp round about their tents. | So they ate and were wholly 30 surfeited; he had brought them what they craved. | They had not given over their craving, and their food was still in their 31 mouths, | when the anger of God rose against them and slew their best men, and laid low the young men of Israel.
32 Yet for all this they sinned still more and believed not in 33 his wonders. | Therefore he quickly ended their days and their 34 years with sudden destruction. | While he slew them they 35 sought him and inquired after God again, | remembering that God was their Rock and the Most High God, their redeemer. | 36 But they flattered him with their mouths and lied to him with 37 their tongues, | though their hearts were not steadfast toward 38 him, nor were they faithful to his covenant. | Yet he, being merciful, forgave their sin and destroyed them not; often he 39 turned back his anger and let none of his wrath be roused. | He remembered that they were flesh, a passing breath that returns not.

77, 12: Soan: the capital of Egypt in the Delta at the time of the Exodus.

77, 17-31: The journey through the wilderness.

77, 25: The mighty: the angels.

77, 32-39: The punishment for empty external worship to God.

40 How often they rebelled against him in the desert and grieved
41 him in the wilderness! | Again and again they tempted God
42 and provoked the Holy One of Israel. | They remembered not 43 his hand nor the day he delivered them from the foe, | when he wrought his signs in Egypt and his marvels in the plain of 44 Soan, | and changed into blood their streams—their running
45 water, so that they could not drink; | he sent among them flies
46 that devoured them and frogs that destroyed them. | He gave their harvest to the caterpillar, the fruits of their toil to the 47 locust. | He killed their vines with hail and their sycamores
48 with frost. | He gave over to the hail their beasts and their 49 flocks to the lightning. | He loosed against them his fierce anger, wrath and fury and strife, a detachment of messengers of 50 doom. | When he measured the course of his anger he spared them not from death, and delivered their beasts to the plague.
51 | He smote every first-born in Egypt, the first fruits of manhood
52 in the tents of Ham; | but his people he led forth like sheep
53 and guided them like a herd in the desert. | He led them on secure and unafraid, while he covered their enemies with the 54 sea. | And he brought them to his holy land, to the mountains
55 his right hand had won. | And he drove out nations before them; he distributed their inheritance by lot, and settled the tribes of Israel in their tents.
56 But they tempted and rebelled against God the Most High, 57 and kept not his decrees. | They turned back and were faithless 58 like their fathers; they recoiled like a treacherous bow. | They angered him with their high places and with their idols roused 59 his jealousy. | God heard and was enraged and utterly rejected
60 Israel. | And he forsook the tabernacle in Silo, the tent where 61 he dwelt among men. | And he surrendered his strength into 62 captivity, his glory into the hands of the foe. | He abandoned his people to the sword and was enraged against his inheritance.
63 | Fire consumed their young men, and their maidens were not 64 betrothed. | Their priests fell by the sword, and their widows sang no dirges.
65 Then the Lord awoke, as wakes from sleep a champion 66 overcome with wine; | and he put his foes to flight and cast 67 them into everlasting disgrace. | And he rejected the tent of 68 Joseph, and the tribe of Ephraim he chose not; | but he chose 77, 40-55: The ancestors did not profit from seeing God's power at work in the plagues of Egypt (vv. 40-51), and during the journey to Chanaan (vv. 52-55).

77, 50: Measured: surveyed with a glance.

77, 56-72: God rejected the northern kingdom (vv. 56-64), and chose the southern kingdom of Juda (vv. 65-72).

69 the tribe of Juda, Mount Sion which he loved. | And he built his shrine like heaven, like the earth which he founded forever.
70 | And he chose David, his servant, and took him from the 71 sheepfolds; | from following the ewes he brought him to shep-72 herd Jacob, his people, and Israel, his inheritance. | And he tended them with a sincere heart, and with skillful hands he guided them.

PSALM 78 (79)

The Destruction of Jerusalem and Its Temple

1 A psalm of Asaph.
O God, the nations have come into your inheritance; they have defiled your holy temple, they have laid Jerusalem in ruins.
2 | They have given the corpses of your servants as food to the birds of heaven, the flesh of your faithful ones to the beasts of 3 the earth. | They have poured out their blood like water round 4 about Jerusalem, and there is no one to bury them. | We have become the reproach of our neighbors, the scorn and derision of those around us.
5 O Lord, how long? Will you be angry forever? Will your 6 jealousy burn like fire? | Pour out your wrath upon the nations that acknowledge you not, upon the kingdoms that call not 7 upon your name; | for they have devoured Jacob and laid 8 waste his dwelling. | Remember not against us the iniquities of the past; may your compassion quickly come to us, for we are brought very low.
9 Help us, O God our savior, because of the glory of your name; deliver us and pardon our sins for your name's sake. | 10 Why should the nations say, "Where is their God?" Let it be known among the nations in our sight that you avenge the shedding of your servants' blood.
11 Let the prisoners' sighing come before you; with your great 12 power free those doomed to death. | And repay our neighbors sevenfold into their bosoms the disgrace they have inflicted on 13 you, O Lord. | Then we, your people and the sheep of your pasture, will give thanks to you forever; through all generations we will declare your praise.

78, 1-13: A national lament, more especially on the destruction of Jerusalem in 587 B.C., than in Ps 73, 1-23 n.
The liturgy applies this psalm to the Mass of the Martyrs.

78, 2-3: The flesh . . . to bury them: even though these four lines are freely quoted in 1 Mc 7, 17, it does not follow that the psalm was written in the second century Machabean era.

78, 12: Sevenfold: completely. Into their bosoms: in their own person.

PSALM 79 (80)

Prayer for the Restoration of the Lord's Vineyard

1 For the leader; according to "Lilies." Eduth. A psalm of Asaph.
2 O shepherd of Israel, hearken, O guide of the flock of Joseph!
3 From your throne upon the cherubim, shine forth | before Ephraim, Benjamin and Manasse. Rouse your power, and come 4 to save us. | O Lord of hosts, restore us; if your face shine upon us, then we shall be safe.
5 O Lord of hosts, how long will you burn with anger while 6 your people pray? | You have fed them with the bread of tears 7 and given them tears to drink in ample measure. | You have left us to be fought over by our neighbors, and our enemies 8 mock us. | O Lord of hosts, restore us; if your face shine upon us, then we shall be safe.
9 A vine from Egypt you transplanted; you drove away the 10 nations and planted it. | You cleared the ground for it, and it 11 took root and filled the land. | The mountains were hidden in 12 its shadow; by its branches, the cedars of God. | It put forth its foliage to the Sea, its shoots as far as the River.
13 Why have you broken down its walls, so that every passer-by 14 plucks its fruit, | the boar from the forest lays it waste, and the 15 beasts of the field feed upon it? | Once again, O Lord of hosts, 16 look down from heaven, and see; take care of this vine, | and protect what your right hand has planted [the son of man whom you yourself made strong].
17 Let those who would burn it with fire or cut it down perish
18 before you at your rebuke. | May your help be with the man

79, 2-20: This is a vague national lament variously attributed to the fall of Samaria in 722-21 B.C., or to the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. The Masses in Advent use this psalm perhaps for the spiritual restoration of the Church.

79, 2-7: The main tribes (v. 3) of the northern kingdom were oppressed.

79, 2: Your throne upon the cherubim: a reference to the Ark of the Covenant in the Holy of Holies.

79, 4: This refrain is repeated in vv. 8 and 20.

79, 9-12: God led the people from Egypt to the Promised Land, which is here ideally extended from the Euphrates River to the Mediterranean Sea.

79, 9: Vine: Israel is often compared to a vine in prophetic literature. See Mt 21, 33.

79, 16: The son of man: this line is presumably an accidental duplication of the similar line in v. 18.

79, 17: Let those who would burn it: this line, as here translated, is a reconstruction; but the two halves of the Hebrew line do not belong together.

79, 18: Perhaps the safest opinion is to consider "the man of your right hand" and "the son of man" as synonyms for the nation.

of your right hand, with the son of man whom you yourself 19 made strong. | Then we will no more withdraw from you; give 20 us new life, and we will call upon your name. | O Lord of hosts, restore us; if your face shine upon us, then we shall be safe.

PSALM 80 (81)

Festive Song with an Admonition to Fidelity

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." Of Asaph.
2 Sing joyfully to God our strength; acclaim the God of Jacob.
3 | Take up a melody, and sound the timbrel, the pleasant harp
4 and the lyre. | Blow the trumpet at the new moon, at the full 5 moon, on our solemn feast; | for it is a statute in Israel, an 6 ordinance of the God of Jacob, | who made it a decree for Joseph when he came forth from the land of Egypt.
7 An unfamiliar speech I hear: | "I relieved his shoulder of 8 the burden; his hands were freed from the basket. | In distress you called, and I rescued you; unseen, I answered you in 9 thunder; I tested you at the waters of Meriba. | Hear, my people, and I will admonish you; O Israel, will you not hear me?
10 | There shall be no strange god among you nor shall you wor-
11 ship any alien god. | I, the Lord, am your God who led you forth from the land of Egypt; open wide your mouth, and I will fill it.
12 "But my people heard not my voice, and Israel obeyed me 13 not; | so I gave them up to the hardness of their hearts; they 14 walked according to their own counsels. | If only my people
15 would hear me, and Israel walk in my ways, | quickly would I humble their enemies; against their foes I would turn my hand.
16 | Those who hated the Lord would seek to flatter me, but their 17 fate would endure forever, | while Israel I would feed with the best of wheat, and with honey from the rock I would fill them."

80, 2-17: The psalm is often considered a hymn. At least, vv. 2-6a were used at some liturgical feast, notably that of tabernacles. Vv. 6b-17 deal with God's covenant at Sinai and the apostasy of the nation. Since the temple liturgy is presupposed, the psalm dates most probably from before the destruction of the temple in 587 B.C., or perhaps after its reconstruction in 515 B.C.

The liturgy uses this psalm on the feast of Corpus Christi.

80, 4: Blow the trumpet: to assemble the people for the feast of tabernacles, which was celebrated at the time of the "full moon."

80, 6: An unfamiliar speech I hear: the psalmist poetically "hears" the voice of a prophet uttering an oracle. This is why some label this psalm "prophetic liturgy."

80, 7: From the basket: of bricks. An allusion to the people's servitude in Egypt, Ex 1, 14.

80, 8: References to Ex 2, 23-24; Nm 20, 13.

PSALM 81 (82)

Judgment against Wicked Judges

1 A psalm of Asaph.
God arises in the divine assembly; he judges in the midst of the gods.
2 "How long will you judge unjustly and favor the cause of the 3 wicked? | Defend the lowly and the fatherless; render justice to 4 the afflicted and the destitute. | Rescue the lowly and the poor; from the hand of the wicked deliver them.
5 "They know not, neither do they understand; they go about 6 in darkness; all the foundations of the earth are shaken. | I
7 said: You are gods, all of you sons of the Most High; | yet 8 like men you shall die, and fall like any prince." | Rise, O God; judge the earth, for yours are all the nations.

PSALM 82 (83)

Prayer against a Hostile Alliance

1 A song; a psalm of Asaph.
2 O God, do not remain unmoved; be not silent, O God, and 3 be not still! | For behold, your enemies raise a tumult, and they 4 who hate you lift up their heads. | Against your people they plot craftily; they conspire against those whom you protect. | 5 They say, "Come, let us destroy their nation; let the name of Israel be remembered no more!"
6 Yes, they consult together with one mind, and against you 7 they are allied: | the tents of Edom and the Ismaelites, Moab

81, 1-8: This psalm may be loosely classified as a wisdom psalm. It laments unfair judges. The psalm could fit many periods in the history of the people.

81, 1: The inspired psalmist presents God through a literary allusion to the Chanaanite assembly of the gods without compromising his conviction that Yahweh is the only true God. The gods: the godlike judges, as in Ps 57, 2 n.

81, 2-7: The psalmist has God rebuke (vv. 2-4) and sentence the unfair judges (vv. 5-7).

81, 5: All the foundations of the earth are shaken: the bases of law are shaken.

81, 6: I said: You are gods: see v. 1 n for "gods." Compare Jesus' use of this verse 6 in Jn 10, 34.

81, 8: The psalmist invites God to judge the universe.

82, 2-19: This is a public lament against a league of enemy nations. Since opinions on a time when these nations (vv. 7-9) combined against God's people vary from Saul to the Machabees, some conclude that at an unknown historical period these nations were selected to represent the hostile Gentiles.

82, 7: Agarenes: a desert tribe east of Moab.

8 and the Agarenes, | Gebal and Ammon and Amalec, Philistia
9 with the inhabitants of Tyre; | the Assyrians, too, are leagued with them; they are the forces of the sons of Lot.
10 Deal with them as with Madian; as with Sisara and Jabin 11 at the torrent Cison, | who perished at Endor; they became 12 dung on the ground. | Make their nobles like Oreb and Zeb;
13 all their chiefs like Zebee and Salmana, | who said, "Let us 14 take for ourselves the dwelling place of God." | O my God, make them like leaves in a whirlwind, like chaff before the 15 wind. | As a fire raging in a forest, as a flame setting the 16 mountains ablaze, | so pursue them with your tempest and rout
17 them with your storm. | Darken their faces with disgrace, that 18 men may seek your name, O Lord. | Let them be shamed and 19 put to rout forever; let them be confounded and perish, | knowing that you alone are the Lord, the Most High over all the earth.

PSALM 83 (84)

Desire for the Sanctuary

1 For the leader; "upon the gittith." A psalm of the sons of Core.
2.3 How lovely is your dwelling place, O Lord of hosts! | My soul yearns and pines for the courts of the Lord. My heart and 4 my flesh cry out for the living God. | Even the sparrow finds a home, and the swallow a nest in which she puts her young—your altars, O Lord of hosts, my king and my God!
5 Happy they who dwell in your house! continually they praise 6 you. | Happy the men whose strength you are! their hearts are 7 set upon the pilgrimage: | when they pass through the arid valley, they make a spring of it; the early rain clothes it with 82, 8: Gebal: a mountain region south of the Dead Sea. Tyre: there is no proof that Tyre ever actively fought Israel.

82, 10-13: A reference to Jgs 4—7.

82, 14: The liturgy uses this verse and v. 19 in the Gradual of the Mass for the pagans.

83, 2-13: This psalm is usually (not with certainty) dated as pre-exilic, when the temple was still standing. The psalm is ordinarily considered to belong to the group of pilgrim songs of Pss 119—133. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

83, 4: Since in Yahweh's Providence, even "the sparrow finds a home," all the more so will He welcome His pilgrims in His sanctuary ("altars").

83, 6f: The Hebrew text of these two verses is obscure in several places.

83, 7: Although the valley is arid, in the eyes of the pilgrims, it may as well be watered since they are confident that their prayers for rain will be heard on the coming feast day.

8 generous growth. | They go from strength to strength; they shall see the God of gods in Sion.
9 O Lord of hosts, hear my prayer; hearken, O God of Jacob!
10 | O God, behold our shield, and look upon the face of your 11 anointed. | I had rather one day in your courts than a thousand elsewhere; I had rather lie at the threshold of the house of my 12 God than dwell in the tents of the wicked. | For a sun and a shield is the Lord God; grace and glory he bestows; the Lord 13 withholds no good thing from those who walk in sincerity. | O Lord of hosts, happy the men who trust in you!

PSALM 84 (85)

Prayer for Complete Restoration

1 For the leader. A psalm of the sons of Core.
2 You have favored, O Lord, your land; you have restored the 3 well-being of Jacob. | You have forgiven the guilt of your 4 people; you have covered all their sins. | You have withdrawn all your wrath; you have revoked your burning anger.
5 Restore us, O God our savior, and abandon your displeasure 6 against us. | Will you be ever angry with us, prolonging your 7 anger to all generations? | Will you not instead give us life;
8 and shall not your people rejoice in you? | Show us, O Lord, your kindness, and grant us your salvation.
9 I will hear what God proclaims; the Lord—for he proclaims peace to his people, and to his faithful ones, and to those who 10 put in him their hope. | Near indeed is his salvation to those 11 who fear him, glory dwelling in our land. | Kindness and truth
12 shall meet; justice and peace shall kiss. | Truth shall spring out of the earth, and justice shall look down from heaven. | 13 The Lord himself will give his benefits; our land shall yield its

---

83, 8: From strength to strength: they grow stronger.

83, 10: Shield . . . your anointed: two synonyms for the king.

84, 2-14: This apparent national lament is usually assigned to the period soon after the exile in 538 B.C. At that time the trouble about the restoration of the nation began, as the prophets Aggai and Zacharia testify.

84, 2-4: Thanksgiving for blessings of deliverance at the end of the exile.

84, 5-8: A petition of relief from present difficulties.

84, 9-14: The inspired psalmist enshrines his message of future happiness in the words of a prophet's oracle. Hence some label this psalm "prophetic liturgy." See Ps 80, 6 n.

84, 10: Glory: Yahweh's glory was considered to be pre-eminently in His temple.

84, 11-14: A poetic renewal of spiritual and material well-being.

84, 13: The liturgy uses this verse in the Communion verse of the first Sunday of Advent to indicate the blessings brought by the Messia.

14 increase. | Justice shall walk before him, and salvation, along the way of his steps.

PSALM 85 (86)
Prayer in Time of Distress

1 A prayer of David.
Incline your ear, O Lord; answer me, for I am afflicted and 2 poor. | Keep my life, for I am devoted to you; save your servant
3 who trusts in you. | You are my God; have pity on me, O Lord,
4 for to you I call all the day. | Gladden the soul of your servant,
5 for to you, O Lord, I lift up my soul; | for you, O Lord, are good and forgiving, abounding in kindness to all who call upon 6 you. | Hearken, O Lord, to my prayer and attend to the sound
7 of my pleading. | In the day of my distress I call upon you, for you will answer me.
8 There is none like you among the gods, O Lord, and there are 9 no works like yours. | All the nations you have made shall come and worship you, O Lord, and glorify your name. | 10 For you are great, and you do wondrous deeds; you alone are God.
11 Teach me, O Lord, your way that I may walk in your truth;
12 direct my heart that it may fear your name. | I will give thanks to you, O Lord my God, with all my heart, and I will glorify 13 your name forever. | Great has been your kindness toward me;
14 you have rescued me from the depths of the nether world. | O God, the haughty have risen up against me, and the company of fierce men seeks my life, nor do they set you before their 15 eyes. | But you, O Lord, are a God merciful and gracious, slow 16 to anger, abounding in kindness and fidelity. | Turn toward me, and have pity on me; give your strength to your servant, 17 and save the son of your handmaid. | Grant me a proof of your favor, that my enemies may see, to their confusion, that you, O Lord, have helped and comforted me.

85, 1-17: The majority view this lament as that of an individual rather than of the nation. It is a string of loose quotations from the psalms and from the Old Testament. The psalm is often dated long after the exile, but there are hardly any certain clues to date it. The poet asks for help against foes; he was on the threshold of death (v. 13).

85, 1-7: The psalmist is confident in his request for help precisely because God abounds in "kindness" (v. 5).

85, 8-10: A hymn of praise and hope for the conversion of the Gentiles.

85, 11-17: A prayer for guidance.

PSALM 86 (87)

Sion the Home of All Nations

1 A psalm of the sons of Core. A song.
2 His foundation upon the holy mountains | the Lord loves:
3 the gates of Sion, more than any dwelling of Jacob. | Glorious
4 things are said of you, O city of God! | I tell of Egypt and Babylon among those that know the Lord; of Philistia, Tyre,
5 Ethiopia: "This man was born there." | And of Sion they shall say: "One and all were born in her; and he who has established
6 her is the Most High Lord." | They shall note, when the peoples
7 are enrolled: "This man was born there." | And all shall sing, in their festive dance: "My home is within you."

PSALM 87 (88)

Lament and Prayer in Affliction

1 A song; a psalm of the sons of Core. For the leader; according to Mahalath. For singing; a maskil of Heman the Ezrahite.
2 O Lord, my God, by day I cry out; at night I clamor in your 3 presence. | Let my prayer come before you; incline your ear to 4 my call for help, | for my soul is surfeited with troubles and 5 my life draws near to the nether world. | I am numbered with those who go down into the pit; I am a man without strength. |
6 My couch is among the dead, like the slain who lie in the grave, 86, 1-7: A song of Sion (see Ps 45, 2-12 n) praising Jerusalem as the city chosen by God for His temple (vv. 1-2), and as the future spiritual birthplace of all the nations on earth. The mention of "Babylon" (v. 4) is the only clue to a date, i.e., during or after the sixth century exile.

86, 1-2: God chose Jerusalem ("the gates of Sion") which He built on "holy mountains."

86, 3: The "glorious things" said of Jerusalem are in vv. 4-5.

86, 4-5: When I (the psalmist speaks) mention Egypt, Babylon, Philistia, Tyre, Ethiopia, my friends say, "This man was born there" (v. 4). But of Jerusalem ("Sion") they shall say that everyone is born there spiritually.

86, 5: And of Sion they shall say: most Greek manuscripts read "'Mother Sion,' they shall say." Gal 4, 26 ("Jerusalem which is our mother") probably refers to this Greek reading.

86, 6-7: The poet is not speaking of the future but of the present. God assigns a nation to each person to be born (v. 6), but happy is the one to whom Yahweh assigns Jerusalem ("My home is within you").

The liturgy fittingly uses this psalm in the feasts of Christ and of the Blessed Virgin Mary.

87, 2-19: "The saddest psalm in the whole Psalter" is the best description of an individual's lament, who is friendless and close to death (vv. 4-5). Differing from other lamenting psalms, it expresses no confidence in God's help.

87, 6: My couch: the meaning of the Hebrew is obscure. Who lie in the grave: most likely it refers to deprivation of a proper burial.

whom you remember no longer and who are cut off from your 7 care. | You have plunged me into the bottom of the pit, into 8 the dark abyss. | Upon me your wrath lies heavy, and with all
9 your billows you overwhelm me. | You have taken my friends away from me; you have made me an abomination to them;
I am imprisoned, and I cannot escape.
10 My eyes have grown dim through affliction; daily I call upon 11 you, O Lord; to you I stretch out my hands. | Will you work wonders for the dead? Will the shades arise to give you thanks?
12 | Do they declare your kindness in the grave, your faithfulness
13 among those who have perished? | Are your wonders made known in the darkness, or your justice in the land of oblivion?
14 But I, O Lord, cry out to you; with my morning prayer I 15 wait upon you. | Why, O Lord, do you reject me; why hide 16 from me your face? | I am afflicted and in agony from my 17 youth; I am dazed with the burden of your dread. | Your 18 furies have swept over me; your terrors have cut me off. | They encompass me like water all the day; on all sides they close in 19 upon me. | Companion and neighbor you have taken away from me; my only friend is darkness.

PSALM 88 (89)

Prayer for the Fulfillment of God's Promises to David

1 A maskil of Ethan the Ezrahite.
2 The favors of the Lord I will sing forever; through all genera-3 tions my mouth shall proclaim your faithfulness. | For you have said, "My kindness is established forever"; in heaven you 4 have confirmed your faithfulness: | "I have made a covenant with my chosen one, I have sworn to David my servant: | 5 Forever will I confirm your posterity and establish your throne for all generations."

87, 10: I stretch out my hands: in prayer.

87, 11-13: See Ps 6, 6 n: the dead cannot praise God any longer in the temple liturgy.

87, 11: The shades: of the dead.

88, 2-53: Some scholars believe that this psalm was composed from other psalms. Following many other scholars, we shall treat it as a unity. Most experts seem to agree that the psalm was written at a time when the Davidic dynasty was threatened with extinction (see vv. 39-46), in other words, at a time when it looked like God would not keep His promise (2 Sm 7) of an enduring Davidic dynasty. Therefore the date of the composition of the psalm varies from the time of Solomon to just before or during the sixth century exile.

88, 2-5: A reference to 2 Sm 7: God promises David a perpetual dynasty.

6 The heavens proclaim your wonders, O Lord, and your faith-7 fulness, in the assembly of the holy ones. | For who in the skies can rank with the Lord? Who is like the Lord among the sons 8 of God? | God is terrible in the council of the holy ones; he is 9 great and awesome beyond all round about him. | O Lord, God of hosts, who is like you? Mighty are you, O Lord, and your faithfulness surrounds you.
10 You rule over the surging of the sea; you still the swelling 11 of its waves. | You have crushed Rahab with a mortal blow;
12 with your strong arm you have scattered your enemies. | Yours are the heavens, and yours is the earth; the world and its full-13 ness you have founded; | north and south you created; Thabor
14 and Hermon rejoice at your name. | Yours is a mighty arm;
15 strong is your hand, exalted your right hand. | Justice and judgment are the foundation of your throne; kindness and truth go before you.
16 Happy the people who know the joyful shout; in the light of 17 your countenance, O Lord, they walk. | At your name they rejoice all the day, and through your justice they are exalted. | 18 For you are the splendor of their strength, and by your favor 19 our horn is exalted. | For to the Lord belongs our shield, and to the Holy One of Israel, our king.
20 Once you spoke in a vision, and to your faithful ones you said: "Of a stripling I have made a champion; over the people 21 I have set a youth. | I have found David, my servant; with my 22 holy oil I have anointed him, | that my hand may be always with him, and that my arm may make him strong.
23 "No enemy shall deceive him, nor shall the wicked afflict
24 him. | But I will crush his foes before him and those who hate 25 him I will smite. | My faithfulness and my kindness shall be with him, and through my name shall his horn be exalted. | 26 I will set his hand upon the sea, his right hand upon the rivers.

88, 6-19: Praise of the almighty God with an implied teaching that God is powerful enough to keep His promise to David.

88, 6-7: The holy ones . . . the sons of God: the angels.

88, 11: Rahab: often in the Bible this mythological figure symbolizes primeval chaos conquered by Yahweh. In non-figurative language: God created the world.

88, 16: The joyful shout: the people shouted during the public liturgy in complete harmony with their temperament.

88, 18: Horn: a common figure for strength, as in v. 25.

88, 20-38: A resumption of the perpetual promise to David (vv. 2-5), but now analyzed in greater detail.

88, 20: Your faithful ones: Nathan and David.

88, 26: The Sea: the Mediterranean to the west. The rivers: the Euphrates and its tributaries in the east.

27 "He shall say of me, 'You are my father, my God, the Rock, 28 my savior.' | And I will make him the first-born, highest of the 29 kings of the earth. | Forever I will maintain my kindness toward 30 him, and my covenant with him stands firm. | I will make his posterity endure forever and his throne as the days of heaven.
31 "If his sons forsake my law and walk not according to my 32 ordinances, | if they violate my statutes and keep not my 33 commands, | I will punish their crime with a rod and their 34 guilt with stripes. | Yet my kindness I will not take from him, nor will I belie my faithfulness.
35 "I will not violate my covenant; the promise of my lips I 36 will not alter. | Once, by my holiness, have I sworn; I will not 37 be false to David. | His posterity shall continue forever, and 38 his throne shall be like the sun before me; | like the moon, which remains forever—a faithful witness in the sky." 39 Yet you have rejected and spurned and been enraged at your 40 anointed. | You have renounced the covenant with your servant,
41 and defiled his crown in the dust. | You have broken down 42 all his walls; you have laid his strongholds in ruins. | All who pass by the way have plundered him; he is made the reproach of his neighbors.
43 You have exalted the right hands of his foes, you have 44 gladdened all his enemies. | You have turned back his sharp 45 sword and have not sustained him in battle. | You have deprived him of his luster and hurled his throne to the ground.
46 | You have shortened the days of his youth; you have covered him with shame.
47 How long, O Lord? Will you hide yourself forever? Will 48 your wrath burn like fire? | Remember how short my life is;
49 how frail you created all the children of men! | What man shall live, and not see death, but deliver himself from the power 50 of the nether world? | Where are your ancient favors, O Lord,
51 which you pledged to David by your faithfulness? | Remember, O Lord, the insults to your servants: I bear in my bosom all the 52 accusations of the nations | with which your enemies have reviled, O Lord, with which they have reviled your anointed on his way!

* * *

53 Blessed be the Lord forever. Amen, and amen!

88, 39-46: The continuance of David's dynasty is threatened.
88, 45: The Hebrew text of this verse is somewhat obscure.
88, 47-52: A prayer for the people and for the king.
88, 53: This doxology is not part of the psalm, but was added to end the Third Book of Psalms. In several Masses of Our Lord the liturgy applies the doxology directly to Him.

PSALM 89 (90)

God's Eternity and Man's Frailty

1 A prayer of Moses, the man of God.
O Lord, you have been our refuge through all generations.
2 | Before the mountains were begotten and the earth and the world were brought forth, from everlasting to everlasting 3 you are God. | You turn man back to dust, saying, "Return, 4 O children of men." | For a thousand years in your sight are as yesterday, now that it is past, or as a watch of the night. | 5 You make an end of them in their sleep; the next morning they 6 are like the changing grass, | which at dawn springs up anew, but by evening wilts and fades.
7 Truly we are consumed by your anger, and by your wrath
8 we are put to rout. | You have kept our iniquities before you, 9 our hidden sins in the light of your scrutiny. | All our days have passed away in your indignation; we have spent our years like 10 a sigh. | Seventy is the sum of our years, or eighty, if we are strong, and most of them are fruitless toil, for they pass quickly 11 and we drift away. | Who knows the fury of your anger or your indignation toward those who should fear you?
12 Teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain 13 wisdom of heart. | Return, O Lord! How long? Have pity on 14 your servants! | Fill us at daybreak with your kindness, that we 15 may shout for joy and gladness all our days. | Make us glad, for the days when you afflicted us, for the years when we saw 16 evil. | Let your work be seen by your servants and your glory by 17 their children; | and may the gracious care of the Lord our God be ours; prosper the work of our hands for us! [Prosper the work of our hands!]

89, 1-17: The psalm is a lament on man's misery. Though there is no clear evidence of its date, many experts believe it is postexilic. Another contention is its unity; it is debated whether this is one psalm or two independent sections joined together.

89, 1-6: The contrast between the everlasting God and mortal man.

89, 3: It takes but one word from God to return man to dust.

89, 4: See a similar saying in 2 Pt 3, 8.

89, 5: The Hebrew text is not clear.

89, 7-11: The psalmist comments that man's brief life span is miserable because God punishes him for his sins.

89, 12-17: A plea for God's favor.

89, 15: For the days when: either, "as a recompense for the days when," or, "for as many days as."

89, 17: Prosper the work of our hands: the second occurrence of these words is probably an accidental repetition.

PSALM 90 (91)

Security under God's Protection You who dwell in the 1 shelter of the Most High, who abide in the shadow of the Al-2 mighty,-| say to the Lord, "My refuge and my fortress, my
3 God, in whom I trust." | For he will rescue you from the snare
4 of the fowler, from the destroying pestilence. | With his pinions he will cover you, and under his wings you shall take refuge;
5 his faithfulness is a buckler and a shield. | You shall not fear 6 the terror of the night nor the arrow that flies by day; | not the pestilence that roams in darkness nor the devastating plague at 7 noon. | Though a thousand fall at your side, ten thousand at 8 your right side, near you it shall not come. | Rather with your eyes shall you behold and see the requital of the wicked, | 9 because you have the Lord for your refuge; you have made the 10 Most High your stronghold. | No evil shall befall you, nor 11 shall affliction come near your tent, | for to his angels he has given command about you, that they guard you in all your 12 ways. | Upon their hands they shall bear you up, lest you dash 13 your foot against a stone. | You shall tread upon the asp and the viper; you shall trample down the lion and the dragon.
14 Because he clings to me, I will deliver him; I will set him on 15 high because he acknowledges my name. | He shall call upon me, and I will answer him; I will be with him in distress; I will 16 deliver him and glorify him; | with length of days I will gratify him and will show him my salvation.

90, 1-16: This is a wisdom psalm with the traditional teaching that the trusting just man's reward is preservation from miseries and from a premature death. Those who attempt its dating place it during or after the sixth century exile.

The Mass of the first Sunday of Lent uses this entire psalm.

90, 1-13: The poet expresses trust in God through a sequence of metaphors.

90, 5: Arrow: a metaphor for the evil deeds (as in Ps 10, 2) and words (as in Ps 63, 4) of the wicked.

90, 6: The devastating plague at noon: it was a popular belief that the sun's rays, especially at noon, were associated with diseases.

90, 7: It: the plague. According to the prevalent idea of retribution, since the plague is an instrument of God's anger, only the wicked would be struck down.

90, 11-12: Satan quotes these verses in the temptation scene of Christ (Mt 4, 6, and Lk 4, 10f). See "The Merchant of Venice," Act 1, Scene 3.

90, 11: Angels: the doctrine of the angels developed in postexilic times.

90, 12: Dash your foot: tripping or stumbling are frequent psalmodic metaphors for human troubles and sorrows.

90, 13: Metaphors expressing God's help to the just wayfarer in life.

PSALM 91 (92)

Praise of God's Just Government of Mankind

1 A psalm; a song for the Sabbath day.
2 It is good to give thanks to the Lord, to sing praise to your 3 name, Most High, | to proclaim your kindness at dawn and 4 your faithfulness throughout the night, | with ten-stringed in-
5 strument and lyre, with melody upon the harp. | For you make me glad, O Lord, by your deeds; at the works of your hands I rejoice.
6 How great are your works, O Lord! How very deep are your 7 thoughts! | A senseless man knows not, nor does a fool under-
8 stand this. | Though the wicked flourish like grass and all
9 evildoers thrive, | they are destined for eternal destruction; while you, O Lord, are the Most High forever.
10 For behold, your enemies, O Lord, for behold, your enemies
11 shall perish; all evildoers shall be scattered. | You have exalted my horn like the wild bull's; you have anointed me with rich
12 oil. | And my eye has looked down upon my foes, and my ears have heard of the fall of my wicked adversaries.
13 The just man shall flourish like the palm tree, like a cedar of 14 Lebanon shall he grow. | They that are planted in the house of 15 the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God. | They shall bear fruit even in old age; vigorous and sturdy shall they be,
16 | declaring how just is the Lord, my Rock, in whom there is no wrong.

PSALM 92 (93)

1 The Glory of the Lord's Kingdom The Lord is king, in splendor robed; robed is the Lord and girt about with strength;

91, 2-16: A hymn of thanksgiving by an individual for victory over his enemies. According to the traditional wisdom ideas, God will destroy the wicked after their short-lived success.

The liturgy fittingly applies the psalm to the consecration of a church.

91, 11: Horn . . . oil: two symbols of strength.

91, 14: The just frequent the temple so much that they are figuratively "planted" there.

92, 1-5: A psalm of Yahweh-King (vv. 1-2) who is victorious over the rebellious forces of evil (vv. 3-4), and whose "decrees" must therefore be obeyed (v. 5). There are a group of hymns known as Psalms of Yahweh-King or Psalms on the Kingship of Yahweh, namely: psalms 46; 92; 94—99; 149. In content matter, they praise Yahweh who will come to rule the world. In structure, they follow the hymns: an introductory invitation to praise Yahweh, different modes of praising Him, e.g., king, world ruler, savior, creator, a concluding invitation to praise God. These psalms are postexilic.

A modern non-Catholic opinion calls this group of psalms, which

2 and he has made the world firm, not to be moved. | Your throne stands firm from of old; from everlasting you are, O Lord.
3 The floods lift up, O Lord, the floods lift up their voice; the 4 floods lift up their tumult. | More powerful than the roar of many waters, more powerful than the breakers of the sea—powerful on high is the Lord.
5 Your decrees are worthy of trust indeed; holiness befits your house, O Lord, for length of days.

PSALM 93 (94)

1 A Warning to Israel's Oppressors God of vengeance, 2 Lord, God of vengeance, show yourself. | Rise up, judge of the 3 earth; render their deserts to the proud. | How long, O Lord, 4 shall the wicked, how long shall the wicked glory, | mouthing insolent speeches, boasting, all the evildoers?
5 Your people, O Lord, they trample down, your inheritance
6 they afflict. | Widow and stranger they slay, the fatherless vary in number from four to about thirty-five, Enthronement of Yahweh Psalms. These men claim that in the enthronement psalms the Jews celebrated a liturgical New Year Feast of Yahweh's Enthronement. According to this opinion the festival ritual included a dramatic reading of creation, a pantomime of Yahweh battling His enemies, a procession, probably with the Ark of the Covenant, and Yahweh's annual renewal enthronement as King of His people through the reigning Davidic king. This ritual was supposedly an imitation of the Babylonian annual enthronement feast of Marduk. That feast apparently influenced the Jews through the Chanaanites. Other non-Catholic scholars have severely hindered this opinion from gaining wide acceptance with such arguments as: 1) There is not one clear biblical text mentioning such a New Year Feast of Yahweh's Enthronement. 2) The following resemblances in this group of psalms with the Babylonian feast are too general to prove that the psalms are speaking of the same New Year Enthronement Feast, namely, the trumpet blasts, the people's shouts, and handclapping, the ascent to the throne. 3) The frequent expression "Yahweh King" is forced to yield the translation "Yahweh has again become king," which is supposed to refer to the whole New Year Feast of Yahweh's Enthronement. It suffices to translate this psalmodic expression "Yahweh is or has become king" without reading this feast into it. It would be a profession of faith in Yahweh as king or in Yahweh who once more will become king as in days of old.

The liturgy applies this to Christ the King in several feasts.

92, 5: Holiness befits your house: the consecrated temple of Yahweh.

93, 1-23: Whether or not one or two authors wrote this psalm, and in spite of the dates varying from the eighth to the fourth centuries, the song seems to be a national lament in the sense that an individual prays for the nation against unfair judges and rulers (vv. 1-15), and a lament of an individual who is full of trust and gratefulness (vv. 16-23).

they murder, | and they say, "The Lord sees not; the God of Jacob perceives not."
Understand, you senseless ones among the people; and, you fools, when will you be wise? | Shall he who shaped the ear not hear? or he who formed the eye not see? | Shall he who instructs nations not chastise, he who teaches men knowledge? | The Lord knows the thoughts of men, and that they are vain.
Happy the man whom you instruct, O Lord, whom by your law you teach, | giving him rest from evil days, till the pit be dug for the wicked. | For the Lord will not cast off his people, nor abandon his inheritance; | but judgment shall again be with justice, and all the upright of heart shall follow it.
Who will rise up for me against the wicked? Who will stand by me against the evildoers? | Were not the Lord my help, I would soon dwell in the silent grave. | When I say, "My foot is slipping," your kindness, O Lord, sustains me; | when cares abound within me, your comfort gladdens my soul.
How could the tribunal of wickedness be leagued with you, which creates burdens in the guise of law? | Though they attack the life of the just and condemn innocent blood, | yet the Lord is my stronghold, and my God the Rock of my refuge. | And he will requite them for their evildoing, and for their wickedness he will destroy them; the Lord, our God, will destroy them.

PSALM 94 (95)

A Call to Praise and Obedience Come, let us sing joyfully to the Lord; let us acclaim the Rock of our salvation. | Let us greet him with thanksgiving; let us joyfully sing psalms to him | for the Lord is a great God, and a great king above all gods; | in his hands are the depths of the earth, and the tops of the mountains are his. | His is the sea, for he has made it, and the dry land, which his hands have formed.
Come, let us bow down in worship; let us kneel before the 93, 7: The criticism is that God does not care about the concerns of men as in Ps 58, 8.

93, 8-11: In the style of a sage, the psalmist warns the wicked.
93, 15: The judges will again give fair decisions.
93, 18: Slipping: a metaphor for trouble.
94, 1-11: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n.
94, 1-2: The psalmist invites the worshipers to praise Yahweh.
94, 3-5: Yahweh is king of creation.
94, 6: Another invitation as in vv. 1-2.

7 Lord who made us. | For he is our God, and we are the people he shepherds, the flock he guides.
8 Oh, that today you would hear his voice: | "Harden not your hearts as at Meriba, as in the day of Massa in the desert, | 9 where your fathers tempted me; they tested me though they had 10 seen my works. | Forty years I loathed that generation, and I said: They are a people of erring heart, and they know not my 11 ways. | Therefore I swore in my anger: They shall not enter into my rest."

PSALM 95 (96)

The Glories of the Lord, the King of the Universe

1 Sing to the Lord a new song; sing to the Lord, all you lands. |
2 Sing to the Lord; bless his name; announce his salvation, day 3 after day. | Tell his glory among the nations; among all peoples, his wondrous deeds.
4 For great is the Lord and highly to be praised; awesome is he,
5 beyond all gods. | For all the gods of the nations are things of 6 nought, but the Lord made the heavens. | Splendor and majesty go before him; praise and grandeur are in his sanctuary.
7 Give to the Lord, you families of nations, give to the Lord 8 glory and praise; | give to the Lord the glory due his name!
9 | Bring gifts, and enter his courts; worship the Lord in holy 10 attire. Tremble before him, all the earth; | say among the nations: The Lord is king. He has made the world firm, not to be moved; he governs the peoples with equity.
11 Let the heavens be glad and the earth rejoice; let the sea and 12 what fills it resound; | let the plains be joyful and all that is 13 in them! Then shall all the trees of the forest exult | before the Lord, for he comes; for he comes to rule the earth. He shall rule the world with justice and the peoples with his constancy.

94, 7b-11: By referring to Ex 17, 7 the poet warns the people to learn from the disobedience of their ancestors.

94, 11: My rest: the Promised Land of Chanaan. Heb 4, 1 spiritualizes it to mean heaven.

95, 1-13: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n. This psalm is more or less in 1 Par 16, 23-33.

95, 1-3: The poet invites the nations to praise Yahweh.

95, 4-6: Yahweh is the only true God.

95, 7-10: Another invitation as in vv. 1-3.

95, 11-13: In characteristic biblical fashion, nature shares man's sentiments in praising Yahweh.

PSALM 96 (97)

The Divine King, the Just Judge of All The Lord is king; let the earth rejoice; let the many isles be glad. | Clouds and darkness are round about him, justice and judgment are the foundation of his throne. | Fire goes before him and consumes his foes round about. | His lightnings illumine the world; the earth sees and trembles. | The mountains melt like wax before the Lord, before the Lord of all the earth. | The heavens proclaim his justice, and all peoples see his glory.

All who worship graven things are put to shame, who glory in the things of nought; all gods are prostrate before him. | Sion hears and is glad, and the cities of Juda rejoice because of your judgments, O Lord. | Because you, O Lord, are the Most High over all the earth, exalted far above all gods. | The Lord loves those that hate evil; he guards the lives of his faithful ones; from the hand of the wicked he delivers them. | Light dawns for the just; and gladness, for the upright of heart. | Be glad in the Lord, you just, and give thanks to his holy name.

PSALM 97 (98)

The Lord, the Victorious King and Just Judge

A psalm.

Sing to the Lord a new song, for he has done wondrous deeds; his right hand has won victory for him, his holy arm. | The Lord has made his salvation known: in the sight of the nations he has revealed his justice. | He has remembered his kindness and his faithfulness toward the house of Israel. All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation by our God.

Sing joyfully to the Lord, all you lands; break into song; sing praise. | Sing praise to the Lord with the harp, with the harp and melodious song. | With trumpets and the sound of the horn sing joyfully before the King, the Lord.

Let the sea and what fills it resound, the world and those who

96, 1-12: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n.

96, 1-6: The psalmist poetically has Yahweh appear as judge with the conventional accompaniment of "clouds and darkness," "fire," "lightnings," earthquake.

96, 7-9: Jerusalem ("Sion") and Juda rejoice at God's conquest of idolatry.

96, 10-12: Yahweh's followers are rewarded.

97, 1-9: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n.

97, 1-3: An invitation to praise God for the victory He gave to Israel.

97, 1: His right hand . . . his holy arm: metaphors for God's omnipotence.

97, 4-9: Man and nature should greet Yahweh savior.

8 dwell in it; | let the rivers clap their hands, the mountains
9 shout with them for joy | before the Lord, for he comes, for he comes to rule the earth; he will rule the world with justice and the peoples with equity.

PSALM 98 (99)

1 The Lord the Holy King The Lord is king; the peoples tremble; he is throned upon the cherubim; the earth quakes. |
2 The Lord in Sion is great, he is high above all the peoples. | 3 Let them praise your great and awesome name; holy is he!
4 The King in his might loves justice; you have established equity; justice and judgment in Jacob you have wrought. | 5 Extol the Lord, our God, and worship at his footstool; holy is he!
6 Moses and Aaron were among his priests, and Samuel, among those who called upon his name; they called upon the Lord, and 7 he answered them. | From the pillar of cloud he spoke to them;
8 they heard his decrees and the law he gave them. | O Lord, our God, you answered them; a forgiving God you were to them,
9 though requiting their misdeeds. | Extol the Lord, our God, and worship at his holy mountain; for holy is the Lord, our God.

PSALM 99 (100)

Processional Hymn

1 A psalm of thanksgiving.
2 Sing joyfully to the Lord, all you lands; | serve the Lord
3 with gladness; come before him with joyful song. | Know that the Lord is God; he made us, his we are; his people, the flock
4 he tends. | Enter his gates with thanksgiving, his courts with 5 praise; give thanks to him; bless his name, | for he is good:

98, 1-9: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n. This hymn stresses God's holiness.

98, 1-3: An invitation to praise Yahweh in Jerusalem ("Sion").

98, 3: Holy is he!: each of the three stanzas ends with this refrain. See vv. 5 and 9.

98, 4: Yahweh as ruler is praised.

98, 5: His footstool: the Ark of the Covenant was thought of as Yahweh's footstool, which evoked the image of oriental kings resting their feet on footstools.

98, 6-8: The people are to praise Yahweh for His kind treatment of the historical leaders of the nation.

98, 7: A reference to Ex 33, 9.

99, 1-5: A psalm of Yahweh-King. See Ps 92, 1-5 n.

99, 1-3: An invitation to "all the lands" to praise Yahweh.

99, 4-5: All should thank Yahweh in His temple ("gates," "courts") for His qualities.

the Lord, whose kindness endures forever, and his faithfulness, to all generations.

PSALM 100 (101)

Norm of Life for Rulers

1 A psalm of David.

Of kindness and judgment I will sing; to you, O Lord, I will 2 sing praise. | I will persevere in the way of integrity; when will you come to me?

I will walk in the integrity of my heart, within my house; | 3 I will not set before my eyes any base thing. I hate him who 4 does perversely; he shall not remain with me. | A crooked
5 heart shall be far from me; evil I will not know. | Whoever slanders his neighbor in secret, him will I destroy. The man of 6 haughty eyes and puffed-up heart I will not endure. | My eyes are upon the faithful of the land, that they may dwell with me. He who walks in the way of integrity shall be in my
7 service. | He shall not dwell within my house who practices deceit. He who speaks falsehood shall not stand before my
8 eyes. | Each morning I will destroy all the wicked of the land, and uproot from the city of the Lord all evildoers.

PSALM 101 (102)

Prayer in Time of Distress

1 The prayer of an afflicted one when he is faint and pours out his anguish before the Lord.

2 O Lord, hear my prayer, and let my cry come to you. |

100, 1-8: This is often called a royal psalm since it was intended for a Jerusalem king at a time unknown to us. Insofar as it was intended as a rule of conduct for a monarch, it is a wisdom psalm.

100, 1: The psalmist puts these words on the lips of the monarch, speaking as a sage.

100, 2: When will you come to me?: in intimate union as my reward for a virtuous life.

100, 4: A crooked heart: a perverse heart.

100, 8: The reference to the normal time of daily administering of justice.

101, 2-29: The unity of this psalm of lament is discussed, i.e., whether there were one or two authors for its different parts. Regardless, the psalm has three parts. Part I (vv. 2-12) is a prayer of an ill and abandoned psalmist. Part 2 (vv. 13-23) is a prayer for the restoration of Jerusalem and for her exiles, which indicates the date of the psalm. Part 3 (vv. 24-29) is a prayer on the contrast between man's brief life span and God's eternity. It is the fifth penitential psalm. See Ps 6, 2-11 n.

3 Hide not your face from me in the day of my distress. Incline your ear to me; in the day when I call, answer me speedily. |
4 For my days vanish like smoke, and my bones burn like fire. |
5 Withered and dried up like grass is my heart; I forget to eat 6 my bread. | Because of my insistent sighing I am reduced to 7 skin and bone. | I am like a desert owl; I have become like an 8 owl among the ruins. | I am sleepless, and I moan; I am like a
9 sparrow alone on the housetop. | All the day my enemies revile
10 me; in their rage against me they make a curse of me. | For I 11 eat ashes like bread and mingle my drink with tears, | because of your fury and your wrath; for you lifted me up only to cast 12 me down. | My days are like a lengthening shadow, and I wither like grass.

13 But you, O Lord, abide forever, and your name through all 14 generations. | You will arise and have mercy on Sion, for it is 15 time to pity her, for the appointed time has come. | For her stones are dear to your servants, and her dust moves them to 16 pity. | And the nations shall revere your name, O Lord, and 17 all the kings of the earth your glory, | when the Lord has 18 rebuilt Sion and appeared in his glory; | when he has regarded the prayer of the destitute, and not despised their prayer.

19 Let this be written for the generation to come, and let his 20 future creatures praise the Lord: | "The Lord looked down 21 from his holy height, from heaven he beheld the earth, | to hear the groaning of the prisoners, to release those doomed to die"— 22 | that the name of the Lord may be declared in Sion; and his 23 praise, in Jerusalem, | when the peoples gather together, and the kingdoms, to serve the Lord.

24 He has broken down my strength in the way; he has cut 25 short my days. | I say: O my God, take me not hence in the midst of my days; through all generations your years endure. | 26 Of old you established the earth, and the heavens are the work 27 of your hands. | They shall perish, but you remain though all of them grow old like a garment. Like clothing you change 28 them, and they are changed, | but you are the same, and your 29 years have no end. | The children of your servants shall abide, and their posterity shall continue in your presence.

101, 7: A desert owl: what exact species of birds the Hebrew words signify is uncertain.

101, 9: They make a curse of me: they use my name in cursing, e.g., "May you be as miserable as he."

101, 10: I eat ashes like bread: I undergo many humiliations.

101, 12: My days are drawing to a close.

101, 25: In the midst of my days: in middle age.

PSALM 102 (103)

Praise of Divine Goodness

1 Of David.

Bless the Lord, O my soul; and all my being, bless his holy 2 name. | Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his
3 benefits; | he pardons all your iniquities, he heals all your ills. | 4 He redeems your life from destruction, he crowns you with 5 kindness and compassion, | he fills your lifetime with good;
your youth is renewed like the eagle's.

6 The Lord secures justice and the rights of all the oppressed. | 7 He has made known his ways to Moses, and his deeds to the 8 children of Israel. | Merciful and gracious is the Lord, slow to 9 anger and abounding in kindness. | He will not always chide, 10 nor does he keep his wrath forever. | Not according to our sins does he deal with us, nor does he requite us according to our crimes.

11 For as the heavens are high above the earth, so surpassing is 12 his kindness toward those who fear him. | As far as the east is from the west, so far has he put our transgressions from us. | 13 As a father has compassion on his children, so the Lord has 14 compassion on those who fear him, | for he knows how we are 15 formed; he remembers that we are dust. | Man's days are like 16 those of grass; like a flower of the field he blooms; | the wind sweeps over him and he is gone, and his place knows him no 17 more. | But the kindness of the Lord is from eternity to eternity toward those who fear him, and his justice toward children's 18 children | among those who keep his covenant and remember to fulfill his precepts.

19 The Lord has established his throne in heaven, and his king-20 dom rules over all. | Bless the Lord, all you his angels, you mighty in strength, who do his bidding, obeying his spoken 21 word. | Bless the Lord, all you his hosts, his ministers, who 22 do his will. | Bless the Lord, all his works, everywhere in his domain. Bless the Lord, O my soul!

PSALM 103 (104)

1 Praise of God the Creator Bless the Lord, O my soul!
O Lord, my God, you are great indeed! You are clothed with 102, 1-22: A hymn of praise for God's kindness to the poet (vv. 1-5) and to the nation (vv. 6-10). Yahweh is merciful because man is weak (vv. 11-18). The poet invites heaven and earth to praise God (vv. 19-22).

102, 5: Your youth is renewed like the eagle's: the eagle was known for his long life.

103, 1-35: This is a hymn on the glory and wisdom of God as mani-majesty and glory, | robed in light as with a cloak. You have spread out the heavens like a tent-cloth; | you have constructed your palace upon the waters. You make the clouds your chariot;

you travel on the wings of the wind. | You make the winds your messengers, and flaming fire your ministers.
You fixed the earth upon its foundation, not to be moved forever; | with the ocean, as with a garment, you covered it;
above the mountains the waters stood. | At your rebuke they fled, at the sound of your thunder they took to flight; | as the mountains rose, they went down the valleys to the place you had fixed for them. | You set a limit they may not pass, nor shall they cover the earth again.
You send forth springs into the watercourses that wind among the mountains, | and give drink to every beast of the field, till the wild asses quench their thirst. | Beside them the birds of heaven dwell; from among the branches they send forth their song. | You water the mountains from your palace; the earth is replete with the fruit of your works. | You raise grass for the cattle, and vegetation for men's use, producing bread from the earth, | and wine to gladden men's hearts, so that their faces gleam with oil, and bread fortifies the hearts of men. | Well watered are the trees of the Lord, the cedars of Lebanon, which he planted; | in them the birds build their nests;
fir trees are the home of the stork. | The high mountains are for wild goats; the cliffs are a refuge for rock-badgers.
You made the moon to mark the seasons; the sun knows the hour of its setting. | You bring darkness, and it is night; then all the beasts of the forest roam about; | young lions roar for the prey and seek their food from God. | When the sun rises, fested in creation. God made everything, and everything depends on Him for continued existence. The order of creation in Gn 1 is roughly followed here. Scholars often compare this psalm with "The Hymn to the Aton" (the sun-disk as life's source) by Pharao Amenophis IV (Akhenaton), the "monotheist" of the fourteenth century B.C. He spearheaded the "heresy" that Aton was the only god of Egypt. This is the closest pagan parallel to Ps 103. Whether the psalmist knew this Egyptian poem even indirectly is debated.

103, 3: Palace upon the waters: God's abode was pictured above the waters of the heavenly firmament.

103, 4: Flaming fire: lightning. Heb 1, 7 quotes this verse to show the superiority of Christ over the angels.

103, 6-9: According to this poetic picture, all the earth was blanketed with water until God slowly lowered the water so that the earth gradually appeared.

103, 13: Yahweh is represented as letting the rain down from the reservoir of the upper waters referred to in v. 3.

23 they withdraw and couch in their dens. | Man goes forth to his work and to his tillage till the evening.
24 How manifold are your works, O Lord! In wisdom you have 25 wrought them all—the earth is full of your creatures; | the sea also, great and wide, in which are schools without number 26 of living things both small and great, | and where ships move about with Leviathan, which you formed to make sport of it.
27 They all look to you to give them food in due time. | 28 When you give it to them, they gather it; when you open your 29 hand, they are filled with good things. | If you hide your face, they are dismayed; if you take away their breath, they perish 30 and return to their dust. | When you send forth your spirit, they are created, and you renew the face of the earth.
31 May the glory of the Lord endure forever; may the Lord be 32 glad in his works! | He who looks upon the earth, and it 33 trembles; who touches the mountains, and they smoke! | I will sing to the Lord all my life; I will sing praise to my God while 34 I live. | Pleasing to him be my theme; I will be glad in the Lord.
35 | May sinners cease from the earth, and may the wicked be no more. Bless the Lord, O my soul! Alleluia.

PSALM 104 (105)

1 God's Fidelity to His Promise Give thanks to the Lord, invoke his name; make known among the nations his deeds.
2 Sing to him, sing his praise, proclaim all his wondrous deeds.
3 Glory in his holy name; rejoice, O hearts that seek the Lord!
4 Look to the Lord in his strength; seek to serve him constantly.
5 | Recall the wondrous deeds that he has wrought, his portents,
6 and the judgments he has uttered, | you descendants of Abraham, his servants, sons of Jacob, his chosen ones!
7 He, the Lord, is our God; throughout the earth his judg-8 ments prevail. | He remembers forever his covenant which he 9 made binding for a thousand generations— | which he entered
10 into with Abraham and by his oath to Isaac; | which he estab-

103, 26: Leviathan: the mythological sea monster personifying primeval chaos. In Jb 40, 25, Leviathan is a crocodile; here it is perhaps a whale.

103, 27: They all: man and creatures.

103, 30: The liturgy of Pentecost applies this verse to the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity.

104, 1-45: As Ps 77 (see Ps 77, 1-72 n) this is a wisdom historical psalm on how to profit from the ancestors' disobedience to God in history. The psalm is a companion piece to Ps 105. Both were written perhaps during the Babylonian exile of the sixth century B.C.

104, 1-7: The introduction.

104, 8-11: God's promise to the patriarchs.

lished for Jacob by statute, for Israel as an everlasting cove-11 nant, | saying, "To you will I give the land of Chanaan as your allotted inheritance."
12 When they were few in number, a handful, and strangers 13 there, | wandering from nation to nation and from one king-14 dom to another people, | he let no man oppress them, and for 15 their sake he rebuked kings: | "Touch not my anointed, and to my prophets do no harm." 16 When he called down a famine on the land and ruined the 17 crop that sustained them, | he sent a man before them, Joseph,
18 sold as a slave; | they had weighed him down with fetters, and 19 he was bound with chains, | till his prediction came to pass and 20 the word of the Lord proved him true. | The king sent and 21 released him, the ruler of the peoples set him free. | He made 22 him lord of his house and ruler of all his possessions, | that he might train his princes to be like him and teach his elders wisdom.
23 Then Israel came to Egypt, and Jacob sojourned in the land
24 of Ham. | He greatly increased his people and made them 25 stronger than their foes, | whose hearts he changed, so that they 26 hated his people, and dealt deceitfully with his servants. | He 27 sent Moses his servant; Aaron, whom he had chosen. | They wrought his signs among them, and wonders in the land of Ham.
28 He sent the darkness; it grew dark, but they rebelled against 29 his words. | He turned their waters into blood and killed their 30 fish. | Their land swarmed with frogs, even in the chambers of 31 their kings. | He spoke, and there came swarms of flies; gnats, 32 throughout all their borders. | For rain he gave them hail, with 33 flashing fires throughout their land. | He struck down their vines and their fig trees and shattered the trees throughout 34 their borders. | He spoke, and there came locusts and grass-
35 hoppers without number; | and they devoured every plant throughout the land; they devoured the fruit of their soil. | 36 Then he struck every first-born throughout their land, the first 37 fruits of all their manhood. | And he led them forth laden with 38 silver and gold, with not a weakling among their tribes. | Egypt rejoiced at their going, for the dread of them had fallen upon it.

104, 12-15: God's protection of the wandering patriarchs.
104, 15: My anointed . . . my prophets: the patriarchs.
104, 16-22: A reference to the story of Joseph in Genesis.
104, 23-27: The Israelites in Egypt and Moses' mission.
104, 23: The land of Ham: a synonym for Egypt.
104, 28-38: This account of the plagues in Egypt differs in order and detail (according to poetic license) from Ex 1—12.

39 He spread a cloud to cover them and fire to give them light 40 by night. | They asked, and he brought them quail, and with 41 bread from heaven he satisfied them. | He cleft the rock, and the water gushed forth; it flowed through the dry lands like a 42 stream, | for he remembered his holy word to his servant
43 Abraham. | And he led forth his people with joy; with shouts of joy, his chosen ones.
44 And he gave them the lands of the nations, and they took 45 what the peoples had toiled for, | that they might keep his statutes and observe his laws. Alleluia.

PSALM 105 (106)
Israel's Confession of Sin

1 Alleluia.
Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his kindness
2 endures forever. | Who can tell the mighty deeds of the Lord, 3 or proclaim all his praises? | Happy are they who observe what 4 is right, who do always what is just. | Remember me, O Lord, as you favor your people; visit me with your saving help, | 5 that I may see the prosperity of your chosen ones, rejoice in the joy of your people, and glory with your inheritance.
6 We have sinned, we and our fathers; we have committed 7 crimes; we have done wrong. | Our fathers in Egypt considered not your wonders; they remembered not your abundant kind-8 ness, but rebelled against the Most High at the Red Sea. | Yet he saved them for his name's sake, to make known his power. | 9 He rebuked the Red Sea, and it was dried up, and he led them 10 through the deep as through a desert. | He saved them from hostile hands and freed them from the hands of the enemy. |
11 The waters covered their foes; not one of them was left. | 12 Then they believed his words and sang his praises.
13 But soon they forgot his works; they waited not for his 14 counsel. | They gave way to craving in the desert and tempted

104, 39-43: The wandering through the wilderness. See Ex 12ff.
104, 44-45: The occupation of Chanaan, the Promised Land.
104, 44: The lands of the nations: a reference to the many peoples in Chanaan before the Hebrews entered.
104, 45 God's purpose was to mold an obedient people.
105, 1-48: This is another wisdom historical psalm (see 104, 1-45 n). The stress here is to teach the exiles that their history has been a chain of infidelities toward God from the time of the Exodus.
105, 1-5: Introductory prayer.
105, 6-12: The sin of the people, and God's help at the Red Sea.
105, 13-15: The people sin, but God grants their request for meat. See the quail in Nm 11, vv. 4 and 31-34.

15 God in the wilderness, | He gave them what they asked but sent a wasting disease against them.
16 They envied Moses in the camp, and Aaron, the holy one of 17 the Lord. | The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and 18 covered the faction of Abiram. | Fire broke out against their faction; a flame consumed the wicked.
19 They made a calf in Horeb and adored a molten image; | 20 they exchanged their glory for the image of a grass-eating 21 bullock. | They forgot the God who had saved them, who had 22 done great deeds in Egypt, | wondrous deeds in the land of 23 Ham, terrible things at the Red Sea. | Then he spoke of exterminating them, but Moses, his chosen one, | withstood him in the breach to turn back his destructive wrath.
24 Yet they despised the desirable land; they believed not his 25 word. | They murmured in their tents, and obeyed not the voice
26 of the Lord. | Then with raised hand he swore against them
27 to let them perish in the desert, | to scatter their descendants among the nations, and to disperse them over the lands.
28 And they submitted to the rites of Beelphegor and ate the 29 sacrifices of dead gods. | They provoked him by their deeds, 30 and a plague attacked them. | Then Phinees stood forth in 31 judgment and the plague was checked; | and it was imputed to him for merit through all generations forever.
32 They angered him at the waters of Meriba, and Moses fared 33 ill on their account, | for they embittered his spirit, and the rash utterance passed his lips.
34 They did not exterminate the peoples, as the Lord had 35 commanded them, | but mingled with the nations and learned 36 their works. | They served their idols, which became a snare for 37 them. They sacrificed their sons and their daughters to 38 demons, | and they shed innocent blood, the blood of their sons and their daughters, whom they sacrificed to the idols of 105, 14-15: A reference to the rebellions of Core, Dathan, and Abiram. See Num 16.

105, 19-23: The worship of the golden calf. See Ex 32.

105, 24-27: A reference to Num 14. The first encounter with the Canaanites.

105, 28-31: The people sin at Beelphegor. See Num 25.

105, 32-33: A reference to the people provoking Moses to sin, so that God decreed him from entering into the Promised Land. For the "sin" see Num 20, 2-13.

105, 34-39: More sins in mingling with the Canaanites ("the nations" v. 35).

105, 34: The sacred writers interpreted God's will as a command to exterminate the Canaanites for their crimes.

39 Chanaan, desecrating the land with bloodshed; | they became defiled by their works, and wanton in their crimes.
40 And the Lord grew angry with his people, and abhorred his 41 inheritance; | he gave them over into the hands of the nations,
42 and their foes ruled over them. | Their enemies oppressed them,
43 and they were humbled under their power. | Many times did he rescue them, but they embittered him with their counsels 44 and were brought low by their guilt. | Yet he had regard for 45 their affliction when he heard their cry; | and for their sake he was mindful of his covenant and relented, in his abundant 46 kindness, | and he won for them compassion from all who held 47 them captive. | Save us, O Lord, our God, and gather us from among the nations, that we may give thanks to your holy name and glory in praising you.

48 Blessed be the Lord, the God of Israel, through all eternity!
Let all the people say, Amen! Alleluia.

PSALM 106 (107)

1 God the Savior of Men in Distress "Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his kindness endures forever!" | 2 Thus let the redeemed of the Lord say, those whom he has 3 redeemed from the hand of the foe | and gathered from the lands, from the east and the west, from the north and the south.
4 They went astray in the desert wilderness; the way to an 5 inhabited city they did not find. | Hungry and thirsty, their 6 life was wasting away within them. | They cried to the Lord in 7 their distress; from their straits he rescued them. | And he led 8 them by a direct way to reach an inhabited city. | Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness and his wondrous 9 deeds to the children of men, | because he satisfied the longing soul and filled the hungry soul with good things.

105, 40-46: God punished the Israelites for their wicked deeds.

105, 47: The poet prays for the home-coming of his people from the "Dispersion" abroad.

105, 48: This doxology is not part of the psalm, but was added later to end the Fourth Book of Psalms.

106, 1-43: This postexilic psalm is a public thanksgiving (vv. 1-32), followed by a prolonged praise to God for His kind deeds (vv. 33-43). Whether there are two independent parts by two different authors is a moot question.

106, 1-3: Introduction: the people praise God for their release from exile.

106, 1: A frequent biblical formula of praise used in the temple liturgy.

106, 4-9: The poet sings about the passage from exile ("the desert wilderness" v. 1) to the homeland ("an inhabited city" v. 7).

10 They dwelt in darkness and gloom, bondsmen in want and in 11 chains, | because they had rebelled against the words of God
12 and scorned the counsel of the Most High. | And he humbled their hearts with trouble; when they stumbled, there was no 13 one to help them. | They cried to the Lord in their distress;
14 from their straits he rescued them. | And he led them forth 15 from darkness and gloom and broke their bonds asunder. | Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness and his wondrous 16 deeds to the children of men, | because he shattered the gates of brass and burst the bars of iron.
17 Stricken because of their wicked ways and afflicted because 18 of their sins, | they loathed all manner of food, so that they 19 were near the gates of death. | They cried to the Lord in their 20 distress; from their straits he rescued them. | He sent forth his 21 word to heal them and to snatch them from destruction. | Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness and his wondrous 22 deeds to the children of men. | Let them make thank offerings and declare his works with shouts of joy.
23 They who sailed the sea in ships, trading on the deep waters, 24 | these saw the works of the Lord and his wonders in the abyss.
25 | His command raised up a storm wind which tossed its waves
26 on high. | They mounted up to heaven; they sank to the depths; 27 their hearts melted away in their plight. | They reeled and staggered like drunken men, and all their skill was swallowed 28 up. | They cried to the Lord in their distress; from their straits
29 he rescued them. | He hushed the storm to a gentle breeze, and 30 the billows of the sea were stilled; | they rejoiced that they were 31 calmed, and he brought them to their desired haven. | Let them give thanks to the Lord for his kindness and his wondrous deeds 32 to the children of men. | Let them extol him in the assembly of the people and praise him in the council of the elders.
33 He changed rivers into desert, water springs into thirsty 34 ground, | fruitful land into salt marsh, because of the wicked-35 ness of its inhabitants. | He changed the desert into pools of 36 water, waterless land into water springs. | And there he settled
37 the hungry, and they built a city to dwell in. | They sowed fields and planted vineyards, and they obtained a fruitful yield.
38 | He blessed them, and they became very many; nor did he 106, 10-16: Yahweh freed the imprisoned exiles.

106, 17-22: God saved the people who were wasting away in exile.
106, 23-32: The people were like helpless seafarers whom God rescued.
106, 33-37: God made the land of the people fertile.

39 suffer their cattle to decrease. | And they dwindled and were 40 brought low through oppression, affliction and sorrow. | But he who pours out contempt upon princes, and sends them 41 astray through a trackless waste, | lifted up the needy out of 42 misery and made the families numerous like flocks. | The upright see this and rejoice, and all the wickedness closes its 43 mouth. | Who is wise enough to observe these things and to understand the favors of the Lord?

PSALM 107 (108)

Prayer for Victory

1 A song; a psalm of David.
2 My heart is steadfast, O God; my heart is steadfast; I will
3 sing and chant praise. | Awake, O my soul; awake, lyre and
4 harp; I will wake the dawn. | I will give thanks to you among the peoples, O Lord; I will chant your praise among the 5 nations, | for your kindness towers to the heavens, and your 6 faithfulness to the skies. | Be exalted above the heavens, O
7 God; over all the earth be your glory! | That your loved ones may escape, help us by your right hand, and answer us.
8 God promised in his sanctuary: "Exultantly I will apportion 9 Sichem, and measure off the valley of Succhoth; | mine is Galaad, and mine Manasse, Ephraim is the helmet for my head;
10 Juda, my scepter; | Moab shall serve as my washbowl; upon
Edom I will set my shoe; I will triumph over Philistia." |
11 Who will bring me into the fortified city? Who will lead me
12 into Edom? | Have not you, O God, rejected us, so that you go
13 not forth, O God, with our armies? | Give us aid against the 14 foe, for worthless is the help of men. | Under God we shall do valiantly; it is he who will tread down our foes.

PSALM 108 (109)

Prayer against a Slanderous Enemy

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 O God, whom I praise, be not silent, | for they have opened wicked and treacherous mouths against me. They have spoken 3 to me with lying tongues, | and with words of hatred they 4 have encompassed me and attacked me without cause. | In 106, 39-41: When the rulers ("princes" v. 40) oppressed the poor people, God helped them.

107, 2-14: This is a compilation of parts from two other psalms: vv. 2-6 are the same as Ps 56, 8-12 n; vv. 7-14 are the same as Ps 59, 7-14.

108, 1-31: A lament of an innocent sufferer like Job. He is accused of sins because of his illness. He asks God for a trial to prove his innocence, to obtain his earthly reward, and to punish his enemies.

5 return for my love they slandered me, but I prayed. | They repaid me evil for good and hatred for my love.
6 Raise up a wicked man against him, and let the accuser stand 7 at his right hand. | When he is judged, let him go forth con-
8 demned, and may his plea be in vain. | May his days be few;
9 may another take his office. | May his children be fatherless,
10 and his wife a widow. | May his children be roaming vagrants and beggars; may they be cast out of the ruins of their homes. | 11 May the usurer ensnare all his belongings, and strangers plunder 12 the fruit of his labors. | May there be no one to do him a kind-13 ness, nor anyone to pity his orphans. | May his posterity meet with destruction; in the next generation may their name be 14 blotted out. | May the guilt of his fathers be remembered by 15 the Lord; let not his mother's sin be blotted out; | may they be continually before the Lord, till he banish the memory of 16 these parents from the earth, | because he remembered not to show kindness, but persecuted the wretched and poor and the 17 brokenhearted, to do them to death. | He loved cursing; may it come upon him; he took no delight in blessing; may it be far 18 from him. | And may he be clothed with cursing as with a robe; may it penetrate into his entrails like water and like oil 19 into his bones; | may it be for him like a garment which covers him, like a girdle which is always about him.
20 May this be the recompense from the Lord upon my accusers
21 and upon those who speak evil against me. | But do you, O God, my Lord, deal kindly with me for your name's sake; in 22 your generous kindness rescue me; | for I am wretched and 23 poor, and my heart is pierced within me. | Like a lengthening 24 shadow I pass away; I am swept away like the locust. | My knees totter from my fasting, and my flesh is wasted of its 25 substance. | And I am become a mockery to them; when they 26 see me, they shake their heads. | Help me, O Lord, my God;
27 save me, in your kindness, | and let them know that this is 28 your hand; that you, O Lord, have done this. | Let them curse, but do you bless; may my adversaries be put to shame, but let 108, 6: The psalmist asks God to appoint an accuser (or "a wicked man") to level charges against "him," the psalmist's enemy. In such court procedures, the one who accuses stands on the "right hand" of the person accused.

108, 7-20: On revenge in the psalms, see Jer 12, 3 n.

108, 8: May another take his office: St. Peter (Acts 1, 20) applies this to Judas.

108, 23: Swept away: there is an allusion to a powerful wind which sometimes ended a plague of locusts by driving them into the Mediterranean Sea.

29 your servant rejoice. | Let my accusers be clothed with disgrace
30 and let them wear their shame like a mantle. | I will speak my thanks earnestly to the Lord, and in the midst of the throng 31 I will praise him, | for he stood at the right hand of the poor man, to save him from those who would condemn him.

PSALM 109 (110)

The Messia: King, Priest and Conqueror

1 A psalm of David.
The Lord said to my Lord: "Sit at my right hand till I make 2 your enemies your footstool." | The scepter of your power the Lord will stretch forth from Sion: "Rule in the midst of your 3 enemies. | Yours is princely power in the day of your birth, in holy splendor; before the daystar, like the dew, I have begotten you." 4 The Lord has sworn, and he will not repent: "You are a priest forever, according to the order of Melchisedec."

109, 1-7: This is a royal Messianic psalm. Modern scholars date this psalm before the exile (see v. 4 n). The psalm was most probably written on the occasion of some royal festival. The tendency is to interpret this psalm as a description of the reigning Davidic king as representative and bearer of the hopes of the dynasty (v. 1 n). Later, after the exile of 538 B.C., the same psalm was reread as describing directly the future person of the Messia. The New Testament writers clearly saw Christ fulfilling this psalm, e.g., in Mt 22, 44; Acts 2, 34. The closest non-biblical pagan parallel to this psalm is Ninlil's prophecy to the Assyrian king Ashurbanipal of the seventh century B.C.

The liturgy uses this psalm in feasts of Our Lord.

109, 1: The Lord said to my Lord: the psalmist says that Yahweh ("the Lord") said to the king ("my Lord"). To address the king as "Lord" was a polite title of a subject to his king (see 2 Sm 1, 10). Sit at my right hand: this was the place of honor. Till I make your enemies your footstool: in Mesopotamian art, a conquering king may be seen with his foot on the neck of the conquered as a sign of the latter's submission. See Jos 10, 24.

109, 3: Since the Hebrew of this verse is not only obscure but also corrupt, the translation here comes from ancient translations of the Hebrew. Therefore, the reference of God begetting His Son is not as clear in the original as in the present translation, but even if it were, this sonship is understood by modern scholars as an allusion to Yahweh's adoptive sonship of David and his dynasty in 2 Sm 7.

109, 4: The psalmist means here that the king was also a priest of Jerusalem, just as Melchisedec had been ("according to the order of Melchisedec"). See Gn 14, 18-24 n. Ordinarily, in the ancient Near East the monarch was also a priest; but this was not so in Israel except for the first kings, as David and Solomon who exercised priestly functions (see 2 Sm 24, 25).

It would be easier to understand the psalmist here if he had written

5 The Lord is at your right hand; he will crush kings on the 6 day of his wrath. | He will do judgment on the nations, heap-
7 ing up corpses; he will crush heads over the wide earth. | From the brook by the wayside he will drink; therefore will he lift up his head.

PSALM 110 (111)
Praise of God for His Goodness

1 Alleluia.
I will give thanks to the Lord with all my heart in the com-2 pany and assembly of the just. | Great are the works of the 3 Lord, exquisite in all their delights. | Majesty and glory are his 4 work, and his justice endures forever. | He has won renown for his wondrous deeds; gracious and merciful is the Lord. |
5 He has given food to those who fear him; he will forever be 6 mindful of his covenant. | He has made known to his people the power of his works, giving them the inheritance of the 7 nations. | The works of his hands are faithful and just; sure 8 are all his precepts, | reliable forever and ever, wrought in
9 truth and equity. | He has sent deliverance to his people; he has ratified his covenant forever; holy and awesome is his 10 name. | The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; prudent are all who live by it. His praise endures forever.

PSALM 111 (112)
The Blessings of the Just Man

1 Alleluia.
Happy the man who fears the Lord, who greatly delights in this psalm during David or Solomon's reign when tradition still considered the king of Jerusalem as a priest, which double office was directly inherited from Melchisedec.

The reality of Christ's priesthood in the New Testament went far beyond any Old Testament notion of the Messia's priesthood. See Heb 4, 14—7, 28 where Melchisedec is interpreted as a type of Christ who is the eternal priest-king. See Jer 33, 21-22 n.

109, 5-7: In spite of the obscure Hebrew of vv. 6-7, Yahweh is depicted as a cruel oriental warrior king of the day who will execute the promise (v. 1) and make the king a universal ruler.

110, 1-10: This is an alphabetic (see Ps 9A, 2-21 n) hymn of praise and thanksgiving for God's deeds and covenant. See Ps 111, 1-10 n.

The liturgy uses this psalm as one of thanksgiving in Sunday Vespers.

110, 1: In the company and assembly of the just: in the temple.

110, 5: Food: manna in the desert. See Ex 16, 4-36 n.

110, 6: The inheritance of the nation: the Promised Land of Chanaan. See Ps 104, 44 n.

110, 10: The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: it means living religiously as in Prv 1, 7 n.

111, 1-10: An alphabetic (see Ps 9A, 2-21 n) wisdom psalm his commands. | His posterity shall be mighty upon the earth;

the upright generation shall be blessed. | Wealth and riches
shall be in his house; his generosity shall endure forever. | He dawns through the darkness, a light for the upright; he is gracious and merciful and just. | Well for the man who is gracious and lends, who conducts his affairs with justice; | he shall never be moved; the just man shall be in everlasting remembrance. | An evil report he shall not fear; his heart is firm, trusting in the Lord. | His heart is steadfast; he shall not fear till he looks down upon his foes. | Lavishly he gives to the poor; his generosity shall endure forever; his horn shall be exalted in glory. | The wicked man shall see it and be vexed;
he shall gnash his teeth and pine away; the desire of the wicked shall perish.

PSALM 112 (113)

Praise of the Lord for His Care of the Lowly

Alleluia.
Praise, you servants of the Lord, praise the name of the Lord. | Blessed be the name of the Lord both now and forever. |
From the rising to the setting of the sun is the name of the Lord to be praised.
High above all nations is the Lord; above the heavens is his praising the virtues of "the man who fears the Lord" (see Ps 110, 10 n). The same author may have composed this and the preceding psalm if we judge by the pronounced similarity of style. Although there is no clue to the date, moderns commonly believe that both psalms were written after the exile of 538 B.C.

111, 3: Generosity: although the Hebrew word originally meant justice, it is here given its later meaning of "generosity."

111, 4: He: the just man who is the subject throughout the psalm. He is gracious and merciful and just: the just man, in his limited way, resembles God.

111, 6: He shall never be moved: a frequent description of the just man.

111, 9: His horn: his power and dignity.

112, 1-9: This is a hymn praying that God be worshiped (vv. 1-3) because of His glory (vv. 4-6) and His condescension to the "lowly" (vv. 7-9).

Pss 112—117 are known as the Hallel ("Praise") psalms because of the repeated exhortation, "Praise the Lord." These psalms, more precisely called the Little Hallel or Egyptian Hallel, were sung at the Jewish feasts of Passover, Pentecost, Tabernacles, Dedication, and the New Moon. (See the Great Hallel, Ps 135, 1-26 n.)

112, 1: Servants of the Lord: worshipers especially Levites.

112, 3: From the rising to the setting of the sun: it is a moot question whether this expression here is to be taken spatially (from east to west as in Ps 49, 1 and Mal 1, 11n) or temporally (all day long).

5 glory. | Who is like the Lord, our God, who is enthroned on 6 high | and looks upon the heavens and the earth below?
7 He raises up the lowly from the dust; from the dunghill he 8 lifts up the poor | to seat them with princes, with the princes
9 of his own people. | He establishes in her home the barren wife as the joyful mother of children.

PSALM 113A (114)

The Lord's Wonders at the Exodus

1 Alleluia.
When Israel came forth from Egypt, the house of Jacob 2 from a people of alien tongue, | Juda became his sanctuary, 3 Israel his domain. | The sea beheld and fled; Jordan turned 4 back. | The mountains skipped like rams, the hills like the 5 lambs of the flock. | Why is it, O sea, that you flee? O Jordan,
6 that you turn back? | You mountains, that you skip like rams?
7 You hills, like the lambs of the flock? | Before the face of the Lord, tremble, O earth, before the face of the God of Jacob, | 8 who turned the rock into pools of water, the flint into flowing springs.

PSALM 113B (115)

1 The Greatness and Goodness of the True God Not to us, O Lord, not to us but to your name give glory because of 2 your kindness, because of your truth. | Why should the pagans
3 say, "Where is their God?" | Our God is in heaven; whatever he wills, he does.
4 Their idols are silver and gold, the handiwork of men. |
5 They have mouths but speak not; they have eyes but see not; |
6 they have ears but hear not; they have noses but smell not; | 7 they have hands but feel not; they have feet but walk not;

112, 7-8: See the Canticle of Anna in 1 Sm 2, 8.

113A, 1-8: A hymn celebrating the Exodus and entrance into the Promised Land. It is one of the Hallel psalms. See Ps 112, 1-9 n.

113A, 3: A reference to the crossing of the Red Sea and the Jordan River. See Ex 14, 21f, and Jos 3, 14ff.

113A, 4: A poetic treatment of the earthquake accompanying God's appearance at Sinai (Ex 19, 18).

113A, 8: A reference to Ex 17, 6 and Nm 20, 11.

113B, 1-18: A Hallel psalm. See Ps 112, 1-9 n.

113B, 1-3: In praise of Yahweh.

113B, 2: Where is their God?: the pagans imply that God does not assist His people in time of need.

113B, 4-8: See Is 44, 9-20 n, on the understanding of idolatry by the sacred writers.

8 they utter no sound from their throat. | Their makers shall be like them, everyone that trusts in them.
9 The house of Israel trusts in the Lord; he is their help and 10 their shield. | The house of Aaron trusts in the Lord; he is 11 their help and their shield. | Those who fear the Lord trust in 12 the Lord; he is their help and their shield. | The Lord remembers us and will bless us: he will bless the house of Israel; he 13 will bless the house of Aaron; | he will bless those who fear the 14 Lord, both the small and the great. | May the Lord bless you 15 more and more, both you and your children. | May you be 16 blessed by the Lord, who made heaven and earth. | Heaven is the heaven of the Lord, but the earth he has given to the children 17 of men. | It is not the dead who praise the Lord, nor those who 18 go down into silence; | but we bless the Lord, both now and forever.

PSALM 114 (116A)
Thanksgiving to God for Help in Need

1 Alleluia.
I love the Lord because he has heard my voice in supplica-2 tion, | because he has inclined his ear to me the day I called. | 3 The cords of death encompassed me; the snares of the nether 4 world seized upon me; I fell into distress and sorrow, | and I called upon the name of the Lord, "O Lord, save my life!" 5 Gracious is the Lord and just; yes, our God is merciful. |
6 The Lord keeps the little ones; I was brought low, and he saved 7 me. | Return, O my soul, to your tranquillity, for the Lord has 8 been good to you. | For he has freed my soul from death, my 9 eyes from tears, my feet from stumbling. | I shall walk before the Lord in the lands of the living.

PSALM 115 (116B)

1 I believed, even when I said, "I am greatly afflicted"; |

113B, 9-11: This is often called a liturgical litany of the laity ("the house of Israel"), the priests ("the house of Aaron"), and the converts to Judaism ("those who fear the Lord") who confide in God.

113B, 12-15: The priestly blessing.

113B, 16-18: A hymn of praise.

114, 1-9: Together with Ps 115 this forms one thanksgiving hymn of a just man who thanks God for recovery from illness and from near death. See Ps 112, 1-9 n, since this is one of the Hallel psalms.

114, 3: Cords of death: a frequent figure of fatal illness. The verse evokes the imagery of a hunter trapping his prey.

114, 8: Stumbling: sorrow.

115, 1-10: See Ps 114, 1-9 n. In the current Hebrew text this forms one psalm.

115, 1: The psalmist trusted ("believed") even while he was ill

2.3 I said in my alarm, "No man is dependable." | How shall I make a return to the Lord for all the good he has done me? | 4 The cup of salvation I will take up, and I will call upon the 5 name of the Lord; | my vows to the Lord I will pay in the 6 presence of all his people. | Precious in the eyes of the Lord is 7 the death of his faithful ones. | O Lord, I am your servant;
I am your servant, the son of your handmaid; you have loosed 8 my bonds. | To you will I offer sacrifice of thanksgiving, and 9 I will call upon the name of the Lord. | My vows to the Lord 10 I will pay in the presence of all his people, | in the courts of the house of the Lord, in your midst, O Jerusalem.

PSALM 116 (117)

Doxology of All the Nations

1 Alleluia.
Praise the Lord, all you nations; glorify him, all you peoples! | 2 For steadfast is his kindness toward us, and the fidelity of the Lord endures forever.

PSALM 117 (118)

Hymn of Thanksgiving to the Savior of Israel

1 Alleluia.
Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endures 2 forever. | Let the house of Israel say, "His mercy endures for-
3 ever." | Let the house of Aaron say, "His mercy endures
4 forever." | Let those who fear the Lord say, "His mercy endures forever."

that God would restore his health. The translation of this verse is difficult and disputed.

115, 2: No man is dependable: literally, "All men are liars."

115, 4: The cup of salvation: a probable reference to the thanksgiving offering of wine poured out at the altar. See Nm 15, 1-10. The priest says this verse before drinking the Precious Blood at Mass.

115, 6: The psalmist attributes to God the characteristic sentiments of the psalmist himself, namely, that God considers the death of a worshiper as, unfortunately, one worshiper less to praise Him on earth.

115, 7: Son of your handmaid: a synonym for servant.

116, 1-2: This hymn of praise is the shortest of the psalms. It invites all the Gentiles to praise Yahweh for His "kindness" and eternal "fidelity." Since this is a Hallel psalm, see Ps 112, 1-9 n.

117, 1-29: The last Hallel psalm (see Ps 112, 1-9 n) is a liturgy of thanksgiving and praise, which many believe was written for the Feast of Tabernacles, following the completion of the temple walls, in 444 B.C. (see Neh 8, 13-18).

117, 1-4: See Ps 113B, 9-11 n, for this litany of praise includes the same classes of people.

5 In my straits I called upon the Lord; the Lord answered me 6 and set me free. | The Lord is with me; I fear not; what can 7 man do against me? | The Lord is with me to help me, and I 8 shall look down upon my foes. | It is better to take refuge in 9 the Lord than to trust in man. | It is better to take refuge in the Lord than to trust in princes.
10 All the nations encompassed me; in the name of the Lord I 11 crushed them. | They encompassed me on every side; in the 12 name of the Lord I crushed them. | They encompassed me like bees, they flared up like fire among thorns; in the name of the 13 Lord I crushed them. | I was hard pressed and was falling, but 14 the Lord helped me. | My strength and my courage is the Lord, and he has been my savior.
15 The joyful shout of victory in the tents of the just: "The 16 right hand of the Lord has struck with power: | the right hand of the Lord is exalted; the right hand of the Lord has struck 17 with power." | I shall not die, but live, and declare the works
18 of the Lord. | Though the Lord has indeed chastised me, yet he has not delivered me to death.
19 Open to me the gates of justice; I will enter them and give 20 thanks to the Lord. | This gate is the Lord's; the just shall enter 21 it. | I will give thanks to you, for you have answered me and 22 have been my savior. | The stone which the builders rejected
23 has become the cornerstone. | By the Lord has this been done;
24 it is wonderful in our eyes. | This is the day the Lord has made;
25 let us be glad and rejoice in it. | O Lord, grant salvation! O Lord, grant prosperity!
26 Blessed is he who comes in the name of the Lord; we bless 117, 5-9: The psalmist speaks for the community about confidence in the help of Yahweh.

117, 10-14: The psalmist speaks of the threat of his enemies.

117, 15-18: God's intervening assistance in behalf of the psalmist.

117, 22: The "cornerstone" is the most valuable stone in a building because it connects two adjacent walls. The psalmist may be referring to a proverb about a rejected stone that turned out to be the most necessary. Metaphorically the inspired poet means that Israel, considered worthless by the great Gentile countries, turns out to be God's most valuable nation. New Testament passages "messianize" this text, i.e., they see Christ as a fulfillment of this text. See Mt 21, 42 and parallel Gospel texts; Acts 4, 11; 1 Pt 2, 7. Compare Is 28, 16 n and Jer 51, 26.

117, 25: Grant salvation: in Hebrew "Hosanna." See v. 26 n.

117, 26-27a: The priestly blessing.

117, 26: The sense is, "May he who now comes into the temple be blessed by having the Lord's name invoked upon him." These words,

27 you from the house of the Lord. | The Lord is God, and he has given us light. Join in procession with leafy boughs up to the 28 horns of the altar. | You are my God, and I give thanks to 29 you; O my God, I extol you. | Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good; for his kindness endures forever.

PSALM 118 (119)
Praise of God's Law

Aleph

1 Happy are they whose way is blameless, who walk in the law 2 of the Lord. | Happy are they who observe his decrees, who 3 seek him with all their heart, | and do no wrong, but walk in 4 his ways. | You have commanded that your precepts be dili-
5 gently kept. | Oh, that I might be firm in the ways of keeping
6 your statutes! | Then should I not be put to shame when I 7 beheld all your commands. | I will give you thanks with an 8 upright heart, when I have learned your just ordinances. | I will keep your statutes; do not utterly forsake me.

Beth

9 How shall a young man be faultless in his way? By keeping 10 to your words. | With all my heart I seek you; let me not stray
11 from your commands. | Within my heart I treasure your prom-
12 ise, that I may not sin against you. | Blessed are you, O Lord;
13 teach me your statutes. | With my lips I declare all the ordi-
14 nances of your mouth. | In the way of your decrees I rejoice, 15 as much as in all riches. | I will meditate on your precepts and together with "Hosanna," were said of Christ on Palm Sunday. (See Mk 11, 10.)

117, 28-29: A hymn of praise.

118, 1-176: The longest psalm in the Psalter is a wisdom alphabetic psalm on the joy of keeping the Mosaic Law, God's gift to man. There is a forceful underlying idea of God's omnipotence and man's reliance on Him. Originally the poet planned eight stanzas of eight verses each, with each stanza having a different synonym for "law." The eight synonyms are: law, statutes, commands, ordinances, decrees, precepts, words, and promises. The current Hebrew text does not precisely execute the original plan of the author. In this alphabetic psalm the first word in each line of the first stanza begins with Aleph, the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet; the first word in each line of the second stanza begins with Beth, the second letter of the Hebrew alphabet. This procedure continues till all twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used. (See Ps 9A, 2-21 n.) Because of this most elaborately structured psalm, there are no developed thoughts, but only snatches of them in the style of Proverbs.

118, 9-16: It is characteristic of the sages to write about the proper care of youth.

16 consider your ways. | In your statutes I will delight; I will not forget your words.

Gimel

17 Be good to your servant, that I may live and keep your words.
18 | Open my eyes, that I may consider the wonders of your law. |
19 I am a wayfarer of earth; hide not your commands from me.
20 | My soul is consumed with longing for your ordinances at all 21 times. | You rebuke the accursed proud, who turn away from 22 your commands. | Take away from me reproach and contempt,
23 for I observe your decrees. | Though princes meet and talk 24 against me, your servant meditates on your statutes. | Yes, your decrees are my delight; they are my counselors.

Daleth

25 I lie prostrate in the dust; give me life according to your 26 word. | I declared my ways, and you answered me; teach me
27 your statutes. | Make me understand the way of your precepts,
28 and I will meditate on your wondrous deeds. | My soul weeps
29 for sorrow; strengthen me according to your words. | Remove from me the way of falsehood, and favor me with your law. | 30 The way of truth I have chosen; I have set your ordinances 31 before me. | I cling to your decrees; O Lord, let me not be put 32 to shame. | I will run the way of your commands when you give me a docile heart.

He

33 Instruct me, O Lord, in the way of your statutes, that I may 34 exactly obesrve them. | Give me discernment, that I may observe 35 your law and keep it with all my heart. | Lead me in the path of 36 your commands, for in it I delight. | Incline my heart to your 37 decrees and not to gain. | Turn away my eyes from seeing what 38 is vain; by your way give me life. | Fulfill for your servant
39 your promise to those who fear you. | Turn away from me the 40 reproach which I dread, for your ordinances are good. | Behold,
I long for your precepts; in your justice give me life.

Vau

41 Let your kindness come to me, O Lord, your salvation accord-42 ing to your promise. | So shall I have an answer for those who 43 reproach me, for I trust in your words. | Take not the word of truth from my mouth, for in your ordinances is my hope; |
44 and I will keep your law continually, forever and ever. |
45.46 And I will walk at liberty, because I seek your precepts. | I will speak of your decrees before kings without being ashamed.

47.48 | And I will delight in your commands, which I love. | And I will lift up my hands to your commands and meditate on your statutes.

Zain

49 Remember your word to your servant since you have given 50 me hope. | My comfort in my affliction is that your promise 51 gives me life. | Though the proud scoff bitterly at me, I turn 52 not away from your law. | I remember your ordinances of old, 53 O Lord, and I am comforted. | Indignation seizes me because 54 of the wicked who forsake your law. | Your statutes are the 55 theme of my song in the place of my exile. | By night I remem-
56 ber your name, O Lord, and I will keep your law. | This has been mine, that I have observed your precepts.

Heth

57 I have said, O Lord, that my part is to keep your words. | 58 I entreat you with all my heart, have pity on me according to 59 your promise. | I considered my ways and turned my feet to 60 your decrees. | I was prompt and did not hesitate in keeping
61 your commands. | Though the snares of the wicked are twined
62 about me, your law I have not forgotten. | At midnight I rise
63 to give you thanks because of your just ordinances. | I am the 64 companion of all who fear you and keep your precepts. | Of your kindness, O Lord, the earth is full; teach me your statutes.

Teth

65 You have done good to your servant, O Lord, according to 66 your word. | Teach me wisdom and knowledge, for in your 67 commands I trust. | Before I was afflicted I went astray, but 68 now I hold to your promise. | You are good and bountiful;
69 teach me your statutes. | Though the proud forge lies against 70 me, with all my heart I will observe your precepts. | Their heart has become gross and fat; as for me, your law is my delight. |
71 It is good for me that I have been afflicted, that I may learn 72 your statutes. | The law of your mouth is to me more precious than thousands of gold and silver pieces.

Jod

73 Your hands have made me and fashioned me; give me dis-74 cernment that I may learn your commands. | Those who fear you shall see me and be glad, because I hope in your word. |

118, 70: Their heart has become gross and fat: their mind ("heart") has become "cruel," or the phrase may mean "dull."

75 I know, O Lord, that your ordinances are just, and in your faith-
76 fulness you have afflicted me. | Let your kindness comfort me
77 according to your promise to your servants. | Let your compassion come to me that I may live, for your law is my delight. | 78 Let the proud be put to shame for oppressing me unjustly; I 79 will meditate on your precepts. | Let those turn to me who fear
80 you and acknowledge your decrees. | Let my heart be perfect in your statutes, that I be not put to shame.

Caph

81 My soul pines for your salvation; I hope in your word. | 82 My eyes strain after your promise; when will you comfort me?
83 | Though I am shriveled like a leathern flask in the smoke, I 84 have not forgotten your statutes. | How many are the days of your servant? When will you do judgment on my persecutors? |
85 The proud have dug pits for me; this is against your law. |
86 All your commands are steadfast; they persecute me wrong-87 fully; help me! | They have all but put an end to me on the 88 earth, but I have not forsaken your precepts. | In your kindness give me life, that I may keep the decrees of your mouth.

Lamed

89 Your word, O Lord, endures forever; it is firm as the heavens.
90 | Through all generations your truth endures; you have estab-
91 lished the earth, and it stands firm. | According to your ordi-92 nances they still stand firm: all things serve you. | Had not your law been my delight, I should have perished in my affliction. | 93 Never will I forget your precepts, for through them you give 94 me life. | I am yours; save me, for I have sought your precepts.
95 | Sinners wait to destroy me, but I pay heed to your decrees. | 96 I see that all fulfillment has its limits; broad indeed is your command.

Mem

97 How I love your law, O Lord! It is my meditation all the day.
98 | Your command has made me wiser than my enemies, for it is 99 ever with me. | I have more understanding than all my teachers
100 when your decrees are my meditation. | I have more discern-101 ment than the elders, because I observe your precepts. | From every evil way I withhold my feet, that I may keep your words.
102 | From your ordinances I turn not away, for you have instructed

me. | How sweet to my palate are your promises, sweeter than honey to my mouth! | Through your precepts I gain discernment; therefore I hate every false way.

Nun

A lamp to my feet is your word, a light to my path. |
I resolve and swear to keep your just ordinances. | I am very much afflicted; O Lord, give me life according to your word. | Accept, O Lord, the free homage of my mouth, and teach me your decrees. | Though constantly I take my life in my hands, yet I forget not your law. | The wicked have laid a snare for me, but from your precepts I have not strayed. | Your decrees are my inheritance forever; the joy of my heart they are. |
I intend in my heart to fulfill your statutes always, to the letter.

Samech

I hate men of divided heart, but I love your law. | You are my refuge and my shield; in your word I hope. | Depart from me, you wrongdoers, and I will observe the commands of my God. | Sustain me as you have promised, that I may live;
disappoint me not in my hope. | Help me, that I may be safe and ever delight in your statutes. | You despise all who stray from your statutes, for their deceitfulness is in vain. | You account all the wicked of the earth as dross; therefore I love your decrees. | My flesh shudders with dread of you, and I fear your ordinances.

Ain

I have fulfilled just ordinances; leave me not to my oppressors. | Be surety for the welfare of your servant; let not the proud oppress me. | My eyes strain after your salvation and your just promise. | Deal with your servant according to your kindness, and teach me your statutes. | I am your servant;
give me discernment that I may know your decrees. | It is time for the Lord to act: they have broken your law. | For I love your command more than gold, however fine. | For in all your precepts I go forward; every false way I hate.

Phe

Wonderful are your decrees; therefore I observe them. |

118, 109: Though constantly I take my life in my hands: by observing the Law the just man's life is threatened by his persecutors.

118, 113: Men of divided heart: men who are not wholly committed to God.

130 The revelation of your words sheds light, giving understand-131 ing to the simple. | I gasp with open mouth in my yearning for 132 your commands. | Turn to me in pity as you turn to those who 133 love your name. | Steady my footsteps according to your prom-134 ise, and let no iniquity rule over me. | Redeem me from the 135 oppression of men, that I may keep your precepts. | Let your countenance shine upon your servant, and teach me your 136 statutes. | My eyes shed streams of tears because your law has not been kept.

Sade

137.138 You are just, O Lord, and your ordinance is right. | You have pronounced your decrees in justice and in perfect faithful-139 ness. | My zeal consumes me, because my foes forget your 140 words. | Your promise is very sure, and your servant loves
141 it. | I am mean and contemptible, but your precepts I have not 142 forgotten. | Your justice is everlasting justice, and your law
143 is permanent. | Though distress and anguish have come upon 144 me, your commands are my delight. | Your decrees are forever just; give me discernment that I may live.

Coph

145 I call out with all my heart; answer me, O Lord; I will 146 observe your statutes. | I call upon you; save me, and I will 147 keep your decrees. | Before dawn I come and cry out; I hope
148 in your words. | My eyes greet the night watches in meditation
149 on your promise. | Hear my voice according to your kindness, 150 O Lord; according to your ordinance give me life. | I am attacked by malicious persecutors who are far from your law. | 151 You, O Lord, are near, and all your commands are permanent.
152 | Of old I know from your decrees, that you have established them forever.

Res

153 Behold my affliction, and rescue me, for I have not forgotten 154 your law. | Plead my cause, and redeem me; for the sake of 155 your promise give me life. | Far from sinners is salvation, 156 because they seek not your statutes. | Your compassion is great, O Lord; according to your ordinances give me life. | 157 Though my persecutors and my foes are many, I turn not away 158 from your decrees. | I beheld the apostates with loathing, 159 because they kept not to your promise. | See how I love your 160 precepts, O Lord; in your kindness give me life. | Permanence is your word's chief trait; each of your just ordinances is everlasting.

Sin

161 Princes persecute me without cause but my heart stands 162 in awe of your word. | I rejoice at your promise, as one who 163 has found rich spoil. | Falsehood I hate and abhor; your law
164 I love. | Seven times a day I praise you for your just ordi-165 nances. | Those who love your law have great peace, and for 166 them there is no stumbling block. | I wait for your salvation, 167 O Lord, and your commands I fulfill. | I keep your decrees and 168 love them deeply. | I keep your precepts and your decrees, for all my ways are before you.

Thau

169 Let my cry come before you, O Lord; in keeping with your 170 word, give me discernment. | Let my supplication reach you;
171 rescue me according to your promise. | My lips pour forth 172 your praise, because you teach me your statutes. | May my tongue sing of your promise, for all your commands are just. | 173 Let your hand be ready to help me, for I have chosen your 174 precepts. | I long for your salvation, O Lord, and your law
175 is my delight. | Let my soul live to praise you, and may your 176 ordinances help me. | I have gone astray [like a lost sheep];
seek your servant, because your commands I do not forget.

PSALM 119 (120)

A Complaint against Treacherous Tongues

1 A song of ascents.
In my distress I called to the Lord, and he answered me. |
2 O Lord, deliver me from lying lip, from treacherous tongue.
3 What will he inflict on you, with more besides, O treacherous 118, 164: Seven times: a common Hebrew way of saying many times.

119, 1-7: Each of the following fourteen psalms is entitled: "A Song of Ascents." The best explanation of this title is that these were the "pilgrim songs" sung by the pilgrims as they ascended "the mountain of Jerusalem" to celebrate there the annual feasts. Ps 83 belongs to this group. This devotional "hymnal" was written after the exile. Two improbable opinions are: that these songs were sung by the exiles as they returned from Babylon and "ascended" to Jerusalem, or sung by the Levites on the fifteen steps which "ascended" from the Court of the Women to the Court of the Israelites in the temple. According to this last opinion, the Roman Breviary calls these songs, "Gradual Psalms" or "Psalms of the Steps." Ps 119 is the lament of an individual against his enemies and thereby raises a problem why this psalm should be one of the "pilgrim songs."

119, 3: With more besides: one example of the common cursing formula is in 1 Sm 14, 44: "And Saul said: May God do so and so to me, and add still more!"

4 tongue? | Sharp arrows of a warrior with fiery coals of brushwood.
5 Woe is me that I sojourn in Mosoch, that I dwell amid the 6 tents of Cedar! | All too long have I dwelt with those who 7 hate peace. | When I speak of peace, they are ready for war.

PSALM 120 (121)

The Lord Our Guardian

1 A song of ascents.
I lift up my eyes toward the mountains; whence shall help 2 come to me? | My help is from the Lord, who made heaven and earth.
3 May he not suffer your foot to slip; may he slumber not who 4 guards you: | indeed he neither slumbers nor sleeps, the guardian of Israel.
5 The Lord is your guardian; the Lord is your shade; he is 6 beside you at your right hand. | The sun shall not harm you by day, nor the moon by night.
7 The Lord will guard you from all evil; he will guard your 8 life. | The Lord will guard your coming and your going, both now and forever.

PSALM 121 (122)

The Pilgrim's Greetings to Jerusalem

1 A song of ascents. Of David.
I rejoiced because they said to me, "We will go up to the 2 house of the Lord." | And now we have set foot within your 3 gates, O Jerusalem— | Jerusalem, built as a city with compact unity.

119, 4: The psalmist's malediction is that he wants the enemy to be shot with an arrow or burned with "fiery coals" of the broom plant ("brushwood"), reputed for its heat.

119, 5: Mosoch . . . Cedar: these people are probably used to signify barbarians in general.

120, 1-8: A pilgrim song. See Ps 119, 1-7 n. This psalm on confidence in God is perhaps the most lyrical of the pilgrim songs. Many scholars agree more on its dialogue form than they do on the participants of the dialogue. Are they the psalmist and his companions? The pilgrims and their leader?

120, 1: The mountains: the site of the Jerusalem temple.

120, 3: May . . . slip: may the Lord not allow you to suffer sorrow.

120, 6: 4 Kgs 4, 18ff is an example of sunstroke in the Bible. The moonlight was also considered harmful.

120, 8: Your coming and your going: a biblical expression meaning man's activities in general. See Dt 28, 3-68 n.

121, 1-9: A pilgrim's song in praise of Jerusalem upon his arrival there. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

4 To it the tribes go up, the tribes of the Lord, according to the decree for Israel, to give thanks to the name of the Lord. | 5 In it are set up judgment seats, seats for the house of David.
6 Pray for the peace of Jerusalem! May those who love you 7 prosper! | May peace be within your walls, prosperity in your 8 buildings. | Because of my relatives and friends I will say, 9 "Peace be within you!" | Because of the house of the Lord, our God, I will pray for your good.

PSALM 122 (123)
Israel's Prayer in Persecution

1 A song of ascents.
To you I lift up my eyes who are enthroned in heaven. | 2 Behold, as the eyes of servants are on the hands of their masters, as the eyes of a maid are on the hands of her mistress, so are our eyes on the Lord, our God, till he have pity on us.
3 Have pity on us, O Lord, have pity on us, for we are more 4 than sated with contempt; | our souls are more than sated with the mockery of the arrogant, with the contempt of the proud.

PSALM 123 (124)
The Lord the Rescuer of His People

1 A song of ascents. Of David.
2 Had not the Lord been with us, let Israel say, | had not the 3 Lord been with us—when men rose up against us, | then would they have swallowed us alive. When their fury was inflamed 4 against us, | then would the waters have overwhelmed us;
5 the torrent would have swept over us; | over us then would have swept the raging waters.
6 Blessed be the Lord, who did not leave us a prey to their teeth.
7 | We were rescued like a bird from the fowlers' snare; broken
8 was the snare, and we were freed. | Our help is in the name of the Lord, who made heaven and earth.[1]

121, 6: Peace: "shalom" was the Hebrew word of greeting.
122, 1-4: A pilgrim's song of lament. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.
122, 2: Just as a servant depends on his master so do the people depend on God.
122, 3-4: A reference to enemies of the nation.
123, 1-8: A pilgrim song of thanksgiving for deliverance from their enemies in some undetermined national danger. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.
123, 4-5: Waters: a frequent biblical figure of trouble and sorrow.

PSALM 124 (125)

The Lord the Protector of Israel

1 A song of ascents.
They who trust in the Lord are like Mount Sion, which is 2 immovable; which forever stands. | Mountains are round about Jerusalem; so the Lord is round about his people, both now and forever.
3 For the scepter of the wicked shall not remain upon the territory of the just, lest the just put forth to wickedness their hands.
4 Do good, O Lord, to the good and to the upright of heart. | 5 But such as turn aside to crooked ways may the Lord lead away with the evildoers! Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 125 (126)

The People's Prayer for Full Restoration

1 A song of ascents.
When the Lord brought back the captives of Sion, we were 2 like men dreaming. | Then our mouth was filled with laughter, and our tongue with rejoicing. Then they said among the 3 nations, "The Lord has done great things for them." | The Lord has done great things for us; we are glad indeed.
4 Restore our fortunes, O Lord, like the torrents in the southern 5.6 desert. | Those that sow in tears shall reap rejoicing. | Although they go forth weeping, carrying the seed to be sown, they shall come back rejoicing, carrying their sheaves.

PSALM 126 (127)

The Need of God's Blessing: His Gift of Sons

1 A song of ascents. Of Solomon.
Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it. Unless the Lord guard the city, in vain does the guard keep 2 vigil. | It is vain for you to rise early, or put off your rest, you that eat hard-earned bread, for he gives to his beloved in sleep

124, 1-5: A pilgrim song of lament and confidence in God. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

124, 3: The scepter does not necessarily signify domination by a foreign nation.

125, 1-6: A pilgrim song on a happy return from exile (vv. 1-3) and a plea for a bright future in the rebuilding of the nation (vv. 4-6). See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

125, 4: An allusion to an unexpected rainstorm. May God help the people rebuild their nation with similar "stormy" speed.

126, 1-5: A pilgrim's song of wisdom. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

126, 1-2: Man's activities are vain without God's help.

126, 2: The poet, alluding to the ancient farmers ("You that eat

3 Behold, sons are a gift from the Lord; the fruit of the womb
4 is a reward. | Like arrows in the hand of a warrior are the sons
5 of one's youth. | Happy the man whose quiver is filled with them; they shall not be put to shame when they contend with enemies at the gate.

PSALM 127 (128)

The Happy Home of the Just Man

1 A song of ascents.

Happy are you who fear the Lord, who walk in his ways! |
2 For you shall eat the fruit of your handiwork; happy shall you
3 be, and favored. | Your wife shall be like a fruitful vine in the recesses of your home; your children like olive plants around
4 your table. | Behold, thus is the man blessed who fears the Lord.
5 The Lord bless you from Sion: may you see the prosperity 6 of Jerusalem all the days of your life; | may you see your children's children. Peace be upon Israel!

PSALM 128 (129)

Prayer for the Overthrow of Israel's Foes

1 A song of ascents.

Much have they oppressed me from my youth, let Israel 2 say, | much have they oppressed me from my youth; yet they
3 have not prevailed against me. | Upon my back the plowers
4 plowed; long did they make their furrows. | But the just Lord has severed the cords of the wicked.
5 May all be put to shame and fall back that hate Sion. |
6 May they be like grass on the housetops, which withers before 7 it is plucked; | with which the reaper fills not his hand, nor the hard-earned bread"), says that it is useless to work from early morning ("rise early") to late evening ("put off your rest") unless there is trust in God ("for he gives to his beloved in sleep"). See Mt 6, 25-34 for the same idea taught by Jesus.

126, 3-5: Happy the man whom God blesses with a large family.

126, 5: Enemies at the gate: a man has more influence when he appears with many sons to argue his case at the law courts of the square within the city gates.

127, 1-6: A pilgrim's song praising the joys of family life as in Ps 126. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

128, 1-8: A pilgrim's song against the enemies of the nation from its "youth." See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

128, 4: Cords: a probable reference to the yoke imposed on the nation.

128, 5-8: For this tone of revenge, see Jer 12, 3 n.

128, 6: The grass which grew in the crevices upon the flat-roofed Palestinian houses was short-lived.

8 gatherer of sheaves his arms; | and those that pass by say not,
"The blessing of the Lord be upon you! We bless you in the name of the Lord!"

PSALM 129 (130)

Prayer for Pardon and Mercy

1 A song of ascents.
Out of the depths I cry to you, O Lord; Lord, hear my voice!
2 | Let your ears be attentive to my voice in supplication:
3 If you, O Lord, mark iniquities, Lord, who can stand? | 4 But with you is forgiveness, that you may be revered.
5.6 I trust in the Lord; my soul trusts in his word. | My soul waits for the Lord more than sentinels wait for the dawn.
7 More than sentinels wait for the dawn, | let Israel wait for the Lord, for with the Lord is kindness and with him is 8 plenteous redemption; | and he will redeem Israel from all their iniquities.

PSALM 130 (131)

Humble Trust in God

1 A song of ascents. Of David.
O Lord, my heart is not proud, nor are my eyes haughty; I busy not myself with great things, nor with things too sublime 2 for me. | Nay rather, I have stilled and quieted my soul like a weaned child. Like a weaned child on its mother's lap, [so is 3 my soul within me.] | O Israel, hope in the Lord, both now and forever.

128, 8: See Ru 2, 4 for this popular greeting among harvesters.

129, 1-7: This is the sixth penitential psalm (see Ps 6, 2-11 n) of an individual who laments his sins but who has confidence in God. This pilgrim song is commonly used in the liturgy for the faithful departed and known as the De Profundis. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

129, 1: Out of the depths: the psalmist feels spiritually far away from God.

129, 3: If God were to demand full compensation for sins, who could bear it?

129, 4: Because God forgives so readily, one should revere Him by asking His pardon, and by not offending Him any more.

129, 6-8: The sentinels: of the city walls, or the sentinels of a caravan who look anxiously for the first rays of dawn. Passing from himself to the nation, the psalmist is confident that God will also forgive Israel for its sins.

130, 1-3: A pilgrim song of a psalmist who proclaims his confidence in God, and wishes that the nation likewise would confide in God. See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

PSALM 131 (132)

The Pact between David and the Lord

1 A song of ascents.
2 Remember, O Lord, for David all his anxious care: | how he 3 swore to the Lord, vowed to the Mighty One of Jacob: | "I will not enter the house I live in, nor lie on the couch where I sleep; |
4.5 I will give my eyes no sleep my eyelids no rest, | till I find a place for the Lord, a dwelling for the Mighty One of Jacob." 6 Behold, we heard of it in Ephratha; we found it in the fields 7 of Jaar. | Let us enter into his dwelling, let us worship at his 8 footstool. | Advance, O Lord, to your resting place you and 9 the ark of your majesty. | May your priests be clothed with 10 justice; let your faithful ones shout merrily for joy. | For the sake of David your servant, reject not the plea of your anointed.
11 The Lord swore to David a firm promise from which he will not withdraw: "Your own offspring I will set upon your 12 throne; | if your sons keep my covenant and the decrees which I shall teach them, their sons, too, forever shall sit upon your 13 throne." | For the Lord has chosen Sion; he prefers her for his dwelling.
14 "Sion is my resting place forever; in her will I dwell, for I 15 prefer her. | I will bless her with abundant provision, her poor
16 I will fill with bread. | Her priests I will clothe with salvation, 17 and her faithful ones shall shout merrily for joy. | In her will I make a horn to sprout forth for David; I will place a lamp

131, 1-18: This is a pilgrim song because of the role given to Jerusalem in vv. 14-18. See Ps 119, 1-7 n. What is more important is that this is a royal Messianic psalm in which the psalmist asks God to protect the contemporary Davidic king. The poet establishes his plea on David's past zeal to make a permanent dwelling for the Ark of the Covenant (vv. 1-10), and God's promise of a perpetual Davidic dynasty (vv. 11-13). Some experts believe that this psalm is a verse form of Nathan's prophecy of a perpetual Davidic dynasty (2 Sm 7). Others hold that sometime between the tenth century and 587 B.C. a psalmist prayed that God protect the contemporary king ("your anointed" v. 10 and a "horn" in v. 17), who was in some imminent danger of extinction.

131, 1-5: A reference to David's desire to build the temple. See 2 Sm 7, 1ff.

131, 6-10: A reference to the journey of the Ark of the Covenant to Jerusalem, 2 Sm 6.

131, 7: Footstool: the Ark of the Covenant was pictured as Yahweh's footstool. See Ps 98, 5.

131, 11-13: A reference to God's promise of a perpetual Davidic dynasty (2 Sm 7, 12ff).

131, 14-18: God's preference for Jerusalem.

131, 17: A horn to sprout forth for David: a powerful royal Davidic descendant. See Ps 131, 1-18 n. A lamp: a symbol of a perpetual posterity.

18 for my anointed. | His enemies I will clothe with shame, but upon him my crown shall shine."

PSALM 132 (133)

The Benefits of Brotherly Concord

1 A song of ascents. Of David.
Behold, how good it is, and how pleasant, where brethren 2 dwell at one! | It is as when the precious ointment upon the head runs down over the beard, the beard of Aaron, till it
3 runs down upon the collar of his robe. | It is a dew like that of Hermon, which comes down upon the mountains of Sion; for there the Lord has pronounced his blessing, life forever.

PSALM 133 (134)

Exhortation to the Night Watch To Bless the Lord

1 A song of ascents.
Come, bless the Lord, all you servants of the Lord who stand in the house of the Lord during the hours of night.
2 | Lift up your hands toward the sanctuary, and bless the Lord. |
3 May the Lord bless you from Sion, the maker of heaven and earth.

PSALM 134 (135)

Praise of God, the Lord and Benefactor of Israel

1 Alleluia.
Praise the name of the Lord; praise, you servants of the Lord

---

132, 1-3: This wisdom pilgrim song, which praises brethren dwelling together, is generally understood to mean the pilgrims dwelling with their relatives in Jerusalem where the former go for the feasts. The joy of this reunion is expressed by the two metaphors of ointment (v. 2) and dew (v. 3). See Ps 119, 1-7 n.

132, 2: An elaboration of Ex 30, 30.

132, 3: Hermon: a mountain in the north of the Holy Land. Perhaps the psalmist was visualizing the numerous people blanketing the mountain city of Jerusalem from top to bottom like ointment or dew.

133, 1-3: This pilgrim song (see Ps 119, 1-7 n) is a hymn sung in the temple. There are several explanations for this psalm besides those given in the annotations.

133, 1: Servants of the Lord: priests and Levites.

133, 1-2: These verses were sung by the people perhaps during a closing liturgical function in the evening at one of the feasts, or at the opening evening devotion of the Feast of Tabernacles.

133, 2: Lift up your hands: the gesture of blessing.

133, 3: The priests respond by blessing the people.

134, 1-21: This hymn of praise has borrowed from other psalms, and this is one reason why it is dated after the exile.

134, 1-4: An introductory invitation to praise God.

134, 1-2: These verses resemble Ps 133, 1.

who stand in the house of the Lord, in the courts of the house of our God. | Praise the Lord, for the Lord is good; sing praise to his name, which we love; | for the Lord has chosen Jacob for himself, Israel for his own possession.
For I know that the Lord is great; our Lord is greater than all gods. | All that the Lord wills he does in heaven and on earth, in the seas and in all the deeps. | He raises storm clouds from the end of the earth; with the lightning he makes the rain; he brings forth the winds from his storehouse.
He smote the first-born in Egypt, both of man and of beast. |
He sent signs and wonders into your midst, O Egypt, against Pharao and against all his servants. | He smote many nations and slew mighty kings: | Sehon, king of the Amorrites, and Og, king of Basan, and all the kings of Chanaan; | and he made their land a heritage, the heritage of Israel his people. | Your name, O Lord, endures forever; Lord is your title through all generations, | for the Lord defends his people, and is merciful to his servants.
The idols of the nations are silver and gold, the handiwork of men. | They have mouths but speak not; they have eyes but see not; | they have ears but hear not, nor is there breath in their mouths. | Their makers shall be like them, everyone that trusts in them.
House of Israel, bless the Lord, house of Aaron, bless the Lord, | house of Levi, bless the Lord; you who fear the Lord, bless the Lord. | Blessed from Sion be the Lord, who dwells in Jerusalem.

PSALM 135 (136)

Hymn of Thanksgiving for the Everlasting Kindness of the Lord

Alleluia.
Give thanks to the Lord, for he is good, for his mercy endures forever; | give thanks to the God of gods, for his mercy endures forever; | give thanks to the Lord of lords, for his mercy endures forever;

134, 5-7: Yahweh's saving acts of creation.
134, 8-14: Yahweh's saving acts of the Exodus and of the conquest of the Promised Land.
134, 10-12: See Nm 21, 21-35; Dt 3, 8-11.
134, 15-18: These verses are the same as Ps 113B, vv. 4-6 and 8.
134, 19-21: These verses resemble Ps 117, 1-4.
135, 1-26: This is a thanksgiving hymn of praise in the dress of a litany with a refrain in each verse. The themes of God's saving acts of creation (vv. 4-9), the Exodus, and the conquest up to the Promised

4 Who alone does great wonders, for his mercy endures for-5 ever; | who made the heavens in wisdom, for his mercy endures
6 forever; | who spread out the earth upon the waters, for his

8 mercy endures forever; | the sun to rule over the day, for 9 his mercy endures forever; | the moon and the stars to rule over the night, for his mercy endures forever; 10 Who smote the Egyptians in their first-born, for his mercy 11 endures forever; | and brought out Israel from their midst, for 12 his mercy endures forever; | with a mighty hand and an out-13 stretched arm, for his mercy endures forever; | who split the 14 Red Sea in twain, for his mercy endures forever; | and led 15 Israel through its midst, for his mercy endures forever; | but swept Pharao and his army into the Red Sea, for his mercy 16 endures forever; | who led his people through the wilderness, 17 for his mercy endures forever; | who smote great kings, for 18 his mercy endures forever; | and slew powerful kings, for his 19 mercy endures forever; | Sehon, king of the Amorrites, for his 20 mercy endures forever; | and Og, king of Basan, for his mercy 21 endures forever; | and made their land a heritage, for his 22 mercy endures forever; | the heritage of Israel his servant, for his mercy endures forever; 23 Who remembered us in our abjection, for his mercy endures
24 forever; | and freed us from our foes, for his mercy endures
25 forever; | who gives food to all flesh, for his mercy endures
26 forever. | Give thanks to the God of heaven, for his mercy endures forever.

PSALM 136 (137)

1 The Exile's Remembrance of Sion By the streams of 2 Babylon we sat and wept when we remembered Sion. | On the Land (vv. 10-22) resemble the themes of Ps 134. Verses 23-26 may be indicative of an exilic or postexilic date. Perhaps in the temple service the people sang the refrain and the Levites or a soloist sang the rest, or two alternating choirs sang the psalm. In the Jewish liturgy this psalm is known with or without Ps 134 as the Great Hallel, as distinguished from the Little Hallel of Pss 112—117. See Ps 112, 1-9 n.

135, 17-22: These verses, discounting the refrains, resemble Ps 134, 10-12.

136, 1-9: A lamenting song of Sion (Jerusalem). The psalm was probably written after the Babylonian exile by a poet reflecting on his sentiments during the exile.

136, 1: The Offertory verse of the twentieth Sunday after Pentecost uses this verse to make us think of the Holy City of Heaven. Streams: the intertwining canals of the Tigris and Euphrates Rivers. We sat: the normal position for mourning in the ancient Near East.

136, 2: Aspens: not the "willows" but a Mesopotamian species of poplars.

3 aspens of that land we hung up our harps, | though there our captors asked of us the lyrics of our songs, and our despoilers urged us to be joyous: "Sing for us the songs of Sion!" 4 How could we sing a song of the Lord in a foreign land? | 5 If I forget you, Jerusalem, may my right hand be forgotten!
6 | May my tongue cleave to my palate if I remember you not, if I place not Jerusalem ahead of my joy.
7 Remember, O Lord, against the children of Edom, the day of Jerusalem, when they said, "Raze it, raze it down to its founda-8 tions!" | O daughter of Babylon, you destroyer, happy the man 9 who shall repay you the evil you have done us! | Happy the man who shall seize and smash your little ones against the rock!

PSALM 137 (138)
Hymn of a Grateful Heart

1 Of David.
I will give thanks to you, O Lord, with all my heart, [for you have heard the words of my mouth;] in the presence of the 2 angels I will sing your praise; | I will worship at your holy temple and give thanks to your name, because of your kindness and your truth; for you have made great above all things your 3 name and your promise. | When I called, you answered me;
you built up strength within me.
4 All the kings of the earth shall give thanks to you, O Lord, 5 when they hear the words of your mouth; | and they shall sing of the ways of the Lord: "Great is the glory of the Lord." |

136, 7-9: Similarly, the prophets often bitterly referred to the Edomites taking advantage of helpless Juda as the Babylonians destroyed Jerusalem in 587 B.C. (v. 7). See the Introduction to Abdia for this background and for an explanation of the unchristian animosity toward Edom and Babylon (vv. 8-9).

136, 8: Daughter of Babylon: "daughter" is a frequent biblical Hebrew way of saying "city."

136, 9: The psalmist is not suggesting anything new, but simply refers to an accepted war practice of those days as exemplified in 4 Kgs 8, 12.

137, 1-8: A thanksgiving psalm of an individual liberated from suffering.

137, 1: The words in brackets are in the Greek version but not in the current Hebrew text. They are probably a variant of v. 4*b*, accidentally inserted here. The angels; in Hebrew elohim, which is the word for "God," "gods," and sometimes "godlike beings," such as the angels.

137, 4-6: The greatness of God in the psalmist's personal deliverance leads him to think of God's greatness in His universal rule which causes the poet to invite "the kings of the earth" in his thanksgiving. This may be an explanation of similar passages as, e.g., in Ps 21, 28-32.

6 The Lord is exalted, yet the lowly he sees, and the proud he knows from afar.
7 Though I walk amid distress, you preserve me; against the anger of my enemies you raise your hand; your right hand 8 saves me. | The Lord will complete what he has done for me; your kindness, O Lord, endures forever; forsake not the work of your hands.

PSALM 138 (139)
The All-knowing and Ever-present God

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 O Lord, you have probed me and you know me; | you know when I sit and when I stand; you understand my thoughts from 3 afar. | My journeys and my rest you scrutinize, with all my 4 ways you are familiar. | Even before a word is on my tongue, 5 behold, O Lord, you know the whole of it. | Behind me and 6 before, you hem me in and rest your hand upon me. | Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; too lofty for me to attain.
7 Where can I go from your spirit? from your presence where 8 can I flee? | If I go up to the heavens, you are there; if I sink to 9 the nether world, you are present there. | If I take the wings 10 of the dawn, if I settle at the farthest limits of the sea, | even there your hand shall guide me, and your right hand hold me 11 fast. | If I say, "Surely the darkness shall hide me, and night 12 shall be my light"— | for you darkness itself is not dark, and night shines as the day. [Darkness and light are the same.] 13 Truly you have formed my inmost being; you knit me in my 14 mother's womb. | I give you thanks that I am fearfully, wonderfully made; wonderful are your works. My soul also you knew 15 full well; | nor was my frame unknown to you when I was made in secret, when I was fashioned in the depths of the 16 earth. | Your eyes have seen my actions; in your book they are 137, 7-8: The poet trusts in future divine assistance.

138, 1-24: A meditative hymn of praise about God's universal presence and knowledge. The psalmist ends with a resolution to avoid the wicked and to live closer to God (vv. 19-24). The majority date this psalm as postexilic.

138, 2: When I sit and when I stand: a Hebrew way of saying "all my actions."

138, 6: This psalm is perhaps the apex in the Old Testament on the topic of God's universal knowledge.

138, 9: A poetic description of the two extremities of the East ("dawn") and West ("farthest limits of the sea").

138, 15: Depths of the earth: a metaphor for the "womb" which stresses the mystery, not darkness, of procreation which fascinated the ancient mind of premedical days.

138, 16-18: The text of these three verses is obscure in several places.

all written; my days were limited before one of them existed. | 17 How weighty are your designs, O God; how vast the sum of 18 them! | Were I to recount them, they would outnumber the sands; did I reach the end of them, I should still be with you.
19 If only you would destroy the wicked, O God, and the men of 20 blood were to depart from me! | Wickedly they invoke your 21 name; your foes swear faithless oaths. | Do I not hate, O Lord, those who hate you? Those who rise up against you do I not 22 loathe? | With a deadly hatred I hate them; they are my 23 enemies. | Probe me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and 24 know my thoughts; | see if my way is crooked, and lead me in the way of old.

PSALM 139 (140)

Prayer for Deliverance from the Snares of the Wicked

1 For the leader. A psalm of David.
2 Deliver me, O Lord, from evil men; preserve me from 3 violent men, | from those who devise evil in their hearts, and 4 stir up wars every day. | They make their tongues sharp as those of serpents; the venom of asps is under their lips.
5 Save me, O Lord, from the hands of the wicked; preserve me 6 from violent men who plan to trip up my feet— | the proud who have hidden a trap for me; they have spread cords for a 7 net; by the wayside they have laid snares for me. | I say to the Lord, you are my God; hearken, O Lord, to my voice in 8 supplication. | O God, my Lord, my strength and my salvation;
you are my helmet in the day of battle!
9 Grant not, O Lord, the desires of the wicked; further not 10 their plans. | Those who surround me lift up their heads; may 11 the mischief which they threaten overwhelm them. | May he rain burning coals upon them; may he cast them into the depths, never to rise.
12 A man of wicked tongue shall not abide in the land; evil
13 shall abruptly entrap the violent man. | I know that the Lord
14 renders justice to the afflicted, judgment to the poor. | Surely

138, 18: I should still be with you: if the poet reached the end of recounting God's "designs," God's own "make up" would still be with him as if he had hardly begun recounting.

138, 24: The way of old: as in the days of the patriarchs.

139, 2-14: The psalm is a lament of the psalmist against his enemies. The colorful language does not help in specifying the circumstances of the enmity. Vv. 4 and 6 have several metaphors frequently found in the psalms.

139, 4: See Rom 3, 13.

139, 11: For revenge see Jer 12, 3 n.

the just shall give thanks to your name; the upright shall dwell in your presence.

PSALM 140 (141)

Prayer of a Just Man to Be Saved from Wickedness

1 A psalm of David.

O Lord, to you I call; hasten to me; hearken to my voice
2 when I call upon you. | Let my prayer come like incense before you; the lifting up of my hands, like the evening sacrifice.
3 O Lord, set a watch before my mouth, a guard at the door
4 of my lips. | Let not my heart incline to the evil of engaging in deeds of wickedness with men who are evildoers; and let me not
5 partake of their dainties. | Let the just man strike me; that is kindness; let him reprove me; it is oil for the head, which my head shall not refuse, but I will still pray under these afflictions.
6 | Their judges were cast down over the crag, and they heard
7 how pleasant were my words | as when a plowman breaks furrows in the field, so their bones are strewn by the edge of the nether world.
8 For toward you, O God, my Lord, my eyes are turned; in 9 you I take refuge; strip me not of life. | Keep me from the trap they have set for me, and from the snares of evildoers. |
10 Let all the wicked fall, each into his own net, while I escape.

PSALM 141 (142)

Prayer of a Prisoner in Dire Straits

1 A maskil of David. A prayer when he was in the cave.
2 With a loud voice I cry out to the Lord; with a loud voice
3 I beseech the Lord. | My complaint I pour out before him; before 4 him I lay bare my distress. | When my spirit is faint within me, you know my path.

In the way along which I walk they have hid a trap for me. |
5 I look to the right to see, but there is no one who pays me heed. I have lost all means of escape; there is no one who cares for my life.
6 I cry out to you, O Lord; I say, "You are my refuge, my por-7 tion in the land of the living." | Attend to my cry, for I am brought low indeed. Rescue me from my persecutors, for they are 140, 1-10: A lament of the psalmist against his enemies.

140, 2: The lifting up of my hands: the gesture of prayer. The evening sacrifice: the daily cereal offering. See Ex 29, 39-41.

140, 6-7: The translation and meaning are obscure because of the poor condition of the Hebrew text.

141, 2-8: A lament of an individual against powerful enemies. The psalm seems postexilic because of the kinds of words used.

8 too strong for me. | Lead me forth from prison, that I may give thanks to your name. The just shall gather around me when you have been good to me.

PSALM 142 (143)

Prayer of a Penitent in Distress

1 A psalm of David.
O Lord, hear my prayer; hearken to my pleading in your 2 faithfulness; in your justice answer me. | And enter not into judgment with your servant, for before you no living man is just.
3 For the enemy pursues me; he has crushed my life to the ground; he has left me dwelling in the dark, like those long 4 dead. | And my spirit is faint within me, my heart within me
5 is appalled. | I remember the days of old; I meditate on all
6 your doings, the works of your hands I ponder. | I stretch out my hands to you; my soul thirsts for you like parched land.
7 Hasten to answer me, O Lord, for my spirit fails me. Hide not your face from me lest I become like those who go down 8 into the pit. | At dawn let me hear of your kindness, for in you
I trust. Show me the way in which I should walk, for to you 9 I lift up my soul. | Rescue me from my enemies, O Lord, for in you I hope.
10 Teach me to do your will, for you are my God. May your good 11 spirit guide me on level ground. | For your name's sake, O
12 Lord, preserve me; in your justice free me from distress, | and in your kindness destroy my enemies; bring to nought all my foes, for I am your servant.

PSALM 143 (144)

Prayer for Victory and Prosperity

1 Of David.
Blessed be the Lord, my rock, who trains my hands for battle, 2 my fingers for war; | my refuge and my fortress, my strong-

141, 8: Prison: this word may be used figuratively for the woes of the psalmist. The just shall gather around me: in the temple when the poet offers his thanksgiving sacrifice.

142, 1-12: A lament of the psalmist who requests God's aid in spite of his sins. He seeks relief from enemies. It is the seventh of the Penitential Psalms. See Ps 6, 2-11 n.

142, 2: The psalmist admits that, according to strict justice, his sins would not allow him a hearing before God.

142, 3: Notice the gradual increase of the enemy's persecutions.

143, 1-15: The borrowings from other psalms gave this psalm poor logical unity and made its classification difficult. Some defend the hold, my deliverer, my shield, in whom I trust, who subdues peoples under me.

3 Lord, what is man, that you notice him; the son of man, that 4 you take thought of him? | Man is like a breath; his days, like
5 a passing shadow. | Incline your heavens, O Lord, and come
6 down; touch the mountains, and they shall smoke; | flash forth lightning, and put them to flight, shoot your arrows, and
7 rout them; | reach out your hand from on high—deliver me and rescue me from many waters, from the hands of aliens, | 8 whose mouths swear false promises while their right hands are raised in perjury.

9 O God, I will sing a new song to you; with a ten-stringed 10 lyre I will chant your praise, | you who give victory to kings, 11 and deliver David, your servant. | From the evil sword deliver me; and rescue me from the hands of aliens, whose mouths swear false promises while their right hands are raised in perjury.

12 May our sons be like plants well-nurtured in their youth, our daughters like wrought columns such as stand at the corners
13 of the temple. | May our garners be full, affording every kind of store; may our sheep be in the thousands, and increase to 14 myriads in our meadows; | may our oxen be well laden. May there be no breach in the walls, no exile, no outcry in our position that the psalm falls into two units, but opinions differ on the precise verses of these two units. The date is disputed from the monarchy (tenth century) to after the exile (sixth century). Not all scholars are convinced that the psalm is speaking of a king since v. 10 may be the psalmist's appeal to God's treatment of kings in the past. This way of appealing to God was common in postexilic Hebrew literature.
15 streets. | Happy the people for whom things are thus; happy the people whose God is the Lord.

143, 1-2: Although this prayer of a victory in war sounds like the words of a king, they could be the hyperbolic words of a mighty warrior. These two verses derive from Ps 17, vv. 3, 35, 47f.

143, 3-7: Man's lowliness and God's power.

143, 3-4: The underlying thought is: precisely because God is so kind the psalmist feels encouraged to make a request.

143, 3: This verse resembles Ps 8, 5.

143, 4: The verse seems to derive from phrases in Pss 38, 6; 101, 12.

143, 5-8: Most of these verses seem to be an adaptation from Ps 17, vv. 10, 15, 17 and Ps 103, 32.

143, 5-6: The psalmist alludes to God's theophany at Mount Sinai with its smoke and lightning.

143, 9-10: These verses resemble Pss 17, 51; 32, 2-3.

143, 12: Like wrought columns . . . of the temple: although the precise allusion and the Hebrew text are not clear, the sense is that the daughters are beautifully shaped.

PSALM 144 (145)

The Greatness and Goodness of God

1 Praise. Of David.
I will extol you, O my God and King, and I will bless your 2 name forever and ever. | Every day will I bless you, and I will 3 praise your name forever and ever. | Great is the Lord and 4 highly to be praised; his greatness is unsearchable. | Generation after generation praises your works and proclaims your might.
5 They speak of the splendor of your glorious majesty and tell 6 of your wondrous works. | They discourse of the power of 7 your terrible deeds and declare your greatness. | They publish the fame of your abundant goodness and joyfully sing of your 8 justice. | The Lord is gracious and merciful, slow to anger and 9 of great kindness. | The Lord is good to all and compassionate toward all his works.
10 Let all your works give you thanks, O Lord, and let your 11 faithful ones bless you. | Let them discourse of the glory of 12 your kingdom and speak of your might, | making known to men your might and the glorious splendor of your kingdom. | 13 Your kingdom is a kingdom for all ages, and your dominion endures through all generations.
The Lord is faithful in all his words and holy in all his 14 works. | The Lord lifts up all who are falling and raises up all 15 who are bowed down. | The eyes of all look hopefully to you, 16 and you give them their food in due season; | you open your hand and satisfy the desire of every living thing.
17 The Lord is just in all his ways and holy in all his works. |
18 The Lord is near to all who call upon him, to all who call upon 19 him in truth. | He fulfills the desire of those who fear him, he 20 hears their cry and saves them. | The Lord keeps all who love him, but all the wicked he will destroy.
21 May my mouth speak the praise of the Lord, and may all flesh bless his holy name forever and ever.

PSALM 145 (146)

Trust in God Alone

1 Alleluia.
2 Praise the Lord, O my soul; | I will praise the Lord all my life; I will sing praise to my God while I live.

144, 1-21: In spite of borrowings from other psalms, this is a powerful alphabetic (see Ps 9A, 2-21 n) hymn praising God's majesty and Providence.

144, 10-13: The underlying thought seems to be that the sovereignty of God is the aim of history.

145, 1-10: A praising hymn of deep confidence in God's goodness.

3 Put not your trust in princes, in man, in whom there is no 4 salvation. | When his spirit departs he returns to his earth; on that day his plans perish.
5 Happy he whose help is the God of Jacob, whose hope is in 6 the Lord, his God, | who made heaven and earth, the sea and 7 all that is in them; | who keeps faith forever, secures justice for the oppressed, gives food to the hungry. The Lord sets captives 8 free; | the Lord gives sight to the blind. The Lord raises up 9 those that were bowed down; the Lord loves the just. | The Lord protects strangers; the fatherless and the widow he sus-10 tains, but the way of the wicked he thwarts. | The Lord shall reign forever; your God, O Sion, through all generations.
Alleluia.

PSALM 146 (147A)

1 Sion's Grateful Praise to Her Bountiful Lord Praise the Lord, for he is good; sing praise to our God, for he is 2 gracious; it is fitting to praise him. | The Lord rebuilds Jeru-
3 salem; the dispersed of Israel he gathers. | He heals the broken-4 hearted and binds up their wounds. | He tells the number of 5 the stars; he calls each by name. | Great is our Lord and mighty
6 in power; to his wisdom there is no limit. | The Lord sustains the lowly; the wicked he casts to the ground.
7 Sing to the Lord with thanksgiving; sing praise with the 8 harp to our God, | who covers the heavens with clouds, who provides rain for the earth; who makes grass sprout on the 9 mountains and herbs for the service of men; | who gives food to the cattle, and to the young ravens when they cry to him. | 10 In the strength of the steed he delights not, nor is he pleased 11 with the fleetness of men. | The Lord is pleased with those who fear him, with those who hope for his kindness.

PSALM 147 (147B)

12 Glorify the Lord, O Jerusalem; praise your God, O Sion. |

The "alleluia psalm" is the name given to this and the remaining psalms of the Psalter, because alleluia is found either at the beginning or the end of each of these psalms.

145, 9: The wicked always found easy prey among the "strangers," the "fatherless," or the "widows."

146, 1-11: The present edition follows the Greek and Latin translations of the Psalter which divides Ps 146, 1-11 and Ps 147, 12-20 into two psalms. The current Hebrew text treats all this as only Ps 147, 1-20. Regardless, the complete psalm is a hymn of praise to God who rebuilds the new Israel (vv. 1-6); helps those in need (vv. 7-11); and provides for Jerusalem (Ps 147, 12-20).

147, 12-20: See Ps 146, 1-11 n.

13 For he has strengthened the bars of your gates; he has blessed 14 your children within you. | He has granted peace in your 15 borders; with the best of wheat he fills you. | He sends forth his 16 command to the earth; swiftly runs his word! | He spreads snow
17 like wool; frost he strews like ashes. | He scatters his hail like 18 crumbs; before his cold the waters freeze. | He sends his word and melts them; he lets his breeze blow and the waters run. | 19 He has proclaimed his word to Jacob, his statutes and his 20 ordinances to Israel. | He has not done thus for any other nation; his ordinances he has not made known to them. Alleluia.

PSALM 148

Hymn of All Creation to the Almighty Creator

1 Alleluia.
Praise the Lord from the heavens, praise him in the heights;
2 | praise him, all you his angels, praise him, all you his hosts. |
3 Praise him, sun and moon; praise him, all you shining stars.
4 | Praise him, you highest heavens, and you waters above the 5 heavens. | Let them praise the name of the Lord, for he com-
6 manded and they were created; | he established them forever and ever; he gave them a duty which shall not pass away.
7 Praise the Lord from the earth, you sea monsters and all 8 depths; | fire and hail, snow and mist, storm winds that fulfill 9 his word; | you mountains and all you hills, you fruit trees and 10 all you cedars; | you wild beasts and all tame animals, you creeping things and you winged fowl.
11 Let the kings of the earth and all peoples, the princes and all 12 the judges of the earth, | young men too, and maidens, old
13 men and boys, | praise the name of the Lord, for his name 14 alone is exalted; his majesty is above earth and heaven, | and he has lifted up the horn of his people. Be this his praise from all his faithful ones, from the children of Israel, the people close to him. Alleluia.

PSALM 149

Invitation to Glorify the Lord with Song and Sword

1 Alleluia.
Sing to the Lord a new song of praise in the assembly of the 148, 1-14: This is a hymn inviting all nature in the heavens (vv. 1-6) and on earth (vv. 7-10) besides all the peoples of the earth (vv. 11-14) to praise God.

148, 4: Highest heavens: the place where the "waters above the heavens" are, i.e., above the skies.

148, 14: He has lifted up the horn of his people: God has made His people powerful again.

149, 1-9: This may be classified as a psalm of Yahweh-King. See faithful. | Let Israel be glad in their maker, let the children of Sion rejoice in their king. | Let them praise his name in the festive dance, let them sing praise to him with timbrel and harp.

| For the Lord loves his people, and he adorns the lowly with victory. | Let the faithful exult in glory; let them sing for joy upon their couches; | let the high praises of God be in their throats.
And let two-edged swords be in their hands: | to execute vengeance on the nations, punishments on the peoples; | to bind their kings with chains, their nobles with fetters of iron; | to execute on them the written sentence. This is the glory of all his faithful. Alleluia.

Final Doxology with Full Orchestra

Alleluia.
Praise the Lord in his sanctuary, praise him in the firmament of his strength. | Praise him for his mighty deeds, praise him for his sovereign majesty. | Praise him with the blast of the trumpet, praise him with lyre and harp, | praise him with timbrel and dance, praise him with strings and pipe. | Praise him with sounding cymbals, praise him with clanging cymbals.
| Let everything that has breath praise the Lord! Alleluia.

Ps 92, 1-5 n. This hymn of praise is sung in the temple by those who look hopefully to a prosperous future. It is not clear just what national situation this psalm describes.

150, 1-6: The closing hymn of the Psalter invites all the temple musicians to praise God for everything He gave mankind.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS

INTRODUCTION

The Book of Proverbs contains independent and disconnected maxims in addition to some essays on wisdom. The subject matter of this anthology of wisdom literature stretches from sublime theological truths, such as some of God's attributes, down to advice on how to get along with people. A ready-made summary and theme of the book is given in 1, 7: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge."

The poetry of Proverbs is in the form of couplets in rhythmic parallelism of thought without rhyme. The Hebrew puns and assonances are untranslatable. It is always tempting to compare Proverbs with the Psalms. A parallel comparison in English literature may be drawn thus: John Dryden and Proverbs compress into a couplet what John Donne and the Psalms extend into a stanza.

The book is composed, like the Pentateuch, from various sources dating from different centuries. Two of the oldest collections, dating perhaps from the time of Solomon in the tenth century B.C., are Prv 10—22 and 25—29. In the fifth century B.C. Prv 1—9 have been added and the book has attained its final form. It is too difficult to date the rest of the book. Some parts of the book were transmitted orally before being written down. From the history of the composition it follows that, although king Solomon may have been responsible for some of the writing, the wholesale attribution of the book to Solomon in 1, 1 was due to the fact that he was the initiator of Sapiential literature, just as Moses was the initiator of Pentateuchal literature (see Introduction to the Pentateuch).

The biblical Proverbs were not isolated in the literary world of their day. There are several fragmentary Mesopotamian collections of proverbs, largely secular and pessimistic. The most famous of these is a short collection called "The Babylonian Book of Proverbs." Its date is uncertain. The Egyptian proverbial literature is even more copious than the Mesopotamian. The oldest of five Egyptian works, containing instructions by a king or vizier to his son, is "The Teaching of Ptahhotep," dating from about 2500 B.C. Finally, there circulated throughout the ancient Near East "The Story of Ahiqar," which dates from about the sixth century B.C. It was written in Aramaic, the language closest to Hebrew. This story was also popular in post-Christian times and reappears in "Arabian Nights" ("Thousand and One Nights").

In the New Testament there are fourteen quotations and about twenty allusions to Proverbs.

Main divisions of the Book of Proverbs are:

1. The Value of Wisdom, 1—9
2. First Collection of the Proverbs of Solomon, 10, 1—22, 16

I. INTRODUCTION: THE VALUE OF WISDOM

1 Purpose of the Proverbs of Solomon The proverbs of 2 Solomon, the son of David, king of Israel: | that men may appreciate wisdom and discipline, may understand words of 3 intelligence; | may receive training in wise conduct, in what is 4 right, just and honest; | that resourcefulness may be imparted to the simple, to the young man knowledge and discretion. | 5 A wise man by hearing them will advance in learning, an 6 intelligent man will gain sound guidance, | that he may comprehend proverb and parable, the words of the wise and their riddles.
7 The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge; wisdom and instruction fools despise.

8 The Path of the Wicked: Greed and Violence Hear, my son, your father's instruction, and reject not your mother's 9 teaching; | a graceful diadem will they be for your head; a 10 torque for your neck. | My son, should sinners entice you, | 11 and say, "Come along with us! Let us lie in wait for the honest 12 man, let us, unprovoked, set a trap for the innocent; | let us swallow them up, as the nether world does, alive, in the prime 13 of life, like those who go down to the pit! All kinds of precious wealth shall we gain, we shall fill our houses with booty; | 14 cast in your lot with us, we shall all have one purse!"— 15 My son, walk not in the way with them, hold back your foot

1, 7: The expression "fear of the Lord" is frequently found in the Old Testament, especially after the sixth century exile. The phrase connotes a cringing fear to the modern reader. It is true that the substratum of this concept consists of man's sentiments of dread and insignificance before an awesome and holy God. Yet the expression often embodies a love for God, and that is why fear is often explicitly accompanied with the mention of reverence (Mal 1, 6) and love (Dt 10, 12). Hence in our text "fear" is the essence ("beginning") of knowledge or of wisdom, or of living religiously.

1, 8: Mother's teaching: there is no book in the Bible which says more about respecting one's mother than Proverbs.

1, 12: Pit: a synonym for "nether world."

16 from their path! | [For their feet run to evil, they hasten to 17 shed blood.] | It is in vain that a net is spread before the eyes
18 of any bird— | These men lie in wait for their own blood, they 19 set a trap for their own lives. | This is the fate of everyone greedy of loot: unlawful gain takes away the life of him who acquires it.

20 Wisdom in Person Gives Warning Wisdom cries aloud
21 in the street, in the open squares she raises her voice; | down the crowded ways she calls out, at the city gates she utters her
22 words: | "How long, you simple ones, will you love inanity,
23 | how long will you turn away at my reproof? Lo! I will pour out to you my spirit, I will acquaint you with my words.
24 "Because I called and you refused, I extended my hand and 25 no one took notice; | because you disdained all my counsel,
26 and my reproof you ignored— | I, in my turn, will laugh at 27 your doom; I will mock when terror overtakes you; | when terror comes upon you like a storm, and your doom approaches like a whirlwind; when distress and anguish befall you.
28 "Then they call me, but I answer not; they seek me, but find 29 me not; | because they hated knowledge, and chose not the 30 fear of the Lord; | they ignored my counsel, they spurned all my reproof; and in their arrogance they preferred arrogance,
31 and like fools they hated knowledge: | "Now they must eat the fruit of their own way, and with their own devices be glutted.
32 | For the self-will of the simple kills them, the smugness of 33 fools destroys them. | But he who obeys me dwells in security, in peace, without fear of harm."

1 The Blessings of Wisdom My son, if you receive my 2 words and treasure my commands, | turning your ear to wis-
3 dom, inclining your heart to understanding; | yes, if you call
4 to intelligence, and to understanding raise your voice; | if you seek her like silver, and like hidden treasures search her out:
5 Then will you understand the fear of the Lord; the knowl-6 edge of God you will find; | for the Lord gives wisdom, from 7 his mouth come knowledge and understanding; | he has counsel in store for the upright, he is the shield of those who walk
8 honestly, | guarding the paths of justice, protecting the way of his pious ones.
9 Then you will understand rectitude and justice, honesty,

1, 16: An inspired gloss from Is 59, 7.
1, 20-33: The personification of wisdom.

10 every good path; | for wisdom will enter your heart, knowledge
11 will please your soul, | discretion will watch over you, understanding will guard you; 12 saving you from the way of evil men, from men of perverse 13 speech, | who leave the straight paths to walk in ways of dark-
14 ness, | who delight in doing evil, rejoice in perversity; | 15 whose ways are crooked, and devious their paths; 16 saving you from the wife of another, from the adulteress 17 with her smooth words, | who forsakes the companion of her
18 youth and forgets the pact with her God; | for her path sinks
19 down to death, and her footsteps lead to the shades; | none who enter thereon come back again, or gain the paths of life.
20 Thus you may walk in the way of good men, and keep to the 21 paths of the just. | For the upright will dwell in the land, the 22 honest will remain in it; | but the wicked will be cut off from the land, the faithless will be rooted out of it.

1 Attitude toward the Lord My son, forget not my teach-2 ing, keep in mind my commands; | for many days, and years of life, and peace, will they bring you.
3 Let not kindness and fidelity leave you; bind them around 4 your neck; | then will you win favor and good esteem before God and man.
5 Trust in the Lord with all your heart, on your own intelli-6 gence rely not; | in all your ways be mindful of him, and he will make straight your paths.
7 Be not wise in your own eyes, fear the Lord and turn away 8 from evil; | this will mean health for your flesh and vigor for your bones.
9 Honor the Lord with your wealth, with first fruits of all 10 your produce; | then will your barns be filled with grain, with new wine your vats will overflow.
11 The discipline of the Lord, my son, disdain not; spurn not his 12 reproof; | for whom the Lord loves he reproves, and he chastises the son he favors.

13 The Value of Wisdom Happy the man who finds wisdom, 14 the man who gains understanding! | For her profit is better than profit in silver, and better than gold is her revenue; | 15 she is more precious than corals, and none of your choice possessions can compare with her.
16 Long life is in her right hand, in her left are riches and honor;

2, 18: Shades: the dead who inhabit the nether world.

17 | her ways are pleasant ways, and all her paths are peace; | 18 she is a tree of life to those who grasp her, and he is happy who holds her fast.
19 The Lord by wisdom founded the earth, established the 20 heavens by understanding; | by his knowledge the depths 21 break open, and the clouds drop down dew. | My son, let not these slip out of your sight: keep advice and counsel in view; 22 | so will they be life to your soul, and an adornment for your 23 neck. | Then you may securely go your way; your foot will 24 never stumble; | when you lie down, you need not be afraid, when you rest, your sleep will be sweet.

25 Attitude toward Fellow Men Be not afraid of sudden 26 terror, of the ruin of the wicked when it comes; | for the Lord will be your confidence, and will keep your foot from the snare.
27 Refuse no one the good on which he has a claim when it is in 28 your power to do it for him. | Say not to your neighbor,
"Go, and come again, tomorrow I will give," when you can give at once.
29 Plot no evil against your neighbor, against him who lives at 30 peace with you. | Quarrel not with a man without cause, with one who has done you no harm.
31 Envy not the lawless man and choose none of his ways: | 32 to the Lord the perverse man is an abomination, but with the upright is his friendship.
33 The curse of the Lord is on the house of the wicked, but the 34 dwelling of the just he blesses; | when he is dealing with the arrogant, he is stern, but to the humble he shows kindness.
35 [Honor is the portion of wise men, but fools inherit shame.]

4

1 Wisdom: the Supreme Guide of Men Hear, O children, a father's instruction, be attentive, that you may gain under-2 standing! | Yes, excellent advice I give you; my teaching do
3 not forsake. | When I was my father's child, frail, yet the 4 darling of my mother, | he taught me, and said to me: "Let 5 your heart hold fast my words! | Keep my commands, do not forget; go not astray from the words of my mouth.
7 "The beginning of wisdom is: get wisdom; at the cost of all 6 you have, get understanding. | Forsake her not, and she will 8 preserve you; love her, and she will safeguard you; | extol her, and she will exalt you; she will bring you honors if you embrace

3. 20: The depths: the waters beneath the earth. See chart, p. 8.

9 her; | she will put on your head a graceful diadem; a glorious crown will she bestow on you."

10 The Good and the Evil Way Hear, my son, and receive 11 my words, and the years of your life shall be many. | On the way of wisdom I direct you, I lead you on straightforward 12 paths. | When you walk, your step will not be impeded, and 13 should you run, you will not stumble. | Hold fast to instruction, never let her go; keep her, for she is your life.
14 The path of the wicked enter not, walk not on the way of 15 evil men; | shun it, cross it not, turn aside from it, and pass 16 on. | For they cannot rest unless they have done evil; to have 17 made no one stumble steals away their sleep. | For they eat the bread of wickedness and drink the wine of violence.
19 But the path of the just is like shining light, that grows in 18 brilliance till perfect day. | The way of the wicked is like 20 darkness; they know not on what they stumble. | My son, to my 21 words be attentive, to my sayings incline your ear; | let them 22 not slip out of your sight, keep them within your heart; | for they are life to those who find them, to man's whole being they are health.
23 With closest custody, guard your heart, for in it are the 24 sources of life. | Put away from you dishonest talk, deceitful
25 speech put far from you. | Let your eyes look straight ahead
26 and your glance be directly forward. | Survey the path for your 27 feet, and let all your ways be sure. | Turn neither to right nor to left, keep your foot far from evil.

1 Warning against Adultery My son, to my wisdom be 2 attentive, to my knowledge incline your ear, | that discretion
3 may watch over you, and understanding may guard you. | The lips of an adulteress drip with honey, and her mouth is smoother 4 than oil; | but in the end she is as bitter as wormwood, as sharp
5 as a two-edged sword. | Her feet go down to death, to the 6 nether world her steps attain; | lest you see before you the road to life, her paths will ramble, you know not where.

4, 19: Till perfect day: probably till full daylight.

4, 25: Let your eyes: of your heart (v. 23). It means: exercise control over the feelings of your heart.

4, 27a: This is a Hebraism for the Latin adage: Virtue stands in the middle. Although it is a characteristic saying of the Book of Deuteronomy, this is its only mention in Proverbs.

5, 1ff: This chapter develops 2, 16-19. The motives of self-interest in vv. 9-14 do not dim the sage's lofty ideals of a monogamous marriage.

7 So now, O children, listen to me, go not astray from the 8 words of my mouth. | Keep your way far from her, approach
9 not the door of her house, | lest you give your honor to others, 10 and your years to a merciless one; | lest strangers have their fill of your wealth, your hard-won earnings go to an alien's house; | 11 and you groan in the end, when your flesh and your body are 12 consumed; | and you say, "Oh, why did I hate instruction, and 13 my heart spurn reproof! | Why did I not listen to the voice of 14 my teachers, nor to my instructors incline my ear! | I have all but come to utter ruin, condemned by the public assembly!" 15 Drink water from your own cistern, running water from your 16 own well. | How may your water sources be dispersed abroad,
17 streams of water in the streets? | Let your fountain be yours
18 alone, not one shared with strangers; | and have joy of the 19 wife of your youth, | your lovely hind, your graceful doe. Her love will invigorate you always, through her love you will 6,22 flourish continually, | when you lie down she will watch over you, and when you wake, she will share your concerns; wher-5,20 ever you turn, she will guide you. | Why then, my son, should you go astray for another's wife and accept the embraces of an adulteress?
21 For each man's ways are plain to the Lord's sight; all their 22 paths he surveys; | by his own iniquities the wicked man will be caught, in the meshes of his own sin he will be held fast; | 23 he will die from lack of discipline, through the greatness of his folly he will be lost.

6

1 Miscellaneous Proverbs My son, if you have become surety 2 to your neighbor, given your hand in pledge to another, | you have been snared by the utterance of your lips, caught by the 3 words of your mouth; | so do this, my son, to free yourself, since you have fallen into your neighbor's power: go, hurry, 4 stir up your neighbor! | Give no sleep to your eyes, nor slumber

5, 9: A merciless one: this refers to the vindictive husband as described in 6, 33-35.

5, 15-17: Note the comparison between marital enjoyment and the enjoyment of drinking water decently at the fountain (vv. 15 and 17), or disgracefully in the gutter (v. 16).

5, 19: Lovely hind . . . graceful doe: symbols of feminine beauty and charm.

5, 21-23: These verses are best read after 4, 27.

6, 1-19: These verses interrupt the discourse of chs. 2—7, which should be read apart from them.

5 to your eyelids; | free yourself as a gazelle from the snare, or as a bird from the hand of the fowler.
6 Go to the ant, O sluggard, study her ways and learn wisdom; 7-8 | for though she has no chief, no commander or ruler, | she procures her food in the summer, stores up her provisions in 9 the harvest. | How long, O sluggard, will you rest? when will 10 you rise from your sleep? | A little sleep, a little slumber, a 11 little folding of the arms to rest— | Then will poverty come upon you like a highwayman, and want like an armed man.
12 A scoundrel, a villain, is he who deals in crooked talk. | 13 He winks his eyes, shuffles his feet, makes signs with his 14 fingers; | he has perversity in his heart, is always plotting evil, 15 sows discord. | Therefore suddenly ruin comes upon him; in an instant he is crushed beyond cure.
16 There are six things the Lord hates, yes, seven are an abomi-17 nation to him; | haughty eyes, a lying tongue, and hands that 18 shed innocent blood; | a heart that plots wicked schemes, feet 19 that run swiftly to evil, | the false witness who utters lies, and he who sows discord among brothers.

20 Warning against Adultery Observe, my son, your father's 21 bidding, and reject not your mother's teaching; | keep them fastened over your heart always, put them around your neck; | 23 for the bidding is a lamp, and the teaching a light, and a way to 24 life are the reproofs of discipline; | to keep you from your neighbor's wife, from the smooth tongue of the adulteress.
25 Lust not in your heart after her beauty, let her not captivate 26 you with her glance! | For the price of a loose woman may be scarcely a loaf of bread, but if she is married, she is a trap for 27 your precious life. | Can a man take fire to his bosom, and his 28 garments not be burned? | Or can a man walk on live coals, 29 and his feet not be scorched? | So with him who goes in to his neighbor's wife—none who touches her shall go unpunished.
30 Men despise not the thief if he steals to satisfy his appetite
31 when he is hungry; | yet if he be caught he must pay back 32 sevenfold; all the wealth of his house he may yield up. | But he who commits adultery is a fool; he who would destroy him-33 self does it. | A degrading beating will he get, and his disgrace
34 will not be wiped away; | for vindictive is the husband's wrath, 35 he will have no pity on the day of vengeance; | he will not consider any restitution, nor be satisfied with the greatest gifts.

6, 22: For the general explanation of the different rearrangement of the text, see Za 4, 4ff n.

1.2 My son, keep my words, and treasure my commands. | Keep my commands and live, my teaching as the apple of your eye; | 3 bind them on your fingers, write them on the tablet of your 4 heart. | Say to Wisdom, "You are my sister!" call Understand-5 ing, "Friend!" | that they may keep you from another's wife, from the adulteress with her smooth words.
6 For at the window of my house, through my lattice I looked 7 out; | and I saw among the simple ones, I observed among the 8 young men, a youth with no sense, | going along the street near the corner, then walking in the direction of her house— | 9 in the twilight, at dusk of day, at the time of the dark of night.
10 And lo! the woman comes to meet him, robed like a harlot, 11 with secret designs— | She is fickle and unruly, in her home
12 her feet cannot rest; | now she is in the streets, now in the open 13 squares, and at every corner she lurks in ambush— | When she seizes him, she kisses him, and with an impudent look says to him:
14 "I owed peace offerings, and today I have fulfilled my vows;
15 | so I came out to meet you, to look for you, and I have found
16 you! | With coverlets I have spread my couch, with brocaded
17 cloths of Egyptian linen; | I have sprinkled my bed with myrrh, with aloes, and with cinnamon.
18 "Come, let us drink our fill of love, until morning, let us 19 feast on love! | For my husband is not at home, he has gone on 20 a long journey; | a bag of money he took with him, not till the full moon will he return home." 21 She wins him over by her repeated urging, with her smooth 22 lips she leads him astray; | he follows her stupidly, like an ox that is led to slaughter; like a stag that minces toward the net, | 23 till an arrow pierces its liver; like a bird that rushes into a snare, unaware that its life is at stake.
24 So now, O children, listen to me, be attentive to the words of 25 my mouth! | Let not your heart turn to her ways, go not astray
26 in her paths; | for many are those she has struck down dead, 27 numerous, those she has slain. | Her house is made up of ways to the nether world, leading down into the chambers of death.

1 The Discourse of Wisdom Does not Wisdom call, and 2 Understanding raise her voice? | On the top of the heights

7, 14: She invites him to eat the portion left over from her offering at the altar (Lv 7, 11-14). Note the implied irony between the observance of a ritual vow and the unobservance of her marriage vow.

along the road, at the crossroads she takes her stand; | by the gates at the approaches of the city, in the entryways she cries aloud: | "To you, O men, I call; my appeal is to the children of men. | You simple ones, gain resource, you fools, gain sense.
"Give heed! for noble things I speak; honesty opens my lips. | Yes, the truth my mouth recounts, but wickedness my lips abhor. | Sincere are all the words of my mouth, no one of them is wily or crooked; | all of them are plain to the man of intelligence, and right to those who attain knowledge. | Receive my instruction in preference to silver, and knowledge rather than choice gold. | [For Wisdom is better than corals, and no choice possessions can compare with her.]
"I, Wisdom, dwell with experience, and judicious knowledge I attain. | [The fear of the Lord is to hate evil;] pride, arrogance, the evil way, and the perverse mouth I hate. | Mine are counsel and advice; mine is strength; I am understanding. | By me kings reign, and lawgivers establish justice; | by me princes govern, and nobles; all the rulers of earth.
"Those who love me I also love, and those who seek me find me. | With me are riches and honor, enduring wealth and prosperity. | My fruit is better than gold, yes, than pure gold, and my revenue than choice silver. | On the way of duty I walk, along the paths of justice, | granting wealth to those who love me, and filling their treasuries.
"The Lord begot me, the firstborn of his ways, the forerunner of his prodigies of long ago; | from of old I was poured forth, at the first, before the earth. | When there were no depths I was brought forth, when there were no fountains or springs of water; | before the mountains were settled into place, before the hills, I was brought forth; | while as yet the earth and the fields were not made, nor the first clods of the world.
"When he established the heavens I was there, when he marked out the vault over the face of the deep; | when he made firm the skies above, when he fixed fast the foundations of the earth; | when he set for the sea its limit, so that the waters

8, 22-31: This wisdom poem is developed in Sir 1, 1-29; and ch. 24; Wis 6—10. Compare Jb 28.

In vv. 22-26 wisdom as a quality of God is personified before the creation of the world. I was poured forth (v. 23) probably means "born." In vv. 27-31, wisdom is personified as that quality with which God proceeded to create the world.

Although the author here is not thinking of wisdom as the Second Person of the Blessed Trinity, the passage may be considered a preparation for this New Testament doctrine. It is easy to see how aptly the Church accommodates this passage to Mary in the Roman liturgy.

30 should not transgress his command; | then was I beside him as his craftsman, and I was his delight day by day, playing 31 before him all the while, | playing on the surface of his earth [and I found delight in the sons of men].
32.33 "So now, O children, listen to me; | instruction and wisdom do not reject! Happy the man who obeys me, and happy those 34 who keep my ways, | happy the man watching daily at my 35 gates, waiting at my doorposts; | for he who finds me finds life, 36 and wins favor from the Lord; | but he who misses me harms himself; all who hate me love death."

1 The Two Banquets Wisdom has built her house, she has 2 set up her seven columns; | she has dressed her meat, mixed her
3 wine, yes, she has spread her table. | She has sent out her 4 maidens; she calls from the heights out over the city: | "Let whoever is simple turn in here; to him who lacks understanding, 5 I say, | Come, eat of my food, and drink of the wine I have 6 mixed! | Forsake foolishness that you may live; advance in the way of understanding." 7 He who corrects an arrogant man earns insult; and he who 8 reproves a wicked man incurs opprobrium. | Reprove not an arrogant man, lest he hate you; reprove a wise man, and he will 9 love you. | Instruct a wise man, and he becomes still wiser;
teach a just man, and he advances in learning.
10 The beginning of wisdom is the fear of the Lord, and knowl-
11 edge of the Holy One is understanding; | for by me your days
12 will be multiplied and the years of your life increased. | If you are wise, it is to your own advantage; and if you are arrogant, you alone shall bear it.
13 The woman Folly is fickle, she is inane, and knows nothing. |
14 She sits at the door of her house upon a seat on the city heights, | 15.16 calling to passers-by as they go on their straight way: | "Let whoever is simple turn in here, or who lacks understanding; for 17 to him I say, | Stolen water is sweet, and bread gotten secretly 18 is pleasing!" | Little he knows that the shades are there, that in the depths of the nether world are her guests!

9, 1-6: Dame Wisdom inviting people to her banquet is contrasted with Dame Folly inviting people to her banquet in vv. 13-18.

9, 10a: See explanation in 1, 7 n.

9, 18: Shades: a synonym for guests of the nether world. Note the veiled comparison of Dame Folly's banquet chamber likened to an inescapable death chamber.

II. FIRST COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON

1 The proverbs of Solomon: A wise son makes his father glad, but a foolish son is a grief to his mother.
2 Ill-gotten treasures profit nothing, but virtue saves from death.
3 The Lord permits not the just to hunger, but the craving of the wicked he thwarts.
4 The slack hand impoverishes, but the hand of the diligent enriches.
5 A son who fills the granaries in summer is a credit; a son who slumbers during harvest, a disgrace.
6 Blessings are for the head of the just, but a rod for the back of the fool.
7 The memory of the just will be blessed, but the name of the wicked will rot.
8 A wise man heeds commands, but a prating fool will be overthrown.
9 He who walks honestly walks securely, but he whose ways are crooked will fare badly.
10 He who winks at a fault causes trouble, but he who frankly reproves promotes peace.
11 A fountain of life is the mouth of the just, but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence.
12 Hatred stirs up disputes, but love covers all offenses.
13 On the lips of the intelligent is found wisdom, [but the mouth of the wicked conceals violence].
14 Wise men store up knowledge, but the mouth of a fool is imminent ruin.
15 The rich man's wealth is his strong city; the ruination of the lowly is their poverty.
16 The just man's recompense leads to life, the gains of the wicked, to sin.

10, 1—22, 16: The background of these proverbs in this collection is peopled with villagers engaged in agriculture, trading, and troubled with ordinary family problems and court cases.

Some of the most stressed virtues are social justice and charity, honesty, and thrift. Superficially, good conduct seems to be sanctioned by earthly rewards, yet all man's actions are suffused with what pleases God. This is a little higher than to say that the doctrine taught here is: Virtue is its own reward.

10, 12b: This adage reappears in 1 Pt 4, 8.

17 A path to life is his who heeds admonition, but he who disregards reproof goes astray.
18 It is the lips of the liar that conceal hostility; but he who spreads accusations is a fool.
19 Where words are many, sin is not wanting; but he who restrains his lips does well.
20 Like choice silver is the just man's tongue; the heart of the wicked is of little worth.
21 The just man's lips nourish many, but fools die for want of sense.
22 It is the Lord's blessing that brings wealth, and no effort can substitute for it.
23 Crime is the entertainment of the fool; so is wisdom for the man of sense.
24 What the wicked man fears will befall him, but the desire of the just will be granted.
25 When the tempest passes, the wicked man is no more; but the just man is established forever.
26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes, is the sluggard to those who use him as a messenger.
27 The fear of the Lord prolongs life, but the years of the wicked are brief.
28 The hope of the just brings them joy, but the expectation of the wicked comes to nought.
29 The Lord is a stronghold to him who walks honestly, but to evildoers, their downfall.
30 The just man will never be disturbed, but the wicked will not abide in the land.
31 The mouth of the just yields wisdom, but the perverse tongue will be cut off.
32 The lips of the just know how to please, but the mouth of the wicked, how to pervert.

11

1 False scales are an abomination to the Lord, but a full weight is his delight.
2 When pride comes, disgrace comes; but with the humble is wisdom.
3 The honesty of the upright guides them; the faithless are ruined by their duplicity.
4 Wealth is useless on the day of wrath, but virtue saves from death.
5 The honest man's virtue makes his way straight, but by his wickedness the wicked man falls.

6 The virtue of the upright saves them, but the faithless are caught in their own intrigue.
7 When a wicked man dies his hope perishes, and what is expected from strength comes to nought.
8 The just man escapes trouble, and the wicked man falls into it in his stead.
9 With his mouth the impious man would ruin his neighbor, but through their knowledge the just make their escape.
10 When the just prosper, the city rejoices; and when the wicked perish, there is jubilation.
11 Through the blessing of the righteous the city is exalted, but through the mouth of the wicked it is overthrown.
12 He who reviles his neighbor has no sense, but the intelligent man keeps silent.
13 A newsmonger reveals secrets, but a trustworthy man keeps a confidence.
14 For lack of guidance a people falls; security lies in many counselors.
15 He is in a bad way who becomes surety for another, but he who hates giving pledges is safe.
16 A gracious woman wins esteem, but she who hates virtue is covered with shame.
The slothful become impoverished, but the diligent gain wealth.
17 A kindly man benefits himself, but a merciless man harms himself.
18 The wicked man makes empty profits, but he who sows virtue has a sure reward.
19 Virtue directs toward life, but he who pursues evil does so to his death.
20 The depraved in heart are an abomination to the Lord, but those who walk blamelessly are his delight.
21 Truly the evil man shall not go unpunished, but those who are just shall escape.
22 Like a golden ring in a swine's snout is a beautiful woman with a rebellious disposition.
23 The desire of the just ends only in good; the expectation of the wicked is wrath.
24 One man is lavish yet grows still richer; another is too sparing, yet is the poorer.
25 He who confers benefits will be amply enriched, and he who refreshes others will himself be refreshed.
26 Him who monopolizes grain, the people curse—but blessings upon the head of him who distributes it!

27 He who seeks the good commands favor, but he who pursues evil will have evil befall him.
28 He who trusts in his riches will fall, but like green leaves the just flourish.
29 He who upsets his household has empty air for a heritage;
and the fool will become slave to the wise man.
30 The fruit of virtue is a tree of life, but violence takes lives away.
31 If the just man is punished on earth, how much more the wicked and the sinner!

12

1 He who loves correction loves knowledge, but he who hates reproof is stupid.
2 The good man wins favor from the Lord, but the schemer is condemned by him.
3 No man is built up by wickedness, but the root of the just will never be disturbed.
4 A worthy wife is the crown of her husband, but a disgraceful one is like rot in his bones.
5 The plans of the just are legitimate; the designs of the wicked are deceitful.
6 The words of the wicked are a deadly ambush, but the speech of the upright saves them.
7 The wicked are overthrown and are no more, but the house of the just stands firm.
8 According to his good sense a man is praised, but one with a warped mind is despised.
9 Better a lowly man who supports himself than one of assumed importance who lacks bread.
10 The just man takes care of his beast, but the heart of the wicked is merciless.
11 He who tills his own land has food in plenty, but he who follows idle pursuits is a fool.
12 The stronghold of evil men will be demolished, but the root of the just is enduring.
13 In the sin of his lips the evil man is ensnared, but the just comes free of trouble.
14 From the fruit of his words a man has his fill of good things, and the work of his hands comes back to reward him.
15 The way of the fool seems right in his own eyes, but he who listens to advice is wise.
16 The fool immediately shows his anger, but the shrewd man passes over an insult.

17 He tells the truth who states what he is sure of, but a lying witness speaks deceitfully.
18 The prating of some men is like sword thrusts, but the tongue of the wise is healing.
19 Truthful lips endure forever, the lying tongue, for only a moment.
20 Deceit is in the hands of those who plot evil, but those who counsel peace have joy.
21 No harm befalls the just, but the wicked are overwhelmed with misfortune.
22 Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord, but those who are truthful are his delight.
23 A shrewd man conceals his knowledge, but the hearts of fools gush forth folly.
24 The diligent hand will govern, but the slothful will be enslaved.
25 Anxiety in a man's heart depresses it, but a kindly word makes it glad.
26 The just man surpasses his neighbor, but the way of the wicked leads them astray.
27 The slothful man catches not his prey, but the wealth of the diligent man is great.
28 In the path of justice there is life, but the abominable way leads to death.

13

1 A wise son loves correction, but the senseless one heeds no rebuke.
2 From the fruit of his words a man eats good things, but the treacherous one craves violence.
3 He who guards his mouth protects his life; to open wide one's lips brings downfall.
4 The soul of the sluggard craves in vain, but the diligent soul is amply satisfied.
5 Anything deceitful the just man hates, but the wicked brings shame and disgrace.
6 Virtue guards one who walks honestly, but the downfall of the wicked is sin.
7 One man pretends to be rich, yet has nothing; another pretends to be poor, yet has great wealth.

12, 23: Compare Pope's "Essay on Criticism." Referring to hack writers, he says therein: "They'll talk you dead for fools rush in where angels fear to tread."

8 A man's riches serve as ransom for his life, but the poor man heeds no rebuke.
9 The light of the just shines gaily, but the lamp of the wicked goes out.
10 The stupid man sows discord by his insolence, but with those who take counsel is wisdom.
11 Wealth quickly gotten dwindles away, but amassed little by little, it grows.
12 Hope deferred makes the heart sick, but a wish fulfilled is a tree of life.
13 He who despises the word must pay for it, but he who reveres the commandment will be rewarded.
14 The teaching of the wise is a fountain of life, that a man may avoid the snares of death.
15 Good sense brings favor, but the way of the faithless is their ruin.
16 The shrewd man does everything with prudence, but the fool peddles folly.
17 A wicked messenger brings on disaster, but a trustworthy envoy is a healing remedy.
18 Poverty and shame befall the man who disregards correction, but he who heeds reproof is honored.
19 Lust indulged starves the soul, but fools hate to turn from evil.
20 Walk with wise men and you will become wise, but the companion of fools will fare badly.
21 Misfortune pursues sinners, but the just shall be recompensed with good.
22 The good man leaves an inheritance to his children's children, but the wealth of the sinner is stored up for the just.
23 A lawsuit devours the tillage of the poor, but some men perish for lack of a law court.
24 He who spares his rod hates his son, but he who loves him takes care to chastise him.
25 When the just man eats, his hunger is appeased; but the belly of the wicked suffers want.

14

1 Wisdom builds her house, but Folly tears hers down with her own hands.
2 He who walks uprightly fears the Lord, but he who is devious in his ways spurns him.

13, 9: Light . . . lamp: symbols of life and prosperity.

3 In the mouth of the fool is a rod for his back, but the lips of the wise preserve them.
4 Where there are no oxen, the crib remains empty; but large crops come through the strength of the bull.
5 A truthful witness does not lie, but a false witness utters lies.
6 The senseless man seeks in vain for wisdom, but knowledge is easy to the man of intelligence.
7 To avoid the foolish man, take steps! But knowing lips one meets with by surprise.
8 The shrewd man's wisdom gives him knowledge of his way, but the folly of fools is their deception.
9 Guilt lodges in the tents of the arrogant, but favor in the house of the just.
10 The heart knows its own bitterness, and in its joy no one else shares.
11 The house of the wicked will be destroyed, but the tent of the upright will flourish.
12 Sometimes a way seems right to a man, but the end of it leads to death!
13 Even in laughter the heart may be sad, and the end of joy may be sorrow.
14 The scoundrel suffers the consequences of his ways, and the good man reaps the fruit of his paths.
15 The simpleton believes everything, but the shrewd man measures his steps.
16 The wise man is cautious and shuns evil; the fool is reckless and sure of himself.
17 The quick-tempered man makes a fool of himself, but the prudent man is at peace.
18 The adornment of simpletons is folly, but shrewd men gain the crown of knowledge.
19 Evil men must bow down before the good, and the wicked, at the gates of the just.
20 Even by his neighbor the poor man is hated, but the friends of the rich are many.
21 He sins who despises the hungry; but happy is he who is kind to the poor!

14, 4: The general sense of this obscure Hebrew verse is that hard work will bring large crops.

14, 10: Compare George Herbert's proverb: "None knows the weight of another's burden."

14, 13: See Shelley's "Ode to a Skylark:" "Our sincerest laughter with some pain is fraught, our sweetest songs are those that tell of saddest thought."

22 Do not those who plot evil go astray? But those intent on good gain kindness and constancy.
23 In all labor there is profit, but mere talk tends only to penury.
24 The crown of the wise is resourcefulness; the diadem of fools is folly.
25 The truthful witness saves lives, but he who utters lies is a betrayer.
26 In the fear of the Lord is a strong defense; even for one's children he will be a refuge.
27 The fear of the Lord is a fountain of life, that a man may avoid the snares of death.
28 In many subjects lies the glory of the king; but if his people are few, it is the prince's ruin.
29 The patient man shows much good sense, but the quick-tempered man displays folly at its height.
30 A tranquil mind gives life to the body, but jealousy rots the bones.
31 He who oppresses the poor blasphemes his Maker, but he who is kind to the needy glorifies him.
32 The wicked man is overthrown by his wickedness, but the just man finds a refuge in his honesty.
33 In the heart of the intelligent wisdom abides, but in the bosom of fools it is unknown.
34 Virtue exalts a nation, but sin is a people's disgrace.
35 The king favors the intelligent servant, but the worthless one incurs his wrath.

15

1 A mild answer calms wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger.
2 The tongue of the wise pours out knowledge, but the mouth of fools spurts forth folly.
3 The eyes of the Lord are in every place, keeping watch on the evil and the good.
4 A soothing tongue is a tree of life, but a perverse one crushes the spirit.
5 The fool spurns his father's admonition, but prudent is he who heeds reproof.
6 In the house of the just there are ample resources, but the earnings of the wicked are in turmoil.
7 The lips of the wise disseminate knowledge, but the heart of fools is perverted.
8 The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord, but the prayer of the upright is his delight.
9 The way of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord, but he loves the man who pursues virtue.

10 Severe punishment is in store for the man who goes astray, he who hates reproof will die.
11 The nether world and the abyss lie open before the Lord;
how much more the hearts of men!
12 The senseless man loves not to be reproved; to wise men he will not go.
13 A glad heart lights up the face, but by mental anguish the spirit is broken.
14 The mind of the intelligent man seeks knowledge, but the mouth of fools feeds on folly.
15 Every day is miserable for the depressed, but a lighthearted man has a continual feast.
16 Better a little with fear of the Lord than a great fortune with anxiety.
17 Better a dish of herbs where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it.
18 An ill-tempered man stirs up strife, but a patient man allays discord.
19 The way of the sluggard is hemmed in as with thorns, but the path of the diligent is a highway.
20 A wise son makes his father glad, but a fool of a man despises his mother.
21 Folly is joy to the senseless man, but the man of understanding goes the straight way.
22 Plans fail when there is no counsel, but they succeed when counselors are many.
23 There is joy for a man in his utterance; a word in season, how good it is!
24 The path of life leads the prudent man upward, that he may avoid the nether world below.
25 The Lord overturns the house of the proud, but he preserves intact the widow's landmark.
26 The wicked man's schemes are an abomination to the Lord, but the pure speak what is pleasing to him.
27 He who is greedy of gain brings ruin on his own house, but he who hates bribes will live.
28 The just man weighs well his utterance, but the mouth of the wicked pours out evil.
29 The Lord is far from the wicked, but the prayer of the just he hears.
30 A cheerful glance brings joy to the heart; good news invigorates the bones.
31 He who listens to salutary reproof will abide among the wise.
32 He who rejects admonition despises his own soul, but he who heeds reproof gains understanding.

33 The fear of the Lord is training for wisdom, and humility goes before honors.

1 Man may make plans in his heart, but what the tongue utters is from the Lord.
2 All the ways of a man may be pure in his own eyes, but it is the Lord who proves the spirit.
3 Entrust your works to the Lord, and your plans will succeed.
4 The Lord has made everything for his own ends, even the wicked for the evil day.
5 Every proud man is an abomination to the Lord; I assure you that he will not go unpunished.
6 By kindness and piety guilt is expiated, and by the fear of the Lord man avoids evil.
7 When the Lord is pleased with a man's ways, he makes even his enemies be at peace with him.
8 Better a little with virtue, than a large income with injustice.
9 In his mind a man plans his course, but the Lord directs his steps.
10 The king's lips are an oracle; no judgment he pronounces is false.
11 Balance and scales belong to the Lord; all the weights used with them are his concern.
12 Kings have a horror of wrongdoing, for by righteousness the throne endures.
13 The king takes delight in honest lips, and the man who speaks what is right he loves.
14 The king's wrath is like messengers of death, but a wise man can pacify it.
15 In the light of the king's countenance is life, and his favor is like a rain cloud in spring.
16 How much better to acquire wisdom than gold! To acquire understanding is more desirable than silver.
17 The path of the upright avoids misfortune; he who pays attention to his way safeguards his life.
18 Pride goes before disaster, and a haughty spirit before a fall.
19 It is better to be humble with the meek than to share plunder with the proud.
20 He who plans a thing will be successful; happy is he who trusts in the Lord!
21 The wise man is esteemed for his discernment, yet pleasing speech increases his persuasiveness.
22 Good sense is a fountain of life to its possessor, but folly brings chastisement on fools.

23 The mind of the wise man makes him eloquent, and augments the persuasiveness of his lips.
24 Pleasing words are a honeycomb, sweet to the taste and healthful to the body.
25 Sometimes a way seems right to a man, but the end of it leads to death!
26 The laborer's appetite labors for him, for his mouth urges him on.
27 A scoundrel is a furnace of evil, and on his lips there is a scorching fire.
28 An intriguer sows discord, and a talebearer separates bosom friends.
29 A lawless man allures his neighbor, and leads him into a way that is not good.
30 He who winks his eye is plotting trickery; he who compresses his lips has mischief ready.
31 Gray hair is a crown of glory; it is gained by virtuous living.
32 A patient man is better than a warrior, and he who rules his temper, than he who takes a city.
33 When the lot is cast into the lap, its decision depends entirely on the Lord.

17

1 Better a dry crust with peace than a house full of feasting with strife.
2 An intelligent servant will rule over a worthless son, and will share the inheritance with the brothers.
3 The crucible for silver, and the furnace for gold, but the tester of hearts is the Lord.
4 The evil man gives heed to wicked lips, and listens to falsehood from a mischievous tongue.
5 He who mocks the poor blasphemes his Maker; he who is glad at calamity will not go unpunished.
6 Grandchildren are the crown of old men, and the glory of children is their parentage.
7 Fine words are out of place in a fool; how much more, lying words in a noble!
8 A man who has a bribe to offer rates it a magic stone; at every turn it brings him success.

16, 28b: Note the similarity in Coleridge's "Christabel": "Alas, they had been friends in youth, but whispering tongues can poison truth."

16, 33: The decision by lot, of public affairs in particular, is a frequent Old Testament practice. The underlying thought here is that God controls all human acts.

9 He who covers up a misdeed fosters friendship, but he who gossips about it separates friends.
10 A single reprimand does more for a man of intelligence than a hundred lashes for a fool.
11 On rebellion alone is the wicked man bent, but a merciless messenger will be sent against him.
12 Face a bear robbed of her cubs, but never a fool in his folly!
13 If a man returns evil for good, from his house evil will not depart.
14 The start of strife is like the opening of a dam; therefore, check a quarrel before it begins!
15 He who condones the wicked, he who condemns the just, are both an abomination to the Lord.
16 Of what use in the fool's hand are the means to buy wisdom, since he has no mind for it?
17 He who is a friend is always a friend, and a brother is born for the time of stress.
18 Senseless is the man who gives his hand in pledge, who becomes surety for his neighbor.
19 He who loves strife loves guilt; he who builds his gate high courts disaster.
20 He who is perverse in heart finds no good, and a double-tongued man falls into trouble.
21 To be a fool's parent is grief for a man; the father of a numskull has no joy.
22 A joyful heart is the health of the body, but a depressed spirit dries up the bones.
23 The wicked man accepts a concealed bribe to pervert the course of justice.
24 The man of intelligence fixes his gaze on wisdom, but the eyes of a fool are on the ends of the earth.
25 A foolish son is vexation to his father, and bitter sorrow to her who bore him.
26 It is wrong to fine an innocent man, but beyond reason to scourge princes.
27 He who spares his words is truly wise, and he who is chary of speech is a man of intelligence.
28 Even a fool, if he keeps silent, is considered wise; if he closes his lips, intelligent.

17, 19: He who builds his gate high courts disaster: one meaning may be: He who ostentatiously builds the door of his house ("gate") may court financial disaster.

1 In estrangement one seeks pretexts: with all persistence he picks a quarrel.
2 The fool takes no delight in understanding, but rather is displaying what he thinks.
3 With wickedness comes contempt, and with disgrace comes scorn.
4 The words from a man's mouth are deep waters, but the source of wisdom is a flowing brook.
5 It is not good to be partial to the guilty, and so to reject a rightful claim.
6 The fool's lips lead him into strife, and his mouth provokes a beating.
7 The fool's mouth is his ruin; his lips are a snare to his life.
8 The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels that sink into one's inmost being.
9 The man who is slack in his work is own brother to the man who is destructive.
10 The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the just man runs to it and is safe.
11 The rich man's wealth is his strong city; he fancies it a high wall.
12 Before his downfall a man's heart is haughty, but humility goes before honors.
13 He who answers before he hears—his is the folly and the shame.
14 A man's spirit sustains him in infirmity—but a broken spirit who can bear?
15 The mind of the intelligent gains knowledge, and the ear of the wise seeks knowledge.
16 A man's gift clears the way for him, and gains him access to great men.
17 The man who pleads his case first seems to be in the right; then his opponent comes and puts him to the test.
18 The lot puts an end to disputes, and is decisive in a controversy between the mighty.
19 A brother is a better defense than a strong city, and a friend is like the bars of a castle.
20 From the fruit of his mouth a man has his fill; with the yield of his lips he sates himself.
21 Death and life are in the power of the tongue; those who make it a friend shall eat its fruit.

18, 10: The name of the Lord: here it is equivalent to "religion."

22 He who finds a wife finds happiness; it is a favor he receives from the Lord.
23 The poor man implores, but the rich man answers harshly.
24 Some friends bring ruin on us, but a true friend is more loyal than a brother.

1 Better a poor man who walks in his integrity than he who is crooked in his ways and rich.
2 Without knowledge even zeal is not good; and he who acts hastily, blunders.
3 A man's own folly upsets his way, but his heart is resentful against the Lord.
4 Wealth adds many friends, but the friend of the poor man deserts him.
5 The false witness will not go unpunished, and he who utters lies will not escape.
6 Many curry favor with a noble; all are friends of the man who has something to give.
7 All the poor man's brothers hate him; how much more do his friends shun him!
8 He who gains intelligence is his own best friend; he who keeps understanding will be successful.
9 The false witness will not go unpunished, and he who utters lies will perish.
10 Luxury is not befitting a fool; much less should a slave rule over princes.
11 It is good sense in a man to be slow to anger, and it is his glory to overlook an offense.
12 The king's wrath is like the roaring of a lion, but his favor, like dew on the grass.
13 The foolish son is ruin to his father, and the nagging of a wife is a persistent leak.
14 Home and possessions are an inheritance from parents, but a prudent wife is from the Lord.
15 Laziness plunges a man into deep sleep, and the sluggard must go hungry.
16 He who keeps the precept keeps his life, but the despiser of the word will die.
17 He who has compassion on the poor lends to the Lord, and he will repay him for his good deed.
18 Chastise your son, for in this there is hope; but do not desire his death.
19 The man of violent temper pays the penalty; even if you rescue him, you will have it to do again.

20 Listen to counsel and receive instruction, that you may eventually become wise.
21 Many are the plans in a man's heart, but it is the decision of the Lord that endures.
22 From a man's greed comes his shame; rather be a poor man than a liar.
23 The fear of the Lord is an aid to life; one eats and sleeps without being visited by misfortune.
24 The sluggard loses his hand in the dish; he will not even lift it to his mouth.
25 If you beat an arrogant man, the simple learn a lesson; if you rebuke an intelligent man, he gains knowledge.
26 He who mistreats his father, or drives away his mother, is a worthless and disgraceful son.
27 If a son ceases to hear instruction, he wanders from words of knowledge.
28 An unprincipled witness perverts justice, and the mouth of the wicked pours out iniquity.
29 Rods are prepared for the arrogant, and blows for the backs of fools.

20

1 Wine is arrogant, strong drink is riotous; none who goes astray for it is wise.
2 The dread of the king is as when a lion roars; he who incurs his anger forfeits his life.
3 It is honorable for a man to shun strife, while every fool starts a quarrel.
4 In seedtime the sluggard plows not; when he looks for the harvest, it is not there.
5 The intention in the human heart is like water far below the surface, but the man of intelligence draws it forth.
6 Many are declared to be men of virtue: but who can find one worthy of trust?
7 When a man walks in integrity and justice, happy are his children after him!
8 A king seated on the throne of judgment dispels all evil with his glance.
9 Who can say, "I have made my heart clean, I am cleansed of my sin"?

20, 9: Who can be certain that he is free from sin? This profound moral concept resurfaces frequently in the Bible. It is also found in the Egyptian wisdom work of Amen-em-Ope. See 22, 17—23, 14 n.

10 Varying weights, varying measures, are both an abomination to the Lord.
11 Even by his manners the child betrays whether his conduct is innocent and right.
12 The ear that hears, and the eye that sees—the Lord has made them both.
13 Love not sleep, lest you be reduced to poverty; eyes wide open mean abundant food.
14 "Bad, bad!" says the buyer; but once he has gone his way, he boasts.
15 Like gold or a wealth of corals, wise lips are a precious ornament.
16 Take his garment who becomes surety for another, and for strangers yield it up!
17 The bread of deceit is sweet to a man, but afterward his mouth will be filled with gravel.
18 Plans made after advice succeed; so with wise guidance wage your war.
19 A newsmonger reveals secrets; so have nothing to do with a babbler!
20 If one curses his father or mother, his lamp will go out at the coming of darkness.
21 Possessions gained hastily at the outset will in the end not be blessed.
22 Say not, "I will repay evil!" Trust in the Lord and he will help you.
23 Varying weights are an abomination to the Lord, and false scales are not good.
24 Man's steps are from the Lord; how, then, can a man understand his way?
25 Rashly to pledge a sacred gift is a trap for a man, or to regret a vow once made.
26 A wise king winnows the wicked, and threshes them under the cartwheel.
27 A lamp from the Lord is the breath of man; it searches through all his inmost being.
28 Kindness and piety safeguard the king, and he upholds his throne by justice.
29 The glory of young men is their strength, and the dignity of old men is gray hair.

20, 14: The shopper protests that the object is too expensive and then boasts of his good bargain.

20, 20: Lamp: a symbol of prosperity. He will lose his prosperity.

30 Evil is cleansed away by bloody lashes, and a scourging to the inmost being.

21

1 Like a stream is the king's heart in the hand of the Lord; wherever it pleases him, he directs it.
2 All the ways of a man may be right in his own eyes, but it is the Lord who proves hearts.
3 To do what is right and just is more acceptable to the Lord than sacrifice.
4 Haughty eyes and a proud heart—the tillage of the wicked is sin.
5 The plans of the diligent are sure of profit, but all rash haste leads certainly to poverty.
6 He who makes a fortune by a lying tongue is chasing a bubble over deadly snares.
7 The oppression of the wicked will sweep them away, because they refuse to do what is right.
8 The way of the culprit is crooked, but the conduct of the innocent is right.
9 It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop than in a roomy house with a quarrelsome woman.
10 The soul of the wicked man desires evil; his neighbor finds no pity in his eyes.
11 When the arrogant man is punished, the simple are the wiser;
when the wise man is instructed, he gains knowledge.
12 The just man appraises the house of the wicked: there is one who brings down the wicked to ruin.
13 He who shuts his ear to the cry of the poor will himself also call and not be heard.
14 A secret gift allays anger, and a concealed present, violent wrath.
15 To practice justice is a joy for the just, but terror for evildoers.
16 The man who strays from the way of good sense will abide in the assembly of the shades.
17 He who loves pleasure will suffer want; he who loves wine and perfume will not be rich.
18 The wicked man serves as ransom for the just, and the faithless man for the righteous.
19 It is better to dwell in a wilderness than with a quarrelsome and vexatious wife.
20 Precious treasure remains in the house of the wise, but the fool consumes it.

21, 16: Shades: inhabitants of the abode for the dead.

21 He who pursues justice and kindness will find life and honor.
22 The wise man storms a city of the mighty, and overthrows the stronghold in which it trusts.
23 He who guards his mouth and his tongue keeps himself from trouble.
24 Arrogant is the name for the man of overbearing pride who acts with scornful effrontery.
25 The sluggard's propensity slays him, for his hands refuse to work.
Some are consumed with avarice all the day, but the just man gives unsparingly.
27 The sacrifice of the wicked is an abomination, the more so when they offer it with a bad intention.
28 The false witness will perish, but he who listens will finally have his say.
29 The wicked man is brazenfaced, but the upright man pays heed to his ways.
30 There is no wisdom, no understanding, no counsel, against the Lord.
31 The horse is equipped for the day of battle, but victory is the Lord's.

22 1 A good name is more desirable than great riches, and high esteem, than gold and silver.
2 Rich and poor have a common bond: the Lord is the maker of them all.
3 The shrewd man perceives evil and hides, while simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.
4 The reward of humility and fear of the Lord is riches, honor and life.
5 Thorns and snares are on the path of the crooked; he who would safeguard his life will shun them.
6 Train a boy in the way he should go; even when he is old, he will not swerve from it.
7 The rich rule over the poor, and the borrower is the slave of the lender.
8 He who sows iniquity reaps calamity, and the rod destroys his labors.
9 The kindly man will be blessed, for he gives of his sustenance to the poor.

22, 6: See Pope's famous couplet: "'Tis education forms the common mind, just as a twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

10 Expel the arrogant man and discord goes out; strife and insult cease.
11 The Lord loves the pure of heart; the man of winning speech has the king for his friend.
12 The eyes of the Lord safeguard knowledge, but he defeats the projects of the faithless.
13 The sluggard says, "A lion is outside; in the streets I might be slain."
14 The mouth of the adulteress is a deep pit; he with whom the Lord is angry will fall into it.
15 Folly is close to the heart of a child, but the rod of discipline will drive it far from him.
16 He who oppresses the poor to enrich himself will yield up his gains to the rich as sheer loss.

III. SAYINGS OF THE WISE

17 The sayings of the wise: Incline your ear, and hear my words, 18 and apply your heart to my doctrine; | for it will be well if you keep them in your bosom, if they all are ready on your 19 lips. | That your trust may be in the Lord, I make known to you 20 the words of Amen-em-Ope. | Have I not written for you the 21 "Thirty," with counsels and knowledge, | to teach you truly how to give a dependable report to one who sends you?
22 Injure not the poor because they are poor, nor crush the 23 needy at the gate; | for the Lord will defend their cause, and will plunder the lives of those who plunder them.
24 Be not friendly with a hotheaded man, nor the companion of 25 a wrathful man, | lest you learn his ways, and get yourself into a snare.
26 Be not one of those who give their hand in pledge, of those 22, 11: Pure of heart: does not mean chastity, but sincerity as in Mt 5, 8.

22, 13: To avoid the effort of going outdoors to do what he is supposed to do.

22, 17—23, 14: In 1924 the famous Egyptologist, Adolph Erman, discovered the parallel between "The Teaching of Amen-em-Ope" (or Amen-em-Ophis), an Egyptian scribe's instruction to his children, and this section of Proverbs. The Egyptian papyrus, originating from Thebes, is dated by scholars from the twelfth to the sixth century B.C.

It is commonly held that the biblical inspired editor of Proverbs 22, 17—23, 14, did not translate but condensed and rearranged the thirty chapters of "The Teaching of Amen-em-Ope" into thirty proverbs (see "Thirty" in Prv 22, 20).

22, 22: Gate: of the city where court trials were conducted, and business transactions and town meetings took place.

27 who become surety for debts; | for if you have not the means to pay, your bed will be taken from under you.
28 [Remove not the ancient landmark which your fathers set up.] 29 You see a man skilled at his work? He will stand in the presence of kings; he will not stand in the presence of obscure men.

1 When you sit down to dine with a ruler, keep in mind who is 2 before you; | and put a knife to your throat if you have a ravenous appetite.
4 Toil not to gain wealth, cease to be concerned about it; | 5 while your glance flits to it, it is gone! for assuredly it grows wings, like the eagle that flies toward heaven.
6 Do not dine with a grudging man, and do not desire his 7 dainties; | for like a storm within you will be that deceitful food. "Eat and drink," he says to you, though his heart is not 8 with you; | the little you have eaten you will vomit up, and you will have wasted your agreeable words.
9 Speak not for the fool's hearing; he will despise the wisdom of your words.
10 Remove not the ancient landmark, nor invade the fields of 11 orphans; | for their redeemer is strong; he will defend their cause against you.
12 Apply your heart to instruction, and your ears to words of knowledge.
13 Withhold not chastisement from a boy; if you beat him with 14 the rod, he will not die. | Beat him with the rod, and you will save him from the nether world.
15 My son, if your heart be wise, my own heart also will rejoice; 16 | and my inmost being will exult, when your lips speak what is right.
17 Let not your heart emulate sinners, but be zealous for the 18 fear of the Lord always; | for you will surely have a future, and your hope will not be cut off.
19 Hear, my son, and be wise, and guide your heart in the right
20 way. | Consort not with winebibbers, nor with those who eat 21 meat to excess; | for the drunkard and the glutton come to poverty, and torpor clothes a man in rags.
22 Listen to your father who begot you, and despise not your 23 mother when she is old. | Get the truth, and sell it not—wis-
24 dom, instruction and understanding. | The father of a just man

23, 2a: A proverb on curbing the appetite.

will exult with glee; he who begets a wise son will have joy in 25 him. | Let your father and mother have joy; let her who bore you exult.
26 My son, give me your heart, and let your eyes keep to my 27 ways. | For the harlot is a deep ditch, and the adulteress a 28 narrow pit; | yes, she lies in wait like a robber, and increases the faithless among men.
29 Who scream? Who shriek? Who have strife? Who have anxiety? Who have wounds for nothing? Who have black 30 eyes? | Those who linger long over wine, those who engage in 31 trials of blended wine. | Look not on the wine when it is red, 32 when it sparkles in the glass. It goes down smoothly; | but in 33 the end it bites like a serpent, or like a poisonous adder. | Your eyes behold strange sights, and your heart utters disordered 34 thoughts; | you are like one now lying in the depths of the 35 sea, now sprawled at the top of the mast. | "They struck me, but it pained me not; they beat me, but I felt it not; when shall I awake to seek wine once again?"

24

1 Be not emulous of evil men, and desire not to be with them;
2 | for their hearts plot violence, and their lips speak of foul play.
3 By wisdom is a house built, by understanding is it made firm; 4 | and by knowledge are its rooms filled with every precious and pleasing possession.
5 A wise man is more powerful than a strong man, and a man 6 of knowledge than a man of might; | for it is by wise guidance that you wage your war, and the victory is due to a wealth of 7 counselors. | For a fool, to be silent is wisdom; not to open his mouth at the gate.
8.9 He who plots evil doing—men call him an intriguer. | Beyond intrigue and folly and sin, it is arrogance that men find abominable.
10 If you remain indifferent in time of adversity, your strength 11 will depart from you. | Rescue those who are being dragged to 12 death, and from those tottering to execution withdraw not. | If you say, "I know not this man!" does not he who tests hearts perceive it? He who guards your life knows it, and he will repay each one according to his deeds.

23, 29-35: A vivid description of the evil effects, physical and psychological, of intoxication.
24, 7: Gate: see 22, 22 n.
24, 10: If you remain indifferent: to those suffering unjustly.
24, 11: Dragged to death: through illegal procedures.

13 If you eat honey, my son, because it is good, if virgin honey 14 is sweet to your taste; | such, you must know, is wisdom to your soul. If you find it, you will have a future, and your hope will not be cut off.
15 Lie not in wait against the home of the just man, ravage not 16 his dwelling place; | for the just man falls seven times and rises again, but the wicked stumble to ruin.
17 Rejoice not when your enemy falls, and when he stumbles, 18 let not your heart exult, | lest the Lord see it, be displeased with you and withdraw his wrath from your enemy.
19 Be not provoked with evildoers, nor envious of the wicked; 20 | for the evil man has no future, the lamp of the wicked will be put out.
21 My son, fear the Lord and the king; have nothing to do with 22 those who rebel against them; | for suddenly arises the destruction they send, and the ruin from either one, who can measure?

IV. OTHER SAYINGS OF THE WISE

23 These also are sayings of the wise: To show partiality in 24 judgment is not good. | He who says to the wicked man, "You are just"—men will curse him, people will denounce him; | 25 but those who convict the evildoer will fare well, and on them 26 will come the blessing of prosperity. | He gives a kiss on the lips who makes an honest reply.
27 Complete your outdoor tasks, and arrange your work in the field; afterward you can establish your house.
28 Be not a witness against your neighbor without just cause, thus committing folly with your lips.
29 Say not, "As he did to me, so will I do to him; I will repay the man according to his deeds." 30 I passed by the field of the sluggard, by the vineyard of the 31 man without sense; | and behold! it was all overgrown with thistles; its surface was covered with nettles, and its stone wall 32 broken down. | And as I gazed at it, I reflected; I saw and 33 learned the lesson: | a little sleep, a little slumber, a little fold-

24, 16: Seven times: an indefinite number.

24, 20: Lamp: his prosperity.

24, 26: He gives a kiss on the lips: a sign of true friendship. Found only here in the Old Testament. The meaning is: frank speech is a sign of true friendship.

24, 27: This verse is commonly interpreted as advocating careful and practical preparation for marriage.

24, 29: This verse marks an advance over the law of retaliation. See Ex 21, 23-25 n.

34 ing of the arms to rest— | then will poverty come upon you like a highwayman, and want like an armed man.

V. SECOND COLLECTION OF THE PROVERBS OF SOLOMON

25

1 These also are proverbs of Solomon. The men of Ezechias, king of Juda, transmitted them.
2 God has glory in what he conceals, kings have glory in what they fathom.
3 As the heavens in height, and the earth in depth, the heart of kings is unfathomable.
4 Remove the dross from silver, and it comes forth perfectly 5 purified; | remove the wicked from the presence of the king, and his throne is made firm through righteousness.
6 Claim no honor in the king's presence, nor occupy the place 7 of great men; | for it is better that you be told, "Come up closer!" than that you be humbled before the prince.
8 What your eyes have seen bring not forth hastily against an opponent; for what will you do later on when your neighbor 9 puts you to shame? | Discuss your case with your neighbor, 10 but another man's secret do not disclose; | lest, hearing it, he reproach you, and your ill repute cease not.
11 Like golden apples in silver settings are words spoken at the proper time.
12 Like a golden earring, or a necklace of fine gold, is a wise reprover to an obedient ear.
13 Like the coolness of snow in the heat of the harvest is a faithful messenger for the one who sends him. [He refreshes the soul of his master.] 14 Like clouds and wind when no rain follows is the man who boastfully promises what he never gives.
15 By patience is a ruler persuaded, and a soft tongue will break a bone.

25, 1—29, 27: Sages of king Ezechias' "royal academy" are represented as transcribing the proverbs from other collections. Ezechias (716-687 B.C.) was a religious reformer whose goal was a return to the pure sources of Moses' religion.

In chs. 25—27 the parallelism is synonymous. In chs. 28—29 it is dominantly antithetic. The content of the former chapter group is secular, and that of the latter group is religious.

25, 7: Compare the lesson on humility (Lk 14, 7-11) taught by Christ.

16 If you find honey, eat only what you need, lest you become glutted with it and vomit it up.
17 Let your foot be seldom in your neighbor's house, lest he have more than enough of you, and hate you.
18 Like a club, or a sword, or a sharp arrow, is the man who bears false witness against his neighbor.
19 Like an infected tooth or an unsteady foot is [dependence on] a faithless man in time of trouble.
20 Like a moth in clothing, or a maggot in wood, sorrow gnaws at the human heart.
21 If your enemy be hungry, give him food to eat, if he be thirsty, 22 give him to drink; | for live coals you will heap on his head, and the Lord will vindicate you.
23 The north wind brings rain, and a backbiting tongue an angry countenance.
24 It is better to dwell in a corner of the housetop than in a roomy house with a quarrelsome woman.
25 Like cool water to one faint from thirst is good news from a far country.
26 Like a troubled fountain or a polluted spring is a just man who gives way before the wicked.
27 To eat too much honey is not good; nor to seek honor after honor.
28 Like an open city with no defenses is the man with no check on his feelings.

26

1 Like snow in summer, or rain in harvest, honor for a fool is out of place.
2 Like the sparrow in its flitting, like the swallow in its flight, a curse uncalled-for arrives nowhere.
3 The whip for the horse, the bridle for the ass, and the rod for the back of fools.
4 Answer not the fool according to his folly, lest you too become like him.
5 Answer the fool according to his folly, lest he become wise in his own eyes.

25, 22a: Either remorse and embarrassment for the harm done, or increased punishment for refusing reconciliation. Rom. 12, 20 quotes these vv. 21-22.

25, 27: Nor . . . honor after honor: the text is uncertain.

26, 4-5: There is no contradiction between these two proverbs. In any answer that the wise man gives he must protect his own interest against the fool.

6 He cuts off his feet, he drinks down violence, who sends messages by a fool.
7 A proverb in the mouth of a fool hangs limp, like crippled legs.
8 Like one who entangles the stone in the sling is he who gives honor to a fool.
9 Like a thorn stick brandished by the hand of a drunkard is a proverb in the mouth of fools.
10 Like an archer wounding all who pass by is he who hires a drunken fool.
11 As the dog returns to his vomit, so the fool repeats his folly.
12 You see a man wise in his own eyes? There is more hope for a fool than for him.
13 The sluggard says, "There is a lion in the street, a lion in the middle of the square!"
14 The door turns on its hinges, the sluggard, on his bed!
15 The sluggard loses his hand in the dish; he is too weary to lift it to his mouth.
16 The sluggard imagines himself wiser than seven men who answer with good sense.
17 Like the man who seizes a passing dog by the ears is he who meddles in a quarrel not his own.
18 Like a crazed archer scattering firebrands and deadly arrows 19 | is the man who deceives his neighbor, and then says, "I was only joking." 20 For lack of wood, the fire dies out; and when there is no talebearer, strife subsides.
21 What a bellows is to live coals, what wood is to fire, such is a contentious man in enkindling strife.
22 The words of a talebearer are like dainty morsels that sink into one's inmost being.
23 Like a glazed finish on earthenware are smooth lips with a wicked heart.
24 With his lips an enemy pretends, but in his inmost being he 25 maintains deceit; | when he speaks graciously, trust him not, for seven abominations are in his heart.
26 A man may conceal hatred under dissimulation, but his malice will be revealed in the assembly.

26, 13: For the same idea see 22, 13 n.
26, 14: Note the influence of this verse on Isaac Watts: " 'Tis the voice of the sluggard; I heard him complain, You've waked me too soon, I must slumber again, As the door on its hinges, so is he on his bed, turns his side over. . . ." 26, 15: Almost a repetition of 19, 24.
26, 25: Seven abominations: many evil intentions.

27 He who digs a pit falls into it; and a stone comes back upon him who rolls it.
28 The lying tongue is its owner's enemy, and the flattering mouth works ruin.

27

1 Boast not of tomorrow, for you know not what any day may bring forth.
2 Let another praise you—not your own mouth; someone else —not your own lips.
3 Stone is heavy, and sand a burden, but a fool's provocation is heavier than both.
4 Anger is relentless, and wrath overwhelming—but before jealousy who can stand?
5 Better is an open rebuke than a love that remains hidden.
6 Wounds from a friend may be accepted as well meant, but the greetings of an enemy one prays against.
7 One who is full, tramples on virgin honey; but to the man who is hungry, any bitter thing is sweet.
8 Like a bird that is far from its nest is a man who is far from his home.
9 Perfume and incense gladden the heart, but by grief the soul is torn asunder.
10 Your own friend and your father's friend forsake not; but if ruin befalls you, enter not a kinsman's house. Better is a neighbor near at hand than a brother far away.
11 If you are wise, my son, you will gladden my heart, and I will be able to rebut him who taunts me.
12 The shrewd man perceives evil and hides; simpletons continue on and suffer the penalty.
13 Take his garment who becomes surety for another, and for the sake of a stranger, yield it up!
14 When one greets his neighbor with a loud voice [in the early morning], a curse can be laid to his charge.
15 For a persistent leak on a rainy day the match is a quarrel-16 some woman. | He who keeps her stores up a stormwind; he cannot tell north from south.
17 As iron sharpens iron, so man sharpens his fellow man.
18 He who tends a fig tree eats its fruit, and he who is attentive to his master will be enriched.
19 As one face differs from another, so does one human heart from another.

27, 13: Repetition of 20, 16.
27, 14a: The loud voice suggests hypocrisy in the greeting.

20 The nether world and the abyss are never satisfied; so too the eyes of men.
21 As the crucible tests silver and the furnace gold, so a man is tested by the praise he receives.
22 Though you should pound the fool to bits [with the pestle amid the grits in a mortar], his folly would not go out of him.
23 Take good care of your flocks, give careful attention to your 24 herds; | for wealth lasts not forever, nor even a crown from 25 age to age. | When the grass is taken away and the aftergrowth
26 appears, and the mountain greens are gathered in, | the lambs will provide you with clothing, and the goats will bring the 27 price of a field, | and there will be ample goat's milk to supply you, [to supply your household,] and maintenance for your maidens.

28

1 The wicked man flees although no one pursues him; but the just man, like a lion, feels sure of himself.
2 If a land is rebellious, its princes will be many; but with a prudent man it knows security.
3 A rich man who oppresses the poor is like a devastating rain that leaves no food.
4 Those who abandon the law praise the wicked man, but those who keep the law war against him.
5 Evil men understand nothing of justice, but those who seek the Lord understand all.
6 Better a poor man who walks in his integrity than he who is crooked in his ways and rich.
7 He who keeps the law is a wise son, but the gluttons' companion disgraces his father.
8 He who increases his wealth by interest and overcharge gathers it for him who is kind to the poor.
9 When one turns away his ear from hearing the law, even his prayer is an abomination.
10 He who seduces the upright into an evil way will himself fall into his own pit. [And blameless men will gain prosperity.] 11 The rich man is wise in his own eyes, but a poor man who is intelligent sees through him.
12 When the just are triumphant, there is great jubilation; but when the wicked gain pre-eminence, people hide.

28, 2: The meaning of this poorly preserved verse seems to be that frequent changes of rulers often result from moral corruption and political disorder.

13 He who conceals his sins prospers not, but he who confesses and forsakes them obtains mercy.
14 Happy the man who is always on his guard; but he who hardens his heart will fall into evil.
15 Like a roaring lion or a ravenous bear is a wicked ruler over a poor people.
16 The less prudent the prince, the more his deeds oppress. He who hates ill-gotten gain prolongs his days.
17 Though a man burdened with human blood were to flee to the grave, none should support him.
18 He who walks uprightly is safe, but he whose ways are crooked falls into the pit.
19 He who cultivates his land will have plenty of food, but from idle pursuits a man has his fill of poverty.
20 The trustworthy man will be richly blessed; he who is in haste to grow rich will not go unpunished.
21 To show partiality is never good: for even a morsel of bread a man may do wrong.
22 The avaricious man is perturbed about his wealth, and he knows not when want will come upon him.
23 He who rebukes a man gets more thanks in the end than one with a flattering tongue.
24 He who defrauds father or mother and calls it no sin, is a partner of the brigand.
25 The greedy man stirs up disputes, but he who trusts in the Lord will prosper.
26 He who trusts in himself is a fool, but he who walks in wisdom is safe.
27 He who gives to the poor suffers no want, but he who ignores them gets many a curse.
28 When the wicked gain pre-eminence, other men hide; but at their fall the just flourish.

29

1 The man who remains stiff-necked and hates rebuke will be crushed suddenly beyond cure.
2 When the just prevail, the people rejoice; but when the wicked rule, the people groan.
3 He who loves wisdom makes his father glad, but he who consorts with harlots squanders his wealth.
4 By justice a king gives stability to the land; but he who imposes heavy taxes ruins it.
5 The man who flatters his neighbor is spreading a net under his feet.

6 The wicked man steps into a snare, but the just man runs on joyfully.
7 The just man has a care for the rights of the poor; the wicked man has no such concern.
8 Arrogant men set the city ablaze, but wise men calm the fury.
9 If a wise man disputes with a fool, he may rage or laugh but can have no peace.
10 Bloodthirsty men hate the honest man, but the upright show concern for his life.
11 The fool gives vent to all his anger; but by biding his time, the wise man calms it.
12 If a ruler listens to lying words, his servants all become wicked.
13 The poor and the oppressor have a common bond: the Lord gives light to the eyes of both.
14 If a king is zealous for the rights of the poor, his throne stands firm forever.
15 The rod of correction gives wisdom, but a boy left to his whims disgraces his mother.
16 When the wicked prevail, crime increases; but their downfall the just will behold.
17 Correct your son, and he will bring you comfort, and give delight to your soul.
18 Without prophecy the people become demoralized; but happy is he who keeps the law.
19 By words no servant can be trained; for he understands what is said, but obeys not.
20 Do you see a man hasty in his words? More can be hoped for from a fool!
21 If a man pampers his servant from childhood, he will turn out to be stubborn.
22 An ill-tempered man stirs up disputes, and a hotheaded man is the cause of many sins.
23 Man's pride causes his humiliation, but he who is humble of spirit obtains honor.
24 The accomplice of a thief is his own enemy: he hears himself put under a curse, yet discloses nothing.
25 The fear of man brings a snare, but he who trusts in the Lord is safe.
26 Many curry favor with the ruler, but the rights of each are from the Lord.
27 The evildoer is an abomination to the just, and he who walks uprightly is an abomination to the wicked.

29, 18: Without prophecy: without the activity of the prophets.

VI. THE WORDS OF AGUR

1 The words of Agur, son of Yakeh the Massaite: The pronouncement of mortal man: "I am not God; I am not God, 2 that I should prevail. | Why, I am the most stupid of men, and
3 have not even human intelligence; | neither have I learned
4 wisdom, nor have I the knowledge of the Holy One. | Who has gone up to heaven and come down again—who has cupped the wind in his hands? Who has bound up the waters in a cloak—who has marked out all the ends of the earth? What is
5 his name, what is his son's name, if you know it?" | Every word of God is tested; he is a shield to those who take refuge in him.
6 | Add nothing to his words, lest he reprove you, and you be exposed as a deceiver.
7 Two things I ask of you, deny them not to me before I die:
8 | Put falsehood and lying far from me, give me neither poverty
9 nor riches: [provide me only with the food I need;] | lest, being full, I deny you, saying, "Who is the Lord?" Or, being in want, I steal, and profane the name of my God.
10 Slander not a servant to his master, lest he curse you, and you have to pay the penalty.
11 There is a group of people that curses its father, and blesses 12 not its mother. | There is a group that is pure in its own eyes,
13 yet is not purged of its filth. | There is a group—how haughty
14 their eyes! how overbearing their glance! | There is a group whose incisors are swords, whose teeth are knives, devouring the needy from the earth, and the poor from among men.

VII. NUMERICAL PROVERBS

15 The two daughters of the leech are, "Give, Give." Three 16 things are never satisfied, four never say, "Enough!" | The nether world, and the barren womb; the earth, that is never saturated with water, and fire, that never says, 'Enough!" | The 30, 1ff: The words of Agur come from a non-Israelite source. Agur emphasizes man's insignificance in comparison with God.

30, 8: Give me neither poverty nor riches: it is astonishing to read of the rejection of riches for religious reasons in the Old Testament.

30, 11-14: Perverted people are here classified as unfilial (v. 11), self-righteous (v. 12), proud (v. 13) and rapacious (v. 14).

30, 15-16: The two daughters . . . Give: the text is obscure but the general idea seems to be that the leech is insatiable in its desire for blood, just as are the nether world for victims, the barren womb for offspring, the parched earth for water, and fire for fuel (v. 16).

17 eye that mocks a father, or scorns an aged mother, will be plucked out by the ravens in the valley; the young eagles will devour it.
18 Three things are too wonderful for me, yes, four I cannot 19 understand: | the way of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock, the way of a ship on the high seas, and 20 the way of a man with a maiden. | Such is the way of an adulterous woman: she eats, wipes her mouth, and says, "I have done no wrong."
21 Under three things the earth trembles, yes, under four it 22 cannot bear up: | under a slave when he becomes king, and a 23 fool when he is glutted with food; | under an odious woman when she is wed, and a maidservant when she displaces her mistress.
24 Four things are among the smallest on the earth, and yet are 25 exceedingly wise: | ants—a species not strong, yet they store
26 up their food in the summer; | rock-badgers—a species not 27 mighty, yet they make their home in the crags; | locusts—they 28 have no king, yet they migrate all in array; | lizards—you can catch them with your hands, yet they find their way into kings' palaces.
29 Three things are stately in their stride, yes, four are stately 30 in their carriage: | the lion, mightiest of beasts, who retreats 31 before nothing; | the strutting cock, and the he-goat, and the king at the head of his people.
32 If you have foolishly been proud or presumptuous—put your 33 hand on your mouth; | for the stirring of milk brings forth curds, and the stirring of anger brings forth blood.

VIII. THE WORDS OF LAMUEL

1 The words of Lamuel, king of Massa. The advice which his 2 mother gave him: | What, my son, my first-born! what, O son
3 of my womb; what, O son of my vows! | Give not your vigor
4 to women, nor your strength to those who ruin kings. | It is not for kings, O Lamuel, not for kings to drink wine; strong drink 5 is not for princes! | lest in drinking they forget what the law 6 decrees, and violate the rights of all who are in need. | Give strong drink to one who is perishing, and wine to the sorely 30, 26: Rock-badgers: a small, harelike, hoofed mammal.

31, 1-9: Lamuel is unknown, but Massa may be an Israelite tribe (Gn 25, 14). Only a queen mother would dare to advise a king with a "mirror-of-princes"-warning, for she was the most important person in the kingdom after the king.

7 depressed; | when they drink, they will forget their misery, and
8 think no more of their burdens. | Open your mouth in behalf 9 of the dumb, and for the rights of the destitute; | open your mouth, decree what is just, defend the needy and the poor!

IX. THE IDEAL WIFE

10 When one finds a worthy wife, her value is far beyond 11 pearls. | Her husband, entrusting his heart to her, has an 12 unfailing prize. | She brings him good, and not evil, all the days
13 of her life. | She obtains wool and flax and makes cloth with 14 skillful hands. | Like merchant ships, she secures her pro-
15 visions from afar. | She rises while it is still night, and dis-16 tributes food to her household. | She picks out a field to 17 purchase; out of her earnings she plants a vineyard. | She is 18 girt about with strength, and sturdy are her arms. | She enjoys
19 the success of her dealings; at night her lamp is undimmed. | She puts her hands to the distaff, and her fingers ply the spindle. |
20 She reaches out her hands to the poor, and extends her arms
21 to the needy. | She fears not the snow for her household; all her
22 charges are doubly clothed. | She makes her own coverlets; fine
23 linen and purple are her clothing. | Her husband is prominent 24 at the city gates as he sits with the elders of the land. | She makes garments and sells them, and stocks the merchants with 25 belts. | She is clothed with strength and dignity, and she laughs
26 at the days to come. | She opens her mouth in wisdom, and on 27 her tongue is kindly counsel. | She watches the conduct of her
28 household, and eats not her food in idleness. | Her children
29 rise up and praise her; her husband, too, extols her: | "Many are the women of proven worth, but you have excelled them
30 all." | Charm is deceptive and beauty fleeting; the woman who 31 fears the Lord is to be praised. | Give her a reward of her labors, and let her works praise her at the city gates.

31, 10-31: Proverbs ends with one of the fifteen alphabetic poems in the Bible. The backdrop is a bourgeoise woman who manages all the business of the estate. Although the portrait is ideal, it serves as a corrective of women's "low position" in the ancient Near East.

The Roman liturgy uses this section in the feasts of women who are neither martyrs nor virgins.

31, 12a: Prosperity not adversity.

31, 18: Lamp, a symbol of prosperity.

31, 23: City Gates: see 22, 22 n.

31, 25b: She is confident of a happy future.

THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES

INTRODUCTION

Ecclesiastes is the Latin transcription of the Greek name. The author calls himself by his Hebrew name, Coheleth, which may mean "preacher." This wise man, writing about 300 B.C. in the vicinity of Galilee ascribed his wisdom book to Solomon (1, 1).

The book is composed of large and small notations on the general theme of the meaning of life. There is no clear logical progress of thought ending in a synthesis. The problem is reflected upon from various aspects. Questions are asked, insights are offered, thoughts are left undeveloped and later resumed from other vantage points.

The fragmentary treatment of the theme naturally causes scholars to speculate about the number of authors responsible for these disparate paragraphs. However, the book could have one author, if we agree that the literary form is similar to that of a diary or to the Meditations of Marcus Aurelius or Pascal's Pensées, or perhaps even the Confessions of St. Augustine. This literary form squares well with the fragmentary or reflective treatment of Coheleth.

The most crucial and debated problem is the answer that Coheleth gives to his basic question: Is life worth living? or, What is happiness here on earth? Coheleth was certainly a provocative thinker whose new sayings must have been received "like goads" (12, 11) by his sympathizers and labeled as heretical by the traditionalists. The rebel sage dared to deny the tenets of the traditionalists who held that happiness in life was pleasure, riches, and wisdom. Coheleth's contribution was to look for something beyond earthly joys even though he never found it. All he found was that the traditional joys do not bestow lasting happiness. Therefore, man should aim at legitimate attainable happiness given to him by God on earth, namely, the joys of family life (9, 9), bodily pleasures, and even the joys of his job ("toil"). Coheleth's doctrine seems commonplace to us, but in his day there was no revelation of the rewards of an afterlife of the beatific vision, but only earthly rewards. Coheleth's idea of the afterlife was the gloomy "sheol," the dreary inactive abode of the dead (9, 10). His contribution can also be stated as having prepared the way for Mt 16, 26: "For what does it profit a man, if he gain the whole world, but suffer the loss of his own soul?"

It is easier to see why, depending on their interpretation of Coheleth, commentators call him an agnostic, a cynic, a pessimist, an Epicurean, or a pagan. All are wrong because Coheleth was a man of deep faith in God, in His Providence and wisdom.

Unsuccessful attempts have been made to trace Coheleth's thoughts back to Greek influences, such as the Epicureans, Stoics, and even to Theognis, an elegist of the sixth century B.C. The Greek influence on this Jewish sage was only a general one. If anything, the affinities with Egyptian influences are more pronounced. Moreover, scholars often point to a Babylonian Coheleth who wrote, "A Dialogue about Human Misery," about the tenth century B.C. Modern counterparts of Coheleth are T. S. Eliot and even the best in beatnik poetry. Although the question of modern parallels may be debated, the emergent factor is that Coheleth has something for everyone in every age.

1 Vanity of Earthly Things The words of David's son, 2 Coheleth, king in Jerusalem: | Vanity of vanities, says Coheleth, 3 vanity of vanities! All things are vanity! | What profit has 4 man from all the labor which he toils at under the sun? | One generation passes and another comes, but the world forever 5 stays. | The sun rises and the sun goes down; then it presses
6 on to the place where it rises. | Blowing now toward the south, then toward the north, the wind turns again and again, resum-7 ing its rounds. | All rivers go to the sea, yet never does the sea become full. To the place where they go, the rivers keep on 8 going. | All speech is labored; there is nothing man can say.
The eye is not satisfied with seeing nor is the ear filled with hearing.
9 What has been, that will be; what has been done, that will 10 be done. Nothing is new under the sun. | Even the thing of which we say, "See, this is new!" has already existed in the 11 ages that preceded us. There is no remembrance of the men of old; nor of those to come will there be any remembrance among those who come after them.

12 Vanity of Wisdom I, Coheleth, was king over Israel in 13 Jerusalem, | and I applied my mind to search and investigate in wisdom all things that are done under the sun. A thankless 14 task God has appointed for men to be busied about. | I have

1, 1: By a recognized literary device, the author Coheleth identifies himself with king Solomon, David's son, from 1, 12 to 2, 12.

1, 2: The theme of the book is vanity, and this word is used forty times in the Hebrew text. It means the emptiness or uselessness of life. Vanity of vanities: a Hebrew superlative meaning most vain, just as the Canticle of Canticles means the best Canticle.

1, 3-11: Just as there is nothing new in the course of nature, neither is there anything new in the course of human existence. We would render the author's popular phrase under the sun as "on the face of the earth."

1, 5: Then it presses on to the place where it rises: in those days the sun was thought to travel beneath the earth during the night.

1, 7: The author, according to the ideas of his time, thinks it is vain and meaningless that all rivers keep emptying into the sea without ever filling it.

1, 8: All speech . . . say: speech cannot describe how much things keep toiling uselessly.

seen all things that are done under the sun, and behold, all is 15 vanity and a chase after wind. | What is crooked cannot be made straight, and what is missing cannot be supplied.
16 Though I said to myself, "Behold, I have become great and stored up wisdom beyond all who were before me in Jerusalem, and my mind has broad experience of wisdom and knowl-17 edge"; yet when I applied my mind to know wisdom and knowledge, madness and folly, I learned that this also is a 18 chase after wind. | For in much wisdom there is much sorrow, and he who stores up knowledge stores up grief.

1 Vanity of Pleasure I said to myself, "Come, now, let me try you with pleasure and the enjoyment of good things." But 2 behold, this too was vanity. | Of laughter I said: "Mad!" and 3 of mirth: "What good does this do?" | I thought of beguiling my senses with wine, though my mind was concerned with wisdom, and of taking up folly, until I should understand what is best for men to do under the heavens during the limited days of their life.
4 I undertook great works; I built myself houses and planted 5 vineyards; I made gardens and parks, and set out in them fruit 6 trees of all sorts. And I constructed for myself reservoirs to 7 water a flourishing woodland. I acquired male and female slaves, and slaves were born in my house. I also had growing herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, more than all who had been 8 before me in Jerusalem. I amassed for myself silver and gold, and the wealth of kings and provinces. I got for myself male 9 and female singers and all human luxuries. I became great, and I stored up more than all others before me in Jerusalem; my 10 wisdom, too, stayed with me. Nothing that my eyes desired did I deny them, nor did I deprive myself of any joy, but my heart rejoiced in the fruit of all my toil. This was my share for all 11 my toil. But when I turned to all the works that my hands had wrought, and to the toil at which I had taken such pains, behold! all was vanity and a chase after wind, with nothing 12 gained under the sun. For what will the man do who is to come after the king? What men have already done!

2, 1-12: The author makes Solomon admit, to use a modern paraphrase, that wine (v. 3), women (vv. 7 and 10), and song (v. 8) are also vanity. To be a king, who is known as a great builder, a millionaire, a man of wisdom, is equally profitless.

13 Wisdom and Folly Compared I went on to the consideration of wisdom, madness and folly. And I saw that wisdom had the advantage over folly as much as light has the advan-14 tage over darkness. | The wise man has eyes in his head, but the fool walks in darkness. Yet I know that one lot befalls both 15 of them. | So I said to myself, if the fool's lot is to befall me also, why then should I be wise? Where is the profit for me?
16 And I concluded in my heart that this too is vanity. Neither of the wise man nor of the fool will there be an abiding remembrance, for in days to come both will have been forgotten. How is it that the wise man dies as well as the fool!
17 Therefore I loathed life, since for me the work that is done under the sun is evil; for all is vanity and a chase after wind.

18 Vanity of Toil And I detested all the fruits of my labor under the sun, because I must leave them to a man who is to 19 come after me. And who knows whether he will be a wise man or a fool? Yet he will have control over all the fruits of my 20 wise labor under the sun. This also is vanity. So my feelings 21 turned to despair of all the fruits of my labor under the sun. For here is a man who has labored with wisdom and knowledge and skill, and to another, who has not labored over it, he must leave 22 his property. This also is vanity and a great misfortune. | For what profit comes to a man from all the toil and anxiety of 23 heart with which he has labored under the sun? All his days sorrow and grief are his occupation; even at night his mind is not at rest. This also is vanity.
24 There is nothing better for man than to eat and drink and provide himself with good things by his labors. Even this, I 25 realized, is from the hand of God. For who can eat or drink 26 apart from him? For to whatever man he sees fit he gives wisdom and knowledge and joy; but to the sinner he gives the task of gathering possessions to be given to whatever man God sees fit. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

3

1 Unchanging Order of Events There is an appointed time for everything, and a time for every affair under the heavens. |
2 A time to be born, and a time to die; a time to plant, and a

2, 13-17: Coheleth admits the superiority of wisdom over folly even though wisdom does not last.

2, 24-25: Coheleth proposes that the joys of one's work are given by God for enjoyment.

3, 1-22: The most famous section of the book is the monotonous, melancholy chant of man's activities according to God's appointed times

3 time to uproot the plant. | A time to kill, and a time to heal;
4 a time to tear down, and a time to build. | A time to weep, and 5 a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance. | A time to scatter stones, and a time to gather them; a time to embrace, 6 and a time to be far from embraces. | A time to seek, and a time 7 to lose; a time to keep, and a time to cast away. | A time to rend, and a time to sew; a time to be silent, and a time to speak.
8 | A time to love, and a time to hate; a time of war, and a time of peace.
9.10 What advantage has the worker from his toil? I have considered the task which God has appointed for men to be busied 11 about. He has made everything appropriate to its time, and has put the timeless into their hearts, without men's ever discover-12 ing, from beginning to end, the work which God has done. I recognized that there is nothing better than to be glad and to do 13 well during life. For every man, moreover, to eat and drink and enjoy the fruit of all his labor is a gift of God.

14 Uncertainty of the Future I recognized that whatever God does will endure forever; there is no adding to it, or taking 15 from it. Thus has God done that he may be revered. What now is has already been; what is to be, already is; and God restores 16 what would otherwise be displaced. And still under the sun in the judgment place I saw wickedness, and in the seat of justice, 17 iniquity. | And I said to myself, both the just and the wicked God will judge, since there is a time for every affair and on 18 every work a judgment. I said to myself: As for the children of men, it is God's way of testing them and of showing that they 19 are in themselves like beasts. For the lot of man and of beast is one lot; the one dies as well as the other. Both have the same life-breath, and man has no advantage over the beast; but all is 20 vanity. Both go to the same place; both were made from the 21 dust, and to the dust they both return. Who knows if the life-breath of the children of men goes upward and the life-breath 22 of beasts goes earthward? And I saw that there is nothing better for a man than to rejoice in his work; for this is his lot. Who will let him see what is to come after him?

(vv. 1-8). Man cannot understand God's purpose in governing the world according to these appointed times (vv. 9-11). Therefore, the best thing for man to do is to enjoy the good things God gives him (vv. 12-13) because man cannot modify the course of events (vv. 14-15), and there is no hope of any change in the future (vv. 18-22). The proof that Coheleth in vv. 18-21 does not mean to say animal and man have the same destiny is 12, 7, where he completes this thought. See Gn 2, 7 n.

1 Social Disorders Again I considered all the oppressions that take place under the sun: the tears of the victims with none to comfort them! From the hand of their oppressors comes 2 violence, and there is none to comfort them! And those now dead, I declared more fortunate in death than are the living to be still 3 alive. And better off than both is the yet unborn, who has not 4 seen the wicked work that is done under the sun. Then I saw that all toil and skillful work is the rivalry of one man for 5 another. This also is vanity and a chase after wind. | "The fool
6 folds his arms and consumes his own flesh"— | Better is one handful with tranquillity than two with toil and a chase after wind!

7.8 Again I found this vanity under the sun: a solitary man with no companion; with neither son nor brother. Yet there is no end to all his toil, and riches do not satisfy his greed. "For whom do I toil and deprive myself of good things?" This also is vanity 9 and a worthless task. Two are better than one: they get a good 10 wage for their labor. If the one falls, the other will lift up his companion. Woe to the solitary man! For if he should fall, he 11 has no one to lift him up. | So also, if two sleep together, they keep each other warm. How can one alone keep warm? | 12 Where a lone man may be overcome, two together can resist.
A three-ply cord is not easily broken.

13 Better is a poor but wise youth than an old but foolish king 14 who no longer knows caution; for from a prison house one comes forth to rule, since even in his royalty he was poor at 15 birth. Then I saw all those who are to live and move about under the sun with the heir apparent who will succeed to his 16 place. There is no end to all these people, to all over whom he takes precedence; yet the later generations will not applaud him. This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

4, 5-6: While it is suicidal to be lazy to the extreme of neglecting the necessities of life (we would say "twiddles his thumbs" for "folds his arms," v. 5), yet it is better to be quiet than to work hard but uselessly. Just as moderns use adjectives to qualify a noun, Coheleth uses one proverb to qualify another. These two proverbs or sayings are only loosely supporting the foregoing verses 1-4.

4, 7-8: Another example of futility is a lonely man who works so hard for riches that he never has time to ask why he is working himself to death.

4, 12: A three-ply cord is not easily broken: this saying may imply that three are even better than two.

4, 13-16. Is Coheleth thinking of a poor boy who finally becomes a king? The inspired writer looks to the end and dismisses the typical success story as vanity.

17 Reverence for God Guard your step when you go to the house of God. Let your approach be obedience, rather than the fools' offering of sacrifice; for they know not how to keep from doing evil.

1 Be not hasty in your utterance and let not your heart be quick to make a promise in God's presence. God is in heaven
2 and you are on earth; therefore let your words be few. | For nightmares come with many cares, and a fool's utterance with many words.
3 When you make a vow to God, delay not its fulfillment. For 4 God has no pleasure in fools; fulfill what you have vowed. You had better not make a vow than make it and not fulfill it.
5 Let not your utterances make you guilty, and say not before his representative, "It was a mistake," lest God be angered by such 6 words and destroy the works of your hands. | Rather, fear God!

7 Perverted Justice If you see oppression of the poor, and violation of rights and justice in the realm, do not be shocked by the fact, for the high official has another higher than he 8 watching him and above these are others higher still—. Yet an advantage for a country in every respect is a king for the arable land.

9 Vanity of Riches The covetous man is never satisfied with money, and the lover of wealth reaps no fruit from it; so this 10 too is vanity. | Where there are great riches, there are also many to devour them. Of what use are they to the owner except 11 to feast his eyes upon? Sleep is sweet to the laboring man, whether he eats little or much, but the rich man's abundance allows him no sleep.
12 This is a grievous evil which I have seen under the sun: 13 riches kept by their owner to his hurt. Should the riches be lost through some misfortune, he may have a son when he is 14 without means. As he came forth from his mother's womb, so again shall he depart, naked as he came, having nothing from 15 his labor that he can carry in his hand. This too is a grievous

4, 17: The general meaning is: obedience is better than sacrifice.

5, 1: God is in heaven and you are on earth: this gap should make us reverent.

5, 6: Rather, fear God!: this seems to mean a warning: "beware" rather than an exhortation: "fear God."

5, 8: Scholars disagree widely on how to translate this verse.

evil, that he goes just as he came. What then does it profit him 16 to toil for wind? All the days of his life are passed in gloom and sorrow, under great vexation, sickness and wrath.
17 Here is what I recognize as good: it is well for a man to eat and drink and enjoy all the fruits of his labor under the sun during the limited days of the life which God gives him; for 18 this is his lot. Any man to whom God gives riches and property, and grants power to partake of them, so that he receives his lot and finds joy in the fruits of his toil, has a gift from God. | 19 For he will hardly dwell on the shortness of his life, because God lets him busy himself with the joy of his heart.

6 1 There is another evil which I have seen under the sun, and 2 it weighs heavily upon man: there is the man to whom God gives riches and property and honor, so that he lacks none of all the things he craves; yet God does not grant him power to partake of them, but a stranger devours them. This is vanity and a 3 dire plague. | Should a man have a hundred children and live many years, no matter to what great age, still if he has not the full benefit of his goods, or if he is deprived of burial, of this man I proclaim that the child born dead is more fortunate than 4 he. Though it came in vain and goes into darkness and its name 5 is enveloped in darkness; though it has not seen or known the sun, yet the dead child is at rest rather than such a man.
6 Should he live twice a thousand years and not enjoy his goods, do not both go to the same place?

7 Vanity of Desires All man's toil is for his mouth, yet his 8 desire is not fulfilled. For what advantage has the wise man over the fool, or what advantage has the poor man in knowing 9 how to conduct himself in life? "What the eyes see is better than what the desires wander after." This also is vanity and a chase after wind.

6, 1-6: According to Coheleth the inability to enjoy life is a disastrous misfortune. He gives some examples.

6, 3: Many of the ancients, not only the Jews, could imagine nothing more disgraceful than to die and not be buried.

6, 6: If the rich man did not enjoy his possessions during life, he would be equal to a still-born child because they both end up in the same abode for the dead.

6, 8: The wise man, the fool, and the poor man all find life's joys insufficient.

6, 9: Actual enjoyment of something, however trifling, is preferable to desiring the unattainable.

10 Whatever is, was long ago given its name, and the nature of man is known, and that he cannot contend in judgment with 11 one who is stronger than he. For though there are many sayings 12 that multiply vanity, what profit is there for a man? For who knows what is good for a man in life, the limited days of his vain life (which God has made like a shadow)? Because—who is there to tell a man what will come after him under the sun?

7

1 Wisdom and Folly Contrasted A good name is better than good ointment, and the day of death than the day of birth. | 2 It is better to go to the house of mourning than to the house of feasting, for that is the end of every man, and the living 3 should take it to heart. | Sorrow is better than laughter, because 4 when the face is sad the heart grows wiser. | The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning, but the heart of fools is in the 5 house of mirth. | It is better to hearken to the wise man's 6 rebuke than to hearken to the song of fools; | for as the crackling of thorns under a pot, so is the fool's laughter.
7 This also is vanity, | for oppression can make a fool of a 8 wise man, and a bribe corrupts the heart. | Better is the end of speech than its beginning; better is the patient spirit than the 9 lofty spirit. | Do not in spirit become quickly discontented, 10 for discontent lodges in the bosom of a fool. | Do not say: How is it that former times were better than these? For it is not in 11 wisdom that you ask about this. | Wisdom and an inheritance 12 are good, and an advantage to those that see the sun. | For the protection of wisdom is as the protection of money; and the advantage of knowledge is that wisdom preserves the life of its owner.

13 The World an Enigma Consider the work of God. Who 14 can make straight what he has made crooked? On a good day enjoy good things, and on an evil day consider: Both the one and the other God has made, so that man cannot find fault with him in anything.

6, 10: Given its name: its existence. The world remains changeless on the whole and so does man. Man cannot change God's ways of ruling the world and, therefore, man cannot realize all his desires.

6, 11: To repeat words is of no profit to man.

6, 12: Man does not know what is good for him to do on earth because he does not know what his future earthly life has in store for him.

7, 13: It is futile to try to change what God did.

7, 14: Both the one: good things. And the other: adversity.

15 I have seen all manner of things in my vain days: a just man perishing in his justice, and a wicked one surviving in his 16 wickedness. "Be not just to excess, and be not overwise, lest you 17 be ruined. Be not wicked to excess, and be not foolish. Why 18 should you die before your time?" It is good to hold to this rule, and not to let that one go; but he who fears God will win through at all events.
19 Wisdom is a better defense for the wise man than would be 20 ten princes in the city; yet there is no man on earth so just as 21 to do good and never sin. Do not give heed to every word that 22 is spoken lest you hear your servant speaking ill of you, for you know in your heart that you have many times spoken ill of others.
23 All these things I probed in wisdom. I said, "I will acquire 24 wisdom"; but it was beyond me. What exists is far-reaching; it 25 is deep, very deep: who can find it out? I turned my thoughts toward knowledge; I sought and pursued wisdom and reason, and I recognized that wickedness is foolish and folly is madness.

26 Women More bitter than death I find the woman who is a hunter's trap, whose heart is a snare and whose hands are prison bonds. He who is pleasing to God will escape her, but 27 the sinner will be entrapped by her. Behold, this have I found, says Coheleth, adding one thing to another that I might dis-
28 cover the answer | which my soul still seeks and has not found: One man out of a thousand have I come upon, but a 29 woman among them all I have not discerned. Behold, only this have I found out: God made mankind straight, but men have had recourse to many subtleties.

1 Who is like the wise man, and who knows the explanation of things? A man's wisdom illumines his face, but an impudent look is resented.

7, 16: A warning against excessive legalism.
7, 17: Alluding to v. 16, the inspired author warns against the opposite extreme of sinning and therefore, according to the ideas of the time, dying prematurely.
7, 21: Do not be too curious to ascertain everything lest you hear your servant speaking ill of you.
7, 26: The prostitute is an example of: "wickedness is folly and folly is madness" (v. 25).
7, 28-29: It is rare to find a perfect man and even rarer to find a perfect woman, but this is not God's fault.

2 Obedience to Rulers Observe the precept of the king, an 3 in view of your oath to God, be not hasty to withdraw fron the king; do not join in with a base plot, for he does whatev 4 he pleases, | because his word is sovereign, and who can sa to him, "What are you doing?"

5 Indiscernible Moral Sanction "He who keeps the com mandment experiences no evil, and the wise man's heart know 6 times and judgments; for there is a time and a judgment fo 7 everything." Yet it is a great affliction for man | that he i ignorant of what is to come; for who will make known to hin 8 how it will be? There is no man who is master of the breath o life so as to retain it, and none has mastery of the day of death
There is no exemption from the struggle, nor are the wicke 9 saved by their wickedness. All these things I considered and applied my mind to every work that is done under the sun, whil 10 one man tyrannizes over another to his hurt. Meanwhile I saw wicked men approach and enter; and as they left the sacred place, they were praised in the city for what they had done 11 This also is vanity. | Because the sentence against evildoers is not promptly executed, therefore the hearts of men are fille 12 with the desire to commit evil—because the sinner does evil a hundred times and survives. Though indeed I know that it shal be well with those who fear God, for their reverence toward 13 him; and that it shall not be well with the wicked man, and he shall not prolong his shadowy days, for his lack of reverence toward God.
14 This is a vanity which occurs on earth: there are just men treated as though they had done evil and wicked men treated as though they had done justly. This, too, I say is vanity.
15 Therefore I commend mirth, because there is nothing good for man under the sun except eating and drinking and mirth: for this is the accompaniment of his toil during the limited days of the life which God gives him under the sun.

16 The Same Lot for All When I applied my heart to know 17 wisdom and to observe what is done on earth, I recognized that man is unable to discover all God's work that is done under the sun, even though neither by day nor by night do his eyes find 8, 9-15: Coheleth says: daily experience disproves the traditional Jewish doctrine that the holy are happy and the evil are unhappy on earth. Therefore, Coheleth recommends legitimate God-given pleasures.

8, 10: The Hebrew text is not clear.

8, 16-17: Even a studious wise man does not understand God's wisdom as it is manifested on earth.

rest in sleep. However much man toils in searching, he does not find it out; and even if the wise man says that he knows, he is unable to discover it.

1 All this I have kept in mind and recognized: the just, the wise, and their deeds are in the hand of God. Love from hatred
2 man cannot tell; both appear equally vain, | in that there is the same lot for all, for the just and the wicked, for the good and the bad, for the clean and the unclean, for him who offers sacrifice and him who does not. As it is for the good man, so it is for the sinner; as it is for him who swears rashly, so it is for him
3 who fears an oath. Among all the things that happen under the sun, this is the worst, that things turn out the same for all. Hence the minds of men are filled with evil, and madness is in their hearts during life; and afterward they go to the dead.
4 Indeed, for any among the living there is hope; a live dog is 5 better off than a dead lion. For the living know that they are to die, but the dead no longer know anything. There is no further 6 recompense for them, because all memory of them is lost. For them, love and hatred and rivalry have long since perished. They will never again have part in anything that is done under the sun.
7 Go, eat your bread with joy and drink your wine with a merry heart, because it is now that God favors your works.
8 At all times let your garments be white, and spare not the 9 perfume for your head. Enjoy life with the wife whom you love, all the days of the fleeting life that is granted you under the sun. This is your lot in life, for the toil of your labors under the 10 sun. Anything you can turn your hand to, do with what power you have; for there will be no work, nor reason, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the nether world where you are going.

11 Uncertainty of Fortune Again I saw under the sun that the race is not won by the swift, nor the battle by the valiant, nor a livelihood by the wise, nor riches by the shrewd, nor favor 12 by the experts; for a time of calamity comes to all alike. Man no more knows his own time than fish taken in the fatal net, or

9, 1: The just . . . are in the hand of God: to do as He pleases. Love from hatred man cannot tell: man cannot tell when God favors someone or not.

9, 2-3: Because the same thing happens to good and evil people, this results in an increase of sins by the evil people.

9, 4: See a different view in 4, 2.

birds trapped in the snare; like these the children of men are caught when the evil time falls suddenly upon them.
13 On the other hand I saw this wise deed under the sun, which 14 I thought sublime. Against a small city with few men in it advanced a mighty king, who surrounded it and threw up great 15 siegeworks about it. But in the city lived a man who, though poor, was wise, and he delivered it through his wisdom. Yet no 16 one remembered this poor man. | Though I had said, "Wisdom is better than force," yet the wisdom of the poor man is despised and his words go unheeded.
17 "The quiet words of the wise are better heeded than the shout of a ruler of fools"—!

18 Sundry Proverbs "A fly that dies can spoil the perfumer's ointment, and a single slip can ruin much that is good."

10

1 More weighty than wisdom or wealth is a little folly!
2 The wise man's understanding turns him to his right; the fool's understanding turns him to his left.
3 When the fool walks through the street, in his lack of understanding he calls everything foolish.
4 Should the anger of the ruler burst upon you, forsake not your place; for mildness abates great offenses.
5 I have seen under the sun another evil, like a mistake that 6 proceeds from the ruler: a fool put in lofty position while the 7 rich sit in lowly places. I have seen slaves on horseback, while princes walked on the ground like slaves.
8 He who digs a pit may fall into it, and he who breaks through a wall may be bitten by a serpent.
9 He who moves stones may be hurt by them, and he who chops wood is in danger from it.
10 If the iron becomes dull, though at first he made easy progress, he must increase his efforts; but the craftsman has the advantage of his skill.
11 If the serpent bites because it has not been charmed, then there is no advantage for the charmer.

9, 13-17: The lesson of this historically unidentifiable story is that "wisdom is better than force" (v. 16).

10, 2: The wise man turns his intelligence on important matters; the fool does not.

10, 4-7: Be submissive when confronted with rulers who appoint the inept for important positions.

10, 8-11: The type of wisdom here seems to be a "safety-first" prudence in occupational hazards.

12 Words from the wise man's mouth win favor, but the fool's 13 lips consume him. | The beginning of his words is folly, and 14 the end of his talk is utter madness; | yet the fool multiplies words. Man knows not what is to come, for who can tell him 15 what is to come after him? | When will the fool be weary of his labor, he who knows not the way to the city?
16 Woe to you, O land, whose king was a servant, and whose 17 princes dine in the morning! | Blessed are you, O land, whose king is of noble birth, and whose princes dine at the right time 18 (for vigor and not in drinking bouts). | When hands are lazy, 19 the rafters sag; when hands are slack, the house leaks. | Bread and oil call forth merriment and wine makes the living glad, 20 but money answers for everything. | Even in your thoughts do not make light of the king, nor in the privacy of your bedroom revile the rich, because the birds of the air may carry your voice, a winged creature may tell what you say.

1 Cast your bread upon the waters; after a long time you may 2 find it again. | Make seven or eight portions; you know not 3 what misfortune may come upon the earth. | When the clouds are full, they pour out rain upon the earth. Whether a tree falls to the south or to the north, wherever it falls, there shall it lie. | 4 One who pays heed to the wind will not sow, and one who 5 watches the clouds will never reap. | Just as you know not how the breath of life fashions the human frame in the mother's womb, so you know not the work of God which he is accom-6 plishing in the universe. | In the morning sow your seed, and at evening let not your hand be idle: for you know not which of the two will be successful, or whether both alike will turn out well.

7 Youth Light is sweet! and it is pleasant for the eyes to see 8 the sun. However many years a man may live, let him, as he 11, 1-2: Commentators do not agree on the precise meaning. One probable interpretation is that v. 1 is an exhortation to be venturesome in overseas trading, whereas v. 2 counsels not to put all of one's cargo in one ship.

11, 3: Nature keeps moving and does not stop.

11, 4: A farmer must not wait for ideal weather or else he will never sow nor reap.

11, 5-6: Just as God's activity in embryonic growth is mysterious, so are the results of planting mysterious, but that should not prevent you from sowing early and late in the day or season.

enjoys them all, remember that the days of darkness will be many. All that is to come is vanity.
9 Rejoice, O young man, while you are young and let your heart be glad in the days of your youth. Follow the ways of your heart, the vision of your eyes; yet understand that as 10 regards all this God will bring you to judgment. | Ward off grief from your heart and put away trouble from your presence, though the dawn of youth is fleeting.

12

1 Old Age Remember your Creator in the days of your youth, before the evil days come and the years approach of which you 2 will say, I have no pleasure in them; | before the sun is darkened, and the light, and the moon, and the stars, while the 3 clouds return after the rain; | when the guardians of the house tremble, and the strong men are bent, and the grinders are idle because they are few, and they who look through the windows 4 grow blind; | when the doors to the street are shut, and the sound of the mill is low; when one waits for the chirp of a bird, 5 but all the daughters of song are suppressed; | and one fears heights, and perils in the street; when the almond tree blooms, and the locust grows sluggish and the caper berry is destroyed, because man goes to his lasting home, and mourners go about 6 the streets; | before the silver cord is snapped and the golden bowl is broken, and the pitcher is shattered at the spring, and 7 the broken pulley falls into the well, | and the dust returns to the earth as it once was, and the life-breath returns to God who gave it.
8 Vanity of vanities, says Coheleth, all things are vanity!

9 Epilogue Besides being wise, Coheleth taught the people knowledge, and weighed, scrutinized and arranged many prov-10 erbs. Coheleth sought to find pleasing sayings, and to write 11 down true sayings with precision. The sayings of the wise are like goads; like fixed pegs are the topics given by one collector.

12, 1-7: An allegory on the approach of old age and death.

12, 2: In old age, darkness replaces light and warmth.

12, 3: When the guardians: the men servants. Strong men: masters. Grinders: women servants. They who look . . . blind: mistresses. These are also interpreted as arms, legs, teeth, and eyes.

12, 4: The verse describes the approach of deafness. The daughters of song: the songbirds.

12, 5: When the almond tree blooms: when the hair turns white. And the locust grows sluggish: when one's gait is slowed up. The caper berry: an appetizer.

12, 6: All four metaphors portray death by some form of breaking.

12 As to more than these, my son, beware. Of the making of many books there is no end, and in much study there is weariness for the flesh.
13 The last word, when all is heard: Fear God and keep his 14 commandments, for this is man's all; | because God will bring to judgment every work, with all its hidden qualities, whether good or bad.

THE CANTICLE OF CANTICLES

INTRODUCTION

The Canticle of Canticles is a Hebraic way of saying "the best song of all." It was written in the fifth century B.C., by an anonymous writer, but attributed to Solomon (see Introduction to the Wisdom Books). Its lasting influence is evidenced by its prescribed reading in the present-day Jewish liturgy on the Passover Feast. The Roman liturgy applies it extensively to the Blessed Virgin Mary on her feast days. Small wonder that the Canticle was a favorite of the mystics.

There is perhaps more extreme diversity of opinion on the literary form of this song than on the literary form of any other book of the Bible. Is it a drama between Solomon and a shepherdess? Is it an allegory? A story of human love between husband and wife? Some maintain it is a collection of nuptial songs on human love which are connected with many liturgical hymns sung at the marriage of the gods. This is the current non-Catholic view especially in Germany. A popular current Catholic view, far from unanimous, considers it a parable, i.e., a developed comparison in the form of a story like the Good Samaritan of the Gospel. In an allegory every detail has a meaning. Insofar as even a parable has some details with specific meanings, it can be called an allegorizing parable, and, in this sense, the Canticle is often so called. In a parable there is only one main point, and here it is the love between God (the bridegroom) and His people (the bride). This love between God and His people is cast in terms of human love through disconnected love scenes. The division between the Catholic and Protestant opinions is based more on literary than on doctrinal considerations.

Irrespective of the type of literature, it is especially important to recall several peculiarities in reading the Song of Solomon, as it is sometimes called. In the Canticle it is especially important to take cognizance of the revealing difference between the oriental and the western way of interpreting metaphors. When the Westerner reads "You are beautiful! Your eyes are doves behind your veil" (4, 1), he automatically compares eyes with doves and quizzically asks: "What beauty is there in a pair of eyes compared with a pair of doves?" He interprets this comparison very literally, materially. But the inspired oriental writer meant this metaphor more "metaphorically," less literally and less materially. What the Oriental compares is his reaction, his feelings. His feelings on seeing the eyes of his beloved, he compares with the feelings he experiences in beholding two beautiful doves. Again, in "Your hair is like a flock of goats streaming down the mountains of Galaad" (4, 1), we Westerners see a comparison between her hair and goats. The oriental shepherd, seeing numerous well-fed goats meandering down the mountain slope under a sparkling sun, experiences a true delight, dear to men of his calling. He compares this sensation with the sensation he registers in gazing upon the flowing hair of his shepherdess.

In the same Canticle, when the sacred writer composes metaphors describing the delicate parts of the body, this description is technically called a "wasf." A Westerner is embarrassed when he reads "Your breasts are like twin fawns" (7, 4). What we said above about the psychology of the oriental metaphor applies here. Although these praises of the parts of the bodies of both male ("His legs are columns of marble" [5, 15]) and female ("your breasts are like clusters" [7, 8]) are considered poor taste in our culture, they are very respectable in Semitic culture. Even today at Arabic wedding feasts, such descriptions are sung at great length.

It will not be rewarding to look for logical sequence of ideas, not even for consistent grammar, because this is the language of love. Even geographical names must not always be taken literally because they may be used for poetic reasons such as alliteration (in Hebrew).

There are many similarities between the Canticle and Assyrian-Babylonian literature, Egyptian love songs of the fourteenth and thirteenth centuries B.C., and love songs still sung by modern Arabs. However, there is no proof that the biblical Canticle depended on them. Rather, the Canticle reveals more numerous verbal and doctrinal similarities with, and more dependency on, Old Testament books.

1 The Song of Songs by Solomon.

2 B Love's Desires Let him kiss me with kisses of his mouth!
3 More delightful is your love than wine! | Your name spoken is a spreading perfume—that is why the maidens love you.
4 Draw me!—
D We will follow you eagerly!
B Bring me, O king, to your chambers.
D With you we rejoice and exult, we extol your love; it is beyond wine: how rightly you are loved!

5 B Love's Boast I am as dark—but lovely, O daughters of Jerusalem—as the tents of Cedar, as the curtains of Salma. |

1, 2ff: The marginal letters indicate the speaker of the verses: B-Bride; D-Daughters of Jerusalem; G-Bridegroom.

1, 3: Perfume: this is an ever recurring image in the Canticle. It symbolizes the charms which capture the heart.

1, 4: O king: in the nuptial language of the Canticle, the bridegroom is addressed as king and shepherd by the bride and the chorus, i.e., the daughters of Jerusalem, who represent the villagers. The chorus voices the sentiments of the principal actor after the manner of a Greek chorus.

1, 5: The tents and curtains were made from black goat hair. The bride contrasts her sunburnt complexion with the fair complexion of the daughters of Jerusalem. The contrast is common in Arabic love poems.

6 Do not stare at me because I am swarthy, because the sun has burned me. My brothers have been angry with me; they charged me with the care of the vineyards: my own vineyard I have not cared for.

7 B Love's Inquiry Tell me, you whom my heart loves, where you pasture your flock, where you give them rest at midday, lest I be found wandering after the flocks of your companions.
8 G If you do not know, O most beautiful among women, follow the tracks of the flock and pasture the young ones near the shepherds' camps.

9 G Love's Vision To the steeds of Pharao's chariots would 10 I liken you, my beloved: | your cheeks lovely in pendants, 11 your neck in jewels. | We will make pendants of gold for you, and silver ornaments.

12 B Love's Union For the king's banquet my nard gives forth 13 its fragrance. | My lover is for me a sachet of myrrh to rest 14 in my bosom. | My lover is for me a cluster of henna from the vineyards of En-gaddi.
15 G Ah, you are beautiful, my beloved, ah, you are beautiful; your eyes are doves!
16 B Ah, you are beautiful, my lover—yes, you are lovely. Our 17 couch, too, is verdant; | the beams of our house are cedars, our rafters, cypresses.

2

1 B I am a flower of Saron, a lily of the valley.

1, 6: My own vineyard I have not cared for: the bride says metaphorically that she has not taken care of her heart but given it to her lover.

1, 7-8: The poetic motifs of searching and finding return in 2, 8ff and 3, 1f.

1, 9-11: The same comparison is found in ancient Egyptian and modern Arabic love poems. The admiration enjoyed upon viewing the rich festive ornaments of the royal steeds is compared with the admiration evoked upon beholding the dazzling attire of the bride.

1, 12-14: In returning the compliment, the bride compares the joy she derives from perfume ("henna") to the joy from the presence of her lover-king.

1, 15: Your eyes are doves: same comparison as in 4, 1, but see Introduction to the Canticle.

1, 16-17: This may be a poetic description of their rustic bower.

2, 1: Saron: the fertile Mediterranean coastal plain from Carmel to Jaffa.

2 G As a lily among thorns, so is my beloved among women.
3 B As an apple tree among the trees of the woods, so is my lover among men. I delight to rest in his shadow, and his
4 fruit is sweet to my mouth. | He brings me into the banquet
5 hall and his emblem over me is love. | Strengthen me with raisin cakes, refresh me with apples, for I am faint with love. |
6 His left hand is under my head and his right arm embraces 7 me. | I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles and hinds of the field, do not arouse, do not stir up love before its own time.

8 B A Tryst in the Spring Hark! my lover—here he comes 9 springing across the mountains, leaping across the hills. | My lover is like a gazelle or a young stag. Here he stands behind our wall, gazing through the windows, peering through the 10 lattices. | My lover speaks; he says to me, "Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one, and come!
11 "For see, the winter is past, the rains are over and gone. | 12 The flowers appear on the earth, the time of pruning the vines has come, and the song of the dove is heard in our 13 land. | The fig tree puts forth its figs, and the vines, in bloom, give forth fragrance. Arise, my beloved, my beautiful one, and come!
14 "O my dove in the clefts of the rock, in the secret recesses of the cliff, let me see you, let me hear your voice, for your voice is sweet, and you are lovely."
15 B Catch us the foxes, the little foxes that damage the vineyards; for our vineyards are in bloom!
16 My lover belongs to me and I to him; he browses among 17 the lilies. | Until the day breathes cool and the shadows lengthen, roam, my lover, like a gazelle or a young stag upon the mountains of Bether.

3
1 B Loss and Discovery On my bed at night I sought him whom my heart loves—I sought him but I did not find him. |

2, 2: The bridegroom transforms the modest remarks of his bride (2, 1) into a gracious compliment.

2, 6: This verse has been described as "the most elemental cry of feminine love."

2, 7: The refrain distracts the reader from giving an erotic interpretation to the previous verses 3-6. By the gazelles and hinds of the field: may mean "by all that is lovely and free."

2, 8ff: See 1, 7-8 n.

3, 1ff: See 1, 7-8 n.

2 I will rise then and go about the city; in the streets and crossings I will seek him whom my heart loves. I sought him but 3 I did not find him. | The watchmen came upon me as they made their rounds of the city: Have you seen him whom my 4 heart loves? | I had hardly left them when I found him whom my heart loves. I took hold of him and would not let him go till I should bring him to the home of my mother, to the 5 room of my parent. | I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles and hinds of the field, do not arouse, do not stir up love before its own time.

6 D Regal State of the Bridegroom What is this coming up from the desert, like a column of smoke laden with myrrh, with frankincense, and with the perfume of every exotic 7 dust? | Ah, it is the litter of Solomon; sixty valiant men
8 surround it, of the valiant men of Israel: | All of them expert with the sword, skilled in battle, each with his sword at his side against danger in the watches of the night.
9 King Solomon made himself a carriage of wood from 10 Lebanon. | He made its columns of silver, its roof of gold, its seat of purple cloth, its framework inlaid with ivory. | 11 Daughters of Jerusalem, come forth and look upon King Solomon in the crown with which his mother has crowned him on the day of his marriage, on the day of the joy of his heart.

1 G The Charms of the Beloved Ah, you are beautiful, my beloved, ah, you are beautiful! Your eyes are doves behind your veil. Your hair is like a flock of goats streaming down 2 the mountains of Galaad. | Your teeth are like a flock of ewes to be shorn, which come up from the washing, all of them big 3 with twins, none of them thin and barren. | Your lips are like a scarlet strand; your mouth is lovely. Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate behind your veil.
4 Your neck is like David's tower girt with battlements; a thousand bucklers hang upon it, all the shields of valiant

3, 5: See 2, 7 n.

3, 6-11: Not even king Solomon in all the glory of his wedding march can match the glory with which the groom approaches the bride.

4, 1-11: See Introduction to the Canticle for metaphors and wasfs.

4, 4: This is a comparison between the feeling of seeing trophy-shields on a tower, forming part of the city walls, and the feeling upon seeing the jewelry on her neck. The impression intended by the author may be one of force in repose.

men. | Your breasts are like twin fawns, the young of a gazelle that browse among the lilies. | Until the day breathes cool and the shadows lengthen, I will go to the mountain of myrrh, to the hill of incense. | You are beautiful, my beloved, and there is no blemish in you.

Come from Lebanon, my bride, come from Lebanon, come!
Descend from the top of Amana, from the top of Sanir and Hermon, from the haunts of lions, from the leopards' mountains. | You have ravished my heart, my sister, my bride;
you have ravished my heart with one glance of your eyes, with one bead of your necklace. | How beautiful is your love, my sister, my bride, how much more delightful is your love than wine, and the fragrance of your ointments than all spices! | Your lips drip honey, my bride, and sweetmeats and milk are under your tongue; and the fragrance of your garments is the fragrance of Lebanon.

G The Lover and His Garden You are an enclosed garden, my sister, my bride, an enclosed garden, a fountain sealed. | You are a park that puts forth pomegranates, with all choice fruits; | nard and saffron, calamus and cinnamon, with all kinds of incense; myrrh and aloes, with all the finest spices. | You are a garden fountain, a well of water flowing fresh from Lebanon. | Arise, north wind! Come, south wind!
blow upon my garden that its perfumes may spread abroad.

B Let my lover come to his garden and eat its choice fruits.

5

G I have come to my garden, my sister, my bride; I gather my myrrh and my spices, I eat my honey and my sweetmeats, I drink my wine and my milk.

D Eat, friends; drink! Drink freely of love!

B A Fruitless Search I was sleeping, but my heart kept vigil; I heard my lover knocking: "Open to me, my sister, my beloved, my dove, my perfect one! For my head is wet with dew, my locks with the moisture of the night." | I have taken off my robe, am I then to put it on? I have bathed my feet, am I then to soil them?

4, 8: The lover is speaking hyperbolically. He does not really mean that the beloved was in all those places and dangers which he describes.

4, 9: My sister: Egyptian love poems also use the terms brother and sister to express deep affection and understanding.

4, 11: Your lips drip honey . . . tongue: your words are sweet as honey.

4, 12: You are chaste.

4 My lover put his hand through the opening; my heart trembled within me, and I grew faint when he spoke. | 5 I rose to open to my lover, with my hands dripping myrrh:
with my fingers dripping choice myrrh upon the fittings of 6 the lock. | I opened to my lover—but my lover had departed, gone. I sought him but I did not find him; I called to him but he did not answer me.
7 The watchmen came upon me as they made their rounds of the city; they struck me, and wounded me, and took my 8 mantle from me, the guardians of the walls. | I adjure you, daughters of Jerusalem, if you find my lover—what shall you tell him?—that I am faint with love.

9 D The Charms of the Lost Lover How does your lover differ from any other, O most beautiful among women? How does your lover differ from any other, that you adjure us so?
10 B My lover is radiant and ruddy; he stands out among 11 thousands. | His head is pure gold; his locks are palm 12 fronds, black as the raven. | His eyes are like doves beside running waters, his teeth would seem bathed in milk, and are 13 set like jewels. | His cheeks are like beds of spice with ripening aromatic herbs. His lips are red blossoms; they drip choice myrrh.
14 His arms are rods of gold adorned with chrysolites. His 15 body is a work of ivory covered with sapphires. | His legs are columns of marble resting on golden bases. His stature is 16 like the trees on Lebanon, imposing as the cedars. | His mouth is sweetness itself; he is all delight. Such is my lover, and such my friend, O daughters of Jerusalem.

6 1 D Discovery Where has your lover gone, O most beautiful among women? Where has your lover gone that we may seek him with you?
2 B My lover has come down to his garden, to the beds of 3 spice, to browse in the garden and to gather lilies. | My lover belongs to me and I to him; he browses among the lilies.

4 G The Charms of the Beloved You are as beautiful as Thersa, my beloved, as lovely as Jerusalem, as awe-inspiring

5, 10-16: Another example of a wasf. See Introduction to the Canticle.
5, 14-15: Just as gold and ivory bedecked with jewels appeal to an aesthete, so does his appearance appeal to her.
6, 4: Thersa: means "city of delight." The comparison is not with 5 as bannered troops. | Turn your eyes from me, for they torment me. Your hair is like a flock of goats streaming down 6 from Galaad. | Your teeth are like a flock of ewes which come up from the washing, all of them big with twins, none 7 of them thin and barren. | Your cheek is like a half-pomegranate behind your veil.

8 There are sixty queens, eighty concubines, and maidens 9 without number— | one alone is my dove, my perfect one, her mother's chosen, the dear one of her parent. The daughters saw her and declared her fortunate, the queens and concubines, and they sang her praises.
10 D Who is this that comes forth like the dawn, as beautiful as the moon, as resplendent as the sun, as awe-inspiring as bannered troops?

11 B Love's Meeting I came down to the nut garden to look at the fresh growth of the valley, to see if the vines were in 12 bloom, if the pomegranates had blossomed. | Before I knew it, my heart had made me the blessed one of my kinswomen.

1 D The Beauty of the Bride Turn, turn, O Sulamite, turn, turn, that we may look at you!
B Why would you look at the Sulamite as at the dance of the two companies?
2 D How beautiful are your feet in sandals, O prince's daughter! Your rounded thighs are like jewels, the handiwork of an the city but with its meaning. A French poet would say, "You are as beautiful as Beaulieu" (beautiful place).

6, 5b-7: Resembles 4, 1-3.

6, 8-9: The wealth of an oriental king, which is expressed by the size of his harem, is contrasted with the wealth of the groom's one true love.

6, 10: The climax of praise for the bride.

6, 11-12: A poetic way of saying that she was living a quiet life (v. 11) when suddenly she was captured by the joy of marriage (v. 12). The Hebrew of v. 12 is not clear.

7, 1: The bride is invited to dance. Perhaps she is addressed "Sulamite" because she came from a village called Sulam. As at the dance of the two companies: this is the usual translation. It is not clear from the Hebrew whether the bride dances or not, but vv. 2-6 indicate that she did dance. Some commentators suggest that this is a sword-dance was. As the bride dances she brandishes a sword.

7, 2-10: The description of the parts of the body begins with the feet, since they are the most obvious in a dance, and move to the head. The description is addressed to the heart, not to the eyes. It would be offensive to the canons of Semitic taste to understand these as the coarse comments of leering spectators.

7, 2b-3: The images of jewels, bowl, wheat, lilies are meant to be artist. | Your navel is a round bowl that should never lack for mixed wine. Your body is a heap of wheat encircled with lilies. | Your breasts are like twin fawns, the young of a gazelle. | Your neck is like a tower of ivory. Your eyes are like the pools in Hesebon by the gate of Bath-rabbim. Your nose is like the tower on Lebanon that looks toward Damascus. | Your head rises like Carmel; your hair is like draperies of purple; a king is held captive in its tresses.

G Love's Desires How beautiful you are, how pleasing, my love, my delight! | Your very figure is like a palm tree, your breasts are like clusters. | I said: I will climb the palm tree, I will take hold of its branches. Now let your breasts be like clusters of the vine and the fragrance of your breath like apples, | and your mouth like an excellent wine—B that flows smoothly for my lover, spreading over the lips and the teeth.

Love's Union I belong to my lover and for me he yearns.
| Come, my lover, let us go forth to the fields and spend the night among the villages. | Let us go early to the vineyards, and see if the vines are in bloom, if the buds have opened, if the pomegranates have blossomed; there will I give you my love. | The mandrakes give forth fragrance, and at our doors are all choice fruits; both fresh and mellowed fruits, my lover, I have kept in store for you.

8

B Oh, that you were my brother, nursed at my mother's breasts! If I met you out of doors, I would kiss you and none would taunt me. | I would lead you, bring you in to the home of my mother. There you would teach me to give you spiced wine to drink, and pomegranate juice. | His left hand is under my head and his right arm embraces me. | I adjure aesthetically gratifying. They are not literal reports. See 5, 14-15 n.

7, 4-8: The oriental comparison focuses on the reaction of one point of the comparison with the reaction of the other. See Introduction to the Canticle for wasfs.

7, 9: The bridegroom desires to possess his bride.

7, 14: The mandrakes: see Gn 30, 14 n.

you, daughters of Jerusalem, by the gazelles and hinds of the field, do not arouse, do not stir up love, before its own time.

5 D Homecoming Who is this coming up from the desert, leaning upon her lover?

G Under the apple tree I awakened you; it was there that your mother conceived you, it was there that your parent conceived.

6 B True Love Set me as a seal on your heart, as a seal on your arm; for stern as death is love, relentless as the nether
7 world is devotion; its flames are a blazing fire. | Deep waters cannot quench love, nor floods sweep it away. Were one to offer all he owns to purchase love, he would be roundly mocked.

8 Chastity and Its Welcome "Our sister is little and she has no breasts as yet. What shall we do for our sister when 9 her courtship begins? | If she is a wall, we will build upon it a silver parapet; if she is a door, we will reinforce it with a cedar plank."

10 I am a wall, and my breasts are like towers. So now in his eyes I have become one to be welcomed.

11 B The Bride and Her Dowry Solomon had a vineyard at Baal-Hamon; he gave over the vineyard to caretakers.

8, 5a: The chorus describes the homecoming of the married couple in fulfillment of the bride's desire in 8, 1-2. See 3, 6 and 6, 10.

8, 5b: The groom may be alluding to the first time they met.

8, 6: The seal could be worn on the arm as here, or on the neck. See Gn 38, 18 n. Stern . . . devotion: true love or devotion is just as unrelenting as death or the other world.

8, 7b: This notion of love rises above the physical and emotional. Since it was in the author's mind from the beginning of the Canticle, it is against the background of this concept that we must understand the wasfs and the previous emotional description. In the Old Testament, love is never lust.

8, 8: The bride reflects on how her brothers reared her from a child to a youthful maiden.

8, 9: If she is a wall: if she protects her virginity, they will reward her with a silver crown. If she is a door: if she shows signs of frivolity, they will take the proper measures of guarding her virginity.

8, 10: Since she remained a virgin, she feels certain of her husband's welcome.

8, 11-12: These enigmatic verses may mean: Solomon can keep his wealth. My wealth is my vineyard, i.e., my bridegroom.

For its fruit one would have to pay a thousand silver pieces.
12 My vineyard is at my own disposal; the thousand pieces ar for you, O Solomon, and two hundred for the caretakers o its fruit.

13 G Life Together O garden-dweller, my friends are listenin for your voice, let me hear it!
14 B Be swift, my lover, like a gazelle or a young stag on th mountains of spices!

8, 13: This obscure verse may mean that the groom is introducing the bride, "garden-dweller," to his friends.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM

INTRODUCTION

About fifty B.C., or sometime during the first century B.C., an anonymous Jewish sage, living perhaps in Alexandria, Egypt, wrote the Book of Wisdom in Greek. He wrote in the person of king Solomon to give his words prestige. This was the last of the Wisdom books series and the last book of the Old Testament to be written. It is the best composed of the Wisdom books. Wisdom has been called not only the deepest Wisdom book (hence, its name), but the deepest book in the Old Testament from the viewpoint of doctrine.

The refined author wrote to strengthen his fellow Jews in Egypt against Hellenistic culture and perhaps against the Egyptian persecution of the Jews. His general message was that true wisdom is not found in the idolatry of Egyptian Hellenism (chs. 13—15), but in God's wisdom, the highway to eternal life. Eternal life or immortality is the greatest contribution of the book. But first a word of background.

The greatest inspired thinkers of Israel from the very beginning of her history had never answered the problem of retribution, a problem so characteristic of the sapiential authors. The question of retribution was: Why do the good suffer and the evil prosper? The traditional answer was that both good and evil men were rewarded and punished in many different earthly ways. There were occasional rays of light illuminating horizons beyond this simple answer, but the author of Wisdom announced the breakthrough with the greatest of ease. The brand of immortality revealed in the Wisdom book is not the immortality of the soul. This was the philosopher's notion of immortality. The inspired author, in the main stream of Israel's tradition, supposes it, even though he would not express it in the same terms. The precise kind of immortality of the Book of Wisdom is a happy immortality which the person was to spend with God (2, 23; 5, 15; 6, 19). This joyful immortality went beyond the traditional gloomy sheol, the abode where the dead gathered for a most inactive existence.

A favorite problem among scholars is: what was the influence of Greek culture, and especially Greek philosophy, on this Jewish author? It is true that the author found better formulas in the current eclectic Greek philosophy then dominated by Stoicism, to express current ideas in Israel, e.g., Providence and conscience. Greek language also aided him in expressing traditional notions, e.g., omniscience and omnipresence, more precisely and more deeply.

However, the verdict of the scholars is that these influences are superficial, for no deep doctrine came from the Greeks, not even immortality. The assimilation of Greek thought was incomplete, e.g., sometimes the soul is opposed to the body according to Plato (Wis 9, 15), and sometimes the soul or the body may designate the whole living person (Wis 1, 4), which is according to typical Hebrew usage. Without denying Greek stimuli, the teachings of Wisdom find their natural home in the Old Testament.

The Protestants today follow the tradition of the Jews who never accepted the Book of Wisdom as "Scripture."

Although Wisdom is never quoted in the New Testament, it has influenced Sts. Paul and John, notably the latter, in their teaching about Christ. We shall indicate some of these influences in the annotations.

The Roman liturgy makes extensive use of Wisdom, especially in the feasts of the saints.

Main divisions of the Book of Wisdom are:

1. Reward of Justice, 1, 1—6, 21
2. Praise of Wisdom by Solomon, 6, 22—11, 1
3. Special Providence of God during the Exodus, 11, 2—12, 27
4. Folly and Shame of Idolatry, 13, 1—15, 17
5. Providence during the Exodus, 15, 18—19, 22

I. THE REWARD OF JUSTICE

1

1 Justice Is the Key to Life Love justice, you who judge the earth; think of the Lord in goodness, and seek him in 2 integrity of heart; | because he is found by those who test him not, and he manifests himself to those who do not disbelieve 3 him. | For perverse counsels separate a man from God, and 4 his power, put to the proof, rebukes the foolhardy; | because into a soul that plots evil wisdom enters not, nor dwells she in 5 body under debt of sin. | For the holy spirit of discipline flees deceit and withdraws from senseless counsels; and when wicked 6 ness occurs it is rebuked. | For wisdom is a kindly spirit, yet she acquits not the blasphemer of his guilty lips; because God is the witness of his inmost self and the sure observer of his

1, 1: Justice: this word means the divine will as expressed through the Mosaic Law and conscience. You who judge the earth: the author speaks in the name of Solomon (9, 7-8) as he addresses his royal colleagues right from the beginning in v. 1, and explicitly in 6, 1. The author is really telling his fellow Jews to practice "justice" in spite of their pagan surroundings. Seek him: this is a constant theme among the wise men and the prophets. It means that one should commit himself totally to God in daily living. The New Testament deepens this doctrine in "seeking the Kingdom" (Mt 6, 33).

1, 2: To test God means to disobey Him.

1, 3-4: His power: God's power. Rebukes the foolhardy: the fool or foolhardy are those who do not live according to God's laws. God rebukes them by withdrawing His wisdom from them.

1, 5: Discipline: a frequent synonym for wisdom. From senseless counsels: of the foolhardy of v. 3. When wickedness occurs it is rebuked: the meaning is obscure.

1, 6: A kindly spirit: see 7, 23.

7 heart and the listener to his tongue. | For the spirit of the Lord fills the world, is all-embracing, and knows man's utterance. | 8 Therefore no one who speaks wickedly can go unnoticed, nor 9 will chastising condemnation pass him by. | For the devices of the wicked man shall be scrutinized, and the sound of his words shall reach the Lord, for the chastisement of his transgressions; 10 | because a jealous ear hearkens to everything, and discordant
11 grumblings are no secret. | Therefore guard against profitless grumbling, and from calumny withhold your tongues; for a stealthy utterance does not go unpunished, and a lying mouth 12 slays the soul. | Court not death by your erring way of life, nor draw to yourselves destruction by the works of your hands. | 13 Because God did not make death, nor does he rejoice in the 14 destruction of the living. | For he fashioned all things that they might have being; and the creatures of the world are wholesome, and there is not a destructive drug among them nor any 15 domain of the nether world on earth, | for justice is immortal. | 16 It was the wicked who with hands and words invited death, considered it a friend and pined for it; they made a covenant with it, because they deserve to be in its possession.

1 The Wicked Reject Immortality and Justice alike For they said among themselves, thinking not aright: "Brief and troublous is our lifetime; neither is there any remedy for man's dying, nor is anyone known to have come back from the nether 2 world. | For haphazard were we born, and hereafter we shall be as though we had not been; because the breath in our nostrils is a smoke and reason is a spark at the beating of our 3 hearts, | and when this is quenched, our body will be ashes

1, 7: Since God is present everywhere, He knows every word spoken by men. The Introit of Pentecost applies this verse to the diffusion of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles and through them to the whole world (see Acts 2, 2-4). Neither here nor any place in the Old Testament do the sacred writers speak of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity. They personify God's wisdom but we had to wait for the New Testament writers to personalize the Divine Wisdom.

1, 10: A jealous ear: of God.

1, 11: Do not complain against God's way of governing the world.

1, 13: God did not make death: sin caused physical and spiritual death.

1, 14: Nor any domain . . . earth: there is no power of death ruling the world.

1, 15: He who practices justice (1, 1) will be immortal.

1, 16: The wicked: apostate Jews.

2, 2: Reason . . . hearts: this alludes to some Greek philosophers who believed that thought originated from the heart.

4 and our spirit will be poured abroad like unresisting air. | Ever our name will be forgotten in time, and no one will recall our deeds. So our life will pass away like the traces of a cloud, and will be dispersed like a mist pursued by the sun's rays and 5 overpowered by its heat. | For our lifetime is the passing of a shadow; and our dying cannot be deferred because it is fixed 6 with a seal; and no one returns. | Come, therefore, let us enjoy the good things that are real, and use the freshness of creation 7 avidly. | Let us have our fill of costly wine and perfumes, and 8 let no springtime blossom pass us by. | Let us crown ourselves 9 with rosebuds ere they wither; let no meadow be free from our wantonness. Everywhere let us leave tokens of our rejoicing 10 for this our portion is, and this our lot. | Let us oppress the needy just man; let us neither spare the widow nor revere the 11 old man for his hair grown white with time. | But let our strength be our norm of justice; for weakness proves itself 12 worthless. | Let us beset the just one, because he is obnoxious to us; he sets himself against our doings, reproaches us for transgressions of the Law and charges us with violations of our 13 training. | He professes to have knowledge of God and styles
14 himself a child of the Lord. | To us he is the censure of our 15 thoughts; merely to see him is a hardship for us, | because his 16 life is not like other men's, and different are his ways. | He judges us debased; he holds aloof from our paths as from things impure. He calls blest the destiny of the just and boasts 17 that God is his Father. | Let us see whether his words be true;
18 let us find out what will happen to him. | For if the just one be the son of God, he will defend him and deliver him from the 19 hand of his foes. | With revilement and torture let us put him to the test that we may have proof of his gentleness and try 20 his patience. | Let us condemn him to a shameful death; for according to his own words, God will take care of him."

21 God's Plan Brings the Just to Glory after Trial These were their thoughts, but they erred; for their wickedness blinded 22 them, | and they knew not the hidden counsels of God; neither did they count on a recompense of holiness nor discern the 23 innocent souls' reward. | For God formed man to be imperisha-
24 ble; the image of his own nature he made him. | But by the

2, 12-20: The author is making the Jewish apostates satirize the faithful Jews of Alexandria. However, the text can be accommodated to Christ during His life and especially to His dying on the cross.

2, 22: Hidden counsels of God: about man's destiny.

2, 24: The devil was envious of man's privileges.

envy of the devil, death entered the world, and they who are in his possession experience it.

3 1 But the souls of the just are in the hand of God, and no 2 torment shall touch them. | They seemed, in the view of the foolish, to be dead; and their passing away was judged an 3 affliction | and their going forth from us, utter destruction.
4 But they are in peace. | For if before men, indeed, they be punished, yet is their hope full of immortality; | chastised a little, they shall be greatly blessed, because God tried them and 6 found them worthy of himself. | As gold in the furnace, he proved them, and as sacrificial offerings he took them to him-7 self. | In the time of their visitation they shall shine, and shall 8 dart about as sparks through stubble; | they shall judge nations and rule over peoples, and the Lord shall be their King forever. | 9 Those who trust in him shall understand truth, and the faithful shall abide with him in love: because grace and mercy are with his chosen ones.

10 Even on Earth, the Just and Not the Wicked Are Blessed But the wicked shall receive a punishment to match their thoughts, since they neglected justice and forsook the Lord. | 11 For he who despises wisdom and instruction is doomed. Vain is their hope, fruitless are their labors, and worthless are their 12 works. | Their wives are foolish and their children wicked;
13 accursed is their brood. | Yes, blessed is she who, childless and undefiled, knew not transgression of the marriage bed; she 14 shall bear fruit at the visitation of souls. | So also the eunuch whose hand wrought no misdeed, who held no wicked thoughts against the Lord—for he shall be given fidelity's choice reward and a more gratifying heritage in the Lord's temple. | 15 For the fruit of noble struggles is a glorious one; and unfailing 16 is the root of understanding. | But the children of adulterers will remain without issue, and the progeny of an unlawful 3, 1: Hand of God: under His protection.

3, 3: Peace: enjoying everything in intimacy with God.
3, 4: If . . . be punished: through earthly trials. Immortality: this is the first appearance of this word in the Old Testament.
3, 5: God tried them: a frequent Old Testament idea which finds its most perfect expression in Heb 12, 11.
3, 7: In the time of their visitation: at the last judgment.
3, 7b: A symbol of Israel victorious over her enemies.
3, 13: At the visitation of souls: at judgment time.
3, 14: In the Lord's temple: in heaven.

17 bed will disappear. | For should they attain long life, they will be held in no esteem, and dishonored will their old age be at 18 last; while should they die abruptly, they have no hope nor 19 comfort in the day of scrutiny; | for dire is the end of the wicked generation.

4

1 Better is childlessness with virtue; for immortal is its memory: 2 because both by God is it acknowledged, and by men. | When it is present men imitate it, and they long for it when it is gone; and forever it marches crowned in triumph, victorious in un-3 sullied deeds of valor. | But the numerous progeny of the wicked shall be of no avail; their spurious offshoots shall not 4 strike deep root nor take firm hold. | For even though their branches flourish for a time, they are unsteady and shall be rocked by the wind and, by the violence of the winds, uprooted; 5 | their twigs shall be broken off untimely, and their fruit be 6 useless, unripe for eating, and fit for nothing. | For children born of lawless unions give evidence of the wickedness of their 7 parents, when they are examined. | But the just man, though
8 he die early, shall be at rest. | For the age that is honorable comes not with the passing of time, nor can it be measured in 9 terms of years. | Rather, understanding is the hoary crown for 10 men, and an unsullied life, the attainment of old age. | He who pleased God was loved; he who lived among sinners was trans-11 ported— | snatched away, lest wickedness pervert his mind or 12 deceit beguile his soul; | for the witchery of paltry things obscures what is right and the whirl of desire transforms the 13 innocent mind. | Having become perfect in a short while, he 14 reached the fullness of a long career; | for his soul was pleasing to the Lord, therefore he sped him out of the midst of wickedness. But the people saw and did not understand; nor did they 15 take this into account; | that God's grace and mercy are with 16 his holy ones and his care is with his elect. | Yes, the just man dead condemns the sinful who live, and youth swiftly com-

4, 1: See Sir 16, 3.

4, 6: When they are examined: may mean when they are examined by God on Judgment Day.

4, 7: Though he die early: the traditional doctrine in the Old Testament was that a long life on earth was a reward of a holy life, and a premature death was a sign of some sort of sin. This is the first time in the Old Testament that a satisfactory answer is given to this problem. At rest: means same as peace. See 3, 3 n.

4, 10: Transported: this description alludes to Henoch in Gn 5, 24; Sir 44, 16.

4, 16: Condemns the sinful who live: because the just man lived virtuously.

pleted condemns the many years of the wicked man grown old.
17 | For they see the death of the wise man and do not understand what the Lord intended for him, or why he made him secure. | 18 They see, and hold him in contempt; but the Lord laughs them 19 to scorn. | And they shall afterward become dishonored corpses and an unceasing mockery among the dead. For he shall strike them down speechless and prostrate and rock them to their foundations; they shall be utterly laid waste and shall be in grief and their memory shall perish.

20 The Final Judgment of the Wicked Fearful shall they come, at the counting up of their misdeeds, and their transgressions shall convict them to their face.

5

1 Then shall the just one with great assurance stand before his 2 oppressors who set at nought his labors. | Seeing this, they shall be shaken with dreadful fear, and amazed at the unlooked-for 3 salvation. | They shall say among themselves, rueful and groaning through anguish of spirit: "This is he whom once we held 4 as a laughingstock and as a type for mockery, | fools that we were! His life we deemed madness, and his death dishonored. | 5 See how he is accounted among the sons of God; how his lot is 6 with the saints! | We, then, have strayed from the way of truth, and the light of justice did not shine for us, and the sun did 7 not rise for us. | We had our fill of the ways of mischief and of ruin; we journeyed through impassable deserts, but the way 8 of the Lord we knew not. | What did our pride avail us? What 9 have wealth and its boastfulness afforded us? | All of them 10 passed like a shadow and like a fleeting rumor; | like a ship traversing the heaving water, of which, when it has passed, no 11 trace can be found, no path of its keel in the waves. | Or like a bird flying through the air; no evidence of its course is to be 4, 20: At the counting up of their misdeeds: by God.

4, 20—5, 2: Compare the General Judgment in Mt 25, 31-46, which pivots on Christ's pronouncement of the sentence, and the present description that focuses on the state of the sinners' souls.

5, 3-13: The confession of the condemned at the General Judgment is a retraction of their proposals described in 2, 1-20.

by the rushing force of speeding wings, is traversed: and afte together again so that none discerns the way it went through-

14 | Yes, the hope of the wicked is like thistledown borne on th wind, and like fine, tempest-driven foam; like smoke scattere by the wind, and like the passing memory of the nomad camp is their recompense, and the thought of them is with the Mo 16 High. | Therefore shall they receive the splendid crown, th beauteous diadem, from the hand of the Lord—for he sha shelter them with his right hand, and protect them with h

20 invincible rectitude as a shield | and whet his sudden anger fo a sword, and the universe shall war with him against the foo

The water of the sea shall be enraged against them and th

1 To the Mighty, Wisdom Offers True Kingship Hear therefore, kings, and understand; learn, you magistrate 2 of the earth's expanse! | Hearken, you who rule the multitud
3 and lord it over throngs of peoples! | Because authority wa

5, 15-16: This is a brief description of the just which was treate more at length in 3, 1-9.

5, 15: In contrast to the impious in v. 13, the spiritual life of th just begins on earth and never ends.

5, 17-23: The author makes God vest like a warrior ready fo combat to describe how He will punish the condemned. The imager is called apocalyptic, i.e., pertaining to the end.

5, 21: The storm is a traditional image of God's intervention. Se

6, 1: See 1, 1 n.

given you by the Lord and sovereignty by the Most High, who 4 shall probe your works and scrutinize your counsels! | Because, though you were ministers of his kingdom, you judged not rightly, and did not keep the Law, nor walk according to the 5 will of God, | terribly and swiftly shall he come against you,
6 because judgment is stern for the exalted— | for the lowly may be pardoned out of mercy but the mighty shall be mightily 7 put to the test. | For the Lord of all shows no partiality, nor does he fear greatness, because he himself made the great as 8 as well as the small, and he provides for all alike; but for the 9 powerful a rigorous scrutiny impends. | To you, therefore, O princes, are my words addressed that you may learn wisdom 10 and that you may not sin. | For those who keep the holy precepts hallowed shall be found holy, and those learned in them will 11 have ready a response. | Desire therefore my words; long for them and you shall be instructed.

12 Resplendent and unfading is Wisdom, and she is readily perceived by those who love her, and found by those who seek 13 her. | She hastens to make herself known in anticipation of 14 men's desire. | He who watches for her at dawn shall not be 15 disappointed, for he shall find her sitting by his gate. | For taking thought of her is the perfection of prudence, and he who 16 for her sake keeps vigil shall quickly be free from care; | because she makes her own rounds, seeking those worthy of her, and graciously appears to them in the ways, and meets them with 17 all solicitude. | For the first step toward discipline is a very earnest desire for her; then, care for discipline is love of her; | 18 love means the keeping of her laws; to observe her laws is the 19 basis for incorruptibility; | and incorruptibility makes one close
20 to God; | thus the desire for Wisdom leads up to a kingdom.
21 | If, then, you find pleasure in throne and scepter, you princes of the peoples, honor Wisdom, that you may reign forever.

II. PRAISE OF WISDOM BY SOLOMON

22 Solomon as the Model Lover of Wisdom Now what Wisdom is, and how she came to be, I shall relate; and I shall hide no secrets from you, but from the very beginning I shall search out and bring to light knowledge of her, nor shall I

6, 4: The Law: since the author is addressing pagan kings, he means the natural law.

6, 14: To watch at dawn is a biblical expression meaning to seek eagerly. By his gate: we would say at his doorstep.

6, 18: Incorruptibility: the blissful immortality of the saved.

6, 20: A kingdom: of the elect, spoken of in 3, 7-8.

23 diverge from the truth. | Neither shall I admit consuming jealousy to my company, because that can have no fellowship 24 with Wisdom. | A great number of wise men is the safety of 25 the world, and a prudent king, the stability of his people; | so take instruction from my words, to your profit.

1 I too am a mortal man, like all the rest, and a descendant of the first man formed of earth. And in my mother's womb I was 2 molded into flesh | in a ten-months' period—body and blood, from the seed of man, and the pleasure that accompanies mar-3 riage. | And I too, when born, inhaled the common air, and fell upon the kindred earth; wailing, I uttered that first sound 4 common to all. | In swaddling clothes and with constant care
5 I was nurtured. | For no king has any different origin or birth; | 6 but one is the entry into life for all; and in one same way they 7 leave it. | Therefore I prayed, and prudence was given me;
8 I pleaded, and the spirit of Wisdom came to me. | I preferred her to scepter and throne, and deemed riches nothing in com-9 parison with her. | Nor did I liken any priceless gem to her; because all gold, in view of her, is a little sand, and before her 10 silver is to be accounted mire. | Beyond health and comeliness
I loved her, and I chose to have her rather than the light, because 11 the splendor of her never yields to sleep. | Yet all good things together came to me in her company, and countless riches at her 12 hands; | and I rejoiced in them all, because Wisdom is their leader, though I had not known that she is the mother of these.
13 | Simply I learned about her, and ungrudgingly do I share
14 her riches I do not hide away; | for to men she is an unfailing treasure; those who gain this treasure win the friendship of God, to whom the gifts they have from discipline commend them.

15 Nature and Incomparable Dignity of Wisdom Now God grant I speak suitably and value these endowments at their worth: for he is the guide of Wisdom and the director of 16 the wise. | For both we and our words are in his hand, as well

6, 23: Consuming jealousy: this may allude to the members of the mystery religions and some philosophers who limited their secrets to the initiated.

7, 1: Mortal man: the author, assuming to be king Solomon, may be alluding to the Hellenistic kings who claimed to be divine. Of the first man: see Gn 2, 7.

17 as all prudence and knowledge of crafts. | For he gave me sound knowledge of existing things, that I might know the organization of the universe and the forces of its elements, | 18 the beginning and the end and the midpoint of times, the changes 19 in the sun's course and the variations of the seasons. | Cycles 20 of years, positions of the stars. | natures of animals, tempers of beasts, powers of the winds and thoughts of men, uses of 21 plants and virtues of roots— | such things as are secret I 22 learned, and such as are plain; | for Wisdom, the artificer of all, taught me. For in her is a spirit intelligent, holy, unique, manifold, subtle, agile, clear, unstained, certain, not baneful, 23 loving the good, keen, unhampered, beneficent, | kindly, firm, secure, tranquil, all-powerful, all-seeing, and pervading all 24 spirits, though they be intelligent, pure and very subtle. | For Wisdom is mobile beyond all motion, and she penetrates and 25 pervades all things by reason of her purity. | For she is an aura of the might of God and a pure effusion of the glory of the 26 Almighty; therefore nought that is sullied enters into her. | For she is the refulgence of eternal light, the spotless mirror of the 27 power of God, the image of his goodness. | And she, who is one, can do all things, and renews everything while herself perduring; and passing into holy souls from age to age, she 28 produces friends of God and prophets. | For there is nought 29 God loves, be it not one who dwells with Wisdom. | For she is fairer than the sun and surpasses every constellation of the 30 stars. Compared to light, she takes precedence; | for that, indeed, night supplants, but wickedness prevails not over Wisdom.

8

1 Indeed, she reaches from end to end mightily and governs all things well.

7, 17-21: In order to say that Hellenistic culture does not offer more than biblical culture, the author attributes to Solomon the knowledge of all the Hellenistic sciences of his day.

7, 22-30: A personification of God's wisdom in twenty-one attributes, which number symbolizes perfection (vv. 22-23 ending with "all seeing"). See 1, 7 n.

7, 26: Light: the Old Testament never says that God is "the light" but light accompanies God. It is only in the New Testament that God is called "the light," e.g., 1 Jn 1, 5.

7, 27: Just as God's wisdom produces friends, so will Jesus call His disciples "friends." See Jn 15, 14-15.

8, 1: From end to end: of the heavens. Governs: the expression comes from Stoic philosophy, but the idea of God ruling the world comes from other parts of the Bible.

2 Fruits of Wisdom for Human Life Her I loved and sought after from my youth; I sought to take her for my bride 3 and was enamored of her beauty. | She adds to nobility the splendor of companionship with God; even the Lord of all loves 4 her. | For she is instructress in the understanding of God, the 5 selector of his works. | And if riches be a desirable possession in life, what is more rich than Wisdom, who produces all things?
6 And if prudence renders service, who in the world is a better 7 craftsman than she? | Or if one loves justice, the fruits of her works are virtues; for she teaches moderation and prudence, justice and fortitude, and nothing in life is more useful for men than 8 these. | Or again, if one yearns for copious learning, she knows the things of old, and infers those yet to come. She understands the turns of phrases and the solutions of riddles; signs and wonders she knows in advance and the outcome of times and 9 ages. | So I determined to draw her into fellowship, knowing that she would be my counselor while all was well, and my 10 comfort in care and grief. | For her sake I should have glory among the masses, and esteem from the elders, though I be a 11 youth. | I should become keen in judgment, and should be a 12 marvel before rulers. | They would abide my silence and attend my utterance; and as I spoke on further, they would place 13 their hands upon their mouths. | For her sake I should have immortality and leave to those after me an everlasting memory. |
14 I should govern peoples, and nations would be my subjects; | 15 terrible princes, hearing of me, would be afraid. In the assembly 16 I should appear noble, and in war courageous. | Within my dwelling, I should take my repose beside her; for association with her involves no bitterness and living with her no grief, but rather joy and gladness.

17 Solomon Seeks Wisdom in Prayer to God Thinking thus within myself, and reflecting in my heart that there is 18 immortality in kinship with Wisdom, | and good pleasure in 8, 3-18: There is a resemblance between this passage and the myth of Hercules, recounted by Xenophon. Scholars dispute about the dependency of the biblical account on the Greek account.

8, 4: Instructress: this term is borrowed from the pagan mystery religions. Selector of his works: in the creation of the world.

8, 7: Moderation and prudence, justice and fortitude: these are Wisdom's four virtues. The author uses what are now known in Catholic theology as the four cardinal virtues to express the general moral attitudes taught in the Wisdom books.

her friendship, and unfailing riches in the works of her hands, and that in frequenting her society there is prudence, and fair renown in sharing her discourses, I went about seeking to take 19 her for my own. | Now, I was a well-favored child, and I 20 came by a noble nature; | or rather, being noble, I attained an 21 unsullied body. | And knowing that I could not otherwise possess her except God gave it—and this, too, was prudence, to know whose is the gift—I went to the Lord and besought him, and said with all my heart:

1 God of my fathers, Lord of mercy, you who have made all 2 things by your word | and in your wisdom have established 3 man to rule the creatures produced by you, | to govern the world in holiness and justice, and to render judgment in in-4 tegrity of heart: | give me Wisdom, the attendant at your 5 throne, and reject me not from among your children; | for I am your servant, the son of your handmaid, a man weak and short-lived and lacking in comprehension of judgment and of 6 laws. | Indeed, though one be perfect among the sons of men, if Wisdom, who comes from you, be not with him, he shall be 7 held in no esteem. | You have chosen me king over your people 8 and magistrate for your sons and daughters. | You have bid me build a temple on your holy mountain and an altar in the city that is your dwelling place, a copy of the holy tabernacle which 9 you had established from of old. | Now with you is Wisdom, who knows your works and was present when you made the world; who understands what is pleasing in your eyes and what 10 is conformable with your commands. | Send her forth from your holy heavens and from your glorious throne dispatch her that she may be with me and work with me, that I may know 11 what is pleasing to you. | For she knows and understands all things, and will guide me discreetly in my affairs and safeguard 12 me by her glory; | thus my deeds will be acceptable, and I shall judge your people justly and be worthy of my father's throne. | 13 For what man knows God's counsel, or who can conceive what 14 the Lord intends? | For the deliberations of mortals are timid,
15 and unsure are our plans. | For the corruptible body burdens wicked who were being destroyed, when he fled as fire descend

10 served her. | She, when the just man fled from his brother's anger, guided him in direct ways, showed him the kingdom of God and gave him knowledge of holy things; she prospered him in his labors and made abundant the fruit of his works, |
11 stood by him against the greed of his defrauders, and enriched
12 him; | she preserved him from foes, and secured him against ambush, and she gave him the prize for his stern struggle that he might recognize that devotion to God is mightier than all
13 else. | She did not abandon the just man when he was sold, but
14 delivered him from sin. | She went down with him into the dungeon, and did not desert him in his bonds, until she brought him the scepter of royalty and authority over his oppressors, showed those who had defamed him false, and gave him eternal

18 by night. | She took them across the Red Sea and brought them
19 through the deep waters— | but their enemies she overwhelmed, 20 and cast them up from the bottom of the depths. | Therefore the just despoiled the wicked; and they sang, O Lord, your holy addresses God directly in this section. Water . . . stone: see Ex 17, 1-11, 5: Things: i.e., water. Vv. 6-7 will illustrate that the water the Nile punished the Egyptians and the miraculous water from t

11, 6-7: Slaying of infants: differently from Ex 7, 14-24, the auth makes the turning of the Nile water into blood ("the perennial riv . . . impure blood") a punishment for the decree of Ex 1, 15ff.

11, 8: How you . . . adversaries: the author interprets Ex 7, 24 mean that the Egyptians were suffering from thirst for a long time.

11, 9: They . . . tried: by thirsting in the desert, the Israelite learned a lesson from the punishment given to the Egyptians, t "wicked."

11, 10-13: The translators have conjectured that the original readin was v. 11 and then v. 10.

11, 11-12: Both those afar off . . . close by: the Egyptians wh were close to the Israelites suffered from the plagues, and the Egyptia who were "afar off" from the departed Israelites suffered perhaps the remembrance of these plagues and by the contrast of the Egyptian lot with that of the Israelites who were accompanied by God's wonder in the desert. The author poetically supposes that the Egyptians knew of these wonders.

15 God's Mercy Shown even in Punishment And in return for their senseless, wicked thoughts, which misled them into worshiping dumb serpents and worthless insects, you sent upon 16 them swarms of dumb creatures for vengeance; | that they might recognize that a man is punished by the very things 17 through which he sins. | For not without means was your almighty hand, that had fashioned the universe from formless matter, to send upon them a drove of bears or fierce lions, | 18 or new-created, wrathful, unknown beasts to breathe forth fiery breath, or pour out roaring smoke, or flash terrible sparks 19 from their eyes. | Not only could these attack and completely destroy them; even their frightful appearance itself could slay. | 20 Even without these, they could have been killed at a single blast, pursued by retribution and winnowed out by your mighty spirit; but you have disposed all things by measure and number 21 and weight. | For with you great strength abides always; who 22 can resist the might of your arm? | Indeed, before you the whole universe is as a grain from a balance, or a drop of 23 morning dew come down upon the earth. | But you have mercy on all, because you can do all things; and you overlook the 24 sins of men that they may repent. | For you love all things that are and loathe nothing that you have made; for what you 25 hated, you would not have fashioned. | And how could a thing remain, unless you willed it; or be preserved, had it not 26 been called forth by you? | But you spare all things, because 12,1 they are yours, O Lord and lover of souls, | for your imperishable spirit is in all things!

12

2 Therefore you rebuke offenders little by little, warn them, and remind them of the sins they are committing, that they may abandon their wickedness and believe in you, O Lord!

Punishment of the Chanaanites an Example of Mercy

3,4 For, truly, the ancient inhabitants of your holy land, | whom you hated for deeds most odious—works of witchcraft and 5 impious sacrifices; | a cannibal feast of human flesh and of blood, from the midst of . . . —these merciless murderers of 11, 15: Frogs of Ex 8, 1-2.

11, 16: The same idea reappears in 12, 23; 16, 1 (see 16, 1 n), and in many other biblical passages.

11, 17: From formless matter: the expression may come from Platonic philosophy, but the biblical author is not teaching the eternity of matter but alluding to organization from a chaotic mass. See Gn 1, 1.

12, 5: A cannibal feast: there is no proof that the Chanaanites

6 children, | and parents who took with their own hands defenseless lives, you willed to destroy by the hands of our fathers, | 7 that the land that is dearest of all to you might receive a worthy 8 colony of God's children. | But even on these, as they were men, you took pity, and sent wasps as forerunners of your army that 9 they might exterminate them by degrees. | Not that you could not have had the wicked vanquished in battle by the just, or wiped out at once by terrible beasts or by one decisive word; | 10 but condemning them bit by bit, you gave them space for repentance. You were not unaware that their race was wicked and their malice ingrained, and that their dispositions would 11 never change; | for they were a race accursed from the beginning. Neither out of fear for anyone did you grant amnesty for 12 their sins. | For who can say to you, "What have you done?" or who can oppose your decree? Or when peoples perish, who can challenge you, their maker; or who can come into your 13 presence as vindicator of unjust men? | For neither is there any god besides you who have the care of all, that you need show 14 you have not unjustly condemned; | nor can any king or prince 15 confront you on behalf of those you have punished. | But as you are just, you govern all things justly; you regard it as unworthy of your power to punish one who has incurred no 16 blame. | For your might is the source of justice; your mastery 17 over all things makes you spare them all. | For you show your might when the perfection of your power is disbelieved; and 18 in those who know you, you rebuke temerity. | But though you have might at your disposal, you judge with clemency, and with much lenience you govern us; for power, whenever you 19 will, attends you. | And you taught your people, by these deeds, that those who are just must be kind; and you gave your sons good ground for hope that you would permit repentance for 20 their sins. | For these were enemies of your servants, doomed to death; yet, while you punished them with such solicitude and pleading, granting time and opportunity to abandon 21 wickedness, | with what exactitude you judged your sons, to whose fathers you gave the sworn covenants of goodly promises!
22 | Us, therefore, you chastise, and our enemies with a thousand blows you punish, that we may think earnestly of your goodness when we judge, and, when being judged, may look for mercy.

23 Animals Punish the Egyptians Hence those unjust also, who lived a life of folly, you tormented through their own 24 abominations. | For they went far astray in the paths of error, taking for gods the worthless and disgusting among beasts, 25 deceived like senseless infants. | Therefore as though upon unreasoning children, you sent your judgment on them as a 26 mockery; | but they who took no heed of punishment which was but child's play were to experience a condemnation worthy 27 of God. | For in the things through which they suffered distress, since they were tortured by the very things they deemed gods, they saw and recognized the true God whom before they had refused to know; with this, their final condemnation came upon them.

IV. THE FOLLY AND SHAME OF IDOLATRY

13

1 Creatures Should Lead Men to God For all men were by nature foolish who were in ignorance of God, and who from the good things seen did not succeed in knowing him who is, 2 and from studying the works did not discern the artisan; | but either fire, or wind, or the swift air, or the circuit of the stars, or the mighty water, or the luminaries of heaven, the governors 3 of the world, they considered gods. | Now if out of joy in their beauty they thought them gods, let them know how far more excellent is the Lord than these; for the original source of beauty 4 fashioned them. | Or if they were struck by their might and energy, let them from these things realize how much more 5 powerful is he who made them. | For from the greatness and the beauty of created things their original author, by analogy, 6 is seen. | But yet, for these the blame is less; for they indeed have gone astray perhaps, though they seek God and wish to 7 find him. | For they search busily among his works, but are distracted by what they see, because the things seen are fair. | 8.9 But again, not even these are pardonable. | For if they so far succeeded in knowledge that they could speculate about the world, how did they not more quickly find its Lord?

12, 27: Their final condemnation: the death of the oldest sons and the defeat of the army at the Red Sea.

13, 5: Rom 1, 19-20, makes this a classic.

Wooden Idols Are a Perversion of God's Creation

10 But doomed are they, and in dead things are their hopes, who termed gods the works of human hands: gold and silver, the product of art, and likenesses of beasts, or useless stone, the 11 work of an ancient hand. | A carpenter may saw out a suitable tree and skillfully scrape off all its bark, and deftly plying his 12 art, produce something fit for daily use, | and use up the refuse from his handiwork in preparing his food, and have his fill; | 13 then the good-for-nothing refuse from these remnants, crooked wood grown full of knots, he takes and carves to occupy his spare time. This wood he models with listless skill, and patterns 14 it on the image of a man | or makes it resemble some worthless beast. When he has daubed it with red and crimsoned its surface 15 with red stain, and daubed over every blemish in it, | he makes a fitting shrine for it and puts it on the wall, fastening it with a 16 nail. | Thus lest it fall down he provides for it, knowing that it cannot help itself; for, truly, it is an image and needs help. | 17 But when he prays about his goods or marriage or children, he is not ashamed to address the thing without a soul. And for 18 vigor he invokes the powerless; | and for life he entreats the dead; and for aid he beseeches the wholly incompetent, and 19 about travel, something that cannot even walk. | And for profit in business and success with his hands he asks facility of a thing with hands completely inert.

14

1 Again, one preparing for a voyage and about to traverse the wild waves cries out to wood more unsound than the boat that 2 bears him. | For the urge for profits devised this latter, and 3 Wisdom the artificer constructed it, | but your providence, O
Father! guides it, for you have furnished even in the sea a road, 4 and through the waves a steady path, | showing that you can save from any danger, so that even one without skill may 5 embark. | But you will that the products of your Wisdom be not idle; therefore men trust their lives even to frailest wood, 6 and have been safe crossing the surge on a raft. | For of old, when the proud giants were being destroyed, the hope of the universe, who took refuge on a raft, left to the world a future 7 for his race, under the guidance of your hand. | For blest is the 13, 10ff: The sarcastic polemic against idolatry was also a commonplace for the Greek philosophers.

14, 6: Proud giants: see Gn 6, 1-4 n.

14, 7: For blest is the wood through which justice is fulfilled: several Fathers of the Church accommodated the wood of Noe's ark to the cross of Jesus.

8 wood through which justice is fulfilled; | but the handmade idol is accursed, and its maker as well: he for having produced it, and it, because though corruptible, it was termed a god. |
9 Equally odious to God are the evildoer and his evil deed; |
10 and the thing made shall be punished with its contriver. | 11 Therefore upon even the idols of the nations shall a visitation come, since they have become abominable amid God's works, snares for the souls of men and a trap for the feet of the senseless.

12 The Folly of Idolatry Leads to Moral Disorders For the source of wantonness is preoccupation with idols; and their 13 invention was a corruption of life. | For in the beginning they 14 were not, nor shall they continue forever; | for by the vanity of men they came into the world, and therefore a sudden end is 15 planned for them. | For a father, afflicted with untimely mourning, made an image of the child so quickly taken from him, and now honored as a god what was formerly a dead man and 16 handed down to his subjects mysteries and sacrifices. | Then, in time, the impious practice gained strength and was observed as law, and graven things were worshiped by princely decrees. | 17 Men who lived so far away that they could not honor him in his presence copied the appearance of the distant king and made a public image of him they wished to honor, out of zeal 18 to flatter him when absent, as though present. | And to promote this observance among those to whom it was strange, the 19 artisan's ambition provided a stimulus. | For he, mayhap in his determination to please the ruler, labored over the likeness to 20 the best of his skill; | and the masses, drawn by the charm of the workmanship, soon thought he should be worshiped who 21 shortly before was honored as a man. | And this became a snare for mankind, that men enslaved to either grief or tyranny conferred the incommunicable Name on stocks and stones. | 22 Then it was not enough for them to err in their knowledge of God; but even though they live in a great war of ignorance, they 23 call such evils peace. | For while they celebrate either child-24 slaying sacrifices or clandestine mysteries, or frenzied carousals in unheard-of rites, | they no longer safeguard either lives or pure wedlock; but each either waylays and kills his neighbor, or 25 aggrieves him by adultery. | And all is confusion—blood and 14, 12: Idolatry and impurity went hand in hand.

14, 13: For in the beginning: the authors of Genesis and Wisdom made monotheism precede polytheism.

14, 15: There were many such fables in classical literature, e.g., according to Lactantius, Cicero did the same for his daughter Tullia.

murder, theft and guile, corruption, faithlessness, turmoil, per-26 jury, | disturbance of good men, neglect of gratitude, besmirch-ing of souls, unnatural lust, disorder in marriage, adultery and 27 shamelessness. | For the worship of infamous idols is the reason 28 and source and extremity of all evil. | For they either go mad with enjoyment, or prophesy lies, or live lawlessly or lightly 29 forswear themselves. | For as their trust is in soulless idols, they 30 expect no harm from their false oaths. | But on both counts shall justice overtake them: because they thought ill of God and devoted themselves to idols, and because they deliberately swore 31 false oaths, despising piety. | For not the might of those invoked but the retribution of sinners ever follows upon the transgression of the wicked.

15

1 The Living God Contrasted with Dead Idols But you, our God, are good and true, slow to anger, and governing all 2 with mercy. | For even if we sin, we are yours, and know your might; but we will not sin, knowing that we belong to you.
3 For to know you well is complete justice, and to know your 4 might is the root of immortality. | For neither did the evil creation of men's fancy deceive us, nor the fruitless labor of 5 painters, a design portrayed in varied colors, | the sight of which arouses yearning in the senseless man, till he longs for 6 the inanimate form of a dead image. | Lovers of evil things, and worthy of such hopes are they who make them and long 7 for them and worship them. | For truly the potter, laboriously working the soft earth, molds for our service each several article: both the vessels that serve for clean purposes and their opposites, all alike; as to what shall be the use of each vessel of 8 either class the worker in clay is the judge. | And with misspent toil he molds a meaningless god from the selfsame clay; though he himself shortly before was made from the earth and after a little, is to go whence he was taken, when the life that 9 was lent him is demanded back. | But his concern is not that he is to die nor that his span of life is brief; rather, he vies with goldsmiths and silversmiths and emulates molders of bronze, 10 and takes pride in modeling counterfeits. | Ashes his heart is! more worthless than earth is his hope, and more ignoble than 11 clay his life; | because he knew not the one who fashioned him,

14, 26: See Rom 1, 24-32.

15, 2: We will not sin: a sincere desire.

15, 5: Arnobius tells the story of Pygmalion of Cyprus who passionately fell in love with an ivory statue. This same theme is carried over to G. B. Shaw's "Pygmalion."

and breathed into him a quickening soul, and infused a vital 12 spirit. | Instead, he esteemed our life a plaything, and our span of life a holiday for gain; "For one must," says he, "make profit 13 every way, be it even out of evil." | For this man more than any knows that he is sinning, when out of earthen stuff he creates 14 fragile vessels and idols alike. | But all quite senseless, and worse than childish in mind, are the enemies of your people who 15 enslaved them. | For they esteemed all the idols of the nations gods, which have no use of the eyes for vision, nor nostrils to snuff the air, nor ears to hear, nor fingers on their hands for 16 feeling; even their feet are useless to walk with. | For a man made them; one whose spirit has been lent him fashioned them.
17 For no man succeeds in fashioning a god like himself; | being mortal, he makes a dead thing with his lawless hands. For he is better than the things he worships; he at least lives, but never they.

V. PROVIDENCE DURING THE EXODUS

Animals Punish the Egyptians but Sustain the Israelites

18 And besides, they worship the most loathsome beasts—for 19 compared as to folly, these are worse than the rest, | nor for their looks are they good or desirable beasts, but they have fled both the approval of God and his blessing.

16

1 Therefore they were fittingly punished by similar creatures 2 and were tormented by a swarm of insects. | As against this punishment, you benefited your people with a novel dish, the 3 delight they craved, by providing quail for their food; | that those others, when they desired food, since the creatures sent to plague them were so loathsome, should be turned from even the craving of necessities, while these, after a brief period of 4 privation, partook of a novel dish. | For upon those oppressors, inexorable want had to come; but these needed only be shown 15, 12a: The metaphors come from Greek moralists.

15, 14: The enemies: the Egyptians about whom the author spoke in 12, 27.

16—19: The last four chapters form a parallel between the Egyptians and the Israelites (which began in 11, 4-14). The theme is: from the time of the Exodus, that which ruined the Egyptians saved the Israelites.

16, 1: This is one of the author's favorite ideas: "man is punished by the very thing through which he sins" (11, 16). See 12, 23 and 27.

16, 2: Quail: see Nm 11, 31-35 n.

5 how their enemies were being tormented. | For when the dire venom of beasts came upon them and they were dying from the bite of crooked serpents, your anger endured not to the end. | 6 But as a warning, for a short time they were terrorized, though they had a sign of salvation, to remind them of the precept of 7 your Law. | For he who turned toward it was saved, not by 8 what he saw, but by you, the savior of all. | And by this also you convinced our foes that you are he who delivers from all 9 evil. | For the bites of locusts and of flies slew them, and no remedy was found to save their lives because they deserved to 10 be punished by such means; | but not even the fangs of poisonous reptiles overcame your sons, for your mercy brought the 11 antidote to heal them. | For as a reminder of your injunctions, they were stung, and swiftly they were saved, lest they should fall into deep forgetfulness and become unresponsive to your 12 beneficence. | For indeed, neither herb nor application cured
13 them, but your all-healing word, O Lord! | For you have dominion over life and death; you lead down to the gates of the 14 nether world, and lead back. | Man, however, slays in his malice, but when the spirit has departed, it does not return, nor can he bring back the soul once it is confined.

The Elements Punish the Egyptians but Serve the Israelites

15.16 But your hand none can escape. | For the wicked who refused to know you were punished by the might of your arm, pursued by unwonted rains and hailstorms and unremitting downpours, 17 and consumed by fire. | For against all expectation, in water which quenches anything, the fire grew more active; for the 18 universe fights on behalf of the just. | For now the flame was tempered so that the beasts might not be burnt up that were sent upon the wicked, but that these might see and know they 19 were struck by the judgment of God; | and again, even in the water, fire blazed beyond its strength so as to consume the 16, 5: See Nm 21, 6-9 n.

16, 7: Savior of all: another favorite idea of the author is universalism, i.e., Yahweh is the God of all men. See 1, 13-14; 11, 23-26. Many of the prophets stressed universalism.

16, 13b: This says in biblical imagery what v. 13a says directly.

16, 14: "Soul" here is not our modern concept, but it is synonymous with "spirit" meaning the "breath of life," as explained in Gn 2, 7 n.

16, 16-17: See the seventh plague in Ex 9, 23-25. In water: refers to "rains" in v. 16.

16, 18-19: Contrary to the Exodus account, the first plagues are described as continuing when the plague of the hail, the seventh plague, strikes over Egypt.

20 produce of the wicked land. | As against this, you nourished your people with food of angels and furnished them bread from heaven, ready to hand, untoiled-for, endowed with all delights 21 and conforming to every taste. | For this substance of yours revealed your sweetness toward your children, and serving the desire of him who received it, was blended to whatever flavor 22 each one wished. | Yet snow and ice withstood fire and were not melted, that they might know that their enemies' fruits were consumed by a fire that blazed in the hail and flashed lightning 23 in the rain. | But this fire, again, that the just might be nour-24 ished, forgot even its proper strength; | for your creation, serving you, its maker, grows tense for punishment against the wicked, but is relaxed in benefit for those who trust in you. | 25 Therefore at that very time, transformed in all sorts of ways, it was serving your all-nourishing bounty according to what 26 they needed and desired; | that your sons whom you loved might learn, O Lord, that it is not the various kinds of fruits that nourish man, but it is your word that preserves those who 27 believe you! | For what was not destroyed by fire, when merely 28 warmed by a momentary sunbeam, melted; | so that men might know that one must give thanks before the sunrise, and turn to 29 you at daybreak. | For the hope of the ingrate melts like a wintry frost and runs off like useless water.

17

Darkness Afflicts the Egyptians, while the Israelites Have 1 Light For great are your judgments, and hardly to be 2 described; therefore the unruly souls were wrong. | For when the lawless thought to enslave the holy nation, shackled with darkness, fettered by the long night, they lay confined beneath 3 their own roofs as exiles from the eternal providence. | For they who supposed their secret sins were hid under the dark veil of oblivion were scattered in fearful trembling, terrified 4 by apparitions. | For not even their inner chambers kept them

16, 20: Food of angels: the manna of Ex 16, 4-36 n.

16, 20b: This has become the versicle and response sung at Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament in the Roman liturgy. Vv. 20b-21 embellish, according to midrashic style, the manna of Exodus.

16, 22-23: See 16, 19.

16, 26: See Mt 4, 4.

16, 27: See Ex 16, 21.

17, 1-21: Unruly souls . . . the lawless (vv. 1-2): the Egyptians.

17, 3-21: The midrash here reaches its apex of embellishments on the Exodus account of the ninth plague of darkness, Ex 10, 21-23. The amplifications come from Jewish legends, Greek "descents into hell," and the poetic reflections of the author.

fearless, for crashing sounds on all sides terrified them, and 5 mute phantoms with somber looks appeared. | No force; even of fire, was able to give light, nor did the flaming brilliance of 6 the stars succeed in lighting up that gloomy night. | But only intermittent, fearful fires flashed through upon them; and in their terror they thought beholding these was worse than the times 7 when that sight was no longer to be seen. | And mockeries of the magic art were in readiness, and a jeering reproof of their 8 vaunted shrewdness. | For they who undertook to banish fears and terrors from the sick soul themselves sickened with a ridicu-9 lous fear. | For even though no monstrous thing frightened them, they shook at the passing of insects and the hissing of 10 reptiles, | and perished trembling, reluctant to face even the air
11 that they could nowhere escape. | For wickedness, of its nature cowardly, testifies in its own condemnation, and because of a 12 distressed conscience, always magnifies misfortunes. | For fear is nought but the surrender of the helps that come from reason; 13 | and the more one's expectation is of itself uncertain, the more one makes of not knowing the cause that brings on torment. | 14 So they, during that night, powerless though it was, that had come upon them from the recesses of a powerless nether world, 15 while all sleeping the same sleep, | were partly smitten by fearsome apparitions and partly stricken by their soul's surrender; 16 for fear came upon them, sudden and unexpected. | Thus, then, whoever was there fell into that unbarred prison and was kept 17 confined. | For whether one was a farmer, or a shepherd, or a worker at tasks in the wasteland, taken unawares, he served 18 out the inescapable sentence; | for all were bound by the one bond of darkness. And were it only the whistling wind, or the melodious song of birds in the spreading branches, or the steady 19 sound of rushing water, | or the rude crash of overthrown rocks, or the unseen gallop of bounding animals, or the roaring cry of the fiercest beasts, or an echo resounding from the hollow of the hills, these sounds, inspiring terror, paralyzed them. | 20 For the whole world shone with brilliant light and continued its 21 works without interruption; | over them alone was spread oppressive night, an image of the darkness that next should come upon them; yet they were to themselves more burdensome than the darkness.

18

1 But your holy ones had very great light; and those others, who heard their voices but did not see their forms, since now they themselves had suffered, called them blest; | and because they who formerly had been wronged did not harm them, they thanked them, and pleaded with them, for the sake of the difference between them. | By contrast, you furnished the flaming pillar which was a guide on the unknown way, and the mild sun for an honorable migration. | For those deserved to be deprived of light and imprisoned by darkness, who had kept your sons confined through whom the imperishable light of the Law was to be given to the world.

Death of the Egyptian Firstborn; the Israelites Are Spared

When they determined to put to death the infants of the holy ones, and when a single boy had been cast forth but saved, as a reproof you carried off their multitude of sons and destroyed them all at once in the mighty water. | That night was known beforehand to our fathers, that, with sure knowledge of the oaths in which they put their faith, they might have courage. | Your people awaited the salvation of the just and the destruction of their foes. | For when you punished our adversaries, in this you glorified us whom you had summoned. | For in secret the holy children of the good were offering sacrifice and putting into effect with one accord the divine institution, that your holy ones should share alike the same good things and dangers, having previously sung the praises of the fathers. | But the discordant cry of their enemies responded, and the piteous wail of mourning for children was borne to them. | And the slave was smitten with the same retribution as his master; even the plebeian suffered the same as the king. | And all together by a single death had countless dead; for the living were not even sufficient for the burial, since at a single instant their noblest offspring were destroyed. | For though they disbelieved at every turn on account of sorceries, at the destruction of the firstborn they acknowledged that the people was God's son. | For when peaceful stillness compassed everything and the night in its 15 swift course was half spent, | your all-powerful word from heaven's royal throne bounded, a fierce warrior, into the doomed 16 land, | bearing the sharp sword of your inexorable decree. And as he alighted, he filled every place with death; he still reached 17 to heaven, while he stood upon the earth. | Then, forthwith, visions in horrible dreams perturbed them and unexpected fears 18 assailed them; | and cast half-dead, one here, another there, 19 each was revealing the reason for his dying. | For the dreams that disturbed them had proclaimed this beforehand, lest they 20 perish unaware of why they suffered ill. | But the trial of death touched at one time even the just, and in the desert a plague 21 struck the multitude; yet not for long did the anger last. | For the blameless man hastened to be their champion, bearing the weapon of his special office, prayer and the propitiation of incense; he withstood the wrath and put a stop to the calamity, 22 showing that he was your servant. | And he overcame the bitterness not by bodily strength, not by force of arms; but by word he overcame the smiter, recalling the sworn covenants with 23 their fathers. | For when corpses had already fallen one on another in heaps, he stood in the midst and checked the anger, 24 and cut off the way to the living. | For on his full-length robe was the whole world, and the glories of the fathers were carved in four rows upon the stones, and your grandeur was on the 25 crown upon his head. | To these names the destroyer yielded, and these he feared; for the mere trial of anger was enough.

1 But the wicked, merciless wrath assailed until the end. For he psalmists used the word of Yahweh to mean the executor of divine judgments. This verse may come from Jb 4, 13-15; 1 Par 21, 15-27; and perhaps from Homer's "Iliad." The Roman liturgy accommodates this solemn text to the incarnation of the Word in the Introit of the Mass of the Sunday after Christmas.

knew beforehand what they were yet to do: | that though they themselves had agreed to the departure and had anxiously sent them on their way, they would regret it and pursue them. | For while they were still engaged in funeral rites and were mourning at the burials of the dead, they adopted another senseless plan; and those whom they had sent away with entreaty, they pursued as fugitives. | For a compulsion suited to this ending drew them on, and made them forgetful of what had befallen them, that they might fill out the torments of their punishment, | and your people might experience a wondrous journey while those others met an extraordinary death.

Conclusion For all creation, in its several kinds, was being made over anew, serving its natural laws, that your children might be preserved unharmed. | The cloud overshadowed their camp; and out of what had before been water, dry land was seen emerging: out of the Red Sea an unimpeded road, and a grassy plain out of the mighty flood. | Over this crossed the whole nation sheltered by your hand, after they beheld stupendous wonders. | For they ranged about like horses, and bounded about like lambs, praising you, O Lord! their deliverer.
| For they were still mindful of what had happened in their sojourn: how instead of the young of animals the land brought forth gnats, and instead of fishes the river swarmed with countless frogs. | And later they saw also a new kind of bird when, prompted by desire, they asked for pleasant foods; | for to appease them quail came to them from the sea. | And the punishments came upon the sinners only after forewarnings from the violence of the thunderbolts. For they justly suffered for their own misdeeds, since indeed they treated their guests with the more grievous hatred. | For those others did not receive unfamiliar visitors, but these were enslaving beneficent guests. |

15 And not that only; but what punishment was to be theirs since 16 they received strangers unwillingly! | Yet these, after welcoming them with festivities, oppressed with awful toils those who
17 now shared with them the same rights. | And they were struck with blindness, as those others had been at the portals of the just—when, surrounded by yawning darkness, each sought the
18 entrance of his own gate. | For the elements, in variable harmony among themselves, like strings of the harp, produce new melody, while the flow of music steadily persists. And this can
19 be perceived exactly from a review of what took place. | For land creatures were changed into water creatures, and those
20 that swam went over on to the land. | Fire in water maintained its own strength, and water forgot its quenching nature;
21 flames, by contrast, neither consumed the flesh of the perishable animals that went about in them, nor melted the icelike, quick 22 melting, ambrosial food. | For every way, O Lord! you magnified and glorified your people; unfailing, you stood by them in every time and circumstance.

THE BOOK OF SIRACH

INTRODUCTION

Sirach or Ben Sira composed the book in Hebrew about 190 B.C. His grandson translated the book into Greek after 130 B.C. and added the Foreword, but the latter was never accepted as inspired by the Church. Yet, since the Foreword was so ancient, it has been included in the Bible.

The Vulgate, the Latin Bible, calls this book Ecclesiasticus. It does not signify the name of the person, but it means a "church book" because it was used as a church manual in teaching morals to the early Christians. It can be compared to St. Francis de Sales' "Introduction to a Devout Life," since it was written to make the ordinary man strive for high ideals.

The Greek, not the Hebrew text, is accepted as inspired by the Church. The Hebrew text had been lost, and only within the last seventy-five years have two-thirds of it been recovered. Two fragments of the Dead Sea Scrolls have contributed to the partial recovery of the Hebrew text. The Hebrew agrees with the Greek text in the main. Neither text is accepted as inspired by the Jews and the Protestants.

Chs. 1—43 are moral instructions on a variety of subjects dealing with daily life in general, in the family, etc. These instructions reflect the author's wide experience, traveling, and knowledge of the Old Testament. Chs. 44—50 chant the eulogy of the Fathers. Most of the book features wisdom essays of various verse length, interspersed with wisdom hymns in praise of the Creator.

Sirach's style shows the influence of Proverbs and Psalms. The book teaches a doctrine that helped to form the Jewish moral character for its combat against the inroads of Hellenistic culture to replace Jewish culture in later Machabean times. The doctrine, a digest of traditional teachings, underscored obedience to God and confidence in His alliance. Trials will be necessary to test the Jewish character.

Besides drawing heavily on previously written Old Testament books, not by direct quotations, but by allusions, Sirach has similarities with Egyptian wisdom writers, the "Wisdom of Ahikar," Greek authors, principally Theognis and Euripides. The last, incidentally, makes unflattering observations on false friends and women just as Sirach does. It is not proven that Sirach borrowed from these authors.

What was Sirach's sphere of influence? Of all the New Testament books, the one influenced most by Sirach is the Epistle of St. James. At least ten passages come from Sirach. Besides the Epistle shares his outlook. This sage was very popular in the worship of the synagogue and in the teaching of the Fathers of the Church. In the Roman liturgy, his is the most popular Old Testament book excepting the Psalter.

Main divisions of the Book of Sirach (Ecclesiasticus) are:

1. Moral Instructions on Various Topics, 1—43
2. The Eulogy of the Fathers, 44, 1—50, 24
3. Epilogue and Canticles, 50, 25—51, 30

Foreword Many important truths have been handed down to us through the Law, the Prophets, and the later authors; and for these the instruction and wisdom of Israel merit praise. Now, those who are familiar with these truths must not only understand them themselves but, as lovers of wisdom, be able, in speech and in writing, to help others less familiar. Such a one was my grandfather, Jesus, who, having devoted himself for a long time to the diligent study of the Law, the Prophets, and the rest of the books of our ancestors, and having developed a thorough familiarity with them, was moved to write something himself in the nature of instruction and wisdom, in order that those who love wisdom might, by acquainting themselves with what he too had written, make even greater progress in living in conformity with the Divine Law.

You therefore are now invited to read it in a spirit of attentive good will, with indulgence for any apparent failure on our part, despite earnest efforts, in the interpretation of particular passages. For words spoken originally in Hebrew are not as effective when they are translated into another language. That is true not only of this book but of the Law itself, the Prophets and the rest of the books, which differ no little when they are read in the original.

I arrived in Egypt in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of King Euergetes, and while there, I found a reproduction of our valuable teaching. I therefore considered myself in duty bound to devote some diligence and industry to the translation of this book. Many sleepless hours of close application have I devoted in the interval to finishing the book for publication, for the benefit of those living abroad who wish to acquire wisdom and are disposed to live their lives according to the standards of the Law.

1 Praise of Wisdom All wisdom comes from the Lord and 2 with him it remains forever. | The sand of the seashore, the drops of rain, the days of eternity: who can number these? |

Foreword: Modern Jews still follow the threefold division of the Old Testament as found in the Foreword: "the Law, the Prophets, and the rest of the books." Thirty-eighth year . . . King Euergetes: i.e., 132 B.C. A reproduction . . . teaching: this is most likely a reference to the Greek translation of the Hebrew Old Testament writings before Sirach's time.

1, 1-29: The entire chapter comprises variations on themes of wisdom.

1, 1: Wisdom is an attribute of God.

1, 2-3: All creation reflects God's wisdom.

3 Heaven's height, earth's breadth, the depths of the abyss: who 4 can explore these? | Before all things else wisdom was created;
5 and prudent understanding, from eternity. | To whom has wisdom's root been revealed? Who knows her subtleties? | 6 There is but one, wise and truly awe-inspiring, seated upon his 7 throne: | it is the Lord; he created her, has seen her and taken 8 note of her. | He has poured her forth upon all his works, upon every living thing according to his bounty; he has lavished her upon his friends.

9 Fear of the Lord is glory and splendor, gladness and a festive 10 crown. | Fear of the Lord warms the heart, giving gladness and 11 joy and length of days. | He who fears the Lord will have a happy end; even on the day of his death he will be blessed. | 12 The beginning of wisdom is fear of the Lord, which is formed 13 with the faithful in the womb. | With devoted men was she created from of old, and with their children her beneficence 14 abides. | Fullness of wisdom is fear of the Lord; she inebriates
15 men with her fruits. | Her entire house she fills with choice 16 foods, her granaries with her harvest. | Wisdom's garland is fear of the Lord, with blossoms of peace and perfect health. | 17 Knowledge and full understanding she showers down; she 18 heightens the glory of those who possess her. | The root of wisdom is fear of the Lord; her branches are length of days.

19 One cannot justify unjust anger; anger plunges a man to his 20 downfall. | A patient man need stand firm but for a time, and 21 then contentment comes back to him. | For a while he holds back his words, then the lips of many herald his wisdom. | 22 Among wisdom's treasures is the paragon of prudence; but fear 23 of the Lord is an abomination to the sinner. | If you desire wisdom, keep the commandments, and the Lord will bestow her 24 upon you; | for fear of the Lord is wisdom and culture; loyal 25 humility is his delight. | Be not faithless to the fear of the 26 Lord, nor approach it with duplicity of heart. | Play not the 27 hypocrite before men; over your lips keep watch. | Exalt not 28 yourself lest you fall and bring upon you dishonor; | for then the Lord will reveal your secrets and publicly cast you down, |

1, 4: The author personifies God's creation of the attribute "wisdom" (v. 7). From eternity: not absolute but relative eternity, i.e., before all other created things.

1, 8: For the same idea see 1, 2-3 n.

1, 9-18: A description of the rewards of one who lives religiously or "fears the Lord."

1, 12: See explanation of this verse in Prv 1, 7 n.

1, 28: The Lord will reveal your secrets: indirectly through one's hypocrisy (v. 26) and pride (v. 27). And publicly cast you down:

29 because you approached the fear of the Lord with your heart full of guile.

1 Duties toward God My son, when you come to serve the 2 Lord, prepare yourself for trials. | Be sincere of heart and 3 steadfast, undisturbed in time of adversity. | Cling to him, 4 forsake him not; thus will your future be great. | Accept what-5 ever befalls you, in crushing misfortune be patient; | for in fire
gold is tested, and worthy men in the crucible of humiliation. | 6 Trust God and he will help you; make straight your ways and hope in him.
7 You who fear the Lord, wait for his mercy, turn not away 8 lest you fall. | You who fear the Lord, trust him, and your 9 reward will not be lost. | You who fear the Lord, hope for good 10 things, for lasting joy and mercy. | Study the generations long past and understand; has anyone hoped in the Lord and been disappointed? Has anyone persevered in his fear and been for-11 saken? has anyone called upon him and been rebuffed? | Compassionate and merciful is the Lord; he forgives sins, he saves in time of trouble.
12 Woe to craven hearts and drooping hands, to the sinner who 13 treads a double path! | Woe to the faint of heart who trust 14 not, who therefore will have no shelter! | Woe to you who have lost hope! what will you do at the visitation of the Lord? | 15 Those who fear the Lord disobey not his words; those who love 16 him keep his ways. | Those who fear the Lord seek to please 17 him, those who love him are filled with his law. | Those who fear the Lord prepare their hearts and humble themselves before 18 him. | Let us fall into the hands of the Lord and not into the hands of men, for equal to his majesty is the mercy that he shows.

1 Duties toward Parents Children, pay heed to a father's 2 right; do so that you may live. | For the Lord sets a father in honor over his children; a mother's authority he confirms over 3.4 her sons. | He who honors his father atones for sins; | he stores
5 up riches who reveres his mother. | He who honors his father 6 is gladdened by children, and when he prays he is heard. | He who reveres his father will live a long life; and he obeys the

---

you will be humiliated in the presence of the synagogue assembly.
2, 14: Visitation: at the last judgment.

7 Lord who brings comfort to his mother. | He who fears the 8 Lord honors his father, and serves his parents as rulers. | In word and deed honor your father that his blessing may come 9 upon you; | for a father's blessing gives a family firm roots, but a mother's curse uproots the growing plant.
10 Glory not in your father's shame, for his shame is no glory
11 to you! | His father's honor is a man's glory; disgrace for her
12 children, a mother's shame. | My son, take care of your father 13 when he is old; grieve him not as long as he lives. | Even if his mind fail, be considerate with him; revile him not in the fullness 14 of your strength. | For kindness to a father will not be forgotten, it will serve as a sin offering—it will take lasting root. | 15 In time of tribulation it will be recalled to your advantage, like 16 warmth upon frost it will melt away your sins. | A blasphemer is he who despises his father; accursed of his Creator, he who angers his mother.

17 Humility My son, conduct your affairs with humility, and 18 you will be loved more than a giver of gifts. | Humble yourself the more, the greater you are, and you will find favor with 19 God. | For great is the power of God; by the humble he is 20 glorified. | What is too sublime for you, seek not, into things 21 beyond your strength search not. | What is committed to you, attend to; for what is hidden is not your concern.
22 With what is too much for you meddle not, when shown 23 things beyond human understanding. | Their own opinion has misled many, and false reasoning unbalanced their judgment. | 24 Where the pupil of the eye is missing, there is no light, and where there is no knowledge, there is no wisdom.
25 A stubborn man will fare badly in the end, and he who loves 26 danger will perish in it. | A stubborn man will be burdened
27 with sorrow; a sinner will heap sin upon sin. | For the affliction of the proud man there is no cure; he is the offshoot of an evil 28 plant. | The mind of a sage appreciates proverbs, and an attentive ear is the wise man's joy.

29 Alms for the Poor Water quenches a flaming fire, and 30 alms atone for sins. | He who does a kindness is remembered afterward; when he falls, he finds a support.

3, 20-24: Sirach is probably warning against seeking knowledge in contemporary Greek philosophy rather than in the Mosaic Law. See Euripides' "Helena": "Nothing is positively known among men, but I have found that the word of the gods is true."

1 My son, rob not the poor man of his livelihood: force not 2 the eyes of the needy to turn away. | A hungry man grieve not,
3 a needy man anger not; | do not exasperate the downtrodden,
4 delay not to give to the needy. | A beggar in distress do not
5 reject; avert not your face from the poor. | From the needy 6 turn not your eyes, give no man reason to curse you; | for if in the bitterness of his soul he curse you, his Creator will hear his 7 prayer. | Endear yourself to the assembly; before a ruler bow 8 your head. | Give a hearing to the poor man, and return his 9 greeting with courtesy; | deliver the oppressed from the hand 10 of the oppressor; let not justice be repugnant to you. | To the fatherless be as a father, and help their mother as a husband would; thus will you be like a son to the Most High, and he will be more tender to you than a mother.

11 The Rewards of Wisdom Wisdom instructs her children
12 and admonishes those who seek her. | He who loves her loves 13 life; those who seek her out win her favor. | He who holds her fast inherits glory; wherever he dwells, the Lord bestows bless-14 ings. | Those who serve her serve the Holy One; those who 15 love her the Lord loves. | He who obeys her judges nations;
16 he who hearkens to her dwells in her inmost chambers. | If one trusts her, he will possess her; his descendants too will inherit 17 her. | She walks with him as a stranger, and at first she puts him to the test; fear and dread she brings upon him and tries him with her discipline; with her precepts she puts him to the 18 proof, until his heart is fully with her. | Then she comes back to 19 bring him happiness and reveal her secrets to him. | But if he fails her, she will abandon him and deliver him into the hands of despoilers.

20 Sincerity and Justice Use your time well; guard yourself 21 from evil, and bring upon yourself no shame. | There is a sense of shame laden with guilt, and a shame that merits honor and 22 respect. | Show no favoritism to your own discredit; revile no
23 one to your own downfall. | Refrain not from speaking at the 24 proper time, and hide not away your wisdom; | for it is through speech that wisdom becomes known, and knowledge through 25 the tongue's rejoinder. | Never gainsay the truth, and struggle
26 not against the rushing stream. | Be not ashamed to acknowledge your guilt, but of your ignorance rather be ashamed. | 27 Do not abase yourself before an impious man, nor refuse to do 28 so before rulers. | Even to the death fight for truth, and the 29 Lord your God will battle for you. | Be not surly in your

30 speech, nor lazy and slack in your deeds. | Be not a lion at 31 home, nor sly and suspicious at work. | Let not your hand be open to receive and clenched when it is time to give.

5

1 Against Presumption Rely not on your wealth; say not: "I 2 have the power." | Rely not on your strength in following the 3 desires of your heart. | Say not: "Who can prevail against 4 me?" for the Lord will exact the punishment. | Say not: "I have sinned, yet what has befallen me?" for the Lord bides his time. |
5 Of forgiveness be not overconfident, adding sin upon sin. |
6 Say not: "Great is his mercy; my many sins he will forgive." |
7 For mercy and anger alike are with him; upon the wicked
8 alights his wrath. | Delay not your conversion to the Lord,
9 put it not off from day to day; | for suddenly his wrath flames
10 forth; at the time of vengeance, you will be destroyed. | Rely not upon deceitful wealth, for it will be no help on the day of wrath.

11 Sincerity in Speech Winnow not in every wind, and start 12 not off in every direction. | Be consistent in your thoughts;
13 steadfast be your words. | Be swift to hear, but slow to answer.
14 | If you have the knowledge, answer your neighbor; if not, put 15 your hand over your mouth. | Honor and dishonor through 16 talking! A man's tongue can be his downfall. | Be not called a 17 detractor; use not your tongue for calumny; | for shame has been created for the thief, and the reproach of his neighbor for the double-tongued.

6

1 Say nothing harmful, small or great; be not a foe instead of a friend; a bad name and disgrace will you acquire: "That for the evil man with double tongue!" 2 Fall not into the grip of desire, lest, like fire, it consume your 3 strength; | your leaves it will eat, your fruits destroy, and you 4 will be left a dry tree, | for contumacious desire destroys its owner and makes him the sport of his enemies.

4, 30: This verse can also be translated to contrast the showing of a lion's courage at home and of cowardice outside the home.

5, 4-6: Compare Voltaire's similar cynical remark: "God will forgive me; it is his business."

6, 1: "That . . . double tongue": this is what people will say about the person who has disgraced himself because of his deceitful tongue.

5 True Friendship A kind mouth multiplies friends, and 6 gracious lips prompt friendly greetings. | Let your acquaintances
7 be many, but one in a thousand your confidant. | When you gain a friend, first test him, and be not too ready to trust him. | 8 For one sort of friend is a friend when it suits him, but he will 9 not be with you in time is distress. | Another is a friend who becomes an enemy, and tells of the quarrel to your shame. | 10 Another is a friend, a boon companion, who will not be with you 11 when sorrow comes. | When things go well, he is your other 12 self, and lords it over your servants; | but if you are brought 13 low, he turns against you and avoids meeting you. | Keep away from your enemies; be on your guard with your friends. | 14 A faithful friend is a sturdy shelter; he who finds one finds 15 a treasure. | A faithful friend is beyond price, no sum can 16 balance his worth. | A faithful friend is a life-saving remedy, 17 such as he who fears God finds; | for he who fears God behaves accordingly, and his friend will be like himself.

18 Blessings of Wisdom My son, from your youth embrace 19 discipline; thus will you find wisdom with graying hair. | As though plowing and sowing, draw close to her; then await her 20 bountiful crops. | For in cultivating her you will labor but 21 little, and soon you will eat of her fruits. | How irksome she is 22 to the unruly! The fool cannot abide her. | She will be like a burdensome stone to test him, and he will not delay in casting 23 her aside. | For discipline is like her name, she is not accessible to many.

24 Listen, my son, and heed my advice; refuse not my counsel. |
25 Put your feet into her fetters, and your neck under her yoke 26 | Stoop your shoulders and carry her and be not irked at her 27 bonds. | With all your soul draw close to her; with all your 28 strength keep her ways. | Search her out, discover her; seek her and you will find her. Then when you have her, do not let 29 her go; | thus will you afterward find rest in her, and she will 30 become your joy. | Her fetters will be your throne of majesty;
31 her bonds, your purple cord. | You will wear her as your robe of glory, bear her as your splendid crown.

32 My son, if you wish, you can be taught; if you apply your-33 self, you will be shrewd. | If you are willing to listen, you will 34 learn; if you give heed, you will be wise. | Frequent the com-35 pany of the elders; whoever is wise, stay close to him. | Be eager to hear every godly discourse; let no wise saying escape

you. | If you see a man of prudence, seek him out; let your feet wear away his doorstep! | Reflect on the precepts of the Lord, let his commandments be your constant meditation; then he will enlighten your mind, and the wisdom you desire he will grant.

7

Conduct in Public Life Do no evil, and evil will not overtake you; | avoid wickedness, and it will turn aside from
you. | Sow not in the furrows of injustice, lest you harvest it sevenfold. | Seek not from the Lord authority, nor from the king a place of honor. | Parade not your justice before the Lord, and before the king flaunt not your wisdom. | Seek not to become a judge if you have not strength to root out crime, or you will show favor to the ruler and mar your integrity. | Be guilty of no evil before the city's populace, nor disgrace yourself before the assembly. | Do not plot to repeat a sin; not even for one will you go unpunished. | Say not: "He will appreciate my many gifts; the Most High will accept my offerings." | Be not impatient in prayers, and neglect not the giving of alms. | Laugh not at an embittered man; be mindful of him who exalts and humbles. | Plot no mischief against your brother, nor against your friend and companion. | Delight not in telling lie after lie, for it never results in good. | Thrust not yourself into the deliberations of princes, and repeat not the words of your prayer. | Hate not laborious tasks, nor farming, which was ordained by the Most High. | Do not esteem yourself better than your fellows; remember, his wrath will not delay. | More and more, humble your pride; what awaits man is worms.

Duties of Family Life, Religion and Charity Barter not a friend for money, nor a dear brother for the gold of Ophir. | Dismiss not a sensible wife; a gracious wife is more precious than corals. | Mistreat not a servant who faithfully serves, nor a laborer who devotes himself to his task. | Let a wise servant be dear to you as your own self; refuse him not his freedom. | If you have livestock, look after them; if they 7, 14b: Mt 6, 7 also advises against the uselessness of repetition in prayer.

7, 21: According to Ex 21, 2: "When you purchase a Hebrew slave, he is to serve you for six years, but in the seventh year he shall be given his freedom without cost."

23 are dependable, keep them. | If you have sons, chastise them;
24 bend their necks from childhood. | If you have daughters, keep 25 them chaste, and be not indulgent to them. | Giving your daughter in marriage ends a great task; but give her to a worthy 26 man. | If you have a wife, let her not seem odious to you; but 27 where there is ill-feeling, trust her not. | With your whole heart honor your father; your mother's birthpangs forget not. | 28 Remember, of these parents you were born; what can you give 29 them for all they gave you? | With all your soul, fear God,
30 revere his priests. | With all your strength, love your Creator, 31 forsake not his ministers. | Honor God and respect the priest, give him his portion as you have been commanded: first fruits 32 and contributions, due sacrifices and holy offerings. | To the poor man also extend your hand, that your blessing may be 33 complete; | be generous to all the living, and withhold not your 34 kindness from the dead; | avoid not those who weep, but 35 mourn with those who mourn; | neglect not to visit the sick –
36 for these things you will be loved. | In whatever you do, remember your last days, and you will never sin.

8

1 Prudence in Dealing with other Men Contend not with 2 an influential man, lest you fall into his power. | Quarrel not with a rich man, lest he pay out the price of your downfall; for gold has dazzled many, and perverts the character of 3 princes. | Dispute not with a man of railing speech, heap no
4 wood upon his fire. | Be not too familiar with an unruly man,
5 lest he speak ill of your forebears. | Shame not a repentant
6 sinner; remember, we all are guilty. | Insult no man when he 7 is old, for some of us, too, will grow old. | Rejoice not when 8 a man dies; remember, we are all to die. | Spurn not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint yourself with their proverbs; from them you will acquire the training to serve in the presence 9 of princes. | Reject not the tradition of old men which they have learned from their fathers; from it you will obtain the 10 knowledge how to answer in time of need. | Kindle not the 11 coals of a sinner, lest you be consumed in his flaming fire. | Let not the impious man intimidate you; it will set him in ambush 12 against you. | Lend not to one more powerful than yourself;
13 and whatever you lend, count it as lost. | Go not surety beyond
14 your means; think any pledge a debt you must pay. | Contend

7, 23: The present Hebrew text, which is probably not original here, reads: "Choose wives for them while they are young." 8, 10a: Do not arouse the passions of a sinner.

not at law with a judge, for he will settle it according to his 15 whim. | Travel not with a ruthless man, lest he weigh you down with calamity; for he will go his own way straight, and 16 through his folly you will perish with him. | Provoke no quarrel with a quick-tempered man, nor ride with him through the desert; for bloodshed is nothing to him, and when there is 17 no one to help you, he will destroy you. | Take no counsel with 18 a fool, for he can keep nothing to himself. | Before a stranger do nothing that should be kept secret, for you know not what it will engender. | Open your heart to no man, and banish not your happiness.

1 Advice concerning Women Be not jealous of the wife of 2 your bosom, lest you teach her to do evil against you. | Give no
3 woman power over you to trample upon your dignity. | Be not intimate with a strange woman, lest you fall into her snares.
4 | With a singing girl be not familiar, lest you be caught in her
5 wiles. | Entertain no thoughts against a virgin, lest you be 6 enmeshed in damages for her. | Give not yourself to harlots,
7 lest you surrender your inheritance. | Gaze not about the lanes 8 of the city and wander not through its squares; | avert your eyes from a comely woman; gaze not upon the beauty of another's wife—through woman's beauty many perish, for lust 9 for it burns like fire. | With a married woman dine not, recline not at table to drink by her side, lest your heart be drawn to her and you go down in blood to the grave.

10 Choice of Friends Discard not an old friend, for the new one cannot equal him. A new friend is like new wine which you 11 drink with pleasure only when it has aged. | Envy not a sinner's
12 fame, for you know not what disaster awaits him. | Rejoice not at a proud man's success; remember he will not reach death 13 unpunished. | Keep far from the man who has power to kill, and you will not be filled with the dread of death. But if you approach him, offend him not, lest he take away your life; know that you are stepping among snares and walking over a 14 net. | As best you can, take your neighbors' measure, and 15 associate with the wise. | With the learned be intimate; let 16 all your conservation be about the Law of the Lord. | Have just men for your table companions; in the fear of God be your glory.

17 Concerning Rulers Skilled artisans are esteemed for their 18 deftness; but the ruler of his people is the skilled sage. | Feared in the city is the man of railing speech, and he who talk rashly is hated.

10

1 A wise magistrate lends stability to his people, and th
2 government of a prudent man is well ordered. | As the people judge, so are his ministers; as the head of a city, its inhabitant 3 | A wanton king destroys his people, but a city grows throug
4 the wisdom of its princes. | Sovereignty over the earth is in th hand of God, who raises up on it the man of the hour; 5 sovereignty over every man is in the hand of God, who impart his majesty to the ruler.

6 The Sin of Pride No matter the wrong, do no violence t to your neighbor, and do not walk the path of arrogance.
7 Odious to the Lord and to men is arrogance, and the sin o 8 oppression they both hate. | Dominion is transferred from on people to another because of the violence of the arrogant.
9 Why are dust and ashes proud? even during life man's bod 10 decays; | a slight illness—the doctor jests, a king today—
11 tomorrow he is dead. | When a man dies, he inherits corruption

man who is wise but poor, nor proper to honor any sinner. | The prince, the ruler, the judge are in honor; but none is greater than he who fears God. | When free men serve a prudent slave, the wise man does not complain. | Flaunt not your wisdom in managing your affairs, and boast not in your time of need. | Better the worker who has plenty of everything than the boaster who is without bread.

My son, with humility have self-esteem; prize yourself as you deserve. | Who will acquit him who condemns himself? who will honor him who discredits himself? | The poor man is honored for his wisdom as the rich man is honored for his wealth; | honored in poverty, how much more so in wealth! Dishonored in wealth, in poverty how much the more!

The poor man's wisdom lifts his head high and sets him among princes. | Praise not a man for his looks; despise not a man for his appearance. | Least is the bee among winged things, but she reaps the choicest of all harvests. | Mock not the worn cloak and jibe at no man's bitter day: for strange are the works of the Lord, hidden from men his deeds. | The oppressed often rise to a throne, and some that none would consider wear a crown. | The exalted often fall into utter disgrace; the honored are given into enemy hands.

Moderation Before investigating, find no fault; examine first, then criticize. | Before hearing, answer not, and interrupt no one in the middle of his speech. | Dispute not about what is not your concern; in the strife of the arrogant take no part.

My son, why increase your cares, since he who is avid for wealth will not be blameless? Even if you run after it, you will never overtake it; however you seek it, you will not find it. | One may toil and struggle and drive, and fall short all the more. | Another goes his way a weakling and a failure, with little strength and great misery—yet the eyes of the Lord look favorably upon him; he raises him free of the vile dust, | lifts up his head and exalts him to the amazement of the many. | Good and evil, life and death, poverty and riches, are from the Lord. | Wisdom and understanding and knowledge of affairs, love and virtuous paths are from the Lord. | Error and darkness were formed with sinners from their birth, and evil grows old with evildoers. | The Lord's gift remains with the just; his favor brings continued success. | A man may become rich through a miser's life, and this is his allotted

19 reward: | when he says: "I have found rest, now I will feast o my possessions," he does not know how long it will be till h

8 In our prosperity we cannot know our friends; in adversity an 9 enemy will not remain concealed. | When a man is successful even his enemy is friendly; in adversity even his friend dis-10 appears. | Never trust your enemy, for his wickedness is like 11 corrosion in bronze. | Even though he acts humbly and peaceably toward you, take care to be on your guard against him. Rub him as one polishes a brazen mirror, and you will find that 12 there is still corrosion. | Let him not stand near you, lest he oust you and take your place. Let him not sit at your right hand, lest he then demand your seat, and in the end you appreciate my advice, when you groan with regret, as I warned you.
13 Who pities a snake charmer when he is bitten, or anyone 14 who goes near a wild beast? | So is it with the companion of 15 the proud man, who is involved in his sins: | while you stand firm, he makes no bold move; but if you slip, he cannot hold 16 back. | With his lips an enemy speaks sweetly, but in his heart he schemes to plunge you into the abyss. Though your enemy has tears in his eyes, if given the chance, he will never have 17 enough of your blood. | If evil comes upon you, you will find 18 him at hand; feigning to help, he will trip you up, | then he will nod his head and clap his hands and hiss repeatedly, and show his true face.

blackens his hand; he who associates with an impious man learns greater or wealthier than yourself. How can the earthen pot go with the metal cauldron? When they knock together, the pot 3 will be smashed: | the rich man does wrong and boasts of it, 4 the poor man is wronged and begs forgiveness. | As long as the rich man can use you he will enslave you, but when you are 5 exhausted, he will abandon you. | As long as you have anything he will speak fair words to you, and with smiles he will 6 win your confidence; | when he needs something from you he will cajole you, then without regret he will impoverish you. |

self and does not enjoy what is his own? | None is more stingy than he who is stingy with himself; he punishes his own miserliness. | If ever he is generous, it is by mistake; and in the end he displays his greed. | In the miser's opinion his share is too small; | he refuses his neighbor and brings ruin on himself. | The miser's eye is rapacious for bread, but on his own table he sets it stale.

My son, use freely whatever you have and enjoy it as best you can; | remember that death does not tarry, nor have you been told the grave's appointed time. | Before you die, be good to your friend, and give him a share in what you possess. | Deprive not yourself of present good things, let no choice portion escape
you. | Will you not leave your riches to others, and your earnings to be divided by lot? | Give, take, and treat yourself well, for in the nether world there are no joys to seek. | All flesh grows old, like a garment; the age-old law is: All must die.
| As with the leaves that grow on a vigorous tree: one falls off and another sprouts—so with the generations of flesh and blood: one dies and another is born. | All man's works will perish in decay, and his handiwork will follow after him.

The Search for Wisdom and Its Blessings Happy the man who meditates on wisdom, and reflects on knowledge; | who ponders her ways in his heart, and understands her paths; | who pursues her like a scout, and lies in wait at her entry way; | who peeps through her windows, and listens at her doors; | who encamps near her house, and fastens his tent pegs next to her walls; | who pitches his tent beside her, and lives as her welcome neighbor; | who builds his nest in her leafage, and lodges in her branches; | who takes shelter with her from the heat, and dwells in her home.

15

He who fears the Lord will do this; he who is practiced in the Law will come to wisdom. | Motherlike she will meet him, like a young bride she will embrace him, | nourish him with the bread of understanding, and give him the water of learning to drink. | He will lean upon her and not fall, he will trust in her and not be put to shame. | She will exalt him above his fellows; in the assembly she will make him eloquent. | Joy and gladness he will find, an everlasting name inherit. | Worthless men will not attain to her, haughty men will not behold her. |
Far from the impious is she, not to be spoken of by liars. |
Unseemly is praise on a sinner's lips, for it is not accorded

10 to him by God. | But praise is offered by the wise mar tongue; its rightful steward will proclaim it.

11 Man's Free Will Say not: "It was God's doing that I fe 12 away"; for what he hates he does not do. | Say not: "It w he who set me astray"; for he has no need of wicked man.
13 Abominable wickedness the Lord hates, he does not let it befa
14 those who fear him. | When God, in the beginning, creat
15 man, he made him subject to his own free choice. | If yc choose you can keep the commandments; it is loyalty to do h

the wisdom of the Lord; he is mighty in power, and all-seeing.
19 The eyes of God see all he has made; he understands man give strength for lies.

heaven of heavens, the earth and the abyss tremble at his will take no thought; with my ways who will concern himself?

19 | If I sin, no eye will see me; if all in secret I am disloyal, who 20 is to know? | Who tells him of just deeds and what could I
21 expect for doing my duty?" | Such are the thoughts of senseless men, which only the foolish knave will think.

22 Divine Wisdom Seen in Creation Hearken to me, my 23 son, take my advice, apply your mind to my words, | while I propose measured wisdom, and impart accurate knowledge. | 24 When at the first God created his works and, as he made them, 25 assigned their tasks, | he ordered for all time what they were to do and their domains from generation to generation. They were not to hunger, nor grow weary, nor ever cease from their tasks.
26 | Not one should ever crowd its neighbor, nor should they ever 27 disobey his word. | Then the Lord looked upon the earth, and 28 filled it with his blessings. | Its surface he covered with all manner of life which must return into it again.

17

1 The Lord from the earth created man, and in his own image 2 he made him. | Limited days of life he gives him and makes 3 him return to earth again. | He endows man with a strength of 4 his own, and with power over all things else on earth. | He puts the fear of him in all flesh, and gives him rule over beasts 5 and birds. | He forms men's tongues and eyes and ears, and 6 imparts to them an understanding heart. | With wisdom and 7 knowledge he fills them; good and evil he shows them. | He looks with favor upon their hearts, and shows them his glorious 8 works, | that they may describe the wonders of his deeds and 9 praise his holy name. | He has set before them knowledge, a 10 law of life as their inheritance; | an everlasting covenant he has made with them, his Commandments he has revealed to them. | 11 His majestic glory their eyes beheld, his glorious voice their ears 12 heard. | He says to them, "Avoid all evil"; each of them he 13 gives precepts about his fellow men. | Their ways are ever

14 known to him, they cannot be hidden from his eyes. | Ov every nation he places a ruler, but the Lord's own portion ness God cherishes like a signet ring, a man's virtue, like t 18 apple of his eye. | Later he will rise up and repay them, a requite each one of them as they deserve.

19 Appeal for a Return to God But to the penitent he pr

1 The Divine Power and Mercy The Eternal is the jud
2 of all things without exception; the Lord alone is just. | Wh has he made equal to describing his works, and who can prc 3 his mighty deeds? | Who can measure his majestic power,
4 exhaust the tale of his mercies? | One cannot lessen, r
5 increase, nor penetrate the wonders of the Lord. | When a m ends he is only beginning, and when he stops he is still l 6 wildered. | What is man, of what worth is he? the good, t
7 evil in him, what are these? | The sum of a man's days is gr upon them his mercy. | He sees and understands that their death is grievous, and so he forgives them all the more. | Man may be merciful to his fellow man, but the Lord's mercy reaches all flesh, | reproving, admonishing, teaching, as a shepherd guides his flock; | merciful to those who accept his guidance, who are diligent in his precepts.

The Necessity of Prudence My son, to your charity add no reproach, nor spoil any gift by harsh words. | Like dew that abates a burning wind, so does a word improve a gift. | Sometimes the word means more than the gift; both are offered by a kindly man. | Only a fool upbraids before giving; a grudging gift wears out the expectant eyes. | Be informed before speaking; before sickness prepare the cure. | Before you are judged, seek merit for yourself, and at the time of visitation you will have a ransom. | Before you have fallen, humble yourself;
when you have sinned, show repentance. | Delay not to forsake sins, neglect it not till you are in distress. | Let nothing prevent the prompt payment of your vows; wait not to fulfill them when you are dying. | Before making a vow have the means to fulfill it; be not one who tries the Lord. | Think of wrath and the day of death, the time of vengeance when he will hide his face. | Remember the time of hunger in the time of plenty, poverty and want in the day of wealth. | Between morning and evening the weather changes; before the Lord all things are fleeting. | A wise man is circumspect in all things; when sin is rife he keeps himself from wrongdoing.

Any learned man should make wisdom known, and he who attains to her should declare her praise; | those trained in her words must show their wisdom, dispensing sound proverbs like life-giving waters.

Self-Control Go not after your lusts, but keep your desires in check. | If you satisfy your lustful appetites they will make you the sport of your enemies. | Have no joy in the pleasures of a moment which bring on poverty redoubled; | become not a glutton and a winebibber with nothing in your purse.

He who does so grows no richer; he who wastes the little he who hears it will hold it against you, and in time become yc

12 Admonish your friend—he may not have done it; and if he d may not have said it; and if he did, that he may not say

15 story you must not believe. | Then, too, a man can slip and r
16 mean it; who has not sinned with his tongue? | Admonish yc neighbor before you break with him; thus will you fulfill t law of the Most High.

17 How to Recognize True Wisdom All wisdom is fear 18 the Lord; perfect wisdom is the fulfillment of the Law. | T knowledge of wickedness is not wisdom, nor is there pruder 19 in the counsel of sinners. | There is a shrewdness that 20 detestable, while the simple man may be free from sin. | Th are those with little understanding who fear God, and th 21 of great intelligence who violate the Law. | There is a shrew ness keen but dishonest, which by duplicity wins a judgment

1 Conduct of the Wise and the Foolish An admoniti can be inopportune, and a man may be wise to hold his peace.
2 It is much better to admonish than to lose one's temper, for o
3 who admits his fault will be kept from disgrace. | Like eunuch lusting for intimacy with a maiden is he who does right 4 under compulsion. | One man is silent and is thought wise, 5 another is talkative and is disliked. | One man is silent because 6 he has nothing to say; another is silent, biding his time. | A wise man is silent till the right time comes, but a boasting fool 7 ignores the proper time. | He who talks too much is detested;

he who pretends to authority is hated.
8 Some misfortunes bring success; some things gained are a 9 man's loss. | Some gifts do one no good, and some must be paid
10 back double. | Humiliation can follow fame, while from ob-11 scurity a man can lift up his head. | A man may buy much for 12 little, but pay for it seven times over. | A wise man makes himself popular by a few words, but fools pour forth their 13 blandishments in vain. | A gift from a rogue will do you no
14 good, for in his eyes his one gift is equal to seven. | He gives little and criticizes often, and like a crier he shouts aloud. He lends today, he asks it back tomorrow; hateful indeed is such a 15 man. | A fool has no friends, nor thanks for his generosity; | 16 those who eat his bread have an evil tongue. How many times they laugh him to scorn!
17 A fall to the ground is less sudden than a slip of the tongue;
that is why the downfall of the wicked comes so quickly. | 18 Insipid food is the untimely tale; the unruly are always ready 19 to offer it. | A proverb when spoken by a fool is unwelcome, 20 for he does not utter it at the proper time. | A man through want may be unable to sin, yet in this tranquillity he cannot 21 rest. | One may lose his life through shame, and perish through 22 a fool's intimidation. | A man makes a promise to a friend out
23 of shame, and has him for his enemy needlessly. | A lie is a foul blot in a man, yet it is constantly on the lips of the unruly. | 24 Better a thief than an inveterate liar, yet both will suffer dis-25 grace; | a liar's way leads to dishonor, his shame remains ever with him.
26 A wise man advances himself by his words, a prudent man 27 pleases the great. | He who works his land has abundant crops, 28 he who pleases the great is pardoned his faults. | Favors and gifts blind the eyes; like a muzzle over the mouth they silence 29 reproof. | Hidden wisdom and unseen treasure—of what value
30 is either? | Better the man who hides his folly than the one who hides his wisdom.

20, 17: An alternate translation is: "A fall to the ground is better than a slip of the tongue." The same expression is found in Zeno and in the "Wisdom of Ahikar."

1 Sin Must Be Avoided My son, if you have sinned, do so 2 no more, and for your past sins pray to be forgiven. | Flee from sin as from a serpent that will bite you if you go near it; its 3 teeth are lion's teeth, destroying the souls of men. | Every offense is a two-edged sword; when it cuts, there can be no 4 healing. | Violence and arrogance wipe out wealth; so too a
5 proud man's home is destroyed | Prayer from a poor man's lips 6 is heard at once, and justice is quickly granted him. | He who hates correction walks the sinner's path, but he who fears the 7 Lord repents in his heart. | Widely known is the boastful 8 speaker, but the wise man knows his own faults. | He who builds his house with another's money is collecting stones for 9 his funeral mound. | A band of criminals is like a bundle of 10 tow; they will end in a flaming fire. | The path of sinners is smooth stones that end in the depths of the nether world.

11 The Wise and the Foolish Differ He who keeps the Law controls his impulses; he who is perfect in fear of the 12 Lord has wisdom. | He can never be taught who is not shrewd, 13 but one form of shrewdness is thoroughly bitter. | A wise man's knowledge wells up in a flood, and his counsel, like a living 14 spring; | a fool's mind is like a broken jar—no knowledge at all 15 can it hold. | When an intelligent man hears words of wisdom, he approves them and adds to them; the wanton hears them 16 with scorn and casts them behind his back. | A fool's chatter is like a load on a journey, but there is charm to be found upon the 17 lips of the wise. | The views of a prudent man are sought in 18 an assembly, and his words are considered with care. | Like a house in ruins is wisdom to a fool; the stupid man knows it only 19 as inscrutable words. | Like fetters on the legs is learning to a 20 fool, like a manacle on his right hand. | A fool raises his voice in laughter, but a prudent man at the most smiles gently. | 21 Like a chain of gold is learning to a wise man, like a bracelet on his right arm.

22 The fool steps boldly into a house, while the well-bred man 23 remains outside; | a boor peeps through the doorway of a house, 24 but a cultured man keeps his glance cast down. | It is rude for one to listen at a door; a cultured man would be overwhelmed 25 by the disgrace of it. | The lips of the impious talk of what is not their concern, but the words of the prudent are carefully 26 weighed. | Fools' thoughts are in their mouths, wise men's 27 words are in their hearts. | When a godless man curses his 21, 27: This may mean if a man curses one who led him into sin, he implicitly curses himself for having yielded to the sin.

28 adversary, he really curses himself. | A slanderer besmirches himself, and is hated by his neighbors.

22

1 On Laziness and Foolishness The sluggard is like a stone 2 in the mud; everyone hisses at his disgrace. | The sluggard is like a lump of dung; whoever touches him wipes his hands. | 3 An unruly child is a disgrace to its father; if it be a daughter, 4 she brings him to poverty. | A thoughtful daughter becomes a treasure to her husband, a shameless one is her father's grief. | 5 A hussy shames her father and her husband; by both she is 6 despised. | Like a song in time of mourning is inopportune talk,
7 but lashes and discipline are at all times wisdom. | Teaching a fool is like gluing a broken pot, or like disturbing a man in the 8 depths of sleep; | he talks with a slumberer who talks with a fool, for when it is over, he will say, "What was that?" | 9 Weep over the dead man, for his light has gone out; weep over 10 the fool, for sense has left him. | Weep but a little over the dead man, for he is at rest; but worse than death is the life of 11 a fool. | Seven days of mourning for the dead, but for the wicked fool a whole lifetime.

12 Speak but seldom with the stupid man, be not the companion 13 of a brute; | beware of him lest you have trouble and be spattered when he shakes himself; turn away from him and you will find rest and not be wearied by his lack of sense. | 14 What is heavier than lead, and what is its name but "Fool"?
15 | Sand and salt and an iron mass are easier to bear than a stupid man.

16 Masonry bonded with wooden beams is not loosened by an earthquake; neither is a resolve constructed with careful delib-17 eration shaken in a moment of fear. | A resolve that is backed by prudent understanding is like the polished surface of a 18 smooth wall. | Small stones lying on an open height will not remain when the wind blows; neither can a timid resolve based on foolish plans withstand fear of any kind.

19 The Preservation of Friendship One who jabs the eye 20 brings tears: he who pierces the heart bares its feelings. | He who throws stones at birds drives them away, and he who 21 insults a friend breaks up the friendship. | Should you draw a 22 sword against a friend, despair not, it can be undone. | Should you speak sharply to a friend, fear not, you can be reconciled.
But a contemptuous insult, a confidence broken, or a treacherous attack will drive away any friend.

23 Make fast friends with a man while he is poor; thus will you enjoy his prosperity with him. In time of trouble remain true 24 to him, so as to share in his inheritance when it comes. | Before flames burst forth an oven smokes; so does abuse come before 25 bloodshed. | From a friend in need of support no one need hide 26 in shame; | but from him who brings harm to his friend all will stand aloof who hear of it.

27 Prayer Who will set a guard over my mouth, and upon my lips an effective seal, that I may not fall through them, that my tongue may not destroy me?

23

1 Lord, Father and Master of my life, permit me not to fall 2 by them! | Who will apply the lash to my thoughts, to my mind the rod of discipline, that my failings may not be spared 3 nor the sins of my heart overlooked; | lest my failings increase and my sins be multiplied; lest I succumb to my foes, and my 4 enemy rejoice over me? | Lord, Father and God of my life,
5 abandon me not into their control! | A brazen look allow me
6 not; ward off passion from my heart, | let not the lustful cravings of the flesh master me, surrender me not to shameless desires.

7 The Proper Use of the Tongue Give heed, my children to the instruction that I pronounce, for he who keeps it will not 8 be enslaved. | Through his lips is the sinner ensnared; the 9 railer and the arrogant man fall thereby. | Let not your mouth form the habit of swearing, or becoming too familiar with the 10 Holy Name. | Just as a slave that is constantly under scrutiny will not be without welts, so one who swears continually by the 11 Holy Name will not remain free from sin. | A man who often swears heaps up obligations; the scourge will never be far from his house. If he swears in error, he incurs guilt; if he neglects his obligation, his sin is doubly great. If he swears without reason he cannot be found just, and all his house will 12 suffer affliction. | There are words which merit death; may they never be heard among Jacob's heirs. For all such words are 13 foreign to the devout, who do not wallow in sin. | Let not your mouth become used to coarse talk, for in it lies sinful 14 matter. | Keep your father and mother in mind when you sit among the mighty, lest in their presence you commit a blunder and disgrace your upbringing, by wishing you had never been 15 born or cursing the day of your birth. | A man who has the habit of abusive language will never mature in character as long as he lives.

16 Sins of the Flesh Two types of men multiply sins, a third draws down wrath; for burning passion is a blazing fire, not to be quenched till it burns itself out: a man given to sins of the 17 flesh, who never stops until the fire breaks forth; | the rake to whom all bread is sweet and who is never through till he 18 dies; | and the man who dishonors his marriage bed and says to himself, "Who can see me? Darkness surrounds me, walls hide me; no one sees me; why should I fear to sin?" Of the Most 19 High he is not mindful, | fearing only the eyes of men; he does not understand that the eyes of the Lord, ten thousand times brighter than the sun, observe every step a man takes and peer 20 into hidden corners. | He who knows all things before they 21 exist still knows them all after they are made. | Such a man will be punished in the streets of the city; when he least expects it, he will be apprehended.
22 So also with the woman who is unfaithful to her husband 23 and offers as heir her son by a stranger. | First, she has disobeyed the law of the Most High; secondly, she has wronged her husband; thirdly, in her wanton adultery she has borne 24 children by another man. | Such a woman will be dragged before the assembly, and her punishment will extend to her 25 children; | her children will not take root; her branches will not
26 bring forth fruit. | She will leave an accursed memory; her 27 disgrace will never be blotted out. | Thus all who dwell on the earth shall know, and all who inhabit the world shall understand, that nothing is better than the fear of the Lord, nothing more salutary than to obey his commandments.

24

1 Praise of Wisdom Wisdom sings her own praises, before 2 her own people she proclaims her glory; | in the assembly of the

---

24, 1-31: This is the most famous chapter in the book, both for its doctrine and poetic beauty. Wisdom poetically personified, is simultaneously depicted as intimately united with God and yet as a distinct quality of God. Wisdom here is not described as the Second or Third Person of the Blessed Trinity. In all the New Testament, the prologue of St. John's Gospel (Jn 1, 1-18) is the passage most influenced by this wisdom passage. Parts of ch. 24 are accommodated to the Blessed Virgin. Vv. 14-16 form the Epistle to the common of her feasts and to the Feast of the Presentation; vv. 23-31 form the Epistle of five other Marian feasts.

Verses 1-21 are often compared with the other classical passages of wisdom personified, but especially with Prv 8, 1-36. Personified wisdom praises herself before Israel (v. 1) and before the court of heaven (v. 2).

The following verses (3-6), in which Wisdom is described as accompanying God at creation, are influenced by Prv 8, 22-31. See Prv 8, 22-31 n. God then commanded Wisdom to dwell in Israel (vv. 7-12),

Most High she opens her mouth, in the presence of his host 3 she declares her worth: | "From the mouth of the Most High 4 I came forth, and mistlike covered the earth. | In the highest 5 heavens did I dwell, my throne on a pillar of cloud. | The vault of heaven I compassed alone, through the deep abyss I wan-6 dered. | Over waves of the sea, over all the land, over every 7 people and nation I held sway. | Among all these I sought a resting place; in whose inheritance should I abide?
8 "Then the Creator of all gave me his command, and he who formed me chose the spot for my tent, saying, 'In Jacob make 9 your dwelling, in Israel your inheritance.' | Before all ages in the beginning, he created me, and through all ages I shall 10 not cease to be. | In the holy Tent I ministered before him, and 11 in Sion I fixed my abode. | Thus in the chosen city he has given 12 me rest, in Jerusalem is my domain. | I have struck root among the glorious people, in the portion of the Lord, his heritage.
13 "Like a cedar on Lebanon I am raised aloft, like a cypress on 14 Mount Hermon, | like a palm tree in En-gaddi, like a rosebush in Jericho, like a fair olive tree in the field, like a plane tree 15 growing beside the water. | Like cinnamon, or fragrant balm or precious myrrh, I give forth perfume; like galbanum and onycha and sweet spices, like the odor of incense in the Holy 16 Place. | I spread out my branches like a terebinth, my branches
17 so bright and so graceful. | I bud forth delights like the vine;
18 my blossoms become fruit fair and rich. | Come to me, all you 19 that yearn for me, and be filled with my fruits; | you will remember me as sweeter than honey, better to have than the 20 honeycomb. | He who eats of me will hunger still, he who 21 drinks of me will thirst for more; | he who obeys me will not be put to shame, he who serves me will never fail." 22 All this is true of the book of the Most High's covenant, the Law which Moses commanded us as an inheritance for the 23 community of Jacob. | It overflows, like the Phison, with 24 wisdom—like the Tigris in the days of the new fruits. | It runs

i.e., to make His people wise. Wisdom's beneficial influence is symbolized by graceful trees (vv. 13-21), e.g., the "cedar" symbolizes strength; "cypress," majesty; "palm tree," beauty; and "olive tree," a healing quality.

24, 22-31: Wisdom ends her speech in v. 21. The author speaks to the end of the chapter. He identifies wisdom with the Mosaic Law especially when he says, "all this" (v. 22), which refers to wisdom in the preceding verses. He proceeds to compare wisdom with the Mosaic Law (vv. 23-25). It is more rewarding now to compare Christ's words (Mt 11, 28-30) with the above verses 18-21. Under the figure of a rivulet developing into a sea, the author describes how he shared his wisdom with others (vv. 28-31).

over, like the Euphrates, with understanding, like the Jordan at 25 harvest time. | It sparkles like the Nile with knowledge, like the 26 Gihon at vintage time. | The first man never finished comprehending wisdom, nor will the last succeed in fathoming her. | 27 For deeper than the sea are her thoughts; her counsels, than the great abyss.
28 Now I, like a rivulet from her stream, channeling the waters
29 into a garden, | said to myself, "I will water my plants, my flower bed I will drench"; and suddenly this rivulet of mine
30 became a river, then this stream of mine, a sea. | Thus do I send my teachings forth shining like the dawn, to become 31 known afar off. | Thus do I pour out instruction like prophecy and bestow it on generations to come.

1 Those Who Are Worthy of Praise With three things I am delighted, for they are pleasing to the Lord and to men: harmony among brethren, friendship among neighbors, and 2 the mutual love of husband and wife. | Three kinds of men I hate; their manner of life I loathe indeed: a proud pauper, a rich dissembler, and an old man lecherous in his dotage.
3 What you have not saved in your youth, how will you
4 acquire in your old age? | How becoming to the gray-haired is judgment, and a knowledge of counsel to those on in years! |
5 How becoming to the aged is wisdom, understanding and 6 prudence to the venerable! | The crown of old men is wide experience; their glory, the fear of the Lord.
7 There are nine who come to my mind as blessed, a tenth whom my tongue proclaims: the man who finds joy in his children, and he who lives to see his enemies' downfall. |
8 Happy is he who dwells with a sensible wife, and he who plows not like a donkey yoked with an ox. Happy is he who sins not
9 with his tongue, and he who serves not his inferior. | Happy is he who finds a friend and he who speaks to attentive ears. | 10 He who finds wisdom is great indeed, but not greater than he 11 who fears the Lord. | Fear of the Lord surpasses all else, its possessor is beyond compare.

12 Wicked and Virtuous Women Worst of all wounds is that of the heart, worst of all evils is that of a woman. | 13 Worst of all sufferings is that from one's foes, worst of all 14 vengeance is that of one's enemies: | no poison worse than that 15 of a serpent, no venom greater than that of a woman. | With a dragon or a lion I would rather dwell than live with an evil
16 woman. | Wickedness changes a woman's looks, and makes her sullen as a female bear. | When her husband sits among his neighbors, a bitter sigh escapes him unawares.

There is scarce any evil like that in a woman; may she fall to the lot of the sinner! | Like a sandy hill to aged feet is a railing wife to a quiet man. | Stumble not through woman's beauty, nor be greedy for her wealth; | the man is a slave, in disgrace and shame, when a wife supports her husband. | Depressed mind, saddened face, broken heart—this from an evil wife. Feeble hands and quaking knees—from a wife who brings no happiness to her husband. | In woman was sin's beginning, and because of her we all die. | Allow water no outlet, and be not indulgent to an erring wife. | If she walks not by your side, cut her away from you.

26

Happy the husband of a good wife, twice-lengthened are his days; | a worthy wife brings joy to her husband, peaceful and full is his life. | A good wife is a generous gift bestowed upon him who fears the Lord; | be he rich or poor, his heart is content, and a smile is ever on his face.
There are three things at which my heart quakes, a fourth before which I quail: though false charges in public, trial before all the people, and lying testimony are harder to bear than death, | a jealous wife is heartache and mourning and a scourging tongue like the other three. | A bad wife is a chafing yoke;
he who marries her seizes a scorpion. | A drunken wife arouses great anger, for she does not hide her shame. | By her eyelids and her haughty stare an unchaste wife can be recognized.
Keep a strict watch over an unruly wife, lest, finding an opportunity, she make use of it; | follow close if her eyes are bold, and be not surprised if she betrays you: | as a thirsty traveler with eager mouth drinks from any water that he finds, so she sits down before every tent and opens her quiver for every arrow.
A gracious wife delights her husband, her thoughtfulness puts flesh on his bones; | a gift from the Lord is her governed speech, and her firm virtue is of surpassing worth. | Choicest of blessings is a modest wife, priceless her chaste person. | Like the sun rising in the Lord's heavens, the beauty of a virtuous wife is the radiance of her home. | Like the light which shines

25, 18b: This Hebrew expression, referring to an unfaithful wife, is similar to our: "to the devil with her."

26, 17-18: Holy lampstand . . . golden columns: they stood in the temple.

above the holy lampstand, are her beauty of face and graceful 18 figure. | Golden columns on silver bases are her shapely limbs and steady feet.

19 Dangers to Integrity and Friendship These two bring grief to my heart, and the third arouses my horror: a wealthy man reduced to want; illustrious men held in contempt; and the man who passes from justice to sin, for whom the Lord makes ready the sword.
20 A merchant can hardly remain upright, nor a shopkeeper free from sin;

27

1 For the sake of profit many sin, and the struggle for wealth 2 blinds the eyes. | Like a peg driven between fitted stones, be-3 tween buying and selling sin is wedged in. | Unless you earnestly hold fast to the fear of the Lord, suddenly your house will be thrown down.
4 When a sieve is shaken, the husks appear; so do a man's 5 faults when he speaks. | As the test of what the potter molds is in the furnace, so in his conversation is the test of a man. | 6 The fruit of a tree shows the care it has had; so too does a man's 7 speech disclose the bent of his mind. | Praise no man before he 8 speaks, for it is then that men are tested. | If you strive after justice you will attain it, and put it on like a splendid robe. | 9 Birds nest with their own kind, and fidelity comes to those who 10 live by it. | As a lion crouches in wait for prey, so do sins for 11 evildoers. | Ever wise are the discourses of the devout, but the 12 godless man, like the moon, is inconstant. | Limit the time you spend among fools, but frequent the company of thoughtful 13 men. | The conversation of the wicked is offensive, their laugh-
14 ter is wanton guilt. | Their oath-filled talk makes the hair
15 stand on end, their brawls make one stop one's ears. | Wrangling among the haughty ends in bloodshed, their cursing is painful to hear.
16 He who betrays a secret cannot be trusted, he will never find 17 an intimate friend. | Cherish your friend, keep faith with him; 18 but if you betray his confidence, follow him not; | for as an enemy might kill a man, you have killed your neighbor's friend-19 ship. | Like a bird released from the hand, you have let your 20 friend go and cannot recapture him; | follow him not, for he 21 is far away, he has fled like a gazelle from the trap. | A wound can be bound up, and an insult forgiven, but he who betrays secrets does hopeless damage.

22 Malice, Anger and Vengeance He who has shifty eyes 23 plots mischief and no one can ward him off; | in your presence he uses honeyed talk, and admires your every word, but later 24 he changes his tone and twists your words to your ruin. | There is nothing that I hate so much, and the Lord hates him as well. | 25 As a stone falls back on him who throws it up, so a blow struck 26 in treachery injures more than one. | As he who digs a pit falls 27 into it, and he who lays a snare is caught in it, | whoever does harm will be involved in it without knowing how it came upon him.
28 Mockery and abuse will be the lot of the proud, and vengeance 29 lies in wait for them like a lion. | The trap seizes those who rejoice in pitfalls, and pain will consume them before they die. | 30 wrath and anger are hateful things, yet the sinner hugs them tight.

28

1 The vengeful will suffer the Lord's vengeance, for he remem 2 bers their sins in detail. | Forgive your neighbor's injustice, then when you pray, your own sins will be forgiven.
3 Should a man nourish anger against his fellows and expec 4 healing from the Lord? | Should a man refuse mercy to his 5 fellows, yet seek pardon for his own sins? | If he who is bu
6 flesh cherishes wrath, who will forgive his sins? | Remember your last days, set enmity aside; remember death and decay 7 and cease from sin! | Think of the commandments, hate no your neighbor; of the Most High's covenant, and overlook faults 8 Avoid strife and your sins will be fewer, for a quarrelsom
9 man kindles disputes, | commits the sin of disrupting friend 10 ship and sows discord among those at peace. | The more wood the greater the fire, the more underlying it, the fiercer the fight the greater a man's strength, the sterner his anger, the greate 11 his power, the greater his wrath. | Pitch and resin make fire flare up, and insistent quarrels provoke bloodshed.

12 The Evil Tongue If you blow upon a spark, it quicken into flame, if you spit on it, it dies out; yet both you do with 13 your mouth! | Cursed be the gossiper and the double-tongued
14 for they destroy the peace of many. | A meddlesome tongu subverts many, and makes them refugees among the peoples it destroys walled cities, and overthrows powerful dynasties.
15 A meddlesome tongue can drive virtuous women from thei 16 homes and rob them of the fruit of their toil; | whoever heed it has no rest, nor can he dwell in peace.
17 A blow from a whip raises a welt, but a blow from th

18 tongue smashes bones; | many have fallen by the edge of the 19 sword, but not as many as by the tongue. | Happy he who is sheltered from it, and has not endured its wrath; who has not 20 borne its yoke nor been fettered with its chains; | for its yoke 21 is a yoke of iron and its chains are chains of bronze! | Dire is the death it inflicts, besides which even the nether world is a 22 gain; | it will not take hold among the just nor scorch them in 23 its flame, | but those who forsake the Lord will fall victims to it, as it burns among them unquenchably! It will hurl itself against them like a lion; like a panther, it will tear them to 24 pieces. | As you hedge round your vineyard with thorns, set
25 barred doors over your mouth; | as you seal up your silver 26 and gold, so balance and weigh your words. | Take care not to slip by your tongue and fall victim to your foe waiting in ambush.

29

1 Loans, Alms and Surety He does a kindness who lends to his neighbor, and he fulfills the precepts who holds out a 2 helping hand. | Lend to your neighbor in his hour of need, 3 and pay back your neighbor when a loan falls due; | keep your promise, be honest with him, and you will always come by 4 what you need. | Many a man who asks for a loan adds to the 5 burdens of those who help him; | when he borrows, he kisses the lender's hand and speaks with respect of his creditor's wealth; but when payment is due he disappoints him and says 6 he is helpless to meet the claim. | If the lender is able to recover barely half, he considers this an achievement; if not, he is cheated of his wealth and acquires an enemy at no extra charge; with curses and insults the borrower pays him back, 7 with abuse instead of honor. | Many refuse to lend, not out of meanness, but from fear of being cheated.
8 To a poor man, however, be generous; keep him not waiting 9 for your alms; | because of the precept, help the needy, and in their want, do not send them away empty-handed.
10 Spend your money for your brother and friend, and hide it 11 not under a stone to perish; | dispose of your treasure as the Most High commands, for that will profit you more than the 12 gold. | Store up almsgiving in your treasure house, and it will 13 save you from every evil; | better than a stout shield and a sturdy spear it will fight for you against the foe.
14 A good man goes surety for his neighbor, and only the 15 shameless would play him false; | forget not the kindness of 16 your backer, for he offers his very life for you. | The wicked turn a pledge on their behalf into misfortune, and the ingrate

17 abandons his protector; | going surety has ruined many pros
18 perous men and tossed them about like waves of the sea, | ha exiled men of prominence and sent them wandering throug 19 foreign lands. | The sinner through surety comes to grief, an 20 he who undertakes too much falls into lawsuits. | Go surety for your neighbor according to your means, but take care le you fall thereby.

21 Frugality and Its Rewards Life's prime needs are wate 22 bread, and clothing, a house, too, for decent privacy. | Bett a poor man's fare under the shadow of one's own roof tha 23 sumptuous banquets among strangers. | Be it little or much, b content with what you have, and pay no heed to him wh 24 would disparage your home; | a miserable life it is to go fro house to house, for as a guest you dare not open your mouth.
25 The visitor has no thanks for filling the cups; besides, you wi
26 hear these bitter words: | "Come here, stranger, set the tabl
27 give me to eat the food you have! | Away, stranger, for on 28 more worthy; for my brother's visit I need the room!" | Painfu things to a sensitive man are abuse at home and insults from h creditors.

30

1 The Training of Children He who loves his son cha tises him often, that he may be his joy when he grows up.
2 He who disciplines his son will benefit from him, and boast c 3 him among his intimates. | He who educates his son makes h enemy jealous, and shows his delight in him among his friends.
4 At the father's death, he will seem not dead, since he leaves afte
5 him one like himself, | whom he looks upon through life wit
6 joy, and even in death, without regret: | the avenger he leave against his foes, and the one to repay his friends with kindnes 7 He who spoils his son will have wounds to bandage, and wi
8 quake inwardly at every outcry. | A colt untamed turns ou
9 stubborn; a son left to himself grows up unruly. | Pamper you child and he will be a terror for you, indulge him and he wi 10 bring you grief. | Share not in his frivolity lest you share in h
11 sorrow, when finally your teeth are clenched in remorse. | Giv him not his own way in his youth, and close not your eyes t 12 his follies. | Bend him to the yoke when he is young, thras his sides while he is still small, lest he become stubborn, disobe 13 you, and leave you disconsolate. | Discipline your son, mak heavy his yoke, lest his folly humiliate you.

14 Health of Soul and Body Better a poor man strong an robust, than a rich man with wasted frame. | More precious than gold is health and well-being, contentment of spirit than coral. | No treasure greater than a healthy body; no happiness, than a joyful heart! | Preferable is death to a bitter life, unending sleep to constant illness. | Dainties set before one who cannot eat are like the offerings placed before a tomb. | What good is an offering to an idol that can neither taste nor smell? | So it is with the afflicted man who groans at the good things his eyes behold!

Do not give in to sadness, torment not yourself with brooding; | gladness of heart is the very life of man, cheerfulness prolongs his days. | Distract yourself, renew your courage, drive resentment far away from you; for worry has brought death to many, nor is there aught to be gained from resentment. | Envy and anger shorten one's life, worry brings on premature old age. | One who is cheerful and gay while at table benefits from his food.

The Proper Attitude toward Riches Keeping watch over riches wastes the flesh, and the care of wealth drives away rest. | Concern for one's livelihood banishes slumber; more than a serious illness it disturbs repose. | The rich man labors to pile up wealth, and his only rest is wanton pleasure; | the poor man toils for a meager subsistence, and if ever he rests, he finds himself in want. | The lover of gold will not be free from sin, for he who pursues wealth is led astray by it. | Many have been ensnared by gold, though destruction lay before their eyes; | it is a stumbling block to those who are avid for it, a snare for every fool.

Happy the rich man found without fault, who turns not aside after gain! | Who is he, that we may praise him? he, of all his kindred, has done wonders, | for he has been tested by gold and come off safe, and this remains his glory; he could have sinned but did not, could have done evil but would not, | so that his possessions are secure, and the assembly recounts his praises.

31, 2: The Hebrew adds a verse that seems out of place here: "A thful comrade drives away reproach, and the friend who keeps secrets as dear as life."

31, 5: The lover of gold: compare Vergil's saying: "the accursed nger for gold."

31, 8-11: Apparently, a rich man who was also pious was rare in rach's time. V. 11 may allude to an ancient custom of writing the mes of benefactors on the walls of synagogues. This passage is accomodated to the Epistle of the Mass of Confessors who are not bishops.

12 Table Etiquette If you are dining with a great man, brin not a greedy gullet to his table, nor cry out, "How much foo 13 is here!" | Remember that gluttony is evil. No creature i greedier than the eye: therefore it weeps for any cause.
15 Recognize that your neighbor feels as you do, and keep in min
14 your own dislikes: | toward what he eyes, do not put out 16 hand; nor reach when he does for the same dish. | Behave a table like a favored guest, and be not greedy, lest you be de 17 spised. | Be the first to stop, as befits good manners; gorge no
18 yourself, lest you give offense. | If there are many with you a 19 table, be not the first to reach out your hand. | Does not a littl suffice for a well-bred man? When he lies down, it is withou 20 discomfort. | Distress and anguish and loss of sleep, and rest less tossing for the glutton! Moderate eating ensures soun 21 slumber and a clear mind next day on rising. | If perforce yo have eaten too much, once you have emptied your stomach, yo will have relief.

22 Listen to me, my son, and scorn me not; later you will fin my advice good. In whatever you do, be moderate, and no sick 23 ness will befall you. | On a man generous with food, blessing are invoked, and this testimony to his goodness is lasting; 24 he who is miserly with food is denounced in public, and thi 25 testimony to his stinginess is lasting. | Let not wine-drinking b the proof of your strength, for wine has been the ruin of many.
26 As the furnace probes the work of the smith, so does wine th 27 hearts of the insolent. | Wine is very life to man if taken i moderation. Does he really live who lacks the wine which wa 28 created for his joy? | Joy of heart, good cheer and merrimen
29 are wine drunk freely at the proper time. | Headache, bitter
30 ness and disgrace is wine drunk amid anger and strife. | Mor and more wine is a snare for the fool; it lessens his strength an 31 multiplies his wounds. | Rebuke not your neighbor when win is served, nor put him to shame while he is merry; use no hars words with him and distress him not in the presence of other

1 If you are chosen to preside at dinner, be not puffed up, bu with the guests be as one of themselves; take care of them firs 2 before you sit down; | when you have fulfilled your duty, the take your place, to share in their joy and win praise for you 3 hospitality. | Being older, you may talk; that is only your righ
4 but temper your wisdom, not to disturb the singing. | Whe wine is present, do not pour out discourse, and flaunt not you 5 wisdom at the wrong time. | Like a seal of carnelian in a settin
6 of gold is a concert when wine is served. | Like a gold mountin

with an emerald seal is string music with delicious wine. | 7 Young man, speak only when necessary, when they have asked 8 you more than once; | be brief, but say much in those few 9 words, be like the wise man, taciturn. | When among your elders be not forward, and with officials be not too insistent. | 10 Like the lightning that flashes before a storm is the esteem that 11 shines on modesty. | When it is time to leave, tarry not; be off
12 for home! There take your ease, | and there enjoy doing as you 13 wish, but without sin or words of pride. | Above all, give praise to your Creator, who showers his favors upon you.

14 The Providence of God He who would find God must 15 accept discipline; he who seeks him obtains his request. | He who studies the Law masters it, but the hypocrite finds it a 16 trap. | His judgment is sound who fears the Lord; out of 17 obscurity he draws forth a clear plan. | The sinner turns aside 18 reproof and distorts the law to suit his purpose. | The thoughtful man will not neglect direction; the proud and insolent man 19 is deterred by nothing. | Do nothing without counsel, and then 20 you need have no regrets. | Go not on a way that is set with 21 snares, and let not the same thing trip you twice. | Be not too
22 sure even of smooth roads, be careful on all your paths. | 23 Whatever you do, be on your guard, for in this way you will 24 keep the commandments. | He who keeps the Law preserves himself; and he who trusts in the Lord shall not be put to shame.

33

1 No evil can harm the man who fears the Lord; through trials, 2 again and again he is safe. | He who hates the Law is without 3 wisdom, and is tossed about like a boat in a storm. | The prudent man trusts in the word of the Lord, and the Law is de-4 pendable for him as a divine oracle. | Prepare your words and you will be listened to; draw upon your training, and then give your answer.

5 Like the wheel of a cart is the mind of a fool; his thoughts
6 revolve in circles. | A fickle friend is like the stallion that neighs, 7 no matter who the rider. | Why is one day more important than 8 another, when it is the sun that lights up every day? | It is due to the Lord's wisdom that they differ; it is through him the sea-9 sons and feasts come and go. | Some he dignifies and sanctifies, 10 and others he lists as ordinary days. | So too, all men are of 11 clay, for from earth man was formed; | yet with his great knowledge the Lord makes men unlike; in different paths he has

12 them walk. | Some he blesses and makes great, some he sancti fies and draws to himself. Others he curses and brings low, an 13 expels them from their place. | Like clay in the hands of potter, to be molded according to his pleasure, so are men in th hands of their Creator, to be assigned by him their function.
14 As evil contrasts with good, and death with life, so are sinner
15 in contrast with the just; | see now all the works of the Mos High: they come in pairs, the one the opposite of the other.
16 Now I am the last to keep vigil, like a gleaner after th
17 vintage; | since by the Lord's blessing I have made progres
18 till like a vintager I have filled my winepress, | I would inforr you that not for myself only have I toiled, but for every seeke after wisdom.

19 Property and Servants Listen to me, O leaders of the mul 20 titude; O rulers of the assembly, give ear! | Let neither son nc wife, neither brother nor friend, have power over you as lon 21 as you live. | While breath of life is still in you, let no ma have dominion over you. Give not to another your wealth, les 22 then you have to plead with him; | far better that your childre plead with you than that you should look to their generosity.
23 Keep control over all your affairs; let no one tarnish you 24 glory. | When your few days reach their limit, at the time c death distribute your inheritance.– 25 Fodder and whip and loads for an ass; the yoke and harnes 27 and the rod of his master. | Food, correction and work for 26 slave; and for a wicked slave, punishment in the stocks. | Mak a slave work and he will look for his rest; let his hands be idl 28 and he will seek to be free. | Force him to work that he be nc 29 idle, for idleness is an apt teacher of mischief. | Put him t work, for that is what befits him; if he becomes unruly, loa 30 him with chains. | But never lord it over any human being, an 31 do nothing unjust. | If you have but one slave, treat him lik
32 yourself, for you have acquired him with your life's blood; | i you have but one slave, deal with him as a brother, for you nee 33 him as you need your life: | if you mistreat him and he run away, in what direction will you look for him?

33, 12: Sirach contrasts the Chosen People (v. 12a) with the pagan (v. 12b) and may be alluding to the curse of Ham (see Gn 9, 20-27 n). Underneath this characteristic oriental exaggeration, Sirach may b prodding fellow Jews of his day who wanted to ape the ways of th Greeks and lose their Jewish identity.

33, 16-18: Sirach is the most recent wisdom writer.

1 Trust in the Lord and Not in Dreams Empty and false are the hopes of the senseless, and fools are borne aloft by 2 dreams. | Like a man who catches at shadows or chases the 3 wind, is the one who believes in dreams. | What is seen in dreams is to reality what the reflection of a face is to the face 4 itself. | Can the unclean produce the clean? can the liar ever
5 speak the truth? | Divination, omens and dreams all are un-6 real; what you already expect, the mind depicts. | Unless it be a vision specially sent by the Most High, fix not your heart on 7 it; | for dreams have led many astray, and those who believed 8 in them have perished. | The Law is fulfilled without fail, and perfect wisdom is found in the mouth of the faithful man.

9 A man with training gains wide knowledge; a man of ex-10 perience speaks sense. | One never put to the proof knows little,
11 whereas with travel a man adds to his resourcefulness. | I have seen much in my travels, learned more than ever I could say. | 12 Often I was in danger of death, but by these attainments I was saved.

13 Lively is the courage of those who fear the Lord, for they put 14 their hope in their savior; | he who fears the Lord is never 15 alarmed, never afraid; for the Lord is his hope. | Happy the soul that fears the Lord! In whom does he trust, and who is his 16 support? | The eyes of the Lord are upon those who love him; he is their mighty shield and strong support, a shelter from the heat, a shade from the noonday sun, a guard against stumbling, 17 a help against falling. | He buoys up the spirits, brings a sparkle to the eyes, gives health and life and blessing.

18 True Worship of God Tainted his gifts who offers in sacrifice ill-gotten goods! Mock presents from the lawless win 19 not God's favor. | The Most High approves not the gifts of the godless, nor for their many sacrifices does he forgive their sins. | 20 Like the man who slays a son in his father's presence is he who 21 offers sacrifice from the possessions of the poor. | The bread of charity is life itself for the needy; he who withholds it is a man 22 of blood. | He slays his neighbor who deprives him of his living;
he sheds blood who denies the laborer his wages.

23 If one man builds up and another tears down, what do they 24 gain but trouble? | If one man prays and another curses, whose 25 voice will the Lord hear? | If a man again touches a corpse after 26 he has bathed, what did he gain by the purification? | So with a man who fasts for his sins, but then goes and commits them again: who will hear his prayer, and what has he gained by his mortification?

35

1 To keep the Law is a great oblation, and he who observes th
2 commandments sacrifices a peace offering. | In works of charit one offers fine flour, and when he gives alms he presents h 3 sacrifice of praise. | To refrain from evil pleases the Lord, an 4 to avoid injustice is an atonement. | Appear not before th
Lord empty-handed, for all that you offer is in fulfillment of th
5 precepts. | The just man's offering enriches the altar and rise
6 as a sweet odor before the Most High. | The just man's sacrific
7 is most pleasing, nor will it ever be forgotten. | In generou spirit pay homage to the Lord, be not sparing of freewill gifts.
8 With each contribution show a cheerful countenance, and pa 9 your tithes in a spirit of joy. | Give to the Most High as he ha given to you, generously, according to your means.
10 For the Lord is one who always repays, and he will give bacl
11 to you sevenfold. | But offer no bribes, these he does not accept
12 Trust not in sacrifice of the fruits of extortion, | for he is a Go
13 of justice, who knows no favorites. | Though not unduly partia
14 toward the weak, yet he hears the cry of the oppressed. | He i not deaf to the wail of the orphan, nor to the widow when sh pours out her complaint; 15 Do not the tears that stream down her cheek cry out agains 16 him that causes them to fall? | He who serves God willingly i 17 heard; his petition reaches the heavens. | The prayer of th lowly pierces the clouds; it does not rest till it reaches its goal, 18 nor will it withdraw till the Most High responds, judges justly and affirms the right.
19 God indeed will not delay, and like a warrior, will not be stil 20 till he breaks the backs of the merciless and wreaks vengeance 21 upon the proud; | till he destroys the haughty root and branch
22 and smashes the scepter of the wicked; | till he requites man kind according to its deeds, and repays men according to their 23 thoughts; | till he defends the cause of his people, and gladden 24 them by his mercy. | Welcome is his mercy in time of distress as rain clouds in time of drought.

1 A Prayer for God's People Come to our aid, O God of 2 the universe, and put all the nations in dread of you! | Raise your hand against the heathen, that they may realize your 35, 19-24: This is the author's hope, which is a far cry from Christ's deeper law of charity not yet revealed.

36, 1-17: This has been called "Prayer for the Deliverance and Restoration of Israel." It shares some similarities with the prayer called "The Eighteen Blessings" still used in synagogues. Notice the stress put power. | As you have used us to show them your holiness, so now use them to show us your glory. | Thus they will know, as we know, that there is no God but you.

Give new signs and work new wonders; show forth the splendor of your right hand and arm; | rouse your anger, pour out wrath, humble the enemy, scatter the foe. | Hasten the day, bring on the time; | crush the heads of the hostile rulers. | Let raging fire consume the fugitive, and your people's oppressors meet destruction.
Gather all the tribes of Jacob, that they may inherit the land as of old, | show mercy to the people called by your name;
Israel, whom you named your first-born. | Take pity on your holy city, Jerusalem, your dwelling place. | Fill Sion with your majesty, your temple with your glory.
Give evidence of your deeds of old; fulfill the prophecies spoken in your name, | reward those who have hoped in you, and let your prophets be proved true. | Hear the prayer of your servants, for you are ever gracious to your people; | thus it will be known to the very ends of the earth that you are the eternal God.

Choice of Associates The throat can swallow any food, yet some foods are more agreeable than others; | as the palate
tests meat by its savor, so does a keen mind insincere words. | A deceitful character causes grief, but an experienced man can turn the tables on him. | Though any man may be accepted as a husband, yet one girl will be more suitable than another: | a woman's beauty makes her husband's face light up, for it surpasses all else that charms the eye; | and if, besides, her speech is kindly, his lot is beyond that of mortal men. | A wife is her husband's richest treasure, a helpmate, a steadying column. |
A vineyard with no hedge will be overrun; a man with no wife becomes a homeless wanderer. | Who will trust an armed band that shifts from city to city? | Or a man who has no nest, but lodges where night overtakes him?

n God's glory which His powerful justice will bring. At first lush the tone of revenge is loud but it is softened if we recall that, o the Jews, the destruction of God's enemies was a sign of the Messia's oming.

36, 3: As you punished us, now punish them.

36, 7: Hasten the day: of the Messia. This Messianic hope is very are in Sirach's book.

36, 10: Another sign of Messianic times was the return of all the ews to their homeland from abroad. This hope is still echoed in the ewish paschal rite with the ritual wish: "Next year back to Jerusalem."

37 1 Every friend declares his friendship, but there are friends
2 who are friends in name only. | Is it not a sorrow unto death
3 when your bosom companion becomes your enemy? | "Alas, my companion! Why were you created to blanket the earth with 4 deceit?" | A false friend will share your joys, but in time of 5 trouble he stands afar off. | A true friend will fight with you against the foe, against your enemies he will be your shield-6 bearer. | Forget not your comrade during the battle, and neglect him not when you distribute your spoils.
7 Every counselor points out a way, but some counsel ways of 8 their own; | be on the alert when one proffers advice, find out first of all what he wants. For he may be thinking of himself 9 alone; why should the profit fall to him? | He may tell you how good your way will be, and then stand by to watch your mis-10 fortune. | Seek no advice from one who regards you with hostility; from those who envy you, keep your intentions hidden. | 11 Speak not to a woman about her rival, nor to a coward about war, to a merchant about business, to a buyer about value, to a miser about generosity, to a cruel man about mercy, to a lazy man about work, to a seasonal laborer about the harvest, to an idle slave about a great task: pay no attention to any advice they 12 give. | Instead, associate with a religious man, who you are sure keeps the commandments; who is like-minded with yourself 13 and will feel for you if you fall. | Then, too, heed your own heart's counsel; for what have you that you can depend on 14 more? | A man's conscience can tell him his situation better 15 than seven watchmen in a lofty tower. | Most important of all, pray to God to set your feet in the path of truth.

16 Wisdom and Temperance A word is the source of every 17 deed; a thought, of every act. | The root of all conduct is the 18 mind; four branches it shoots forth: | good and evil, death and 19 life, their absolute mistress is the tongue. | A man may be wise
20 and benefit many, yet be of no use to himself. | Though a man may be wise, if his words are rejected he will be deprived of all 21 enjoyment. | When a man is wise to his own advantage, the 22 fruits of his knowledge are seen in his own person; | when a man is wise to his people's advantage, the fruits of his knowl-23 edge are enduring: | limited are the days of one man's life, but 24 the life of Israel is days without number. | One wise for himself
25 has full enjoyment, and all who see him praise him; | one wise for his people wins a heritage of glory, and his name endures forever.

26 My son, while you are well, govern your appetite so that you
27 allow it not what is bad for you; | for not every food is good 28 for everyone, nor is everything suited to every taste. | Be not drawn after every enjoyment, neither become a glutton for 29 choice foods, | for sickness comes with overeating, and gluttony 30 brings on biliousness. | Through lack of self-control many have died, but the abstemious man prolongs his life.

1 Sickness and Death Hold the physician in honor, for he is essential to you, and God it was who established his profession.
2 | From God the doctor has his wisdom, and the king provides
3 for his sustenance. | His knowledge makes the doctor distin-4 guished, and gives him access to those in authority. | God makes the earth yield healing herbs which the prudent man should not 5 neglect; | was not the water sweetened by a twig that men
6 might learn his power? | He endows men with the knowledge
7 to glory in his mighty works, | through which the doctor eases
8 pain and the druggist prepares his medicines; | thus God's creative work continues without cease in its efficacy on the surface of the earth.

9 My son, when you are ill, delay not, but pray to God, who 10 will heal you: | flee wickedness; let your hands be just, cleanse 11 your heart of every sin; | offer your sweet-smelling oblation and 12 petition, a rich offering according to your means. | Then give the doctor his place lest he leave; for you need him too. | 13.14 There are times that give him an advantage, | and he too beseeches God that his diagnosis may be correct and his treat-15 ment bring about a cure. | He who is a sinner toward his Maker will be defiant toward the doctor.

16 My son, shed tears for one who is dead with wailing and bitter lament; as is only proper, prepare the body, absent not yourself 17 from his burial: | weeping bitterly, mourning fully, pay your 18 tribute of sorrow, as he deserves, | one or two days, to prevent 19 gossip; then compose yourself after your grief, | for grief can bring on an extremity and heartache destroy one's health. | 20 Turn not your thoughts to him again; cease to recall him; think 21 rather of the end. | Recall him not, for there is no hope of his 22 return; it will not help him, but will do you harm. | Remember that his fate will aso be yours; for him it was yesterday, for 23 you today. | With the departed dead, let memory fade; rally your courage, once the soul has left.

38, 5: A reference to the episode in Ex 15, 25.

24 Vocations of the Craftsman and the Scribe The scribe's profession increases his wisdom; whoever is free from toil can 25 become a wise man. | How can he become learned who guides the plow, who thrills in wielding the goad like a lance, who guides the ox and urges on the bullock, and whose every con-26 cern is for cattle? | His care is for plowing furrows, and he keeps a watch on the beasts in the stalls.
27 So with every engraver and designer who, laboring night and day, fashions carved seals, and whose concern is to vary the pattern. His care is to produce a vivid impression, and he keeps watch till he finishes his design.
28 So with the smith standing near his anvil, forging crude iron.
The heat from the fire sears his flesh, yet he toils away in the furnace heat. The clang of the hammer deafens his ears, his eyes are fixed on the tool he is shaping. His care is to finish his work, and he keeps watch till he perfects it in detail.
29 So with the potter sitting at his labor, revolving the wheel with his feet. He is always concerned for his products, and turns 30 them out in quantity. | With his hands he molds the clay, and with his feet softens it. His care is for proper coloring, and he keeps watch on the fire of his kiln.
31 All these men are skilled with their hands, each one an expert 32 at his own task; | without them no city could be lived in, and 33 wherever they stay, they need not hunger. | They do not occupy the judge's bench, nor are they prominent in the assembly; they set forth no decisions or judgments, nor are they found among 34 the rulers; | yet they maintain God's ancient handiwork, and their concern is for exercise of their skill.

1 How different the man who devotes himself to the study of the Law of the Most High! He explores the wisdom of the men 2 of old and occupies himself with the prophecies; | he treasures the discourses of famous men, and goes to the heart of involved 3 sayings; | he studies obscure parables, and is busied with the 4 hidden meanings of the sages. | He is in attendance on the 5 great, and has entrance to the ruler. | He travels among the peoples of foreign lands to learn what is good and evil among 6 men. | His care is to seek the Lord, his Maker, to petition the 38, 24—39, 11: Orientalists often compare this section of the superiority of the scribe to "The Satire on the Trades," an instruction of Khety to his son. The Egyptian classic may date originally from 2150-1750 B.C. It is not known if Sirach borrowed from this Egyptian work.

39, 6-14: This section is most appropriately accommodated in the Epistle of the Mass for Doctors of the Church.

Most High, to open his lips in prayer, to ask pardon for his sins.
Then, if it pleases the Lord Almighty, he will be filled with the spirit of understanding; he will pour forth his words of wisdom 7 and in prayer give thanks to the Lord, | who will direct his knowledge and his counsel, as he meditates upon his mysteries.
8 | He will show the wisdom of what he has learned and glory 9 in the Law of the Lord's covenant. | Many will praise his understanding; his fame can never be effaced; unfading will be his 10 memory, through all generations his name will live; | peoples will speak of his wisdom, and in assembly sing his praises. | 11 While he lives he is one out of a thousand, and when he dies his renown will not cease.

12 Praise of God the Creator Once more I will set forth my 13 theme to shine like the moon in its fullness! | Listen, my faithful children: open up your petals, like roses planted near run-14 ning waters; | send up the sweet odor of incense, break forth in blossoms like the lily. Send up the sweet odor of your hymn of 15 praise; bless the Lord for all he has done! | Proclaim the greatness of his name, loudly sing his praises, with music on the harp and all stringed instruments; sing out with joy as you proclaim: 16 The works of God are all of them good; in its own time every 17 need is supplied. | At his word the waters become still as in a 18 flask; he had but to speak and the reservoirs were made. | He has but to command and his will is done; nothing can limit his 19 achievement. | The works of all mankind are present to him;
20 not a thing escapes his eye. | His gaze spans all the ages; to him 21 there is nothing unexpected. | No cause then to say: What is the purpose of this? Everything is chosen to satisfy a need. | 22 His blessing overflows like the Nile; like the Euphrates it 23 enriches the surface of the earth. | Again, his wrath expels
24 the nations and turns fertile land into a salt marsh. | For the 25 virtuous his paths are level, to the haughty they are steep; | good things for the good he provided from the beginning, but for 26 the wicked good things and bad. | Chief of all needs for human life are water and fire, iron and salt, the heart of the wheat, 27 milk and honey, the blood of the grape, and oil, and cloth; | for the good all these are good, but for the wicked they turn out 28 evil. | There are storm winds created to punish, which in their fury can dislodge mountains; when destruction must be, they hurl all their force and appease the anger of their Maker. | 29 In his treasury also, kept for the proper time, are fire and hail, 30 famine, disease, | ravenous beasts, scorpions, vipers, and the 31 avenging sword to exterminate the wicked; | in doing his bid-

39, 17: A reference to creation (Gn 1, 6-10).

ding they rejoice, in their assignments they disobey not h 32 command. | So from the first I took my stand, and wrote dow
33 as my theme: | the works of God are all of them good; ever 34 need when it comes he fills. | No cause then to say: "This i not as good as that"; for each shows its worth at the prope 35 time. | So now with full joy of heart proclaim and bless th name of the Holy One.

1 Joys and Miseries of Life A great anxiety has God a lotted, and a heavy yoke, to the sons of men; from the day on leaves his mother's womb to the day he returns to the mother o 2 all the living, | his thoughts, the fear in his heart, and hi
3 troubled forebodings till the day he dies— | whether he sits on 4 lofty throne or grovels in dust and ashes, | whether he bears
5 splendid crown or is wrapped in the coarsest of cloaks— | ar of wrath and envy, trouble and dread, terror of death, fury an strife. Even when he lies on his bed to rest, his cares at nigh disturb his sleep.
6 So short is his rest it seems like none, till in his dreams h struggles as he did by day, terrified by what his mind's ey 7 sees, like a fugitive being pursued; | as he reaches safety, h
8 wakes up astonished that there was nothing to fear. | So it with all flesh, with man and with beast, but for sinners seve 9 times more. | Plague and bloodshed, wrath and the swor
10 plunder and ruin, famine and death: | for the wicked, thes were created evil, and it is they who bring on destruction.
11 All that is of earth returns to earth, and what is from abov
12 returns above, | from strand to strand, in an unending strean
13 like a mighty torrent fed by thunderstorms; | there is joy whe a child first lifts his hands, yet all too soon comes his final en

15 godless is on sheer rock; | or they are like reeds on the river 16 bank, uprooted before all other plants; | thus all bribes an injustices will be effaced, but the divine mercy endures forever 17 Wealth or wages can make life sweet, but better than either 18 is finding a treasure. | A child or a city will preserve one'
19 name, but better than either, attaining wisdom. | Sheepfold and orchards bring flourishing repute, but better than either, either, conjugal love. | The flute and the harp offer sweet melody, but better than either, a voice that is true. | Charm and beauty delight the eye, but better than either, the flowers of the field. | A friend, a neighbor, are timely guides, but better than either, a prudent wife. | A brother, a helper, for times of stress;

but better than either, charity that rescues. | Gold and silver make one's way secure, but better than either, sound judgment.
| Wealth and vigor build up confidence, but better than either, fear of God. Fear of the Lord leaves nothing wanting; he who has it need seek no other treasure: | the fear of God is a paradise of blessings; its canopy, all that is glorious.
My son, live not the life of a beggar, better to die than to beg;
| when one has to look to another's table, his life is not really a life. His neighbor's delicacies bring revulsion of spirit to one who understands inward feelings: | in the mouth of the shameless man begging is sweet, but within him it burns like fire.

41

O death! how bitter the thought of you for the man at peace amid his possessions, for the man unruffled and always successful, who still can enjoy life's pleasures. | O death! how welcome your sentence to the weak man of failing strength, tottering and always rebuffed, cynical and despairing. | Fear not death's decree; remember it embraces those before you, and those after.
| Thus God has appointed for all flesh; why then should you reject the will of the Most High? Whether one has lived a thousand years, a hundred, or ten, in the nether world he has no claim on life.
A reprobate line are the children of sinners, and witless offspring are in the homes of the wicked. | Their heritage is lost to sinners' children, and want abides with their descendants. | Children curse their wicked father, for they suffer disgrace through him. | Woe to you, O sinful men, who forsake the law of the Most High. | If you have children, they will be accursed, and death will overtake you as a sudden calamity. | Whatever is of nought returns to nought, so too the godless from void to void. | Man's body is a fleeting thing, but a virtuous name will never be annihilated. | Have a care for your name, for it will stand by you better than precious treasures in the thousands; | the boon of life is for limited days, but a good name, for days without number.

True and False Shame My children, heed my instruction about shame; judge of disgrace only according to my rules, for it is not always well to be ashamed, nor is it always the 15 proper thing to blush: | before father and mother be ashame of immorality, before master and mistress, of falsehood; 16 before prince and ruler, of flattery; before the public assembl 17 of crime; | before friend and companion, of disloyalty, and c

18 breaking an oath or agreement. | Be ashamed of hostilit toward the people where you settle, and of conflict with hi 19 who pitches his tent beside you; | of refusing to give whe
20 asked, of defrauding another of his appointed share; | of failin
21 to return a greeting, and of rebuffing a friend; | of lustin
22 after another's wife, and of trifling with his maid; | of usin harsh words with friends, and of accompanying your gifts wi 23 insults; | of repeating what you hear, and of betraying secre
24 — | these are the things that you should rightly avoid as shamu ful if you would be looked upon by everyone with favor.

42

1 But of these things be not ashamed, lest you sin throug
2 human respect: | of the law of the Most High and his precept
3 or of the sentence to be passed upon the sinful; | of sharing th expenses of a business or a journey, or of dividing an inheritanc 4 or property; | of accuracy of scales and balances, or of teste
5 measures and weights; | of acquiring much or little, or c income from business or trade; of constant training of children 6 or of scourging a disloyal servant; | of a seal to keep an errin wife at home, or of a lock placed where there are many hands; 7 of numbering every deposit, or of recording all that is given c 8 received; | of chastisement for the silly and the foolish, or c the aged claiming their just due from the young. Thus you wi 9 be truly cautious and recognized by all men as discreet.

9 A Father's Care for His Daughter A daughter is a trea ure that keeps her father wakeful, and worry over her drive away rest: lest she pass her prime unmarried, or when she 10 married, lest she be repudiated; | while unmarried, lest she b seduced, or, as a wife, lest she proved unfaithful; lest sh conceive in her father's home, or be sterile in that of her hu 11 band. | Keep a close watch on your daughter, lest she mak you the sport of your enemies, a byword in the city, a reproac among the people, an object of derision in public gathering See that there is no lattice in her room, no place that overlook 12 the approaches to the house. | Let her not parade her charm
13 before men, or spend her time with married women; | for ju as moths come from garments, so harm to women comes fro 14 women: | better a man's harshness than a woman's indulgenc whose shameless daughter is a source of disgrace.

15 The Works of God in Nature Now will I recall God's works; what I have seen, I will describe. At God's word were his works brought into being; they do his will as he has ordained 16 for them. | As the rising sun is clear to all, so the glory of the 17 Lord shines upon all his works; | yet even God's holy ones must fail in recounting the wonders of the Lord, though God has given these, his hosts, the strength to stand firm before his 18 glory. | He plumbs the depths and penetrates the heart; their innermost being he understands. The Lord possesses all knowl-19 edge, and sees from of old the things that are to come: | he makes known the past and the future, and reveals the deepest 20 secrets. | No understanding does he lack; no single thing
21 escapes him. | Perennial is his almighty wisdom; he is from all
22 eternity one and the same, | with nothing added, nothing taken
23 away; no need of a counselor for him! | How beautiful are all 24 his works! yet all that we see is but a flash. | God lives and remains forever, and to meet each need all things obey him. | 25 All of them differ, one from another, yet none of them has he made in vain, for each in turn, as it comes, is good; can one ever see enough of their splendor?

43

1 The clear vault of the sky shines forth like heaven itself, a 2 vision of glory. | The sun, resplendent at its rising: what a 3 wonderful work of the Lord it is! | At noon it scorches the 4 surface of the earth, and who can bear its fiery heat? | Like a blazing furnace for melting metal, the sun in its course sets the mountains aflame; by its fiery darts the land is consumed; 5 the eyes are dazzled by its light. | Great indeed is the Lord who 6 made it, at whose orders it urges on its steeds. | The moon, too, that marks the changing times, governing the seasons, their 7 lasting sign, | by which we know the feast days and fixed dates,
8 this light-giver which wanes in its course: | month by month it 9 renews itself, how wondrous in this change! | The beauty, the glory of the heavens are the stars, that rise to adorn the heights 10 of God, | at whose command they keep their place and never relax in their vigils. A weapon against the flood waters stored 11 on high, lighting up the firmament by its brilliance, | behold the rainbow! Then bless its Maker, for majestic indeed is its 12 splendor; | it vaults the heavens with its glory, this bow bent by the hands of God.

13 His power marks out the path for the lightning, and speeds 14 the arrows of his judgment to their goal. | Then the storehouse of the storm clouds is opened, and like vultures the clouds 15 hurry forth. | In his majesty he gives the storm its power and

16 scatters the hailstones. | The thunder of his voice makes the 17 earth writhe; at sight of him the mountains quake. | His awesome presence drives on the south wind, the angry north 18 wind, the hurricane and the storm. | He sprinkles the snow like fluttering birds; it comes to settle like swarms of locusts.
19 Its shining whiteness blinds the eyes, the mind is baffled by it 20 steady fall. | He scatters frost like so much salt, its crystal 21 sparkle like sapphires. | Cold northern blasts he sends that turn the ponds to ice. He freezes over every body of water, and 22 clothes each pool with a coat of mail. | When the mountain growth is scorched with heat, and the flowering plains a 23 though by flames, | the dripping clouds restore them all, and 24 the scattered dew enriches the parched land. | His is the plan 25 that calms the deep, and plants the islands in the sea. | Those who go down to the sea tell part of its story, and when we hear 26 them we are thunderstruck; | in it are his creatures, stupendous amazing, all kinds of life, and the monsters of the deep.
27 For him each messenger succeeds, and at his bidding accomplishes his will.

28 More than this we need not add; let the last word be, he is all.
29 in all! | Let us praise him the more, since we cannot fathom 30 him, for greater is he than all his works; | awful indeed is the 31 Lord's majesty, and wonderful is his power. | Lift up your voices to glorify the Lord, though he is still beyond your power 32 to praise; | extol him with renewed strength, and weary not though you cannot reach the end: great is the glory which the Most High has measured out, and his grandeur is from remote 33 time! | For who can see him and describe him? or who can 34 praise him as he is? | Beyond these, many things lie hid; only 35 a few of his works have we seen. | It is the Lord who has made all things, and to those who fear him he gives wisdom.

44

1 Praise of Israel's Great Ancestors Now will I praise those 2 godly men, our ancestors, each in his own time: | rulers of the earth by their authority, men of renown for their might

44—50: These famous chapters have been entitled the "Eulogy of the Fathers," or "Sacred History by Ben Sira." The purpose of the sage to encourage his contemporaries by the example of the Fathers, the equivalent of our saints, through what resembled our notion of "spiritual reading."

Sirach teaches that the "resistance movement" against the attempts of Hellenistic culture to absorb Jewish culture is not the work of a few "men of piety," as they were technically called, but of many such men in their past history. The sage's pedagogical method of appealing to or counselors in their wisdom, or seers of all things in prophecy; | resolute governors of peoples, or judges with discretion;

authors skilled in composition, or poets with collected proverbs;
| composers of melodious psalms, or discoursers on lyric themes;
| stalwart men, solidly established and at peace in their own estates— | all these were glorious in their time, each illustrious in his day. | Some of them have left behind a name that is remembered to their praise; | but of others there is no memory, for it perished when they perished, and they are as though they had never lived, they and their children after them. | Yet these also were godly men whose virtues have not been forgotten; | their wealth remains in their families, their heritage with their descendants; | through God's covenant with them their family endures, | and their hopes are never shattered.
All these are buried in peace, but their name lives on and on. |
At gatherings their wisdom is retold, and the assembly sings their praises.

The Early Patriarchs Henoch walked with the Lord and was taken up, that succeeding generations might learn by his example. | Noe, found just and perfect, renewed the race in the time of devastation. Because of his worth there were survivors, and with a sign to him the deluge ended; | a lasting agreement was made with him, that never should all flesh be destroyed. | Abraham, father of many peoples, kept his glory without stain: | he observed the precepts of the Most High, and entered into an agreement with him; in his own flesh he incised the ordinance, and when tested he was found loyal. | For this reason, God promised him with an oath that in his descendants the nations would be blessed, that he would make him numerous as the grains of dust, and exalt his posterity like the stars; that he would give them an inheritance from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth. | And for Isaac he renewed the same promise because of Abraham, his father. The covenant with all his forebears was confirmed, and the blessing rested upon the head of Jacob. | God acknowledged him as the first-born, and gave him his inheritance. He fixed the boundaries for his tribes, and their division into twelve.

1 Praise of Moses, Aaron and Phinees From him was to spring the man who won the favor of all: dear to God and men 2 Moses, whose memory is held in benediction. | God's honor devolved upon him, and the Lord strengthened him with fear 3 ful powers; | God wrought swift miracles at his words and sustained him in the king's presence. He gave him the Commandments for his people, and revealed to him his glory.
4 For his trustworthiness and meekness God selected him from 5 all mankind; | he permitted him to hear his voice, and led him into the cloud, where, face to face, he gave him the Commandments, the law of life and understanding, that he might teach his precepts to Jacob, his judgments and decrees to Israel.
6 He raised up also, like Moses in holiness, his brother Aaron 7 of the tribe of Levi. | He made him perpetual in his office when he bestowed on him the priesthood of his people; he established 8 him in honor and crowned him with lofty majesty; | he clothed him with splendid apparel, and adorned him with the glorious vestments: breeches and tunic and robe with pomegranates 9 around the hem, | and a rustle of bells round about, through whose pleasing sound at each step he would be heard within the sanctuary, and the children of his race would be remembered; 10 the sacred vestments of gold, of violet, and of crimson, wrought with embroidery; the breastpiece for decision, the ephod and 11 cincture | with scarlet yarn, the work of the weaver; precious stones with seal engravings in golden settings, the work of the jeweler, to commemorate in incised letters each of the tribes 12 of Israel; | on his turban the diadem of gold, its plate wrought with the insignia of holiness, majestic, glorious, renowned for 13 splendor, a delight to the eyes, beauty supreme. | Before him no one was adorned with these, nor may they ever be worn by any except his sons and them alone, generation after generation 14 for all time. | His cereal offering is wholly burnt with the 15 established sacrifice twice each day; | for Moses ordained him and anointed him with the holy oil, in a lasting covenant with him and with his family, as permanent as the heavens, that he should serve God in his priesthood and bless his people in his 16 name. | He chose him from all mankind to offer holocausts and choice offerings, to burn sacrifices of sweet odor for a memorial 17 and to atone for the people of Israel. | He gave to him his laws and authority to prescribe and to judge: to teach the precepts 18 to his people, and the ritual of the descendants of Israel. | Men of other families were inflamed against him, were jealous of him in the desert, the followers of Dathan and Abiram, and the 19 band of Core in their defiance. | But the Lord saw this and became angry, he destroyed them in his burning wrath. He brought down upon them a miracle, and consumed them with 20 his flaming fire. | Then he increased the glory of Aaron and bestowed upon him his inheritance: the sacred offerings he

21 allotted to him, with the showbread as his portion; | the oblations of the Lord are his food, a gift to him and his descendants.
22 | But he holds no land among the people nor shares with them their heritage; for the Lord himself is his portion, his inheritance in the midst of Israel.

23 Phinees too, the son of Eleazar, was the courageous third of his line when, zealous for the God of all, he met the crisis of his people and, at the prompting of his noble heart, atoned for the 24 children of Israel. | Therefore on him again God conferred the right, in a covenant of friendship, to provide for the sanctuary, so that he and his descendants should possess the high priesthood
25 forever. | For even his covenant with David, the son of Jesse of the tribe of Juda, was an individual heritage through one son alone; but the heritage of Aaron is for all his descendants.

26 And now bless the Lord who has crowned you with glory! May he grant you wisdom of heart to govern his people in justice, lest their welfare should ever be forgotten, or your authority, throughout all time.

1 Josue, Caleb and the Judges Valiant leader was Josue, son of Nun, assistant to Moses in the prophetic office, formed to be, as his name implies, the great savior of God's chosen ones, to punish the enemy and to win the inheritance for Israel. |
2 What glory was his when he raised his arm, to brandish his 3 javelin against the city! | And who could withstand him when 4 he fought the battles of the Lord? | Did he not by his power
5 stop the sun, so that one day became two? | He called upon the Most High God when his enemies beset him on all sides, and God Most High gave answer to him in hailstones of tremendous
6 power, | which he rained down upon the hostile army till on the slope he destroyed the foe; | that all the doomed nations might know that the Lord was watching over his people's
7 battles. And because he was a devoted follower of God | and in Moses' lifetime showed himself loyal, he and Caleb, son of Jephonne, when they opposed the rebel assembly, averted God's anger from the people and suppressed the wicked complaint—
8 | because of this, they were the only two spared from the six hundred thousand infantry, to lead the people into their inher-
9 itance, the land flowing with milk and honey. | And the strength he gave to Caleb remained with him even in his old age till he won his way onto the summits of the land; his family too 10 received an inheritance, | that all the people of Jacob might know how good it is to be a devoted follower of the Lord.

11 The Judges, too, each one of them, whose hearts were not deceived, who did not abandon God: may their memory be ever 12 blessed, | their bones return to life from their resting place, and 13 their names receive fresh luster in their children! | Beloved of his people, dear to his Maker, dedicated from his mother's womb, consecrated to the Lord as a prophet, was Samuel, the judge and priest. At God's word he established the kingdom and 14 anointed princes to rule the people. | By the law of the Lord he judged the nation when he visited the encampments of Jacob.
15 | As a trustworthy prophet he was sought out and his words
16 proved him true as a seer. | He too, called upon God, and 17 offered him a suckling lamb; | then the Lord thundered forth from heaven, and the tremendous roar of his voice was heard. | 18 He brought low the rulers of the enemy and destroyed all the 19 lords of the Philistines. | When Samuel approached the end of his life, he testified before the Lord and his anointed prince,
"No bribe or secret gift have I taken from any man!" and no 20 one dared gainsay him. | Even when he lay buried, his guidance was sought; he made known to the king his fate, and from the grave he raised his voice as a prophet, to put an end to wickedness.

47

1 Nathan, David and Solomon After him came Nathan 2 who served in the presence of David. | Like the choice fat of the 3 sacred offerings, so was David in Israel. | He made sport of lions as though they were kids, and of bears, like lambs of the 4 flock. | As a youth he slew the giant and wiped out the people's disgrace, when his hand let fly the slingstone that crushed the 5 pride of Goliath. | Since he called upon the Most High God, who gave strength to his right arm to defeat the skilled warrior 6 and raise up the might of his people, | therefore the women sang his praises and ascribed to him tens of thousands. When he 7 assumed the royal crown, he battled | and subdued the enemy on every side. He destroyed the hostile Philistines and shattered 8 their power till our own day. | With his every deed he offered thanks to God Most High, in words of praise. With his whole being he loved his Maker and daily had his praises sung; | 9 he added beauty to the feasts and solemnized the seasons of each year with string music before the altar, providing sweet melody 10 for the psalms | so that when the Holy Name was praised, 11 before daybreak the sanctuary would resound. | The Lord forgave him his sins and exalted his strength forever; he conferred on him the rights of royalty and established his throne in Israel.

12 Because of his merits he had as his successor a wise son, who 13 lived in security: | Solomon reigned during an era of peace, for God made tranquil all his borders. He built a house to the name 14 of God, and established a lasting sanctuary. | How wise you were when you were young, overflowing with instruction, like 15 the Nile in flood! | Your understanding covered the whole
16 earth, and, like a sea, filled it with knowledge. | Your fame reached distant coasts, and their peoples came to hear you; | 17 with song and story and riddle, and with your answers, you 18 astounded the nations. | You were called by that glorious name which was conferred upon Israel. Gold you gathered like so 19 much iron, you heaped up silver as though it were lead; | but you abandoned yourself to women and gave them dominion 20 over your body. | You brought dishonor upon your reputation, shame upon your marriage, wrath upon your descendants, and 21 groaning upon your domain; | thus two governments came into 22 being, when in Ephraim kingship was usurped. | But God does not withdraw his mercy, nor permit even one of his promises to fail. He does not uproot the posterity of his chosen one, nor destroy the offspring of his friend. So he gave to Jacob a 23 remnant, to David a root from his own family. | Solomon finally slept with his fathers, and left behind him one of his sons, expansive in folly, limited in sense, Roboam, who by his policy made the people rebel; until one arose who should not be remembered, the sinner who led Israel into sin, who brought 24 ruin to Ephraim | and caused them to be exiled from their land.

Elias and Eliseus Their sinfulness grew more and more. | 25 and they lent themselves to every evil,

48

1 Till like a fire there appeared the prophet whose words were 2 as a flaming furnace. | Their staff of bread he shattered, in his 3 zeal he reduced them to straits; | by God's word he shut up the 4 heavens and three times brought down fire. | How awesome
5 are you, Elias! Whose glory is equal to yours? | You brought a dead man back to life from the nether world, by the will of the 6 Lord. | You sent kings down to destruction, and nobles, from 7 their beds of sickness. | You heard threats at Sinai, at Horeb
8 avenging judgments. | You anointed kings who should inflict
9 vengeance, and a prophet as your successor. | You were taken 10 aloft in a whirlwind, in a chariot with fiery horses. | You are destined, it is written, in time to come to put an end to wrath before the day of the Lord, to turn back the hearts of fathers toward their sons, and to re-establish the tribes of Jacob. |

11.12 Blessed is he who shall have seen you before he dies, | O
Elias, enveloped in the whirlwind!

Then Eliseus, filled with a twofold portion of his spirit, wrought many marvels by his mere word. During his lifetime he feared no one, nor was any man able to intimidate his will | 13 Nothing was beyond his power; beneath him flesh was brought 14 back into life. | In life he performed wonders, and after death, 15 marvelous deeds. | Despite all this the people did not repent, nor did they give up their sins, until they were rooted out of their land and scattered all over the earth. But Juda remained, 16 a tiny people, with its rulers from the house of David. | Some of these did what was right, but others were extremely sinful.

17 Ezechias and Isaias Ezechias fortified his city and had water brought into it; with iron tools he cut through the rock 18 and he built reservoirs for water. | During his reign Sennacherib led an invasion, and sent his adjutant; he shook his fist at Sion 19 and blasphemed God in his pride. | The people's hearts melted within them, and they were in anguish like that of childbirth. | 20 But they called upon the Most High God and lifted up their hands to him; he heard the prayer they uttered, and saved them 21 through Isaias. | God struck the camp of the Assyrians and 22 routed them with a plague. | For Ezechias did what was right and held fast to the paths of David, as ordered by the illustrious 23 prophet Isaias, who saw the truth in visions. | In his lifetime 24 he turned back the sun and prolonged the life of the king. | By his powerful spirit he looked into the future and consoled the 25 mourners of Sion; | he foretold what should be till the end of time, hidden things yet to be fulfilled.

49

1 Josias and the Prophets The name Josias is like blended incense, made lasting by a skilled perfumer. Precious is his memory, like honey to the taste, like music at a banquet. | 2 For he grieved over our betrayals and destroyed the abominable
3 idols. | He turned to God with his whole heart, and, though
4 times were evil, he practiced virtue. | Except for David, Ezechias and Josias, they all were wicked; they abandoned the Law of the Most High, these kings of Juda, right to the very end. | 5 So he gave over their power to others, their glory to a foolish
6 foreign nation | who burned the holy city and left its streets
7 desolate, as Jeremias had foretold; | for they had treated him badly who even in the womb had been made a prophet, to root out, pull down, and destroy, and then to build and to plant. | 8 Ezechiel beheld the vision and described the different creatures

9 of the chariot; | he also referred to Job, who always persevered
10 in the right path. | Then, too, the Twelve Prophets—may their bones return to life from their resting place!—gave new strength to Jacob and saved him by their faith and hope.

11 The Heroes after the Exile How can we fittingly praise Zorobabel, who was like a signet ring on God's right hand, |
12 and Josue, Josedec's son? In their time they built the house of God; they erected the holy temple, destined for everlasting 13 glory. | Extolled be the memory of Nehemias! He rebuilt our ruined walls, restored our shattered defenses, and set up gates and bars.

14 The Earliest Patriarchs Few on earth have been made the 15 equal of Henoch, for he was taken up bodily. | Was ever a man born like Joseph? Even his dead body was provided for. | 16 Glorious, too, were Sem and Seth and Enos; but beyond that of any living being was the splendor of Adam.

50

1 Simon, Son of Jochanan The greatest among his brethren, the glory of his people, was Simon the priest, son of Jochanan, in whose time the house of God was renovated, in whose days
2 the temple was reinforced. | In his time also the wall was built
3 with powerful turrets for the temple precincts; | in his time the reservoir was dug, the pool with a vastness like the sea's. | 4 He protected his people against brigands and strengthened his 5 city against the enemy. | How splendid he was as he appeared
6 from the Tent, as he came from within the veil! | Like a star shining among the clouds, like the full moon at the holyday
7 season; | like the sun shining upon the temple, like the rainbow
8 appearing in the cloudy sky; | like the blossoms on the branches in springtime, like a lily on the banks of a stream; like the trees
9 of Lebanon in summer, | like the fire of incense at the sacrifice;
10 like a vessel of beaten gold, studded with precious stones; | like a luxuriant olive tree thick with fruit, like a cypress standing
11 against the clouds; | vested in his magnificent robes, and wearing his garments of splendor, as he ascended the glorious altar and lent majesty to the court of the sanctuary.
12 When he received the sundered victims from the priests while he stood before the sacrificial wood, his brethren ringed him about like a garland, like a stand of cedars on Lebanon; | 13 all the sons of Aaron in their dignity clustered around him like poplars, with the offerings to the Lord in their hands, in the 14 presence of the whole assembly of Israel. | Once he had completed the services at the altar with the arranging of the sacrifices 15 for the Most High, | and had stretched forth his hand for the cup, to offer blood of the grape, and poured it out at the foot of the altar, a sweet-smelling odor to the Most High God, | 16 the sons of Aaron would sound a blast, the priests, on their trumpets of beaten metal; a blast to resound mightily as a 17 reminder before the Most High. | Then all the people with one accord would quickly fall prostrate to the ground in adoration before the Most High, before the Holy One of Israel.

18 Then hymns would re-echo, and over the throng sweet strains 19 of praise resound. | All the people of the land would shout for joy, praying to the Merciful One, as the high priest completed the services at the altar by presenting to God the sacrifice due; 20 | then coming down he would raise his hands over all the congregation of Israel. The blessing of the Lord would be upon his 21 lips, the name of the Lord would be his glory. | Then again the people would lie prostrate to receive from him the blessing of the Most High.
22 And now, bless the God of all, who has done wondrous things on earth; who fosters men's growth from their mother's 23 womb, and fashions them according to his will! | May he grant 24 you joy of heart and may peace abide among you; | may his goodness toward us endure in Israel as long as the heavens are above.

25 Epilogue and Canticles My whole being loathes two na-26 tions, the third is not even a people: | those who live in Seir and Philistia, and the degenerate folk who dwell in Sichem.
27 Wise instruction, appropriate proverbs, I have written in this book, I, Jesus, son of Eleazar, son of Sirach, as they gushed 28 forth from my heart's understanding. | Happy the man who meditates upon these things, wise the man who takes them to 29 heart! | If he puts them into practice, he can cope with anything, for the fear of the Lord is his lamp.

you have been my helper against my adversaries. You have saved me from death, and kept back my body from the pit, from the clutches of the nether world you have snatched my feet; | you have delivered me, in your great mercy from the scourge of a slanderous tongue, and from lips that went over to falsehood; from the snare of those who watched for my downfall, and from the power of those who sought my life; from many a danger you have saved me, | from flames that hemmed me in on every side; from the midst of unremitting fire, | from the deep belly of the nether world; from deceiving lips and painters of lies, | from the arrows of dishonest tongues. I was at the point of death, my soul was nearing the depths of the nether world; | I turned every way, but there was no one to help me, I looked for one to sustain me, but could find no one. | But then I remembered the mercies of the Lord, his kindness through ages past; for he saves those who take refuge in him, and rescues them from every evil. | So I raised my voice from the very earth, from the gates of the nether world, my cry. | I called out: O Lord, you are my father, you are my champion and my savior; do not abandon me in time of trouble, in the midst of storms and dangers. | I will ever praise your name and be constant in my prayers to you. Thereupon the Lord heard my voice, he listened to my appeal; | he saved me from evil of every kind and preserved me in time of trouble. For this reason I thank him and I praise him; I bless the name of the Lord.

When I was young and innocent, I sought wisdom before all else. | In prayer I begged for her, and from my youth I followed after her. | She was rich, like ripening grapes; in her was my heart's joy. My feet were steadfast in her path; thus I attained to her at last. For a short time I paid heed, [and I acquired great instruction; | as in this way I have made progress, I shall return thanks to him who gives me wisdom. | When I had considered how I might make her mine, I strove to do well, lest I should be rebuffed; | my soul was troubled over her, and I scrutinized my conduct; I stretched forth my hands toward heaven and bewailed the sins of which I was not aware. | I fixed on her my soul's desires, and with its cleansing, I discovered her. At first acquaintance with her, I gained understanding, such that I shall never forsake her. | My whole being was stirred with the sight of her; therefore I have made her my prized possession. | The Lord has granted me the request I made of him, and my tongue will declare his praises.

Come to me, you who need instruction, and take your place in my school; | how long will you be deprived of what you need, how long will your souls remain so sorely parched? | I open my mouth and speak of her: gain, at no cost, wisdom for yourselves. | Submit yourselves to her yoke, let your souls bear her weight; for she is close to those who seek her, and he who is in earnest finds her. | See for yourselves! I labored but a little for her sake, and found great rest. | Listen, children, to my teaching! you will win silver and gold through me. | If you make my lessons your joy, you need feel no shame when you hear my song! | Do your work in due season, and in his own time God will give you your reward.

INTRODUCTION TO THE PROPHETICAL BOOKS

Although Abraham, Moses, and David were known as prophets, the first primitive band of prophets dates from the eleventh century B.C. (see 1 Sm 10, 5 n). These "sons (disciples) of the prophets" hardly differed externally from similar contemporaneous Chanaanite groups. Yet God used them to champion and keep His religion alive against Chanaanite and Philistine contamination.

Samuel, a few prophets after him, and Nathan (2 Sm 7), were mainly counselors of the kings. The next commanding prophetic figures were Elias and Eliseus with their "school" of disciples in the ninth century. These men were not only royal counselors but also wonder-workers.

The classical age of literary prophets dawns in the eighth century with Amos, Osee, Isaia, Michea, and ends with Malachia in the fifth century B.C. The prophets before this time were oral prophets. There were other classical or canonical prophets besides those whose works appear in the Bible.

Even among the Israelites the classical prophets were distinguished from the professional prophets (whom the scholars call "false prophets") because the latter became tools of the state by preaching what pleased their clients; the former proclaimed what God told them to, whether it was pleasing or displeasing. Other distinguishing features of the true prophets were their holy lives and their claim that God called them. In the eyes of the people, however, it was not always clear who were the true and who were the false prophets.

The preaching of the classical prophets formed a religious movement that revived the teaching of a personal God. True dedication to Him included a life lived according to the strict morals of the Mosaic Law. This life meant that Yahweh would not be satisfied with lavish liturgical ceremonies in the temple. The external cult suited the mentality of the surrounding pagans toward their gods. The "jealous" Yahweh wanted His temple worship subordinated to a daily holy life. Morally, Yahwism meant war against injustice, greed, and sexual aberrations. Spiritually, Yahwism meant a covenant love expressed through obligations of the people to keep the Sinai Covenant lest they incur the penalty of divine retribution. The prophets' repeated condemnations, threats of imminent disaster, and promises of a better future were the vehicles used to impress upon the people God's retribution. Intimately connected with this retribution were the prophetic key doctrines of the Day of the Lord (see Am 5, 18-20 n), the Remnant (Am 5, 15 n), and Messianism. The same truths of the prophetic religious movement were also taught by the Deuteronomic school, the Book of Deuteronomy, as explained in the Introduction to the Book of Josue, and by numerous psalms.

The activity of the prophets included politics. Moderns separate religion and politics. The peoples of the ancient Near East did not. When the prophets spoke on political issues, neither they nor their audience felt that boundaries were being crossed. The prophets objected to political alliances with foreign nations. Such alliances brought with them a certain amount of foreign religious practices and customs. These elements threatened the purity of Yahweh's religion. But if we consider the advice of the prophets Isaia and Jeremia on Juda's neutrality from the viewpoint of raw international politics, it is difficult to prove them unrealistic.

After these few words on the history and activity of the prophets it is not hard to grasp the true notion of a prophet. A popular misconception is that prophets were predictors of the future. The prophets seldom predicted. They were interested in their principal duty, namely, in preaching Yahweh and speaking in His name, in spite of the deaf ear of an obstinate people. The second duty of the prophets was to intercede for the people. In other words, the prophets were mainly extraordinary, inspired preachers on particularly important problems in critical moments of their nation. In this they differed from the priests of a hereditary caste who taught the daily lessons on the Mosaic Law and its ordinary application.

The actual writing of a prophetic book was usually styled after an accustomed pattern. Some prophets seem to have written very little. Others wrote some prophecies, but all the prophets delivered their speeches, ordinarily in public. After an era of oral transmission of a prophet's speeches, his followers would compile and edit them, first in small collections, then in larger ones. The disciple editors would not compose a stenographic account but a substantial account of the original prophecies. The arrangement of the prophecies was hardly chronological or logical. Its nucleus was frequently a common topic. There was never a conscious attempt to write a biography, but biographical fragments were scattered throughout the prophetic book. Moreover, all the prophetic books contain some writing from later writers. Perhaps "anthology" is the happiest term to describe the final composition of a prophetic book for, among other reasons, there were many speeches of the prophets that never found their way into the Bible. The anthology contained: first, the speeches ("oracles," "prophecies," "the Word of God") generally in poetry; second, autobiographical fragments; third, accounts about the prophet by his followers. It is easier now to appreciate the difficult task of the scholar who scrutinizes each oracle to date it and to infer its historical occasion, in order to attempt an outline of the prophet's life and preaching career, of his doctrinal development, and to try tracing the influence he derived from previous prophets besides the influence he himself had on subsequent prophets.

In what manner did God communicate His message to the prophet? This is an obscure and debated phenomenon. Yet, some points may be stated:

1. There was a real supernatural contact or communication between God and the prophet after which the prophet assimilated and lived the message that he was to preach.

2. The prophet was aware that his message did not originate from himself but from God.

In these two points the prophets resemble the Christian mystics. However, the prophetic awareness concerned only the truths which the prophets learned directly from God. These truths alone were "revealed," namely, their vocation, their prediction of future events (see Is 10, 27b-32 n; Ez 26, 14 n), and especially the "oracles," direct, brief messages from God. But most of the time they preached without any consciousness of being inspired. Often the preaching comprised sermons elaborating upon the "oracle." Their teaching was mostly concerned with the Mosaic Law already known, but they reapplied it to the critical needs of their day.

3. It seems safe to say that generally God did not communicate His message through extraordinary mystical experiences and visions as we read about in the mystics. Even prophetic ecstasy was relatively rare. God operated through an interior inspiration of the prophet without exterior manifestations.

4. In the famous "inaugural" visions of the prophets, e.g., Is 6, 1-13, Ez 1, 1ff, each prophet received a call from God to become His prophet. From the authoritative point of view, the prophets stressed the inaugural vision because these visions were the credentials by which the prophets expected the people to obey them as the official national "conscience." Doctrinally, these visions were important because the prophets received from them a fundamental message that was to color all their future messages and all their decisions. These visions altered their way of thinking and attuned it to God's messages. The idea of God's holiness so saturated Isaia at his inaugural vision that all his preaching was permeated by it. Yet it is difficult to distinguish between literary and true visions. But does it really matter if we are certain of the message itself and of its coming from God?

5. Many of the "symbolic actions" of the prophets are also explained by modern scholars as being interior inspirations. These prophecies-in-action were vivid pedagogical devices, eminently suited to the concrete Israelite mind. An example is found in Jer

19, 1-11: "Thus says the Lord: Go, buy a potter's earthen flask . . . and you shall break the flask in the sight of the men . . . and say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Thus will I smash this people and this city, as one smashes a clay pot so that it cannot be repaired."

Does Jeremia really mean to be understood precisely as his inspired account reads? Or is the account intentionally presented as a dramatization? (The golden rule is: what has been inspired was what the author meant. What did he mean?) A modern trend would understand that Jeremia often saw the breaking of flasks as other Jerusalem citizens did. But God one day gave the prophet the interior inspiration to make the connection between the broken flasks and the imminent collapse of the city. What is also important is: Jeremia was aware that this inspiration came from God. Other examples of symbolic actions are Osee's marriage (see Os 1, 2-9 n); and "the loincloth" (see Jer 13, 1-11 n).

What made these prophets unique in the ancient world? What made them different from their counterparts in Egypt and Mesopotamia? It was not their literary or oratorical techniques nor their occasional ecstatic moments, but the monotheistic ethical nature of their message which originated in inspiration and, at times, in revelations from God.

THE PROPHETS: THEIR TIMES AND TEACHING

Prophet	Historical Background	Message or Contribution
Amos	Amos preached under Jeroboam II (783-743?). It was a time of prosperity for the northern kingdom. His warnings did not prevent the fall of Samaria in 722-21.	The "prophet of justice" teaches that the wealthy must treat the poor with the dignity becoming every human being, just as Yahweh treated everyone in giving the Mosaic Law with its "covenant love."
Osee	Osee preached from 750-725 and therefore more closely to the fall of Samaria than Amos.	The "prophet of love" of God for man is the title best suited to express his message.
Isaia (chs. 1—39)	The great political events during his preaching career were the Syro-Ephraimite war of about 734, and Sennacherib's siege of Jerusalem in 701.	The greatest Messianic prophet and perhaps the greatest of all the prophets! Some favorite themes are the Remnant, and the one holy God.
Michea	A contemporary of Isaia in the second half of the eighth century.	Michea preaches on social problems like Amos, but he is more famous for his Messianic thought. See 5, 1-3.
Sophonia	The prophet's preaching afforded a picture of the syncretistic background to the religious reform of king Josia in 622.	Sophonia was a reformer. Besides, he is probably the initiator of the poor folk spirituality. See 2, 3 n.

Nahum	The prophet preached the funeral oration over the fall of Ninive in 612.	Nahum is the prophet of "Yahweh, the Lord of History." Assyria's collapse is to him a sign of God's vengeance and a hope for a peaceful future.
Jeremia	Jeremia preached during the religious reform of king Josia till the fall of Jerusalem in 587 and afterward. He prepared the people for the acceptance of the exile.	The "prophet of an interior religion" is the title to best illustrate his message, for the new covenant is to stress intimacy with God. See 31, 33.
Habacuc	Habacuc, in 605-597, composed his prophecy. The first siege of Jerusalem with the first deportation of its inhabitants by Nabuchodonosor took place in 598.	The "prophet of the problem of evil among nations." His answer is FAITH.
Ezechiel	Ezechiel preached in Babylonia to the exiles from 592 until after the fall of Jerusalem in 587.	The "Father of Judaism" is known for his directives on the temple and the liturgy. He developed the doctrine of personal responsibility.
Second Isaia (chs. 40—66)	The followers of Isaia consoled the people as the exile drew to a close.	The prophet deepens the doctrine of only one God by stressing God as "the Creator" and by showing God's power through the fulfillment of past prophecies.
Aggai and Zacharia (chs. 1—8)	Darius III, in 522, gave permission for the reconstruction of the temple at Jerusalem.	These two prophets (520-518) encourage the returned exiles to rebuild the temple, for its reconstruction would be the prelude to the Messianic era. Therefore, a true conversion of heart must accompany this work.

Abdia	The fall of Jerusalem in 587 formed the background of Abdia's writing, regardless of its date.	Behind the patriotic cry of "vengeance against Edom" lies the deeper message of faith in a just God who punishes the evil of all nations.
Malachia	The fervor of rebuilding the temple in 515 had become an enthusiasm of the past.	The prophet's message (about 450) is a reprimand because of the religious indifference, and in particular the improper procedures of offering sacrifices.
Jona	This fifth century prophet opposed the "ghetto" mentality of his age.	The prophet advocates universalism (God wants to save all men not only the Jews) as opposed to particularism.
Joel	The prophet (400-350) preached on the occasion of a locust plague.	Joel is known for his contribution of the penitential DAY OF THE LORD, of which Peter spoke at Pentecost.
Second Zacharia (chs. 9—14)	The unknown prophet preached perhaps at the beginning of the Greek domination, about 325.	The prophet is known for his Messianic contributions. See 9, 9-10; 12, 10-11.
Daniel	The unknown prophet wrote in 167-164 to encourage his fellow Jews against the Hellenizing persecution of Antiochus IV Epiphanes of Syria.	The author is known for his "son of man" Messianism. See 7, 13-18.

THE BOOK OF ISAIA

INTRODUCTION

Isaia was born probably between 770 and 760 B.C. in Jerusalem of aristocratic parents. He was married and had two sons. Beginning with the reception of his office as prophet (6, 1) about 740, he preached under three kings (1, 1). This would be from 740, the year king Ozia died, to 687, the year of king Ezechia's death. Isaia appeared on the scene after Amos and Osee, but contemporaneously with Micheа

Isaia lived in the very middle of a politically troublesome time. He was king Achaz' adviser, but he was not heeded at the court. During his lifetime Jerusalem was threatened in 734 by the Syro-Ephraimite alliance (see 7, 1-2 n), and in 701 by Sennacherib. Isaia was a true prophet, and his preaching stabilized the morale of the people during these crises. It is difficult to be certain of his activities after 701. Scholars find no evidence for the story that he died, his body rent asunder, as a martyr under king Manasse.

Isaia came into a socially and morally decaying kingdom where the rich and the poor were too distinctly divided and the law courts were corrupt. Religiously, external sacrifice rather than social justice ruled the people.

Isaia's themes of predilection are monotheism, the doctrine of the remnant, Messianism, God's holiness, and social justice. The prophet taught, like Amos and Osee, that the people should practice justice because they were brothers in the covenant with God. But Isaia was less threatening and more positive insofar as he hopefully looked to the future when social justice would be better observed. Moreover, Isaia's social justice was motivated by God's holiness.

The prophet writes in classical Hebrew. He is original and is considered the greatest Messianic prophet. His writings are a collection without logical order, of speeches given at different times. This disorder is perplexing to Westerners but not to Semites. The speeches were most likely handed down orally, except for a few that Isaia may have written in an abridged form soon after delivery. An editor after the sixth century brought the speeches into the form as we have it today in the Hebrew Bible.

In all the above we spoke of Isaia as the recognized author of chs 1—39. For the authorship of the rest of the Book of Isaia see Is 40—66 n.

Main divisions of the Book of Isaia are:

A. The Book of Judgment
   1. Indictment of Israel and Juda, 1—5
   2. Emmanuel Prophecies, 6—12
   3. Oracles against the Pagan Nations, 13—23
   4. Apocalypse of Isaia, 24—27
   5. The Lord Alone, Israel's and Juda's Salvation, 28—33
   6. The Lord, Sion's Avenger, 34—35
   7. Historical Appendix, 36—39

B. The Book of Consolation
1. The Lord's Glory in Israel's Liberation, 40—48
2. Expiation of Sin; Spiritual Liberation of Israel, 49—55
3. Return of the First Captives, 56—66

A. THE BOOK OF JUDGMENT

I. INDICTMENT OF ISRAEL AND JUDA

1

1 Israel's Sinfulness The vision which Isaia, son of Amos, had concerning Juda and Jerusalem in the days of Ozia, Joatham, Achaz and Ezechia, kings of Juda.

2 Hear, O heavens, and listen, O earth, for the Lord speaks:
Sons have I raised and reared, but they have disowned me! | 3 An ox knows its owner, and an ass, its master's manger; but 4 Israel does not know, my people has not understood. | Ah! sinful nation, people laden with wickedness, evil race, corrupt children! They have forsaken the Lord, spurned the Holy One
5 of Israel, apostatized. | Where would you yet be struck, you that rebel again and again? The whole head is sick, the whole
6 heart faint. | From the sole of the foot to the head there is no sound spot: wound and welt and gaping gash, not drained, or
7 bandaged, or eased with salve. | Your country is waste, your cities burnt with fire; your land before your eyes strangers
8 devour [a waste, like Sodom overthrown]— | and daughter Sion is left like a hut in a vineyard, like a shed in a melon patch, like a city blockaded.

1—5: Scholars attribute these chapters to Isaia himself except for random words. The speeches are not arranged according to the chronological order of their delivery. They date from Isaia's early ministry. The unity of the collection seems to be more according to subject matter, namely: condemnation, threats, promises to Juda and Jerusalem.

1, 1: An editorial introduction. Vision: see Introduction to the Prophetical Books. Isaia: means "Yahweh is (or will give) salvation." Amos: not the minor prophet. In the days of Ozia . . . king of Juda: this is the usual vague biblical way of giving a person's date of birth and death.

1, 1-20: Yahweh reproves the people for their infidelity toward Him.

1, 3: Origen was the first to accommodate this verse to Christ's birth. Israel: the whole chosen people.

1, 4: Holy One of Israel: Isaia's favorite title of God, used twenty-nine times. Outside of this book it is used only six times.

1, 5-6: These verses are accommodated to Christ's passion.

1, 8: Daughter Sion: in the Bible, cities are often called daughters. Here Jerusalem is meant. Hut . . . shed: these shelters for workmen and watchmen are common in Palestine.

9 Unless the Lord of hosts had left us a scanty remnant, we 10 had become as Sodom, we should be like Gomorra. | Hear the word of the Lord, princes of Sodom! Listen to the instruction 11 of our God, people of Gomorra! | What care I for the number of your sacrifices? says the Lord. I have had enough of whole-burnt rams and fat of fatlings; in the blood of calves, lambs and goats I find no pleasure.
12 When you come in to visit me, who asks these things of you?
13 | Trample my courts no more! Bring no more worthless offerings; your incense is loathsome to me. New moon and sabbath, calling of assemblies, octaves with wickedness: these I cannot 14 bear. | Your new moons and festivals I detest; they weigh me
15 down, I tire of the load. | When you spread out your hands, I close my eyes to you; though you pray the more, I will not listen.
16 Your hands are full of blood! | Wash yourselves clean! Put away your misdeeds from before my eyes; cease doing evil; | 17 learn to do good. Make justice your aim: redress the wronged, hear the orphan's plea, defend the widow.
18 Come now, let us set things right, says the Lord: though your sins be like scarlet, they may become white as snow; though 19 they be crimson red, they may become white as wool. | If you are willing, and obey, you shall eat the good things of the land; 20 | but if you refuse and resist, the sword shall consume you: for the mouth of the Lord has spoken!
21 How has she turned adulteress, the faithful city, so upright!
22 Justice used to lodge within her, but now, murderers. | Your 23 silver is turned to dross, your wine is mixed with water. | Your princes are rebels and comrades of thieves; each one of them loves a bribe and looks for gifts. The fatherless they defend not, 24 and the widow's plea does not reach them. | Now, therefore, says the Lord, the Lord of hosts, the Mighty One of Israel: Ah!
I will take vengeance on my foes and fully repay my enemies!
25 | I will turn my hand against you, and refine your dross in the 26 furnace, removing all your alloy. | I will restore your judges as

1, 9: Lord of hosts: this title first meant Lord of Israel's armies, later, Lord of the angels and stars, then, master of the universe. Remnant: see Am 5, 15 n.

1, 10: Isaia likens the people to the inhabitants of the two classical evil cities (see Gn 19).

1, 13: New moon . . . octaves: feasts.

1, 15: Spread out your hands: a gesture of prayer.

1, 17: The prophets often attack not liturgy and sacrifices themselves, but their substitution for the practice of justice and charity.

1, 21-31: The portrait of Jerusalem turning "adulteress" (v. 21), is a common biblical figure of the people's infidelity to God and worship of idols.

at first, and your counselors as in the beginning; after that you 27 shall be called city of justice, faithful city. | Sion shall be redeemed by judgment, and her repentant ones by justice. | 28 Rebels and sinners alike shall be crushed, those who desert the 29 Lord shall be consumed. | You shall be ashamed of the terebinths which you prized, and blush for the groves which you 30 chose. | You shall become like a tree with falling leaves, like 31 a garden that has no water. | The strong man shall turn to tow, and his work shall become a spark; both shall burn together, and there shall be none to quench the flames.

1 Sion, the Messianic Capital This is what Isaia, son of Amos, saw concerning Juda and Jerusalem.
2 In days to come, the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established as the highest mountain and raised above the hills.
3 All nations shall stream toward it; | many peoples shall come and say: "Come, let us climb the Lord's mountain, to the house of the God of Jacob, that he may instruct us in his ways, and we may walk in his paths." For from Sion shall go forth instruc-4 tion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem. | He shall judge between the nations, and impose terms on many peoples. They shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; one nation shall not raise the sword against 5 another, nor shall they train for war again. | O house of Jacob, come, let us walk in the light of the Lord!

6 The Lord's Judgment against Idols You have abandoned your people, the house of Jacob, because they are filled with fortunetellers and soothsayers, like the Philistines; they 7 covenant with strangers. | Their land is full of silver and gold, and there is no end to their treasures; their land is full of horses, 8 and there is no end to their chariots. | Their land is full of idols;
they worship the works of their hands, that which their fingers 9 have made. | But man is abased, each one brought low. [Do not

1, 27-31: The prophet imagines a purified Jerusalem of the future.
1, 29: Terebinths . . . groves: favorite places of idolatrous worship.
2, 1: An editor added this verse.
2, 2-4: The sense is: all the Gentile nations will be converted to the true religion of God with its capital at Jerusalem (vv. 2-3). It will be a time of universal peace (v. 4). A growing opinion claims that both Isaia and Michea (see Mi 4, 1-3) borrowed this passage from the temple liturgy rather than that one prophet borrowed it from the other.
2, 6-22: Isaia continues the trend initiated by Amos that the "Day of the Lord" ("on that day," vv. 11, 17, 20) will be one of punishment. See Am 5, 18-20 n.

10 pardon them!] | Get behind the rocks, hide in the dust, from 11 the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his majesty! | The haughty eyes of man will be lowered, the arrogance of men will be abased, and the Lord alone will be exalted, on that day. | 12 For the Lord of hosts will have his day against all that is proud and arrogant, all that is high, and it will be brought low; | 13 yes, against all the cedars of Lebanon and all the oaks of Basan, 14 | against all the lofty mountains and all the high hills, |
15.16 against every lofty tower and every fortified wall, | against all 17 the ships of Tharsis and all stately vessels. | Human pride will be abased, the arrogance of men brought low, and the Lord alone 18 will be exalted, on that day. | The idols will perish forever.
19 Men will go into caves in the rocks and into holes in the earth, from the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his 20 majesty, when he arises to overawe the earth. | On that day men will throw to the moles and the bats the idols of silver and 21 gold which they made for worship. | They go into caverns in the rocks and into crevices in the cliffs, from the terror of the Lord and the splendor of his majesty, when he arises to overawe 22 the earth. | As for you, let man alone, in whose nostrils is but a breath; for what is he worth?

1 Judgment of Juda and Jerusalem The Lord, the Lord of hosts, shall take away from Jerusalem and from Juda support 2 and prop [all supplies of bread and water]: | hero and warrior, 3 judge and prophet, fortuneteller and elder, | the captain of fifty and the nobleman, counselor, skilled magician, and expert 4 charmer. | I will make striplings their princes; the fickle shall 5 govern them. | And the people shall oppress one another, yes, every man his neighbor. The child shall be bold toward the 6 elder, and the base toward the honorable. | When a man seizes his brother in his father's house, saying, "You have clothes! Be 7 our ruler, and take in hand this ruin!"— | then shall he answer in that day: "I will not undertake to cure this, when in my own house there is no bread or clothing! You shall not make me ruler of the people." 8 Jerusalem is crumbling, Juda is falling; for their speech and their deeds are before the Lord, a provocation in the sight of his 9 majesty. | Their very look bears witness against them; their sin

2, 13-16: Allusions to storms are part of the literary embellishment of "the Day of Yahweh."

3, 1-26: It is difficult to pinpoint the background of this tirade against the soft ways of society.

3, 1-12: The incapable will be asked to rule in those desperate days.

like Sodom they vaunt, they hide it not. Woe to them! they deal 10 out evil to themselves. | Happy the just, for it will be well with 11 them, the fruit of their works they will eat. | Woe to the wicked man! All goes ill, with the work of his hands he will be repaid. | 12 My people—a babe in arms will be their tyrant, and women will rule them! O my people, your leaders mislead, they destroy the paths you should follow.
13.14 The Lord rises to accuse, standing to try his people. | The Lord enters into judgment with his people's elders and princes:
It is you who have devoured the vineyard; the loot wrested from 15 the poor is in your houses. | What do you mean by crushing my people, and grinding down the poor when they look to you?
16 says the Lord, the God of hosts. | The Lord said: Because the daughters of Sion are haughty, and walk with necks outstretched ogling and mincing as they go, their anklets tinkling with every 17 step, | the Lord shall cover the scalps of Sion's daughters with scabs, and the Lord shall bare their heads.
18 On that day the Lord will do away with the finery of the 19 anklets, sunbursts, and crescents; the pendants, bracelets, and 20 veils; the headdresses, bangles, cinctures, perfume boxes, and 21.22 amulets; the signet rings, and the nose rings; | the court 23 dresses, wraps, cloaks, and purses; the mirrors, linen tunics, turbans, and shawls.
24 Instead of perfume there will be stench, instead of the girdle, a rope; and for the coiffure, baldness; for the rich gown, a 25 sackcloth skirt. Then, instead of beauty: | your men will fall by 26 the sword, and your champions, in war; | her gates will lament and mourn, as the city sits desolate on the ground.

1 Seven women will take hold of one man on that day, saying:
"We will eat our own food and wear our own clothing; only let your name be given us, put an end to our disgrace!"

2 The Messianic Branch On that day, the branch of the Lord will be luster and glory, and the fruit of the earth will be honor 3 and splendor for the survivors of Israel. | He who remains in 4, 1: War will decimate the male population. Disgrace: of childlessness.

4, 2-6: The remnant will enjoy prosperity (2) and be divinely protected (vv. 4-6) similar to the people in the Sinai desert (Ex 13, 21).

4, 2: The branch of the Lord: this expression is better interpreted as a parallel of "the fruit of the earth" rather than a synonym for the Messia.

4, 3: Holy: the remnant of the faithful will be consecrated to God.

Sion and he that is left in Jerusalem will be called holy: every 4 one marked down for life in Jerusalem. | When the Lord washes away the filth of the daughters of Sion, and purges Jerusalem's 5 blood from her midst with a blast of searing judgment, | then will the Lord create, over the whole site of Mount Sion and over her place of assembly, a smoking cloud by day and a light of 6 flaming fire by night. | For over all, his glory will be shelter and protection: shade from the parching heat of day, refuge and cover from storm and rain.

1 The Vineyard Song Let me now sing of my friend, my friend's song concerning his vineyard. My friend has a vineyard 2 on a fertile hillside; | he spaded it, cleared it of stones, and planted the choicest vines; within it he built a watchtower, and hewed out a wine press. Then he looked for the crop of grapes, but what it yielded was wild grapes.
3 Now, inhabitants of Jerusalem and men of Juda, judge be-4 tween me and my vineyard: | What more was there to do for my vineyard that I had not done? Why, when I looked for the 5 crop of grapes, did it bring forth wild grapes? | Now, I will let you know what I mean to do to my vineyard: take away its hedge, give it to grazing, break through its wall, let it be tram-6 pled! | Yes, I will make it a ruin: it shall not be pruned or hoed, but overgrown with thorns and briers; I will command the 7 clouds not to send rain upon it. | The vineyard of the Lord of hosts is the house of Israel, and the men of Juda are his cherished plant; he looked for judgment, but see, bloodshed! for justice, but hark, the outcry!

8 Doom of the Unjust Woe to you who join house to house, who connect field with field, till no room remains, and you are 9 left to dwell alone in the midst of the land! | In my hearing the Lord of hosts has sworn: Many houses shall be in ruins, large 10 ones and fine, with no one to live in them. | Ten acres of vineyard shall yield but one bath, and a homor of seed shall yield

5, 1-7: This parable begins as a ballad (v. 1) but unlocks the meaning only at the end (v. 7). The theme is also found in other prophets and in the first three Gospels.

5, 1: My friend: he is "the Lord of hosts" in v. 7. Vineyard: this is "the house of Israel" in v. 7.

5, 8-25: Isaia's threats ("woes") because of different sins.

5, 10: For explanation on rearrangement of verses see Za 4, 4ff n. Ten acres of vineyard: the amount of land which a yoke of oxen can plow in ten days. Bath: about ten gallons.

17 but an epha. | Lambs shall graze there at pasture, and kids shall eat in the ruins of the rich.
11 Woe to those who demand strong drink as soon as they rise in the morning, and linger into the night while wine inflames 12 them! | With harp and lyre, timbrel and flute, they feast on wine; but what the Lord does, they regard not, the work of his 13 hands they see not. | Therefore my people go into exile, because they do not understand; their nobles die of hunger, and their 14 masses are parched with thirst. | Therefore the nether world enlarges its throat and opens its maw without limit; down go their nobility and their masses, their throngs and their revelry. | 15 Men shall be abased, each one brought low, and the eyes of the 16 haughty lowered, | but the Lord of hosts shall be exalted by his judgment, and God the Holy shall be shown holy by his justice.
18 Woe to those who tug at guilt with cords of perversity, and 19 at sin as if with cart ropes! | To those who say, "Let him make haste and speed his work, that we may see it; on with the plan of the Holy One of Israel! let it come to pass, that we may know 20 it!" | Woe to those who call evil good, and good evil, who change darkness into light, and light into darkness, who change 21 bitter into sweet, and sweet into bitter! | Woe to those who are 22 wise in their own sight, and prudent in their own esteem! | Woe to the champions at drinking wine, the valiant at mixing strong 23 drink! | To those who acquit the guilty for bribes, and deprive 24 the just man of his rights! | Therefore, as the tongue of fire licks up stubble, as dry grass shrivels in the flame, even so their root shall become rotten and their blossom scatter like dust; for they have spurned the law of the Lord of hosts, and scorned the word 25 of the Holy One of Israel. | Therefore the wrath of the Lord blazes against his people, he raises his hand to strike them; when the mountains quake, their corpses shall be like refuse in the streets. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, and his hand is still outstretched.

26 Invasion He will give a signal to a far-off nation, and whistle to them from the ends of the earth; speedily and promptly will 27 they come. | None of them will stumble with weariness, none will slumber and none will sleep. None will have his waist belt 28 loose, nor the thong of his sandal broken. | Their arrows are sharp, and all their bows are bent. The hoofs of their horses seem like flint, and their chariot wheels like the hurricane. |

5, 19: Woe to those who want to command God, as it were, to perform miracles.

5, 20-30: God uses Assyria ("a far-off nation" v. 26) to punish His people.

29 Their roar is that of the lion, like the lion's whelps they roar; they growl and seize the prey, they carry it off and none will 30 rescue it. | [They will roar over it, on that day, with a roaring like that of the sea.]

II. EMMANUEL PROPHECIES

6

1 Call of Isaia In the year king Ozia died, I saw the Lord seated on a high and lofty throne, with the train of his garment 2 filling the temple. | Seraphim were stationed above; each of 3 them had six wings: | with two they veiled their faces, with two they veiled their feet, and with two they hovered aloft.
"Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts!" they cried one to the 4 other. "All the earth is filled with his glory!" At the sound of that cry, the frame of the door shook and the house was filled with smoke.
5 Then I said, "Woe is me, I am doomed! For I am a man of unclean lips, living among a people of unclean lips; yet my 6 eyes have seen the King, the Lord of hosts!" Then one of the seraphim flew to me, holding an ember which he had taken with tongs from the altar.
7 He touched my mouth with it. "See," he said, "now that this 6—12: These seven chapters are known as "The Book of Emmanuel" because of the predominance of this Messianic figure. Most of this section is from Isaia himself.

6—8: The background of these three chapters is the Syro-Ephraimite war.

6, 1-13: This passage is known as Isaia's inaugural vision because it was in this experience that he received his call from God to be a prophet.

6, 1: In the year: about 740 B.C. King Ozia: also called Uzziah or Azariah. The description resembles that of a powerful oriental potentate.

6, 2: Seraphim: literally, "the burning ones." This and v. 4 are the only places in the Bible where "seraphim" are mentioned.

6, 3: They veiled their faces: because of reverence toward God. They veiled their feet: a euphemism for their extremities, which they covered out of modesty. Holy, holy, holy is the Lord of hosts: all the liturgies, not only the Roman, use this expression. The triple repetition is a Hebraism for the superlative: most holy. In this experience God's holiness impresses Isaia to the extent of becoming his most fundamental theological idea. From this basic revealed intuition he works out the conclusion that God's punishment must inevitably come because of the people's sins.

6, 5: Doomed: see Gn 32, 31b on the popular idea that seeing God meant death was to follow.

6, 7: Touched your lips: this is a symbolic ceremony to purify Isaia and thereby make him worthy to be a prophet. In the Mass the celebrant refers to this just before reading the Gospel.

has touched your lips, your wickedness is removed, your sin purged."

8 Then I heard the voice of the Lord saying, "Whom shall I send? Who will go for us?" "Here I am," I said; "send me!" |
9 And he replied: Go and say to this people: Listen carefully, but you shall not understand! Look intently, but you shall know 10 nothing! | You are to make the heart of this people sluggish, to dull their ears and close their eyes; else their eyes will see, their ears hear, their heart understand, and they will turn and be healed.
11 "How long, O Lord?" I asked. And he replied: Until the cities are desolate, without inhabitants, houses, without a man, and 12 the earth is a desolate waste. | Until the Lord removes men far
13 away, and the land is abandoned more and more. | If there be still a tenth part in it, then this in turn shall be laid waste; as with a terebinth or an oak whose trunk remains when its leaves have fallen. [Holy offspring is the trunk.]

1 Birth of Emmanuel In the days of Achaz, king of Juda, son of Joatham, son of Ozia, Rasin, king of Aram, and Phacee, king of Israel, son of Romelia, went up to attack Jerusalem, but
2 they were not able to conquer it. | When word came to the house of David that Aram was encamped in Ephraim, the heart of the king and the heart of the people trembled, as the trees of the forest tremble in the wind.
3 Then the Lord said to Isaia: Go out to meet Achaz, you and your son Shear-Jashub, at the end of the conduit of the upper 4 pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, and say to him: Take care you remain tranquil and do not fear; let not your courage fail before these two stumps of smoldering brands [the blazing anger of Rasin and the Arameans, and of the son of Romelia], |
5 because of the mischief that Aram [Ephraim and the son of 6, 9-10: In the strong accent of Semitic phraseology, it sounds as if Isaia's preaching was to cause the people's blindness. The sense is that the prophet should not be discouraged if the people reject his preaching—which God foresees. Mt 13, 14 and parallels take up this difficult passage.

6, 11-13: Isaia asks "how long" will the people be blind. God replies by announcing a foreign invasion and consequent deportation.

7, 1-2: This refers to 4 Kgs 16; 2 Par 28, the alliance of Syria ("Aram") and Ephraim ("Israel") against Juda ("the house of David") because Juda would not join an anti-Assyrian coalition.

7, 3: Shear-Jashub: the name literally means "a Remnant will return." It symbolized to the people a simultaneous threat and consolation. Upper pool: Achaz was on an inspection tour in preparation for the Syro-Ephraimite attack. See 7, 1-2 n.

6 Romelia] plots against you, saying, "Let us go up and tear Juda asunder, make it our own by force, and appoint the son of Tabeel king there."
7 Thus says the Lord: This shall not stand, it shall not be! | 8 Damascus is the capital of Aram, and Rasin the head of Damascus; Samaria is the capital of Ephraim, and Romelia's son 9 the head of Samaria. | But within sixty years and five, Ephraim shall be crushed, no longer a nation. Unless your faith is firm you shall not be firm!
10.11 Again the Lord spoke to Achaz: Ask for a sign from the Lord, your God; let it be deep as the nether world, or high as 12 the sky! | But Achaz answered, "I will not ask! I will not tempt 13 the Lord!" | Then he said: Listen, O house of David! Is it not enough for you to weary men, must you also weary my God?
14 Therefore the Lord himself will give you this sign: the virgin

7, 6: Appoint the son of Tabeel king there: he would be more amenable to the plans of the Syro-Ephraimites.

7, 9: Within sixty years and five: the number is uncertain because the Hebrew text is not clear.

7, 10f: Since Achaz and the Davidic line would be in real danger of extinction if the Syro-Ephraimites should conquer Jerusalem, God tells Achaz through Isaia to ask for an extraordinary sign of assertion that his line is not going to be extinguished. This sign was to be proof that God has kept His promise of preserving the Davidic line, as Nathan said He would. See 2 Sm 7, 8-16 n.

7, 12: Achaz refuses to request a sign because he has more confidence in Assyria's military aid than in God's miracles. As a pretext, Achaz alludes to Dt 6, 16 on not tempting God.

7, 13: House of David: according to Isaia's prophecy, all the people, not only king Achaz, will be affected.

7, 14: The common long-standing opinion holds that Isaia directly and literally predicts the future Messia, and that He will be born of a virgin mother. The objection is that it is difficult to understand how this event of over seven hundred years later could be a sign to Achaz and his people. Moreover, it is questionable that the Fathers of the Church have been morally unanimous in this interpretation. The common opinion of modern commentators is: the sign was to signify the imminent birth of a contemporary child, preferably Achaz' son, Ezechia. He would continue the Davidic dynasty as God had promised (see v. 10f n). The chronological objections to this opinion are not unanswerable. Mt. 1, 23 would later understand from this Isaian text that the expected coming of the Messia Himself has been fulfilled. The moderns teach that His virginal birth is clearly taught in Mt 1, 23 for the first time, but they dispute whether the fulfillment must be understood in the typical or fuller sense. The Hebrew word almah means a young maiden or a young woman (unmarried or recently married). About 150 B.C. the Septuagint (Greek Bible) translated almah as parthénos. Even if this Greek word added a "virginal" nuance to the Hebrew word, it would not necessarily follow that the Greek translators predicted a virginal birth. Emmanuel: a symbolic name meaning "God is with us."

The Forward Looking Concept of Biblical History continued to narrow its focus from the election of the tribe of Juda (see pp 24-25) to its most illustrious member, king David (see 2 Sm 7, 8-16 n).

The royal psalmists, together with the prophets Isaia and Michea, are best understood against the background of the promise made by God through the prophet Nathan that David's dynasty will last forever. The royal psalms and prophecies renew this promise and, at times, add distinctive features to the dynasty of the future. In other words, for about 400 years after the prophecy of 2 Sm 7, every historical king who succeeded David was partially fulfilling and realizing the prophecy of an everlasting dynasty. The lofty descriptions of the king and his reign by the psalmists and prophets were not meant to portray the particular historical king as a person; they only represented the aspirations which the people desired their future Davidic kings to have. The historical king bore the ideals of the nation irrespective of his personal abilities, great or poor. The aspirations and the ideals were based on what the people and the sacred writers believed to be the endowments God had in store for the future of the dynasty.

After centuries of disappointing Davidic kings, both as rulers and as religious leaders, the prophets began to despair of them. They began to doubt whether the successors of David, because of their poor personal, political, and religious qualities, were capable of realizing the hopes for an ideal dynasty.

Scholars dispute who of the sacred writers was the first to express this disappointment, or who was the first to speak no longer of an ideal future dynasty but of one future ideal Messia-king. This new distinctive phase is often called Personal Messianism, as different from its preceding phase: Dynastic Messianism. The latter is the Messiaship of a dynasty, the former is the Messiaship of an individual king. Some believe it was Isaia (11, 1-9), but more think it was Jeremia (23, 5-6).

Jeremia saw, in 587 B.C., the nation and its royal family led into exile. It was clear to him that the nation was politically crushed under the Babylonian heel. On the other hand, the prophet believed that God's promise of an eternal dynasty could not come to naught. God's promise must be realized. But how? How was the Davidic dynasty going to carry out God's promise of an ideal nation leading an ideal world? Jeremia and subsequent royal prophets, it seems, either thought that God would raise up another descendant of the line of David against all political odds, or He would appoint an extraordinary person.

It is a moot question whether the idea of a personal Messia came from an observation of the failure of the monarchy plus a divine inspiration, or whether it came from a direct divine revelation.

During the period of the Messianism of the individual king the earlier prophecies of dynastic Messianism were most likely reread as personal and were, at times, even retouched to fit in with the historical king of the era. (A reading of all the texts with their annotations will make for a fuller explanation of the table.)

shall be with child, and bear a son, and shall name him 15 Emmanuel. He shall be living on curds and honey by the time 16 he learns to reject the bad and choose the good. For before the child learns to reject the bad and choose the good, the land of those two kings whom you dread shall be deserted.
17 The Lord shall bring upon you and your people and your father's house days worse than any since Ephraim seceded from 18 Juda. [This means the king of Assyria.] | On that day the Lord shall whistle for the fly that is in the farthest streams of Egypt, 19 and for the bee in the land of Assyria. | All of them shall come and settle in the steep ravines and in the rocky clefts, on all 20 thornbushes and in all pastures. | On that day the Lord shall shave with the razor hired from across the River [with the king of Assyria] the head, and the hair between the legs. It shall also 21 shave off the beard. | On that day a man shall keep a heifer or a couple of sheep, and from their abundant yield of milk he shall 22 live on curds; curds and honey shall be the food of all who 23 remain in the land. On that day every place where there used to be a thousand vines, worth a thousand pieces of silver, shall be 24 turned to briers and thorns. Men shall go there with bow and 25 arrows; for all the country shall be briers and thorns. For fear of briers and thorns you shall not go upon any mountainside which used to be hoed with the mattock; they shall be grazing land for cattle and shall be trampled upon by sheep.

1 The Son of Isaia The Lord said to me: Take a large cylinder seal, and inscribe on it in ordinary letters: "Belonging to 2 Maher-shalal-hash-baz." | And I took reliable witnesses, Uria 3 the priest, and Zacharia, son of Barachia. Then I went to the prophetess and she conceived and bore a son. The Lord said to 4 me: Name him Maher-shalal-hash-baz, | for before the child

7, 15: On curds and honey: it is disputed whether this means living in abundance or in destitution, or on a relatively rich diet for destitute people.

7, 19-25: Perhaps it is better to dissociate this passage from the preceding Emmanuel section.

7, 20: The Lord will use Assyria to punish His people.

7, 20-23: Curds and honey: see 7, 15 n.

8, 1-2: Maher-shalal-hash-baz: God commands Isaia to give his other son (v. 3) this symbolic name: "quick spoils; speedy plunder" as a reminder of his prediction of how the Assyrian would act. Isaia had "witnesses" for his prediction (v. 4).

8, 3: The prophetess: Isaia's wife.

knows how to call his father or mother by name, the wealth of Damascus and the spoil of Samaria shall be carried off by the king of Assyria.
5.6 Again the Lord spoke to me: | Because this people has rejected the waters of Siloe that flow gently, and melts with fear 7 before the loftiness of Rasin and Romelia's son, | therefore the Lord raises against them the waters of the River, great and mighty [the king of Assyria and all his power]. It shall rise 8 above all its channels, and overflow all its banks; | it shall pass into Juda, and flood it all throughout: up to the neck it shall reach; it shall spread its wings the full width of your land, Emmanuel!
9 Know, O peoples, and be appalled! Give ear, all you distant 10 lands! Arm, but be crushed! Arm, but be crushed! | Form a plan, and it shall be thwarted; make a resolve, and it shall not be carried out, for "With us is God!"

11 Disciples of Isaia For thus said the Lord to me, taking hold of me and warning me not to walk in the way of this 12 people: | Call not alliance what this people calls alliance, and 13 fear not, nor stand in awe of what they fear. | But with the Lord of hosts make your alliance—for him be your fear and 14 your awe. | Yet he shall be a snare, an obstacle and a stumbling stone to both the houses of Israel, a trap and a snare to those 15 who dwell in Jerusalem; | and many among them shall stumble and fall, broken, snared, and captured.
16 The record is to be folded and the sealed instruction kept 17 among my disciples. For I will trust in the Lord, who is hiding 18 his face from the house of Jacob; yes, I will wait for him. Look at me and the children whom the Lord has given me: we are signs and portents in Israel from the Lord of hosts who dwells 19 on Mount Sion. And when they say to you, "Inquire of mediums and fortunetellers (who chirp and mutter!); should not a people inquire of their gods, apply to the dead on behalf of the living?" 20 —then this document will furnish its instruction. That kind of thing they will surely say.

8, 6: This people: the people of Jerusalem and of Juda rejected God's gentle protection ("the waters of Siloe"). Isaia uses in a metaphorical sense the stream that flowed into the pool of Siloe in Jerusalem.

8, 7: The River: Euphrates.

8, 14-15: The general sense is that the privileged people may incur a greater punishment if they do not follow God.

8, 18: Signs and portents: a reference to the symbolic names of the prophet's two sons.

23 The Prince of Peace First he degraded the land of Zabu lon and the land of Nephthali; but in the end he has glorifiec the seaward road, the land west of the Jordan, the District o the Gentiles. Anguish has taken wing, dispelled is darkness: fo there is no gloom where but now there was distress.

9

1 The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light upon those who dwelt in the land of gloom a light has shone.
2 You have brought them abundant joy and great rejoicing, a they rejoice before you as at the harvest, as men make merry 3 when dividing spoils. | For the yoke that burdened them, th pole on their shoulder, and the rod of their taskmaster you have 4 smashed, as on the day of Madian. | For every boot that trampec in battle, every cloak rolled in blood, will be burned as fuel fo flames.
5 For a child is born to us, a son is given us; upon his shoulder dominion rests. They name him Wonder-Counselor, God-Hero 6 Father-Forever, Prince of Peace. | His dominion is vast anc forever peaceful, from David's throne, and over his kingdom

8, 23: Vv. 21 and 22 have been transposed and placed within ch. 14 25, which affords the context in which they can be understood. On the explanation of verse arrangement see Za 4, 4ff n. Many agree tha
v. 23 alludes to 4 Kgs 15, 29 in the early 730's when the Assyriar Tiglath Pileser III attacked northern Palestine ("Zabulon . . . Neph thali"). In the end he has glorified: for the rest of this verse and to introduce the Messianic section, 9, 1ff, Isaia speaks from the perspective of the Messianic age already come. In other words, he uses the prophetic perfect, an affirmation of something desired in the future. The seaward road: the road from Damascus to southern Galilee and straight across to the Mediterranean Sea. District of the Gentiles: northern Galilee was largely populated by Gentiles.

9, 1: Walked in darkness: this is a reference to the people who are in distress ("darkness") because of the invasion (see 8, 23 n). They "have seen" (see "prophetic perfect" in 8, 23 n) the joy ("light") of the coming deliverer.

9, 3: Madian: a reference to Jgs 8—9.

9, 5: A child is born: Isaia refers to Emmanuel (7, 14 n) where the "sign" is Ezechia. If so, then these four titles are applied to him only insofar as he represents the ideal David who one day is to realize all God's promises made to David. It is not evident that Isaia is thinking of the one Messia. Dominion: authority. Many Fathers accommodate this text to Christ reigning from the cross. God-Hero, Father-Forever:
modern scholars do not interpret these expressions to mean divinity.
"God-Hero" means a defender of the people. Prince of Peace: Isaia means in the immediate sense a military peace, but in the New Testament era it was clearly understood as the peace between God and man.
These four epithets are aptly found in the Introit of the third Mass of Christmas and the Octave of the Nativity of Our Lord.

which he confirms and sustains by judgment and justice, both now and forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will do this!

7 Fall of the Northern Kingdom The Lord has sent word 8 against Jacob, it falls upon Israel; | and all the people know it, Ephraim and those who dwell in Samaria, those who say in arro-9 gance and pride of heart, | "Bricks have fallen, but we will build with cut stone; sycamores are felled, but we will replace 10 them with cedars." | But the Lord raises up their foes against 11 them and stirs up their enemies to action: | Aram on the east and the Philistines on the west devour Israel with open mouth.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back, and his hand is still outstretched!
12 The people do not turn to him who struck them, nor seek the 13 Lord of hosts. | So the Lord severs from Israel head and tail, 14 palm branch and reed in one day. | [The elder and the noble are the head, the prophet who teaches falsehood is the tail.] | 15 The leaders of this people mislead them and those to be led are 16 engulfed. | For this reason, the Lord does not spare their young men, and their orphans and widows he does not pity; they are wholly profaned and sinful, and every mouth gives vent to folly.
For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still out-17 stretched! | For wickedness burns like fire, devouring brier and thorn; it kindles the forest thickets, which go up in columns of 18 smoke. | At the wrath of the Lord of hosts the land quakes, and the people are like fuel for fire; no man spares his brother, each 19 devours the flesh of his neighbor. | Though they hack on the right, they are hungry; though they eat on the left, they are not 20 filled. | Manasse devours Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasse; together they turn on Juda. For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still outstretched!

1 Social Injustice Woe to those who enact unjust statutes

9, 7—10, 4: There are various interpretations of this oracle. One probable opinion holds that it is a warning of an imminent catastrophe for Juda and for the northern kingdom ("Ephraim"). The future catastrophe is pictured in terms of past calamities which befell the northern kingdom.

9, 11: The northern kingdom had been invaded by the Syrians ("Aram") and by the Philistines. For all this . . . outstretched: this refrain, repeated four times, means that God has "stretched out" His hand to continue His punishment.

9, 13: Head and tail: the people. Palm branch and reed: the leaders.

9, 20: Manasse . . . Ephraim: "Ephraim" is one of the two major tribes of the northern kingdom.

2 and who write oppressive decrees, | depriving the needy of judgment and robbing my people's poor of their rights, making 3 widows their plunder, and orphans their prey! | What will you do on the day of punishment, when ruin comes from afar? To whom will you flee for help? Where will you leave your wealth, 4 | lest it sink beneath the captive or fall beneath the slain? For all this, his wrath is not turned back, his hand is still outstretched!

5 Assyria the Unconscious Instrument of God Woe to 6 Assyria! My rod in anger, my staff in wrath. | Against an impious nation I send him, and against a people under my wrath I order him to seize plunder, carry off loot, and tread 7 them down like the mud of the streets. | But this is not what he intends, nor does he have this in mind; rather, it is in his 8 heart to destroy, to make an end of nations not a few. | "Are 9 not my commanders all kings?" he says, | "Is not Chalane like Charchamis, or Hamath like Arphad, or Samaria like Damascus?
10 | Just as my hand reached out to idolatrous kingdoms that had 11 more images than Jerusalem and Samaria, | just as I treated Samaria and her idols, shall I not do to Jerusalem and her graven images?"
12 [But when the Lord has brought to an end all his work on Mount Sion and in Jerusalem, I will punish the utterance of 13 the king of Assyria's proud heart, | and the boastfulness of his haughty eyes. For he says:] "By my own power I have done it, and by my wisdom, for I am shrewd. I have moved the boundaries of peoples, their treasures I have pillaged, and, like a 14 giant, I have put down the enthroned. | My hand has seized like a nest the riches of nations; as one takes eggs left alone, so I took in all the earth; no one fluttered a wing, or opened a mouth, or chirped!" 15 Will the axe boast against him who hews with it? Will the saw exalt itself above him who wields it? As if a rod could 16 sway him who lifts it, or a staff him who is not wood! | Therefore the Lord, the Lord of hosts, will send among his fat ones leanness, and instead of his glory there will be kindling like the 17 kindling of fire. | The Light of Israel will become a fire, Israel's

10, 5-27: The historical background of this prophecy is probably Sennacherib's invasion of 701. Isaia explains how God uses Assyria as His instrument to punish His people ("impious nation," v. 6) under whose rule Juda suffers.

10, 9: One city is the same as the other insofar as the Assyrians captured them.

10, 16: Fat ones: Assyrians.

Holy One a flame, that burns and consumes his briers and his 18 thorns in a single day. | His splendid forests and orchards will 19 be consumed, soul and body; | and the remnant of the trees in his forest will be so few, like poles set up for signals, that any 20 boy can record them. | On that day the remnant of Israel, the survivors of the house of Jacob, will no more lean upon him who struck them; but they will lean upon the Lord, the Holy 21 One of Israel, in truth. | A remnant will return, the remnant of 22 Jacob, to the mighty God. | For though your people, O Israel, were like the sand of the sea, only a remnant of them will return;
their destruction is decreed as overwhelming justice demands.
23 Yes, the destruction he has decreed, the Lord, the God of 24 hosts, will carry out within the whole land. Therefore thus says the Lord, the God of hosts: O my people, who dwell in Sion, do not fear the Assyrian, though he strikes you with a rod, and 25 raises his staff against you. For only a brief moment more, and 26 my anger shall be over; but them I will destroy in wrath. Then the Lord of hosts will raise against them a scourge such as struck Madian at the rock of Oreb; and he will raise his staff 27 over the sea as he did against Egypt. | On that day, his burden shall be taken from your shoulder, and his yoke shattered from your neck.

Sennacherib's Invasion He has come up from the direction 28 of Rimmon, | he has reached Aiath, passed through Magron, at 29 Machmas his supplies are stored. | They cross the ravine: "We will spend the night at Geba." Rama is in terror, Gabaa of Saul 30 has fled. | Cry and shriek, O daughter of Gallim! Hearken, 31 Laisa! Answer her, Anathoth! | Medemena is in flight, the in-32 habitants of Gebim seek refuge. | Even today he will halt at Nobe, he will shake his fist at the mount of daughter Sion, the 33 hill of Jerusalem! | Behold, the Lord, the Lord of hosts, lops off the boughs with terrible violence; the tall of stature are 10, 21: A remnant will return: see 7, 3 n.

10, 26: A reference to Jgs 7, 25.

10, 27b—11, 16: In this oracle, Isaia says that the Assyrians will devastate Juda but a remnant will survive.

10, 27b-32: Many agree that this is a characteristic example of how a prophet's prediction does not extend to details but to a general truth. In fact, Sennacherib's invasion did not enter Jerusalem from the northern route as described here but from the route of the Mediterranean seacoast.

10, 33-34: Juda is poetically described as either a forest cut down and burned, or Yahweh is described as a woodsman, cutting down the invaders.

34 felled, and the lofty ones brought low; | the forest thickets are felled with the axe, and Lebanon in its splendor falls.

1 The Rule of Emmanuel But a shoot shall sprout from the 2 stump of Jesse, and from his roots a bud shall blossom. | The spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him: a spirit of wisdom and understanding, a spirit of counsel and of strength, a spirit of 3 knowledge and of fear of the Lord, | and his delight shall be the fear of the Lord. Not by appearance shall he judge, nor by 4 hearsay shall he decide, | but he shall judge the poor with justice, and decide aright for the land's afflicted. He shall strike the ruthless with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of 5 his lips he shall slay the wicked. | Justice shall be the band around his waist, and faithfulness a belt upon his hips.
6 Then the wolf shall be a guest of the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; the calf and the young lion shall 7 browse together, with a little child to guide them. | The cow and the bear shall be neighbors, together their young shall rest; 8 the lion shall eat hay like the ox. | The baby shall play by the cobra's den, and the child lay his hand on the adder's lair. | 9 There shall be no harm or ruin on all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be filled with knowledge of the Lord, as water covers the sea.

11, 1-9: Scholars hesitate to say at which point in the royal Messianic strand the Messianic figure ("shoot," v. 1) becomes one definite person of the future who is to realize God's promises—in distinction to the Messianic figure representing the Davidic dynasty of God's promises as in 2 Sm 7, 8-16; Is 7, 8-16; 9, 5-6, and the royal psalms. Some claim that this text is the point at which Isaia is directly and literally speaking of the future Messia, Christ. Others claim that in this text, as in previous ones (7, 14; 9, 6), Isaia still speaks of an ideal Davidic king carrying the hopes of the Davidic dynasty. (There are other opinions.)

11, 1: Stump of Jesse: the father of David was Jesse.

11, 2-3: The spirit of the Lord: Isaia is not speaking of the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity, but of the common Old Testament expression for God's power bestowing the gifts on the Messianic figure. (See Jgs 3, 7-11 n for an example of how this power made "judges.") The gifts are six not seven, since the last two are in reality one, "the fear of the Lord." The Septuagint (Greek Bible) and the Latin Vulgate read "piety" in place of the first "fear of the Lord," thus giving rise to the "seven gifts of the Holy Spirit," a terminology stemming from the Fathers of the Church.

11, 4: With the rod of his mouth . . . with the breath of his lips: two synonyms for His word.

11, 6-9: Isaia symbolically expresses the joys of the Messianic age, especially peace, through an idyllic description of Paradise.

10 Union of Ephraim and Juda On that day, the root of Jesse, set up as a signal for the nations, the Gentiles shall seek 11 out, for his dwelling shall be glorious. | On that day, the Lord shall again take it in hand to reclaim the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria and Egypt, Phathures, Ethiopia, and 12 Elam, Sennaar, Hamath, and the isles of the sea. | He shall raise a signal to the nations and gather the outcasts of Israel; the dispersed of Juda he shall assemble from the four corners of the 13 earth. | The envy of Ephraim shall pass away, and the rivalry of Juda be removed; Ephraim shall not be jealous of Juda, and 14 Juda shall not be hostile to Ephraim; | but they shall swoop down on the foothills of the Philistines to the west, together they shall plunder the Cedemites; Edom and Moab shall be their 15 possessions, and the Ammonites their subjects. | The Lord shall dry up the tongue of the Sea of Egypt, and wave his hand over the Euphrates in his fierce anger and shatter it into seven stream-16 lets, so that it can be crossed in sandals. | There shall be a highway for the remnant of his people that is left from Assyria, as there was for Israel when he came up from the land of Egypt.

12

1 Song of Thanksgiving On that day, you will say: I give you thanks, O Lord; though you have been angry with me, your 2 anger has abated, and you have consoled me. | God indeed is my savior; I am confident and unafraid. My strength and my courage is the Lord, and he has been my savior.
3 With joy you will draw water at the fountain of salvation, | 4 and say on that day: Give thanks to the Lord, acclaim his name; among the nations make known his deeds, proclaim how exalted 5 is his name. | Sing praise to the Lord for his glorious achieve-6 ment; let this be known throughout all the earth. | Shout with exultation, O city of Sion, for great in your midst is the Holy One of Israel!

11, 10: The prediction of the conversion of the Gentiles.

11, 11: Phathures . . . sea: some of the countries where the chosen people lived in exile, e.g., southern Egypt ("Phathures").

11, 12: The outcasts of Israel: the Samaritans whom the Assyrians deported.

11, 14: Cedemites: Arabian Desert tribes.

12, 1-6: This is Isaia's psalm-like thanksgiving song, with Exodus overtones, for the promised Emmanuel ("God is my savior").

12, 3: Through the analogy of water, precious in dry eastern countries, Isaia describes the abundance of the Messianic age.

III. ORACLES AGAINST THE PAGAN NATIONS

1 Babylon An oracle concerning Babylon; a vision of Isaia, son of Amos.
2 Upon the bare mountains set up a signal; cry out to them, wave for them to enter the gates of the volunteers.
3 I have commanded my dedicated soldiers, I have summoned my warriors, eager and bold to carry out my anger.
4 Listen! the rumble on the mountains: that of an immense throng! Listen! the noise of kingdoms, nations assembled! The 5 Lord of hosts is mustering an army for battle. | They come from a far-off country, and from the end of the heavens, the Lord and the instruments of his wrath, to destroy all the land.
6 Howl, for the day of the Lord is near; as destruction from the 7 Almighty it comes. | Therefore all hands fall helpless, every 8 man's heart melts | in terror. Pangs and sorrows take hold of them, like a woman in labor they writhe; they look aghast at 9 each other, their faces aflame. | Lo, the day of the Lord comes cruel, with wrath and burning anger; to lay waste the land and destroy the sinners within it!
10 The stars and constellations of the heavens send forth no light; the sun is dark when it rises, and the light of the moon 11 does not shine. | Thus I will punish the world for its evil and the wicked for their guilt. I will put an end to the pride of the 12 arrogant, the insolence of tyrants I will humble. | I will make mortals more rare than pure gold, men, than gold of Ophir. | 13 For this I will make the heavens tremble and the earth shall be shaken from its place, at the wrath of the Lord of hosts on the day of his burning anger.
14 Like a hunted gazelle, or a flock that no one gathers, every 15 man shall turn to his kindred and flee to his own land. | Every-

13—23: See the basic meaning of the oracles against the pagan nations in Am 1, 2 n. These eleven chapters comprise oracles from which much is learned about the social conditions of the pagan countries, and often the distinctive characteristics of each people are highlighted.

13, 1—14, 23: According to the majority of commentators, ancient and modern, this oracle is on the destruction of Babylon.

13, 1-16: God summons His angels to assemble the Medes (1-5) against panic-stricken Babylon (6-16).

13, 2: To them: a reference to the Medes of v. 17. The gates of the volunteers: this may be the name of one of Babylon's city gates.

13, 3: Soldiers . . . warriors: Medes.

13, 12: Ophir: most probably located on the western coast of Arabia opposite Somaliland.

one who is caught shall be run through; to a man, they shall fall by the sword. The bows of the young men shall be smashed, | 16 their infants dashed to pieces before their eyes; their houses shall be plundered and their wives ravished.
17 I am stirring up against them the Medes, who think nothing 18 of silver and take no delight in gold. | The fruit of the womb they shall not spare, nor shall they have eyes of pity for chil-19 dren. | And Babylon, the jewel of kingdoms, the glory and pride of the Chaldeans, shall be overthrown by God like Sodom and 20 like Gomorra. | She shall never be inhabited, nor dwelt in, from age to age; the Arab shall not pitch his tent there, nor shepherds 21 couch their flocks. | But wildcats shall rest there and owls shall fill the houses; there ostriches shall dwell, and satyrs shall dance.
22 | Desert beasts shall howl in her castles, and jackals in her luxurious palaces. Her time is near at hand and her days shall not be prolonged.

14

1 The King of Babylon When the Lord has pity on Jacob and again chooses Israel and settles them on their own soil, the aliens will join them and be counted with the house of Jacob. | 2 The house of Israel will take them and bring them along to its place, and possess them as male and female slaves on the Lord's soil, making captives of its captors and ruling over its oppres-3 sors. On the day the Lord relieves you of sorrow and unrest and 4 the hard service in which you have been enslaved, you will take up this taunt-song against the king of Babylon: How the op-5 pressor has reached his end! how the turmoil is stilled! | The Lord has broken the rod of the wicked, the staff of the tyrants 6 that struck the peoples in wrath relentless blows; that beat 7 down the nations in anger, with oppression unchecked. | The 8 whole earth rests peacefully, song breaks forth; | the very cypresses rejoice over you, and the cedars of Lebanon: "Now that you are laid to rest, there will be none to cut us down." 9 The nether world below is all astir preparing for your coming;
it awakens the shades to greet you, all the leaders of the earth;

13, 21: Satyrs: goat-like demons symbolic of immorality as indicated in Lv 17, 7.

14, 1-2: These verses express two common hopes in prophetic literature, namely, the reunion of the northern and southern kingdoms and the conversion of the Gentiles.

14, 4-21: This dramatic "taunt-song" is one of the high points of Old Testament poetry. It can take its place in world literature with no apology. It is perhaps best understood as Babylon personified rather than a definite historical Babylonian king.

10 it has the kings of all nations rise from their thrones. | All of them speak out and say to you, "You too have become weak 11 like us, you are the same as we. | Down to the nether world your pomp is brought, the music of your harps. The couch beneath you is the maggot, your covering, the worm." 12 How have you fallen from the heavens, O morning star, son of the dawn! How are you cut down to the ground, you who 13 mowed down the nations! | You said in your heart: "I will scale the heavens; above the stars of God I will set up my throne; I will take my seat on the Mount of Assembly, in the 14 recesses of the North. | I will ascend above the tops of the clouds; I will be like the Most High!" 15 Yet down to the nether world you go to the recesses of the 16 pit! | When they see you they will stare, pondering over you:
"Is this the man who made the earth tremble, and kingdoms 17 quake? | Who made the world a desert, razed its cities, and 18 gave his captives no release? | All the kings of the nations lie in 19 glory, each in his own tomb; | but you are cast forth without burial, loathsome and corrupt, clothed as those slain at sword-point, a trampled corpse. Going down to the pavement of the 20 pit, | you will never be one with them in the grave. For you have ruined your land, you have slain your people."
He will not be named forever, that scion of an evil race! | 21 Make ready to slaughter his sons for the guilt of their fathers; lest they rise and possess the earth, and fill the breadth of the world with tyrants.
22 I will rise up against them, says the Lord of hosts, and cut off from Babylon name and remnant, progeny and offspring, 23 says the Lord. | I will make it a haunt of hoot owls and a marshland; I will sweep it with the broom of destruction, says the Lord of hosts.

24 Assyria The Lord of hosts has sworn: As I have resolved, 25 so shall it be; as I have proposed, so shall it stand: | I will break the Assyrian in my land and trample him on my moun-8,21 tains; | he shall pass through it hard-pressed and hungry, and 14, 12-15: The inspired author's source may be a Chanaanite myth of the "morning star" ascending over all other stars only to be dashed down by the splendor of the victorious sun.

14, 12: Morning star: the Vulgate translated it "Lucifer," which the Fathers of the Church accommodated to Lucifer falling from heaven.

14, 13: Mount of Assembly, in the recesses of the North: the biblical Olympus of the Greeks.

14, 19-20: The ancient underlying idea is the utter horror of unburied human corpses. The other kings had a decent burial but not "Babylon."

in his hunger he shall become enraged, and curse his king and his gods. He shall look upward, but there shall be strict dark-8,22 ness without any dawn; he shall gaze at the earth, but there shall be distress and darkness, with the light blacked out by its 14,25 clouds. | Then his yoke shall be removed from them, and his 26 burden from their shoulder. | This is the plan proposed for the whole earth, and this the hand outstretched over all nations. | 27 The Lord of hosts has planned; who can thwart him? His hand is stretched out; who can turn it back?

28 Philistia In the year that king Achaz died, there came this 29 oracle: | Rejoice not, O Philistia, not a man of you, that the rod which smote you is broken; for out of the serpent's root 30 shall come an adder, its fruit shall be a flying saraph. | In my pastures the poor shall eat, and the needy lie down in safety; but I will kill your root with famine that shall slay even your 31 remnant. | Howl, O gate; cry out, O city! Philistia, all of you melts away! For there comes a smoke from the north, without a straggler in the ranks.
32 What will one answer the messengers of the nation? "The Lord has established Sion, and in her the afflicted of his people find refuge."

15

1 Moab Oracle on Moab: Laid waste in a night, Ar of Moab is destroyed; laid waste in a night, Kir of Moab is destroyed. | 2 Up goes daughter Dibon to the high places to weep; over Nebo and over Madaba Moab wails. Every head is shaved, every beard 3 sheared off. | In the streets they wear sackcloth, lamenting and weeping; on rooftops and in the squares everyone wails. | 4 Hesebon and Eleale cry out, they are heard as far as Jahas.
At this the loins of Moab tremble, his soul quivers within him; |
5 the heart of Moab cries out, his fugitives reach Segor [Eglath-Shelishiyah]. The ascent of Luhith they climb weeping; on the way to Horonaim they utter rending cries.
6 The waters of Nemrim have become a waste; the grass is 7 withered, new growth is gone, nothing is green. | So now whatever they have acquired or stored away they carry across the 14, 28: King Achaz died about 716 B.C.

14, 29-32: The general sense is: Juda will rise from her fall but not Philistia.
14, 29: The rod: the identity of the Assyrian monarch here depends on the exact date of Achaz' death in v. 28.
15—16: Depending on the interpretation of "in times past" (16, 13), scholars give different dates for this prediction of Moab's fall.

8 Gorge of the Poplars, | for the cry has gone round the land of Moab; as far as Eglaim the wailing, and to Beer-elim, the wail. | 9 The waters of Dimon were filled with blood, but I will bring still more upon Dimon: lions for those who are fleeing from Moab and for those who remain in the land!

16

1 Send them forth, hugging the earth like reptiles, from Sela 2 across the desert, to the mount of daughter Sion. | Like flushed birds, like startled nestlings, are the daughters of Moab at the 3 fords of the Arnon. | Offer counsel, take their part: at high noon let your shadow be like the night, to hide the outcasts, to 4 conceal the fugitives. | Let the outcasts of Moab live with you, be their shelter from the destroyer. When the struggle is ended, the ruin complete, and they have done with trampling the land, | 5 a throne shall be set up in mercy, and on it shall sit in fidelity [in David's tent] a judge upholding right and prompt to do justice.
6 We have heard of the pride of Moab, how very proud he is, with his haughty, arrogant insolence that his empty words do not match.
7 Therefore Moab wails for Moab, everywhere they wail; for the raisin cakes of Kir-hareseth they sigh, stricken with grief. | 8 The terraced slopes of Hesebon languish the vines of Sabama, whose clusters overpowered the lords of nations, while they reached as far as Jazer and scattered over the desert, and whose 9 branches spread forth and extended over the sea. | Therefore I weep with Jazer for the vines of Sabama; I water you with tears, Hesebon and Eleale; for on your summer fruits and 10 harvests the battle cry has fallen. | From the orchards are taken away joy and gladness, in the vineyards there is no singing, no shout of joy; in the wine presses no one treads grapes, the vin-11 tage shout is stilled. | Therefore for Moab my breast moans like 12 a lyre, and my heart for Kir-hareseth. | Though Moab shall be seen tiring himself on the high place, entering his sanctuary to pray, it shall avail him nothing.
13 This is the word the Lord spoke against Moab in times past. | 14 But now the Lord has spoken: In three years, like those of a hireling, the glory of Moab shall be degraded despite all its great multitude; there shall be a remnant, very small and weak.

17

1 Damascus Oracle on Damascus: Lo, Damascus shall cease

17, 1-14: Perhaps before 735 Isaia predicted the fall of Damascus to the Assyrians which occurred in 732 B.C.

to be a city and become a ruin; | her cities shall be forever abandoned, given over to flocks to lie in undisturbed. | The fortress shall be lost to Ephraim and the kingdom to Damascus;
the remnant of Aram shall have the same glory as the Israelites, says the Lord of hosts.
On that day the glory of Jacob shall fade, and his full body grow thin, like the reaper's mere armful of stalks when he gathers the standing grain; or as when one gleans the ears in the valley of Raphaim. | Only a scattering of grapes shall be left!
As when an olive tree has been beaten, two or three olives remain at the very top, four or five on its fruitful branches, says the Lord, the God of Israel.
On that day man shall look to his maker, his eyes turned toward the Holy One of Israel. | He shall not look to the altars, his handiwork, nor shall he regard what his fingers have made:
the sacred poles or the incense stands. | On that day his strong cities shall be like those abandoned by the Hevites and Amorrites when faced with the children of Israel: they shall be laid waste. | For you have forgotten God, your savior, and remembered not the Rock, your strength. Therefore, though you plant your pagan plants and set out your foreign vine slips, | though you make them grow the day you plant them and make your sprouts blossom on the next morning, the harvest shall disappear on the day of the grievous blow, the incurable blight.
Ah! the roaring of many peoples that roar like the roar of the seas! The surging of nations that surge like the surging of mighty waves! | But God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far away; windswept, like chaff on the mountains, like tumbleweed in a storm. | In the evening, they spread terror, before morning, they are gone! Such is the portion of those who despoil us, the lot of those who plunder us.

Ethiopia Ah, land of buzzing insects, beyond the rivers of Ethiopia, | sending ambassadors by sea, in papyrus boats on the waters! Go, swift messengers, to a nation tall and bronzed, to a people dreaded near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers. | All you who inhabit the world, who dwell on earth, when the signal is raised on the mountain, look! When the trumpet blows, listen!

18, 1-7: Generally scholars date this Isaian oracle shortly before Sennacherib's invasion of 701. On the occasion of an embassy from Egypt, then ruled by an Ethiopic dynasty, Juda was invited to join an alliance against Assyria. Isaia objects to the alliance.

4 For thus says the Lord to me: I will quietly look on from where I dwell, like the glowing heat of sunshine, like a cloud of 5 dew at harvest time. | Before the vintage, when the flowering is ended, and the blooms are succeeded by ripening grapes, then comes the cutting of branches with pruning hooks and the dis-6 carding of the lopped-off shoots. | They shall all be left to the mountain birds of prey, and to the beasts in the land; the birds of prey shall summer on them and on them all the beasts of the earth shall winter.
7 Then will gifts be brought to the Lord of hosts from a people tall and bronzed, from a people dreaded near and far, a nation strong and conquering, whose land is washed by rivers,—to Mount Sion where dwells the name of the Lord of hosts.

1 Egypt Oracle on Egypt: See, the Lord is riding on a swift cloud on his way to Egypt; the idols of Egypt tremble before 2 him, the hearts of the Egyptians melt within them. | I will rouse Egypt against Egypt: brother will war against brother, neighbor against neighbor, city against city, kingdom against kingdom. | 3 The courage of the Egyptians ebbs away within them, and I will bring to nought their counsel; they shall consult idols and 4 charmers, ghosts and spirits. | I will deliver Egypt into the power of a cruel master, a harsh king who shall rule over them, 5 says the Lord, the Lord of hosts. | The waters shall be drained
6 from the sea, the river shall shrivel and dry up; | its streams shall become foul, and the canals of Egypt shall dwindle and 7 dry up. Reeds and rushes shall wither away, | and bulrushes on the bank of the Nile; all the sown land along the Nile shall 8 dry up and blow away, and be no more. | The fishermen shall mourn and lament, all who cast hook in the Nile; those who 9 spread their nets in the water shall pine away. | The linen-workers shall be disappointed, the combers and weavers shall 10 turn pale; | the spinners shall be crushed, all the hired laborers shall be despondent.
11 Utter fools are the princes of Soan! the wisest of Pharao's advisers give stupid counsel. How can you say to Pharao, "I am 12 a disciple of wise men, of ancient kings?" | Where then are your wise men? Let them tell you and make known what the 19, 1-25: Many experts date this poem some time after the end of the exile in 538 B.C.

19, 1-15: The miseries of Egypt, poetically described, will end in her conquest by a foreign "cruel master" (v. 4) who is historically difficult to identify.

19, 11: Soan: a key Egyptian city in northern Egypt.

13 Lord of hosts has planned against Egypt. | The princes of Soan have become fools, the princes of Memphis have been deceived.
14 The chiefs of her tribes have led Egypt astray. | The Lord has prepared among them a spirit of dizziness, and they have made Egypt stagger in whatever she does, as a drunkard staggers in 15 his vomit. | Egypt shall have no work to do for head or tail, palm branch or reed.
16 On that day the Egyptians shall be like women, trembling with fear, because of the Lord of hosts shaking his fist at them.
1 And the land of Juda shall be a terror to the Egyptians. Every time they remember Juda, they shall stand in dread because of the plan which the Lord of hosts has in mind for them.
18 On that day there shall be five cities in the land of Egypt speaking the language of Chanaan and swearing by the Lord of hosts; one shall be called "City of the Sun." 19 On that day there shall be an altar to the Lord in the land of 20 Egypt, and a sacred pillar to the Lord near the boundary. It shall be a sign and a witness to the Lord of hosts in the land of Egypt, when they cry out to the Lord against their oppressors, and he 21 sends them a savior to defend and deliver them. The Lord shall make himself known to Egypt, and the Egyptians shall know the Lord in that day; they shall offer sacrifices and oblations, and 22 fulfill the vows they make to the Lord. Although the Lord shall smite Egypt severely, he shall heal them; they shall turn to the Lord and he shall be won over and heal them.
23 On that day there shall be a highway from Egypt to Assyria; the Assyrians shall enter Egypt, and the Egyptians enter Assyria, and Egypt shall serve Assyria.
24 On that day Israel shall be a third party with Egypt and 25 Assyria, a blessing in the midst of the land, | when the Lord of hosts blesses it: "Blessed be my people Egypt, and the work of my hands Assyria, and my inheritance, Israel."

1 Captivity of Egypt and Ethiopia In the year the general sent by Sargon, king of Assyria, fought against Azotus and 2 captured it, | the Lord gave a warning through Isaia, the son of Amos: Go and take off the sackcloth from your waist, and 19, 13: Memphis: a one-time capital city of Egypt.

19, 15: See 9, 13 n.
19, 16-25: A description in prose of Egypt's future conversion.
19, 18: An enigmatic verse.
20, 1-6: The symbolic act signified the folly of Juda's dependence on Egypt and Ethiopia, who in turn were conquered by Assyria. See v. 3 n. Isaia often spoke of this folly.

remove the sandals from your feet. This he did, walking naked 3 and barefoot. | Then the Lord said: Just as my servant Isaia has gone naked and barefoot for three years as a sign and portent 4 against Egypt and Ethiopia, so shall the king of Assyria lead away captives from Egypt, and exiles from Ethiopia, young and old, naked and barefoot, with buttocks uncovered [the shame 5 of Egypt]. They shall be dismayed and ashamed because of 6 Ethiopia, their hope, and because of Egypt, their boast. The inhabitants of this coastland shall say on that day, "Look at our hope! We have fled here for help and deliverance from the king of Assyria; where can we flee now?"

1 Fall of Babylon Oracle on the wastelands by the sea: Like whirlwinds sweeping in waves through the Negeb, there comes 2 from the desert, from the fearful land, | a cruel sight, revealed to me: the traitor betrays, the despoiler spoils. "Go up, Elam; 3 besiege, O Media; I will put an end to all groaning!" | Therefore my loins are filled with anguish, pangs have seized me like those of a woman in labor; I am too bewildered to hear, 4 too dismayed to look. | My mind reels, shuddering assails me;
my yearning for twilight has turned into dread.
5 They set the table, spread out the rugs; they eat, they drink.
Rise up, O princes, oil the shield!
6 For thus says my Lord to me: Go, station a watchman, let 7 him tell what he sees. | If he sees a chariot, a pair of horses, someone riding an ass, someone riding a camel, then let him pay 8 heed, very close heed. | Then the watchman cried, "On the watchtower, O my Lord, I stand constantly by day; and I stay at 9 my post through all the watches of the night. | Here he comes now: a single chariot, a pair of horses; he calls out and says,

---

20, 3: Isaia's action of living like a slave was a sign of Egypt and Ethiopia who were to be enslaved by Assyria.

21, 1-10: This oracle is on the fall of Babylon in 538 B.C. and is not generally considered a prophecy by Isaia but by a sixth century prophet.

21, 1: The wastelands by the sea: lower Babylonia.

21, 2: Elam . . . Media: Cyrus' allies, the Elamites and Medes, who captured Babylon in 538 B.C. I will put an end to all groaning: of those oppressed by Babylon.

21, 5: The soldiers of Babylon are depicted at a banquet when the city was captured. Commentators often warn that, although Herodotus and Xenophon said that the Babylonian nobles were feasting on the eve of Babylon's fall, the sacred writers' descriptions of this scene (e.g., Dn 5) are not necessarily reporting the historical event in question but they may be using the feast as a literary symbol of a secure people suddenly overthrown by the enemy. Oil the shield: to make blows slide off the shields.

'Fallen, fallen is Babylon, and all the images of her gods are smashed to the ground.' " 10 O my people who have been threshed, beaten on my threshing floor! What I have heard from the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, I have announced to you.

11 Edom Oracle on Edom: They call to me from Seir, "Watchman, how much longer the night? Watchman, how much longer 12 the night?" | The watchman replies, "Morning has come, and again night. If you will ask, ask; come back again."

13 Arabia Oracle on Arabia: In the thicket in the nomad coun-14 try spend the night, O caravans of Dedanites. | Meet the thirsty, bring them water; you who dwell in the land of Thema, greet 15 the fugitives with bread. | They flee from the sword, from the whetted sword; from the taut bow, from the fury of battle.
16 For thus says the Lord to me: In another year, like those of 17 a hireling, all the glory of Cedar shall come to an end. Few of Cedar's stalwart archers shall remain, for the Lord, the God of Israel, has spoken.

22

1 Jerusalem Oracle of the Valley of Vision: What is the matter with you now, that you have gone up, all of you, to the 2 housetops, | O city full of noise and chaos, O wanton town!
Your slain are not slain with the sword, nor killed in battle. | 3 All your leaders fled away together, fled afar off; all who were in you were captured together, captured without the use of a 4 bow. | At this I say: Turn away from me, let me weep bitterly; do not try to comfort me for the ruin of the daughter of my 5 people. | It is a day of panic, rout and confusion, from the Lord, the God of hosts, in the Valley of Vision. Walls crash; they cry 6 for help to the mountains. | Elam takes up the quivers, Aram

21, 11-12: Scholars do not know the date or the historical circumstances of this oracle. Brief oracles are often difficult to date. Seir: Edom. The prophet hears the Edomites' quest "how much longer the night" of suffering. The prophet ("watchman") replies that they are to ask again later.

21, 13-17: This may date from Isaia about 716 on the occasion of one of Sargon's campaigns. The tribe of Cedar flees south toward the tribes of Dedan ("Dedanites") and Thema, but they flee in vain, for "in another year" (v. 16) the tribe of Cedar will be devastated.

22, 1-14: This oracle is generally dated about the time of Sennacherib's invasion of Juda in 701 B.C.

22, 1: Valley of Vision: an enigmatic phrase.

22, 6: Three Assyrian allies.

7 mounts the horses, and Kir uncovers the shields. | Your choice valleys are filled with chariots, and horses are posted at the 8 gates, | and shelter over Juda is removed.
On that day you looked to the weapons in the House of the 9 Forest; | you saw that the breaches in the City of David were 10 many; you collected the water of the lower pool. You numbered the houses of Jerusalem, tearing some down to strengthen the 11 wall; you made a reservoir between the two walls for the water of the old pool. But you did not look to the city's Maker, nor did you consider him who built it long ago.
12 On that day the Lord, the God of hosts, called on you to weep 13 and mourn, to shave your head and put on sackcloth. | But look! you feast and celebrate, you slaughter oxen and butcher sheep, you eat meat and drink wine: "Eat and drink, for 14 tomorrow we die!" | This reaches the ears of the Lord of hosts
—You shall not be pardoned this wickedness till you die, says the Lord, the God of hosts.

15 Sobna and Eliacim Thus says the Lord, the God of hosts: 16 Up, go to that official, Sobna, master of the palace, | who has hewn for himself a sepulcher on a height and carved his tomb in the rock: "What are you doing here, and what people have you here, that here you have hewn for yourself a tomb?" | 17 The Lord shall hurl you down headlong, mortal man! He shall 18 grip you firmly | and roll you up and toss you like a ball into an open land to perish there, you and the chariots you glory in, 19 you disgrace to your master's house! | I will thrust you from your office and pull you down from your station.
20 On that day I will summon my servant Eliacim, son of Helcia; 21 | I will clothe him with your robe, and gird him with your sash, and give over to him your authority. He shall be a father to the 22 inhabitants of Jerusalem, and to the house of Juda. | I will place the key of the House of David on his shoulder; when he opens, no one shall shut, when he shuts, no one shall open. | 23 I will fix him like a peg in a sure spot, to be a place of honor 24 for his family; | on him shall hang all the glory of his family:

22, 8-11: Isaia reproaches the Jerusalemites for preparing a siege without asking God's help.

22, 8: House of the Forest: one of Solomon's buildings used as an armory (3 Kgs 7, 2).

22, 18: An open land: a foreign land.

22, 22: Key: authority to allow or refuse access to the king. The "master of the palace" (v. 15) wore the key hanging from his shoulder. See Mt 16, 19.

22, 24-25: The general meaning is a warning against nepotism. On descendants and offspring, all the little dishes, from bowls to jugs.

25 On that day, says the Lord of hosts, the peg fixed in a sure spot shall give way, break off and fall, and the weight that hung on it shall be done away with; for the Lord has spoken.

1 Tyre and Sidon Oracle on Tyre: Wail, O ships of Tharsis, for your port is destroyed; from the land of the Chetthim the
2 news reaches them. | Silence! you who dwell on the coast, you
3 merchants of Sidon, whose messengers crossed the sea | over the deep waters. The grain of Sihor, the harvest of the Nile, was her
4 revenue, and she the merchant among nations. | Shame, O Sidon, fortress on the sea, for the sea has spoken: "I have not been in labor, nor given birth, nor raised young men, nor reared
5 virgins." | When it is heard in Egypt they shall be in anguish at 6 the news of Tyre. | Pass over to Tharsis, wailing, you who 7 dwell on the coast! | Is this your wanton city, whose origin is from of old, whose feet have taken her to dwell in distant lands?
8 | Who has planned such a thing against Tyre, the bestower of crowns, whose merchants are princes, whose traders are the
9 earth's honored men? | The Lord of hosts has planned it, to disgrace all pride of majesty, to degrade all the earth's honored
10 men. | Cross to your own land, O ship of Tharsis; the harbor is 11 no more. | His hand he stretches out over the sea, he shakes kingdoms; the Lord has ordered the destruction of Chanaan's
12 strongholds. | You shall exult no more, he says, you who are now oppressed, virgin daughter Sidon. Arise, pass over to the Chetthim, even there you shall find no rest.
13 [This people is the land of the Chaldeans, not Assyria.] She whom the impious founded, setting up towers for her, has had 14 her castles destroyed, and has been turned into a ruin. | Lament, O ships of Tharsis for your haven is destroyed.
15 On that day, Tyre shall be forgotten for seventy years. With the days of another king, at the end of seventy years, it shall be 16 for Tyre as in the song about the harlot: | Take a harp, go

Eliacim will depend the glory of his family ("little dishes from bowls to jugs").

23, 1-18: This may be from Isaia, but authors date this oracle from the time of the Assyrians in the eighth century to 332 B.C. when the island fortress fell to Alexander the Great.

23, 1-14: A poem on an invader who destroys Tyre and Sidon.

23, 15-18: A prose addition on the restoration of Tyre in seventy years and its conversion to Yahweh.

about the city, O forgotten harlot; pluck the strings skillfully, sing many songs, that they may remember you.
17 At the end of the seventy years the Lord shall visit Tyre.
She shall return to her hire and deal with all the world's 18 kingdoms on the face of the earth. But her merchandise and her hire shall be sacred to the Lord. It shall not be stored up or laid away, but from her merchandise those who dwell before the Lord shall eat their fill and clothe themselves in choice attire.

IV. APOCALYPSE OF ISAIA

24

1 Devastation of the World: A Remnant Saved Lo, the Lord empties the land and lays it waste; he turns it upside down, 2 scattering its inhabitants: | layman and priest alike, servant and master, the maid as her mistress, the buyer as the seller, the 3 lender as the borrower, the creditor as the debtor. | The earth is utterly laid waste, utterly stripped, for the Lord has decreed 4 this thing. | The earth mourns and fades, the world languishes
5 and fades; both heaven and earth languish. | The earth is polluted because of its inhabitants, who have transgressed laws, 6 violated statutes, broken the ancient covenant. | Therefore a curse devours the earth, and its inhabitants pay for their guilt; therefore they who dwell on earth turn pale, and few men are 7 left. | The wine mourns, the vine languishes, all the merry-8 hearted groan. | Stilled are the cheerful timbrels, ended the 9 shouts of the jubilant, stilled is the cheerful harp. | They cannot sing and drink wine; strong drink is bitter to those who partake 10 of it. | Broken down is the city of chaos, shut against entry,
11 every house. | In the streets they cry out for lack of wine; all 12 joy has disappeared and cheer has left the land. | In the city nothing remains but ruin; its gates are battered and desolate. |

24—27: Scholars call these four chapters the "Apocalypse of Isaia." It is written by an unknown author, and dated between 535 to 333 B.C., i.e., some time during the Persian period when the Jews were striving to rebuild their nation after the exile. It is loosely called "Apocalypse" because of the veiled way in which God's enemies are indicated, and because it is an international scene of God's judgment on all the pagan nations. The fully developed literary form of apocalypse appears in the Book of Daniel. The historical era just beyond the author's day is painted poetically in the colors of the immorality of the prophet's own day. He is not speaking of the end of the world. Thus, this section is appropriate here because it follows the section where individual pagan nations were described (chs. 13—23).

24, 6: A curse: a probable allusion to punishment as the consequence of disobedience to God (Dt 27, 15ff).

13 Thus it is within the land, and among the peoples, as with an olive tree after it is beaten, as with a gleaning when the vintage 14 is done. | These lift up their voice in acclaim; from the sea 15 they proclaim the majesty of the Lord: | "For this, in the coastlands, give glory to the Lord! In the coastlands of the sea, 16 to the name of the Lord, the God of Israel!" | From the end of the earth we hear songs: "Splendor to the Just One!" But I said, "I am wasted, wasted away. Woe is me! The traitors 17 betray: with treachery have the traitors betrayed! | Terror, pit, 18 and trap are upon you, inhabitant of the earth; | he who flees at the sound of terror will fall into the pit; he who climbs out of the pit will be caught in the trap. For the windows on high will 19 be opened and the foundations of the earth will shake. | The earth will burst asunder, the earth will be shaken apart, the 20 earth will be convulsed. | The earth will reel like a drunkard, and it will sway like a hut; its rebellion will weigh it down, until it falls, never to rise again." 21 On that day the Lord will punish the host of the heavens in 22 the heavens, and the kings of the earth on the earth. | They will be gathered together like prisoners into a pit; they will be shut up in a dungeon, and after many days they will be punished. | 23 Then the moon will blush and the sun grow pale, for the Lord of hosts will reign on Mount Sion and in Jerusalem, glorious in the sight of his elders.

1 O Lord, you are my God, I will extol you and praise your name; for you have fulfilled your wonderful plans of old, 2 faithful and true. | For you have made the city a heap, the fortified city a ruin; the castle of the insolent is a city no more, 3 nor ever to be rebuilt. | Therefore a strong people will honor 4 you, fierce nations will fear you. | For you are a refuge to the poor, a refuge to the needy in distress; shelter from the rain, 5 shade from the heat. As with the cold rain, | as with the desert
6 heat, even so you quell the uproar of the wanton. | On this mountain the Lord of hosts will provide for all peoples a feast of rich food and choice wines, juicy, rich food and pure, choice 7 wines. | On this mountain he will destroy the veil that veils all
8 peoples, the web that is woven over all nations; | he will destroy 24, 21: The host of the heavens: a frequent biblical expression for the stars.

24, 23: His elders: angels.

25, 1-8: The "Apocalypse" is sprinkled with hymns of supplication and thanksgiving.

25, 6: On this mountain: a frequent biblical symbol of Jerusalem.

death forever. The Lord God will wipe away the tears from all faces; the reproach of his people he will remove from the whole earth; for the Lord has spoken.
9 On that day it will be said: "Behold our God, to whom we looked to save us! This is the Lord for whom we looked; let us 10 rejoice and be glad that he has saved us!" | For the hand of the Lord will rest on this mountain, but Moab will be trodden down 11 as a straw is trodden down in the mire. | He will stretch forth his hands in Moab as a swimmer extends his hands to swim;
he will bring low their pride as his hands sweep over them. | 12 The high-walled fortress he will raze, and strike it down level with the earth, with the very dust.

26

1 The Divine Vindicator On that day they will sing this song in the land of Juda: "A strong city have we; he sets up walls 2 and ramparts to protect us. | Open up the gates to let in a 3 nation that is just, one that keeps faith. | A nation of firm purpose you keep in peace; in peace, for its trust in you." 4 Trust in the Lord forever! For the Lord is an eternal Rock. | 5 He humbles those in high places, and the lofty city he brings down; he tumbles it to the ground, levels it with the dust. | 6 It is trampled underfoot by the needy, by the footsteps of the 7 poor. | The way of the just is smooth; the path of the just you 8 make level. | Yes, for your way and your judgments, O Lord, we look to you; your name and your title are the desire of our 9 souls. | My soul yearns for you in the night, yes, my spirit within me keeps vigil for you; when your judgment dawns upon 10 the earth, the world's inhabitants learn justice. | The wicked man, spared, does not learn justice; in an upright land he acts 11 perversely, and sees not the majesty of the Lord. | O Lord, your hand is uplifted, but they behold it not; let them be shamed when they see your zeal for your people: let the fire prepared 12 for your enemies consume them. | O Lord, you mete out peace to us, for it is you who have accomplished all we have done. | 13 O Lord, our God, other lords than you have ruled us; it is from you only that we can call upon your name.
14 Dead they are, they have no life, shades that cannot rise; for you have punished and destroyed them, and wiped out all 15 memory of them. | You have increased the nation, O Lord, increased the nation to your own glory, and extended far all the 25, 10: Moab: more probably Moab is used as a symbol for an oracle against all the nations.

26, 4: An eternal Rock: a frequent biblical title for Yahweh.

16 borders of the land. | O Lord, oppressed by your punishment,
17 we cried out in anguish under your chastising. | As a woman about to give birth writhes and cries out in her pains, so were 18 we in your presence, O Lord. | We conceived and writhed in pain, giving birth to wind; salvation we have not achieved for the earth, the inhabitants of the world cannot bring it forth. | 19 But your dead shall live, their corpses shall rise; awake and sing, you who lie in the dust. For your dew is a dew of light, and the land of shades gives birth.

20 Day of the Lord: Reward and Punishment Go, my people, enter your chambers, and close your doors behind you;
hide yourselves for a brief moment, until the wrath is past. | 21 See, the Lord goes forth from his place, to punish the wickedness of the earth's inhabitants; the earth will reveal the blood upon her, and no longer conceal her slain.

27

1 On that day, the Lord will punish with his sword that is cruel, great, and strong, Leviathan the fleeing serpent, Leviathan the coiled serpent; and he will slay the dragon that is in the sea.
2.3 On that day—the pleasant vineyard, sing about it! | I, the Lord, am its keeper, I water it every moment; lest anyone harm 4 it, night and day I guard it. | I am not angry, but if I were to find briers and thorns, in battle I should march against them; 8 I should burn them all. | Expunging and expelling, I should strive against them, carrying them off with my cruel wind in time of storm.
6 In days to come Jacob shall take root, Israel shall sprout and 7 blossom, covering all the world with fruit. | Is he to be smitten
as his smiter was smitten? or slain as his slayer was slain? | 5 Or shall he cling to me for refuge? He must make peace with 9 me; peace shall he make with me! | This, then, shall be the expiation of Jacob's guilt, this the whole fruit of the removal of his sin: he shall pulverize all the stones of the altars like pieces of chalk; no sacred poles or incense altars shall stand.
10 For the fortified city shall be desolate, an abandoned pasture, a forsaken wilderness, where calves shall browse and lie. Its 11 boughs shall be destroyed, | its branches shall wither and be broken off, and women shall come to build a fire with them This is not an understanding people; therefore their maker shall not spare them, nor shall he who formed them have mercy on them.

12 On that day, the Lord shall beat out the grain between the Euphrates and the valley of Egypt, and you shall be gleaned one by one, O sons of Israel.
13 On that day, a great trumpet shall blow, and the lost in the land of Assyria and the outcasts in the land of Egypt shall come and worship the Lord on the holy mountain, in Jerusalem.

V. THE LORD ALONE, ISRAEL'S AND JUDA'S SALVATION

1 The Fate of Samaria Woe to the majestic garland of the drunkards of Ephraim, to the fading blooms of his glorious beauty, on the head [of the fertile valley] of those who are 2 stupefied with wine. | Behold, the Lord has a strong one and a mighty, who, like a downpour of hail, a destructive storm, like a flood of water, great and overflowing, levels to the ground 3 with violence; | with feet that will trample the majestic garland
4 of the drunkards of Ephraim. | The fading blooms of his glorious beauty on the head of the fertile valley will be like an early fig before summer: when a man sees it, he picks and swallows it at once.
5 On that day the Lord of hosts will be a glorious crown and a 6 brilliant diadem to the remnant of his people, | a spirit of justice to him who sits in judgment, and strength to those who turned back the battle at the gate.

27, 12: A poetic description of the reunion of the chosen people between her two ideal borders, "the Euphrates and the valley of Egypt."

27, 13: A common prophetic passage on the conversion of the Gentiles.

28—33: Most of this section is often considered to come from Isaia The main interest here is Juda. The historical background seems to be the time between the fall of Samaria, (722-21) and Sennacherib's invasion, (701) but closer to the latter.

28, 1-6: This Isaian oracle is generally dated some time before the fall of Samaria.

28, 1: Majestic garland: Samaria's poetic name connotes a frolic ornament of the "drunkards of Ephraim," the people of the northern kingdom.

28, 2: An allusion to the Assyrians who were to capture Samaria.

7 Against Juda But these also stagger from wine and stumble from strong drink: priest and prophet stagger from strong drink, overpowered by wine; led astray by strong drink, stagger-8 ing in their visions, tottering when giving judgment. | Yes, all the tables are covered with filthy vomit, with no place left 9 clean. | "To whom would he impart knowledge? To whom would he convey the message? To those just weaned from milk, 10 those taken from the breast? | For he says, 'Command on command, command on command, rule on rule, rule on rule, here a 11 little, there a little!' " | Yes, with stammering lips and in a 12 strange language he will speak to this people | to whom he said:
This is the resting place, give rest to the weary; here is repose—13 but they would not listen. | So for them the word of the Lord shall be: "Command on command, command on command, rule on rule, rule on rule, here a little, there a little!" So that when they walk, they stumble backward, broken, ensnared, and captured.

14 Therefore, hear the word of the Lord, you arrogant, who rule 15 this people in Jerusalem: | Because you say, "We have made a covenant with death, and with the nether world we have made a pact; when the overwhelming scourge passes, it will not reach us; for we have made lies our refuge, and in falsehood we have 16 found a hiding place,"— | therefore, thus says the Lord God:
See, I am laying a stone in Sion, a stone that has been tested, a precious cornerstone as a sure foundation; he who puts his 17 faith in it shall not be shaken. | I will make of right a measuring line, of justice a level.—Hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, 18 and waters shall flood the hiding place. | Your covenant with death shall be canceled and your pact with the nether world shall not stand. When the overwhelming scourge passes, you 19 shall be trampled down by it. | Whenever it passes, it shall take you; morning after morning it shall pass, by day and by night; 20 terror alone shall convey the message. | For the bed shall be too short to stretch out in, and the cover too narrow to wrap in. | 21 For the Lord shall rise up as on Mount Pharasim, bestir himself

28, 9-10: These are the words of those who mock Isaia.

28, 13: Isaia has God put their mocking words (vv. 9-10) on the lips of pagan conquerors; thus the jest of the people turns into a threat.

28, 15: An allusion to a foreign political alliance by a Judean king (Achaz? Ezechia?) against Assyria.

28, 16: Isaia poetically speaks of trusting faith in God as a "cornerstone," a "foundation." This expression does not refer literally and directly to the future Messia even though Rom 9, 33; 10, 11; 1 Pt 2, 6 reread this text as referring to the Messia. See Ps 117, 22 n.

28, 18: For the same allusion see 28, 15 n.

28, 21: Mount Pharasim . . . Gabaon: places where David was as in the valley of Gabaon, to carry out his work, his singular 22 work, to perform his deed, his strange deed. | Now, be arrogant no more lest your bonds be tightened, for I have heard from the Lord, the God of hosts, the destruction decreed for the whole earth.

23 Give ear and hear my voice, pay attention and listen to what 24 I say: Is the plowman forever plowing, always loosening and 25 harrowing his land for planting? | When he has leveled the surface, does he not scatter gith and sow cumin, put in wheat 26 and barley, with spelt as its border? | He has learned this rule, 27 instructed by his God. | Gith is not threshed with a sledge, nor does a cartwheel roll over cumin. But gith is beaten out with a 28 staff, and cumin crushed for food with a rod. | No, he does not thresh it unendingly, nor does he crush it with his noisy 29 cartwheels and horses. | This too comes from the Lord of hosts; wonderful is his counsel and great his wisdom.

1 The Fall of Jerusalem Woe to Ariel, Ariel, the city where David encamped! Add year to year, let the feasts come round. |
2 But I will bring distress upon Ariel, with mourning and grief.
3 You shall be to me like Ariel, | I will encamp like David against you; I will encircle you with outposts and set up siege 4 works against you. | Prostrate you shall speak from the earth, and from the base dust your words shall come. Your voice shall be like a ghost's from the earth, and your words like chirping 5 from the dust. | The horde of your arrogant shall be like fine dust, the horde of the tyrants like flying chaff. Then suddenly, in 6 an instant, | you shall be visited by the Lord of hosts, with thunder, earthquake, and great noise, whirlwind, storm, and the flame of consuming fire.
7 Then like a dream, a vision in the night, shall be the horde of all the nations who war against Ariel with all the earthworks of 8 her besiegers. | As when a hungry man dreams he is eating and awakens with an empty stomach, or when a thirsty man dreams victorious over the Philistines. God will execute a "strange deed." He will fight against His people.

28, 23-29: The general message of the obscure parable is that the people should act as intelligently as the farmer. Isaia seems to be objecting to the foreign alliance.

29, 1-8: This prophecy is commonly dated about 701 when Sennacherib besieged Jerusalem. God will punish Jerusalem ("Ariel") and Assyria.

29, 7-8: At the last moment God will save Jerusalem from the Assyrians.

he is drinking and awakens faint and dry, so shall the horde of all the nations be, who make war against Mount Sion.

9 Blindness and Perversity Be irresolute, stupefied; blind yourselves and stay blind! Be drunk, but not from wine, stagger, 10 but not from strong drink! | For the Lord has poured out on you a spirit of deep sleep. He has shut your eyes [the prophets] and covered your heads [the seers].
11 For you the revelation of all this has become like the words of a sealed scroll. When it is handed to one who can read, with the 12 request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot; it is sealed." When it is handed to one who cannot read, with the request, "Read this," he replies, "I cannot read."
13 The Lord said: Since this people draws near with words only and honors me with their lips alone, though their hearts are far from me, and their reverence for me has become routine
14 observance of the precepts of men, | therefore I will again deal with this people in surprising and wondrous fashion: the wisdom of its wise men shall perish and the understanding of its
15 prudent men be hid. | Woe to those who would hide their plans too deep for the Lord! Who work in the dark, saying, "Who
16 sees us, or who knows us?" | Your perversity is as though the potter were taken to be the clay: as though what is made should say of its maker, "He made me not!" Or the vessel should say of the potter, "He does not understand."

17 Redemption But a very little while, and Lebanon shall be changed into an orchard, and the orchard be regarded as a forest!
18 | On that day the deaf shall hear the words of a book; and out
19 of gloom and darkness, the eyes of the blind shall see. | The lowly will ever find joy in the Lord, and the poor rejoice in the 20 Holy One of Israel. | For the tyrant will be no more and the arrogant will have gone; all who are alert to do evil will be cut
21 off, | those whose mere word condemns a man, who ensnare his defender at the gate, and leave the just man with an empty

29, 9-24: It is disputed whether this section contains more than one oracle. To date it precisely is difficult.

29, 9-10: The people do not understand Isaia's warnings because they have blinded themselves through obstinacy. It is characteristically Semitic to attribute everything to God, even spiritual blindness. The Semites do not distinguish between causing and allowing. Rom 11, 8 quotes v. 10.

29, 13-14: God will punish them for their insincerity. See Mt 15, 8f.

29, 15-16: They cannot conceal their political plans from God.

29, 17-24: Eventually the people will return to God.

22 claim. | Therefore thus says the Lord, the God of the house of Jacob, who redeemed Abraham: Now Jacob shall have nothing 23 to be ashamed of, nor shall his face grow pale. | When his children see the work of my hands in his midst, they shall keep my name holy; they shall reverence the Holy One of Jacob, and 24 be in awe of the God of Israel. | Those who err in spirit shall acquire understanding, and those who find fault shall receive instruction.

1 Futile Alliance with Egypt Woe to the rebellious children, says the Lord, who carry out plans that are not mine, who weave webs that are not inspired by me, adding sin upon sin. | 2 They go down to Egypt, but my counsel they do not seek. They find their strength in Pharao's protection and take refuge in 3 Egypt's shadow; | Pharao's protection shall be your shame, 4 and refuge in Egypt's shadow your disgrace. | When their 5 princes are at Soan and their messengers reach Hanes, | all shall be ashamed of a people that gain them nothing, neither help nor benefit, but only shame and reproach.
6 [Oracle on the Beasts of the Negeb] Through the distressed and troubled land of the lioness and roaring lion, of the viper and flying saraph, they carry their riches on the backs of asses and their treasures on the humps of 7 camels to a people good for nothing, | to Egypt whose help is futile and vain. Therefore I call her "Rahab quelled." 8 Now come, write it on a tablet they can keep, inscribe it in a 9 record; that it may be in future days an eternal witness: | This is a rebellious people, deceitful children, children who refuse to 10 obey the law of the Lord. | They say to the seers, "Have no visions"; to the prophets, "Do not descry for us what is right; 11 speak flatteries to us, conjure up illusions. | Out of the way!
Out of our path! Let us hear no more of the Holy One of Israel." 12 Therefore, thus says the Holy One of Israel: Because you reject this word, and put your trust in what is crooked and 13 devious, and depend on it, | this guilt of yours shall be like a descending rift bulging out in a high wall whose crash comes 30, 1-7: Isaia's oracle against Juda's embassy to Egypt for a futile alliance against Assyria. King Ezechia sent this embassy after the Assyrian monarch Sargon II died in 705.

30, 4: Soan . . . Hanes: Egyptian cities in the Delta.

30, 7: Rahab quelled: Egypt is compared to a sea monster ("Rahab") who is silenced ("quelled") when Juda asks for aid.

30, 8-18: Isaia summarizes his misgivings about the alliance with Egypt.

14 suddenly, in an instant. | It crashes like a potter's jar smashed beyond rescue, and among its fragments cannot be found a sherd to scoop fire from the hearth or dip water from the cistern.
15 For thus said the Lord God, the Holy One of Israel: By waiting and by calm you shall be saved, in quiet and in trust your 16 strength lies. But this you did not wish. | "No," you said,
"upon horses we will flee."—Very well, flee! "Upon swift steeds we will ride."—Not so swift as your pursuers. | 17 A thousand shall tremble at the threat of one; if five threaten you, you shall flee, until you are left like a flagstaff on the 18 mountaintop, like a flag on the hill. | Yet the Lord is waiting to show you favor, and he rises to pity you; for the Lord is a God 19 of justice: blessed are all who wait for him! | O people of Sion, who dwell in Jerusalem, no more will you weep; he will be gracious to you when you cry out, as soon as he hears he will 20 answer you. | The Lord will give you the bread you need and the water for which you thirst. No longer will your Teacher hide himself, but with your own eyes you shall see your Teacher, 21 | while from behind, a voice shall sound in your ears: "This is the way; walk in it," when you would turn to the right or to the 22 left. | And you shall consider unclean your silver-plated idols and your gold-covered images; you shall throw them away like filthy rags to which you say, "Begone!"

23 Sion's Future Prosperity He will give rain for the seed that you sow in the ground, and the wheat that the soil produces will be rich and abundant. On that day your cattle will graze 24 in spacious meadows; | the oxen and the asses that till the ground will eat silage tossed to them with shovel and pitchfork.
25 | Upon every high mountain and lofty hill there will be streams of running water. On the day of the great slaughter, when the 26 towers fall, | the light of the moon will be like that of the sun and the light of the sun will be seven times greater [like the light of seven days]. On the day the Lord binds up the wounds of his people, he will heal the bruises left by his blows.

27 Divine Judgment on Assyria See the name of the Lord

30, 15: In trust: of God, not Egypt.

30, 19-26: Scholars often consider this prose addition to be by a later hand that elaborated Isaia's preceding oracle by way of encouragement to the people.

30, 20: Teacher: Yahweh.

30, 27-33: Many agree that this is Isaia's oracle of Sennacherib's siege of Jerusalem in 701.

30, 27: The name of the Lord: a characteristic circumlocution for the Lord.

coming from afar in burning wrath, with lowering clouds! His lips are filled with fury, his tongue is like a consuming fire; 28 his breath, like a flood in a ravine that reaches suddenly to the neck, will winnow the nations with a destructive winnowing and with repeated winnowings will he battle against them [and a bridle on the jaws of the peoples to send them astray].
30 The Lord will make his glorious voice heard, and let it be seen how his arm descends in raging fury and flame of consuming 31 fire, in driving storm and hail. | When the Lord speaks, Assyria 32 will be shattered, as he strikes with the rod; | while at every sweep of the rod which the Lord will bring down on him in 29 punishment, you will sing as on a night when a feast is observed and be merry of heart, as one marching along with a flute toward the mountain of the Lord, toward the Rock of Israel 33 accompanied by the timbrels and lyres. | For the pyre has long been ready, prepared for the king; broad and deep it is piled with dry grass and wood in abundance, and the breath of the Lord, like a stream of sulphur, will set it afire.

31

1 Against the Egyptian Alliance Woe to those who go down to Egypt for help, who depend upon horses; who put their trust in chariots because of their number, and in horsemen because of their combined power, but look not to the Holy One 2 of Israel nor seek the Lord! | Yet he too is wise and will bring disaster; he will not turn from what he has threatened to do He will rise up against the house of the wicked and against 3 those who help evildoers. | The Egyptians are men, not God their horses are flesh, not spirit; when the Lord stretches forth his hand, the helper shall stumble, the one helped shall fall, and both of them shall perish together.
4 Thus says the Lord to me: As a lion or a lion cub growling over its prey, with a band of shepherds assembled against it, is neither frightened by their shouts nor disturbed by their noise so shall the Lord of hosts come down to wage war upon the 5 mountain and hill of Sion. | Like hovering birds, so the Lord of hosts shall shield Jerusalem, to protect and deliver, to spare and rescue it.
6 Return, O children of Israel, to him whom you have utterly 7 deserted. On that day each one of you shall spurn his sinful idols of silver and gold, which he made with his hands.

30, 30: Find v. 29 after v. 32.

31, 1-9: It is generally held that this oracle refers to the same situation as explained in 30, 1-7 n.

8 Downfall of Assyria Assyria shall fall by a sword not wielded by man, no mortal sword shall devour him; he shall flee before the sword, and his young men shall be impressed as 9 laborers. | He shall rush past his crag in panic, and his princes shall flee in terror from his standard, says the Lord who has a fire in Sion and a furnace in Jerusalem.

1 The Kingdom of Justice See, a king will reign justly and 2 princes will rule rightly. | Each of them will be a shelter from the wind, a retreat from the rain. They will be like streams of water in a dry country, like the shade of a great rock in a parched 3 land. | The eyes of those who see will not be closed; the ears
4 of those who hear will be attentive. | The flighty will become wise and capable, and the stutterers will speak fluently and 5 clearly. | No more will the fool be called noble, nor the trickster
6 be considered honorable. | For the fool speaks foolishly, planning evil in his heart: how to do wickedness, to speak perversely against the Lord, to let the hungry go empty and the thirsty be 7 without drink. | And the trickster uses wicked trickery, planning crimes: how to ruin the poor with lies, and the needy when they 8 plead their case. | But the noble man plans noble things, and by noble things he stands.

9 The Women of Jerusalem O complacent ladies, rise up and hear my voice, overconfident women, give heed to my words.
10 | In a little more than a year you overconfident ones will be 11 shaken; the vintage will fail, there will be no harvest. | Tremble, you who are complacent! Shudder, you who are overconfident!
12 Strip yourselves bare, with only a loincloth to cover you. | Beat 13 your breasts for the pleasant fields, the fruitful vine, | and the soil of my people, overgrown with thorns and briers; for all the 14 joyful houses, the wanton city. | Yes, the castle will be forsaken, 19 the noisy city deserted; | down it comes, as trees come down in the forest! The city will be utterly laid low. Hill and tower will become wasteland forever for wild asses to frolic in, and

---

31, 9: Crag: the king is a rallying point for soldiers in the field of battle.

32, 1-20: The date, unity, and Isaian authorship are disputed. The future ideal king and kingdom are considered Messianic by many, though they are pictured in weak colors.

32, 5-7: This is probably the most graphic biblical description of a fool's depravity. See Ps 38, 9 n.

32, 14: Castle: Jerusalem's citadel.

15 flocks to pasture, | until the spirit from on high is poured out o us.
Then will the desert become an orchard and the orchard b
16 regarded as a forest. | Right will dwell in the desert and justic
17 abide in the orchard. | Justice will bring about peace; right wil
18 produce calm and security. | My people will live in peacefu
20 country, in secure dwellings and quiet resting places. | Happ are you who sow beside every stream, and let the ox and the as go freely!

33

1 Overthrow of Assyria Woe, O destroyer never destroyed O traitor never betrayed! When you finish destroying, you wil be destroyed; when wearied with betraying, you will be betrayed 2 | O Lord, have pity on us, for you we wait. Be our strengt
3 every morning, our salvation in time of trouble! | At the roarin sound, peoples flee; when you rise in your majesty, nations ar 4 scattered. | Men gather spoil as caterpillars are gathered up 5 they rush upon it like the onrush of locusts. | The Lord i exalted, enthroned on high; he fills Sion with right and justice 6 | That which makes her seasons lasting, the riches that save he are wisdom and knowledge; the fear of the Lord is her treasure 7 See, the men of Ariel cry out in the streets, the messengers o 8 Salem weep bitterly. | The highways are desolate, traveler have quit the paths, covenants are broken, witnesses are spurned 9 yet no man gives it a thought. | The country languishes i mourning, Lebanon withers with shame; Saron is like the steppe Basan and Carmel are stripped bare.
10 Now will I rise up, says the Lord, now will I be exalted, nov
11 be lifted up. | You conceive dry grass, bring forth stubble; m 12 spirit shall consume you like fire. | The peoples shall be as in limekiln, like brushwood cut down for burning in the fire.
13 Hear, you who are far off, what I have done; you who are near 14 acknowledge my might. | On Sion sinners are in dread, trem bling grips the impious: "Who of us can live with the consum 15 ing fire? who of us can live with the everlasting flames?" | H who practices virtue and speaks honestly, who spurns what i gained by oppression, brushing his hands free of contact with bribe, stopping his ears lest he hear of bloodshed, closing hi 16 eyes lest he look on evil— | He shall dwell on the heights, hi stronghold shall be the rocky fastness, his food and drink i steady supply.

33, 1-24: This is often interpreted as an oracle after the exile.
33, 7: Ariel . . . Salem: different names for Jerusalem.

17 Restoration of Sion Your eyes will see a king in his splen-18 dor, they will look upon a vast land. | Your mind will dwell on the terror: "Where is he who counted, where is he who 19 weighed? Where is he who counted the towers?" | To the people of alien tongue you will look no more, the people of obscure speech, stammering in a language not understood. | 20 Look to Sion, the city of our festivals; let your eyes see Jerusalem as a quiet abode, a tent not to be struck, whose pegs will never be pulled up, nor any of its ropes severed.

Indeed the Lord will be there with us, majestic; yes, the Lord our judge, the Lord our lawgiver, the Lord our king, he it is who 21 will save us. | In a place of rivers and wide streams on which 22 no boat is rowed, where no majestic ship passes, | the rigging hangs slack; it cannot hold the mast in place, nor keep the sail spread out. Then the blind will divide great spoils and the lame 23 will carry off the loot. | No one who dwells there will say, "I am sick"; the people who live there will be forgiven their guilt.

VI. THE LORD, SION'S AVENGER

1 Judgment upon Edom Come near, O nations, and hear; be attentive, O peoples! Let the earth and what fills it listen, the 2 world and all it produces. | The Lord is angry with all the nations and is wrathful against all their host; he has doomed 3 them and given them over to slaughter. | Their slain shall be cast out, their corpses shall send up a stench; the mountains 4 shall run with their blood, | and all the hills shall rot; the heavens shall be rolled up like a scroll, and all their host shall wither away, as the leaf wilts on the vine, or as the fig withers on the tree.

When my sword has drunk its fill in the heavens, lo, it shall come down in judgment upon Edom, a people I have doomed. | 6 The Lord has a sword filled with blood, greasy with fat, with the blood of lambs and goats, with the fat of rams' kidneys; for the Lord has a sacrifice in Bosra, a great slaughter in the land of

---

33, 22: Find v. 21 after this verse.

33, 23: In those ideal days the blind and lame will suffice to ward off the enemy.

34–35: These two chapters are ordinarily interpreted as a literary unit on the punishment of the enemy (34) and the restoration of the chosen People (35). Most scholars date this section after Isaia's time and during the exile, but they dispute about a more specific date.

34, 6: Edom: many believe that Edom here is a symbol of God's enemies as Moab. See 25, 10 n.

7 Edom. | Wild oxen shall be struck down with fatlings, and bullocks with bulls; their land shall be soaked with blood, and 8 their earth greasy with fat. | For the Lord has a day of venge-
9 ance, a year of requital by Sion's defender. | Edom's streams shall be changed into pitch and her earth into sulphur, and her 10 land shall become burning pitch; | night and day it shall not be quenched, its smoke shall rise forever. From generation to generation she shall lie waste, never again shall anyone pass 11 through her. | But the desert owl and hoot owl shall possess her, the screech owl and raven shall dwell in her. The Lord will measure her with line and plummet to be an empty waste for satyrs to dwell in.
12 Her nobles shall be no more, nor shall kings be proclaimed 13 there; all her princes are gone. | Her castles shall be overgrown with thorns, her fortresses with thistles and briers. She shall 14 become an abode for jackals and a haunt for ostriches. | Wildcats shall meet with desert beasts, satyrs shall call to one another; there shall the lilith repose, and find for herself a place 15 to rest. | There the hoot owl shall nest and lay eggs, hatch them out and gather them in her shadow; there shall the kites assemble, none shall be missing its mate.
16 Look in the book of the Lord and read: No one of these shall be lacking, for the mouth of the Lord has ordered it, and his 17 spirit shall gather them there. | It is he who casts the lot for them, and with his hand he marks off their shares of her; they shall possess her forever, and dwell there from generation to generation.

35

1 Israel's Deliverance The desert and the parched land will 2 exult; the steppe will rejoice and bloom. | They will bloom with abundant flowers, and rejoice with joyful song. The glory of Lebanon will be given to them, the splendor of Carmel and Saron; they will see the glory of the Lord, the splendor of our 3 God. | Strengthen the hands that are feeble, make firm the knees
4 that are weak, | say to those whose hearts are frightened: Be strong, fear not! Here is your God, he comes with vindication: 5 with divine recompense he comes to save you. | Then will the eyes of the blind be opened, the ears of the deaf be cleared.

34, 11: Satyrs: see 13, 21 n.
34, 14: Lilith: a desert female demon, according to popular ideas.
34, 16: Book of the Lord: the list of God's creatures.
35, 4-6: These are not considered Messianic, but God's action is a poetic device of the joy of the newly returned exiles.

6 then will the lame leap like a stag, then the tongue of the dumb will sing.
Streams will burst forth in the desert, and rivers in the steppe.
7 | The burning sands will become pools, and the thirsty ground, springs of water; the abode where jackals lurk will be a marsh 8 for the reed and papyrus. | A highway will be there, called the holy way; no one unclean may pass over it, nor fools go 9 astray on it. | No lion will be there, nor beast of prey go up to be met upon it. It is for those with a journey to make, and on it 10 the redeemed will walk. | Those whom the Lord has ransomed will return and enter Sion singing, crowned with everlasting joy; they will meet with joy and gladness, sorrow and mourning will flee.

VII. HISTORICAL APPENDIX

36 1 Invasion of Sennacherib In the fourteenth year of king Ezechia, Sennacherib, king of Assyria, went on an expedition 2 against all the fortified cities of Juda and captured them. | From Lachis the king of Assyria sent his commander with a great army to king Ezechia in Jerusalem. When he stopped at the conduit of the upper pool, on the highway of the fuller's field, 3 | there came out to him the master of the place, Eliacim, son of Helcia, and Sobna the scribe, and the herald Joahe, son of 4 Asaph. The commander said to them, "Tell King Ezechia: Thus 5 says the great king, the king of Assyria, 'On what do you base this confidence of yours? Do you think mere words substitute for strategy and might in war? On whom, then, do you 6 rely, that you rebel against me? This Egypt, the staff on which you rely, is in fact a broken reed which pierces the hand of anyone who leans on it. That is what Pharao, king of Egypt, 7 is to all who rely on him. But if you say to me: "We rely on the Lord, our God," is not he the one whose high places and altars Ezechia removed, commanding Juda and Jerusalem to worship before this altar?' 8 "Now, make a wager with my lord the king of Assyria: 'I will give you two thousand horses, if you can put riders on of my lord? And yet you rely on Egypt for chariots and horse-36—39: Except for 38, 9-20, these four chapters on Sennacherib's invasion and siege of Jerusalem find their parallel account in 4 Kgs 18, 13—20, 19. Both biblical accounts accord well with Sennacherib's cuneiform inscriptions.

10 men! 'Was it without the Lord's will that I have come up to destroy this land? The Lord said to me, "Go up and destroy that land!" ' " 11 Then Eliacim and Sobna and Joahe said to the commander:
"Please speak to your servants in Aramaic; we understand it.
Do not speak to us in Judean within earshot of the people who are on the wall." 12 But the commander replied, "Was it to you and your master that my lord sent me to speak these words? Was it not rather to the men sitting on the wall, who, with you, will have to eat 13 their own excrement and drink their own urine?" Then the commander stepped forward and cried out in a loud voice in Judean, "Listen to the words of the great king, the king of 14 Assyria. | Thus says the king: 'Do not let Ezechia deceive you, 15 since he cannot deliver you. Let not Ezechia induce you to rely on the Lord, saying, "The Lord will surely save us; this city will 16 not be handed over to the king of Assyria." ' Do not listen to Ezechia, for the king of Assyria says: 'Make peace with me and surrender! Then each of you will eat of his own vine and of 17 his own fig tree, and drink the water of his own cistern, | until I come to take you to a land like your own, a land of grain and 18 wine, of bread and vineyards. Do not let Ezechia seduce you by saying, "The Lord will save us." Has any of the gods of the nations ever rescued his land from the hand of the king of 19 Assyria? Where are the gods of Hamath and Arphad? Where are the gods of Sepharvaim? Where are the gods of Samaria?
20 Have they saved Samaria from my hand? Which of all the gods of these lands ever rescued his land from my hand? Will the 21 Lord then save Jerusalem from my hand?' " But they remained silent and did not answer him one word, for the king had ordered them not to answer him.
22 Then the master of the palace, Eliacim, son of Helcia, Sobna the scribe, and the herald Joahe, son of Asaph, came to Ezechia with their garments torn, and reported to him what the commander had said.

37

1 When king Ezechia heard this, he tore his garments, wrapped himself in sackcloth, and went into the temple of the Lord.
2 He sent Eliacim, the master of the palace, and Sobna the scribe, and the elders of the priests, wrapped in sackcloth, to tell the 3 prophet Isaia, son of Amos: "Thus says Ezechia: 'This is a day 36, 19: Hamath: a city in Syria. Also "Emath" as in 4 Kgs 18, 34 and other places in 4 Kgs.

of distress, of rebuke, and of disgrace. Children are at the point 4 of birth, but there is no strength to bring them forth. Perhaps the Lord, your God, will hear the words of the commander, whom his master, the king of Assyria, sent to taunt the living God, and will rebuke him for the words which the Lord, your God, has heard. Send up a prayer for the remnant that is here.' " 5 When the servants of king Ezechia had come to Isaia, 6 | he said to them: "Tell this to your master: 'Thus says the Lord: Do not be frightened by the words you have heard, with which the servants of the king of Assyria have blasphemed 7 me. I am about to put in him such a spirit that, when he hears a certain report, he will return to his own land, and there I will cause him to fall by the sword.' " 8 When the commander returned to Lachis and heard that the king of Assyria had left there, he found him besieging Lobna.
9 The king of Assyria heard a report that Tharaca, king of Ethiopia, had come out to fight against him. Again he sent 10 envoys to Ezechia with this message: "Thus shall you say to Ezechia, king of Juda: 'Do not let your God on whom you rely deceive you by saying that Jerusalem will not be handed over to 11 the king of Assyria. You yourself have heard what the kings of Assyria have done to all the countries: They doomed them!
12 Will you, then, be saved? Did the gods of the nations whom my fathers destroyed save them? Gozan, Haran, Reseph, and the 13 Edenites in Thalassar? Where is the king of Hamath, the king of Arphad, or a king of the cities of Sepharvaim, Ana or Ava?' " 14 Ezechia took the letter from the hand of the messengers and read it; then he went up to the temple of the Lord, and spread-15.16 ing it out before him, | he prayed to the Lord: "O Lord of hosts, God of Israel, enthroned upon the cherubim! You alone are God over all the kingdoms of the earth. You have made the 17 heavens and the earth. | Incline your ear, O Lord, and listen!
Open your eyes, O Lord, and see! Hear all the words of the 18 letter that Sennacherib sent to taunt the living God. Truly, O Lord, the kings of Assyria have laid waste all the nations and 19 their lands, | and cast their gods into the fire; they destroyed them because they were not gods but the work of human hands, 20 wood and stone. Therefore, O Lord, our God, save us from his hand, that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that you, O Lord, alone are God."

21 Punishment of Sennacherib Then Isaia, son of Amos, sent this message to Ezechia: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel:
In answer to your prayer for help against Sennacherib, king of 22 Assyria, | this is the word the Lord has spoken concerning him:

She despises you, laughs you to scorn, the virgin daughter
Sion; behind you she wags her head, daughter Jerusalem. | 23 Whom have you insulted and blasphemed, against whom have you raised your voice and lifted up your eyes on high? Against 24 the Holy One of Israel! | Through your servants you have insulted the Lord: You said, "With my many chariots I climbed the mountain heights, the recesses of Lebanon; I cut down its lofty cedars, its choice cypresses; I reached the remotest 25 heights, its forest park. | I dug wells and drank water in foreign lands; I dried up with the soles of my feet all the rivers of Egypt.
26 Have you not heard? Long ago I prepared it, from days of old I planned it, now I have brought it to pass: that you should 27 reduce fortified cities into heaps of ruins, | while their inhabitants, shorn of power, are dismayed and ashamed, becoming like the plants of the field, like the green growth, like the 28 scorched grass on the housetops. | I am aware whether you stand or sit; I know whether you come or go, and also your 29 rage against me. | Because of your rage against me and your fury which has reached my ears, I will put my hook in your nose and my bit in your mouth, and make you return the way you came.
30 This shall be a sign for you: this year you shall eat the after-growth, next year, what grows of itself; but in the third year, 31 sow and reap, plant vineyards and eat their fruit! | The remaining survivors of the house of Juda shall again strike root 32 below and bear fruit above. | For out of Jerusalem shall come a remnant, and from Mount Sion, survivors. The zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this.
33 Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning the king of Assyria: He shall not reach this city, nor shoot an arrow at it, nor 34 come before it with a shield, nor cast up siegeworks against it.
He shall return by the same way he came, without entering the 35 city, says the Lord. I will shield and save this city for my own sake, and for the sake of my servant David.
36 The angel of the Lord went forth and struck down one hundred and eighty-five thousand in the Assyrian camp. Early the 37 next morning, there they were, all the corpses of the dead. So Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, broke camp and went back home to Nineve.
38 When he was worshiping in the temple of his god Nesroch, his sons Adramelech and Sarasar slew him with the sword and fled into the land of Ararat. His son Asarhaddon reigned in his stead.

1 Sickness and Recovery of Ezechia In those days, when Ezechia was mortally ill, the prophet Isaia, son of Amos, came and said to him: "Thus says the Lord: Put your house in order, 2 for you are about to die; you shall not recover." Then Ezechia 3 turned his face to the wall and prayed to the Lord: "O Lord, remember how faithfully and wholeheartedly I conducted myself in your presence, doing what was pleasing to you!" And Ezechia wept bitterly.
4-5 Then the word of the Lord came to Isaia: "Go, tell Ezechia: Thus says the Lord, the God of your father David: I have heard your prayer and seen your tears. I will heal you: in three days you shall go up to the Lord's temple; I will add fifteen years to 6 your life. I will rescue you and this city from the hand of the king of Assyria; I will be a shield to this city." 21 Isaia then ordered a poultice of figs to be taken and applied 22 to the boil, that he might recover. Then Ezechia asked, "What is the sign that I shall go up to the temple of the Lord?" 7 [Isaia answered:] "This will be the sign for you from the 8 Lord that he will do what he has promised: See, I will make the shadow cast by the sun on the stairway to the terrace of Achaz go back the ten steps it has advanced." So the sun came back the ten steps it had advanced.

9 Ezechia's Hymn of Thanksgiving The song of Ezechia, king of Juda, after he had been sick and had recovered from his illness: 10 Once I said, "In the noontime of life I must depart! To the gates of the nether world I shall be consigned for the rest of my 11 years." | I said, "I shall see the Lord no more in the land of the living. No longer shall I behold my fellow men among those 12 who dwell in the world." | My dwelling, like a shepherd's tent, is struck down and borne away from me; you have folded up my life, like a weaver who severs the last thread. Day and 13 night you give me over to torment; | I cry out until the dawn.
Like a lion he breaks all my bones; [day and night you give me 14 over to torment]. Like a swallow I utter shrill cries; I moan like 38, 8: Stairway to the terrace of Achaz: this interpretation is based on a reading of the Hebrew text revised according to the Dead Sea Scroll of Isaia. Many translate the phrase as "steps of Achaz" and understand this as referring to a sundial. See, for example, 4 Kgs 20, 11 n.

1 Embassy from Merodach-baladan At that time whe Merodach-baladan, son of Baladan, king of Babylon, hear that Ezechia had recovered from his sickness, he sent letters an 2 gifts to him. Ezechia was pleased at this, and therefore showe the messengers his treasury, the silver and gold, the spices an fine oil, his whole armory, and everything that was in his stor rooms; there was nothing in his house or in his whole realr that he did not show them.
3 Then Isaia the prophet came to king Ezechia and asked hin
"What did these men say to you? Where did they come from?
Ezechia answered, "They came to me from a distant land, fror 4 Babylon." "What did they see in your house?" he asked. Ezechi replied, "They saw everything in my house; there is nothing i my storerooms that I did not show them." 5 Then Isaia said to Ezechia, "Hear the word of the Lord o

I. THE LORD'S GLORY IN ISRAEL'S LIBERATION

1 Promise of Salvation Comfort, give comfort to my peo-
2 ple, says your God. | Speak tenderly to Jerusalem, and proclaim to her that her service is at an end, her guilt is expiated; indeed, she has received from the hand of the Lord double for all her sins.

3 A voice cries out: In the desert prepare the way of the Lord!
4 Make straight in the wasteland a highway for our God! | Every valley shall be filled in, every mountain and hill shall be made low; the rugged land shall be made a plain, the rough country,

40—66: Most modern scholars consider 40—66 not to be written by the eighth century Isaia but by an unknown prophet of the exile period. Hence, the name "Second Isaia" (or Deutero Isaia). It is referred to as 2 Is. Literary reasons for this opinion are the different style and vocabulary. An historical reason is that the background of 2 Is is sixth century Babylon just before the end of the exile in 538 B.C. Finally, from the nature of prophecy known in the rest of the Old Testament, it seems highly improbable that Isaia should be speaking so intimately to a sixth century Babylonian audience and still remain intelligible to the audience of his own eighth century. Among the Dead Sea Scrolls of 1947, one complete and one fragmentary Hebrew manuscript of Isaia have been found. These manuscripts differ from the current Hebrew text in spelling rather than in content. The fragmentary manuscript contains parts of chapters 38—66. See 56—66 n on Third Isaia.

Second Isaia develops the doctrine of monotheism by stressing God as "the Creator" and master of nature. God's power is illustrated through the fulfillment of the prophecies of past ages.

40—55: These chapters are known as the Book of Consolation from the opening theme of consolation in 40, 1. The poetic prophet offers oracles of consolation, for the end of the exile is fast approaching. Cyrus, the Persian king, is gaining victory after victory, and the end of the Babylonian empire is dawning.

40, 1: Hear Handel's "Messiah" ("comfort ye," on vv. 1-5) as an eloquent commentary upon the comfort which the exiles must have experienced from the words of the exilic poet-theologian.

40, 3-5: The poet dramatically pretends to hear the voice of God's herald. The background image is that of an oriental emperor who sends out a notice for "roads" to be built in preparation for his visit. God is graphically described as leading His people in a new Exodus from Babylon to Palestine. Mt 3, 3 and parallel Gospel texts accommodate these words to John the Baptist, the herald of Christ.

5 a broad valley. | Then the glory of the Lord shall be revealed and all mankind shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord has spoken.
6 A voice says, "Cry out!" I answer, "What shall I cry out?"
"All mankind is grass, and all their glory like the flower of the 7 field. | The grass withers, the flower wilts, when the breath of the Lord blows upon it. [So then, the people is the grass.] | 8 Though the grass withers and the flower wilts, the word of our God stands forever."
9 Go up onto a high mountain, Sion, herald of glad tidings; cry out at the top of your voice, Jerusalem, herald of good news! Fear not to cry out and say to the cities of Juda: Here is 10 your God! | Here comes with power the Lord God, who rules by his strong arm; here is his reward with him, his recompense 11 before him. | Like a shepherd he feeds his flock; in his arms he gathers the lambs, carrying them in his bosom, and leading the ewes with care.

12 Power of the Creator to Save His People Who has cupped in his hand the waters of the sea, and marked off the heavens with a span? Who has held in a measure the dust of the earth, weighed the mountains in scales and the hills in a 13 balance? | Who has directed the spirit of the Lord, or has in-14 structed him as his counselor? | Whom did he consult to gain knowledge? Who taught him the path of judgment, or showed him the way of understanding?
15 Behold the nations count as a drop of the bucket, as dust on 16 the scales; the coastlands weigh no more than powder. | Lebanon would not suffice for fuel, nor its animals be enough for 17 holocausts. | Before him all the nations are as nought, as nothing and void he accounts them.
18 To whom can you liken God? With what equal can you 19 confront him? | An idol, cast by a craftsman, which the smith
20 plates with gold and fits with silver chains? | Mulberry wood the choice portion which a skilled craftsman picks out for himself, choosing timber that will not rot, to set up an idol that will not be unsteady?
41,6 One man helps another, one says to the other, "Keep on!"

40, 6: The poet has another voice speak.
40, 7-8: For the same idea, see Za 1, 5-6 n.
40, 12: Span: of the hand.
40, 16: Lebanon: her cedars.
40, 18-20: See 44, 9-20 n.
41, 6-7: A mockery of idolatry. On verse displacement, see Za 4 4ff n.

7 The craftsman encourages the goldsmith, the one who beats with the hammer, him who strikes on the anvil; he says the soldering is good, and he fastens it with nails to steady it.
40,21 Do you not know? Have you not heard? Was it not foretold you from the beginning? Have you not understood? Since 22 the earth was founded | he sits enthroned above the vault of the earth, and its inhabitants are like grasshoppers; he stretches out the heavens like a veil, spreads them out like a tent to dwell 23 in. | He brings princes to nought and makes the rulers of the 24 earth as nothing. | Scarcely are they planted or sown, scarcely is their stem rooted in the earth, when he breathes upon them and they wither, and the stormwind carries them away like straw.
25 To whom can you liken me as an equal? says the Holy One.
26 | Lift up your eyes on high and see who has created these: he leads out their army and numbers them, calling them all by name. By his great might and the strength of his power not one 27 of them is missing! | Why, O Jacob, do you say, and declare, O Israel, "My way is hidden from the Lord, and my right is dis-28 regarded by my God"? | Do you not know or have you not heard? The Lord is the eternal God, creator of the ends of the earth. He does not faint nor grow weary, and his knowledge is 29 beyond scrutiny. | He gives strength to the fainting; for the 30 weak he makes vigor abound. | Though young men faint and 31 grow weary, and youths stagger and fall, | they that hope in the Lord will renew their strength, they will soar as with eagles' wings; they will run and not grow weary, walk and not grow faint.

1 The Liberator of Israel Keep silence before me, O coast-lands; you peoples, wait for my words! Let them draw near and speak; let us come together for judgment.
2 Who has stirred up from the East the champion of justice, and summoned him to be his attendant? To him he delivers the nations and subdues the kings; with his sword he reduces them 3 to dust, with his bow, to driven straw. | He pursues them, pass-4 ing on without loss, by a path his feet do not even tread. | Who has performed these deeds? He who has called forth the generations since the beginning. I, the Lord, am the first, and with the 5 last I will also be. | The coastlands see, and fear; the ends of the earth tremble: these things are near, they come to pass.

8 But you, Israel, my servant, Jacob, whom I have chosen, off-9 spring of Abraham my friend— | you whom I have taken from the ends of the earth and summoned from its far-off places, you whom I have called my servant, whom I have chosen and 10 will not cast off— | fear not, I am with you; be not dismayed; I am your God. I will strengthen you, and help you, and uphold you with my right hand of justice.
11 Yes, all shall be put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against you; those shall perish and come to nought who 12 offer resistance. | You shall seek out, but shall not find, those who strive against you; they shall be as nothing at all who do battle with you.
13 For I am the Lord, your God, who grasp your right hand; it 14 is I who say to you, "Fear not, I will help you." | Fear not, O worm Jacob, O maggot Israel; I will help you, says the Lord;
15 your redeemer is the Holy One of Israel. | I will make of you a threshing sledge, sharp, new, and double-edged, to thresh the 16 mountains and crush them, to make the hills like chaff. | When you winnow them, the wind shall carry them off and the storm shall scatter them. But you shall rejoice in the Lord, and glory in the Holy One of Israel.
17 The afflicted and the needy seek water in vain, their tongues are parched with thirst. I, the Lord, will answer them; I, the 18 God of Israel, will not forsake them. | I will open up rivers on the bare heights, and fountains in the broad valleys; I will turn the desert into a marshland, and the dry ground into springs of
19 water. | I will plant in the desert the cedar, acacia, myrtle, and olive; I will set in the wasteland the cypress, together with the 20 plane tree and the pine, | that all may see and know, observe and understand, that the hand of the Lord has done this, the Holy One of Israel has created it.
21 Present your case, says the Lord; bring forward your reasons, 22 says the King of Jacob. | Let them come near and foretell to us what it is that shall happen! What are the things of long ago? Tell us, that we may reflect on them and know their outcome; or
23 declare to us the things to come! | Foretell the things that shall come afterward, that we may know that you are gods! Do some-
24 thing, good or evil, that will put us in awe and in fear. | Why, you are nothing and your work is nought! To choose you is an abomination.

41, 14: Your redeemer: the Hebrew "goel" here means that God will free His people from exile and obtain revenge for their suffering.
41, 21-24: A court trial of idolaters.

25 I have stirred up one from the north, and he comes; from the east I summon him by name; he shall trample the rulers down 26 like mortar, as the potter treads the clay. | Who announced this from the beginning, that we might know; beforehand, that we might say it is true? Not one of you foretold it, not one spoke; 27 no one heard you say, | "The first news for Sion: they are coming now," or, "For Jerusalem I will pick out a bearer of the glad tidings."
28 When I look, there is not one, no one of them to give counsel, 29 to make an answer when I question them. | Ah, all of them are nothing, their works are nought, their idols are empty wind!

42

1 The Servant of the Lord Here is my servant whom I uphold, my chosen one with whom I am pleased, upon whom I have put my spirit; he shall bring forth justice to the nations, | 2 not crying out, not shouting, not making his voice heard in the 3 street. | A bruised reed he shall not break, and a smoldering 4 wick he shall not quench, | until he establishes justice on the earth; the coastlands will wait for his teaching.
5 Thus says God, the Lord, who created the heavens and stretched them out, who spreads out the earth with its crops, who gives breath to its people and spirit to those who walk on 6 it: | I, the Lord, have called you for the victory of justice, I have 41, 25: One . . . he: Cyrus.

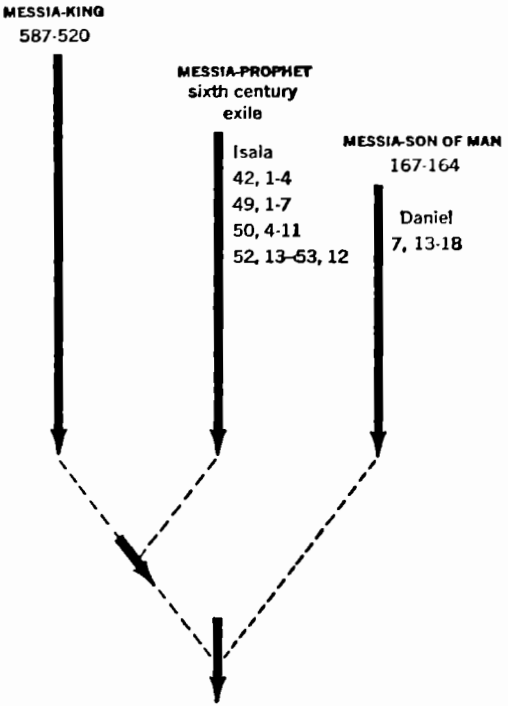
42, 1-4: This is the first of four servant songs found in Second Isaia. The three others are: 49, 1-7; 50, 4-11; 52, 13—53, 12. One of the most difficult problems of the Old Testament is: who is the suffering servant? There is no majority opinion among scholars, Catholic and non-Catholic. Is he the author himself? The Israelite nation? An historical person (Jeremia? Zorobabel?); the ideal type of prophet or worshiper? Does the servant speak of the future Messia directly or does he speak of Him in ideal terms? The problem is further complicated by whether or not the servant is the same in all four songs. Secondary, but also unsolved, problems are the date, authorship, and unity of these songs. In all this dispute the most important fact is that in the New Testament Christ clearly identified Himself as the Suffering Servant of Isaia. See table: Prophetic and Apocalyptic Messianism, p. 1314-15.

42, 1: Upon whom I have put my spirit: God will empower him to execute his task of bringing forth "justice." The Hebrew word is variously interpreted as knowledge of the true God or religion, etc.



42, 2-3: The Servant's method of imparting the knowledge of God will be different. It is not clear with whom the comparison is made.

42, 4: Coastlands: the Gentile lands in the Mediterranean Basin.

42, 5-9: It is disputed whether these verses are part of the song of vv. 1-4. God now explains why He chose His people, namely, to teach knowledge of Himself ("justice," v. 6) to the Gentiles, whose conversion is figuratively described in v. 7.

PROPHETIC AND APOCALYPTIC MESSIANISM

The Origin of the Messia as a Prophet and as the "Son of Man"

PROPHETIC MESSIANISM

The sixth century exiles believed that the line of prophets would continue as promised (see Dt 18, 15-20 n). Little did they suspect that in the following century they would look upon Malachia as their last prophet till the Messianic era. It is within this mental framework that we read the four Servant Songs. Regardless of their date, even if they were written about 350 B.C., they are found in the present Hebrew Bible as songs addressed to the Babylonian exiles. Furthermore, even though the Servant is not clearly identified (see Is 42, 1-4 n), he is described as having a prophetic mission of preaching that culminates in an expiatory death for the sins of others.

Scholars hold that these four Servant Songs constitute the prophetic strand of Messianism.

An unsolved problem is: did the Old Testament writers think the Messia would be both king and suffering prophet? Or were these two streams of Messianism thought of as completely separate? It is too difficult to arrive at a definite answer. The latter alternative seems preferable for the reason that the idea of deep humiliating sufferings marring the glorious ideal portrait of their Messia-king was repugnant to general Jewish thinking.

APOCALYPTIC MESSIANISM

After the return from the Babylonian exile the hope of the Jews for political independence dwindled. The nation's humiliation was renewed as the people passed from Persian to Greek domination. The physical sufferings of the small agricultural Judean nation, with its meager economic resources, were on the increase. Because of these physical sufferings the people began to look forward to a divine intervention, a final and universal intervention from which Juda would emerge as victor. Within this climate of thought grew the response of the author of the Book of Daniel: the "son of man" will soon come. The common opinion understands "son of man" here as the new Messianic community, the Jewish people. See Dn 7, 16-18 n.

Scholars refer to Dn 7 as the principal part of the apocalyptic strand of Messianism. By "apocalyptic" is here meant the "son of man" who will come at the "end of time." This "end of time" came to be what we now call the Messianic time of Christ. Other writings besides the Book of Daniel, biblical as well as extra-biblical, contributed to this apocalyptic Messianic stream.

The problem of scholars is: if the "son of man" was—after Daniel's time and before the time of Christ—no longer interpreted as the Jewish people but as an extraordinary individual, did the inspired writers think the future Messia would be the three in one: son of man, king, and prophet? It is yet unsolved, but the tendency is to believe that most Jews kept the three strands separate in their thinking. We had to wait for New Testament times, for Christ's emerging as the converging point of all three Messianic strands, in a manner far exceeding the most optimistic ideas and ideals of the inspired Old Testament writers.

grasped you by the hand; I formed you, and set you as a co

10 The Salvation of Israel despite Its Sins Sing to Lord a new song, his praise from the end of the earth: let sea and what fills it resound, the coastlands, and those w 11 dwell in them. | Let the steppe and its cities cry out, the lages where Cedar dwells; let the inhabitants of Sela exult, a 12 shout from the top of the mountains. | Let them give glory the Lord, and utter his praise in the coastlands.
13 The Lord goes forth like a hero, like a warrior he stirs up ardor; he shouts out his battle cry, against his enemies he sho 14 his might: | I have looked away, and kept silence, I have s nothing, holding myself in; but now, I cry out as a woman 15 labor, gasping and panting. | I will lay waste mountains a hills, all their herbage I will dry up; I will turn the rivers ir 16 marshes, and the marshes I will dry up. | I will lead the bli

21 Though it pleased the Lord in his justice to make his l of them trapped in holes, hidden away in prisons. They one to demand their return.

the fury of battle; it blazed round about them, yet they did not realize, it burned them, but they took it not to heart.

1 Promises of Redemption and Restoration But now, thus says the Lord, who created you, O Jacob, and formed you, O Israel: Fear not, for I have redeemed you; I have called you by name: you are mine. | When you pass through the water, I will be with you; in the rivers you shall not drown. When you walk through fire, you shall not be burned; the flames shall not con-3 sume you. | For I am the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, your savior. I give Egypt as your ransom, Ethiopia and 4 Saba in return for you. | Because you are precious in my eyes and glorious, and because I love you, I give men in return for 5 you and peoples in exchange for your life. | Fear not, for I am with you; from the east I will bring back your descendants, from 6 the west I will gather you. | I will say to the north: Give them up! and to the south: Hold not back! Bring back my sons from 7 afar, and my daughters from the ends of the earth: | everyone who is named as mine, whom I created for my glory, whom I 11 formed and made. | Lead out the people who are blind though they have eyes, who are deaf though they have ears.
9 Let all the nations gather together, let the peoples assemble!
Who among them could have revealed this, or foretold to us the earlier things? Let them produce witnesses to prove themselves 10 right, that one may hear and say, "It is true!" | You are my witnesses, says the Lord, my servants whom I have chosen to know and believe in me and understand that it is I. Before me no god was formed, and after me there shall be none.
11.12 It is I, I the Lord; there is no savior but me. | It is I who foretold, I who saved; I made it known, not any strange god among you; you are my witnesses, says the Lord. I am God, | 13 yes, from eternity I am He; there is none who can deliver from my hand: who can countermand what I do?
14 Thus says the Lord, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel:
For your sakes I send to Babylon; I will lower all the bars, and 15 the Chaldeans shall cry out in lamentation. | I am the Lord,
16 your Holy One, the creator of Israel, your King. | Thus says

Let him stand up and speak, make it evident, and confront me with it. Who of old announced future events? Let them foretell 8 to us the things to come. | Fear not, be not troubled: did I not announce and foretell it long ago? You are my witnesses! Is there a God or any Rock besides me?
9 Idol makers all amount to nothing, and their precious works are of no avail, as they themselves give witness. To their shame, they neither see nor know anything; and they are more deaf 10 than men are. Indeed, all the associates of anyone who forms a 11 god, or casts an idol to no purpose, will be put to shame; they will all assemble and stand forth, to be reduced to fear and shame.
12 The smith fashions an iron image, works it over the coals, shapes it with hammers, and forges it with his strong arm. He is hungry and weak, drinks no water and becomes exhausted.
13 The carpenter stretches a line and marks with a stylus the outline of an idol. He shapes it with a plane and measures it off with a compass, making it like a man in appearance and 14 dignity, to occupy a shrine. He cuts down cedars, takes a holm or an oak, and lays hold of other trees of the forest, which the 15 Lord had planted and the rain made grow | to serve man for fuel. With a part of their wood he warms himself, or makes a fire for baking bread; but with another part he makes a god 16 which he adores, an idol which he worships. Half of it he burns in the fire, and on its embers he roasts his meat; he eats what he has roasted until he is full, and then warms himself and says, 17 "Ah! I am warm, I feel the fire." Of what remains he makes a god, his idol, and prostrate before it in worship, he implores it,
"Rescue me, for you are my god." 18 The idols have neither knowledge nor reason; their eyes are coated so that they cannot see, and their hearts so that they can-19 not understand. Yet he does not reflect, nor have the intelligence and sense to say, "Half of the wood I burned in the fire, and on its embers I baked bread and roasted meat which I ate. Shall I then make an abomination out of the rest, or worship a block 20 of wood?" He is chasing ashes—a thing that cannot save itself when the flame consumes it; yet he does not say, "Is not this thing in my right hand a fraud?"

44, 9-20: The sacred writers describe their contemporary polytheists as if they worshiped the image itself. In actual fact, the pagans worshiped a reality behind the image. But the inspired writers described polytheism this way because of their denial of any reality behind the image, and in this way must other polemic passages be understood, e.g., 40, 18-20; Jer 10, 2-9.

44, 20: He is chasing ashes: he is working fruitlessly.

the sun men may know that there is none besides me.
7 I am the Lord, there is no other; | I form the light, and create the darkness, I make well-being and create woe; I, the Lord, do 8 all these things. | Let justice descend, O heavens, like dew from above, like gentle rain let the skies drop it down. Let the earth open and salvation bud forth; let justice also spring up! I, the Lord, have created this.
9 Woe to him who contends with his Maker; a potsherd among potsherds of the earth! Dare the clay say to its modeler, "What are you doing?" or, "What you are making has no hands"? | 10 Woe to him who asks a father, "What are you begetting?" or a 11 woman, "What are you giving birth to?" | Thus says the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, his maker: You question me about my 12 children, or prescribe the work of my hands for me! | It was I who made the earth and created mankind upon it; it was my hands that stretched out the heavens; I gave the order to all justice; all his ways I make level. He shall rebuild my city and let my exiles go free without price or ransom, says the Lord of 16 you God is hidden, the God of Israel, the savior! | Those are put to shame and disgrace who vent their anger against him; 17 those go in disgrace who carve images. | Israel, you are saved by the Lord, saved forever! You shall never be put to shame 18 or disgrace in future ages." | For thus says the Lord, the creator

45, 7: Light . . . darkness: the inspired writer's intention is to say (as in Gn 1—2) that God created everything.

45, 8: Although this is not a Messianic text, the Latin Bible and the Roman Advent liturgy "Messianize" the Hebrew "justice" to "just one" and "salvation" to "savior." With the metaphor of a garden scene the inspired writer represents God commanding the blessings of "justice" and "salvation" for the exiles in their period of restoration to the fatherland.

45, 14: Over to you. . . . Before you: Cyrus. The Gentiles conquered by Cyrus, symbolic of all Gentiles, will be converted because in the deliverance of God's people from exile they will see the power of Yahweh. This "universalism" is a frequent theme in Second Isaia and in some other prophets.

9 remember the former things, those long ago: | I am God, there

I foretell the outcome; in advance, things not yet done. I say that 11 my plan shall stand, I accomplish my every purpose. | I call from the east a bird of prey, from a distant land, one to carry out my plan. Yes, I have spoken, I will accomplish it; I have 12 planned it, and I will do it. | Listen to me, you fainthearted, on my justice, it is not far off, my salvation shall not tarry; I will put salvation within Sion, and give to Israel my glory.

1 The Fall of Babylon Come down, sit in the dust, O virgin daughter Babylon; sit on the ground, dethroned, O daughter of the Chaldeans. No longer shall you be called dainty and 2 delicate. | Take the millstone and grind flour, remove your veil;
strip off your train, bare your legs, pass through the streams. | 3 Your nakedness shall be uncovered and your shame be seen; I will take vengeance, I will yield to no entreaty, says our re-

Israel.
5 Go into darkness and sit in silence, O daughter of the Chal-gave them into your hand; but you showed them no mercy, and voluptuous one, enthroned securely, saying to yourself, "I, and no one else! I shall never be a widow, or suffer the loss of my single day: complete bereavement and widowhood shall come upon you for your many sorceries and the great number of your 16 called him, I have brought him, and his way succeeds! | Come near to me and hear this! Never from the beginning have I spoken in secret; at the time it comes to pass, I am present.

17 "Now the Lord God has sent me, and his spirit." | Thus says the Lord, your redeemer, the Holy One of Israel: I, the Lord, your God, teach you what is for your good, and lead you on the
18 way you should go. | If you would hearken to my commandments, your prosperity would be like a river, and your vindica-
19 tion like the waves of the sea; | your descendants would be like the sand, and those born of your stock like its grains, their name never cut off or blotted out from my presence.
20 Go forth from Babylon, flee from Chaldea! With shouts of joy proclaim this, make it known; publish it to the ends of the earth, and say, "The Lord has redeemed his servant Jacob. |
21 They did not thirst when he led them through dry lands; water from the rock he set flowing for them; he cleft the rock, and waters welled forth." [There is no peace for the wicked, says the Lord.]

SPIRITUAL LIBERATION OF ISRAEL

48, 14: The Lord's friend: His instrument, Cyrus.

48, 16: "Now the Lord God has sent me, and his spirit": the inspired prophet puts these words on the lips of Cyrus. See v. 14.

48, 18-19: This difficult passage may mean that if the people had been faithful to God they would not have gone into exile and would now be prosperous.

48, 20-21: The prediction of the end of the exile.

48, 21: There is no peace for the wicked: a proverbial saying.

49, 1-7: The second servant song. See 42, 1-4 n. The Servant addresses the Gentiles ("coastlands," v. 1). Called me . . . gave me my name: appointed me to a special task.

2 mother's womb he gave me my name. | He made of me a sharp edged sword and concealed me in the shadow of his arm. He 3 made me a polished arrow, is his quiver he hid me. | You are my servant, he said to me, Israel, through whom I show my glory.
4 Though I thought I had toiled in vain, and for nothing, use lessly, spent my strength, yet my reward is with the Lord, my 5 recompense is with my God. | For now the Lord has spoken who formed me as his servant from the womb, that Jacob may be brought back to him and Israel gathered to him; and I am made glorious in the sight of the Lord, and my God is now my 6 strength! | It is too little, he says, for you to be my servant, to raise up the tribes of Jacob, and restore the survivors of Israel: I will make you a light to the nations, that my salvation may reach to the ends of the earth.
7 Thus says the Lord, the redeemer and the Holy One of Is rael, to the one despised, whom the nations abhor, the slave of rulers: When kings see you, they shall stand up, and princes shall prostrate themselves because of the Lord who is faithful, the Holy One of Israel who has chosen you.

8 The Liberation and Restoration of Sion Thus says the Lord: In a time of favor I answer you, on the day of salva tion I help you, to restore the land and allot the desolate 9 heritages, | saying to the prisoners: Come out! To those in darkness: Show yourselves! Along the ways they shall find 10 pasture, on every bare height shall their pastures be. | They shall not hunger or thirst, nor shall the scorching wind or the sun strike them; for he who pities them leads them and 11 guides them beside springs of water. | I will cut a road through 12 all my mountains, and make my highways level. | See, some shall come from afar, others from the north and the west, and some from the land of Syene.

song, you mountains. For the Lord comforts his people and shows mercy to his afflicted.
14 But Sion said, "The Lord has forsaken me; my Lord has for 15 gotten me." | Can a mother forget her infant, be without tenderness for the child of her womb? Even should she forget, I

16 will never forget you. | See, upon the palms of my hands I have
17 written your name; your walls are ever before me. | Your rebuilders make haste, as those who tore you down and laid you
18 waste go forth from you; | look about and see, they are all gathering and coming to you. As I live, says the Lord, you shall be arrayed with them all as with adornments, like a bride you shall fasten them on you.

19 Though you were waste and desolate, a land of ruins, now you shall be too small for your inhabitants, while those who
20 swallowed you up will be far away. | The children whom you had lost shall yet say to you, "This place is too small for me,
21 make room for me to live in." | You shall ask yourself: "Who has borne me these? I was bereft and barren [exiled and repudiated]; who has reared them? I was left all alone; where then do these come from?"

22 Thus says the Lord God: See, I will lift up my hand to the nations, and raise my signal to the peoples; they shall bring your sons in their arms, and your daughters shall be carried on 23 their shoulders. | Kings shall be your foster fathers, their princesses your nurses; bowing to the ground, they shall worship you and lick the dust at your feet. Then you shall know that I am the Lord, and those who hope in me shall never be disappointed.

24 Thus says the Lord: Can booty be taken from a warrior?
25 or captives be rescued from a tyrant? | Yes, captives can be taken from a warrior, and booty be rescued from a tyrant; those
26 who oppose you I will oppose, and your sons I will save. | I will make your oppressors eat their own flesh, and they shall be drunk with their own blood as with the juice of the grape. All mankind shall know that I, the Lord, am your savior, your redeemer, the Mighty One of Jacob.

1 Salvation only through the Lord's Servant Thus says the Lord: Where is the bill of divorce with which I dismissed your mother? Or to which of my creditors have I sold you? It was for your sins that you were sold, for your crimes that your mother was dismissed.

2 Why was no one there when I came? Why did no one answer

50, 2: When I called?: a reference to God's calling the people to a covenant with Him.

when I called? Is my hand too short to ransom? Have I not t strength to deliver? Lo, with my rebuke I dry up the sea, I tu rivers into a desert; their fish rot for lack of water, and die 3 thirst. | I clothe the heavens in mourning, and make sackclo their vesture.
4 The Lord God has given me a well-trained tongue, that might know how to speak to the weary a word that will rou them. Morning after morning he opens my ear that I may hea 5.6 | and I have not rebelled, have not turned back. | I gave r back to those who beat me, my cheeks to those who plucked r beard; my face I did not shield from buffets and spitting.
7 The Lord God is my help, therefore I am not disgraced; have set my face like flint, knowing that I shall not be put 8 shame. | He is near who upholds my right; if anyone wishes oppose me, let us appear together. Who disputes my right? I 9 him confront me. | See, the Lord God is my help; who w prove me wrong? Lo, they will all wear out like cloth, the mc will eat them up.
10 Who among you fears the Lord, heeds his servant's voice, a walks in darkness without any light, trusting in the name of t 11 Lord and relying on his God? | All of you kindle flames a carry about you fiery darts; walk by the light of your own f and by the flares you have burnt! This is your fate from r hand: you shall lie down in a place of pain.

1 Exhortation to Trust in the Lord Listen to me, you w pursue justice, who seek the Lord; look to the rock from whi you were hewn, to the pit from which you were quarried 2 look to Abraham, your father, and to Sara, who gave you birt when he was but one I called him, I blessed him and made h 3 many. | Yes, the Lord shall comfort Sion and have pity on her ruins; her deserts he shall make like Eden, her wastela like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness shall be found her, thanksgiving and the sound of song.
4 Be attentive to me, my people; my folk, give ear to me. F law shall go forth from my presence, and my judgment, as t salvation shall go forth [and my arm shall judge the nations

50, 4-11: The third servant song. See 42, 1-4 n. This song de chiefly with the Servant's patience and resignation to God. The Serv speaks in vv. 4-9. God reproves the people for adhering to their o plans instead of obeying the Servant (10-11).

51, 1: Rock . . . pit: your illustrious forefathers.

51, 4-5: The conversion of the pagans.

in me shall the coastlands hope, and my arm they shall await.
6 Raise your eyes to the heavens, and look at the earth below; though the heavens grow thin like smoke, the earth wears out like a garment and its inhabitants die like flies, my salvation shall remain forever and my justice shall never be dismayed. | 7 Hear me, you who know justice, you people who have my teaching at heart: fear not the reproach of men, be not dismayed at 8 their revilings. | They shall be like a garment eaten by moths, like wool consumed by grubs; but my justice shall remain forever and my salvation, for all generations.
9 Awake, awake, put on strength, O arm of the Lord! Awake as in the days of old, in ages long ago! Was it not you who crushed 10 Rahab, you who pierced the dragon? | Was it not you who dried up the sea, the waters of the great deep, who made the depths of the sea into a way for the redeemed to pass over? | 11 Those whom the Lord has ransomed will return and enter Sion singing, crowned with everlasting joy; they will meet with joy and gladness, sorrow and mourning will flee.
12 I, it is I who comfort you. Can you then fear mortal man, who 13 is human only, to be looked upon as grass, | and forget the Lord, your maker, who stretched out the heavens and laid the foundations of the earth? All the day you are in constant dread of the fury of the oppressor; but when he sets himself to destroy, what is there of the oppressor's fury?
14 The oppressed shall soon be released; they shall not die and 15 go down into the pit, nor shall they want for bread. | For I am the Lord, your God, who stirs up the sea so that its waves roar; 16 the Lord of hosts by name. | I have put my words into your mouth and shielded you in the shadow of my hand, I, who stretched out the heavens, who laid the foundations of the earth, who say to Sion: You are my people.

17 The Cup of the Lord Awake, awake! Arise, O Jerusalem, you who drank at the Lord's hand the cup of his wrath; who 18 drained to the dregs the bowl of staggering! | She has no one to guide her of all the sons she bore; she has no one to grasp her 19 by the hand, of all the sons she reared!— | Your misfortunes are double; who is there to condole with you? Desolation and destruction, famine and sword! Who is there to comfort you? |

51, 9-10: Rahab: see 30, 7 n. Dragon: see 27, 1 n. Great deep: a reference to Gn 1, 22. Sea . . . to pass over: a reference to the crossing of the sea (Ex 14, 10ff).
51, 17: The "cup" and "bowl" are biblical images of the people's suffering.

net. They are filled with the wrath of the Lord, the rebuke your God.

1 Let Sion Rejoice Awake, awake! Put on your strength, Sion; put on your glorious garments, O Jerusalem, holy city. N
2 longer shall the uncircumcised or the unclean enter you. | Shai off the dust, ascend to the throne, Jerusalem; loose the bon 3 from your neck, O captive daughter Sion! | For thus says th Lord: You were sold for nothing, and without money you sha be redeemed.
4 Thus says the Lord God: To Egypt in the beginning my pe ple went down, to sojourn there; Assyria, too, oppressed the

My people have been taken away without redress; their rule make a boast of it, says the Lord; all the day my name is co 6 stantly reviled. | Therefore on that day my people shall kno
7 my renown, that it is I who have foretold it. Here I am! | Ho beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who brin glad tidings, announcing peace, bearing good news, announcin salvation, and saying to Sion, "Your God is King!" 8 Hark! Your watchmen raise a cry, together they shout f joy, for they see directly, before their eyes, the Lord restorin

52, 5: My name is constantly reviled: because, in pagan eyes, Yahw was powerless to free His people from exile.

52, 7: The poet describes a herald bringing the "glad tidings" fr Babylon concerning the end of the exile. It is for that reason that h feet are "beautiful." "Your God is King": Yahweh has shown H royal power once more in liberating His people. Paul in Rom 10, rereads this text as an announcement of the good news of the Gos as a new liberating message. Handel's "Messiah" ("How Beautiful A the Feet of Them") follows Romans more closely than Isaia.

52, 8: The poet depicts the "watchmen" on the Jerusalem wa who see Yahweh leading His people in a new exodus from Babylo See v. 12.

10 the Lord comforts his people, he redeems Jerusalem. | The Lord has bared his holy arm in the sight of all the nations; all the ends of the earth will behold the salvation of our God.
11 Depart, depart, come forth from there, touch nothing unclean!
Out from there! Purify yourselves, you who carry the vessels of 12 the Lord. | Yet not in fearful haste will you come out, nor leave in headlong flight, for the Lord comes before you, and your rear guard is the God of Israel.

Suffering and Triumph of the Servant of the Lord

13 See my servant shall prosper, he shall be raised high and greatly 14 exalted. | Even as many were amazed at him—so marred was his look beyond that of man, and his appearance beyond that of 15 mortals— | so shall he startle many nations, because of him kings shall stand speechless; for those who have not been told shall see, those who have not heard shall ponder it.

1 Who would believe what we have heard? To whom has the 2 arm of the Lord been revealed? | He grew up like a sapling before him, like a shoot from the parched earth; there was in him no stately bearing to make us look at him, nor appearance 3 that would attract us to him. | He was spurned and avoided by men, a man of suffering, accustomed to infirmity, one of those from whom men hide their faces, spurned, and we held him in no esteem.
4 Yet it was our infirmities that he bore, our sufferings that he endured, while we thought of him as stricken, as one smitten by 52, 10: God's liberation of His people is figuratively described, alluding to a preparation for action by flipping back the cloak from the right shoulder.

52, 11: From there: from Babylon. Vessels of the Lord: a reference to Nabuchodonosor's looting the sacred furniture of the temple.

52, 13—53, 12: The fourth servant song. See 42, 1-4 n. Of the four servant songs, this is the most touching, mysterious, disputed, and the most poorly preserved in the Hebrew. Christ alone fulfilled this so closely in the Gospels that the poet of the fourth song has been called the "Evangelist of the Passion" and his song, "the fifth Gospel."

52, 13-15: The poet has God speak. His sufferings will disfigure him.

53, 1-12: This is the apex of the four songs because, for one reason, it is the only place in the Old Testament which speaks of expiatory suffering.

53, 2: A sapling: suggestive of his humble origins.

53, 3: Men also "hide their faces" from lepers.

53, 4-5: Pierced: not crucified. People thought that the Servant suffered because of his own sins (v. 3), but they found out that he was expiating the sins of the people themselves. The notion of his expiatory death runs through the rest of the song.

5 God and afflicted. | But he was pierced for our offenses, crush for our sins; upon him was the chastisement that makes 6 whole, by his stripes we were healed. | We had all gone ast like sheep, each following his own way; but the Lord laid u him the guilt of us all.
7 Though he was harshly treated, he submitted and open not his mouth; like a lamb led to the slaughter or a sheep bef 8 the shearers, he was silent and opened not his mouth. | C pressed and condemned, he was taken away, and who wo have thought any more of his destiny? When he was cut from the land of the living, and smitten for the sin of his p 9 ple, | a grave was assigned him among the wicked and a bur place with evildoers, though he had done no wrong nor spol 10 any falsehood. | [But the Lord was pleased to crush him infirmity.]
If he gives his life as an offering for sin, he shall see his scendants in a long life, and the will of the Lord shall be 11 complished through him. | Because of his affliction he shall the light in fullness of days; through his suffering, my servi 12 shall justify many, and their guilt he shall bear. | Therefor will give him his portion among the great, and he shall div the spoils with the mighty, because he surrendered himself death and was counted among the wicked; and he shall t away the sins of many, and win pardon for their offenses.

54

1 The New Sion Raise a glad cry, you barren one who not bear, break forth in jubilant song, you who were not labor, for more numerous are the children of the deserted w than the children of her who has a husband, says the Lord 2 Enlarge the space for your tent, spread out your tent cloths 3 sparingly; lengthen your ropes and make firm your stakes. | F you shall spread abroad to the right and to the left; your scendants shall dispossess the nations and shall people the de late cities.

53, 7: See the eunuch and Philip in Acts 8, 32.

53, 8: In spite of the corrupted Hebrew text, and the obscurity the nature of his death, there seems to be a note of unjustness in it.

53, 10-12: Scholars are puzzled at the author's rapid passage fr the Servant's death to apparently his "resurrection," which is perhs better understood as a spiritual resurrection.

53, 11: See the light: be rewarded with happiness.

54, 1: Jerusalem, filled with the returning exiles, is compared to barren wife who begets many children.

4 Fear not, you shall not be put to shame; you need not blush, for you shall not be disgraced. The shame of your youth you shall forget, the reproach of your widowhood no longer remem-5 ber. | For he who has become your husband is your Maker; his name is the Lord of hosts; your redeemer is the Holy One of Israel, called God of all the earth.
6 The Lord calls you back, like a wife forsaken and grieved in spirit, a wife married in youth and then cast off, says your God.
7 | For a brief moment I abandoned you, but with great tender-8 ness I will take you back. | In an outburst of wrath, for a moment I hid my face from you; but with enduring love I take pity on you, says the Lord, your redeemer.
9 This is for me like the days of Noe, when I swore that the waters of Noe should never again deluge the earth; so I have 10 sworn not to be angry with you, or to rebuke you. | Though the mountains leave their place and the hills be shaken, my love shall never leave you nor my covenant of peace be shaken, says the Lord, who has mercy on you.
11 O afflicted one, storm-battered and unconsoled, I lay your pavements in carnelians, and your foundations in sapphires; | 12 I will make your battlements of rubies, your gate of carbuncles, 13 and all your walls of precious stones. | All your sons shall be taught by the Lord, and great shall be the peace of your chil-14 dren. | In justice shall you be established, far from the fear of 15 oppression, where destruction cannot come near you. | Should there be any attack, it shall not be of my making; whoever attacks you shall fall before you.
16 Lo, I have created the craftsman who blows on the burning coals and forges weapons as his work; it is I also who have 17 created the destroyer to work havoc. | No weapon fashioned against you shall prevail; every tongue you shall prove false that launches an accusation against you. This is the lot of the servants of the Lord, their vindication from me, says the Lord.

55

1 An Invitation to Grace All you who are thirsty, come to the water! You who have no money, come, receive grain and eat; come, without paying and without cost, drink wine and 54, 4b: A veiled allusion to the exile.

54, 5: Redeemer: "goel." See 41, 14 n.
54, 8: Enduring love: God's everlasting love for His people in spite of their rejection of Him is a frequent biblical theme. See v. 10.
54, 11: Afflicted one: of Jerusalem.
55, 1-2: The people in exile are compared to people who are thirsty and who need money.

2 milk! | Why spend your money for what is not bread; your wages for what fails to satisfy? Heed me, and you shall eat well, 3 you shall delight in rich fare. | Come to me heedfully, listen, that you may have life. I will renew with you the everlasting 4 covenant, the benefits assured to David. | As I made him a witness to the peoples, a leader and commander of nations, | 5 so shall you summon a nation you knew not, and nations that knew you not shall run to you, because of the Lord, your God, the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.
6 Seek the Lord while he may be found, call him while he is 7 near. | Let the scoundrel forsake his way, and the wicked man his thoughts; let him turn to the Lord for mercy; to our God, 8 who is generous in forgiving. | For my thoughts are not your 9 thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the Lord. | As high as the heavens are above the earth, so high are my ways above your ways and my thoughts above your thoughts.
10 For just as from the heavens the rain and snow come down and do not return there till they have watered the earth, making it fertile and fruitful, giving seed to him who sows and bread to 11 him who eats, | so shall my word be that goes forth from my mouth; it shall not return to me void, but shall do my will, achieving the end for which I sent it.
12 Yes, in joy you shall depart, in peace you shall be brought back; mountains and hills shall break out in song before you, 13 and all the trees of the countryside shall clap their hands. | In place of the thornbush, the cypress shall grow, instead of nettles, the myrtle. This shall be to the Lord's renown, an everlasting imperishable sign.

III. RETURN OF THE FIRST CAPTIVES

56

1 The Lord's House Open to All Thus says the Lord: Observe what is right, do what is just; for my salvation is about to 2 come, my justice, about to be revealed. | Happy is the man who does this, the son of man who holds to it; who keeps the Sabbath free from profanation, and his hand from any evildoing.
3 | Let not the foreigner say, when he would join himself to the 55, 3b: Quoted in Acts 13, 34.

56—66: A minority view distinguishes this section from Second Isaia (40—66 n) and calls it Third Isaia, but it is more common today to consider these last eleven chapters as a loose collection of oracles, not all of one period.

56, 1-8: A post-exilic prophet may have authored this poem in which Gentiles are invited to join Yahweh's religion.

56, 3: Eunuch: Dt 23, 2 forbade membership to eunuchs.

Lord, "The Lord will surely exclude me from his people"; nor 4 let the eunuch say, "See, I am a dry tree." | For thus says the Lord: To the eunuchs who observe my Sabbaths and choose what pleases me and hold fast to my covenant, | I will give, 5 in my house and within my walls, a monument and a name better than sons and daughters; an eternal, imperishable name will I give them.
6 And the foreigners who join themselves to the Lord, ministering to him, loving the name of the Lord, and becoming his servants—all who keep the Sabbath free from profanation and hold 7 to my covenant, | them I will bring to my holy mountain and make joyful in my house of prayer; their holocausts and sacrifices will be acceptable on my altar, for my house shall be called 8 a house of prayer for all peoples. | Thus says the Lord God, who gathers the dispersed of Israel: Others will I gather to him besides those already gathered.

9 Blind Leaders All you wild beasts of the field, come and 10 eat, all you beasts in the forest! | My watchmen are blind, all of them unaware; they are all dumb dogs, they cannot bark; dream-11 ing as they lie there, loving their sleep. | They are relentless dogs, they know not when they have enough. These are the shepherds who know no discretion; each of them goes his own 12 way, every one of them to his own gain: | "Come, I will fetch some wine; let us carouse with strong drink, and tomorrow will be like today, or even greater."

57

1 The just man perishes, but no one takes it to heart; devout men are swept away, with no one giving it a thought. Though 2 he is taken away from the presence of evil, the just man | enters into peace; there is rest on his couch for the sincere, straightforward man.

3 Faithless People But you, draw near, you sons of a sorceress, 4 adulterous, wanton race! | Of whom do you make sport, at whom do you open wide your mouth, and put out your tongue?
5 Are you not rebellious children, a worthless race; | you who are in heat among the terebinths, under every green tree; you who immolate children in the wadies, behind the crevices in the cliffs?

56, 7: See Mt 21, 13.

56, 9—57, 21: The general sense is the infidelity of the people. Moderns hold widely divergent views on the date and unity of this oracle.

6 Among the smooth stones of the wady is your portion, these are your lot; to these you poured out libations, and brought 7 offerings. Should I decide not to punish these things? | Upon a high and lofty mountain you made your bed, and there you went 8 up to offer sacrifice. | Behind the door and the doorpost you placed your indecent symbol. Deserting me, you spread out your high, wide bed; and of those whose embraces you love you 9 carved the symbol and gazed upon it | while you approached the king with scented oil, and multiplied your perfumes; while you sent your ambassadors far away, down even to the nether 10 world. | Though worn out by your many misdeeds, you never said, "It is hopeless"; new strength you found, and so you did 11 not weaken. | Of whom were you afraid? Whom did you fear, that you became false and did not remember me or give me any thought? Was I to remain silent and unseeing, so that you would 12 not have me to fear? | I will expose your justice and your 13 works; they shall not help you when you cry out, nor save you in your distress.

All these the wind shall carry off, the breeze shall bear away; but he who takes refuge in me shall inherit the land, and possess my holy mountain.

14 Comfort for the Afflicted Build up, build up, prepare the 15 way, remove the stumbling blocks from my people's path. | For thus says he who is high and exalted, living eternally, whose name is the Holy One: On high I dwell, and in holiness, and with the crushed and dejected in spirit, to revive the spirits of 16 the dejected, to revive the hearts of the crushed. | I will not accuse forever, nor always be angry; for their spirits would 17 faint before me, the souls that I have made. | Because of their wicked avarice I was angry, and struck them, hiding myself in 18 wrath, as they went their own rebellious way. | I saw their ways, but I will heal them and lead them; I will give full com-19 fort to them and to those who mourn for them, | I, the Creator, who gave them life.

Peace, peace to the far and near, says the Lord; and I will 20 heal them. | But the wicked are like the tossing sea which can-

57, 6: Smooth . . . portion: the Hebrew word for "smooth" has the same consonants as the word for "portion." In place of the Lord as their portion, the people made stone slabs, found in valley stream beds, into idols.

57, 9: The king: the pagan god Moloch. Ambassadors: sacrificed children.

57, 12: Justice: the poet uses this in a sarcastic sense.

57, 13: All these: the unfaithful of vv. 3-13.

21 not be calmed, and its waters cast up mud and filth. | No peace for the wicked! says my God.

58

1 True Fasting Cry out full-throated and unsparingly, lift up your voice like a trumpet blast; tell my people their wickedness, 2 and the house of Jacob their sins. | They seek me day after day, and desire to know my ways, like a nation that has done what is just and not abandoned the law of their God; they ask me to declare what is due them, pleased to gain access to God. | 3 "Why do we fast, and you do not see it? afflict ourselves, and you take no note of it?"
Lo, on your fast day you carry out your own pursuits, and 4 drive all your laborers. | Yes, your fast ends in quarreling and fighting, striking with wicked fist. Would that today you might 5 fast so as to make your voice heard on high! | Is this the manner of fasting I wish, of keeping a day of penance: that a man bow his head like a reed, and lie in sackcloth and ashes? Do you call 6 this a fast, a day acceptable to the Lord? | This, rather, is the fasting that I wish: releasing those bound unjustly, untying the thongs of the yoke; setting free the oppressed, breaking every 7 yoke; | sharing your bread with the hungry, sheltering the oppressed and the homeless; clothing the naked when you see them, and not turning your back on your own.
8 Then your light shall break forth like the dawn, and your wound shall quickly be healed; your vindication shall go before you, and the glory of the Lord shall be your rear guard. | 9 Then you shall call, and the Lord will answer, you shall cry for help, and he will say: Here I am! If you remove from your 10 midst oppression, false accusation and malicious speech; | if you bestow your bread on the hungry and satisfy the afflicted; then light shall rise for you in the darkness, and the gloom shall 11 become for you like midday; | then the Lord will guide you always and give you plenty even on the parched land. He will renew your strength, and you shall be like a watered garden, 12 like a spring whose water never fails. | The ancient ruins shall be rebuilt for your sake, and the foundations from ages past you shall raise up; "Repairer of the breach," they shall call you,
"Restorer of ruined homesteads." 13 If you hold back your foot on the Sabbath from following 57, 21: A popular phrase even today.

58, 1-14: This poem is ordinarily dated after the exile. The prophet seems to be answering the question: we pray and fast but Yahweh has not restored us to the prosperous pre-exilic times.

58, 1: God commands the prophet.

your own pursuits on my holy day; if you call the Sabbath a delight, and the Lord's holy day honorable; if you honor it by not following your ways, seeking your own interests, or speaking 14 with malice— | then you shall delight in the Lord, and I will make you ride on the heights of the earth; I will nourish you with the heritage of Jacob, your father, for the mouth of the Lord has spoken.

1 Sin and Confession Lo, the hand of the Lord is not too 2 short to save, nor his ear too dull to hear. | Rather, it is your crimes that separate you from your God, it is your sins that 3 make him hide his face so that he will not hear you. | For your hands are stained with blood, your fingers with guilt; your lips 4 speak falsehood, and your tongue utters deceit. | No one brings suit justly, no one pleads truthfully; they trust in emptiness and 5 tell lies; they conceive mischief and bring forth malice. | They hatch adders' eggs, and weave spiders' webs: whoever eats their eggs will die, if one of them is pressed, it will hatch as a viper; 6 | their webs cannot serve as clothing, nor can they cover themselves with their works. Their works are evil works, and deeds 7 of violence come from their hands. | Their feet run to evil, and they are quick to shed innocent blood; their thoughts are destructive thoughts, plunder and ruin are on their highways. | 8 The way of peace they know not, and there is nothing that is right in their paths; their ways they have made crooked, whoever treads them knows no peace.
9 That is why right is far from us and justice does not reach us.
We look for light, and lo, darkness; for brightness, but we walk 10 in gloom! | Like blind men we grope along the wall, like people without eyes we feel our way. We stumble at midday as at dusk, 11 in Stygian darkness, like the dead. | We all growl like bears, like doves we moan without ceasing. We look for right, but it 12 is not there; for salvation, and it is far from us. | For our offenses before you are many, our sins bear witness against us.
Yes, our offenses are present to us, and our crimes we know: | 13 transgressing, and denying the Lord, turning back from following our God, threatening outrage, and apostasy, uttering words 14 of falsehood the heart has conceived. | Right is repelled, and justice stands far off; for truth stumbles in the public square, 59, 1-21: The oracle on the guilt of the people is variously dated.

59, 5: Adders' eggs . . . spiders' webs: an expression for evil words.
59, 9-15a: The prophet is conveying the words of the people.

15 uprightness cannot enter. | Honesty is lacking, and the man who turns from evil is despoiled.

The Redeemer in Sion The Lord saw this, and was 16 aggrieved that right did not exist. | He saw that there was no one, and was appalled that there was none to intervene; so his own arm brought about the victory, and his justice lent him its 17 support. | He put on justice as his breastplate, salvation, as the helmet on his head; he clothed himself with garments of 18 vengeance, wrapped himself in a mantle of zeal. | He repays his enemies their deserts, and requites his foes with wrath.
19 Those in the west shall fear the name of the Lord, and those in the east, his glory; for it shall come like a pent-up river which 20 the breath of the Lord drives on. | He shall come to Sion a redeemer to those of Jacob who turn from sin, says the Lord.
21 | This is the covenant with them which I myself have made, says the Lord: My spirit which is upon you and my words that I have put into your mouth shall never leave your mouth, nor the mouths of your children nor the mouths of your children's children from now on and forever, says the Lord.

1 Glory of the New Sion Rise up in splendor! Your light 2 has come, the glory of the Lord shines upon you. | See, darkness covers the earth, and thick clouds cover the peoples; but upon 3 you the Lord shines, and over you appears his glory. | Nations shall walk by your light, and kings by your shining radiance. | 4 Raise your eyes and look about; they all gather and come to you: your sons come from afar, and your daughters in the arms of their nurses.
5 Then you shall be radiant at what you see, your heart shall throb and overflow, for the riches of the sea shall be emptied out before you, the wealth of nations shall be brought to you. | 6 Caravans of camels shall fill you, dromedaries from Madian and Epha; all from Saba shall come bearing gold and frankincense, 7 and proclaiming the praises of the Lord. | All the flocks of Cedar shall be gathered for you, the rams of Nabaioth shall be 59, 17: See Eph 6, 14; 1 Thes 5, 8.

59, 20: Redeemer: "goel." See 41, 14 n. Compare Rom 11, 26-27.
60, 1—63, 6: The majority view considers these chapters to have one common theme: the liberation of the Babylonian exiles and the renewal of Jerusalem as in prosperous pre-exilic days.
60, 1-6: The Roman liturgy applies these verses to the universality of the Church in the Epistle of the Feast of the Epiphany.
60, 7: Nabaioth: probably refers to the Nabateans.

your sacrifices; they will be acceptable offerings on my altar, and I will enhance the splendor of my house.
8 What are these that fly along like clouds, like doves to their 9 cotes? | All the vessels of the sea are assembled, with the ships of Tharsis in the lead, to bring your children from afar with their silver and gold, in the name of the Lord, your God,
the Holy One of Israel, who has glorified you.
10 Foreigners shall rebuild your walls, and their kings shall be your attendants; though I struck you in my wrath, yet in my 11 good will I have shown you mercy. | Your gates shall stand open constantly; day and night they shall not be closed but shall admit to you the wealth of nations, and their kings, in the 12 vanguard. | For the people or kingdom shall perish that does 13 not serve you; those nations shall be utterly destroyed. | The glory of Lebanon shall come to you: the cypress, the plane and the pine, to bring beauty to my sanctuary, and glory to the place 14 where I set my feet. | The children of your oppressors shall come, bowing low before you; all those who despised you shall fall prostrate at your feet. They shall call you "City of the Lord," "Sion of the Holy One of Israel." 15 Once you were forsaken, hated and unvisited, now I will make you the pride of the ages, a joy to generation after genera-16 tion. | You shall suck the milk of nations, and be nursed at royal breasts; you shall know that I, the Lord, am your savior, 17 your redeemer, the mighty one of Jacob. | In place of bronze I will bring gold, instead of iron, silver; in place of wood, bronze, instead of stones, iron; I will appoint peace your governor, and justice your ruler.
18 No longer shall violence be heard of in your land, or plunder and ruin within your boundaries. You shall call your walls 19 "Salvation" and your gates "Praise." | No longer shall the sun be your light by day, nor the brightness of the moon shine upon you at night; the Lord shall be your light forever, your God 20 shall be your glory. | No longer shall your sun go down, or your moon withdraw, for the Lord will be your light forever, and 21 the days of your mourning shall be at an end. | Your people shall all be just, they shall always possess the land, they, the 22 bud of my planting, my handiwork to show my glory. | The smallest shall become a thousand, the youngest, a mighty nation; I, the Lord, will swiftly accomplish these things when their time comes.

60, 9: Tharsis: see 3 Kgs 10, 22 n. Silver and gold: see Ag 2, 7-9 n for a similar expression of the Gentiles bringing their wealth to God's people as a symbol of their conversion.

1 The Mission to the Afflicted The spirit of the Lord God is upon me, because the Lord has anointed me; he has sent me to bring glad tidings to the lowly, to heal the brokenhearted, to 2 proclaim liberty to the captives and release to the prisoners, | to announce a year of favor from the Lord and a day of vindication 3 by our God, to comfort all who mourn; | to place on those who mourn in Sion a diadem instead of ashes, to give them oil of gladness in place of mourning, a glorious mantle instead of a listless spirit. They will be called oaks of justice, planted by the Lord to show his glory.

4 The Reward of Israel They shall rebuild the ancient ruins, the former wastes they shall raise up and restore the 5 ruined cities, desolate now for generations. | Strangers shall stand ready to pasture your flocks, foreigners shall be your 6 farmers and vinedressers. | You yourselves shall be named priests of the Lord, ministers of our God you shall be called.
You shall eat the wealth of the nations and boast of riches from them.
7 Since their shame was double and disgrace and spittle were their portion, they shall have a double inheritance in their land, 8 everlasting joy shall be theirs. | For I, the Lord, love what is right, I hate robbery and injustice; I will give them their recompense faithfully, a lasting covenant I will make with them.
9 | Their descendants shall be renowned among the nations, and their offspring among the peoples; all who see them shall acknowledge them as a race the Lord has blessed.
10 I rejoice heartily in the Lord, in my God is the joy of my soul; for he has clothed me with a robe of salvation, and wrapped me in a mantle of justice, like a bridegroom adorned with a diadem, 11 like a bride bedecked with her jewels. | As the earth brings forth its plants, and a garden makes its growth spring up, so will the Lord God make justice and praise spring up before all the nations.

62

1 Jerusalem the Lord's Bride For Sion's sake I will not be silent, for Jerusalem's sake I will not be quiet, until her vindica-61, 1-2: The vast majority agrees that not the Messia but the prophet is speaking of Jerusalem's restoration to prosperity. As interpreted in Lk 4, 18f, Christ applied this passage to His own mission. According to one expert, if the Isaia Scroll from which Christ read this passage was of the same length as the one found among the Dead Sea Scrolls, He would have had to open it to the distance of twenty-one feet.

tion shines forth like the dawn and her victory like a burning torch.
2 Nations shall behold your vindication, and all kings your glory; you shall be called by a new name pronounced by the 3 mouth of the Lord. | You shall be a glorious crown in the hand
4 of the Lord, a royal diadem held by your God. | No more shall men call you "Forsaken," or your land "Desolate," but you shall be called "My Delight," and your land "Espoused." For the
5 Lord delights in you, and makes your land his spouse. | As a young man marries a virgin, your Builder shall marry you; and as a bridegroom rejoices in his bride so shall your God rejoice in you.

6 Restoration of Sion Upon your walls, O Jerusalem, I have stationed watchmen; never, by day or by night, shall they be 7 silent. O you who are to remind the Lord, take no rest | and give no rest to him, until he re-establishes Jerusalem and makes of it the pride of the earth.
8 The Lord has sworn by his right hand and by his mighty arm: No more will I give your grain as food to your enemies; nor 9 shall foreigners drink your wine, for which you toiled. | But you who harvest the grain shall eat it, and you shall praise the Lord; you who gather the grapes shall drink the wine in the courts of my sanctuary.
10 Pass through, pass through the gates, prepare the way for the people; build up, build up the highway, clear it of stones, raise 11 up a standard over the nations. | See, the Lord proclaims to the ends of the earth: Say to daughter Sion, your savior comes!
12 Here is his reward with him, his recompense before him. | They shall be called the holy people, the redeemed of the Lord, and you shall be called "Frequented," a city that is not forsaken.

1 Punishment of Edom Who is this that comes from Edom, in crimsoned garments, from Bosra—this one arrayed in majesty, marching in the greatness of his strength? "It is I, I who 62, 2: New name: new happiness.

62, 6: O you who are to remind the Lord: about His promises to Jerusalem.
62, 10: The laborers are advised to begin the reconstruction.
63, 1-6: In this fierce dramatic dialogue between God and the prophet, Yahweh is represented as the warrior God returning with blood-spattered garments from avenging Himself on His people's enemies (symbolized by "Edom"). The lesson is that God won the victory single-handed. The imagery delighted the people of those days, but to us it seems almost irreverent.

announce vindication, I who am mighty to save." | Why is your apparel red, and your garments like those of the wine presser?
"The wine press I have trodden alone, and of my people there was no one with me. I trod them in my anger, and trampled them down in my wrath; their blood spurted on my garments;
all my apparel I stained. | For the day of vengeance was in my heart, my year for redeeming was at hand. | I looked about, but there was no one to help, I was appalled that there was no one to lend support; so my own arm brought about the victory and my own wrath lent me its support. | I trampled down the peoples in my anger, I crushed them in my wrath, and I let their blood run out upon the ground."

Prayer for the Return of God's Favor The favors of the Lord I will recall, the glorious deeds of the Lord, because of all he has done for us; for he is good to the house of Israel, he has favored us according to his mercy and his great kindness.
He said: They are indeed my people, children who are not disloyal; so he became their savior | in their every affliction. It was not a messenger or an angel, but he himself who saved them.
Because of his love and pity he redeemed them himself, lifting them and carrying them all the days of old. | But they rebelled, and grieved his holy spirit; so he turned on them like an enemy, and fought against them.
Then they remembered the days of old and Moses, his servant; where is he who brought up out of the sea the shepherd of his flock? Where is he who put his holy spirit in their midst; | whose glorious arm was the guide at Moses' right; who divided the waters before them, winning for himself eternal renown; | who led them without stumbling through the depths like horses in the open country, | like cattle going down into the plain, the spirit of the Lord guiding them? Thus you led your people, bringing glory to your name.
Look down from heaven and regard us from your holy and glorious palace! Where is your zealous care and your might, 63, 7—66, 24: The theme is: the exile was a penalty for the infidelity of the people.

63, 7—64, 11: The majority view dates as exilic this prayer of the exiles asking when the exile will end.

63, 7-14: The prophet prayerfully reviews God's past deeds, stressing the Exodus.

63, 15—64, 3: The prophet pleads with God to help His people once more.

16 your surge of pity and your mercy? O Lord, hold not back, | for you are our father. Were Abraham not to know us, nor Israel to acknowledge us, you, Lord, are our father, our redeemer you 17 are named forever. | Why do you let us wander, O Lord, from your ways, and harden our hearts so that we fear you not?
Return for the sake of your servants, the tribes of your heritage.
18 | Why have the wicked invaded your holy place, why have our 19 enemies trampled your sanctuary? | Too long have we been like those you do not rule, who do not bear your name.

Oh, that you would rend the heavens and come down, with the mountains quaking before you,

64

1 As when brushwood is set ablaze, or fire makes the water boil! Thus your name would be made known to your enemies 2 and the nations would tremble before you, | while you wrought
3 awesome deeds we could not hope for, | such as they had not heard of from of old. No ear has ever heard, no eye ever seen, any God but you doing such deeds for those who wait for him.
4 Would that you might meet us doing right, that we were mindful of you in our ways! Behold, you are angry, and we are 5 sinful; | all of us have become like unclean men, all our good deeds are like polluted rags; we have all withered like leaves, 6 and our guilt carries us away like the wind. | There is none who calls upon your name, who rouses himself to cling to you; for you have hidden your face from us and have delivered us up to our guilt.
7 Yet, O Lord, you are our father; we are the clay and you the 8 potter: we are all the work of your hands. | Be not so very angry, Lord, keep not our guilt forever in mind; look upon us, 9 who are all your people. | Your holy cities have become a desert,
10 Sion is a desert, Jerusalem a waste. | Our holy and glorious temple in which our fathers praised you has been burned with 11 fire; all that was dear to us is laid waste. | Can you hold back, O Lord, after all this? Can you remain silent, and afflict us so severely?

who asked me not, to be found by those who sought me not.
I said: Here I am! Here I am! to a nation that did not call upon my name.
2 I have stretched out my hands all the day to a rebellious people, who walk in evil paths and follow their own thoughts, | 3 people who provoke me continually, to my face, offering sacri-4 fices in the groves and burning incense on bricks, | living among the graves and spending the night in caverns, eating swine's 5 flesh, with carrion broth in their dishes, | crying out, "Hold back, do not touch me; I am too sacred for you!"
These things enkindle my wrath, a fire that burns all the day.
6 | Lo, before me it stands written; I will not be quiet until I have 7 paid in full | your crimes and the crimes of your fathers as well, says the Lord. Since they burned incense on the mountains, and disgraced me on the hills, I will at once pour out in full measure their recompense into their laps.

8 Fate of the Good and the Bad in Israel Thus says the Lord: When the juice is pressed from grapes, men say, "Do not discard them, for there is still good in them"; thus will I 9 do with my servants: I will not discard them all; | from Jacob I will save offspring, from Juda, those who are to inherit my mountains; my chosen ones shall inherit the land, my servants 10 shall dwell there. | Saron shall be a pasture for the flocks and the valley of Achor a resting place for the cattle of my people who have sought me.
11 But you who forsake the Lord, forgetting my holy mountain, you who spread a table for Fortune and fill cups of blended 12 wine for Destiny, | you I will destine for the sword; you shall all go down in slaughter. Since I called and you did not answer, I spoke and you did not listen, but did what was evil in my 13 sight and preferred things which displease me, therefore thus says the Lord God: Lo, my servants shall eat, but you shall go hungry; my servants shall drink, but you shall be thirsty; my 14 servants shall rejoice, but you shall be put to shame; | my servants shall shout for joy of heart, but you shall cry out for 15 grief of heart and howl for anguish of spirit. | The Lord God shall slay you, and the name you leave shall be used by my chosen ones for cursing; but my servants shall be called by 16 another name | by which he will be blessed on whom a blessing is invoked in the land; he who takes an oath in the land shall 65, 8-10: The remnant doctrine is one of the doctrinal characteristics of the whole book of Isaia.

swear by the God of truth; for the hardships of the past shall be forgotten, and hidden from my eyes.

17 The World Renewed Lo, I am about to create new heavens and a new earth; the things of the past shall not be remembered
18 or come to mind. | Instead, there shall always be rejoicing and happiness in what I create; for I create Jerusalem to be a joy
19 and its people to be a delight; | I will rejoice in Jerusalem and exult in my people. No longer shall the sound of weeping be
20 heard there, or the sound of crying; | no longer shall there be in it an infant who lives but a few days, or an old man who does not round out his full lifetime; he dies a mere youth who reaches but a hundred years, and he who fails of a hundred shall be thought accursed.
21 They shall live in the houses they build, and eat the fruit of 22 the vineyards they plant; | they shall not build houses for others to live in, or plant for others to eat. As the years of a tree, so the years of my people; and my chosen ones shall long enjoy
23 the produce of their hands. | They shall not toil in vain, nor beget children for sudden destruction; for a race blessed by the 24 Lord are they and their offspring. | Before they call, I will answer; while they are yet speaking, I will hearken to them. |
25 The wolf and the lamb shall graze alike, and the lion shall eat hay like the ox [but the serpent's food shall be dust]. None shall hurt or destroy on all my holy mountain, says the Lord.

66

1 True and False Worship Thus says the Lord: The heavens are my throne, the earth is my footstool; what kind of house can you build for me; what is to be my resting place? |
2 My hand made all these things when all of them came to be, says the Lord. This is the one whom I approve: the lowly and afflicted man who trembles at my word.
3 Merely slaughtering an ox is like slaying a man; sacrificing a lamb, like breaking a dog's neck; bringing a cereal offering, like offering swine's blood; burning incense, like paying homage to an idol. Since these have chosen their own ways and taken

4 pleasure in their own abominations, | I in turn will choose ruthless treatment for them and bring upon them what they fear.
Because, when I called, no one answered, when I spoke, no one listened; because they did what was evil in my sight, and 5 chose what gave me displeasure, | hear the word of the Lord, you who tremble at his word: Your brethren who, because of my name, hate and reject you, say, "Let the Lord show his glory that we may see your joy"; but they shall be put to shame.
6 | A sound of roaring from the city, a sound from the temple, the sound of the Lord repaying his enemies their deserts!

7 Mother Sion Before she comes to labor, she gives birth; before the pains come upon her, she safely delivers a male child.
8 | Who ever heard of such a thing, or saw the like? Can a country be brought forth in one day, or a nation be born in a single moment? Yet Sion is scarcely in labor when she gives 9 birth to her children. | Shall I bring a mother to the point of birth, and yet not let her child be born? says the Lord; or shall I who allow her to conceive, yet close her womb? says your God.
10 Rejoice with Jerusalem and be glad because of her, all you who love her; exult, exult with her, all you who were mourning 11 over her! | Oh, that you may suck fully of the milk of her comfort, that you may nurse with delight at her abundant 12 breasts! | For thus says the Lord: Lo, I will spread prosperity over her like a river, and the wealth of the nations like an overflowing torrent. As nurslings, you shall be carried in her arms, 13 and fondled in her lap; | as a mother comforts her son, so will I comfort you; in Jerusalem you shall find your comfort.
14 When you see this, your heart shall rejoice, and your bodies flourish like the grass; the Lord's power shall be known to his servants, but to his enemies, his wrath.
15 Lo, the Lord shall come in fire, his chariots like the whirlwind, to wreak his wrath with burning heat and his punishment with 16 fiery flames. | For the Lord shall judge all mankind by fire and sword, and many shall be slain by the Lord.
17 They who sanctify and purify themselves to go to the groves, as followers of one who stands within, they who eat swine's flesh, loathsome things and mice, shall all perish with their deeds and their thoughts, says the Lord.

66, 4-5: God does not want external worship only, but a response of love ("no one answered").

66, 7-9: Jerusalem's lack of labor in child-bearing symbolizes God's giving birth to a new people.

18 Gathering of the Nations I come to gather nations of 19 every language; they shall come and see my glory. I will set a sign among them; from them I will send fugitives to the nations: to Tharsis, Phut and Lud, Mosoch, Thubal and Javan, to the distant coastlands that have never heard of my fame, or seen my glory; and they shall proclaim my glory among the nations.
20 They shall bring all your brethren from all the nations as an offering to the Lord, on horses and in chariots, in carts, upon mules and dromedaries, to Jerusalem, my holy mountain, says the Lord, just as the Israelites bring their offering to the house 21 of the Lord in clean vessels. Some of these I will take as priests and Levites, says the Lord.

22 Lasting Reward and Punishment As the new heavens and the new earth which I will make shall endure before me, says the Lord, so shall your race and your name endure. |
23 From one new moon to another, and from one Sabbath to another, all mankind shall come to worship before me, says the 24 Lord. | They shall go out and see the corpses of the men who rebelled against me; their worm shall not die, nor their fire be extinguished; and they shall be abhorrent to all mankind.

66, 18-21: God assembles Jerusalem's neighboring nations and selects some of them to preach His glory to far-distant pagan nations.

66, 20: Your brethren: Jewish exiles.

66, 22: See 65, 17-25 n.

66, 24: The poet has God's enemies burning in the "town dump" outside the city walls.

THE BOOK OF JEREMIA

INTRODUCTION

Jeremia was born about 650 B.C. into a family of priests in Anathoth, an hour and a half walking distance from Jerusalem.

During his early phase, from approximately 627 to 609 B.C., Jeremia supported king Josia's religious reform which began in 622. After the king died in 609, Jeremia opposed the resurging idolatrous practices from 609 to 598. The prophet was resisted by the people and the priests, and by the king. He was imprisoned and humiliated. Then Nabuchodonosor captured Jerusalem in 598, and the first deportation took place.

Jeremia tried to advise king Sedecia during the latter's reign from 598 to 587. Sedecia discounted Jeremia's advice of neutrality and relied on Egyptian help in a revolt against Nabuchodonosor who, in consequence, destroyed Jerusalem in 587 and exiled its people. Jeremia later was kidnapped by fellow Jews and exiled into Egypt where he died.

There is no Old Testament prophet whose inner life is known so well. Jeremia was sensitive and fearful in accepting his vocation and in living up to it. He was a tragic but innocent sufferer and, therefore, a type of Christ. Of all the prophets, his life resembled most that of Christ. He was a celibate, a suffering servant in his own way, and a successful failure in a lifetime of preaching. In other words, his life was "Messianic."

The "Confessions" of Jeremia refer to several fragmentary passages that record prayers in "dialogue" between the prophet and Yahweh. Among different lists of confessions given by scholars, this is one: 12, 1-5; 15, 10-21; 17, 14-18; 20, 7-18. The confessions are mostly from the middle period of the prophet's life, his Gethsemani period. In these prayers, Jeremia pours out his most intimate complaints, his "jeremiads." Perhaps the best summary of the confessions is the often quoted description of Jeremia as "cast in brass, dissolving in tears." The brass reflects the strength of grace in helping him carry out God's will; the tears reflect his temperament, poorly suited for the leadership qualities of a prophet. It comes as no great surprise that Jeremia's special contribution and hallmark has been the preaching of an interior religion. Likewise, it is not surprising that his influence has been greater after his death than during his lifetime. Jeremia's influence is seen in Ezechiel, in some psalms, and in Second Isaia.

As with the other prophetical books, Jeremia's book is an anthology without chronological or logical sequences to which moderns are accustomed. His "book" was edited after the exile.

Main divisions of the Book of Jeremia are:

1. Oracles in the Days of Josia, 1—6
2. Oracles Mostly in the Days of Joakim, 7—20
3. Oracles in the Last Years of Jerusalem, 21—33
4. Fall of Jerusalem, 34—45
5. Oracles against the Nations, 46—51
6. Historical Appendix, 52, 1-34

I. ORACLES IN THE DAYS OF JOSIA

1

1 The words of Jeremia, son of Helcia, of a priestly family in 2 Anathoth, in the land of Benjamin. The word of the Lord first came to him in the days of Josia, son of Amon, king of Juda, in 3 the thirteenth year of his reign, | and continued through the reign of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, and until the downfall and exile of Jerusalem in the fifth month of the eleventh year of Sedecia, son of Josia, king of Juda.

4 Call of Jeremia The word of the Lord came to me thus: | 5 Before I formed you in the womb I knew you, before you were born I dedicated you, a prophet to the nations I appointed you.
6 | "Ah, Lord God!" I said, "I know not how to speak; I am too young."
7 But the Lord answered me, Say not, "I am too young." To whomever I send you, you shall go; whatever I command you, 8 you shall speak. | Have no fear before them, because I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.
9 Then the Lord extended his hand and touched my mouth, 10 saying, See, I place my words in your mouth! | This day I set you over nations and over kingdoms, to root up and to tear down, to destroy and to demolish, to build and to plant.
11 The word of the Lord came to me with the question: What do you see, Jeremia? "I see a branch of the watching-tree," I replied.
12 | Then the Lord said to me: Well have you seen, for I am

1, 1-3: For the historical background, see Introduction to the Book of Jeremia.

1, 1: Jeremia: his name means "Yahweh establishes."

1, 2: Thirteenth year of his reign: Jeremia received his vocation as a prophet about 628 B.C.

1, 5: The common opinion is that God chose ("knew") and "dedicated" him to a prophetic mission before his birth. The text does not mean Jeremia was freed from original sin and filled with sanctifying grace before his birth.

1, 6: Jeremia was not yet thirty years old.

1, 9: It is not clear whether the prophet means this as a sensible or imaginative vision, but the important thing is that he was certain of a divine message.

1, 10: The meaning is that Jeremia's mission is to destroy evil and plant goodness.

1, 11-12: Just as the almond tree ("watching-tree") awakens from its winter sleep to blossom in the spring, so will God awaken from His calm to punish the infidel nations. There is a Hebrew pun on the words "watching-tree" and "I am watching."

watching to fulfill my word. A second time the word of the Lord came to me with the question: What do you see? "I see a boiling cauldron," I replied, "that appears from the north."
And from the north, said the Lord to me, evil will boil over upon all who dwell in the land.
Lo, I am summoning all the kingdoms of the north, says the Lord; each king shall come and set up his throne at the gateways of Jerusalem, opposite her walls all around and opposite all the cities of Juda. | I will pronounce my sentence against them for all their wickedness in forsaking me, and in burning incense to strange gods and adoring their own handiwork.
But do you gird your loins; stand up and tell them all that I command you. Be not crushed on their account, as though I would leave you crushed before them; | for it is I this day who have made you a fortified city, a pillar of iron, a wall of brass, against the whole land: against Juda's kings and princes, against its priests and people. | They will fight against you, but not prevail over you, for I am with you to deliver you, says the Lord.

2

Infidelity of Israel This word of the Lord came to me: Go, cry out this message for Jerusalem to hear! I remember the devotion of your youth, how you loved me as a bride, following me in the desert, in a land unsown. | Sacred to the Lord was Israel, the first fruits of his harvest; should anyone presume to partake of them, evil would befall him, says the Lord.
Listen to the word of the Lord, O house of Jacob! All you clans of the house of Israel, | thus says the Lord: What fault did your fathers find in me that they withdrew from me, went after empty idols, and became empty themselves? | They did not ask, "Where is the Lord who brought us up from the land of Egypt, who led us through the desert, through a land of wastes and gullies, through a land of drought and darkness, through a land which no one crosses, where no man dwells?"
When I brought you into the garden land to eat its goodly fruits, you entered and defiled my land, you made my heritage loathsome. | The priests asked not, "Where is the Lord?" Those who dealt with the law knew me not: the shepherds rebelled

1, 13-16: The meaning is: there will be an invasion from Babylon ("north") to punish the idolatrous Jews. The "northern" invasion theme continues in the following chapters. It cannot here be shown that Jeremia is thinking of an army of a definite foreign nation.

1, 17-19: The attacks against Jeremia will fail as if made against "a fortified city, a pillar of iron, a wall of brass." See 15, 20

2, 8: Shepherds: kings and leaders.

against me. The prophets prophesied by Baal, and went after 9 useless idols. | Therefore will I yet accuse you, says the Lord,
10 and even your children's children I will accuse. | Pass over to the coasts of the Chetthim and see, send to Cedar and carefully
11 inquire: Where has the like of this been done? | Does any other nation change its gods?—yet they are not gods at all! But my people have changed their glory for useless things. |
12 Be amazed at this, O heavens, and shudder with sheer horror,
13 says the Lord. | Two evils have my people done: they have forsaken me, the source of living waters; they have dug themselves cisterns, broken cisterns, that hold no water.
14 Is Israel a slave, a bondman by birth? Why then has he 15 become booty? | Against him lions roar full-throated cries. They have made his land a waste; his cities are charred ruins, with-
16 out inhabitant. | Yes, the people of Memphis and Tahpanhes
17 shave the crown of your head. | Has not the forsaking of the 18 Lord, your God, done this to you? | And now, why go to Egypt, to drink the waters of the Nile? Why go to Assyria, to drink
19 the waters of the Euphrates? | Your own wickedness chastises you, your own infidelities punish you. Know then, and see, how evil and bitter is your forsaking the Lord, your God, and showing no fear of me, says the Lord, the God of hosts.
20 Long ago you broke your yoke, you tore off your bonds. "I will not serve," you said. On every high hill, under every green 21 tree, you gave yourself to harlotry. | I had planted you, a choice vine of fully tested stock; how could you turn out obnoxious to
22 me, a spurious vine? | Though you scour it with soap, and use much lye, the stain of your guilt is still before me, says the Lord
23 God. | How can you say, "I am not defiled, I have not gone after the Baals"? Consider your conduct in the Valley, recall what you have done: a frenzied she-camel, coursing near and
24 far, | breaking away toward the desert, snuffing the wind in her ardor—who can restrain her lust? No beasts need tire themselves seeking her; in her month they will meet her.

2, 10: Chetthim: perhaps the word is Cyprus which is used for the West. Cedar: a Syrian desert tribe used for the East.

2, 16: Memphis and Tahpanhes: both Egyptian cities symbolize the Egyptians who plunder Juda ("shave the crown of your head").

2, 18: One Judean party favored an alliance with Egypt; another party one with Assyria.

2, 20: Harlotry: a common prophetic idea spoke of the people's idolatry as harlotry because the people were considered God's bride, and because of the pagan sexual fertility rites. High hill . . . green tree: these were the favorite places to practice the idolatrous cult.

2, 23: The Valley: this was south of Jerusalem where children were sacrificed to Moloch. See 7, 31.

25 Stop wearing out your shoes and parching your throat! But you say, "No use! no! I love these strangers, and after them I 26 must go." | As the thief is shamed when caught, so shall the house of Israel be shamed: they, their kings and their princes, 27 their priests and their prophets; | they who say to a piece of wood, "You are my father," and to a stone, "You gave me birth." They turn to me their backs, not their faces; yet, in their 28 time of trouble they cry out, "Rise up and save us!" | Where are the gods you made for yourselves? Let them rise up! Will they save you in your time of trouble? For as numerous as your cities are your gods, O Juda! And as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars you have set up for Baal.
29 How dare you still plead with me? You have all rebelled 30 against me, says the Lord. | In vain I struck your children; the correction they did not take. Your sword devoured your prophets 31 like a ravening lion. | You, of this generation, take note of the word of the Lord: Have I been a desert to Israel, a land of darkness? Why do my people say, "We have moved on, we will 32 come to you no more"? | Does a virgin forget her jewelry, a bride her sash? Yet my people have forgotten me days without number.
33 How well you pick your way when seeking love! You who, in 34 your wickedness, have gone by ways unclean! | You, on whose clothing there is the life-blood of the innocent, whom you found 35 committing no burglary; yet withal you say, "I am innocent; at least, his anger is turned away from me." Behold, I will judge 36 you on that word of yours, "I have not sinned." | How very base you have become in changing your course! By Egypt will 37 you be shamed, as you were shamed by Assyria. | From there also shall you go away with hands upon your head; for the Lord has rejected those in whom you trust, with them you will have no success.

1 If a man sends away his wife and, after leaving him, she marries another man, does the first husband come back to her?
Would not the land be wholly defiled? But you have sinned with many lovers, and yet you would return to me! says the Lord.
2 Lift your eyes to the heights, and see, where have men not lain with you? By the waysides you waited for them like an Arab in the desert. You defiled the land by your wicked harlotry. | 3 Therefore the showers were withheld, the spring rain failed.

3, 1: A reference to Dt 24, 1-4, forbidding such remarriage.
3, 2: An Arab: a raider of caravans.

But because you have a harlot's brow, you refused to blush.
4 Even now do you not call me, "My father, you who are the 5 bridegroom of my youth"? | "Will he keep his wrath forever, will he hold his grudge to the end?" This is what you say; yet you do all the evil you can.

6 Juda and Israel The Lord said to me in the days of king Josia: See now what rebellious Israel has done! She has gone up every high mountain, and under every green tree she has 7 played the harlot. And I thought, after she has done all this she will return to me. But she did not return. Then, even though 8 her traitor sister Juda saw | that for all the adulteries rebellious Israel had committed, I put her away and gave her a bill of divorce, nevertheless her traitor sister Juda was not frightened; 9 she too went off and played the harlot. Eager to sin, she polluted 10 the land, committing adultery with stone and wood. With all this, the traitor sister Juda did not return to me wholeheartedly, but insincerely, says the Lord.

11 Restoration of Israel Then the Lord said to me: Rebel 12 Israel is inwardly more just than traitorous Juda. Go, proclaim these words toward the north, and say: Return, rebel Israel, says the Lord, I will not remain angry with you; for I am merciful, says the Lord, I will not continue my wrath forever. | 13 Only know your guilt: how you rebelled against the Lord, your God, how you ran hither and yon to strangers [under every green tree] and would not listen to my voice, says the Lord.
14 Return, rebellious children, says the Lord, for I am your Master; I will take you, one from a city, two from a clan, and 15 bring you to Sion. | I will appoint over you shepherds after my own heart, who will shepherd you wisely and prudently. | 16 When you multiply and become fruitful in the land, says the Lord, they will in those days no longer say, "The ark of the covenant of the Lord!" They will no longer think of it, or remember it, or miss it, or make another.
17 At that time they will call Jerusalem the Lord's throne:
there all nations will be gathered together to honor the name

3, 6-10: Jeremia bemoans the fact that the southern kingdom ("Juda") did not learn her lesson from the northern kingdom ("Israel") whose idolatry led to her fall in 722-21 B.C.

3, 9: Stone: see Is 57, 6 n.

3, 15: Shepherds: leaders.

3, 17-18: The poet hopefully looks forward to a reunion of the northern and southern kingdoms (v. 18). See Ez 37, 15-28 n. The poet also looks forward to the conversion of the Gentiles when the of the Lord at Jerusalem, and they will walk no longer in their 18 hardhearted wickedness. In those days the house of Juda will join the house of Israel; together they will come from the land of the north to the land which I gave to your fathers as a heritage.

19 Conditions for Forgiveness I had thought: How I should like to treat you as sons, and give you a pleasant land, a heritage most beautiful among the nations! You would call me, "My 20 Father," I thought, and never cease following me. | But like a woman faithless to her lover, even so have you been faithless to 21 me, O house of Israel, says the Lord. | A cry is heard on the heights! the plaintive weeping of Israel's children, because they have perverted their ways and forgotten the Lord, their God. | 22 Return, rebellious children, and I will cure you of your rebelling.
"Here we are, we now come to you because you are the Lord, 23 our God. | Deceptive indeed are the hills, the thronging moun-
24 tains; in the Lord, our God, alone is the salvation of Israel. |
The shame-god has devoured our fathers' toil from our youth, 25 their sheep and their cattle, their sons and their daughters. | Let us lie down in our shame, let our disgrace cover us, for we have sinned against the Lord, our God, from our youth to this day, we and our fathers also; we listened not to the voice of the Lord, our God."

4

1 If you wish to return, O Israel, says the Lord, return to me.
If you put your detestable things out of my sight, and do not 2 stray, | then you can swear, "As the Lord lives," in truth, in judgment, and in justice; then shall the nations use his name in blessing, and glory in him.
3 For to the men of Juda and to Jerusalem, thus says the Lord:
4 Till your untilled ground, sow not among thorns. | For the sake of the Lord, be circumcised, remove the foreskins of your hearts, O men of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem; lest my anger break elementary cult ("The Ark of the Covenant of the Lord" v. 16) will be transformed into a more spiritual cult ("they will call Jerusalem the Lord's throne" v. 17). Some believe that this section (vv. 14-18) was written after the beginning of the exile in 587 B.C.

3, 24: The shame-god: the Chanaanite god Baal.

4, 2: "As the Lord lives": when this oath is made truthfully, it means that the person will return to God.

4, 4: Foreskins of your hearts: external circumcision is of no avail unless accompanied by internal conversion. My anger: it is common practice in the Bible to depict God as angry when the people sin.

out like fire, and burn till none can quench it, because of your evil deeds.

5 The Invasion from the North Proclaim it in Juda, make it heard in Jerusalem; blow the trumpet through the land, summon the recruits! Say, "Fall in, let us march to the fortified 6 cities." | Bear the standard to Sion, seek refuge without delay!
7 Evil I bring from the north, and great destruction. | Up comes the lion from his lair, the destroyer of nations has set out, has left his place, to turn your land into desolation, till your cities 8 lie waste and empty. | So gird yourselves with sackcloth, mourn and wail: "The blazing wrath of the Lord is not turned away from us."
9 In that day, says the Lord, the king will lose heart, and the princes; the priests will be amazed, and the prophets stunned. | 10 "Alas! Lord God," they will say, "You only deceived us when you said: Peace shall be yours; for the sword touches our very 11 soul." | At that time it will be said of this people and of Jerusalem, "From the glaring heights through the desert a wind comes toward the daughter of my people." Not to winnow, 12 not to cleanse, | does this wind from the heights come at my bidding; and I myself now pronounce sentence upon them.
13 See! like storm clouds he advances, like a hurricane his chariots; swifter than eagles are his steeds: "Woe to us! we are 14 ruined." | Cleanse your heart of evil, O Jerusalem, that you may be saved. How long must your pernicious thoughts lodge 15 within you? | Listen! They proclaim it from Dan, from Mount 16 Ephraim they announce destruction: | "Make this known to the nations, announce it to Jerusalem: the besiegers are coming from the distant land, shouting their war cry against the cities 17 of Juda." | Like watchmen of the fields they surround her,
18 for she has rebelled against me, says the Lord. | Your conduct, your misdeeds, have done this to you; how bitter is this disaster of yours, how it reaches to your very heart!
19 My breast! my breast! how I suffer! The walls of my heart!
My heart beats wildly, I cannot be still; for I have heard the 20 sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war. | Ruin after ruin is reported; the whole earth is laid waste. In an instant my tents 21 are ravaged; in a flash, my shelters. | How long must I see that signal, hear that trumpet sound!
22 Fools my people are, they know me not; senseless children they are, having no understanding; they are wise in evil, but 23 know not how to do good. | I looked at the earth, and it was waste and void; at the heavens, and their light had gone out!
24 | I looked at the mountains, and they were trembling, and all

25 the hills were crumbling! | I looked and behold, there was no 26 man; even the birds of the air had flown away! | I looked and behold, the garden land was a desert, with all its cities destroyed before the Lord, before his blazing wrath.
27 For thus says the Lord: Waste shall the whole land be; I will 28 [not] wholly destroy it. | Because of this the earth shall mourn, the heavens above shall darken; I have spoken, I will not repent, 29 I have resolved, I will not turn back. | At the shout of horseman and bowman each city takes to flight; they shrink into the thickets, they scale the rocks: all the cities are abandoned, and 30 no one dwells in them. | You now who are doomed, what do you mean by putting on purple, bedecking yourself with gold, shading your eyes with cosmetics, beautifying yourself in vain?
31 Your lovers spurn you, they seek your life. | Yes, I hear the moaning, as of a woman in travail, like the anguish of a mother with her first child—the cry of daughter Sion gasping, as she stretches forth her hands: "Ah, woe is me! I sink exhausted before the slayers!"

1 Universal Corruption Roam the streets of Jerusalem, look about and observe, search through her public places, to find even one who lives uprightly and seeks to be faithful, and I will 2 pardon her! | Though they say, "As the Lord lives," they swear
3 falsely. | O Lord, do your eyes not look for honesty? You struck them, but they did not cringe; you laid them low, but they refused correction; they set their faces harder than stone, 4 and refused to return to you. | It is only the lowly, I thought, who are foolish; for they know not the way of the Lord, their 5 duty to their God. | I will go to the great ones and speak with them; for they know the way of the Lord, their duty to their God. But, one and all, they had broken the yoke, torn off the 6 harness. | Therefore lions from the forest slay them, wolves of the desert ravage them, leopards keep watch round their cities:
all who come out are torn to pieces for their many crimes and their numerous rebellions.
7 Why should I pardon you these things? Your sons have forsaken me, they swear by gods that are not. I fed them, but they committed adultery; to the harlot's house they throng. |
8 Lustful stallions they are, each neighs after another's wife. | 9 Shall I not punish them for these things? says the Lord; on a 10 nation such as this shall I not take vengeance? | Climb to her terraces, and ravage them, destroy them [not] wholly. Tear away 11 her tendrils, they do not belong to the Lord. | For they have openly rebelled against me, both the house of Israel and the house of Juda, says the Lord. | They denied the Lord, saying,

"Not he—no evil shall befall us, neither sword nor famine shall we see. | The prophets have become wind, and the word is not in them. May their threats be carried out against themselves!" Now, for this that you have said, says the Lord, the God of hosts—behold, I make my words in your mouth, a fire, and this people is the wood that it shall devour!— | Beware, I will bring against you a nation from afar, O house of Israel, says the Lord; a long-lived nation, an ancient nation, a people whose language you know not, whose speech you cannot understand. | Their quivers are like open graves; all of them are warriors. | They will devour your harvest and your bread, devour your sons and your daughters, devour your sheep and cattle, devour your vines and fig trees; they will beat flat with the sword the fortified city in which you trust.
Yet even in those days, says the Lord, I will not wholly destroy you. | And when they ask, "Why has the Lord done all these things to us?" say to them, "As you have forsaken me to serve strange gods in your own land, so shall you serve strangers in a land not your own."
Announce this to the house of Jacob, proclaim it in Juda: | Pay attention to this, foolish and senseless people who have eyes and see not, who have ears and hear not. | Should you not fear me, says the Lord, should you not tremble before me? I made the sandy shore the sea's limit, which by eternal decree it may not overstep. Toss though it may, it is to no avail; though its billows roar, they cannot pass. | But this people's heart is stubborn and rebellious; they turn and go away, | and say not in their hearts, "Let us fear the Lord, our God, who gives us rain early and late, in its time; who watches for us over the appointed weeks of harvest." | Your crimes have prevented these things, your sins have turned back these blessings from
you. | For there are among my people criminals; like fowlers they set traps, but it is men they catch. | Their houses are as full of treachery as a bird-cage is of birds; therefore they grow powerful and rich, | fat and sleek. They go their wicked way; justice they do not defend by advancing the claim of the fatherless or judging the cause of the poor. | Shall I not punish these things? says the Lord; on a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance? | A shocking, horrible thing has happened in the 5, 12: They denied the Lord: such expressions in the Bible never mean a theoretical denial of God, but a practical one, namely, the people act as though God does not exist.

5, 24: Appointed weeks of harvest: it did not usually rain during the seven weeks between the Passover and Pentecost.

31 land: | the prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests teach as they wish; yet my people will have it so; what will you do when the end comes?

6

1 The Enemy at the Gates Flee, sons of Benjamin, out of Jerusalem! Blow the trumpet in Thecua, raise a signal over Beth-haccharem; for evil threatens from the north, and mighty destruction. | O lovely and delicate daughter Sion, you are 3 ruined! | Against her, shepherds come with their flocks; all around, they pitch their tents, each one grazes his portion. | 4 "Prepare for war against her. Up! Let us rush upon her at midday! Alas! the day is waning, evening shadows lengthen; 5 up! let us rush upon her by night, destroy her palaces!" 6 For thus says the Lord of hosts: Hew down her trees, throw up a siege mound against Jerusalem. Woe to the city marked 7 for punishment; nought but oppression within her! | As the well gushes out its waters, so she gushes out her wickedness.
Violence and destruction resound in her; ever before me are 8 wounds and blows. Be warned, O Jerusalem, lest I be estranged from you; lest I turn you into a desert, a land where no man dwells.
9 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Glean, glean like a vine the remnant of Israel; pass your hand, like a vintager, repeatedly 10 over the tendrils. | To whom shall I speak? whom shall I warn, and be heard? See! their ears are uncircumcised, they cannot give heed; see, the word of the Lord has become for them an 11 object of scorn, which they will not have. | Therefore my wrath brims up within me, I am weary of holding it in; I will pour it out upon the child in the street, upon the young men gathered together. Yes, all will be taken, husband and wife, 12 graybeard with ancient. | Their houses will fall to strangers, their fields and their wives as well; for I will stretch forth my hand against those who dwell in this land, says the Lord. | 13 Small and great alike, all are greedy for gain; prophet and 14 priest, all practice fraud. | They would repair, as though it were nought, the injury to my people: "Peace, peace!" they say, 15 though there is no peace. | They are odious; they have done abominable things, yet they are not at all ashamed, they know

6, 1: Thecua . . . Beth-haccharem: the flight is directed southward toward the desert of Juda.

6, 3: Shepherds come with their flocks: foreign invaders with their armies.

6, 14: The prophets and priests falsely assure the people that all is well, although in reality crass materialism is rampant.

not bow to blush. Hence they shall be among those who fall;
in their time of punishment they shall go down, says the Lord.
16 Thus says the Lord: Stand beside the earliest roads, ask the pathways of old which is the way to good, and walk it; thus you will find rest for your souls. But they said, "We will not 17 walk it." | When I raised up watchmen for them: "Hearken to the sound of the trumpet!" they said, "We will not hearken." | 18 Therefore hear, O nations, and know, O earth, what I will do 19 with them: | See, I bring evil upon this people, the fruit of their own schemes, because they heeded not my words, because they 20 despised my law. | Of what use to me incense that comes from Saba, or sweet cane from far-off lands? Your holocausts find 21 no favor with me, your sacrifices please me not. | Therefore, thus says the Lord: See, I will place before this people obstacles to bring them down; fathers and sons alike, neighbors and friends shall perish.
22 Thus says the Lord: See, a people comes from the land of the north, a great nation, roused from the ends of the earth. | 23 Bow and javelin they wield; cruel and pitiless are they. They sound like the roaring sea as they ride forth on steeds, each in 24 his place, for battle against you, daughter Sion. | We hear the report of them; helpless fall our hands, anguish takes hold of 25 us, throes like a mother's in childbirth. | Go not forth into the field, step not into the street, beware of the enemy's sword; 26 terror on every side! | O daughter of my people, gird on sackcloth, roll in the ashes. Mourn as for an only child with bitter wailing, for sudden upon us comes the destroyer.
27 A tester among my people I have appointed you, to search 28 and test their way. | Arch-rebels are they all, dealers in slander, 29 all of them corrupt. | The bellows roars, the lead is consumed by the fire; in vain has the smelter refined, the wicked are not 30 drawn off. | "Silver rejected" they shall be called, for the Lord has rejected them.

II. ORACLES MOSTLY IN THE DAYS OF JOAKIM

7 1 The Temple Sermon The following message came to 2 Jeremia from the Lord: Stand at the gate of the house of the Lord, and there proclaim this message: Hear the word of the 6, 16: Earliest roads . . . the pathways of old: history and what can be learned from it.

6, 17: Watchmen: prophets indicating the way of God's law.

Lord, all you of Juda who enter these gates to worship the 3 Lord! Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Reform your ways and your deeds, so that I may remain with you in 4 this place. Put not your trust in the deceitful words: "This is the temple of the Lord! The temple of the Lord! The temple of 5 the Lord!" | Only if you thoroughly reform your ways and 6 your deeds; if each of you deals justly with his neighbor; if you no longer oppress the resident alien, the orphan, and the widow;
if you no longer shed innocent blood in this place, or follow 7 strange gods to your own harm, will I remain with you in this place, in the land which I gave your fathers long ago and forever.
8 But here you are, putting your trust in deceitful words to 9 your own loss! Are you to steal and murder, commit adultery and perjury, burn incense to Baal, go after strange gods that 10 you know not, and yet come to stand before me in this house which bears my name, and say: "We are safe; we can commit 11 all these abominations again"? Has this house which bears my name become in your eyes a den of thieves? I too see what is 12 being done, says the Lord. You may go to Silo, which I made the dwelling place of my name in the beginning. See what I did 13 to it because of the wickedness of my people Israel. And now, because you have committed all these misdeeds, says the Lord, because you did not listen, though I spoke to you untiringly; 14 because you did not answer, though I called you, | I will do to this house named after me, in which you trust, and to this place which I gave to you and your fathers, just as I did to 15 Silo. I will cast you away from me, as I cast away all your brethren, all the offspring of Ephraim.

16 Abuses in Worship You, now, do not intercede for this 17 people; raise not in their behalf a pleading prayer! Do not urge me, for I will not listen to you. Do you not see what they are 18 doing in the cities of Juda, in the streets of Jerusalem? The children gather wood, their fathers light the fire, and the women knead dough to make cakes for the queen of heaven,

7, 6: The resident alien: the Mosaic Law protected him. See, e.g., Ex 20, 10.

7, 11: A den of thieves: see Mt 21, 13.

7, 12: Silo: although this was a legitimate place of worship from Josue's time to Samuel's, it later became illegal.

7, 14: As I did to Silo: an allusion to the destruction of Silo by the Philistines. See 1 Sm 1, 9.

7, 15: Refers to the destruction of the northern kingdom 722-21 B.C.

7, 18: Cakes: since Ishtar was identified with the planet Venus, the while libations are poured out to strange gods in order to hurt 19 me. Is it I whom they hurt, says the Lord; is it not rather them-20 selves, to their own confusion? See now, says the Lord God, my anger and my wrath will pour out upon this place, upon man and beast, upon the trees of the field and the fruits of the earth; it will burn without being quenched.

21 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Heap your 22 holocausts upon your sacrifices; eat up the flesh! In speaking to your fathers on the day I brought them out of the land of Egypt, I gave them no command concerning holocaust or 23 sacrifice. This rather is what I commanded them: Listen to my voice; then I will be your God and you shall be my people. Walk in all the ways that I command you, so that you may prosper.
24 But they obeyed not, nor did they pay heed. They walked in the hardness of their evil hearts and turned their backs, not 25 their faces, to me. From the day that your fathers left the land of Egypt even to this day, I have sent you untiringly all my servants the prophets. Yet they have not obeyed me nor paid 26 heed; they have stiffened their necks and done worse than their 27 fathers. When you speak all these words to them, they will not 28 listen to you either; when you call to them, they will not answer you. Say to them: This is the nation which does not listen to the voice of the Lord, its God, or take correction. Faithfulness has disappeared; the word itself is banished from their speech.
29 Cut off your dedicated hair and throw it away! on the heights intone an elegy; for the Lord has rejected and cast off the generation that draws down his wrath.
30 The people of Juda have done what is evil in my eyes, says the Lord. They have defiled the house which bears my name 31 by setting up in it their abominable idols. In the Valley of Ben-Hinnom they have built the high place of Thopheth to immolate in fire their sons and their daughters, such a thing as 32 I never commanded or had in mind. | Therefore, beware! days will come, says the Lord, when Thopheth and the Valley of Ben-Hinnom will no longer be called such, but rather the Valley of Slaughter. For lack of space, Thopheth will be a burial place.

cakes were shaped in the form of stars. Queen of heaven: Ishtar, the Assyro-Babylonian goddess of fertility.

7, 22: I gave them no command: God demanded not purely external cult, but correct living (see v. 23).

7, 29: Jerusalem is personified as a woman cutting her hair as a sign of mourning because God rejected her.

7, 31: Valley of Ben-Hinnom: see 2, 23 n.

7, 32: Days will come: a favorite expression of Jeremia used fifteen times.

33 The corpses of this people will be food for the birds of the sky 34 and for the beasts of the field, which no one will drive away. In the cities of Juda and in the streets of Jerusalem I will silence the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; for the land will be turned to rubble.

1 At that time, says the Lord, the bones of the kings and princes of Juda, the bones of the priests and the prophets, and the bones of the citizens of Jerusalem will be emptied out of their
2 graves | and spread out before the sun and the moon and the whole army of heaven, which they loved and served, which they followed, consulted, and worshiped. They will not be gathered
3 up for burial, but will lie like dung upon the ground. Death will be preferred to life by all the survivors of this wicked race who remain in any of the places to which I banish them, says the Lord of hosts.

4 Israel's Conduct Incomprehensible Tell them: Thus says the Lord: When someone falls, does he not rise again? if he goes
5 astray, does he not turn back? | Why do these people rebel with obstinate resistance? Why do they cling to deceptive idols,
6 refuse to turn back? | I listen closely: they speak what is not true; no one repents of his wickedness, saying "What have I done!" Everyone keeps on running his course, like a steed dash-
7 ing into battle. | Even the stork in the air knows its seasons; turtledove, swallow and thrush observe their time of return, but my people do not know the ordinance of the Lord.
8 How can you say, "We are wise, we have the law of the Lord"? Why, that has been changed into falsehood by the 9 lying pen of the scribes! | The wise are confounded, dismayed and ensnared; since they have rejected the word of the Lord, of what avail is their wisdom?

10 Shameless in Their Crimes Therefore, I will give their wives to strangers, their fields to spoilers. Small and great alike, all are greedy for gain, prophet and priest, all practice

8, 1-3: Jeremia may be speaking ironically here by making their bones appear as offerings to the sun and moon. This is the idolatry they practiced during their lifetime.

8, 2: Army of heaven: the stars which the people worshiped.

8, 8-9: Lying pen: the pen of the scribes lied because their interpretations contradicted "the word of the Lord."

11 fraud. | They would repair, as though it were nought, the injury to the daughter of my people: "Peace, peace!" they say, 12 though there is no peace. | They are odious; they have done abominable things, yet they are not at all ashamed, they know not how to blush. Hence they shall be among those who fall; in their time of punishment they shall go down, says the Lord.

13 Threats of Punishment I will gather them all in, says the Lord: no grapes on the vine, no figs on the fig trees, foliage 14 withered! | Why do we remain here? Let us form ranks and enter the walled cities, to perish there; for the Lord has wrought our destruction, he has given us poison to drink, because we 15 have sinned against the Lord. | We wait for peace to no avail;
16 for a time of healing, but terror comes instead. | From Dan is heard the snorting of his steeds; the neighing of his stallions shakes the whole land. They come devouring the land and all it 17 contains, the city and those who dwell in it. | Yes, I will send against you poisonous snakes, against which no charm will work when they bite you, says the Lord.

18 The Prophet's Grief over the People's Suffering My 19 grief is incurable, my heart within me is faint. | Listen! the cry of the daughter of my people, far and wide in the land! Is the Lord no longer in Sion, is her King no longer in her midst?
[Why do they provoke me with their idols, with their foreign 20 nonentities?] | "The harvest has passed, the summer is at an 21 end, and yet we are not safe!" | I am broken by the ruin of the daughter of my people. I am disconsolate; horror has seized me 22 | Is there no balm in Galaad, no physician there? Why grows not new flesh over the wound of the daughter of my people? | 23 Oh, that my head were a spring of water, my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night over the slain of the daughter of my people!

1 The Corruption of the People Would that I had in the desert a travelers' lodge! That I might leave my people and de-2 part from them. They are all adulterers, a faithless band. | They ready their tongues like a drawn bow; with lying, and not with truth, they hold forth in the land. They go from evil to evil, but 8, 11: Daughter of my people: the personification of the people. This expression occurs four more times in this chapter.

8, 22: Balm in Galaad: a highly prized and famous balm.

me they know not, says the Lord. | Be on your guard, everyone against his neighbor; put no trust in any brother. Every brother apes Jacob, the supplanter, every friend is guilty of slander. | Each one deceives the other, no one speaks the truth. They have accustomed their tongues to lying, and are perverse, and cannot repent. | Violence upon violence, deceit upon deceit: they refuse to recognize me, says the Lord.
Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts: I will smelt them and test them; how else should I deal with their wickedness? | A murderous arrow is his tongue, his mouth utters deceit; he speaks cordially with his friends, but in his heart he lays an ambush! | For these things, says the Lord, shall I not punish them? On a nation such as this shall I not take vengeance?

Dirge over the Ravaged Land Over the mountains, break out in cries of lamentation, over the pasture lands, intone a dirge: they are scorched, and no man crosses them, unheard is the bleat of the flock; birds of the air as well as beasts, all have fled, and are gone. | I will turn Jerusalem into a heap of ruins, a haunt of jackals; the cities of Juda I will make into a waste, where no one dwells.
Who is so wise that he can understand this? Let him to whom the mouth of the Lord has spoken make it known: Why is the land ravaged, scorched like a wasteland untraversed?
The Lord answered: Because they have abandoned my law, which I set before them, and have not followed it or listened to my voice, but followed rather the hardness of their hearts and the Baals, as their fathers had taught them; | therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: See now, I will give them wormwood to eat and poison to drink. I will scatter them among nations whom neither they nor their fathers have known;
I will send the sword to pursue them until I have completely destroyed them.
Thus says the Lord of hosts: Attention! tell the wailing women to come, summon the best of them; | let them come quickly and intone a dirge for us, that our eyes may be wet with weeping, our cheeks run with tears. | The dirge is heard from Sion: Ruined we are, and greatly ashamed; we must leave the land, give up our homes! | Hear, you women, the word of the Lord, let your ears receive his message. Teach your daughters this dirge, and each other this lament. | Death has come up through our windows, has entered our palaces; it cuts down the 9, 3: Apes Jacob, the supplanter: Jacob (meaning "he supplants") took his brother's birthright away. See Gn 25, 26.

21 children in the street, young people in the squares. | The corpses of the slain lie like dung on a field, like sheaves behind the harvester, with no one to gather them.

22 True Glory Thus says the Lord: Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, nor the strong man glory in his strength, nor 23 the rich man glory in his riches; | but rather, let him who glories, glory in this, that in his prudence he knows me, knows that I, the Lord, bring about kindness, justice and uprightness on the earth; for with such am I pleased, says the Lord.

24 Circumcision Worthless See, days are coming, says the Lord, when I will demand an account of all those circumcised 25 in their flesh: Egypt and Juda, Edom and the Ammonites, Moab and the desert dwellers who shave their temples. For all these nations, like the whole house of Israel, are uncircumcised in heart.

10

1 The Folly of Idolatry Hear the word which the Lord 2 speaks to you, O house of Israel. Thus says the Lord: Learn not the customs of the nations, and have no fear of the signs 3 of the heavens, though the nations fear them. | For the cult idols of the nations are nothing, wood cut from the forest, 4 wrought by craftsmen with the adze, | adorned with silver and gold. With nails and hammers they are fastened, that they may 5 not totter. | Like a scarecrow in a cucumber field are they, they cannot speak; they must be carried about, for they cannot walk.
Fear them not, they can do no harm, neither is it in their power 6 to do good. | No one is like you, O Lord, great are you, great 7 and mighty is your name. | Who would not fear you, King of the nations, for it is your due!
Among all the wisest of the nations, and in all their domain, there is none like you.
8 One and all they are dumb and senseless, these idols they 9 teach about are wooden: | silver strips brought from Tharsis, and gold from Ophir, the work of the craftsman and the handiwork of the smelter, clothed with violet and purple—all of them the work of artisans.

9, 25: Desert dwellers who shave their temples: Arabs who shave their temples in honor of Bacchus. Lv 19, 27 forbids it.

10, 1-9: On the understanding of polytheism, see Is 44, 9-20 n.

10, 2: Signs of the heavens: pagans interpreted the heavens superstitiously.

11 Thus shall you say of them: Let the gods that did not make heaven and earth perish from the earth, and from beneath these heavens!
10 The Lord is true God, he is the living God, the eternal King, before whose anger the earth quakes, whose wrath the nations 12 cannot endure: | he who made the earth by his power, established the world by his wisdom, and stretched out the heavens 13 by his skill. | When he thunders, the waters in the heavens roar, and he brings up clouds from the end of the earth; he makes the lightning flash in the rain, and releases stormwinds 14 from their chambers. | Every man is stupid, ignorant; every artisan is put to shame by his idol: he has molded a fraud, with-15 out breath of life. | Nothingness are they, a ridiculous work;
16 they will perish in their time of punishment. | Not like these is the portion of Jacob: he is the creator of all things; Israel is his very own tribe, Lord of hosts is his name.

17 Abandonment of Juda Lift your bundle and leave the 18 land, O city living in a stage of siege! | For thus says the Lord:
Behold, this time I will sling away the inhabitants of the land;
19 I will hem them in, that they may be taken. | Woe is me! I am undone, my wound is incurable; yet I had thought: if I make 20 light of my wound, I can bear it. | My tent is ruined, all its cords are severed. My sons have left me, they are no more: no 21 one to pitch my tent, no one to raise its curtains. | Yes, the shepherds were stupid as cattle, the Lord they sought not; therefore they had no success, and all their flocks were scattered. | 22 Listen! a noise! it comes closer, a great uproar from the northern land: to turn the cities of Juda into a desert haunt of jackals.

23 Prayer of Jeremia You know, O Lord, that man is not master of his way; man's course is not within his choice, nor 24 is it for him to direct his step. | Punish us, O Lord, but with 25 equity, not in anger, lest you have us dwindle away. | Pour out your wrath on the nations that know you not, on the tribes that call not upon your name; for they have devoured Jacob utterly, and laid waste his dwelling.

11

1 Plea for Fidelity to the Covenant The following mes-2 sage came to Jeremia from the Lord: Speak to the men of Juda 3 and to the citizens of Jerusalem, saying to them: Thus says the 10, 11: On verse displacement, see Za 4, 4ff n.

10, 21: The shepherds: the leaders of the people.

Lord, the God of Israel: Cursed be the man who does not ob-4 serve the terms of this covenant, which I enjoined upon your fathers the day I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, that iron foundry, saying: Listen to my voice and do all that I command you. Then you shall be my people, and I will be your 5 God. Thus I will fulfill the oath which I swore to your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey: the one you have today. "Amen, Lord," I answered.
6 Then the Lord said to me: Proclaim all these words in the cities of Juda and in the streets of Jerusalem: Hear the words 7 of this covenant and obey them. Urgently and constantly I warned your fathers to obey my voice, from the day I brought 8 them up out of the land of Egypt even to this day. | But they did not listen or give ear. Each one followed the hardness of his evil heart, till I brought upon them all the threats of this covenant which they had failed to observe as I commanded them.
9 A conspiracy has been found, the Lord said to me, among 10 the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem. They have returned to the crimes of their forefathers who refused to obey my words. They also have followed and served strange gods; the covenant which I had made with their fathers, the house of 11 Israel and the house of Juda have broken. | Therefore, thus says the Lord: See, I bring upon them misfortune which they cannot escape. Though they cry out to me, I will not listen to 12 them. Then the cities of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem will go and cry out to the gods to which they have been offering incense. But these gods will give them no help whatever when misfortune strikes.
13 For as numerous as your cities are your gods, O Juda! And as many as the streets of Jerusalem are the altars for offering sacrifice to Baal.
14 Do not intercede on behalf of this people, nor utter a plea for them. I will not listen when they call to me at the time of their misfortune.

15 Sacrifices of No Avail What right has my beloved in my house, while she prepares her plots? Can vows and sacred meat turn away your misfortune from you? Will you still be jubilant 16 | when you hear the great invasion? A spreading olive tree, goodly to behold, the Lord has named you; now he sets fire to it, its branches burn.
17 The Lord of hosts who planted you has decreed misfortune 11, 4: Egypt, that iron foundry: see Dt 4, 20 n for the explanation.

11, 13: A repetition of 2, 28b.

for you because of the evil done by the house of Israel and by the house of Juda, who provoked me by sacrificing to Baal.

18 The Plot against Jeremia I knew it because the Lord informed me; at that time you, O Lord, showed me their doings.

1 You would be in the right, O Lord, if I should dispute with you; even so, I must discuss the case with you. Why does the way of the godless prosper, why live all the treacherous in con-
2 tentment? | You planted them; they have taken root, they keep on growing and bearing fruit. You are upon their lips,
3 but far from their inmost thoughts. | You, O Lord, know me, you see me, you have found that at heart I am with you. Pick them out like sheep for the slaughter, set them apart for the day
4 of carnage. | How long must the earth mourn, the green of the whole countryside wither? For the wickedness of those who dwell in it beasts and birds disappear, because they say, "God does not see our ways."
5 If running against men has wearied you, how will you race against horses? And if in a land of peace you fall headlong, what will you do in the thickets of the Jordan?
6 For even your own brothers, the members of your father's house, betray you; they have recruited a force against you. Do not believe them, even if they are friendly to you in their words.
11,19 Yet I, like a trusting lamb led to slaughter, had not realized that they were hatching plots against me: "Let us destroy the tree in its vigor; let us cut him off from the land of the living, so that his name will be spoken no more."
20 But, you, O Lord of hosts, O just Judge, searcher of mind and heart, let me witness the vengeance you take on them, for to you I have entrusted my cause!
21 Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning the men of Ana-22 thoth who seek your life, saying, "Do not prophesy in the name of the Lord; else you shall die by our hand." | Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts: I am going to punish them. The young 12, 1-5: See "Confessions" in the Introduction to the Book of Jeremia.

12, 3: Jeremia knew only about temporal (not eternal) retribution as the means of executing God's justice. It is God's justice that he desires more than personal satisfaction.

12, 5: Yahweh "answers" Jeremia that in dealing with men the prophet must prepare to meet greater trials in the future and even more evil than before.

11, 19: On the rearrangement of verses, see Za 4, 4ff n.

11, 20: See 12, 3 n.

men shall die by the sword; their sons and daughters shall die 23 by famine. None shall be spared among them, for I will bring misfortune upon the men of Anathoth, the year of their punishment.

12,7 The Lord's Complaint I abandon my house, cast off my heritage; the beloved of my soul I deliver into the hand of 8 her foes. | My heritage has turned on me like a lion in the jungle; because she has roared against me, I treat her as an
9 enemy. | My heritage is a prey for hyenas, is surrounded by vultures; come, gather together, all you beasts of the field,
10 come and eat! | Many shepherds have ravaged my vineyard, have trodden my heritage underfoot; the portion that delighted
11 me they have turned into a desert waste. | They have made it a mournful waste, desolate it lies before me, desolate, all the 12 land, because no one takes it to heart. | Upon every desert height brigands have come up. The Lord has a sword which consumes the land, from end to end: no peace for all mankind.
13 | They have sown wheat and reaped thorns, they have tired themselves out to no purpose; they recoil before their harvest, the flaming anger of the Lord.

14 Juda's Neighbors Thus says the Lord against all my evil neighbors who plunder the heritage which I gave my people Israel as their own: See, I will pluck them up from their land; 15 the house of Juda I will pluck up in their midst. But after plucking them up, I will pity them again and bring them back, 16 each to his heritage, each to his land. And if they carefully learn my people's custom of swearing by my name, "As the Lord lives," they who formerly taught my people to swear by 17 Baal shall be built up in the midst of my people. But if they do not obey, I will uproot and destroy that nation entirely, says the Lord.

13

1 Juda's Corruption The Lord said to me: Go buy yourself a linen loincloth; wear it on your loins, but do not put it in water.
2 I bought the loincloth, as the Lord commanded, and put it on.

12, 14: My evil neighbors: Israel's pagan neighbors.

13, 1-11: The loincloth represents the people, the body represents God. Just as the loincloth is close to the body, so are the people close to God. But "Pharat" (the Euphrates river symbolizing Babylon) corrupts the loincloth (the people) through the policy of a foreign alliance. This passage may not necessarily be interpreted as an action which

3-4 A second time the word of the Lord came to me thus: Take the loincloth which you bought and are wearing, and go now to the 5 Pharat; there hide it in a cleft of the rock. Obedient to the Lord's 6 command, I went to the Pharat and buried the loincloth. After a long interval, he said to me: Go now to the Pharat and fetch 7 the loincloth which I told you to hide there. Again I went to the Pharat, sought out and took the loincloth from the place 8 where I had hid it. But it was rotted, good for nothing! Then 9 the message came to me from the Lord: | Thus says the Lord:
So also I will allow the pride of Juda to rot, the great pride of 10 Jerusalem. This wicked people who refuse to obey my words, who walk in the stubbornness of their hearts, and follow strange gods to serve and adore them, shall be like this loincloth which 11 is good for nothing. For, as close as the loincloth clings to a man's loins, so had I made the whole house of Israel and the whole house of Juda cling to me, says the Lord; to be my people, my renown, my praise, my beauty. But they did not listen.

12 The Broken Wineflask Now speak to them this word: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine. If they reply, "Do we not know that 13 every wineflask is meant to be filled with wine?" | say to them:
Thus says the Lord: Beware! I am filling with drunkenness all the inhabitants of this land, the kings who succeed to David's throne, the priests and prophets, and all the citizens of Jeru-14 salem. I will dash them against each other, fathers and sons together, says the Lord; I will show no compassion, I will not spare or pity, but will destroy them.

15 A Last Warning Give ear, listen humbly, for the Lord 16 speaks. | Give glory to the Lord, your God, before it grows dark; before your feet stumble on darkening mountains; before the light you look for turns to darkness, changes into black 17 clouds. | If you do not listen to this in your pride, I will weep in secret many tears; my eyes will run with tears for the Lord's flock, led away to exile.

Jeremia carried out by two trips to the Euphrates or to a nearby stream. Jeremia could have seen this symbolism in his mind through a divine inspiration and it is here expressed as an external action. The same explanation may hold true for his other symbolic acts. See "symbolic acts" in the Introduction to the Prophetical Books.

13, 12-14: God will turn the wineflask of merriment into one of wrath.

13, 15-17: Jeremia warns the people on the forthcoming exile.

18 Exile Say to the king and to the queen mother: come down from your throne; from your heads fall your magnificent 19 crowns. | The cities of the Negeb are besieged, with no one to relieve them; all Juda is banished in universal exile.

20 Jerusalem's Disgrace Lift up your eyes and see men coming from the north. Where is the flock entrusted to you, the sheep 21 that were your glory? | What will you say when they place as rulers over you those whom you taught to be your lovers? Will 22 not pangs seize you like those of a woman giving birth? | If you ask in your heart why these things befall you: for your great 23 guilt your skirts are stripped away and you are violated. | Can the Ethiopian change his skin? the leopard his spots? As easily would you be able to do good, accustomed to evil as you are. | 24 I will scatter them like chaff that flies when the desert wind 25 blows. | This is your lot, the portion measured out to you from me, says the Lord. Because you have forgotten me, and trusted 26 in the lying idol, | I now will strip off your skirts from you, so 27 that your shame will appear. | Your adulteries, your neighings, your shameless prostitutions: on the hills in the highlands I see these horrible crimes of yours. Woe to you, Jerusalem, how long will it yet be before you become clean!

1 The Great Drought The word of the Lord that came to 2 Jeremia concerning the drought: | Juda mourns, her gates are lifeless; her people sink down in mourning: from Jerusalem 3 ascends a cry of anguish. | The nobles send their servants for water, but when they come to the cisterns they find no water and return with empty jars. Ashamed, despairing, they cover 4 their heads | because of the stricken soil; because there is no rain in the land the farmers are ashamed, they cover their 5 heads. | Even the hind in the field deserts her offspring because 6 there is no grass. | The wild asses stand on the bare heights,

13, 18-19: Jeremia refers to king Joakin who was deported to Babylon after a three-months' rule, following the death of his father Joakim.

13, 20-27: After the Babylonians defeated the Egyptians in 605, (See 25, 1 n) Jeremia warns the Jerusalemites that the Babylonians, their former allies ("lovers") will become their rulers (v. 21).

13, 23: It is as difficult for the people to do good as it would be for the Ethiopians and leopards to change their skins.

14, 1—15, 5: A drought occurred during the reign of Joakim.

gasping for breath like jackals; their eyes grow dim, because there is no vegetation to be seen.

7 Even though our crimes bear witness against us, take action, O Lord, for the honor of your name—even though our rebellions 8 are many, though we have sinned against you. | O Hope of Israel, O Lord, our savior in time of need! Why should you be a stranger in this land, like a traveler who has stopped but for 9 a night? | Why are you like a man dumbfounded, a champion who cannot save? You are in our midst, O Lord, your name we bear: do not forsake us!

10 Thus says the Lord of this people: They so love to wander that they do not spare their feet. The Lord has no pleasure in them; now he remembers their guilt, and will punish their sins.

11 Then the Lord said to me: Do not intercede for this people.
12 If they fast, I will not listen to their supplication. If they offer holocausts or cereal offerings, I will not accept them. Rather, I will destroy them with the sword, famine, and pestilence.

13 Ah! Lord God, I replied, it is the prophets who say to them, "You shall not see the sword; famine shall not befall you. Indeed, I will give you lasting peace in this place."

14 Lies these prophets utter in my name, the Lord said to me. I did not send them; I gave them no command nor did I speak to them. Lying visions, foolish divination, dreams of their own 15 imagination, they prophesy to you. | Therefore, thus says the Lord: Concerning the prophets who prophesy in my name, though I did not send them; who say, "Sword and famine shall not befall this land": by the sword and famine shall these proph-16 ets meet their end. The people to whom they prophesy shall be cast out into the streets of Jerusalem by famine and the sword.
No one shall bury them, their wives, their sons, or their daugh-17 ters, for I will pour out upon them their own wickedness. Speak to them this word:

Let my eyes stream with tears day and night, without rest, over the great destruction which overwhelms the virgin daugh-18 ter of my people, over her incurable wound. | If I walk out into the field, look! those slain by the sword; if I enter the city, look! those consumed by hunger. Even the prophet and the priest forage in a land they know not.

19 Have you cast Juda off completely? Is Sion loathsome to you?
Why have you struck us a blow that cannot be healed? We wait for peace, to no avail; for a time of healing, but terror comes 20 instead. | We recognize, O Lord, our wickedness, the guilt of 21 our fathers; that we have sinned against you. | For your name's sake spurn us not, disgrace not the throne of your glory; re-22 member your covenant with us, and break it not. | Among the nations' idols is there any that gives rain? Or can the mere heavens send showers? Is it not you alone, O Lord, our God, to whom we look? You alone have done all these things.

1 The Lord said to me: Even if Moses and Samuel stood before me, my heart would not turn toward this people. Send them
2 away from me. | If they ask you where they should go, tell them, Thus says the Lord: Whoever is marked for death, to death; whoever is marked for the sword, to the sword; whoever is marked for famine, to famine; whoever is marked for cap-
3 tivity, to captivity. Four kinds of scourge I have decreed against them, says the Lord: the sword to slay them; dogs to drag them about; the birds of the sky and the beasts of the earth to devour 4 and destroy them. And I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth because of what Manasse, son of Ezechia, king of Juda, did in Jerusalem.

5 Scene of Tragedy Who will pity you, Jerusalem, who will 6 console you? Who will stop to ask about your welfare? | You have disowned me, says the Lord, turned your back upon me; and so I stretched out my hand to destroy you; I was weary of
7 sparing you. | I winnowed them with the fan in every city gate. I destroyed my people through bereavement; they returned not
8 from their evil ways. | Their widows were more numerous before me than the sands of the sea. I brought against the mother of youths the spoiler at midday; suddenly I struck her
9 with anguish and terror. | The mother of seven swoons away, gasping out her life; her sun sets in full day, she is disgraced, despairing. Their survivors I will give to the sword before their enemies, says the Lord.

10 Jeremia's Complaint Woe to me, mother, that you gave me birth! a man of strife and contention to all the land! I neither 11 borrow nor lend, yet all curse me. | Tell me, Lord, have I not served you well? Have I not interceded with you for my enemies in the time of their misfortune and anguish? You know I 15 have. | Remember me, Lord, visit me, and avenge me on my persecutors. Because of your long-suffering banish me not; know 16 that for you I have borne insult. | When I found your words, I devoured them; they became my joy and the happiness of my 17 heart, because I bore your name, O Lord, God of hosts. | I did not sit celebrating in the circle of merrymakers; under the weight of your hand I sat alone because you filled me with in-18 dignation. | Why is my pain continuous, my wound incurable, refusing to be healed? You have indeed become for me a 19 treacherous brook, whose waters do not abide! | Thus the Lord answered me: If you repent, so that I restore you, in my presence you shall stand; if you bring forth the precious without the vile, you shall be my mouthpiece. Then it shall be they who 20 turn to you, and you shall not turn to them; | and I will make you toward this people a solid wall of brass. Though they fight against you, they shall not prevail, for I am with you, to de-21 liver and rescue you, says the Lord. | I will free you from the hand of the wicked, and rescue you from the grasp of the violent.

1 Jeremia's Life a Warning This message came to me from 2 the Lord: Do not marry any woman; you shall not have sons 3 or daughters in this place, for thus says the Lord concerning the sons and daughters who will be born in this place, the mothers who will give them birth, the fathers who will beget 4 them in this land: Of deadly disease they shall die. Unlamented and unburied they will lie like dung on the ground. Sword and famine will make an end of them, and their corpses will become food for the birds of the sky and the beasts of the field.
5 Go not into a house of mourning, the Lord continued: go not there to lament or offer sympathy. For I have withdrawn my friendship from this people, says the Lord, my kindness and my 6 pity. They shall die, the great and the lowly, in this land, and shall go unburied and unlamented. No one will gash himself or 7 shave his head for them. They will not break bread with the bereaved to console them in their bereavement; they will not give 15, 15: See 12, 3 n concerning Jeremia's revenge.

15, 18: A treacherous brook: just as a brook "disappoints" a thirsty man when it is dry, so does God "disappoint" Jeremia when he is thirsting for divine help.

16, 1ff: Less dramatic than Osee, Jeremia's celibate and mournful life symbolized the sorrowful future of Juda.

16, 6-7: The mourning customs were contaminated with pagan ones.

them the cup of consolation to drink over the death of father or mother.
8 Enter not a house where people are celebrating, to sit with 9 them eating and drinking. For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Before your very eyes and during your lifetime I will silence from this place the cry of joy and the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride.
10 When you proclaim all these words to this people and they ask you: "Why has the Lord pronounced all these great evils against us? What is our crime? What sin have we committed 11 against the Lord, our God?"—you shall answer them: It is because your fathers have forsaken me, says the Lord, and followed strange gods, which they served and worshiped; but me 12 they have forsaken, and my law they have not observed. And you have done worse than your fathers. Here you are, every one of you, walking in the hardness of his evil heart instead of lis-13 tening to me. I will cast you out of this land into a land that neither you nor your fathers have known; there you can serve strange gods day and night, because I will not grant you my mercy.

14 Return from Exile However, days will surely come, says the Lord, when it will no longer be said, "As the Lord lives 15 who brought the Israelites out of Egypt"; | but rather, "As the Lord lives, who brought the Israelites out of the land of the north and out of all the countries to which he had banished them." I will bring them back to the land which I gave their fathers.

16 Double Punishment Look! I will send many fishermen, says the Lord, to catch them. After that, I will send many hunters to hunt them out from every mountain and hill and from 17 the clefts of the rocks. For my eyes are upon all their ways; they are not hidden from me, nor does their guilt escape my view.
18 I will at once repay them double for their crime and their sin, of profaning my land with their detestable corpses of idols and filling my heritage with their abominations.

19 Conversion of the Heathen O Lord, my strength, my fortress, my refuge in the day of distress! To you will the nations come from the ends of the earth, and say, "Mere fraud 20 are the heritage of our fathers, empty idols of no use." | Can 21 man make for himself gods? These are not gods. | Look, then,
I will give them knowledge; this time I will leave them in no doubt of my strength and my power: they shall know that my name is Lord.

17

1 The Sin of Juda and Its Punishment The sin of Juda is written with an iron stylus, engraved with a diamond point upon the tablets of their hearts.

2 [And the horns of their altars, | when their sons remember
3 their altars and their sacred poles, | beside the green trees, on the high hills, the peaks in the highland.]

Your wealth and all your treasures I will give as spoil. In 4 recompense for all your sins throughout your borders, | you will relinquish your hold on your heritage which I have given you. I will enslave you to your enemies in a land that you know not: for a fire has been kindled by my wrath that will burn forever.

5 True Wisdom Thus says the Lord: Cursed is the man who trusts in human beings, who seeks his strength in flesh, whose 6 heart turns away from the Lord. | He is like a barren bush in the desert that enjoys no change of season, but stands in a lava
7 waste, a salt and empty earth. | Blessed is the man who trusts in the Lord, whose hope is the Lord. He is like a tree planted beside the waters that stretches out its roots to the stream: |
8 it fears not the heat when it comes, its leaves stay green; in the year of drought it shows no distress, but still bears fruit. |
9 More tortuous than all else is the human heart, beyond remedy;
10 who can understand it? | I, the Lord, alone probe the mind and test the heart, to reward everyone according to his ways, ac-
11 cording to the merit of his deeds. | A partridge that mothers a brood not her own is the man who acquires wealth unjustly: in midlife it will desert him; in the end he is only a fool.

12 The Source of Life A throne of glory, exalted from the 13 beginning, such is our holy place. | O hope of Israel, O Lord! all who forsake you shall be in disgrace; the rebels in the land shall be put to shame; they have forsaken the source of living waters [the Lord].

14 Prayer for Vengeance Heal me, Lord, that I may be healed; save me, that I may be saved, for it is you whom I praise.
15 | See how they say to me, "Where is the word of the Lord? Let 16 it come to pass!" | Yet I did not press you to send calamity; the day without remedy I have not desired. You know what passed
17 my lips; it is present before you. | Do not be my ruin, you, my 18 refuge in the day of misfortune. | Let my persecutors, not me, be confounded; let them, not me, be broken. Bring upon them the day of misfortune, crush them with repeated destruction.

19 Observance of the Sabbath Thus said the Lord to me: Go, stand at the Gate of Benjamin, where the kings of Juda
20 enter and leave, and at the other gates of Jerusalem. | There say to them: Hear the word of the Lord, you kings of Juda, and all Juda, and all you citizens of Jerusalem who enter these gates!
21 | Thus says the Lord: As you love your lives, take care not to carry burdens on the Sabbath day, to bring them in through the 22 gates of Jerusalem. Bring no burden from your homes on the Sabbath. Do no work whatever, but keep holy the Sabbath, as 23 I commanded your fathers, | though they did not listen or give ear, but stiffened their necks so as not to hear or take correction.
24 If you obey me wholeheartedly, says the Lord, and carry no burden through the gates of this city on the Sabbath, keeping the 25 Sabbath holy and abstaining from all work on it, | then, through the gates of this city, kings who sit upon the throne of David will continue to enter, riding in their chariots or upon their horses, along with their princes, and the men of Juda, and the citizens of Jerusalem. This city will remain inhabited for-26 ever. To it people will come from the cities of Juda and the neighborhood of Jerusalem, from the land of Benjamin and from the foothills, from the hill country and the Negeb, to bring holocausts and sacrifices, cereal offerings and incense and thank 27 offerings to the house of the Lord. But if you do not obey me and keep holy the Sabbath, if you carry burdens and come through the gates of Jerusalem on the Sabbath, I will set unquenchable fire to its gates, which will consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

1 The Potter's Vessel This word came to Jeremia from the 2.3 Lord: Rise up, be off to the potter's house; there I will give you my message. I went down to the potter's house and there he 4 was, working at the wheel. Whenever the object of clay which he was making turned out badly in his hand, he tried again, making of the clay another object of whatever sort he pleased.
5.6 Then the word of the Lord came to me: Can I not do to you, house of Israel, as this potter has done? says the Lord. Indeed, like clay in the hand of the potter, so are you in my hand, house 7 of Israel. Sometimes I threaten to uproot and tear down and 8 destroy a nation or a kingdom. But if that nation which I have threatened turns from its evil, I also repent of the evil which I 9 threatened to do. Sometimes, again, I promise to build up and 10 plant a nation or a kingdom. But if that nation does what is evil in my eyes, refusing to obey my voice, I repent of the good with which I promised to bless it.

11 And now, tell this to the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem: Thus says the Lord: Take care! I am fashioning evil against you and making a plan. Return, each of you, from 12 his evil way; reform your ways and your deeds. | But they will say, "No use! We will follow our own devices; each one of us will behave according to the stubbornness of his evil heart!"

13 Juda's Apostasy Unnatural Therefore thus says the Lord:
Ask among the nations—who has ever heard the like? Truly 14 horrible things has virgin Israel done! | Does the snow of Lebanon desert the rocky heights? Do the gushing waters dry 15 up that flow fresh down the mountains? | Yet my people have forgotten me: they burn incense to a thing that does not exist.
They stumble out of their ways, the paths of old, to travel on 16 bypaths, not the beaten track. | Their land shall be turned into a desert, an object of lasting ridicule: all passers-by will be 17 amazed, will shake their heads. | Like the east wind, I will scatter them before their enemies; I will show them my back, not my face, in their day of disaster.

18—20: The historical background is about 600 B.C.

18, 1-12: The lesson is that God, within the limits of His mercy, can destroy the unworthy.

18 Another Prayer for Vengeance "Come," they said, "let us contrive a plot against Jeremia. It will not mean the loss of in struction from the priests, nor of counsel from the wise, nor o messages from the prophets. And so, let us destroy him by his own tongue; let us carefully note his every word." 19 Heed me, O Lord, and listen to what my adversaries say.
20 Must good be repaid with evil that they should dig a pit to take my life? Remember that I stood before you to speak in their be 21 half, to turn away your wrath from them. | So now, deliver their children to famine, do away with them by the sword. Le their wives be made childless and widows; let their men die o pestilence, their young men be slain by the sword in battle.
22 May cries be heard from their homes, when suddenly you send plunderers against them. For they have dug a pit to capture me 23 they have hid snares for my feet; | but you, O Lord, know all their plans to slay me. Forgive not their crime, blot not out thei sin in your sight! Let them go down before you, proceed against them in the time of your anger.

19

1 Symbol of the Potter's Flask Thus said the Lord: Go buy a potter's earthen flask. Take along some of the elders of th 2 people and of the priests, and go out toward the Valley of Ben Hinnom, at the entrance of the Potsherd Gate; there proclaim 3 the words which I will speak to you: Listen to the word of th Lord, kings of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem: Thus says th Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I am going to bring such evi upon this place that all who hear of it will feel their ears tingle 4 This is because they have forsaken me and alienated this plac by burning in it incense to strange gods which neither they no their fathers knew; and the kings of Juda have filled this plac 5 with the blood of the innocent. They have built high place for Baal to immolate their sons in fire as holocausts to Baal such a thing as I neither commanded nor spoke of, nor did i 6 ever enter my mind. Therefore, days will come, says the Lord when this place will no longer be called Thopheth, or the Valle 7 of Ben-Hinnom, but rather, the Valley of Slaughter. In thi place I will foil the plan of Juda and Jerusalem; I will mak them fall by the sword before their enemies, by the hand o those that seek their lives. Their corpses I will give as food t 8 the birds of the sky and the beasts of the field. I will make thi city an object of amazement and derision. Because of all its 9 wounds, every passer-by will be amazed and will hiss. Moreover, I will have them eat the flesh of their sons and daughters; they shall eat one another's flesh during the strict siege by which their enemies and those who seek their lives will confine them.

10 And you shall break the flask in the sight of the men who 11 went with you, | and say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts:
Thus will I smash this people and this city, as one smashes a clay pot so that it cannot be repaired. And Thopheth shall be a 12 burial place, for lack of place to bury elsewhere. Thus I will do to this place and to its inhabitants, says the Lord; I will make 13 this city like Thopheth. And the houses of Jerusalem and the palaces of the kings of Juda shall be defiled like the place of Thopheth, all the houses upon whose roofs they burnt incense to the whole host of heaven and poured out libations to strange gods.
14 When Jeremia returned from Thopheth, where the Lord had sent him to prophesy, he stood in the court of the house of God 15 and said to all the people: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I will surely bring upon this city all the evil with which I threatened it, because they have stiffened their necks and have not obeyed my words.

20

1 Jeremia was heard prophesying these things by the priest 2 Phassur, son of Emmer, chief officer in the house of the Lord. So he had the prophet scourged and placed in the stocks at the 3 upper Gate of Benjamin in the house of the Lord. The next morning, after Phassur had released Jeremia from the stocks, the prophet said to him: Instead of Phassur, the Lord will 4 name you "Terror on every side." | For thus says the Lord: Indeed, I will deliver you to terror, you and all your friends. Your own eyes shall see them fall by the sword of their enemies. All Juda I will deliver to the king of Babylon, who shall take them 5 captive to Babylon or slay them with the sword. All the wealth of this city, all it has toiled for and holds dear, all the treasures of the kings of Juda, I will give as plunder into the hands of 6 their foes, who shall seize it and carry it away to Babylon. You Phassur, and all the members of your household shall go into exile. To Babylon you shall go, you and all your friends; there you shall die and be buried, because you have prophesied lies t them.

7 Jeremia's Interior Crisis You duped me, O Lord, and let myself be duped; you were too strong for me, and you tr umphed. All the day I am an object of laughter; everyor 8 mocks me. | Whenever I speak, I must cry out, violence an outrage is my message; the word of the Lord has brought m 9 derision and reproach all the day. I say to myself, I will n mention him, I will speak in his name no more. But then becomes like fire burning in my heart, imprisoned in my bone 10 I grow weary holding it in, I cannot endure it. | Yes, I hear th whisperings of many: "Terror on every side! Denounce! L us denounce him!" All those who were my friends are on th watch for any misstep of mine. "Perhaps he will be trapped 11 then we can prevail, and take our vengeance on him." | But th Lord is with me, like a mighty champion: my persecutors wi stumble, they will not triumph. In their failure they will be pu 12 to utter shame, to lasting, unforgettable confusion. | O Lord o hosts, you who test the just, who probe mind and heart, let m witness the vengeance you take on them, for to you I have en 13 trusted my cause. | Sing to the Lord, praise the Lord, for he h rescued the life of the poor from the power of the wicked!
14 Cursed be the day on which I was born! May the day m 15 mother gave me birth never be blessed! | Cursed be the ma who brought the news to my father, saying, "A child, a son, h 16 been born to you!" filling him with great joy. | Let that man b like the cities which the Lord relentlessly overthrew; let hi 17 hear war cries in the morning, battle alarms at noonday, | b cause he did not dispatch me in the womb! Then my moth would have been my grave, her womb confining me forever.
18 Why did I come forth from the womb, to see sorrow and pai to end my days in shame?

III. ORACLES IN THE LAST YEARS OF JERUSALEM

1 Fate of Sedecia and Jerusalem The message which can 21—24: Oracles delivered by Jeremia about 588, dealing with thos Judean kings and others who were responsible for the first deportatio of Judeans in 598. The oracles were arranged chronologically by a editor.

to Jeremia from the Lord when king Sedecia sent him Phassur, son of Melchia, and the priest Sophonia, son of Maasia, with 2 this request: Inquire for us of the Lord, because Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, is attacking us. Perhaps the Lord will deal with us according to all his wonderful works, so that he will 3 withdraw from us. | But Jeremia answered them: This is what 4 you shall report to Sedecia: | Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: I will turn back in your hands the weapons with which you intend to fight the king of Babylon and the Chaldeans who besiege you outside the walls. These weapons I will pile up in 5 the midst of this city, and I myself will fight against you with outstretched hand and mighty arm, in anger, and wrath, and 6 great rage! I will strike the inhabitants of this city, both man 7 and beast; they shall die in a great pestilence. After that, says the Lord, I will hand over Sedecia, king of Juda, and his ministers and the people in this city who survive pestilence, sword, and famine, into the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, into the hands of their enemies and those who seek their lives.
He shall strike them with the edge of the sword, without quarter, 8 without pity or mercy. | And to this people you shall say: Thus says the Lord: See, I am giving you a choice between life and 9 death. Whoever remains in this city shall die by the sword or 10 famine or pestilence. But whoever leaves and surrenders to the besieging Chaldeans shall live and have his life as booty. For I have turned against this city, for its woe and not for its good, says the Lord. It shall be given into the power of the king of Babylon who shall burn it with fire.

11 Oracles regarding the Kings To the royal house of Juda: 12 Hear the word of the Lord, | O house of David! Thus says the Lord: Each morning dispense justice, rescue the oppressed from the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury break out like fire which burns without being quenched, because of the evil of your deeds.
13 | Beware! I am against you, Valley-site, Rock of the Plain, says the Lord. You who say, "Who will attack us, who can pene-14 trate our retreats?" | I will punish you, says the Lord, as your deeds deserve! I will kindle a fire in its forest that shall devour all its surroundings.

22

1 The Lord told me this: Go down to the palace of the king of 2 Juda and there deliver this message: You shall say: Listen to the word of the Lord, king of Juda, who sit on the throne of David, you, your ministers, and your people that enter by these 3 gates! | Thus says the Lord: Do what is right and just. Rescue the victim from the hand of his oppressor. Do not wrong or oppress the resident alien, the orphan, or the widow, and do not 4 shed innocent blood in this place. If you carry out these commands, kings who succeed to the throne of David will continue to enter the gates of this palace, riding in chariots or 5 mounted on horses, with their ministers, and their people. But if you do not obey these commands, I swear by myself, says the 6 Lord: this palace shall become rubble. For thus says the Lord concerning the palace of the king of Juda: Though you be to me like Galaad, like the peak of Lebanon, I will turn you into a 7 waste, a city uninhabited. | Against you I will send destroyers, each with his axe: they shall cut down your choice cedars, and cast them into the fire.
8 Many people will pass by this city and ask one another: 9 "Why has the Lord done this to so great a city?" | And the answer will be given: "Because they have deserted their covenant with the Lord, their God, by worshiping and serving strange gods."

10 Joachaz Weep not for him who is dead, mourn not for him!
Weep rather for him who is going away; never again will he see the land of his birth.
11 Thus says the Lord concerning Sellum, son of Josia, king of Juda, who succeeded his father as king. He has left this place 12 never to return. Rather, he shall die in the place where they exiled him; this land he shall not see again.

13 Joakim Woe to him who builds his house on wrong, his 14 gives him no wages. | Who says, "I will build myself a spacious house, with airy rooms," who cuts out windows for it, panels it 15 with cedar, and paints it with vermillion. | Must you prove your rank among kings by competing with them in cedar? Did not your father eat and drink? He did what was right and just, 16 and it went well with him. | Because he dispensed justice to the weak and the poor, it went well with him. Is this not true knowl-17 edge of me? says the Lord. | But your eyes and heart are set on nothing except on your own gain, on shedding innocent blood, on practicing oppression and extortion.

18 Therefore, thus says the Lord concerning Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: They shall not lament him, "Alas! my brother";
"Alas! sister." They shall not lament him, "Alas, Lord! alas, 19 Majesty!" | The burial of an ass shall he be given, dragged forth and cast out beyond the gates of Jerusalem.

voice; cry out from Abarim, for all your lovers are crushed. | not listen." This has been your way from your youth, not to 22 listen to my voice. | The wind shall shepherd all your shepherds, your lovers shall go into exile. Surely then you shall be ashamed and confounded because of all your wickedness. | 23 You who dwell on Lebanon, who nest in the cedars, how you shall groan when pains come upon you, like the pangs of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, says the Lord, if you, Conia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, are a signet ring on my right hand, I will snatch you from 22, 18: Jeremia cites some of the stereotyped mourning expressions.

22, 19: How was this prediction fulfilled since 4 Kgs 24, 5 states that the king was given the ordinary royal burial? The common hypothesis is that Nabuchodonosor may have disgracefully profaned his tomb. Another hypothesis is: Jeremia meant that the joy of the people for the death of this cruel king was equivalent to "the burial of an ass."

22, 20-22: Jeremia poetically addresses Jerusalem to scale the highest peaks and gaze on Juda's leaders ("lovers," "shepherds").

22, 23: Lebanon: Jerusalem still stands as stoutly as Lebanon in 598 B.C., but its ruin is near (see vv. 6-7).

1 Messianic Reign Woe to the shepherds who mislead an 2 scatter the flock of my pasture, says the Lord. Therefore, thu says the Lord, the God of Israel, against the shepherds wh shepherd my people: You have scattered my sheep and drive them away. You have not cared for them, but I will tak 3 care to punish your evil deeds. I myself will gather the remnan of my flock from all the lands to which I have driven them an bring them back to their meadow; there they shall increase an 4 multiply. I will appoint shepherds for them who will shepher them so that they need no longer fear and tremble; and non shall be missing, says the Lord.
5 Behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I wil raise up a righteous shoot to David; as king he shall reign an govern wisely, he shall do what is just and right in the land.
6 In his days Juda shall be saved, Israel shall dwell in security
This is the name they give him: "The Lord our justice." 7 Therefore, the days will come, says the Lord, when they shal no longer say, "As the Lord lives, who brought the Israelite 23, 3: Remnant: for the basic meaning, see Am 5, 15 n.

23, 5-6: A righteous shoot to David: since Jeremia sees the dynast ending just before or just after 587, he is here most probably speakin directly and literally of a personal Messia to come in the indefinit future. The Messia will be a true king ("The Lord our justice" v. 6) Christ's spiritual kingship went beyond the pen of Jeremia.

of the north"—and from all the lands to which I banished them; they shall again live on their own land.

9 The False Prophets Concerning the prophets: My heart within me is broken, my bones all tremble; I am like a man who is drunk, overcome by wine, because of the Lord, because of his 10 holy words. | With adulterers the land is filled; on their account the land mourns, the pasture ranges are seared. Theirs is an evil
11 course, theirs is unjust power. | Both prophet and priest are godless! In my very house I find their wickedness, says the Lord.
12 | Hence their way shall become for them slippery ground. In the darkness they shall lose their footing, and fall headlong; evil I will bring upon them: the year of their punishment, says
13 the Lord. | Among Samaria's prophets I saw unseemly deeds: they prophesied by Baal and led my people Israel astray. |
14 But among Jerusalem's prophets I saw deeds still more shocking: adultery, living in lies, siding with the wicked, so that no one turns from evil: to me they are all like Sodom, its citizens like Gomorra.

15 Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts against the prophets: Behold, I will give them wormwood to eat, and poison to drink; for from Jerusalem's prophets ungodliness has gone forth into the whole land.

16 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Listen not to the words of your prophets, who fill you with emptiness; visions of their own fancy
17 they speak, not from the mouth of the Lord. | They say to those who despise the word of the Lord, "Peace shall be yours"; and to everyone who walks in hardness of heart, "No evil shall over-
18 take you." | Now, who has stood in the council of the Lord, to see him and to hear his word? Who has heeded his word, so as 19 to announce it? | See, the storm of the Lord! His wrath breaks forth in a whirling storm that bursts upon the heads of the 20 wicked. | The anger of the Lord shall not abate until he has done and fulfilled what he has determined in his heart. When
21 the time comes, you shall fully understand. | I did not send these prophets, yet they ran; I did not speak to them, yet they proph-
22 esied. | Had they stood in my council, and did they but proclaim to my people my words, they would have brought them back
23 from evil ways and from their wicked deeds. | Am I a God
24 near at hand only, says the Lord, and not a God far off? | Can a man hide in secret without my seeing him? says the Lord. Do I not fill both heaven and earth? says the Lord.

25 I have heard the prophets who prophesy lies in my name 26 say, "I had a dream! I had a dream!" | How long will this continue? Is my name in the hearts of the prophets who prophesy 27 lies and their own deceitful fancies? By their dreams which they recount to each other, they think to make my people forget 28 my name, just as their fathers forgot my name for Baal. Let the prophet who has a dream recount his dream; let him who has my word speak my word truthfully!
29 What has straw to do with the wheat? says the Lord. | Is not my word like fire, says the Lord, like a hammer shattering rocks.
30 Therefore I am against the prophets, says the Lord, who steal 31 my words from each other. Yes, I am against the prophets, says 32 the Lord, who borrow speeches to pronounce oracles. Yes, I am against the prophets who prophesy lying dreams, says the Lord and who lead my people astray by recounting their lies and by their empty boasting. From me they have no mission or command, and they do this people no good at all, says the Lord.
33 And when this people, or a prophet or a priest asks you,
"What is the burden of the Lord?" you shall answer, "You are 34 the burden, and I cast you off, says the Lord." If a prophet or a priest or anyone else mentions "the burden of the Lord," I will 35 punish that man and his house. | Thus you shall ask, when speaking to one another, "What answer did the Lord give?" or 36 "What did the Lord say?" But the burden of the Lord you shall mention no more. For each man his own word becomes the burden so that you pervert the words of the living God, the 37 Lord of hosts, our God. | Thus shall you ask the prophet:
"What answer did the Lord give?" or, "What did the Lord 38 say?" | But if you ask about "the burden of the Lord," then thus says the Lord: Because you use this phrase, "the burden of 39 the Lord," though I forbade you to use it, | therefore I will lift you on high and cast you from my presence, you and the city 40 which I gave to you and your fathers. And I will bring upon you eternal reproach, eternal, unforgettable shame.

1 The Two Baskets of Figs The Lord showed me two baskets of figs placed before the temple of the Lord.—This was 24, 1-10: The main point of the parable is: God's loyal remnant will be the people purified of their faults in the exile of 598 ("the good figs"), but those remaining in Juda with Sedecia and those going to Egypt will be the rejected ones ("the bad figs").

after Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, had exiled from Jerusalem Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, and the princes of Juda, the artisans and the skilled workers, and brought 2 them to Babylon.—One basket contained excellent figs, the early-ripening kind. But the other basket contained very bad 3 figs, so bad they could not be eaten. Then the Lord said to me: What do you see, Jeremia? "Figs," I replied; "the good ones are very good, but the bad ones very bad, so bad they cannot be 4 eaten." Thereupon this word of the Lord came to me: Thus says 5 the Lord, the God of Israel: Like these good figs, even so will I regard with favor Juda's exiles whom I sent away from this 6 place into the land of the Chaldeans. I will look after them for their good, and bring them back to this land, to build them up, not to tear them down; to plant them, not to pluck them out.
7 I will give them a heart with which to understand that I am the Lord. They shall be my people and I will be their God, for they 8 shall return to me with their whole heart. And like the figs that are bad, so bad they cannot be eaten—yes, thus says the Lord—even so will I treat Sedecia, king of Juda, and his princes, the remnant of Jerusalem remaining in this land and those who 9 have settled in the land of Egypt. I will make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, a reproach and a by-word, a taunt and a curse, in all the places to which I will drive 10 them. I will send upon them the sword, famine, and pestilence, until they have disappeared from the land which I gave them and their fathers.

1 Seventy Years of Exile The word that came to Jeremia concerning all the people of Juda, in the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda (the first year of Nabuchodonosor, 2 king of Babylon). This word the prophet Jeremia spoke to all 3 the people of Juda and all the citizens of Jerusalem: Since the thirteenth year of Josia, son of Amon, king of Juda, to this day —these three and twenty years—the word of the Lord has come to me and I spoke to you untiringly, but you would not listen.
4 Though you refused to listen or pay heed, the Lord has sent you
5 without fail all his servants the prophets | with this message: Turn back, each of you, from your evil way and from your evil deeds; then you shall remain in the land which the Lord gave 6 you and your fathers, from of old and forever. Do not follow strange gods to serve and adore them, lest you provoke me with 7 your handiwork, and I bring evil upon you. But you would not listen to me, says the Lord, and so you provoked me with your 8 handiwork to your own harm. | Hence, thus says the Lord of 9 hosts: Since you would not listen to my words, | lo! I will send for and fetch all the tribes of the north, says the Lord (and I will send to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, my servant); I will bring them against this land, against its inhabitants, and against all these neighboring nations. I will doom them, making them an object of horror, of ridicule, of everlasting reproach.

10 Among them I will bring to an end the song of joy and the song of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the 11 bride, the sound of the millstone and the light of the lamp. This whole land shall be a ruin and a desert. Seventy years these 12 nations shall be enslaved to the king of Babylon; but when the seventy years have elapsed, I will punish the king of Babylon and the nation and the land of the Chaldeans for their guilt, says the Lord. Their land I will turn into everlasting desert.
13 Against that land I will fulfill all the words I have spoken against it, all that is written in this book, which Jeremia proph-14 esied against all the nations. They also shall be enslaved to great nations and mighty kings, and thus I will repay them according to their own deeds and according to their own handiwork.

15 The Cup of Judgment on the Nations For thus said the Lord, the God of Israel, to me: Take this cup of foaming wine from my hand, and have all the nations to whom I will send you 16 drink it. They shall drink, and be convulsed, and go mad, be-17 cause of the sword I will send among them. I took the cup from the hand of the Lord and gave drink to all the nations to which 18 the Lord sent me: [Jerusalem, the cities of Juda, her kings and her princes, to make them a ruin and a desert, an object of ridi-19 cule and cursing, as they are today;] Pharao, king of Egypt, and 20 his servants, his princes, all the people under him, native | and foreign; all the kings of the land of Us; all the kings of the land of the Philistines: Ascalon, Gaza, Accaron, and the rem-

25, 15ff: The pagan nations will be punished by Yahweh. This notion is expressed through the metaphor of drinking wine from the cup.

23 kings of Tyre, of Sidon, and of the shores beyond the sea; Dedan and Thema and Buz, all the desert dwellers who shave their 24.25 temples; [all the kings of Arabia;] all the kings of Zamri, of 26 Elam, of the Medes; all the kings of the north, near and far, one after the other; all the kingdoms upon the face of the earth [and after them the king of Sesach shall drink].
27 Tell them: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Drink! become drunk and vomit; fall, never to rise, before the 28 sword that I will send among you! If they refuse to take the cup from your hand and drink, say to them: Thus says the Lord of 29 hosts: You must drink! | For since with this city, which is called by my name, I begin to inflict evil, how can you possibly be spared? You shall not be spared! I will call down the sword upon all who inhabit the earth, says the Lord of hosts.
30 Prophesy against them all these things and say to them: The Lord roars from on high, from his holy dwelling he raises his voice; mightily he roars over the range, a shout like that of 31 vintagers over the grapes. | To all who inhabit the earth to its very ends the uproar spreads; for the Lord has an indictment against the nations, he is to pass judgment upon all mankind: 32 the godless shall be given to the sword, says the Lord. | Thus says the Lord of hosts: Lo! calamity stalks from nation to nation; a great storm is unleashed from the ends of the earth.
33 On that day, those whom the Lord has slain will be strewn from one end of the earth to the other. None will mourn them, none will gather them for burial; they shall lie like dung on the field.
34 Howl, you shepherds, and wail! roll in the dust, leaders of the flock! The time for your slaughter has come; like choice rams 35 you shall fall. | There is no flight for the shepherds, no escape
36 for the leaders of the flock. | Listen! Wailing from the shepherds, howling by the leaders of the flock! For the Lord lays 37 waste their grazing place, | desolate lie the peaceful pastures;
38 | the lion leaves his lair, and their land is made desolate by the sweeping sword, by the burning wrath of the Lord.

1 Jeremia Threatened with Death In the beginning of the reign of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, this message came 25, 26: Sesach: Babylon.

26, 1: The beginning of the reign: a technical expression for the time between a king's accession to the throne and the beginning of his first official (calendar) year as king. Joakim's first regnal year was 608 B.C.

2 from the Lord: Thus says the Lord: Stand in the court of the house of the Lord and speak to the people of all the cities of Juda who come to worship in the house of the Lord; whatever 3 I command you, tell them, and omit nothing. Perhaps they will listen and turn back, each from his evil way, so that I may repent of the evil I have planned to inflict upon them for their 4 evil deeds. Say to them: Thus says the Lord: If you disobey 5 me, not living according to the law I placed before you | and not listening to the words of my servants the prophets, whom 6 I send you constantly though you do not obey them, I will treat this house like Silo, and make this the city which all nations of the earth shall refer to when cursing another.
7 Now the priests, the prophets, and all the people heard 8 Jeremia speak these words in the house of the Lord. When Jeremia finished speaking all that the Lord bade him speak to all the people, the priests and prophets laid hold of him, 9 crying, "You must be put to death! | Why do you prophesy in the name of the Lord: 'This house shall be like Silo,' and 'This city shall be desolate and deserted'?" And all the people gathered about Jeremia in the house of the Lord.
10 When the princes of Juda were informed of these things, they came up from the king's palace to the house of the Lord 11 and held court at the New Gate of the house of the Lord. The priests and prophets said to the princes and to all the people,
"This man deserves death; he has prophesied against this city, 12 as you have heard with your own ears." Jeremia gave this answer to the princes and all the people: "It was the Lord who sent me to prophesy against this house and city all that you have 13 heard. Now, therefore, reform your ways and your deeds; listen to the voice of the Lord your God, so that the Lord will 14 repent of the evil with which he threatens you. As for me, I am in your hands; do with me what you think good and right.
15 But mark well: if you put me to death, it is innocent blood you bring on yourselves, on this city and its citizens. For in truth it was the Lord who sent me to you, to speak all these things for you to hear.
16 Thereupon the princes and all the people said to the priests and the prophets, "This man does not deserve death; it is in 17 the name of the Lord, our God, that he speaks to us." At this, some of the elders of the land came forward and said to all the 18 people assembled, "Michea of Moreseth used to prophesy in the days of Ezechia, king of Juda, and he told all the people of Juda: Thus says the Lord of hosts:

26, 18: The quotation is from Mi 3, 12.

Sion shall become a plowed field, Jerusalem a heap of ruins, and the temple mount a forest ridge.
19 Did Ezechia, king of Juda, and all Juda condemn him to death? Did they not rather fear the Lord and entreat the favor of the Lord, so that he repented of the evil with which he had threatened them? But we are on the point of committing this great evil to our own undoing."

20 The Fate of Uria There was another man who prophesied in the name of the Lord, Uria, son of Semeia, from Cariath-jarim; he prophesied the same things against this city and land 21 as Jeremia did. When king Joakim and all his officers and princes were informed of his words, the king sought to kill 22 him. But Uria heard of it and fled in fear to Egypt. Thereupon king Joakim sent Elnathan, son of Achobor, and others with 23 him into Egypt | to bring Uria back to the king, who had him slain by the sword and his corpse cast into the common grave.
24 But Ahicam, son of Saphan, protected Jeremia, so that he was not handed over to the people to be put to death.

1 Serve Babylon or Perish [In the beginning of the reign of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda,] . . . this message came 2 to Jeremia from the Lord: | Thus said the Lord to me: Make for yourself bands and yoke bars and put them over your 3 shoulders. Send to the kings of Edom, of Moab, of the Ammonites, of Tyre, and of Sidon, through the ambassadors 4 who have come to Jerusalem to Sedecia, king of Juda, | and charge them thus: Tell your masters: Thus says the Lord of 5 hosts, the God of Israel: It was I who made the earth, and man and beast on the face of the earth, by my great power, with my outstretched arm; and I can give them to whomever I think fit.
6 Now I have given all these lands into the hand of Nabu-chodonosor, king of Babylon, my servant; even the beasts of 7 the field I have given him for his use. All nations shall serve him and his son and his grandson, until the time of his land, too, shall come. Then it in turn shall serve great nations and 8 mighty kings. Meanwhile, if any nation or kingdom will not serve Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, or will not bend its neck under the yoke of the king of Babylon, I will punish that 27, 1: There are different opinions among experts on the readings of this verse and 28, 1.

nation with sword, famine, and pestilence, says the Lord, until I give them into his hand.

9 You, however, must not listen to your prophets, to your diviners and dreamers, to your soothsayers and sorcerers, who 10 say to you, "You need not serve the king of Babylon." For they prophesy lies to you, in order to drive you far from your 11 land, to make me banish you so that you will perish. The people that submits its neck to the yoke of the king of Babylon to serve him I will leave in peace on its own land, says the Lord, to till it and dwell in it.

12 To Sedecia, king of Juda, I spoke the same words: Submit your necks to the yoke of the king of Babylon; serve him and his 13 people, so that you may live. Why should you and your people die by sword, famine, and pestilence, with which the Lord has threatened the nation that will not serve the king of Baby-14 lon? Do not listen to the words of those prophets who say, "You need not serve the king of Babylon," for they prophesy 15 lies to you. I did not send them, says the Lord, but they prophesy falsely in my name, with the result that I must banish you, and you will perish, you and the prophets who are prophesying to you.

16 To the priests and to all the people I spoke as follows: Thus says the Lord: Do not listen to the words of your prophets who prophesy to you: "The vessels of the house of the Lord will be brought back from Babylon soon now," for they prophesy
17 lies to you. | Do not listen to them! Serve the king of Babylon 18 that you may live; else this city will become a heap of ruins. If they were prophets, if the word of the Lord were with them, they would intercede with the Lord of hosts, that the vessels which remain in the house of the Lord and in the palace of the king of Juda and in Jerusalem might not be taken to Babylon.
19 For thus says the Lord of hosts concerning the pillars, the bronze sea, the stands, and the rest of the vessels that remain in 20 this city, | which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, did not take when he exiled Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, from Jerusalem to Babylon, along with all the nobles of Juda
21 and Jerusalem— | yes, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, concerning the vessels that remain in the house of the 22 Lord, in the palace of the king of Juda, and in Jerusalem: To Babylon they shall be brought, and there they shall remain until the day I look for them, says the Lord; then I will bring them back and restore them to this place.

27, 9: The pagan kings also had "prophets."

1 The Two Yokes That same year, in [the beginning of] the reign of Sedecia, king of Juda, in the fifth month of the fourth year, the prophet Anania, son of Azzur, from Gabaon, said to me in the house of the Lord in the presence of the priests and 2 all the people: "Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: 3 'I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon. Within two years I will restore to this place all the vessels of the temple of the Lord which Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, took away 4 from this place to Babylon. And I will bring back to this place Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, and all the exiles of Juda who went to Babylon,' says the Lord, 'for I will break the yoke of the king of Babylon.' "

5 The prophet Jeremia answered the prophet Anania in the presence of the priests and all the people assembled in the 6 house of the Lord, | and said: Amen! thus may the Lord do!
May he fulfill the things you have prophesied by bringing the vessels of the house of the Lord and all the exiles back from 7 Babylon to this place! But now, listen to what I am about to 8 state in your hearing and the hearing of all the people. From of old, the prophets who were before you and me prophesied war, woe, and pestilence against many lands and mighty 9 kingdoms. But the prophet who prophesies peace is recognized as truly sent by the Lord only when his prophetic prediction is fulfilled.

10 Thereupon the prophet Anania took the yoke from the neck 11 of the prophet Jeremia, broke it, | and said in the presence of all the people: "Thus says the Lord: 'Even so, within two years I will break the yoke of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, from off the neck of all the nations.' " At that, the prophet Jeremia went away.

12 Some time after the prophet Anania had broken the yoke from off the neck of the prophet Jeremia, the word of the Lord 13 came to Jeremia: | Go tell Anania this: Thus says the Lord: 14 By breaking a wooden yoke, you forge an iron yoke! For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: A yoke of iron I will place on the necks of all these nations serving Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and they shall serve him; even the beasts of the field I give him.

15 To the prophet Anania the prophet Jeremia said: Hear this, Anania! The Lord has not sent you, and you have raised false 16 confidence in this people. For this, says the Lord, I will dispatch you from the face of the earth; this very year you shall die, 17 because you have preached rebellion against the Lord. That same year, in the seventh month, Anania the prophet died.

1 Letter to the Exiles in Babylon This is the contents of the letter which the prophet Jeremia sent from Jerusalem to the remaining elders among the exiles, to the priests, the prophets, and all the people who were exiled by Nabuchodonosor from 2 Jerusalem to Babylon. This was after king Jechonia and the queen mother, the courtiers, the princes of Juda and Jerusalem, the artisans and the skilled workmen had left Jerusalem.
3 Delivered in Babylon by Elasa, son of Saphan, and by Gamaria, son of Helcia, whom Sedecia, king of Juda, sent to the king of Babylon, the letter read:
4 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, to all the exiles 5 whom I exiled from Jerusalem to Babylon: Build houses to dwell 6 in; plant gardens, and eat their fruits. Take wives and beget sons and daughters; find wives for your sons and give your daughters husbands, so that they may bear sons and daughters. There you 7 must increase in number, not decrease. Promote the welfare of the city to which I have exiled you; pray for it to the Lord, for upon its welfare depends your own.
10 Thus says the Lord: Only after seventy years have elapsed for Babylon will I visit you and fulfill for you my promise to bring 11 you back to this place. For I know well the plans I have in mind for you, says the Lord, plans for your welfare, not for woe!
12 plans to give you a future full of hope. When you call me, when 13 you go to pray to me, I will listen to you. When you look for me, you will find me. Yes, when you seek me with all your heart, | 14 you will find me with you, says the Lord, and I will change your lot; I will gather you together from all the nations and all the places to which I have banished you, says the Lord, and bring you back to the place from which I have exiled you.
16 Thus says the Lord concerning the king who sits on David's throne, and all the people who remain in this city, your brethren 17 who did not go with you into exile; thus says the Lord of hosts: 18 I am sending against them sword, famine and pestilence. I will make them like rotten figs, too bad to be eaten. I will pursue them with sword, famine, and pestilence, and make them an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth, of malediction, astonishment, ridicule, and reproach to all the nations among 19 which I will banish them. For they did not listen to my words, 29, 3: Elasa: brother of Ahicam (26, 24)? Jeremia sent a letter to the deportees of 598 through messengers whom king Sedecia dispatched from Jerusalem to Babylon, perhaps to pay tribute.

29, 10: Seventy years: see 25, 11 n.

says the Lord, though I kept sending them my servants the prophets, only to have them go unheeded, says the Lord.

20 You, now, listen to the word of the Lord, all you exiles 15 whom I sent away from Jerusalem to Babylon. As for your saying, "The Lord has raised up for us prophets here in Baby-8 lon"—thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Do not let yourselves be deceived by the prophets and diviners who are among you; do not listen to those among you who dream 9 dreams. For they prophesy lies to you in my name; I did not send 21 them, says the Lord. This is what the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, has to say about those who prophesy lies to you in my name, Achab, son of Colia, and Sedecia, son of Maasia: I am handing them over to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, who 22 will slay them before your eyes. All the exiles of Juda in Babylon will pattern a curse after them: "May the Lord make you like Sedecia and Achab, whom the king of Babylon roasted in the 23 flames." For they are criminals in Israel, committing adultery with their neighbors' wives, and alleging in my name things I did not command. I know, I am witness, says the Lord.

24 The False Prophet Semeia Say this to Semeia, the Ne-25 helamite: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Because you sent letters on your own authority to all the people of Jerusalem, to all the priests and to Sophonia, the priest, son 26 of Maasia, with this message: "The Lord has appointed you priest in place of the priest Joiada, so that there may be police officers in the house of the Lord, to take action against all madmen and those who pose as prophets, by putting them into 27 the stocks or the pillory. Why, then, do you not rebuke Jeremia 28 of Anathoth who poses as a prophet among you? For he sent us in Babylon this message: It will be a long time; build houses to live in; plant gardens and eat their fruits. . . ."

29 When the priest Sophonia read this letter to the prophet, 30.31 | the word of the Lord came to Jeremia: Send the message to all the exiles: Thus says the Lord concerning Semeia, the Nehelamite: Because Semeia prophesies to you without a mis-
32 sion from me, and raises false confidence, | says the Lord, I will therefore punish Semeia, the Nehelamite, and his offspring. None of them shall survive among this people to see the good I will do to this people, says the Lord, because he preached rebellion against the Lord.

29, 26-29: The words of Jeremia to the false prophet Semeia are not fully preserved in the current Hebrew text, as is seen in the incomplete sentence of this translation (vv. 25-28).

1 The Restoration The following message came to Jeremia
2 from the Lord: | Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Write 3 all the words I have spoken to you in a book. For behold, the days will come, says the Lord, when I will change the lot of my people (of Israel and Juda, says the Lord), and bring them back to the land which I gave to their fathers; they shall have it as their possession.
4 These are the words which the Lord spoke to Israel and to 5 Juda: thus says the Lord: A cry of dismay we hear; fear reigns,
6 not peace. | Inquire, and see: since when do men bear children?
Why, then, do I see all these men, with their hands on their loins like women in childbirth? Why have all their faces turned 7 deathly pale? | How mighty is that day—none like it! A time of distress for Jacob, though he shall be saved from it.
8 On that day, says the Lord of hosts, "I will break his yoke from off your necks and snap your bonds." Strangers shall no 9 longer enslave them; instead, they shall serve the Lord, their God, and David, their king, whom I will raise up for them.
10 But you, my servant Jacob, fear not, says the Lord, be not dismayed, O Israel! Behold, I will deliver you from the far-off land, your descendants, from their land of exile; Jacob shall 11 again find rest, shall be tranquil and undisturbed, | for I am with you, says the Lord, to deliver you. I will make an end of all the nations among which I have scattered you; but of you I will not make an end. I will chastise you as you deserve, I will not let you go unpunished.
12 For thus says the Lord: Incurable is your wound, grievous 13 your bruise; | there is none to plead your cause, no remedy for 14 your running sore, no healing for you. | All your lovers have forgotten you, they do not seek you. I struck you as an enemy 15 would strike, punished you cruelly; | why cry out over your wound? your pain is without relief. Because of your great guilt, your numerous sins, I have done this to you.
16 Yet all who devour you shall be devoured, all your enemies shall go into exile. All who plunder you shall be plundered, all 30, 1—31, 22: Scholars call this section Jeremia's "book of consolation." While king Josia of Juda was trying to conquer the northern kingdom, hope ran high for the end of their exile which began in 722-21. Jeremia is delivering this oracle in the first phase of his ministry, i.e., between 627 and 609, but closer to the latter date.

30, 9: Most experts attribute this Messianic text to Jeremia. This passage may be interpreted as Jeremia directly and literally speaking of the future Messia with the name of David. But others believe that this was immediately fulfilled in Zorobabel after the exile, and then in the Messia. Christ.

17 who pillage you I will hand over to pillage. | For I will restore you to health; of your wounds I will heal you, says the Lord.
"The outcast" they have called you, "with no avenger." 18 Thus says the Lord: See! I will restore the tents of Jacob, his dwellings I will pity; city shall be rebuilt upon hill, and 19 palace restored as it was. | From them will resound songs of praise, the laughter of happy men. I will make them not few, 20 but many; they will not be tiny, for I will glorify them. | His sons shall be as of old, his assembly before me shall stand firm; 21 I will punish all his oppressors. | His leader shall be one of his own, and his rulers shall come from his kin. When I summon him, he shall approach me; how else should one take the deadly 22 risk of approaching me? says the Lord. | You shall be my people, and I will be your God.
23 See, the storm of the Lord! His wrath breaks forth in a 24 whirling storm that bursts upon the heads of the wicked. | The anger of the Lord will not abate until he has done and fulfilled what he has determined in his heart. When the time comes, you will fully understand.

1 Good News of the Return At that time, says the Lord, I will be the God of all the tribes of Israel, and they shall be 2 my people. | Thus says the Lord: The people that escaped the sword have found favor in the desert. As Israel comes forward 3 to be given his rest, | the Lord appears to him from afar: with age-old love I have loved you; so I have kept my mercy toward 4 you. | Again I will restore you, and you shall be rebuilt, O virgin Israel; carrying your festive tambourines, you shall go 5 forth dancing with the merrymakers. | Again you shall plant vineyards on the mountains of Samaria; those who plant them 6 shall enjoy the fruits. | Yes, a day will come when the watchmen will call out on Mount Ephraim: "Rise up, let us go to Sion, to the Lord, our God."

7 The Road of Return For thus says the Lord: Shout with joy for Jacob, exult at the head of the nations; proclaim your praise and say: The Lord has delivered his people, the remnant 8 of Israel. | Behold, I will bring them back from the land of the 30, 21: One of the future rulers of the restored kingdom. This is not a Messianic text.

31, 2: The people that escaped the sword: exiles who were not killed but deported; they have "found favor in the desert." The prophet alludes to the first desert wandering of Israel (Ex 16ff) in which the people found the Lord. His rest: the land of promise.

north; I will gather them from the ends of the world, with the blind and the lame in their midst, the mothers and those with 9 child; they shall return as an immense throng. | They departed in tears, but I will console them and guide them; I will lead them to brooks of water, on a level road, so that none shall stumble.
10 For I am a father to Israel, Ephraim is my first-born. | Hear the word of the Lord, O nations, proclaim it on distant coasts, and say: He who scattered Israel, now gathers them together, he 11 guards them as a shepherd his flock. | The Lord shall ransom
Jacob, he shall redeem him from the hand of his conqueror. | 12 Shouting, they shall mount the heights of Sion, they shall come streaming to the Lord's blessings: the grain, the wine, and the oil, the sheep and the oxen; they themselves shall be like watered 13 gardens, never again shall they languish. | Then the virgins shall make merry and dance, and young men and old as well.
I will turn their mourning into joy, I will console and gladden 14 them after their sorrows. | I will lavish choice portions upon the priests, and my people shall be filled with my blessings, says the Lord.

15 End of Rachel's Mourning Thus says the Lord: In Rama is heard the sound of moaning, of bitter weeping! Rachel mourns her children, she refuses to be consoled because her children are no more.
16 Thus says the Lord: Cease your cries of mourning, wipe the tears from your eyes. The sorrow you have shown shall have its reward, says the Lord, they shall return from the enemy's 17 land. | There is hope for your future, says the Lord; your sons shall return to their own borders.
18 I hear, I hear Ephraim pleading: You chastised me, and I am chastened; I was an untamed calf. If you allow me, I will return, 19 for you are the Lord, my God. | I turn in repentance; I have come to myself, I strike my breast; I blush with shame, I bear 20 the disgrace of my youth. | Is Ephraim not my favored son, the child in whom I delight? Often as I threaten him, I still remember him with favor; my heart stirs for him, I must show him mercy, says the Lord.

21 Summons to Return Home Set up road markers, put up guideposts; turn your attention to the highway, the road by 31, 15: Jeremia poetically expresses sorrow for the exiled northern kingdom by the description of Rachel, the ancestress of Ephraim (the principal northern tribe), weeping for "her children" at her tomb at Rama. Mt 2, 18 sees in this verse the same psychological situation repeated in the slaughter of the innocents.

which you went. Turn back, O virgin Israel, turn back to these 22 your cities. | How long will you continue to stray, rebellious daughter? The Lord has created a new thing upon the earth:
the woman must encompass the man with devotion.
23 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: When I change their lot in the land of Juda and her cities, they shall again repeat this greeting: "May the Lord bless you, holy 24 mountain, abode of justice!" Juda and all her cities, the farmers 25 and those who lead the flock, shall dwell there together. For I will refresh the weary soul; every soul that languishes I will 26 replenish. Upon this I awoke and opened my eyes; but my sleep was sweet to me.
27 The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will seed the house of Israel and the house of Juda with the seed of man and 28 the seed of beast. As I once watched over them to uproot and pull down, to destroy, to ruin, and to harm, so I will watch over 29 them to build and to plant, says the Lord. In those days they shall no longer say, "The fathers ate unripe grapes, and the 30 children's teeth are set on edge," | but through his own fault only shall anyone die: the teeth of him who eats the unripe grapes shall be set on edge.

31 The New Covenant The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and 32 the house of Juda. It will not be like the covenant I made with their fathers the day I took them by the hand to lead them forth from the land of Egypt; for they broke my covenant, and I 33 had to show myself their master, says the Lord. But this is the covenant which I will make with the house of Israel after those days, says the Lord. I will place my law within them, 31, 22: The woman must encompass the man: the northern kingdom, about which the text has been speaking since 30, 1, is personified as "the woman" who will return from exile to love Yahweh ("the man"). This conversion will be "a new thing" in comparison with Israel's past history. There are other less widely held opinions. Although the precise translation is still disputed, the Hebrew text does not speak of a virginal conception as the Vg. does. With devotion: these words are not in the Hebrew text, but added to bring out the sense.

31, 23-40: These verses have the Judean exiles in mind, and were probably written when they began their exile in 587 B.C.

31, 29: This proverb expressed the traditional teaching on collective responsibility, i.e., children suffer for the sins of their parents or of their tribe or nation. But the new covenant between God and the newly restored Israel of the future will stress personal or individual responsibility (vv. 30-34). Ezechiel will continue and stress individual responsibility. See Ez 18, 1-32 n.

and write it upon their hearts; I will be their God, and they 34 shall be my people. No longer will they have need to teach their friends and kinsmen how to know the Lord. All, from least to greatest, shall know me, says the Lord, for I will forgive their evildoing and remember their sin no more.

35 Certainty of God's Promise Thus says the Lord, | He who gives the sun to light the day, moon and stars to light the night; who stirs up the sea till its waves roar, whose name is 36 Lord of hosts: | If ever these natural laws give way in spite of me, says the Lord, then shall the race of Israel cease as a nation 37 before me forever. | Thus says the Lord: If the heavens on high can be measured, or the foundations below the earth be sounded, then will I cast off the whole race of Israel because of all they have done, says the Lord.

38 Rebuilding of Jerusalem The days are coming, says the Lord, when the city shall be rebuilt as the Lord's, from the 39 Tower of Hananeel to the Corner Gate. The measuring line shall be stretched from there straight to the hill Garbe and then 40 turn to Goa. The whole valley of corpses and ashes, all the slopes toward the Cedron Valley, as far as the corner of the Horse Gate at the east, shall be holy to the Lord. Never again shall the city be rooted up or thrown down.

1 Pledge of Restoration This message came to Jeremia from the Lord in the tenth year of Sedecia, king of Juda, the 2 eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor. At that time the army of the king of Babylon was besieging Jerusalem, and the prophet Jeremia was imprisoned in the quarters of the guard, at the 3 king's palace. Sedecia, king of Juda, had imprisoned him there, remonstrating: "How dare you prophesy: Thus says the Lord:
I am handing over this city to the king of Babylon, who will 31, 33: Write it upon their hearts: the new covenant will stress the interior rather than the exterior aspects of man's relations with God. The "new covenant" (Lk 22, 20) was more of an intimate relationship than Jeremia ever suspected.

31, 34: I will forgive: another hallmark of the new covenant will be the stress on God's eagerness to forgive sins.

31, 35-37: The new covenant will last forever. See 32, 40, an "eternal covenant."

32—33: These autobiographical events took place during the siege of Jerusalem about 588.

32, 1-44: Jeremia's purchase of the land in the face of an imminent Babylonian destruction of Jerusalem, symbolized the future restoration of the city.

4 capture it. Neither shall Sedecia, king of Juda, escape the hands of the Chaldeans; rather shall he be handed over to the king of 5 Babylon. They shall meet and speak face to face, and Sedecia shall be taken to Babylon. There he shall remain, until I attend to him, says the Lord; in fighting the Chaldeans, you cannot win!"
6 This message came to me from the Lord, said Jeremia: 7 Hanameel, son of your uncle Sellum, will come to you with the offer: "Buy for yourself my field in Anathoth, since you, 8 as nearest relative, have the first right of purchase." Then, as the Lord foretold, Hanameel, my uncle's son, came to me to the quarters of the guard and said, "Please buy my field in Anathoth, in the district of Benjamin; as nearest relative, you have the first claim to possess it; make it yours." I knew this was 9 what the Lord meant, | so I bought the field in Anathoth from my cousin Hanameel, paying him the money, seventeen silver shekels.
10 When I had written and sealed the deed, called witnesses and 11 weighed out the silver on the scales, I accepted the deed of purchase, both the sealed copy, containing title and conditions, 12 and the open one. This deed of purchase I gave to Baruch, son of Neria, son of Maasia, in the presence of my cousin Hanameel and of the witnesses who had signed the deed, and before all the men of Juda who happened to be in the quarters of the guard.
13.14 In their presence I gave Baruch this charge: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Take these deeds, both the sealed and the open deed of purchase, and put them in an 15 earthen jar, so that they can be kept there a long time. For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Houses and fields and vineyards shall again be bought in this land.
16 After giving the deed of purchase to Baruch, son of Neria, 17 I prayed thus to the Lord: Ah, Lord God, you have made heaven and earth by your great might, with your outstretched 18 arm; nothing is impossible to you. You continue your kindness through a thousand generations; and you repay the fathers' guilt, even into the lap of their sons who follow them. O God, 19 great and mighty, whose name is Lord of hosts, | great in counsel, mighty in deed, whose eyes are open to all the ways of men, giving to each according to his ways, according to the fruit

32, 6-9: Jeremia was allowed a certain amount of freedom to go in and out the city to Anathoth.

32, 14: The custom of putting manuscripts in "earthen jars," was evidenced by the discovery of many Dead Sea Scrolls similarly found in earthen jars.

20 of his deeds: you have wrought signs and wonders in the land of Egypt and to this day, both in Israel and among all other 21 men, until now you have gained renown. With strong hand and outstretched arm you brought your people Israel out of the 22 land of Egypt amid signs and wonders and great terror. This land you gave them, as you had promised their fathers under 23 oath, a land flowing with milk and honey. They entered and took possession of it, but they did not listen to your voice; by your law they did not live, and what you commanded they 24 failed to do. Hence you let all these evils befall them. See, the siegeworks have arrived at this city to breach it; the city will be handed over to the Chaldeans who are attacking it, amid sword famine, and pestilence. What you threatened has happened, you 25 see it yourself; | and yet you tell me, O Lord God: Buy the field with money, call in witnesses. But the city has already been handed over to the Chaldeans!
26.27 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: I am the Lord, the God of all mankind! Is anything impossible to me.
28 | This now is what the Lord says: I will hand over this city to the Chaldeans, for Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, to take 29 The Chaldeans who are attacking it shall enter this city and set fire to it, burning it and its houses, on the roofs of which incense was burned to Baal and libations were poured out to 30 strange gods as a provocation to me. The Israelites and the Judeans from their youth have done only what is evil in my eyes the Israelites did nothing but provoke me with the works of 31 their hands, says the Lord. From the day it was built to this 32 day, this city has excited my anger and wrath, so that I must put it out of my sight for all the wickedness the Israelites and Judeans, with their kings and their princes, their priests and their prophets, the men of Juda and the citizens of Jerusalem 33 have done to provoke me. They turned their backs to me, not their faces; though I kept teaching them, they would not listen 34 to my correction. They defiled the house named after me by the 35 horrid idols they set up in it. They built high places to Baal in the Valley of Ben-Hinnom, and immolated their sons and daughters to Moloch, bringing sin upon Juda; this I never commanded them, nor did it ever enter my mind that they should practice such abominations.
36 Now, therefore, thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning this city, which as you say is handed over to the king of 37 Babylon amid sword, famine, and pestilence: Behold, I will gather them together from all the lands to which in anger

32, 35: Valley of Ben-Hinnom: see 2, 23 n.

wrath, and great rage I banish them; I will bring them back to this place and settle them here in safety. They shall be my 38 people, and I will be their God. | One heart and one way I will 39 give them, that they may fear me always, to their own good and 40 that of their children after them. I will make with them an eternal covenant, never to cease doing good to them; into their hearts I will put the fear of me, that they may never depart from 41 me. I will take delight in doing good to them: I will replant them firmly in this land, with all my heart and soul.

42 For thus says the Lord: Just as I brought upon this people all this great evil, so I will bring upon them all the good I 43 promise them. Fields shall again be bought in this land, which you call a desert, without man or beast, handed over to the 44 Chaldeans. Fields shall be bought with money, deeds written and sealed, and witnesses shall be used in the land of Benjamin, in the suburbs of Jerusalem, in the cities of Juda and of the hill country, in the cities of the foothills and of the Negeb, when I change their lot, says the Lord.

33

1 Restoration of Jerusalem The word of the Lord came to Jeremia a second time while he was still imprisoned in the 2 quarters of the guard: Thus says the Lord who made the earth
3 and gave it form and firmness, whose name is Lord: | Call to me, and I will answer you; I will tell to you things great beyond 4 reach of your knowledge. Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city and the palaces of Juda's kings, which are being destroyed in the face of siegeworks and 5 the sword: men come to battle the Chaldeans, and these houses will be filled with the corpses of those whom I slay in my anger and wrath, when I hide my face from this city for all their wickedness.

6 Behold, I will treat and assuage the city's wounds; I will 7 heal them, and reveal to them an abundance of lasting peace. I will change the lot of Juda and the lot of Israel, and rebuild 8 them as of old. I will cleanse them of all the guilt they incurred by sinning against me; all their offenses by which they sinned 9 and rebelled against me, I will forgive. Then Jerusalem shall be my joy, my praise, my glory, before all the nations of the earth, as they hear of all the good I will do among them. They shall be in fear and trembling over all the peaceful benefits I will give her.

32, 42: Everything is attributed to God according to biblical thought patterns.

10 Thus says the Lord: In this place of which you say, "How desolate it is, without man, without beast!" and in the cities of Juda, in the streets of Jerusalem that are now deserted, without man, without citizen, without beast, there shall yet be heard 11 | the cry of joy, the cry of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, the voice of the bride, the sound of those who bring thank offerings to the house of the Lord, singing, "Give thanks to the Lord of hosts, for the Lord is good; his mercy endures forever."
For I will restore this country as of old, says the Lord.
12 Thus says the Lord of hosts: In this place, now desolate, without man or beast, and in all its cities there shall again be 13 sheepfolds for the shepherds to couch their flocks. In the cities of the hill country, of the foothills, and of the Negeb, in the land of Benjamin and the suburbs of Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda, flocks will again pass under the hands of the one who counts them, says the Lord.
14 The days are coming, says the Lord, when I will fulfill the 15 promise I made to the house of Israel and Juda. In those days, in that time, I will raise up for David a just shoot; he shall do 16 what is right and just in the land. In those days Juda shall be safe and Jerusalem shall dwell secure; this is what they shall 17 call her: "The Lord our justice." | For thus says the Lord: Never shall David lack a successor on the throne of the house of 18 Israel, nor shall priests of Levi ever be lacking, to offer holocausts before me, to burn cereal offerings, and to sacrifice victims.
19 This word of the Lord also came to Jeremia: | Thus says 20 the Lord: If you can break my covenant with day, and my covenant with night, so that day and night no longer alternate 21 in sequence, then can my covenant with my servant David also be broken, so that he will not have a son to be king upon his throne, and my covenant with the priests of Levi who minister 22 to me. Like the host of heaven which cannot be numbered, and the sands of the sea which cannot be counted, I will multiply the descendants of my servant David and the Levites who minister to me.

33, 14-26: This is the longest continuous passage in the Book of Jeremia that is lacking in the Greek. It is by an inspired postexilic writer.

33, 14-16: A repetition. See 23, 5-6 n.

33, 21-22: It was not clear in the Old Testament whether the Messia was to be a priest as well as a king. See Ps 109, 4 n. The "Manual of Discipline," one of the Dead Sea Scrolls, mentions that there would be the standard royal Davidic Messia and the priestly Aaronic Messia.

23.24 This word of the Lord came to Jeremia: Have you not noticed what these people are saying: "The Lord has rejected the two tribes which he had chosen"? They spurn my people 25 as if it were no longer a nation in their eyes. | Thus says the Lord: When I have no covenant with day and night, and have 26 given no laws to heaven and earth, | then too will I reject the descendants of Jacob and of my servant David, so as not to take from his descendants rulers for the race of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. For I will change their lot and show them mercy.

IV. FALL OF JERUSALEM

1 Fate of Sedecia This word came to Jeremia from the Lord while Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his armies and the earth's kingdoms subject to him, as well as the other 2 peoples, were all attacking Jerusalem and all her cities: | Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Go to Sedecia, king of Juda, and tell him: Thus says the Lord: I am handing this city over 3 to the king of Babylon; he will destroy it with fire. Neither shall you escape his hand; rather you will be captured and fall into his hands. You shall see the king of Babylon and speak to him face to face. Then you shall be taken to Babylon.
4 But if you obey the word of the Lord, Sedecia, king of Juda, 5 then, says the Lord to you, you shall not die by the sword. You shall die in peace, and they will lament you as their lord, and burn spices for your burial as they did for your fathers, the kings who preceded you from the first; it is I who make this promise, says the Lord.
6 The prophet Jeremia told all these things to Sedecia, king of 7 Juda, in Jerusalem, | while the armies of the king of Babylon were attacking Jerusalem and the remaining cities of Juda, Lachis, and Azeca, since these alone were left of the fortified cities of Juda.

8 The Pact Broken This is the word that came to Jeremia

34, 7: Nabuchodonosor was besieging Lachis and Azeca, the last of the fortified towns southwest of Jerusalem lest, through these cities, Egyptian aid come to Jerusalem. Between 1932 and 1938 archeologists found the famous "Lachish Ostraca," i.e., twenty-one letters written on pieces of pottery dated 598 to 588 B.C. The letters are largely correspondence between an officer and his superior officer. Both Lachis and Azeca are mentioned.

34, 8-22: During the Babylonian siege, the slaves were freed, most likely because of needed manpower in accordance with the law (Dt 15, 12-15). V. 11 says that they went back on their word.

from the Lord after king Sedecia had made an agreement with all the people in Jerusalem to issue an edict of emancipation.
9 Everyone was to free his Hebrew slaves, male and female, so that no one should hold a man of Juda, his brother, in slavery.
10 All the princes and the others who entered the agreement consented to set free their male and female servants, so that they should be slaves no longer. But though they agreed and freed 11 them, | afterward they took back their male and female slaves whom they had set free and again forced them into service.
12.13 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: The day I brought your fathers out of the land of Egypt, out of the place where they were 14 slaves, I made this covenant with them: Every seventh year each of you shall set free his Hebrew brother who has sold himself to you; six years he shall serve you, but then you shall let him go free. Your fathers, however, did not heed me or obey 15 me. Today you indeed repented and did what is right in my eyes proclaiming the emancipation of your brethren and making an agreement before me in the house that is named after me.
16 But then you changed your mind and profaned my name by taking back your male and female slaves to whom you had given their freedom; you forced them once more into slavery.
17 Therefore, thus says the Lord: You did not obey me by proclaiming your neighbors and kinsmen free. I now proclaim you free, says the Lord, for the sword, famine, and pestilence. I will make you an object of horror to all the kingdoms of the earth.
18 The men who violated my covenant and did not observe the terms of the agreement which they made before me, I will make like the calf which they cut in two, between whose two 19 parts they passed. The princes of Juda and of Jerusalem, the courtiers, the priests, and the common people, who passed 20 between the parts of the calf, | I will hand over, all of them, to their enemies, to those who seek their lives: their corpses shall be food for the birds of the air and the beasts of the field.
21 Sedecia, too, king of Juda, and his princes, I will hand over to their enemies, to those who seek their lives, to the soldiers of the king of Babylon who have at present withdrawn from 22 you. I will give the command, says the Lord, and bring them back to this city. They shall attack and capture it, and destroy it with fire; the cities of Juda I will turn into a desert where no man dwells.

34, 18: See Gn 15, 10-17 for this ceremony. Archeological inscriptions testify to these sacrificial rites.

35

1 The Faithful Rechabites This word came to Jeremia from the Lord in the days of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: 2 Approach the Rechabites and speak to them; bring them into the house of the Lord, to one of the rooms, and give them wine 3 to drink. So I went and brought Jezonia, son of Jeremia, son of Habsania, his brothers and all his sons, the whole company of 4 the Rechabites, | into the house of the Lord, to the room of the sons of Hanan, son of Jegedelia, the man of God, next to the princes' room, above the room of Maasia, son of Sellum, keeper 5 of the doorway. I set before these Rechabite men bowls full of wine and offered them cups to drink the wine.
6 "We do not drink wine," they said to me: "Jonadab, Rechab's son, our father, forbade us in these words: 'Neither you nor 7 your children shall ever drink wine. Build no house and sow no seed; neither plant nor own a vineyard. You shall dwell in tents all your life, so that you may live long on the earth where 8 you are wayfarers.' Now we have heeded Jonadab, Rechab's son, our father, in all his prohibitions. All our lives we have not drunk wine, neither we, nor our wives, nor our sons, nor our 9 daughters. We build no houses to live in; we own no vineyards 10 or fields or crops, | and we live in tents; we obediently do every-11 thing our father Jonadab commanded us. But when Nabu-chodonosor, king of Babylon, invaded this land, we decided to come into Jerusalem to escape the army of the Chaldeans and the army of Aram; that is why we are now living in Jerusalem." 12.13 Then this word of the Lord came to Jeremia: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Go, say to the men of Juda and to the citizens of Jerusalem: Will you not take 14 correction and obey my words? says the Lord. The advice of Jonadab, Rechab's son, by which he forbade his children to drink wine, has been followed: to this day they have not drunk it; they obeyed their father's command. Me, however, you have not obeyed, although I spoke to you untiringly and insistently.
15 I kept sending you all my servants the prophets, telling you to turn back, all of you, from your evil way; to reform your conduct, and not follow strange gods or serve them, if you would remain on the land which I gave you and your fathers; but you 16 did not heed me or obey me. Yes, the children of Jonadab, Rechab's son, observed the command which their father laid 35, 1: About 599-98 B.C.

17 on them; but this people does not obey me! Now, therefore, say the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel: I will bring upon Juda and all the citizens of Jerusalem every evil that I threatened; because when I spoke they did not obey, when I called they did not answer.
18 But to the company of the Rechabites Jeremia said: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Since you have obeyed the command of Jonadab, your father, kept all his 19 commands and done everything he commanded you, | thus therefore says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Never shall there fail to be a descendant of Jonadab, Rechab's son, standing in my service.

1 Baruch Writes the Prophecies of Jeremia In the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, this word came 2 to Jeremia from the Lord: Take a scroll and write on it all the words I have spoken to you against Israel, Juda, and all the nations, from the day I first spoke to you, in the days of Josia 3 until today. Perhaps, when the house of Juda hears all the evil I have in mind to do to them, they will turn back each from his evil way, so that I may forgive their wickedness and their 4 sin. So Jeremia called Baruch, son of Neria, who wrote down on a scroll, as Jeremia dictated, all the words which the Lord had spoken to him.
9 In the ninth month, in the fifth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda, a fast to placate the Lord was proclaimed for all the people of Jerusalem and all who came from Juda's cities 5 to Jerusalem. Then Jeremia charged Baruch: I cannot go to 6 the house of the Lord; I am prevented from doing so. Do you go on the fast day and read publicly in the Lord's house the Lord's words from the scroll you wrote at my dictation; read them also to all the men of Juda who come up from their cities.
7 Perhaps they will lay their supplication before the Lord and will all turn back from their evil way; for great is the fury of anger with which the Lord has threatened this people.
8 Baruch, son of Neria, did everything the prophet Jeremia commanded; from the book-scroll he read the Lord's words in 10 the Lord's house. It was in the room of Gamaria, son of the scribe Saphan, in the upper court of the Lord's house, at the 36, 5: Jeremia was "prevented," perhaps because he was ritually unclean.

36, 10: Baruch read from a window in a room in the fortress of the temple gateway, which looked over the temple courtyard.

entrance of the New Temple-Gate, that Baruch publicly read the words of Jeremia from his book.

11 Now Michaia, son of Gamaria, son of Saphan, heard all 12 the words of the Lord read from the book. So he went down to the king's palace, into the scribe's chamber, where the princes were just then in session: Elisama, the scribe, Dalaia, son of Semeia, Elnathan, son of Achobor, Gamaria, son of Saphan, 13 Sedecia, son of Anania, and the other princes. To them Michaia reported all that he had heard Baruch read publicly from his 14 book. Thereupon the princes sent Judi, son of Nathania, son of Selemia, son of Chusi, to Baruch with the order: "Come, and bring with you the scroll you read publicly to the people."
15 Scroll in hand, Baruch, son of Neria, went to them. "Sit down," they said to him, "and read it to us." Baruch read it to them, |
16 and when they heard all its words, they were frightened and said to one another, "We must certainly tell the king all these 17 things." | Then they asked Baruch: "Tell us, please, how you 18 came to write down all these words." "Jeremia dictated all these words to me," Baruch answered them, "and I wrote them down 19 with ink in the book." At this the princes said to Baruch, "Go into hiding, you and Jeremia; let no one know where you are."
20 Leaving the scroll in safekeeping in the room of Elisama the scribe, they entered the room where the king was. When they 21 told him everything that had happened, he sent Judi to fetch the scroll. Judi brought it from the room of Elisama the scribe, and read it to the king and to all the princes who were in 22 attendance on the king. Now the king was sitting in his winter house, since it was the ninth month, and fire was burning in a 23 brazier before him. Each time Judi finished reading three or four columns, the king would cut off the piece with a scribe's knife and cast it into the fire in the brazier, until the entire roll 24 was consumed in the fire. Hearing all these words did not frighten the king and his ministers or cause them to rend their 25 garments. And though Elnathan, Dalaia, and Gamaria urged the king not to burn the scroll, he would not listen to them, |
26 but commanded Jeremiel, a royal prince, and Seraia, son of Ezriel, and Selemia, son of Abdeel, to arrest Baruch, the secretary, and the prophet Jeremia. But the Lord kept them concealed.
27 This word of the Lord came to Jeremia, after the king burned 28 the scroll with the text Jeremia had dictated to Baruch: Take another scroll, and write on it everything that the first scroll 29 contained, which Joakim, king of Juda, burned up. And against Joakim, king of Juda, say this: Thus says the Lord: You burned 36, 23: A scribe's knife: it was used to sharpen pens made of reeds.

that scroll, saying, "Why did you write on it: Babylon's kin shall surely come and lay waste this land and empty it of ma 30 and beast?" The Lord now says of Joakim, king of Juda: N descendant of his shall succeed to David's throne; his corps shall be cast out, exposed to the heat of day, to the cold of nigh 31 I will punish him and his descendants and his ministers for thei wickedness; against them and the citizens of Jerusalem and th men of Juda I will fulfill all the threats of evil which wer unheeded.
32 Jeremia took another scroll, and gave it to his secretary Baruch, son of Neria; he wrote on it at Jeremia's dictation a the words contained in the book which Joakim, king of Juda had burned in the fire, and many others of the same kind i addition.

1 Jeremia in the Dungeon Jechonia, son of Joakim, wa succeeded by king Sedecia, son of Josia; he was made king ove 2 the land of Juda by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon. Neithe he, nor his ministers, nor the people of the land would listen t 3 the words of the Lord spoken by Jeremia the prophet. Yet kin Sedecia sent Juchal, son of Selemia, and Sophonia, son o Maasia the priest, to the prophet Jeremia with this request 4 "Pray to the Lord, our God, for us." At this time Jeremia ha not yet been put into prison; he still came and went freel 5 among the people. Also, Pharao's army had set out from Egyp and when the Chaldeans who were besieging Jerusalem hear this report they marched away from the city.
6 This word of the Lord then came to the prophet Jeremia 7 | Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel: Give this answer to th king of Juda who sent you to me to consult me: Pharao's arm which has set out to help you will return to its own land, Egyp 8 The Chaldeans shall return to the fight against this city; the shall capture it and destroy it with fire.
9 Thus says the Lord: Do not deceive yourselves with th thought that the Chaldeans will leave you for good, becaus 10 they shall not leave! Even if you were to defeat the whol Chaldean army now attacking you, and only the wounde remained, each in his tent, these would rise up and destroy th city with fire.

36, 30: Joakim: see 22, 19 n for the "burial of an ass." His so Joachin ruled three months.
37, 1-21: In order of time, this event follows 34, 1-7.
37, 5: The "Pharao" in question was Hophra. See 34, 8-22 n.

11 When the Chaldean army lifted the siege of Jerusalem at the 12 threat of the army of Pharao, Jeremia set out from Jerusalem for the district of Benjamin, to take part with his family in the 13 division of an inheritance. But when he reached the Gate of Benjamin, he met the captain of the guard, a man named Jeria, son of Selemia, son of Anania; he seized the prophet Jeremia, 14 saying, "You are deserting to the Chaldeans!" | "That is a lie!" Jeremia answered, "I am not deserting to the Chaldeans." Without listening, Jeria kept Jeremia in custody and brought him to the princes.
15 The princes were enraged, and had Jeremia beaten and thrown into prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe, which 16 they were using as a jail. And so Jeremia entered the vaulted dungeon, where he remained a long time.
17 Once king Sedecia had him brought to his palace and he asked him secretly whether there was any message from the Lord.
Yes! Jeremia answered: you shall be handed over to the king 18 of Babylon. Jeremia then asked king Sedecia: In what have I wronged you, or your ministers, or this people, that you should 19 put me in prison? And where are your own prophets now, 20 who prophesied to you that the king of Babylon would not attack you or this land? Hear now, my lord king, and grant my petition: do not send me back into the house of Jonathan the scribe, or I shall die there.
21 King Sedecia ordered that Jeremia be confined in the quarters of the guard, and given a loaf of bread each day from the bakers' shop until all the bread in the city was eaten up. Thus Jeremia remained in the quarters of the guard.

38

1 Jeremia in the Miry Cistern Saphatia, son of Mathan, Godolia, son of Phassur, Juchal, son of Selemia, and Phassur, son of Melchia, heard Jeremia speaking these words to all the 2 people: Thus says the Lord: He who remains in this city shall die by sword, or famine, or pestilence; but he who goes out to the Chaldeans shall live; his life shall be spared him as 3 booty, and he shall live. | Thus says the Lord: This city shall certainly be handed over to the army of the king of Babylon;
he shall capture it.
4 "This man ought to be put to death," the princes said to

37, 13: See 21, 10 n.
38, 1: Phassur: the same as in 21, 1.
38, 4: The Lachish letters (see 34, 7 n) use the same expression, "He demoralizes the soldiers."

the king; "he demoralizes the soldiers who are left in this city, and all the people, by speaking such things to them; he is not interested in the welfare of our people, but in their ruin." | 5 King Sedecia answered: "He is in your power"; for the king 6 could do nothing with them. And so they took Jeremia and threw him into the cistern of prince Melchia, which was in the quarters of the guard, letting him down with ropes. There was no water in the cistern, only mud, and Jeremia sank into the mud.
7 Now Ebed-melech, a Chusite, a courtier in the king's palace, heard that they had put Jeremia into the cistern. The king 8 happened just then to be at the Gate of Benjamin, | and Ebed-9 melech went there from the palace and said to him, "My lord king, these men have been at fault in all they have done to the prophet Jeremia, casting him into the cistern. He will die of famine on the spot, for there is no more food in the city." 10 Then the king ordered Ebed-melech the Chusite to take three men along with him, and draw the prophet Jeremia out of the 11 cistern before he should die. Ebed-melech took the men along with him, and went first to the linen closet in the palace, from which he took some old, tattered rags; these he sent down to 12 Jeremia in the cistern, with ropes. | Then he said to Jeremia:
"Put the old, tattered rags between your armpits and the ropes." 13 Jeremia did so, and they drew him up with the ropes out of the cistern. But Jeremia remained in the quarters of the guard.
14 Once king Sedecia summoned the prophet Jeremia to come to him at the third entrance to the house of the Lord. "I have a question to ask you," the king said to Jeremia; "hide nothing 15 from me." | Jeremia answered Sedecia: If I tell you anything, you will have me killed, will you not? If I counsel you, you 16 will not listen to me! But king Sedecia swore to Jeremia secretly:
"As the Lord lives who gave us the breath of life, I will not kill you; nor will I hand you over to these men who seek your life." 17 Thereupon Jeremia said to Sedecia: Thus says the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel: If you surrender to the princes of Babylon's king, you shall save your life; this city shall not be 18 destroyed with fire, and you and your family shall live. But if you do not surrender to the princes of Babylon's king, this city shall fall into the hands of the Chaldeans, who shall destroy it with fire, and you shall not escape their hands.
19 King Sedecia, however, said to Jeremia, "I am afraid of the men of Juda who have deserted to the Chaldeans; I may be 20 handed over to them, and they will mistreat me." | You will 38, 7: A Chusite: an Ethiopian.

not be handed over, Jeremia answered. Please obey the voice of the Lord and do as I tell you; then it shall go well with you, 21 and your life will be spared. But if you refuse to surrender, this 22 is what the Lord shows me: All the women left in the house of Juda's king shall be brought out to the princes of Babylon's king, and they shall taunt you thus:
"They betrayed you, outdid you, your good friends! Now that your feet are stuck in the mud, they slink away." 23 All your wives and sons shall be led forth to the Chaldeans, and you shall not escape their hands; you shall be handed over to the king of Babylon, and this city shall be destroyed with fire.
24 Then Sedecia said to Jeremia, "Let no one know about this 25 conversation, or you shall die. If the princes hear I spoke to you, if they come and ask you, 'Tell us what you said to the king; do not hide it from us, or we will kill you,' or, 'What 26 did the king say to you?' give them this answer: 'I petitioned the king not to send me back to Jonathan's house to die there.' " 27 When all the princes came to Jeremia, they questioned him, and he answered them in the very words the king had commanded.
They said no more to him, for nothing had been heard of the 28 earlier conversation. Thus Jeremia stayed in the quarters of the guard till the day Jerusalem was taken.

39

Jeremia and Godolia When Jerusalem was taken. . . . | 1 In the tenth month of the ninth year of Sedecia, king of Juda, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and all his army marched 2 against Jerusalem and besieged it. On the ninth day of the fourth month, in the eleventh year of Sedecia, a breach was 3 made in the city's defenses. All the princes of the king of Babylon came and occupied the middle gate: Nergal-sarezer, of Sin-magir, the chief officer, Nabu-sezban, the high dignitary, 4 and all the other princes of the king of Babylon. . . . When Sedecia, king of Juda, saw them, he and all his warriors fled by night, leaving the city on the Royal Garden Road through the gate between the two walls. He went in the direction of the 5 Araba, | but the Chaldean army pursued them, and overtook and captured Sedecia in the desert near Jericho. He was brought to Ribla, in the land of Hamath, where Nabuchodonosor, king 39, 2: July, 587 B.C.

39, 5: Ribla: Syria.

6 of Babylon pronounced sentence upon him. As Sedecia looked on, his sons were slain at Ribla by order of the king of Babylon, 7 who slew also all the nobles of Juda. He then blinded Sedecia and bound him in chains to bring him to Babylon.
8 The Chaldeans set fire to the king's palace and the houses 9 of the people, and demolished the walls of Jerusalem. Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, deported to Babylon the rest of the people left in the city, those who had deserted to him, and 10 the rest of the workmen. But some of the poor who had no property were left in the land of Juda by Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, and were given at the same time vineyards and farms.
11 Concerning Jeremia, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, gave the following orders through Nabu-zardan, chief of the body-12 guard: "Take him and look after him; let no harm befall him, 13 but treat him as he himself requests." Thereupon Nabu-zardan, chief of the bodyguard, and Nabu-sezban, the high dignitary, and Nergal-sarezer, the chief officer, and all the nobles of the 14 king of Babylon, | had Jeremia taken out of the quarters of the guard, and entrusted to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, to be brought home. And so he remained among the people.

15 A Word of Comfort for Ebed-melech While Jeremia was still imprisoned in the quarters of the guard, the word of the 16 Lord came to him: Go, tell this to Ebed-melech the Chusite: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I am now fulfilling the words I spoke against this city, for evil and 17 not for good; and this before your very eyes. But on that day I will rescue you, says the Lord; you shall not be handed over to 18 the men of whom you are afraid. I will make certain that you escape and do not fall by the sword. Your life shall be spared as booty, because you trusted in me, says the Lord.

40

1 Jeremia still in Juda This word came to Jeremia from the Lord, after Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had released him in Rama, where he had found him a prisoner in chains, among the captives of Jerusalem and Juda who were 2 being exiled to Babylon. When the captain of the bodyguard took charge of Jeremia, he said to him, "The Lord, your God, 3 foretold the ruin of this place. Now he has brought about in deed what he threatened; because you sinned against the Lord 4 and did not obey his voice, this fate has befallen you. And now, 40, 1: There is no "word" till 42. 7ff.

I am freeing you today from the fetters that bind your hands; if it seems good to you to come with me to Babylon, you may come: I will look after you well. But if it does not please you to come to Babylon, you need not come. See, the whole land is 5 before you; go wherever you think good and proper"; | and then, before he left—"or go to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon has appointed ruler over the cities of Juda; stay with him among the people, or go wherever you please." The captain of the bodyguard gave him
6 food and gifts and let him go. Jeremia went to Godolia, son of Ahicam, in Maspha, and stayed with him among the people left in the land.

7 When the army leaders who were still in the field with all their men heard that the king of Babylon had given Godolia, son of Ahicam, charge of the land, of men, women, and children, and of those poor who had not been led captive to Babylon, 8 they came with their men to Godolia in Maspha: Ismael, son of Nathania; Johanan, son of Caree; Sarea, son of Tanchumeth; the sons of Ophi of Netopha; and Jezonia of Beth-Maaca.
9 Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, adjured them and their men not to be afraid to serve the Chaldeans: to stay in the land 10 and submit to the king of Babylon, for their own welfare; saying that he himself would remain in Maspha, as their intermediary with the Chaldeans who should come to them. They were to collect the wine, the fruit, and the oil, to store them in 11 jars, and to settle in the cities they occupied. When the people of Juda in Moab, those among the Ammonites, those in Edom, and those in all other lands heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant in Juda, and had appointed over them Godolia, 12 son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, they all returned to the land of Juda from the places to which they had scattered. They went to Godolia at Maspha and had a rich harvest of wine and fruit.

13 Assassination of Godolia Now Johanan, son of Caree, and all the leaders of the armies in the field came to Godolia in 14 Maspha | and asked him whether he did not know that Baalis,

40, 6: Since Jerusalem was too devastated, the capital was moved to "Maspha," about five miles west of Jerusalem.

40, 8: In 1932 at Tell en Nasbe (modern name of Maspha) a seal ring of a high official named "Jezonia" was found.

40, 14: The "Ammonites" were not content with Juda's crushing defeat, and "Ismael" had his own designs to rule truncated Juda since he was of the Davidic line as 41, 1 informs us.

the king of the Ammonites, had sent Ismael, son of Nathania, 15 to assassinate him. But Godolia, son of Ahicam, would not believe them. Then Johanan, son of Caree, said secretly to Godolia in Maspha: "Let me go and kill Ismael, son of Nathania; no one will know it. Why should he be allowed to kill you? All the Jews who have now rallied to you will be 16 dispersed and the remnant of Juda will perish." Nevertheless, Godolia, son of Ahicam, answered Johanan, son of Caree: "You shall do nothing of the kind; you have lied about Ismael."

41

1 In the seventh month Ismael, son of Nathania, son of Elisama, of royal descent, one of the king's nobles, came with ten men to 2 Godolia, son of Ahicam, at Maspha. And while they were together at table in Maspha, Ismael, son of Nathania, and the ten who were with him, rose up and attacked with swords Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan, whom the king of Babylon had made ruler over the land; and they killed him.
3 Ismael also slew all the men of Juda of military age who were with Godolia and the Chaldean soldiers who were there.
4 The second day after the murder of Godolia, before anyone 5 knew of it, eighty men with beards shaved off, clothes in rags, and with gashes on their bodies came from Sichem, Silo, and Samaria, bringing food offerings and incense for the house of 6 the Lord. Ismael, son of Nathania, went out from Maspha to 7 meet them, weeping as he went. "Come to Godolia, son of Ahicam," he said as he met them. When they were once inside the city, Ismael, son of Nathania, and his men slew them and 8 threw them into the cistern. But there were ten among them who pleaded with Ismael: "Do not kill us; we have stores buried in the field: wheat and barley, oil and honey." And so he spared them and did not kill them, as he had killed their com-9 panions. The cistern into which Ismael threw all the corpses of the men he had killed was the large one made by king Asa to defend himself against Baasa, king of Israel; this cistern Ismael, son of Nathania, filled with the slain.
10 Ismael, son of Nathania, led away the remnant of the people left in Maspha and the princesses, whom Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had confided to Godolia, son of Ahicam.
With these captives, Ismael, son of Nathania, set out to make his way to the Ammonites.

41, 10: The princesses of royal blood had not been deported to Babylon.

11 Flight to Egypt But when Johanan, son of Caree, and the other army leaders with him heard of the crimes Ismael, son of 12 Nathania, had committed, they took all their men and set out to attack Ismael, son of Nathania. They overtook him at the 13 Great Waters in Gibeon. At the sight of Johanan, son of Caree, and the other army leaders, the people who were Ismael's cap-14 tives rejoiced. All of those whom Ismael had brought away 15 from Maspha went over to Johanan, son of Caree. But Ismael, son of Nathania, escaped from Johanan and fled to the Am-16 monites with eight men. Then Johanan, son of Caree, and all his army leaders took charge of the remnant of the people, both the soldiers and the women and children with their guardians, whom Ismael, son of Nathania, had brought away from Maspha 17 after he killed Godolia, son of Ahicam. From Gibeon, they retreated to the lodging place of Chamaam near Bethlehem, where 18 they stopped, intending to flee into Egypt. They were afraid of the Chaldeans, because Ismael, son of Nathania, had slain Godolia, son of Ahicam, whom the king of Babylon had made ruler in the land of Juda.

42

1 Then all the army leaders, Johanan, son of Caree, Azaria, son of Osaia, and all the people, high and low, approached the 2 prophet Jeremia and said, "Grant our petition; pray for us to the Lord, your God, for all this remnant. We are now few who 3 once were many, as you well see. Let the Lord, your God, show 4 us what way we should take and what we should do." Very well!
the prophet Jeremia answered them: I will pray to the Lord, your God, as you desire; whatever the Lord answers you, I will 5 tell you; I will withhold nothing from you. And they said to Jeremia, "May the Lord be our witness: we will truly and faithfully follow all the instructions the Lord, your God, will send 6 us. Whether it is pleasant or difficult, we will obey the command of the Lord, our God, to whom we are sending you, so that it will go well with us for obeying the command of the Lord, our God."

7 Ten days passed before the word of the Lord came to Jeremia.
8 Then he called Johanan, son of Caree, his army leaders, and 9 all the people, high and low, and said to them: Thus says the Lord, the God of Israel, to whom you sent me to offer your 10 prayer: If you remain quietly in this land I will build you up, and not tear you down; I will plant you, not uproot you; for I 41, 12: The Great Waters in Gibeon: the same as the pool of Gabaon in 2 Sm 2, 13 n.

11 regret the evil I have done you. Do not fear the king of Babylon, before whom you are now afraid; do not fear him, says the Lord, for I am with you to save you, to rescue you from his 12 power. I will grant you mercy, so that he will be sorry for you 13 and let you return to your land. But if you disobey the voice of the Lord, your God, and decide not to remain in this land, say-14 ing, "No, we will go to Egypt, where we will see no more of war, hear the trumpet alarm no longer, nor hunger for bread; 15 there we will live"; | then listen to the word of the Lord, remnant of Juda: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel:
If you are determined to go to Egypt, when you arrive there to 16 stay, | the sword you fear shall reach you in the land of Egypt;
the hunger you dread shall cling to you no less in Egypt, and 17 there you shall die. All those men who determine to go to Egypt to stay, shall die by the sword, famine, and pestilence; not one 18 shall survive or escape the evil that I will bring upon them. For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Just as my furious anger was poured out upon the citizens of Jerusalem, so shall my anger be poured out on you when you reach Egypt. You shall become an example of malediction and horror, a curse and a reproach, and you shall never see this place again.
19 It is the Lord who has spoken to you, remnant of Juda; do not go to Egypt! You can never say that I did not warn you this 20 day. At the cost of your lives you have deceived me, sending me to the Lord, your God, saying, "Pray for us to the Lord, our God; make known to us all that the Lord, our God, shall 21 say, and we will do it." Today I proclaim his message, but you obey the voice of the Lord, your God, in nothing that he has 22 commissioned me to make known to you. Have no doubt of this, you shall die by the sword, famine, and pestilence in the place where you wish to go and settle.

43

1 When Jeremia finished speaking to the people all these words of the Lord, their God, with which the Lord had sent him to 2 them, | Azaria, son of Osaia, Johanan, son of Caree, and all the insolent men shouted to Jeremia: "You lie; it was not the Lord, our God, who sent you to tell us not to go to Egypt to settle.
3 It is Baruch, son of Neria, who stirs you up against us, to hand us over to the Chaldeans to be killed or exiled to Babylon." 4 Johanan, son of Caree, and the rest of the leaders and the people did not obey the Lord's command to stay in the land of 5 Juda. Instead, Johanan, son of Caree, and all the army leaders took along the whole remnant of Juda that had been dispersed among the nations and had returned thence to dwell again in 6 the land of Juda: men, women, and children, the princesses and everyone whom Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard, had entrusted to Godolia, son of Ahicam, son of Saphan; also Jere-7 mia, the prophet, and Baruch, son of Neria. Against the Lord's command they went to Egypt, and arrived at Tahpanhes. . . .

8 Jeremia in Egypt This word of the Lord came to Jeremia 9 in Tahpanhes: Take with you large stones and sink them in mortar in the brickyard at the entrance to the royal building in 10 Tahpanhes, while the men of Juda look on, | and then say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I will send for my servant Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and bring him here. He will set his throne upon these stones which I, Jeremia, 11 have sunk, and stretch his canopy over them. He shall come and strike the land of Egypt: with death, whoever is marked for death; with exile, everyone destined for exile; with the sword, 12 all who are intended for the sword. He shall set fire to the temples of Egypt's gods, and burn the gods or carry them off. As a shepherd delouses his cloak, he shall delouse the land of Egypt 13 and depart victorious. He shall smash the obelisks of the temple of the sun in the land of Egypt and destroy with fire the temples of the Egyptian gods.

1 This word came to Jeremia for all the people of Juda who were living in Egypt, at Magdal, Tahpanhes, and Memphis, and 2 in Upper Egypt: Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: You have seen all the evil I brought on Jerusalem and the 3 other cities of Juda. Today they are ruins and uninhabited, because of the evil they did to provoke me, going after strange gods, serving them and sacrificing to them, gods which neither 4 they, nor you, nor your fathers knew. Though I kept sending to you all my servants the prophets, with the plea not to com-5 mit this horrible deed which I hate, they would not listen or accept the warning to turn away from the evil of sacrificing to 6 strange gods. Therefore the fury of my anger poured forth in flame over the cities of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem, so that they became the ruinous waste they are today.
7 Now thus says the Lord God of hosts, the God of Israel:
Why do you inflict so great an evil upon yourselves? Will you root out from Juda man and wife, child and nursling, and not 8 leave yourselves even a remnant? Will you go on provoking me by the works of your hands, by sacrificing to strange gods here in the land of Egypt where you have come to live? Will you be rooted out and become a curse and a disgrace among all the 9 nations of the earth? Have you forgotten the evil deeds which your fathers, and the kings of Juda and their wives, and you yourselves and your wives have done in the land of Juda and 10 the streets of Jerusalem? To this day they have not been crushed; they do not fear or follow the law and the statutes which I set before you and your fathers.

11 Hence, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: I have 12 determined evil against you; and I will uproot all Juda. I will take away the remnant of Juda who insisted on coming to dwell in Egypt, so that they shall be wholly destroyed. In the land of Egypt they shall fall by the sword or be consumed by hunger.
High and low, they shall die by the sword, or by hunger, and become an example of malediction, a horror, a curse and a re-13 proach. Thus will I punish those who live in Egypt, just as I punished Jerusalem with sword, hunger, and pestilence. None of the remnant of Juda that have come to settle in the land of 14 Egypt shall escape or survive. None shall return to the land of Juda, though they yearn to return and live there. Only scattered refugees shall return.
15 From all the men who knew that their wives were burning incense to strange gods, from all the women who were present in the immense crowd, and from all the people who lived in Lower 16 and Upper Egypt, Jeremia received this answer: "We will not 17 listen to what you say in the name of the Lord. Rather will we continue doing what we had proposed; we will burn incense to the queen of heaven and pour out libations to her, as we and our fathers, our kings and princes have done in the cities of Juda and the streets of Jerusalem. Then we had enough food to eat 18 and we were well off; we suffered no misfortune. But since we stopped burning incense to the queen of heaven and pouring out libations to her, we are in need of everything and are being 19 destroyed by the sword and by hunger. And when we burned incense to the queen of heaven and poured out libations to her, was it without our husbands' consent that we baked for her cakes in her image and poured out libations to her?" 20 To all the people, men and women, who gave him this an-21 swer, Jeremia said: Was it not this that the Lord remembered and brought to mind, that you burned incense in the cities of 44, 17: The queen of heaven: see 7, 18 n.

Juda and the streets of Jerusalem: you, your fathers, your kings 22 and princes, and the people generally? The Lord could no longer bear your evil deeds, the horrible things which you were doing; and so your land became a waste, a desert, a thing accursed 23 and without inhabitants, as it is today. Because you burned incense and sinned against the Lord, not obeying the voice of the Lord, not living by his law, his statutes, and his decrees, this evil has befallen you at the present day.
24 Jeremia said further to all the people, including the women:
Hear the word of the Lord, all you Judeans in the land of Egypt: 25 Thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: You and your wives have stated your intentions, and kept them in fact: "We will continue to fulfill the vows we have made to burn incense to the queen of heaven and to pour out libations to her." Very 26 well! keep your vows, carry out your resolutions! But listen then to the word of the Lord, all you people of Juda who live in Egypt: I swear by my own great name, says the Lord, in the whole land of Egypt no man of Juda shall henceforth pronounce 27 my name, saying, "As the Lord God lives." | I am watching over them to do evil, not good. All the men of Juda in Egypt shall perish by the sword or famine until they are utterly de-28 stroyed. Those who escape the sword to return from the land of Egypt to the land of Juda shall be few in number. The whole remnant of Juda who came to settle in Egypt shall know whose word stands, mine or theirs.
29 That you may know how surely my threats of punishment for you shall be fulfilled, this shall be a sign to you, says the 30 Lord, that I will punish you in this place. Thus says the Lord:
See! I will hand over Pharao Hophra, king of Egypt, to his enemies, to those who seek his life, just as I handed over Sedecia, king of Juda, to his enemy and mortal foe, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon.

1 A Message to Baruch This is the message that the prophet Jeremia gave to Baruch, son of Neria, when he wrote in a book the prophecies that Jeremia dictated in the fourth year of 2 Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda: Thus says the Lord, God 3 of Israel, to you, Baruch, | because you said, "Alas! the Lord adds grief to my pain; I am weary from groaning, and can find 4 no rest": say this to him, says the Lord: What I have built, I am tearing down; what I have planted, I am uprooting: even 5 the whole land. And do you seek great things for yourself? Seek them not! I am bringing evil on all mankind, says the Lord, but your life I will leave you as booty, wherever you may go.

V. ORACLES AGAINST THE NATIONS

1 This is the word of the Lord that came to the prophet Jeremia against the nations.

2 Against Egypt Concerning Egypt. Against the army of Pharao Necho, king of Egypt, which was defeated at Charcha-mis on the Euphrates by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, in the fourth year of Joakim, son of Josia, king of Juda:

3.4 Prepare shield and buckler! march to battle! | Harness the horses, mount, charioteers! Fall in with your helmets; polish 5 your spears, put on your breastplates. | What do I see? With broken ranks they fall back; their heroes are routed, they flee headlong without making a stand. Terror on every side, says 6 the Lord! | The swift cannot flee, nor the hero escape: there in the north, on the Euphrates' bank, they stumble and fall.

7 Who is this that surges forward like the Nile, like rivers of 8 billowing waters? | Egypt surges like the Nile, like rivers of billowing waters. "I will surge forward," he says, "and cover 9 the earth, destroying the city and its people. | Forward, horses!
drive madly, chariots! Set out, warriors, Chus and Phut, bearing 10 your shields, men of Lud, stretching your bows!" | But this is the day of the Lord God of hosts, a day of vengeance, vengeance on his foes! The sword devours, is sated, drunk with their blood: for the Lord God of hosts holds a slaughter feast in the northland, on the Euphrates.

11 Go up to Galaad, and take balm, O virgin daughter Egypt!
12 No use to multiply remedies; for you there is no cure. | The nations hear of your shame, your cries fill the earth. Warrior trips over warrior, both fall together.

46—51: In the Greek text these oracles appear with the other oracles against the nations in ch. 25. For the basic meaning of oracles against the nations, see Am 1, 2 n and Am 2, 6-16 n.

46, 1—49, 33: These oracles are chronologically arranged from "the fourth year of Joakim" (46, 2).

46, 2: Necho, in 605 B.C., lost his chance to prevent Babylon from supplanting Assyria. This defeat pushed Egypt's power down to its own borders and left Palestine open to the Babylonians.

13 The message which the Lord gave to the prophet Jeremia concerning the advance of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, to attack the land of Egypt: 14 Announce it in Egypt, publish it in Magdal, proclaim it in Memphis and Tahpanhes! Say: Take your stand, prepare your-15 selves, the sword has already devoured your neighbors. | Why has Apis fled, your mighty one failed to stand? The Lord thrust 16 him down; | he stumbled repeatedly, and fell. They said one to another, "Up! let us return to our own people, to the land of our birth, away from the destroying sword." 17 Call Pharao, king of Egypt, by the name "The noise that let 18 its time go by." | As I live, says the King whose name is Lord of hosts, like Thabor among the mountains he shall come, like 19 Carmel above the sea. | Pack your baggage for exile, capital city of daughter Egypt; Memphis shall become a desert, an empty ruin.
20 Egypt is a pretty heifer, from the north a horsefly lights 21 upon her. | The mercenaries in her ranks are like fatted calves; they too turn and flee together, stand not their ground, when the day of their ruin comes upon them, the time of their punish-22 ment. | She sounds like a retreating reptile! Yes, they come in 23 force; like woodchoppers, they attack her with axes. | They cut down her forest, says the Lord, impenetrable though it be; 24 more numerous than locusts, they cannot be counted. | Disgraced is daughter Egypt, handed over to the people of the north.
25 The Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, has said: See! I will punish Amon of Thebes, and Egypt, her gods and her kings, 26 Pharao, and those who trust in him. I will hand them over to those who seek their lives, to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his ministers. But later on Egypt shall be inhabited again, as in times past, says the Lord.
27 But you, my servant Jacob, fear not; be not dismayed, O Israel. Behold, I will deliver you from the far-off land, your descendants, from their land of exile. Jacob shall again find 28 rest, shall be tranquil and undisturbed. | You, my servant
Jacob, never fear, says the Lord, for I am with you; I will make an end of all the nations to which I have driven you, but of you I will not make an end: I will chastise you as you deserve, I will not let you go unpunished.

1 Against the Philistines This is the word that came from the Lord to the prophet Jeremia concerning the Philistines, before Pharao attacked Gaza: Thus says the Lord:

2 Behold: waters are rising from the north, a torrent in flood; it shall flood the land and all that is in it, the cities and their 3 people. All the people of the land set up a wailing cry. | They hear the stamping hooves of his steeds, the rattling chariots, the rumbling wheels. Fathers turn not to save their children; their 4 hands fall helpless | because of the day which has come to ruin all the Philistines, and cut off from Tyre and Sidon the last of their allies. Yes, the Lord is destroying the Philistines, the rem-5 nant from the coasts of Caphtor. | Gaza is shaved bald, Ascalon is reduced to silence; Azotus, the remnant of their strength, 6 how long will you gash yourself? | Alas, sword of the Lord!
how long till you find rest? Return into your scabbard; stop, be 7 still! | How can it find rest when the Lord has commanded it?
Against Ascalon and the seashore he has appointed it.

48

1 Against Moab Concerning Moab, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel:

Woe to Nebo, it is laid waste; Cariathaim is disgraced and 2 captured, disgraced and overthrown is the stronghold: | Moab's glory is no more. Evil they plan against Hesebon: "Come, let us put an end to her as a people." You, too, Madmena, shall be 3 reduced to silence; behind you stalks the sword. | Listen! a 4 cry from Horonaim of ruin and great destruction! | Moab is 5 crushed, their outcry is heard in Soar. | The ascent of Luith they climb weeping; on the descent to Horonaim the cry of 6 destruction is heard. | "Flee, save your lives, to survive like the 7 wild ass in the desert!" | Because you trusted in your works and your treasures, you also shall be captured. Chamos shall 47, 6: The Philistines speak.

48, 1-47: This chapter resembles more an anthology which grew around an original unidentified nucleus oracle by Jeremia about 605 B.C. Nabuchodonosor conquered Moab and Ammon about 582 B.C.

8 go into exile, his priests and princes with him. | The destroyer comes upon every city, not a city escapes; ruined is the valley, 9 wasted the plain, as the Lord has said. | Set up a memorial for Moab, for it is an utter wasteland; its cities are turned into ruins 10 where no one dwells. | [Cursed be he who does the Lord's work
remissly, cursed he who holds back his sword from blood.] | 11 Moab has been tranquil from his youth, has rested upon his lees; he was not poured from one flask to another, he went not into exile. Thus he kept his taste, and his scent was not lost.
12 Hence, the days shall come, says the Lord, when I will send him coopers to turn him over; they shall empty his flasks and 13 break his jars. Chamos shall disappoint Moab, as Israel was disappointed by Bethel in which they trusted.
14 How can you say, "We are heroes, men valiant in war"? | 15 The ravager of Moab and his cities advances, the flower of his youth goes down to be slaughtered, says the King, the Lord of 16 hosts by name. | Near at hand is Moab's ruin, his disaster
17 hastens apace. | Mourn for him, all you his neighbors, all you who knew him well! Say: How the strong staff is broken, the 18 glorious rod! | Come down from glory, sit on the ground, you that dwell in Dibon; Moab's ravager has come up against you, 19 he has ruined your strongholds. | Stand by the wayside, watch closely, you that dwell in Aroer; ask the man who flees, the woman who tries to escape: say to them, "What has hap-20 pened?" | Moab is disgraced, yes, destroyed, howl and cry out; publish it at the Arnon, Moab is ruined!
21 For judgment has come on the land of the plateau: on Helon, 22 Jasa, and Mephaath, | on Dibon, Nebo, and Beth-Diblathaim, 23.24 | on Cariathaim, Beth-Gamul, and Beth-Maon, | on Carioth and on Bosra: on all the cities of Moab, far and near.
25 Moab's strength is broken, his might is shattered, says the 26 Lord. Because he boasted against the Lord, make Moab drunk so that he retches and vomits, and he too becomes a laughing-27 stock. | Is Israel a laughingstock to you? Was she caught among thieves, that you shake your head whenever you speak of her?
28 Leave the cities, dwell in the crags, you that dwell in Moab.
Be like a dove that nests out of reach on the edge of a chasm. | 29 We have heard of the pride of Moab, pride beyond bounds: his 30 loftiness, his pride, his scorn, his insolence of heart. | I know, 31 says the Lord, his arrogance; liar in boast, liar in deed. | And

48, 11: This verse may be seen on a clay seal at the Oriental Institute, Chicago. Rested upon his lees: see So 1, 12 n for the expression, "men who thicken on their lees."

48, 29-46: There seem to be borrowings from Is 15—16.

so I wail over Moab, over all Moab I cry, over the men of Cir-32 heres I moan. | More than for Jazer I weep over you, vineyard of Sabama. Your tendrils trailed down to the sea, as far as Jazer they stretched. Upon your harvest, upon your vintage, the 33 ravager has fallen. | Joy and jubilation are at an end in the fruit gardens of the land of Moab. I drain the wine from the wine vats, the treader treads no more, the vintage shout is stilled.
34 The cry of Hesebon and Eleale is heard as far as Jasa; they call from Segor to Horonaim, and to Eglath-shilishiya, for even 35 the waters of Nemrim turn into a desert. I will leave no one in Moab, says the Lord, to offer a holocaust on the high place, or 36 to burn incense to his gods. Hence the wail of flutes for Moab is in my heart; for the men of Cir-heres the wail of flutes is in my 37 heart: the wealth they acquired has perished. Every head has been made bald, every beard shaved; every hand is gashed, and 38 the loins of all are clothed in sackcloth. On every roof of Moab and in all his squares there is mourning; I have shattered Moab 39 like a pot that no one wants, says the Lord. How terror seizes Moab, and wailing! How he turns his back in shame! Moab has 40 become a laughingstock and a horror to all his neighbors! For thus says the Lord:

Behold, like an eagle he soars, spreads his wings over Moab. | 41 Cities are taken, strongholds seized: on that day the hearts of 42 Moab's heroes are like the heart of a woman in travail. | Moab shall be destroyed, no more a people, because he boasted against 43 the Lord. | Terror, pit, and trap be upon you, people of Moab, 44 says the Lord. | He who flees from the terror falls into the pit;
he who climbs from the pit is caught in the trap; for I will bring these things upon Moab in the year of their punishment, says 45 the Lord. | In Hesebon's shadow stop short the exhausted refugees; for fire breaks forth from Hesebon, and a blaze from the house of Sehon: it consumes the brow of Moab, the skull of 46 the noisemakers. | Woe to you, O Moab, you are ruined, O people of Chamos! Your sons are taken into exile, your daugh-47 ters into captivity. | But I will change the lot of Moab in the days to come, says the Lord.

Thus far the judgment on Moab.

49

1 Against the Ammonites Concerning the Ammonites, thus
says the Lord:

48, 41: A woman in travail: a favorite Old Testament expression of deep anguish.

49, 1: Melchom: the chief Ammonite god.

Has Israel no sons? has he no heir? Why then has Melchom disinherited Gad, why have his people settled in Gad's cities? | 2 But the days are coming, says the Lord, when against Rabba of the Ammonites I will sound the battle alarm; she shall become a mound of ruins, and her daughter cities shall be destroyed by fire. Israel shall inherit those who disinherited her, says the 3 Lord. | Howl, Hesebon, for the ravager approaches, shriek, daughters of Rabba! Put on sackcloth and mourn, run to and fro, gashing yourselves; for Melchom goes into exile along with 4 his priests and captains. | Why do you glory in your strength, your ebbing strength, rebellious daughter? You who trust in 5 your treasures, saying, "Who can come against me?" | I am bringing terror upon you, says the Lord God of hosts, from all round about you; you shall be scattered, each man in headlong 6 flight, with no one to rally the fugitives. | But afterward I will change the lot of the Ammonites, says the Lord.

7 Against Edom Concerning Edom, thus says the Lord of hosts:

Is there no more wisdom in Theman, has counsel perished 8 from the prudent, has their wisdom become corrupt? | Flee, retreat, hide in deep holes, you who live in Dedan: for I will bring 9 destruction upon Esau when I come to punish him. | If vin-tagers came upon you, they would leave no gleanings; if thieves 10 by night, they would destroy as they pleased. | So I myself will strip Esau; I will uncover his retreats so that he cannot hide. He is ruined: sons, and brothers, and neighbors, so that he is no 11 more. | Leave your orphans behind, I will keep them alive;
your widows, let them trust in me.
12 For thus says the Lord: Even those not sentenced to drink the cup must drink it! Shall you then go unpunished? You shall 13 not go unpunished; you shall surely drink it. | By my own self I have sworn, says the Lord: Bosra shall become an object of horror and a disgrace, a desolation and a curse; she and all her cities shall become ruins forever.
14 I have heard a report from the Lord, a herald has been sent among the nations: Gather together, move against her, rise up 15 for battle. | Small will I make you among the nations, despised

49, 7-22: On the occasion of the raids made by Edom, Moab, and Ammon on Juda in 605 B.C., Jeremia wrote a speech which became embellished, especially in vv. 12-22. There are notable similarities with the Book of Abdia.

49, 7: Edom had a reputation for wisdom (see Jb 2, 11).

49, 10: Esau: the ancestor of the Edomites. See Gn 36.

49, 12: Cup: a biblical symbol of suffering as in 25, 15ff.

16 among men! | The terror you spread beguiled you, and your presumption of heart; you that live in rocky crags, that hold the heights of the hill: though you build your nest high as the eagle, from there I will drag you down, says the Lord.
17 Edom shall become an object of horror. Every passer-by shall 18 be appalled and catch his breath at all her wounds. As when Sodom, Gomorra, and their neighbors were overthrown, says the Lord, not a man shall dwell there: no one shall visit there 19 As when a lion comes up from the thicket of Jordan to the permanent feeding grounds, so I, in an instant, will drive men off; and whom I choose I will establish there! For who is like me? who can call me to account? What shepherd can stand 20 against me? | Therefore, hear the counsel of the Lord, which he has taken against Edom; hear the plans he has made against those that live in Theman: they shall be dragged away, even the smallest sheep, their own pasture shall be aghast because of 21 them. At the noise of their fall the earth quakes, to the Red 22 Sea the outcry is heard! | See! like an eagle he soars aloft, and spreads his wings over Bosra; on that day the hearts of Edom's heroes shall be like the heart of a woman in travail.

23 Against Damascus Concerning Damascus: | Hamath and Arphad are covered with shame, they have heard bad news 24 worried, they toss like the sea which cannot rest. | Damascus is weakened, she turns to flee, panic has seized her. Distress and pangs take hold of her, like those of a woman in travail.
25 How can the city of glory be forsaken, the town of delight!
26 But now her young men shall fall in her streets, and all her warriors shall be stilled. On that day, says the Lord of hosts, 27 I will set fire to the wall of Damascus, and it shall devour the palaces of Benadad.

28 Against Arabia Of Cedar and the kingdoms of Asor, defeated by Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, thus says the Lord:
29 Rise up, attack Cedar, ravage the Easterners. | Their tents and herds shall be taken away, their tent curtains and all their goods; their camels they shall carry off for themselves, and 49, 19-22: These verses against Babylon seem more appropriate in 50, 44-46, from where they seem to originate.

49, 23-27: It is difficult to know the historical circumstance behind this oracle, and how much of it is really from Jeremia.

49, 23: The two states are north of Damascus.

49, 27: Benadad: a few kings of Damascus bore this name.

49, 28-33: See 49, 23-27 n. The same observation applies here.

30 shout from upon them, "Terror on every side!" | Flee! leave your homes, hide in deep holes, you that live in Asor, says the Lord; for counsel has been taken against you, a plan has been 31 formed against you [Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon]. | Rise up! set out against a nation that is at peace, that lives secure, says the Lord, that has no gates or bars, and dwells alone. | 32 Their camels shall be your booty, their many herds your spoil; I will scatter to the winds those who shave their temples, from 33 all sides I will bring ruin upon them, says the Lord. | Asor shall become a haunt of jackals, a desert forever, where no man lives, no human being stays.

34 Against Elam The following word of the Lord against Elam came to the prophet Jeremia at the beginning of the reign 35 of Sedecia, king of Juda: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Behold, I will break the bow of Elam, the mainstay of their 36 might. | I will bring upon Elam the four winds from the four ends of the heavens: I will scatter them to all these winds, till there is no nation to which the outcasts of Elam shall not come.
37 | I will break Elam before their foes, before those who seek their life; I will bring evil upon them, my burning wrath, says the Lord. I will send the sword to pursue them until I have com-
38 pletely made an end of them; | my throne I will set up in Elam 39 and destroy from there king and princes, says the Lord. | But in the days to come I will change the lot of Elam, says the Lord.

1 The First Prophecy against Babylon The word which the Lord spoke against Babylon, against the land of the Chal-deans, through the prophet Jeremia: 2 Announce and publish it among the nations; publish it, hide it not, but say: Babylon is taken, Bel confounded, Merodach 49, 32: Shave their temples: see 9, 25 n.

49, 34-39: The historical situation seems to be the aid furnished by the Elamites to Assyria in 597.

49, 34: Elam: present-day southwestern Iran.

49, 39: Elam, like other pagan nations in these oracles, will be restored.

50, 1—51, 58: An anthology of speeches against Babylon, composed from previous chapters in Jeremia, Habacuc, and Isaia. The theme of this section is the fall of Babylon and the return of the Jews from their Babylonian exile.

50, 1: Through the prophet Jeremia: most likely not in the original text. Very probably these speeches are not from Jeremia but from several inspired writers after the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C.

50, 2: The god Bel was later identified with Marduk ("Merodach") the chief god of Babylon.

3 shattered; her images are put to shame, her idols shattered. | A people from the north advances against her to turn her land into a desert, so that no one shall live there, because man and 4 beast have fled away. | In those days, at that time, says the Lord, the men of Israel and of Juda shall come, weeping as they 5 come, to seek the Lord, their God; to their goal in Sion they shall ask the way. "Come, let us join ourselves to the Lord with 6 covenant everlasting, never to be forgotten." | Lost sheep were my people, their shepherds misled them, straggling on the mountains; from mountain to hill they wandered, losing the way to 7 their fold. | Whoever came upon them devoured them, and their enemies said, "We incur no guilt, because they sinned against the Lord, the hope of their fathers, their abode of justice."
8 Flee from Babylon, leave the land of the Chaldeans, be like 9 the rams at the head of the flock. | See, I am stirring up against Babylon a band of great nations from the north; from there they advance, and she shall be taken. Their arrows are arrows of the 10 skilled warrior; none shall return empty. | Chaldea shall be their plunder, and all her plunderers shall be enriched, says the 11 Lord. | Yes, rejoice and exult, you that plunder my portion,
12 frisk like calves on the green, snort like stallions! | Your mother shall be sorely put to shame, she that bore you shall be abashed; 13 see, the last of the nations, a desert, dry and waste. | Because of the Lord's wrath she shall be empty, and become a total desert; everyone who passes by Babylon will be appalled and 14 catch his breath, at all her wounds. | Take your posts encircling Babylon, you who bend the bow; shoot at her, spare not your 15 arrows, | raise the war cry against her on all sides. She surrenders, her bastions fall, her walls are torn down: vengeance of the Lord is this! Take revenge on her, as she has done, do to 16 her; for she sinned against the Lord. | Cut off from Babylon the sower and him who wields the sickle in harvest time! Before the destroying sword, each of them turns to his own people, 17 everyone flees to his own land. | A stray sheep was Israel that lions pursued; formerly the king of Assyria devoured her, now Nabuchodonosor of Babylon gnaws her bones.
18 Therefore, thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel:
I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, as once I pun-19 ished the king of Assyria; | but I will bring back Israel to her fold, to feed on Carmel and Basan, and on Mount Ephraim and Galaad, till she has her fill.

50, 15: Her bastions fall . . . torn down: a symbolic description of Babylon's fall.

20 In those days at that time, says the Lord: They shall seek Israel's guilt, but it shall be no more, and Juda's sins, but these shall no longer be found; for I will forgive the remnant I preserve.
21 Attack the land of Merathaim, and those who live in Pecod; slaughter and doom them, says the Lord, do all I have com-22 manded you. | Battle alarm in the land, dire destruction! | 23 How has the hammer of the whole earth been broken and shattered! What an object of horror Babylon has become among 24 the nations! | You ensnared yourself, and were caught, O Babylon, before you knew it! You were discovered and seized, be-25 cause you challenged the Lord. | The Lord opens his armory and brings forth the weapons of his wrath; for the Lord God of hosts has work to do in the land of the Chaldeans.
26 Come upon her from every side, open her granaries, pile up 27 her goods in heaps and doom it, leave not a remnant. | Slay all her oxen, let them go down to the slaughter; woe to them!
28 their day has come, the time of their punishment. | Listen! the fugitives, the escaped from the land of Babylon: they announce 29 in Sion the vengeance of the Lord, our God. | Call up against Babylon archers, all who bend the bow; encamp around her, let no one escape. Repay her for her deeds; as she has done, do to her, for she insulted the Lord, the Holy One of Israel. | 30 Therefore her young men shall fall in her streets, all her warriors shall perish on that day, says the Lord.
31 I am against you, man of insolence, says the Lord God of hosts; for your day has come, the time for me to punish you. | 32 Insolence stumbles and falls; there is no one to raise him up. I will kindle in his cities a fire that shall devour everything around 33 him. | Thus says the Lord of hosts: Oppressed are the men of Israel, and with them the men of Juda; all their captors hold 34 them fast and refuse to let them go. | Strong is their avenger, whose name is Lord of hosts; he will defend their cause with success, and give rest to the earth, but unrest to those who live in Babylon.
35 A sword upon the Chaldeans, says the Lord, upon Babylon's 36 people, her princes and wise men! | A sword upon the sooth-sayers, that they may become fools! A sword upon her warriors, 37 that they may tremble; | a sword upon her motley throng, that they may become women! A sword upon her treasures, that they 38 may be plundered; | a sword upon her waters, that they may dry up! For it is a land of idols, and they shall be made frantic 50, 21: "Merathaim" means "twice bitter" and "Pecod" means punishment. These are symbolic names for Babylonia.

39 by fearful things. ¦ Hence, wildcats and desert beasts shall dwell there, and ostriches shall occupy it; never again shall it 40 be peopled, or lived in, from age to age. ¦ As when God overturned Sodom and Gomorra, with their neighbors, says the Lord, not a man shall dwell there, no human being shall tarry there.
41 See! a people comes from the north, a great nation, and 42 mighty kings roused from the ends of the earth. ¦ Bow and javelin they wield, cruel and pitiless are they; they sound like the roaring sea, as they ride forth on steeds, each in his place for 43 battle against you, daughter Babylon. ¦ The king of Babylon hears news of them, and helpless fall his hands; anguish seizes 44 him, throes like a mother's in childbirth. ¦ As when a lion comes up from the Jordan's thicket to the permanent feeding grounds, so I, in one instant, will drive them off, and whom I choose I will establish there; for who is like me? who calls me to account?
45 what shepherd can stand against me? ¦ Therefore hear the counsel of the Lord which he has taken against Babylon; hear the plans he has made against the land of the Chaldeans: They shall be dragged away, even the smallest sheep; their own pas-46 ture shall be aghast because of them. ¦ At the cry "Babylon is captured!" the earth quakes; the outcry is heard among the nations.

1 The Second Prophecy against Babylon Thus says the Lord: See! I rouse against Babylon, and against those who live 2 in Chaldea, a destroying wind. ¦ Against Babylon I will send winnowers to winnow her and lay waste her land; they shall 3 besiege her from all sides on the day of affliction. ¦ Let the bowman draw his bow, and flaunt his coat of mail; spare not her 4 young men, doom her entire army. ¦ The slain shall fall in the 5 land of Chaldea, the transfixed, in her streets; ¦ for Israel and Juda are not widowed of their God, the Lord of hosts, and the Chaldean land is full of guilt to be punished by the Holy One of Israel.
6 Flee out of Babylon; let each one save his life, perish not for her guilt; this is a time of vengeance for the Lord, he pays her 7 her due. ¦ Babylon was a golden cup in the hand of the Lord which made the whole earth drunk; the nations drank its wine, 8 with this they have become mad. ¦ Babylon suddenly falls and 50, 44: Shepherd: leader, as in 49, 19.

51, 7: God used Babylon to punish the nations. Compare with 25, 15ff.

is crushed: howl over her! Bring balm for her wounds, in case 9 she can be healed. | "We have tried to heal Babylon, but she cannot be healed. Leave her, let us go, each to his own land." 10 Her judgment reaches heaven, it touches the clouds. | The Lord has brought to light our just cause; come, let us tell in Sion what the Lord, our God, has done.
11 Sharpen the arrows, fill the quivers; the Lord has stirred up the spirit of Media's kings; Babylon he is resolved to destroy.
Yes, it is the vengeance of the Lord, vengeance for his temple. | 12 Against the walls of Babylon raise a signal, make strong the watch; post sentries, arrange ambushes! For the Lord has planned and he will carry out his threat against the inhabi-13 tants of Babylon. | You who dwell by mighty waters, rich in treasure, your end has come, the term at which you shall be cut off!
14 The Lord of hosts has sworn by himself: I will fill you with men as numerous as locusts, who shall raise over you the vintage 15 shout! | He has sworn who made the earth by his power, and established the world by his wisdom, and stretched out the 16 heavens by his skill. | When he thunders, the waters in the heavens roar, and he brings up clouds from the end of the earth;
he makes the lightning flash in the rain, and releases stormwinds 17 from their chambers. | Every man is stupid, ignorant; every artisan is put to shame by his idol: he molded a fraud, without 18 breath of life. | Nothingness are they, a ridiculous work, that 19 will perish in their time of punishment. | Not like these is the portion of Jacob, he is the creator of all things; Israel is his very own tribe, Lord of hosts is his name.
20 You are my hammer, my weapon for war; with you I shatter 21 nations, with you I destroy kingdoms. | With you I shatter 22 horse and rider, with you I shatter chariot and driver. | With you I shatter man and wife, with you I shatter old and young, 23 with you I shatter youth and maiden. | With you I shatter the shepherd and his flock, with you I shatter the farmer and his 24 team, with you I shatter satraps and prefects. | Thus will I repay Babylon, and all who live in Chaldea all the evil they did to Sion, as you shall see with your own eyes, says the Lord.
25 | Beware! I am against you, destroying mountain, destroyer of the entire earth, says the Lord; I will stretch forth my hand against you, roll you down over the cliffs, and make you a 26 burnt mountain: | they will not take from you a cornerstone, or a foundation stone; ruins forever shall you be, says the Lord.

51, 11: About 560 the Medes were expected to attack Babylon.

27 Raise a signal on the earth, blow the trumpet among the nations; dedicate peoples to war against her, summon against her the kingdoms, Ararat, Menni, and Aschenez; appoint recruiting officers against her, send up horses like bristling locusts 28 | Dedicate peoples to war against her: the king of Media, its 29 governors and all its prefects, every land in his domain. | The earth quakes and writhes, the Lord's plan against Babylon is carried out, turning the land of Babylon into a desert where no 30 one lives. | Babylon's warriors have ceased to fight, they remain in their strongholds; dried up is their strength, they have become women. Burned are their homes, and broken their bars.
31 | One runner meets another, herald meets herald, telling the 32 king of Babylon that all his city is taken. | The fords have been seized, and the fortresses set on fire, while warriors are in panic 33 For thus says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Daughter Babylon is like a threshing floor at the time it is trodden; yet 34 a little while, and the harvest time will come for her. | He has consumed me, routed me, [Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon,] he has left me as an empty vessel; he has swallowed me like a dragon: filled his belly with my delights, and cast me out.
35 | My torn flesh be upon Babylon, says the city on Sion; my 36 blood upon the people of Chaldea, says Jerusalem. | But now, thus says the Lord: Surely I will defend your cause, I will avenge you; I will dry up her sea, and drain her fountain. | 37 Babylon shall become a heap of ruins, a haunt of jackals; a 38 place of horror and ridicule, where no one lives. | They all roar 39 like lions, growl like lion cubs. | When they are parched, I will set a drink before them to make them drunk, that they may be overcome with perpetual sleep, never to awaken, says the Lord.
40 I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams 41 and goats. | How has she been seized, made captive, the glory of the whole world! What a horror has Babylon become among 42 nations: | against Babylon the sea rises, she is overwhelmed by 43 the roaring waves! | Her cities have become a desert, parched and arid land where no man lives, and no one passes through. | 44 I will punish Bel in Babylon, and make him disgorge what he swallowed; peoples shall stream to him no more. The wall of 45 Babylon falls! | Leave her, my people, let each one save himself from the burning wrath of the Lord.
46 Be not discouraged for fear of rumors spread in the land;
this year the rumor comes, then violence in the land, tyrant 51, 34: Me: Jerusalem.

47 against tyrant. But behold, the days are coming when I will punish the idols of Babylon; her whole land shall be put to 48 shame, and all her slain shall lie fallen within her. Then heaven, and earth, and everything in them shall shout over Babylon with joy, when the destroyers come against her from the north, says 49 the Lord. Babylon, too, must fall, O slain of Israel, as at the hands of Babylon have fallen the slain of all the earth.
50 You who have escaped the sword, go on, stand not still; remember the Lord from afar, let Jerusalem come to your minds.
51 | We are ashamed because we have heard taunts, confusion covers our faces; strangers have entered the holy places of the 52 house of the Lord. But behold, the days are coming, says the Lord, when I will punish her idols, and in her whole land the 53 wounded will groan. | Though Babylon scale the heavens, and make her strong heights inaccessible, destroyers from me shall 54 reach her, says the Lord. | Hear! loud cries from Babylon, dire
55 destruction from the land of the Chaldeans; | for the Lord lays Babylon waste, stills her loud cry, though her waves were roaring like mighty waters, and their clamor was heard afar. | 56 For the destroyer comes upon her, [Babylon,] her heroes are captured, their bows broken; the Lord is a God who requites, he will surely repay.
57 I will make her princes and her wise men drunk, her governors, her prefects, and her warriors, so that they sleep an eternal sleep, never to awaken, says the King, whose name is the Lord 58 of hosts. Thus says the Lord of hosts:
The walls of spacious Babylon shall be leveled utterly; her lofty gates shall be destroyed by fire. The toil of the nations is for nothing; for the flames the peoples weary themselves.

59 The Prophecy Sent to Babylon This was the errand given by the prophet Jeremia to Saraia, son of Neria, son of Maasia, when he went to Babylon for the king in the fourth year of the reign of Sedecia; Saraia was chief quartermaster.
60 Jeremia had written all the misfortune that was to befall Babylon in a single book: all these words that were written against 61 Babylon. And Jeremia said to Saraia: When you reach Baby-62 lon, see that you read aloud all these words, | and then say: O Lord, you yourself threatened to destroy this place, so that neither man nor beast should dwell in it, since it would remain 63 an everlasting desert. When you have finished reading this book, 51, 59-64: All the preceding parts (50, 1—51, 58) serve to introduce the present section. This symbolic act (v. 63f) perhaps refers to 29, 3.

64 tie a stone to it and throw it in the Euphrates, | and say: Thus shall Babylon sink. Never shall she rise, because of the evil I am bringing upon her. [To "weary themselves" are the words of Jeremia.]

VI. HISTORICAL APPENDIX

52

1 Capture of Jerusalem Sedecia was twenty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem.
His mother's name was Amital, daughter of Jeremia of Lobna.
2 He did what was evil in the eyes of the Lord, just as Joakim had 3 done. Indeed, what was done in Jerusalem and in Juda so angered the Lord that he cast them out from his presence.
4 Sedecia rebelled against the king of Babylon. | In the tenth month of the ninth year of his reign, on the tenth day of the month, Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and his whole army advanced against Jerusalem, encamped around it, and built 5 siege walls on every side. The siege of the city continued until the eleventh year of king Sedecia.
6 On the ninth day of the fourth month, when famine had 7 gripped the city and the people had no more bread, | the city walls were breached. Then all the soldiers took to flight and left the city by night through the gate between the two walls which was near the king's garden. With the Chaldeans sur-8 rounding the city, they went in the direction of the Araba. But the Chaldean army pursued the king and overtook Sedecia in the desert near Jericho, while his whole army fled from him.
9 The king, therefore, was arrested and brought to Ribla, in the land of Hamath, to the king of Babylon, who pronounced 10 sentence on him. As Sedecia looked on, the king of Babylon 11 slew his sons as well as all the princes of Juda at Ribla. Then he blinded Sedecia, bound him with fetters, and had him brought to Babylon and kept in prison until the day of his death.

12 Destruction of Jerusalem On the tenth day of the fifth month (this was in the nineteenth year of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon), Nabu-zardan, captain of the bodyguard came to Jerusalem as the representative of the king of Babylon.
13 He burned the house of the Lord, the palace of the king, and all the houses of Jerusalem; every large building he destroyed with 52, 1-34: The last editor of the Book of Jeremia took this appendix from 4 Kgs 24, 18—25, 30 and added it here to show the fulfillment of Jeremia's prophecies. This appendix repeats in part Jer 39—41.

14 fire. And the Chaldean troops who were with the captain of the guard tore down all the walls that surrounded Jerusalem.
15 Then Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, led into exile the rest of the people left in the city, and those who had deserted 16 to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the artisans. But some of the country's poor, Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, left behind as vinedressers and farmers.
17 The bronze pillars that belonged to the house of the Lord, and the wheeled carts and the bronze sea in the house of the Lord, the Chaldeans broke into pieces; they carried away all 18 the bronze to Babylon. They took also the pots, the shovels, the snuffers, the bowls, the pans, and all the bronze vessels used for 19 service. The basins also, the fire holders, the bowls, the pots, the lampstands, the pans, the sacrificial bowls which were of gold 20 or silver, these too the captain of the guard carried off, as well as the two pillars, the one sea, and the twelve oxen of bronze under the sea, and the wheeled carts which king Solomon had made for the house of the Lord. The bronze of all these furnishings could not be weighed.
21 Each of the pillars was eighteen cubits high, and a thread of twelve cubits encircled it; each was four fingers thick, and hol-22 low inside. A bronze capital five cubits high surmounted the one pillar, and a network with pomegranates encircled the capital, all of brass; and so for the other pillar. The pomegranates . . .
23 | there were ninety-six pomegranates. [Space.] There were a hundred pomegranates, all around the network.
24 The captain of the guard also took Saraia, the high priest, Sophonia, the second priest, and the three keepers of the entry.
25 And from the city he took one courtier, a commander of soldiers, and seven men in the personal service of the king who were present in the city, and the scribe of the army commander who mustered the people of the land, and sixty of the common peo-26 ple who were in the city. The captain of the guard, Nabu-zardan, arrested these and brought them to the king of Babylon 27 at Ribla, who had them struck down and put to death in Ribla, in the land of Hamath.
28 Thus was Juda exiled from her land. | This is the number of the people whom Nabuchodonosor led away captive: in his seventh year, three thousand and twenty-three people of Juda; 29 in the eighteenth year of Nabuchodonosor, eight hundred and 52, 28-30: This mention is lacking in the Greek text and it does not come from 4 Kgs 25, but from an unknown source which uses a different chronology. Besides the deportations of 598 and 587 B.C., mention is made here of a final one which took place in the year 582-81 B.C.

30 thirty-two persons from Jerusalem; in the twenty-third year of Nabuchodonosor, Nabu-zardan, captain of the guard, exiled seven hundred and forty-five people of Juda: four thousand six hundred persons in all.

31 Favor Shown to Joachin In the thirty-seventh year of the exile of Joachin, king of Juda, on the twenty-fifth day of the twelfth month, Evil-Merodach, king of Babylon, in the inaugural year of his reign, took up the case of Joachin, king of 32 Juda, and released him from prison. He spoke kindly to him and gave him a throne higher than that of the other kings who were 33 with him in Babylon. Joachin took off his prison garb and ate 34 at the king's table as long as he lived. The allowance given him by the king of Babylon was a perpetual allowance, in fixed daily amounts, all the days of his life until the day of his death.

THE BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS

INTRODUCTION

Shortly after the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. the Lamentations were composed not to give an historical account of the catastrophe but to stress the awareness of national guilt that brought on the destruction of Jerusalem. Besides, the overtones of God's just punishment and the future hope of restoration of the nation ring loudly in this book.

The first four Lamentations are alphabetic poems, in which each verse or stanza begins with the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Although this literary device is not rare in the Bible (see Ps 9A, 2-21 n), it was uncommon in contemporaneous Near Eastern literature. The limping rhythm of these elegiac poems is well suited to convey the deep pathos of suffering Jews contemplating the ruins of Jerusalem. Wherever sentiments reign in these poems, logical sequence becomes secondary because of the artificial structure of the Lamentations.

Jeremia's authorship of the Lamentations has been deduced from 2 Par 35, 25 where it is recorded that he wrote the Lamentation over king Josia. In the Sistine Chapel, Michelangelo painted Jeremia as the author of Lamentations, and thus reinforced this long standing belief. Modern critics doubt that Jeremia composed them, for the ideas expressed therein differ too often from the Book of Jeremia. The critics speak of one or more inspired authors other than Jeremia, though they do not deny his influence on Lamentations.

After the exile, the Lamentations were read in the synagogues annually on the ninth of Ab (July-August), the anniversary day of the burning of the temple.

In the eighth or ninth century the Lamentations became part of the Roman liturgy's Holy Week Office. They are used as a powerful expression of Christ's suffering on the cross.

The influence of the Lamentations today is felt in the world of music. There are at least nine renowned compositions including one in English, "The Lamentations of Jeremiah the Prophet" (Tallis).

1 Jerusalem Abandoned and Disgraced How lonely she is now, the once crowded city! Widowed is she who was mistress over nations; the princess among the provinces has been made a toiling slave.

2 Bitterly she weeps at night, tears upon her cheeks, with not one to console her of all her dear ones; her friends have all betrayed her and become her enemies.

1, 1: Widowed is she: the prophet and other Near Eastern writers often personified a city as a widow to express poverty and abandonment. In Hebrew society a widow loses her possessions to her husband's relatives.

3 Juda has fled into exile from oppression and cruel slavery;
yet where she lives among the nations she finds no place to rest:
all her persecutors come upon her where she is narrowly confined.
4 The roads to Sion mourn for lack of pilgrims going to her feasts; all her gateways are deserted, her priests groan, her virgins sigh;
she is in bitter grief.
5 Her foes are uppermost, her enemies are at ease; the Lord has punished her for her many sins.
Her little ones have gone away, captive before the foe.
6 Gone from daughter Sion is all her glory: her princes, like rams that find no pasture, have gone off without strength before their captors.
7 Jerusalem is mindful of the days of her wretched homelessness, when her people fell into enemy hands, and she had no one to help her;
when her foes gloated over her, laughed at her ruin.
8 Through the sin of which she is guilty, Jerusalem is defiled;
all who esteemed her think her vile now that they see her nakedness;
she herself groans and turns away.
9 Her filth is on her skirt; she gave no thought how she would end.
Astounding is her downfall, with no one to console her.
Look, O Lord, upon her misery, for the enemy has triumphed!
10 The foe stretched out his hand to all her treasures;
she has seen those nations enter her sanctuary whom you forbade to come into your assembly.
11 All her people groan, searching for bread; they give their treasures for food, to retain the breath of life.
"Look, O Lord, and see how worthless I have become!
12 "Come, all you who pass by the way, look and see whether there is any suffering like my suffering, which has been dealt me when the Lord afflicted me on the day of his blazing wrath.
13 "From on high he sent fire down into my very frame; he spread a net for my feet, and overthrew me.
He left me desolate, in pain all the day.

1, 5: The Lord has punished her for her many sins: this theological view of history, which bypasses secondary causes and says that the people were punished for their sins, runs through the prophetic books of the exile.

1, 9: She sank so deeply in the mire of immorality that even her skirt became soiled.

1, 11: "Look, O Lord, and see": from this verse onward the poet ceases to lament, and Jerusalem is personified as the lamenting speaker.

1, 12: A popular verse in the Roman liturgy, e.g., the Gradual of the Feast of the Sacred Heart.

14 "He has kept watch over my sins; by his hand they have been plaited: they have settled about my neck, he has brought my strength to its knees; the Lord has delivered me into their grip, I am unable to rise.
15 "All the mighty ones in my midst the Lord has cast away;
he summoned an army against me to crush my young men;
the Lord has trodden in the wine press virgin daughter Juda.
16 "At this I weep, my eyes run with tears: far from me are all who could console me, any who might revive me; my sons were reduced to silence when the enemy prevailed." 17 Sion stretched out her hands, but there was no one to console her; the Lord gave orders against Jacob for his neighbors to be his foes; Jerusalem has become in their midst a thing unclean.
18 "The Lord is just; I had defied his command. Listen, all you peoples, and behold my suffering: my maidens and my youths have gone into captivity.
19 "I cried out to my lovers, but they failed me. My priests and my elders perished in the city; where they sought food for themselves, they found it not.
20 "Look, O Lord, upon my distress: all within me is in ferment, my heart recoils within me from my monstrous rebellion. In the streets the sword bereaves, at home death stalks.
21 "Give heed to my groaning; there is no one to console me.
All my enemies rejoice at my misfortune: it is you who have wrought it. Bring on the day you have proclaimed, that they may be even as I.
22 "Let all their evil come before you; deal with them as you have dealt with me for all my sins; my groans are many, and I am sick at heart."

2

1 The Lord's Wrath against Sion How the Lord in his wrath has detested daughter Sion! He has cast down from 1, 14: My sins . . . plaited . . . about my neck: the people's sins were strung together as a yoke upon them.

1, 15: The Lord has trodden in the wine press: see the same imagery in Is 63, 3.

1, 19: My lovers: Jeremia frequently used this term to signify Jerusalem's political allies who proved unfaithful in time of need.

1, 21: That they may be even as I: for the notion of revenge see Jer 12, 3 n.

2, 1-22: This poem is poetically superior to the first poem because it expresses deeper and more delicate sentiments.

2, 1: The glory of Israel: the Jerusalem temple. Footstool: the Ark of the Covenant or the temple.

heaven to earth the glory of Israel, unmindful of his footstool on the day of his wrath.

2 The Lord has consumed without pity all the dwellings of Jacob; he has torn down in his anger the fortresses of daughter Juda; he has brought to the ground in dishonor her king and her princes.

3 He broke off, in fiery wrath, the horn that was Israel's whole strength; he withheld the support of his right hand when the enemy approached; he blazed up in Jacob like a flaming fire devouring all about it.

4 Like an enemy he made taut his bow; with his arrows in his right hand he took his stand as a foe, and slew all on whom the eye doted; over the tent of daughter Sion he poured out his wrath like fire.

5 The Lord has become an enemy, he has consumed Israel: consumed all her castles and destroyed her fortresses; for daughter Juda he has multiplied moaning and groaning.

6 He has demolished his shelter like a garden booth, he has destroyed his dwelling; in Sion the Lord has made feast and Sabbath to be forgotten; he has scorned in fierce wrath both king and priest.

7 The Lord has disowned his altar, rejected his sanctuary; the walls of her towers he has handed over to the enemy, who shout in the house of the Lord as on a feast day.

8 The Lord marked for destruction the wall of daughter Sion: he stretched out the measuring line; his hand brought ruin, yet he did not relent—he brought grief on wall and rampart till both succumbed.

9 Sunk into the ground are her gates; he has removed and broken her bars. Her king and her princes are among the pagans; priestly instruction is wanting, and her prophets have not received any vision from the Lord.

10 On the ground in silence sit the old men of daughter Sion; they strew dust on their heads and gird themselves with sackcloth; the maidens of Jerusalem bow their heads to the ground.

11 Worn out from weeping are my eyes, within me all is in ferment; my gall is poured out on the ground because of the downfall of the daughter of my people, as child and infant faint away in the open spaces of the town.

12 They ask their mothers, "Where is the cereal?"—in vain, as

2, 3: Horn: strength.
2, 8: The measuring line: it is used here with destructive intent.
2, 10: Dust . . . sackcloth: signs of mourning.
2, 11: My gall . . . ground: I am in deep anguish.

they faint away like the wounded in the streets of the city, and breathe their last in their mothers' arms.

13 To what can I liken or compare you, O daughter Jerusalem?
What example can I show you for your comfort, virgin daughter Sion?
For great as the sea is your downfall; who can heal you?

14 Your prophets had for you false and specious visions; they did not lay bare your guilt, to avert your fate;
they beheld for you in vision false and misleading portents.

15 All who pass by clap their hands at you;
they hiss and wag their heads over daughter Jerusalem:
"Is this the all-beautiful city, the joy of the whole earth?"

16 All your enemies open their mouths against you; they hiss and gnash their teeth. They say,
"We have devoured her. This at last is the day we hoped for;
we have lived to see it!"

17 The Lord has done as he decreed: he has fulfilled the threat he set forth from the days of old;
he has destroyed and had no pity, letting the enemy gloat over you and exalting the horn of your foes.

18 Cry out to the Lord; moan, O daughter Sion!
Let your tears flow like a torrent day and night;
let there be no respite for you, no repose for your eyes.

19 Rise up, shrill in the night, at the beginning of every watch; pour out your heart like water in the presence of the Lord;
lift up your hands to him for the lives of your little ones [who faint from hunger at the corner of every street].

20 "Look, O Lord, and consider: whom have you ever treated thus?
Must women eat their offspring, their well-formed children?
Are priest and prophet to be slain in the sanctuary of the Lord?

21 "Dead in the dust of the streets lie young and old;
my maidens and young men have fallen by the sword;
you have slain on the day of your wrath, slaughtered without pity.

22 "You summoned as for a feast day terrors against me from all sides; there was not, on the day of your wrath, either fugitive or survivor;
those whom I bore and reared my enemy has utterly destroyed."

2, 13: The poet hyperbolically claims that, if he had some kind of a comparison of Jerusalem's suffering, it would at least be of some consolation.

2, 15: The joy of the whole earth: a hyperbole because, although to the Jews Jerusalem was one of the wonders of the world, it was small in comparison to Babylon and other pagan capitals.

2, 17: Horn: strength.

2, 20: See 4 Kgs 6, 28f, describing that women ate their children during the siege of Jerusalem.

Sufferings of the Prophet and His People

1 I am a man
2 who knows affliction from the rod of his anger, | one whom he has led and forced to walk in darkness, not in the light; 3 against me alone he brings back his hand again and again all the day.
4 He has worn away my flesh and my skin, he has broken my 5 bones; | he has beset me round about with poverty and weari-
6 ness; | he has left me to dwell in the dark like those long dead.
7 He has hemmed me in with no escape and weighed me down 8 with chains; | even when I cry out for help, he stops my 9 prayer; | he has blocked my ways with fitted stones, and turned my paths aside.
10.11 A lurking bear he has been to me, a lion in ambush! | He 12 deranged my ways, set me astray, left me desolate. | He bent his bow, and set me up as the target for his arrow.
13.14 He pierces my sides with shafts from his quiver. | I have become a laughingstock for all nations, their taunt all the day 15 long; | he has sated me with bitter food, made me drink my fill of wormwood.
16 He has broken my teeth with gravel, pressed my face in the 17 dust; | my soul is deprived of peace, I have forgotten what 18 happiness is; | I tell myself my future is lost, all that I hoped for from the Lord.
19 The thought of my homeless poverty is wormwood and gall 20 | remembering it over and over leaves my soul downcast within 21 me. | But I will call this to mind, as my reason to have hope:
22 The favors of the Lord are not exhausted, his mercies are not 23 spent; | they are renewed each morning, so great is his faith-24 fulness. | My portion is the Lord, says my soul; therefore will I hope in him.
25 Good is the Lord to one who waits for him, to the soul that 26 seeks him; | it is good to hope in silence for the saving help of 27 the Lord. | It is good for a man to bear the yoke from his youth.
28 Let him sit alone and in silence, when it is laid upon him.
29 Let him put his mouth to the dust; there may yet be hope.
30 Let him offer his cheek to be struck, let him be filled with disgrace.

3, 1-21: The author makes his own the excruciating sufferings of Jerusalem.

3, 24: My portion is the Lord: we would say: God is everything to me.

3, 27: To bear the yoke: to do the will of God.

3, 29: Let him submit.

31.32 For the Lord's rejection does not last forever; though he 33 punishes, he takes pity, in the abundance of his mercies; | he has no joy in afflicting or grieving the sons of men.
34 When anyone tramples underfoot all the prisoners in the 35 land, when he distorts men's rights in the very sight of the 36 Most High, | when he presses a crooked claim, the Lord does not look on unconcerned.
37 Who commands, so that it comes to pass, except the Lord 38 ordains it; | except it proceeds from the mouth of the Most 39 High, whether the thing be good or bad! | Why should any living man complain, any mortal, in the face of his sins?
40 Let us search and examine our ways that we may return to the 41 Lord! | Let us reach out our hearts toward God in heaven! | 42 We have sinned and rebelled; you have not forgiven us.
43 You veiled yourself in wrath and pursued us, you slew us and 44 took no pity; you wrapped yourself in a cloud which prayer 45 could not pierce. | You have made us offscourings and refuse among the nations.
46 All our enemies have opened their mouths against us; | 47 terror and the pit have been our lot, desolation and destruction; 48 | my eyes run with streams of water over the downfall of the daughter of my people.
49.50 My eyes flow without ceasing, there is no respite, | till the 51 Lord from heaven looks down and sees. | My eyes torment my soul at the sight of all the daughters of my city.
52 Those who were my enemies without cause hunted me down 53 like a bird; | they struck me down alive in the pit, and sealed
54 me in with a stone. | The waters flowed over my head, and I said, "I am lost!" 55 I called upon your name, O Lord, from the bottom of the 56 pit; | you heard me call, "Let not your ear be deaf to my cry
57 for help!" | You came to my aid when I called to you; you said,
"Have no fear!"
58 You defended me in mortal danger, you redeemed my life. |
59.60 You see, O Lord, how I am wronged; do me justice! | You see all their vindictiveness, all their plots against me.
61 You hear their insults, O Lord, [all their plots against me], 62 | the whispered murmurings of my foes, against me all the 63 day; | whether they sit or stand, see, I am their taunt song.
64 Requite them as they deserve, O Lord, according to their 65 deeds; | give them hardness of heart, as your curse upon them;
66 | pursue them in wrath and destroy them from under your heavens!

3, 64-66: See Jer 12, 3 n.

1 Miseries of the Besieged City How tarnished is the gold, how changed the noble metal; how the sacred stones lie strewn at every street corner!
2 Sion's precious sons, fine gold their counterpart, now worth no more than earthen jars made by the hands of a potter!
3 Even the jackals bare their breasts and suckle their young;
the daughter of my people has become as cruel as the ostrich in the desert.
4 The tongue of the suckling cleaves to the roof of its mouth in thirst; the babes cry for food, but there is no one to give it to them.
5 Those accustomed to dainty food perish in the streets; those brought up in purple now cling to the ash heaps.
6 The punishment of the daughter of my people is greater than the penalty of Sodom, which was overthrown in an instant without the turning of a hand.
7 Brighter than snow were her princes, whiter than milk, more ruddy than coral, more precious than sapphire.
8 Now their appearance is blacker than soot, they are unrecognized on the streets; their skin shrinks on their bones, as dry as wood.
9 Better for those who perish by the sword than for those who die of hunger, who waste away, as though pierced through, lacking the fruits of the field!
10 The hands of compassionate women boiled their own children, to serve them as mourners' food in the downfall of the daughter of my people.
11 The Lord has spent his anger, poured out his blazing wrath;
he has kindled a fire in Sion that has consumed her foundations.
12 The kings of the earth did not believe, nor any of the world's inhabitants, that enemy or foe could enter the gates of Jerusalem.
13 Because of the sins of her prophets and the crimes of her priests, who shed in her midst the blood of the just!— 14 They staggered blindly in the streets, soiled with blood, so that people could not touch even their garments: 15 "Away, you unclean!" they cried to them, "Away, away, do

4, 1: Important men of Jerusalem are thrown out on the streets.
4, 3: Jackals and ostriches in the Bible are considered to be deprived of all maternal instinct. But even jackals fed their young, while mothers were unable to do so. Cruel as an ostrich: Jerusalem abandons her children like an ostrich abandons its eggs on the sunny sand.
4, 13: The prophets and priests gave false assurances to the people that society was living according to God's law. See Jer 5, 31.

not draw near!" If they left and wandered among the nations, nowhere could they remain.
16 The Lord himself has dispersed them, he regards them no more; he does not receive the priests with favor, nor show kindness to the elders.
17 Our eyes ever wasted away, looking in vain for aid; from our watchtower we watched for a nation that could not save us.
18 Men dogged our steps so that we could not walk in our streets; our end drew near, and came; our time had expired.
19 Our pursuers were swifter than eagles in the air, they harassed us on the mountains and waylaid us in the desert.
20 The anointed one of the Lord, our breath of life, was caught in their snares, he in whose shadow we thought we could live on among the nations.
21 Though you rejoice and are glad, O daughter Edom, you who dwell in the land of Us, to you also shall the cup be passed;
you shall become drunk and naked.
22 Your chastisement is completed, O daughter Sion, he will not prolong your exile; but your wickedness, O daughter Edom, he will punish, he will lay bare your sins.

1 The Prophet's Lament and Supplication Remember 2 O Lord, what has befallen us, look, and see our disgrace: | our inherited lands have been turned over to strangers, our homes 3 to foreigners. | We have become orphans, fatherless; widowed 4 are our mothers. | The water we drink we must buy, for our 5 own wood we must pay. | On our necks is the yoke of those who drive us; we are worn out, but allowed no rest.
6 To Egypt we submitted, and to Assyria, to fill our need of 7 bread. | Our fathers, who sinned, are no more; but we bear
8 their guilt. | Slaves rule over us; there is no one to rescue us
9 from their hands. | At the peril of our lives we bring in our 10 sustenance, in the face of the desert heat; | our skin is shriveled

4, 17: A nation: Egypt did not help Juda against Babylon. See Jer 37, 5ff.

4, 19: Our pursuers: the Babylonians.

4, 20: Our breath of life: a royal Egyptian title for the king. Seneca calls the emperor, "Vital Spirit."

4, 21: Cup: of affliction.

5, 1-22: This is not an alphabetic poem as the others, but a prayer of hope in God.

5, 6: Assyria: a general term for whoever was the master of Mesopotamia. At this time it was Babylon.

5, 7: This verse shows the notion of collective responsibility.

5, 8: Slaves: a reference to foreign officials ruling the Jews.

up, as though by a furnace, with the searing blasts of famine.
11 The wives in Sion were ravished by the enemy, the maidens
12 in the cities of Juda; | princes were gibbeted by them, elders
13 shown no respect. | The youths carry the millstones, boys
14 stagger under their loads of wood; | the old men have abandoned the gate, the young men their music.
15 The joy of our hearts has ceased, our dance has turned into 16 mourning; | the garlands have fallen from our heads: woe to 17 us, for we have sinned! | Over this our hearts are sick, at this 18 our eyes grow dim: | that Mount Sion should be desolate, with jackals roaming there!
19 You, O Lord, are enthroned forever; your throne stands from 20 age to age. | Why, then, should you forget us, abandon us so
21 long a time? | Lead us back to you, O Lord, that we may be 22 restored: give us anew such days as we had of old. | For now you have indeed rejected us, and in full measure turned your wrath against us.

5, 14: Gate: the place of assembly where the important decisions of city life took place.

5, 16: The garlands have fallen from our heads: this is remarkably reminiscent of medieval art portraying the "Synagogue" as a lady with a falling crown. See Jer 13, 18.

5, 20: A rhetorical question to ask for forgiveness.

THE BOOK OF BARUCH

INTRODUCTION

Modern scholars tend to date the Book of Baruch from the end of the second century or the beginning of the first century B.C. They also tend to classify it as pseudepigraphic. This is to say, the author or authors, or the editor, assumed the name of a famous person to lend his work prestige and authority. The famous person here is Jeremia's secretary, Baruch, of the sixth century B.C. See Jer 36, 4ff. Both the author and his readers were accustomed to this literary device (Bar 1, 1), of which the Book of Daniel is another example.

The Book of Baruch is a collection of five independent compositions, which may have existed separately at first. Only a few scholars state that the book was written for the liturgy. It was originally composed in Hebrew, in whole or in part, but it is known only in its Greek translation.

The work is intended for exiles whose sad conditions resemble those of the Jews living in the Babylonian exile of the sixth century. The value of this inspired book is the rough sketch it affords of the religious life of the Jews living outside of Palestine: a life of prayer, of reverent attitude toward the Mosaic Law, and of high hopes for the future.

Although Catholics consider this book inspired, the Jews and Protestants do not.

Main divisions of the Book of Baruch are:

1. Prayer of the Exiles, 1, 1—3, 8
2. Praise of Wisdom in the Law of Moses, 3, 9—4, 4
3. Jerusalem Bewails and Consoles Her Captive Children, 4, 5-29
4. Jerusalem Consoled: The Captivity about to End, 4, 30—5, 9
5. The Letter of Jeremia against Idolatry, 6, 1-72

I. PRAYER OF THE EXILES

1 Meeting in Babylon Now these are the words of the scroll which Baruch, son of Neria, son of Maasia, son of 2 Sedecia, son of Asadia, son of Helcia, wrote in Babylon, | in the fifth year [on the seventh day of the month, at the time when 3 the Chaldeans took Jerusalem and burnt it with fire]. And Baruch read the words of this scroll for Jechonia, son of Joakim, king of Juda, to hear it, as well as all the people who

---

1, 1: According to pseudepigraphic writing (see Introduction) the author is presented as Baruch, an exile who wrote in sixth century Babylon.

1, 2: On the seventh day of the month: the text should read ". . . of the fifth month," according to 4 Kgs 25, 8.

4 came to the reading: the nobles, the kings' sons, the elders, and the whole people, small and great alike—all who lived in Babylon by the river Sud.
5.6 They wept and fasted and prayed before the Lord, and col-7 lected such funds as each could furnish. These they sent to Jerusalem, to Joakim, son of Helcia, son of Salom, the priest, and to the priests and the whole people who were with him in Jerusa-8 lem. [This was when he received the vessels of the house of the Lord that had been removed from the temple, to restore them to the land of Juda, on the tenth of Sivan. These silver vessels 9 Sedecia, son of Josia, king of Juda, had had made | after Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, carried off Jechonia, and the princes, and the skilled workers, and the nobles, and the people of the land from Jerusalem, as captives, and brought them to Babylon.] 10 Their message was: "We send you funds, with which you are to procure holocausts, sin offerings, and frankincense, and to prepare cereal offerings; offer these on the altar of the Lord 11 our God, and pray for the life of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and that of Baltasar, his son, that their lifetimes may 12 equal the duration of the heavens above the earth; and that the Lord may give us strength, and light to our eyes, that we may live under the protective shadow of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon, and that of Baltasar, his son, and serve them long, finding favor in their sight.

13 Confession of Guilt "Pray for us also to the Lord, our God; for we have sinned against the Lord, our God, and the wrath and anger of the Lord have not yet been withdrawn from 14 us at the present day. And read out publicly this scroll which we send you, in the house of the Lord, on the feast day and during the days of assembly: 15 "Justice is with the Lord, our God; and we today are flushed 16 with shame, we men of Juda and citizens of Jerusalem, | that we, with our kings and rulers and priests and prophets, and with 17.18 our fathers, | have sinned in the Lord's sight | and disobeyed him. We have neither heeded the voice of the Lord, our God, 19 nor followed the precepts which the Lord set before us. From 1, 4: The river Sud: an unidentified Babylonian canal.

the time the Lord led our fathers out of the land of Egypt until the present day, we have been disobedient to the Lord, our God, 20 and only too ready not to heed his voice. And the evils and the curse which the Lord enjoined upon Moses, his servant, at the time he led our fathers forth from the land of Egypt to give us the land flowing with milk and honey, cling to us even today.
21 For we did not heed the voice of the Lord, our God, in all the 22 words of the prophets whom he sent us, | but each one of us went off after the devices of our own wicked hearts, served other gods, and did evil in the sight of the Lord, our God.

1 "And the Lord fulfilled the warning he had uttered against us: against our judges, who governed Israel, against our kings 2 and princes, and against the men of Israel and Juda. He brought down upon us evils so great that there has not been done anywhere under heaven what has been done in Jerusalem, as was 3 written in the law of Moses: that one after another of us should 4 eat the flesh of his son or of his daughter. He has made us subject to all the kingdoms round about us, a reproach and a horror among all the nations round about to which the Lord 5 has scattered us. We are brought low, not raised up, because we sinned against the Lord, our God, not heeding his voice.
6 "Justice is with the Lord, our God; and we, like our fathers, 7 are flushed with shame even today. All the evils of which the 8 Lord had warned us have come upon us; and we did not plead before the Lord, or turn, each from the figments of his evil 9 heart. And the Lord kept watch over the evils, and brought them home to us; for the Lord is just in all the works he 10 commanded us to do, but we did not heed his voice, or follow the precepts of the Lord which he set before us.

11 Prayer for Deliverance "And now, Lord, God of Israel, you who led your people out of the land of Egypt with your mighty hand, with signs and wonders and great might, and with your upraised arm, so that you have made for yourself a 12 name till the present day: we have sinned, been impious, and 13 violated, O Lord, our God, all your statutes. Let your anger be withdrawn from us, for we are left few in number among the 14 nations to which you scattered us. Hear, O Lord, our prayer of supplication, and deliver us for your own sake: grant us 15 favor in the presence of our captors, that the whole earth may know that you are the Lord, our God, and that Israel and his 16 descendants bear your name. O Lord, look down from your holy dwelling and take thought of us; turn, O Lord, your ear to 17 hear us. Look directly at us, and behold: it is not the dead in the nether world, whose spirits have been taken from within them, 18 who will give glory and vindication to the Lord. He whose soul is deeply grieved, who walks bowed and feeble, with failing eyes and famished soul, will declare your glory and justice, Lord!

19 "Not on the just deeds of our fathers and our kings do we 20 base our plea for mercy in your sight, O Lord, our God. You have brought your wrath and anger down upon us, as you had 21 warned us through your servants the prophets: | 'Thus says the Lord: Bend your shoulders to the service of the king of Babylon, that you may continue in the land I gave your fathers: 22 for if you do not hear the Lord's voice so as to serve the king 23 of Babylon, | I will make to cease from the cities of Juda and from the streets of Jerusalem the sounds of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom and the voice of the bride; and all the land shall be deserted, without inhabitants.'

24 But we did not heed your voice, or serve the king of Babylon, and you fulfilled the threats you had made through your servants the prophets, to have the bones of our kings and the bones 25 of our fathers brought out from their burial places. And indeed, they lie exposed to the heat of day and the frost of night. They 26 died in dire anguish, by hunger and the sword and plague. And you reduced the house which bears your name to what it is today, for the wickedness of the kingdom of Israel and the kingdom of Juda.

27 God's Promises Recalled "But with us, O Lord, our God, you have dealt in all your clemency and in all your great 28 mercy. This was your warning through your servant Moses, the day you ordered him to write down your law in the presence 29 of the Israelites: If you do not heed my voice, surely this great and numerous throng will dwindle away among the nations to 30 which I will scatter them. For I know they will not heed me, because they are a stiff-necked people. But in the land of their 31 captivity they shall have a change of heart; they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God. I will give them hearts, and 32 heedful ears; | and they shall praise me in the land of their 33 captivity, and shall invoke my name. Then they shall turn back from their stiff-necked stubbornness, and from their evil deeds, because they shall remember the fate of their fathers who sinned 34 against the Lord. And I will bring them back to the land which with my oath I promised to their fathers, to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; and they shall rule it. I will make them increase; they 35 shall not then diminish. And I will establish for them, as an eternal covenant, that I will be their God, and they shall be my people; and I will not again remove my people Israel from the land I gave them.

1 "Lord Almighty, God of Israel, afflicted souls and dismayed 2 spirits call to you. Hear, O Lord, for you are a God of mercy; 3 and have mercy on us, who have sinned against you: for you 4 are enthroned forever, while we are perishing forever. Lord Almighty, God of Israel, hear the prayer of Israel's few, the sons of those who sinned against you; they did not heed the 5 voice of the Lord, their God, and the evils cling to us. Remember at this time not the misdeeds of our fathers, but your own hand 6 and name: for you are the Lord, our God; and you, O Lord, we 7 will praise! For this, you put into our hearts the fear of you: that we may call upon your name, and praise you in our captivity, when we have removed from our hearts all the wicked-8 ness of our fathers who sinned against you. Behold us today in our captivity, where you scattered us, a reproach, a curse, and a requital for all the misdeeds of our fathers, who withdrew from the Lord, our God."

II. PRAISE OF WISDOM IN THE LAW OF MOSES

9 Hear, O Israel, the commandments of life: listen, and know

3, 9—4, 4: This poem personifies wisdom as the Mosaic Law (see 4, 1). The main teaching is: if the exiles (3, 10) do not follow wisdom (law), they will perish.

3, 9: Hear, O Israel: in the Wisdom books of the Bible, the sage of a wisdom poem addresses circles of disciples. Here the sage addresses all his nation, and even the fate of the Gentile nations is decided in relation to wisdom (law), 3, 15-19.

10 prudence! | How is it, Israel, that you are in the land of your foes, grown old in a foreign land, defiled with the dead, 11.12 accounted with those destined for the nether world? | You 13 have forsaken the fountain of wisdom! | Had you walked in the way of God, you would have dwelt in enduring peace. | 14 Learn where prudence is, where strength, where understanding, that you may know also where are length of days, and life, where light of the eyes, and peace.
15 Who has found the place of wisdom, who has entered into 16 her treasuries? | Where are the rulers of the nations, they who 17 lorded it over the wild beasts of the earth, | and made sport of the birds of the heavens: they who heaped up the silver and the gold in which men trust; of whose possessions there was no 18 end? | They schemed anxiously for money, but there is no trace 19 of their work: | they have vanished down into the nether world, and others have risen up in their stead.
20 Later generations have seen the light, have dwelt in the land, 21 but the way to understanding they have not known, | they have not perceived her paths, or reached her; their offspring were far 22 from the way to her. | She has not been heard of in Chanaan, 23 nor seen in Theman. | The sons of Agar who seek knowledge on earth, the merchants of Madian and Theman, the phrase-makers seeking knowledge, these have not known the way to wisdom, nor have they her paths in mind.
24 O Israel, how vast is the house of God, how broad the scope of 25 his dominion: | vast and endless, high and immeasurable! |
26 In it were born the giants, renowned at the first, stalwarts
27 skilled in war. | Not these did God choose, nor did he give them 28 the way of understanding; | they perished for lack of prudence,
29 perished through their folly. | Who has gone up to the heavens 30 and taken her, or brought her down from the clouds? | Who has crossed the sea and found her, bearing her away rather than 31 choice gold? | None knows the way to her, nor has any understood her paths.

3, 15-19: The rulers and the people they represented, in spite of worldly riches, died without wisdom (law).

3, 16: Even the domestication of animals and the capture of birds is inferior to true wisdom (law).

3, 22-23: Even the peoples who were reputed for wisdom did not possess true wisdom (law), namely, the Chanaanites, Edomites ("Theman"), the Arabs ("sons of Agar").

3, 24: The house of God: the world.

3, 26-28: Even the ancient giants died without wisdom (law).

3, 29-31: The conquest of true wisdom (law) is impossible by human means.

32 Yet he who knows all things knows her; he has probed her by his knowledge—he who established the earth for all time, and 33 filled it with four-footed beasts; | he who dismisses the light, 34 and it departs, calls it, and it obeys him trembling; | before 35 whom the stars at their posts shine and rejoice; | when he calls them, they answer, "Here we are!" shining with joy for 36 their Maker. | Such is our God; no other is to be compared to 37 him: | he has traced out all the way of understanding, and has given her to Jacob, his servant, to Israel, his beloved son.
38 Since then she has appeared on earth, and moved among men.

1 She is the book of the precepts of God, the Law that endures forever; all who cling to her will live, but those will die who 2 forsake her. | Turn, O Jacob, and receive her: walk by her light
3 toward splendor. | Give not your glory to another, your privi-
4 leges to an alien race. | Blessed are we, O Israel; for what pleases God is known to us!

III. JERUSALEM BEWAILS AND CONSOLES HER CAPTIVE CHILDREN

5.6 Fear not, my people! Remember, Israel, | you were sold to the nations not for your destruction; it was because you angered 7 God that you were handed over to your foes. | For you provoked 8 your Maker with sacrifices to demons, to no-gods; | you forsook the Eternal God who nourished you, and you grieved 9 Jerusalem who fostered you. | She indeed saw coming upon you the anger of God; and she said:

"Hear, you neighbors of Sion! God has brought great mourn-10 ing upon me, | for I have seen the captivity that the Eternal 11 God has brought upon my sons and daughters. | With joy I fostered them; but with mourning and lament I let them go. | 12 Let no one gloat over me, a widow, bereft of many: for the sins of my children I am left desolate, because they turned from the 13 law of God, | and did not acknowledge his statutes; in the ways of God's commandments they did not walk, nor did they tread the disciplined paths of his justice.
14 "Let Sion's neighbors come, to take note of the captivity of 3, 32-37: Only God has true wisdom (32-36), and He has given it out of love to a chosen people, to "Israel, his beloved son" (37).

4, 1: This is the dazzling climax of the poem when wisdom is finally identified as the Mosaic Law.

my sons and daughters, brought upon them by the Eternal 15 God. | He has brought against them a nation from afar, a nation ruthless and of alien speech, that has neither reverence 16 for age nor tenderness for childhood; | they have led away this widow's cherished sons, have left me solitary, without daughters.
17.18 | What can I do to help you? | He who has brought this evil upon you must himself deliver you from your enemies' hands.
19.20 | Farewell, my children, farewell: I am left desolate. | I have taken off the garment of peace, have put on sackcloth for my prayer of supplication, and while I live I will cry out to the Eternal God.
21 "Fear not, my children; call upon God, who will deliver you 22 from oppression at enemy hands. | I have trusted in the Eternal God for your welfare, and joy has come to me from the Holy One because of the mercy that will swiftly reach you from 23 your eternal savior. | With mourning and lament I sent you forth, but God will give you back to me with enduring gladness 24 and joy. | As Sion's neighbors lately saw you taken captive, so shall they soon see God's salvation come to you, with great glory and the splendor of the Eternal God.
25 "My children, bear patiently the anger that has come from God upon you; your enemies have persecuted you, and you will 26 soon see their destruction and trample upon their necks. | My pampered children have trodden rough roads, carried off by 27 their enemies like sheep in a raid. | Fear not, my children; call out to God! He who brought this upon you will remember you.
28 | As your hearts have been disposed to stray from God, turn 29 now ten times the more to seek him; | for he who has brought disaster upon you will, in saving you, bring you back enduring joy."

IV. JERUSALEM CONSOLED: THE CAPTIVITY ABOUT TO END

30 Fear not, Jerusalem! He who gave you your name is your 31 encouragement. | Fearful are those who harmed you, who 32 rejoiced at your downfall; | fearful are the cities where your 33 children were enslaved, fearful the city that took your sons. | As that city rejoiced at your collapse, and made merry at your 4, 25: Since the author did not yet know of eternal punishment, he could see only temporal punishment as executing God's justice.

4, 30: He who gave you your name: a reference to Is 60, 14: "They shall call you 'City of the Lord' . . ."

34 downfall, so shall she grieve over her own desolation. | I will take from her the joyous throngs, and her exultation shall be 35 turned to mourning: | for fire shall come upon her from the Eternal God, for a long time, and demons shall dwell in her from that time on.
36 Look to the east, Jerusalem! behold the joy that comes to you 37 from God. | Here come your sons whom you once let go, gathered in from the east and from the west by the word of the Holy One, rejoicing in the glory of God.

1 Jerusalem, take off your robe of mourning and misery; put 2 on the splendor of glory from God forever: | wrapped in the cloak of justice from God, bear on your head the mitre that 3 displays the glory of the eternal name. | For God will show 4 all the earth your splendor: | you will be named by God forever the peace of justice, the glory of God's worship.
5 Up, Jerusalem! stand upon the heights; look to the east and see your children gathered from the east and the west at the word of the Holy One, rejoicing that they are remembered by 6 God. | Led away on foot by their enemies they left you: but God will bring them back to you borne aloft in glory as on 7 royal thrones. | For God has commanded that every lofty mountain be made low, and that the age-old depths and gorges be filled to level ground, that Israel may advance secure in the 8 glory of God. | The forests and every fragrant kind of tree 9 have overshadowed Israel at God's command; | for God is leading Israel in joy by the light of his glory, with his mercy for company.

V. THE LETTER OF JEREMIA AGAINST IDOLATRY

1 A copy of the letter which Jeremia sent to those who were being led captive to Babylon by the king of the Babylonians, to convey to them what God had commanded him.

4, 35: Reflecting ancient ideas, the Bible often refers to the desert and abandoned places as the hovels of demons. See Tb 8, 3.

4, 36: This verse is fused with 5, 5a and used in the Communion verse of the Second Sunday of Advent in the Roman Liturgy.

5, 5a: See liturgical use in 4, 36 n.

5, 7: A reference to Is 40, 3-4.

6, 1-72: This letter is attributed to Jeremia who actually had sent a letter of encouragement to the exiles (Jer 29, 1ff). It is an earnest satire

For the sins you committed before God, you are being le captive to Babylon by Nabuchodonosor, king of the Babylonians 2 When you reach Babylon you will be there many years, a perio seven generations long; after which I will bring you back fro 3 there in peace. And now in Babylon you will see borne upo men's shoulders gods of silver and gold and wood, which cas 4 fear upon the pagans. Take care that you yourselves do no 5 imitate their alien example and stand in fear of them, whe you see the crowd before them and behind worshiping them Rather, say in your hearts, "You, O Lord, are to be wor 6 shiped!"; | for my angel is with you, and he is the custodia of your lives.
7 Their tongues are smoothed by woodworkers; they ar covered with gold and silver—but they are a fraud, and canno 8 speak. People bring gold, as to a maiden in love with ornament 9 and furnish crowns for the heads of their gods. Then sometime the priests take the silver and gold from their gods and spen 10 it on themselves, or give part of it to the harlots on the terrace
They trick them out in garments like men, these gods of silve 11 and gold and wood; but though they are wrapped in purpl 12 clothing, they are not safe from corrosion or insects. They wip their faces clean of the house dust which is thick upon them 13 Each has a scepter, like the human ruler of a district; but none 14 does away with those that offend against it. Each has in it right hand an axe or dagger, but it cannot save itself from wa or pillage. Thus it is known they are not gods; do not fear them.
15.16 As useless as one's broken tools | are their gods, set up in their houses; their eyes are full of dust from the feet of 17 those who enter. Their courtyards are walled in like those of a man brought to execution for a crime against the king; the priests reinforce their houses with gates and bars and bolts, 18 lest they be carried off by robbers. They light more lamps for them than for themselves, yet not one of these can they see.
19 They are like any beam in the house; it is said their hearts are eaten away. Though the insects out of the ground consume them 20 and their garments, they do not feel it. Their faces are blackened 21 by the smoke of the house. Bats and swallows alight on their 22 bodies and on their heads; and cats as well as birds. Know, therefore, that they are not gods, and do not fear them.

against idolatry. See Is 44, 9-20 n on the Jewish understanding of idolatry.

6. 2: Seven generations: the author multiplies the "seventy years" of Jer 29, 10 by three or four times. It may indicate the late date of the writing.

6, 10: Harlots: prostitutes of the fertility cult.

23 Despite the gold that covers them for adornment, unless someone wipes away the corrosion, they do not shine; nor did 24 they feel anything when they were molded. They are bought 25 at any price, and there is no spirit in them. Having no feet, they are carried on men's shoulders, displaying their shame to all; 26 and those who worship them are put to confusion | because, if they fall to the ground, the worshipers must raise them up.
They neither move of themselves if one sets them upright, nor come upright if they fall; but one puts gifts beside them as 27 beside the dead. Their priests resell their sacrifices for their own advantage. Even their wives cure parts of the meat, but 28 do not share it with the poor and the weak; the menstruous and women in childbed handle their sacrifices. Knowing from this that they are not gods, do not fear them.
29 How can they be called gods? For women bring the offerings 30 to these gods of silver and gold and wood; and in their temples the priests squat with torn tunic and with shaven hair and 31 beard, and with their heads uncovered. They shout and wail 32 before their gods as others do at a funeral banquet. The priests take some of their clothing and put it on their wives and chil-33 dren. Whether they are treated well or ill by anyone, they cannot requite it; they can neither set up a king nor remove 34 him. Similarly, they cannot give anyone riches or coppers; if one fails to fulfill a vow to them, they cannot exact it of him.
35 They neither save a man from death, nor deliver the weak from 36 the strong. To no blind man do they restore his sight, nor do 37 they save any man in an emergency. They neither pity the 38 widow nor benefit the orphan. These gilded and silvered wooden statutes are like stones from the mountains; and their 39 worshipers will be put to shame. How then can it be thought or claimed that they are gods?
40 Even the Chaldeans themselves have no respect for them; for when they see a deaf mute, incapable of speech, they bring forward Bel and ask the god to make noise, as though the 41 man could understand; and they are themselves unable to 42 reflect and abandon these gods, for they have no sense. And their women, girt with cords, sit by the roads, burning chaff

6, 27-31: These practices were especially abominable to a Jew because they were forbidden by his own Mosaic Law.

6, 33-39: The sacred writer lists the things which the gods cannot do, but he implies that Yahweh can do them.

6, 42: These Babylonian women wore a cord around their waists and burned "chaff for incense" which was supposed to have aphrodisiac properties.

43 for incense; and whenever one of them is drawn aside by son passerby who lies with her, she mocks her neighbor who h not been dignified as she has, and has not had her cord broke 44 All that takes place around these gods is a fraud: how then ca it be thought or claimed that they are gods?
45 They are produced by woodworkers and goldsmiths, and th are nothing else than what these craftsmen wish them to b 46.47 Even those who produce them are not long-lived; how th can what they have produced be gods? They have left frau 48 and opprobrium to their successors. For when war or disast comes upon them, the priests deliberate among themselv 49 where they can hide with them. How then can one not kno that these are no-gods, which do not save themselves eith 50 from war or from disaster? They are wooden, gilded an silvered; they will later be known for frauds. To all peoples an kings it will be clear that they are not gods, but human hand work; and that God's work is not in them.
51.52 Who does not know that they are not gods? They set n 53 king over the land, nor do they give men rain. They neith vindicate their own rights, nor do they recover what is unjustl 54 taken, for they are unable; they are like crows between heave and earth. For when fire breaks out in the temple of thes wooden or gilded or silvered gods, though the priests flee an are safe, they themselves are burnt up in the fire like beam 55.56 They cannot resist a king, or enemy forces. How then can be admitted or thought that they are gods?
They are safe from neither thieves nor bandits, these woode 57 and silvered and gilded gods; those who seize them strip off th gold and the silver, and go away with the clothing that was o 58 them, and they cannot help themselves. How much better to b a king displaying his valor, or a handy tool in a house, the jo of its owner, than these false gods; or the door of a house, tha keeps safe those who are within, rather than these false gods or a wooden post in a palace, rather than these false gods 59 The sun and moon and stars are bright, and obedient in th 60 service for which they are sent. Likewise the lightning, when i flashes, is a goodly sight; and the same wind blows over all th 61 land. The clouds, too, when commanded by God to proceed 62 across the whole world, fulfill the order; and fire, sent from ou high to burn up the mountains and the forests, does what ha been commanded. But these false gods are not their equal cannot be claimed, that they are gods. They can neither execute 64 judgment, nor benefit man. Know, therefore, that they are not gods, and do not fear them.

65.66 Kings they neither curse nor bless. They show the nations no signs in the heavens, nor are they brilliant like the sun, nor 67 shining like the moon. The beasts which can help themselves by 68 fleeing to shelter are better than they are. Thus in no way is it 69 clear to us that they are gods; so do not fear them. For like a scarecrow in a cucumber patch, that is no protection, are their 70 wooden, gilded, silvered gods. Just like a thornbush in a garden on which perches every kind of bird, or like a corpse hurled 71 into darkness, are their silvered and gilded wooden gods. From the rotting of the purple and the linen upon them, it can be known that they are not gods; they themselves will in the end 72 be consumed, and be a disgrace in the land. The better for the just man who has no idols: he shall be far from disgrace!

THE BOOK OF EZECHIEL

INTRODUCTION

Ezechiel was one of the important deported persons who accompanie king Joachin of Juda to Babylon from Jerusalem in 598 B.C. He r ceived his vocation to be a prophet in 593 B.C. (1, 1ff). Thus, he is tl only prophet who received his vocation in a foreign land. Ezechiel prophetic message was to announce to his fellow exiles that Jerusale would inevitably be destroyed and the rest of its population exiled.

The theme of the first half of the book, chs. 1—24, has often bee described as "Jerusalem must be destroyed." Simultaneously, back Jerusalem, Jeremia was preaching the same message except that he mac it conditional on repentance. But Jerusalem refused repentance and tl city fell in 587 B.C. For the historical background see Introduction to tl Book of Jeremia.

The second part of Ezechiel's prophetic message (chs. 25—48) w one of consolation and encouragement, namely, that the people wou return from exile to restore their city and land. He prepares them e pecially for the ideal cult of the temple (chs. 40—48).

The theory assumed in the remarks so far is that Ezechiel preache only in Babylon and not partly in Jerusalem (till 598) and partly Babylon. The all-Babylonian theory still remains the better one toda

The formation of Ezechiel's book is a highly specialized, still debate problem. On the following elements, however, there is general agre ment: the book has artificial groupings, some repetitions, some passag by other inspired writers, and passages with no date are joined to passag with a date; Ezechiel's prophecies underwent additions and editing l postexilic inspired writers; much of this is common to the formation o the books of Isaia and Jeremia; the general plan is also common amor these prophets, namely, oracles against Juda (1—24), oracles again the nations (25—32), and oracles on a better future (33—48).

Ezechiel's personality is one of contrasts; he is the most challengir Old Testament prophet to understand as a person. It is relevant to no here the prohibition of the rabbis in St. Jerome's time which barred tl reading of Ezechiel's visions until the age of thirty. Ezechiel's charact easily arouses interest. He is a priest who preaches ("prophet") an writes. His message is half on the destruction of the people and half c their restoration to happiness. His cast of mind seems that of a visionai as well as that of a realist.

Although Ezechiel stresses God's majesty and holiness, he is bett known for the development of the doctrine on individual and person responsibility for one's conduct to God. See 18, 1-32 n.

Ezechiel's other contribution, outstanding among the prophets, is h writing on the temple and the liturgy. No other prophet shows as muc interest, if we judge by the amount of writing. Small wonder tha scholars call him the "father of Judaism."

Because of Ezechiel's influence on Judaism one would think that h influenced the New Testament writers. Yet, it is a matter of statistic that of all the great prophets he is quoted the least. Not even his Me sianic texts are quoted. On the other hand, scholars often point out the influence of Ez 34, 23 on the parable of the Good Shepherd (see Jn 10, 11-16), but especially the influence of his imagery on St. John's Apocalypse.

Main divisions of the Book of Ezechiel are:

1. Call of the Prophet, 1—3
2. Before the Siege of Jerusalem, 4—24
3. Prophecies against Foreign Nations, 25—32
4. Salvation for Israel, 33—39
5. The New Israel, 40—48

I. CALL OF THE PROPHET

1

1 The Vision: God on the Cherubim In the thirtieth year, on the fifth day of the fourth month, while I was among the exiles by the river Chobar, the heavens opened, and I saw 2 divine visions. | On the fifth day of the month, the fifth year,
3 that is, of king Joachin's exile, | the word of the Lord came to the priest Ezechiel, the son of Buzi, in the land of the Chaldeans by the river Chobar.—There the hand of the Lord came upon me.

4 As I looked, a stormwind came from the North, a huge cloud with flashing fire [enveloped in brightness], from the midst of which [the midst of the fire] something gleamed like electrum.

1, 1: The "thirtieth" year is evidently intended to correspond with the "fifth" year in v. 2. Scholars understand the fifth year as 593 B.C., but they do not understand what the thirtieth year means, unless it refers to Ezechiel's age. Chobar: one of the Jewish settlements near Nippur, southeast of Babylon, where most of the deportees lived with king Joachin.

1, 3: Ezechiel: his name means "God is strong." The hand of the Lord came upon me: Ezechiel uses this phrase many times to express his awareness of God communicating with him.

1, 4-28: This is Ezechiel's famous vision in which he most probably receives his vocation and mission as the prophet to preach among the exiles. The counterparts of this mystical experience and vocation scene are Jer 1 and Is 6. In what was most likely a true ecstasy, Ezechiel sees four cherubim harnessed to the chariot wheels, the throne, and finally God seated on it. The significance of several details are a matter of dispute, but the general meaning is that God is present everywhere—not only in the Jerusalem temple, but even in a foreign land like Babylon. All scholars admit the dependence of Ap 4, 7-8 on Ezechiel here, and that this scene is the origin of the symbols of the four Evangelists. The meanings applied to the Evangelists' symbols, however, have differed in the Middle Ages.

1, 4: The North: other biblical texts refer to this direction as the dwelling place of God. Electrum: the Hebrew word means a brilliant metal, which we cannot identify.

5 Within it were figures resembling four living creatures that 6 looked like this: their form was human, but each had four 7 faces and four wings, and their legs went straight down; the soles of their feet were round. They sparkled with a gleam like burnished bronze.
10 Their faces were like this: each of the four had the face of a man, but on the right side was the face of a lion, and on the left side the face of an ox, and finally each had the face of an 9 eagle. Their faces [and their wings] looked out on all their four sides; they did not turn when they moved, but each went 12 straight forward. [Each went straight forward; wherever the spirit wished to go, there they went; they did not turn when they moved.]
8 Human hands were under their wings, and the wings of one 11 touched those of another. Each had two wings spread out above so that they touched one another's, while the other two wings 13 of each covered his body. In among the living creatures something like burning coals of fire could be seen; they seemed like torches, moving to and fro among the living creatures. The fire gleamed, and from it came forth flashes of lightning.
15 As I looked at the living creatures, I saw wheels on the 16 ground, one beside each of the four living creatures. The wheels had the sparkling appearance of chrysolite, and all four of them looked the same: they were constructed as though one 17 wheel were within another. They could move in any of the four 18 directions they faced, without veering as they moved. The four of them had rims, and I saw that their rims were full of eyes 19 all around. When the living creatures moved, the wheels moved with them; and when the living creatures were raised from the 20 ground, the wheels also were raised. Wherever the spirit wished to go, there the wheels went, and they were raised together with the living creatures; for the spirit of the living creatures was in the wheels.
22 Over the heads of the living creatures, something like a firmament could be seen, seeming like glittering crystal, stretched 23 straight out above their heads. Beneath the firmament their wings were stretched out, one toward the other. [Each of 24 them had two covering his body.] | Then I heard the sound of their wings, like the roaring of mighty waters, like the voice of the Almighty. When they moved, the sound of the tumult

1, 5: The "cherubim" in 10, 20-21 are the same as these "four living creatures."

1, 10: See Za 4, 4ff for the general explanation of verse rearrangement. Notice that verses 14 and 21 are omitted entirely.

was like the din of an army. [And when they stood still, they lowered their wings.]

46 Above the firmament over their heads something like a throne could be seen, looking like sapphire. Upon it was seated, 27 up above, one who had the appearance of a man. Upward from what resembled his waist I saw what gleamed like electrum; downward from what resembled his waist I saw what 28 looked like fire; he was surrounded with splendor. Like the bow which appears in the clouds on a rainy day was the splendor that surrounded him. Such was the vision of the likeness of the glory of the Lord.

1 Eating of the Scroll When I had seen it, I fell upon my face and heard a voice that said to me: Son of man, stand up!
2 I wish to speak with you. As he spoke to me, spirit entered into me and set me on my feet, and I heard the one who was
3 speaking | say to me: Son of man, I am sending you to the Israelites, rebels who have rebelled against me; they and their 4 fathers have revolted against me to this very day. Hard of face and obstinate of heart are they to whom I am sending 5 you. But you shall say to them: Thus says the Lord God! And whether they heed or resist—for they are a rebellious house—6 they shall know that a prophet has been among them. But as for you, son of man, fear neither them nor their words when they contradict you and reject you, and when you sit on scorpions. Neither fear their words nor be dismayed at their 7 looks, for they are a rebellious house. [But speak my words to them, whether they heed or resist, for they are rebellious.] 8 As for you, son of man, obey me when I speak to you: be not rebellious like this house of rebellion, but open your mouth and eat what I shall give you.

9 It was then I saw a hand stretched out to me, in which was 10 a written scroll | which he unrolled before me. It was covered with writing front and back, and written on it was: Lamentation and wailing and woe!

2, 1: Son of man: a Hebraic expression for man. "Son of" in Hebrew often means belonging to a group. "Son of man" occurs ninety times in Ezechiel, perhaps to stress the difference between man and God.

2, 2: Spirit: a frequent expression of God's power fortifying Ezechiel.

2, 6: When you sit on scorpions: the sense is: preach to them in spite of the most stinging opposition.

2, 10: Writing front and back: since a scroll was usually written on only one side, this may mean: the imminent doom (of Jerusalem) will be thorough.

1 He said to me: Son of man, eat what is before you; eat this 2 scroll, then go, speak to the house of Israel. So I opened my 3 mouth and he gave me the scroll to eat. Son of man, he then said to me, feed your belly and fill your stomach with this scroll I am giving you. I ate it, and it was as sweet as honey in my 4 mouth. He said: | Son of man, go now to the house of Israel and speak my words to them.
5 Not to a people with difficult speech and barbarous language 6 am I sending you, | nor to the many peoples [with difficult speech and barbarous language] whose words you cannot understand. If I were to send you to these, they would listen to 7 you; but the house of Israel will refuse to listen to you, since they will not listen to me. For the whole house of Israel is 8 stubborn of brow and obstinate in heart. But I will make your face as hard as theirs, and your brow as stubborn as theirs.
9 like diamond, harder than flint. Fear them not, nor be dismayed at their looks, for they are a rebellious house.
10 Son of man, he said to me, take into your heart all my words 11 that I speak to you; hear them well. Now go to the exiles, to your countrymen, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God —whether they heed or resist!
12 Then spirit lifted me up, and I heard behind me the noise of a loud rumbling as the glory of the Lord rose from its place: 13 the noise made by the wings of the living creatures striking one another, and by the wheels alongside them, a loud rumbling.
14 The spirit which had lifted me up seized me, and I went off spiritually stirred, while the hand of the Lord rested heavily 15 upon me. Thus I came to the exiles who lived at Tel Abib by the river Chobar, and for seven days I sat among them distraught.

17 The Prophet as Watchman Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, I have appointed you a watchman for 3, 1-2: The eating of the scroll symbolizes that God is the author of the message which the prophet is to make his very own. Parallels to scroll eating range from the ancient Egyptian tale of Satni-Khamois to modern Moslems, who swallow verses from the Koran to drive away bodily ailments.

3, 3: It was sweet as honey: since the scroll came from God, it was sweet. See Ps 18, 11: God's ordinances are "sweeter also than syrup or honey. . . ."

3, 12-13: Yahweh, carried by the cherubim, leaves Ezechiel to contemplate the divine message.

3, 15: Tel Abib: probably Ezechiel's Babylonian home near Nippur.

3, 17-21: This passage seems to be a repetition of what Ezechiel the house of Israel. When you hear a word from my mouth, you shall warn them for me.

18 If I say to the wicked man, You shall surely die; and you do not warn him or speak out to dissuade him from his wicked conduct so that he may live: that wicked man shall die for his 19 sin, but I will hold you responsible for his death. If, on the other hand, you have warned the wicked man, yet he has not turned away from his evil nor from his wicked conduct, then he shall die for his sin, but you shall save your life.
20 If a virtuous man turns away from virtue and does wrong when I place a stumbling block before him, he shall die. He shall die for his sin, and his virtuous deeds shall not be remembered; but I will hold you responsible for his death if you did 21 not warn him. When, on the other hand, you have warned a virtuous man not to sin, and he has in fact not sinned, he shall surely live because of the warning, and you shall save your own life.

22 Ezechiel's Dumbness The hand of the Lord came upon me, and he said to me: Get up and go out into the plain, where I will 23 speak with you. So I got up and went out into the plain, and I saw that the glory of the Lord was in that place, like the glory I 24 had seen by the river Chobar. I fell prone, | but then spirit entered into me and set me on my feet, and he spoke with me.
25 He said to me: Go shut yourself up in your house. [As for you, son of man, they will put cords upon you and bind you with 26 them, so that you cannot go out among them.] I will make your tongue stick to your palate so that you will be dumb and unable 27 to rebuke them for being a rebellious house. Only when I speak with you and open your mouth, shall you say to them: Thus says the Lord God! Let him heed who will, and let him resist who will, for they are a rebellious house.

preached later in his career. See 33, 1-9. The overall meaning of these four cases is to underscore the responsibility of Ezechiel as a preacher ("watchman") to the people, but especially to stress the responsibility of the people as individuals. See 18, 1-32 n.

3, 22-27: The state of "dumbness" (see 3, 25-26 n) seems to have occurred at the end of the siege of Jerusalem, which puts this passage more appropriately with 24, 25-27; 33, 21-22.

3, 23: Like the glory I had seen by the river Chobar: reference to 1, 3.

3, 25-26: Most commentators understand the "cords" to symbolize God's confinement of Ezechiel to his home. Most likely, the dumbness of Ezechiel does not mean the loss of speech, but his "dumbness" symbolizes God's prohibition to rebuke the exiles while Jerusalem is under siege, as 24, 27 indicates.

II. BEFORE THE SIEGE OF JERUSALEM

16 At the end of seven days . . . :

4

1 Acts Symbolic of Siege and Exile As for you, son o man, take a clay tablet; lay it in front of you, and draw on it 2 city [Jerusalem]. Raise a siege against it: build a tower, lay ou a ramp, pitch camps, and set up battering rams all around 3 Then take an iron griddle and set it up as an iron wall betwee you and the city. Fix your gaze on it: it shall be in the state o siege, and you shall besiege it. This shall be a sign for the hous 4 of Israel. Then you shall lie on your left side, while I place th sins of the house of Israel upon you. As many days as you li 5 thus, you shall bear their sins. For the years of their sins I allo you the same number of days, three hundred and ninety, durin 6 which you will bear the sins of the house of Israel. When yo finish this, you are to lie down again, but on your right side, an bear the sins of the house of Juda forty days; one day for eac 7 year I have allotted you. Fixing your gaze on the siege of Jerusa 8 lem, with bared arm you shall prophesy against it. See, I wil bind you with cords so that you cannot turn from one side t the other until you have completed the days of your siege.
9 Again, take wheat and barley, and beans and lentils, an millet and spelt; put them in a single vessel and make brea out of them. Eat it for as many days as you lie upon you 10 side, three hundred and ninety. The food you eat shall b

3, 16: At the end of seven days: the incomplete text must have continued thus: "The word of the Lord came to me." See Za 4, 4ff n for a general explanation of the changed order of verses.

4—5: Several symbolic acts signify Jerusalem's imminent fall. Ezechiel performs these acts at home when visited and consulted by his fellow exiles.

4, 3: Fix your gaze on it: this may symbolize the determination of the Babylonians to capture Jerusalem.

4, 5-6: Three hundred and ninety [days] . . . forty days: the symbolism of these numbers is more generally interpreted as the number of years of exile, but three hundred and ninety days is not well explained. The unmentioned time span of Jerusalem's siege is another interpretation of these two figures.

4, 7: You shall prophesy against it: through threatening gestures.

4, 8: The "cords" mean he is to remain in his house (see 3, 25-26 n). It is not necessary to understand literally that Ezechiel lay on his left (v. 4) and right side (v. 6) all the time indicated.

4, 9-17: This act symbolizes food rationing, even to the extent of eating unclean food prohibited by the Mosaic Law.

4, 10: Twenty shekels: about nine ounces.

11 twenty shekels a day by weight; each day the same. And the water you drink shall be the sixth of a hin by measure; each 16 day the same. | Then he said to me: Son of man, I am breaking the staff of bread in Jerusalem. They shall eat bread which they have weighed out anxiously, and they shall drink water which 17 they have measured out fearfully, | so that, owing to the scarcity of bread and water, everyone shall be filled with terror and waste away because of his sins.
17 For your food you must bake barley loaves over human 18 excrement in their sight, said the Lord. Thus the Israelites shall eat their food unclean among the nations where I scatter them.
14 | "Oh no, Lord God!" I protested. "Never have I been made unclean, and from my youth till now, never have I eaten carrion flesh or that torn by wild beasts; never has any unclean meat 15 entered my mouth." Very well, he replied, I allow you cow's dung in place of human excrement; bake your bread on that.

5

1 As for you, son of man, take a sharp sword and use it like a barber's razor, passing it over your head and beard. Then take 2 a set of scales and divide the hair you have cut. Burn a third in the fire, within the city, when the days of your siege are completed; place another third around the city and strike it with the sword; the final third strew in the wind, and pursue 3 it with the sword. [But of the last take a small number and tie 4 them in the hem of your garment. Then take some of these and throw them in the midst of the fire and burn them.]
5 Say to the whole house of Israel: | Thus says the Lord God:
This is Jerusalem! In the midst of the nations I placed her, 6 surrounded by foreign countries. But she rebelled against my ordinances more wickedly than the nations, and against my statutes more than the foreign countries surrounding her; she has spurned my ordinances and has not lived by my statutes.
7 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have been more rebellious than the nations surrounding you, not living by my 4, 11: The sixth of a hin: about one quart.

4, 16: See Za 4, 4ff n for a general explanation of the changed order of verses. Breaking the staff of bread: this is a familiar biblical figure which refers to drastic rationing of bread. Bread helps man through life as a staff helps a traveler.

4, 12: These unsophisticated examples were meant for a people of a different background and mentality than ours. God used inspired writers according to their own temperament and thought patterns.

5, 2: Ezechiel places a third of the hair "around the city" which he drew on the clay tablet. See 4, 1.

5, 5: Say . . . This is Jerusalem: by a pointing gesture.

statutes nor fulfilling my ordinances, but acting according to 8 the ordinances of the surrounding nations; therefore thus says the Lord God: See, I am coming at you! I will inflict punish-9 ments in your midst while the nations look on. Because of all your abominations I will do with you what I have never done 10 before, the like of which I will never do again. This means that fathers within you shall eat sons, and sons shall eat fathers.
I will inflict punishments upon you and scatter all that remain of your people in every direction.
11 Therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your detestable abominations, I swear to cut you down. I will not look upon you with pity nor 12 have mercy. A third of your people shall die of pestilence and perish of hunger within you; another third shall fall by the sword all around you; and a third I will scatter in every direction, and I 16 will pursue them with the sword. When I loose against you the cruel, destructive arrows of hunger, I will break your staff of 17 bread; I will send famine against you, and wild beasts that shall rob you of your children. Pestilence and bloodshed shall stalk through you, and I will bring the sword upon you. I, the Lord, have spoken!
13 Thus shall my anger spend itself, and I will wreak my fury upon them till I am appeased; they shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken in my jealousy when I spend my fury upon them.
14 I will make you a waste and a reproach among the nations that 15 surround you, which every passer-by may see. When I execute judgment upon you in anger and fury and with furious chastise-ments, you shall be a reproach and an object of scorn, a terrible warning to the nations that surround you. I, the Lord, have spoken!

6

1 Against the Mountains of Israel Thus the word of the 2 Lord came to me: Son of man, turn toward the mountains of 3 Israel, and prophesy against them: Mountains of Israel, hear the 5, 8: God is attributed a current warlike expression used by an aggressor who attacks with the sword, saying, "I am coming at you." In vv. 8-17 the "you" refers to Jerusalem.

5, 10: A reference to the example of cannibalism during the siege of Jerusalem. See 4 Kgs 6, 28f.

6, 1-14: Through gestures, Ezechiel here addresses the Judean mountains by proclaiming to the exiles a ruin of the "high places" (v. 3) on the "mountains of Israel" (vv. 2-3) and "beneath every green tree and leafy oak" (v. 13) where illegal idolatrous practices were conducted in honor of Yahweh or of the Chanaanite gods. When all these places are destroyed, the people will know that Yahweh is the one true word of the Lord God. Thus says the Lord God [to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys]: See, I am bringing a 4 sword against you, and I will destroy your high places. Your altars shall be laid waste, your incense stands shall be broken, 5 and I will cast down your slain ones before your idols; I will 6 scatter their bones all around your altars. In all your dwelling places cities shall be made desolate and laid waste, so that your altars will be made desolate and laid waste, your idols broken 7 and removed, and your incense stands smashed to bits. [The slain shall fall in your midst, and you shall know that I am the 8 Lord. I have warned you.]

When some of your people have escaped to other nations from 9 the sword, and have been scattered over the foreign lands, then those who have escaped will remember me among the nations to which they have been exiled, after I have broken their adulterous hearts that turned away from me [and their eyes which lusted after idols]. They shall loathe themselves because 10 of their evil deeds, all their abominations. Then they shall know that it was not in vain that I, the Lord, threatened to inflict this calamity upon them.

11 Thus says the Lord God: Clap your hands, stamp your feet, and cry "Alas!" because of all the abominations of the house of Israel, for which they shall fall by the sword, by famine, and by 12 pestilence. He that is far off shall die of pestilence, he that is near shall fall by the sword, and he that is besieged shall perish 13 by famine; so will I spend my fury upon them. Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when their slain shall lie amid their idols, all about their altars, on every high hill and mountaintop, beneath every green tree and leafy oak, wherever they offered 14 appeasing odors to any of their gods. I will stretch out my hand against them, and wherever they live I will make the land a desolate waste, from the desert to Ribla; thus shall they know that I am the Lord.

1 The End Has Come Thus the word of the Lord came to God. The chapter is composed of verses spoken at different times in Ezechiel's career.

6, 5: Unburied corpses are especially loathsome to many of the ancients.

6, 11: These gestures seem to express grief here, and joy in 25, 6.

6, 14: From the desert to Ribla: Ezechiel's expression for the northern and southern extremities of the Holy Land.

7, 1-27: It is difficult to date and understand this poorly preserved oracle in which Ezechiel addresses the "land of Israel" (v. 2) on the brink of ruin.

me: | Son of man, now say: Thus says the Lord God to the land of Israel: An end! The end has come upon the four corners of the land! Now the end is upon you; I will unleash my anger against you and judge you according to your conduct and lay upon you the consequences of all your abominations. I will not look upon you with pity nor have mercy; I will bring your conduct down upon you, and the consequences of your abominations shall be in your midst; then shall you know that I am the Lord.

Thus says the Lord God: Disaster upon disaster! See it coming! | An end is coming, the end is coming upon you! See it coming! | The climax has come for you who dwell in the land!
The time has come, near is the day: a time of consternation, not of rejoicing. Soon now I will pour out my fury upon you and spend my anger upon you; I will judge you according to your conduct and lay upon you the consequences of all your abominations. I will not look upon you with pity nor have mercy; I will deal with you according to your conduct, and the consequences of your abominations shall be in your midst; then shall you know that it is I, the Lord, who strike.

See, the day of the Lord! See, the end is coming! Lawlessness is in full bloom, insolence flourishes, | violence has risen to support wickedness. It shall not be long in coming, nor shall it delay.
The time has come, the day dawns. Let not the buyer rejoice nor the seller mourn, for wrath shall be upon all the throng. The seller shall not regain what he sold as long as he lives, for wrath shall be upon all the throng. Because of his sins, no one shall preserve his life. They shall sound the trumpet and make everything ready, yet no one shall go to war, for my wrath is upon all the throng.

The sword is outside; pestilence and hunger are within. He that is in the country shall die by the sword; pestilence and famine shall devour those in the city. Even those who escape and flee to the mountains like the doves of the valleys—I will put them all to death, each one for his own sins. All their hands shall be limp, and all their knees shall run with water. They shall put on sackcloth, and horror shall cover them; shame shall be on all their faces and baldness on all their heads. They shall 7, 2: Four corners of the land: the prophets often announce the end of the Holy Land as the end of the world.

7, 10-11: These verses are beyond reconstruction in the Hebrew text.

7, 17: Their knees shall run with water: a hyperbolic expression for fatigue.

7, 18: Signs of mourning.

fling their silver into the streets, and their gold shall be considered refuse. Their silver and gold cannot save them on the day of the Lord's wrath. They shall not be allowed to satisfy their craving or fill their bellies, for this has been the occasion of their sin.
20 In the beauty of their ornaments they put their pride: they made of them their abominable images [their idols]. For this reason 21 I make them refuse. | I will hand them over as booty to foreign-22 ers, to be spoiled and defiled by the wicked of the earth. I will turn away my face from them, and my treasure shall be profaned: robbers shall enter and profane it.
23 They shall wreak slaughter, for the land is filled with blood-24 shed and the city full of violence. I will bring in the worst of the nations, who shall take possession of their houses. I will put an end to their proud strength, and their sanctuaries shall be pro-25 faned. When anguish comes they shall seek peace, but there will 26 be none. There shall be disaster after disaster, rumor after rumor. Prophetic vision shall fade; instruction shall be lacking 27 to the priest, and counsel to the elders, while the prince shall be enveloped in terror, and the hands of the common people shall tremble. I will deal with them according to their conduct, and according to their judgments I will judge them; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Vision of Abominations in the Temple Spirit lifted me up in the air and brought me in divine visions to Jerusalem, to the entrance of the north gate, where stood the statue of 3 jealousy which stirs up jealousy. | He said to me: Son of man, look toward the north! I looked toward the north and saw 6 northward of the gate the altar of the statue of jealousy. Son of 7, 22: My treasure: in the Jerusalem temple.

8—11: Although Ezechiel is not transported bodily to Jerusalem, it is difficult to determine whether he means this as a true vision or a literary one; but this problem is not as important as the meaning of the vision. The general meaning which Ezechiel presents to the exiles is: Yahweh will not spare Jerusalem and Juda, for they sinned too grievously.

8, 3: Note the change in verse order. Verses 1, 2, 4 are placed before chapter 10.

8, 3-18: Ezechiel "sees" idolatrous scenes in the temple of Jerusalem, whose topography is difficult to follow.

8, 3: Statue of jealousy: many believe it is the statue of the goddess Ashera set up by king Manasse (4 Kgs 21, 7) and removed in the religious reform of Josia, but reinstalled later. The statue "stirs up" the jealousy of Yahweh.

8, 5: He: in the light of 40, 3ff the "he" refers to an angel, true or literary (see 8—11 n), which represents God's voice.

man, he asked me, do you see what they are doing? Do you see the great abominations that the house of Israel is practicing here, so that I must depart from my sanctuary? But you shall see still greater abominations!
7 Then he brought me to the entrance of the court, where I saw 8 there was a hole in the wall. Son of man, he ordered, dig through 9 the wall. I dug through the wall and saw a door. Enter, he said to me, and see the abominable evils which they are doing here.
10 I entered and saw that all around upon the wall were pictured the figures of all kinds of creeping things and loath-11 some beasts [all the idols of the house of Israel]. Before these stood seventy of the elders of the house of Israel, among whom stood Jezonia, son of Saphan, each of them with his censer in his hand, and the fragrance of the incense was rising upward.
12 | Then he said to me: Do you see, son of man, what each of these elders of the house of Israel is doing in his idol room?
They think: "The Lord cannot see us; the Lord has forsaken 13 the land." | He continued: You shall see still greater abominations that they are practicing.
14 Then he brought me to the entrance of the north gate of the temple, and I saw sitting there the women who were weeping 15 for Tammuz. | Then he said to me: Do you see this, son of man? You shall see other abominations, greater than these!
16 Then he brought me into the inner court of the Lord's house, and there at the door of the Lord's temple, between the vestibule and the altar, were about twenty-five men with their backs to the Lord's temple and their faces toward the east; they were 17 bowing down to the sun. Do you see, son of man? he asked me.
Is it such a trivial matter for the house of Juda to do the abominable things they have done here—for they have filled the land with violence, and again and again they have provoked me—18 that now they must also put the branch to my nose? Therefore I in turn will act furiously: I will not look upon them with pity nor will I show mercy.

8, 7-11: The nobles (elders) were paying homage most probably to the Egyptian animal gods painted on the wall.

8, 14: The women wept because the descent of the Babylonian god Tammuz into the lower world represented autumn when trees and plants failed to produce.

8, 16: A reference to sun worshipers. See 4 Kgs 23, 11.

8, 17: Put the branch to my nose: this may mean that the worship given to the idols was tantamount to provoking Yahweh. The expression may also refer to the rite of putting a vine branch to the nose of the Egyptian sun god Re to symbolize the transference of creative power from him to living things.

1 Slaughter of the Idolaters Then he cried loud for me to 2 hear: Come, you scourges of the city! With that I saw six men coming from the direction of the upper gate which faces the north, each with a destroying weapon in his hand. In their midst was a man dressed in linen, with a writer's case at his waist.
3 They entered and stood beside the bronze altar. Then he called to the man dressed in linen with the writer's case at his waist, |
4 saying to him: Pass through the city [through Jerusalem] and mark an X on the foreheads of those who moan and groan over 5 all the abominations that are practiced within it. To the others I heard him say: Pass through the city after him and strike! Do 6 not look on them with pity nor show any mercy! Old men, youths and maidens, women and children—wipe them out! But do not touch any marked with the X; begin at my sanctuary. So they began with the men [the elders] who were in front of the tem-7 ple. Defile the temple, he said to them, and fill the courts with the slain; then go out and strike in the city.
8 As they began to strike, I was left alone. I fell prone, crying out, "Alas, Lord God! Will you destroy all that is left of Israel
9 when you pour out your fury on Jerusalem?" | He answered me: The sins of the house of Israel are great beyond measure; the land is filled with bloodshed, the city with lawlessness. They think that the Lord has forsaken the land, that he does not see 10 them. I, however, will not look upon them with pity, nor show any mercy. I will bring down their conduct upon their heads.
11 Then I saw the man dressed in linen with the writing case at his waist make his report: "I have done as you ordered." 11,24 Spirit lifted me up and brought me back to the exiles in Chaldea [in a vision, by God's spirit]. Then the vision I had 11,25 seen left me, and I told the exiles everything the Lord had shown me.

8,1 God's Glory Leaves Jerusalem On the fifth day of the sixth month, in the sixth year, as I was sitting in my house, and the elders of Juda sat before me, the hand of the Lord God fell 8,2 upon me there. I looked up and saw a form that looked like a 9, 1-11: The vision of the slaughter of the idolatrous worshipers.

11, 24-25: Note the change of chapter order. See 8—11 n on "vision."
8, 1—11, 25: In these chapters of the current Hebrew text several visions involving the temple of Jerusalem were combined to form a single, continuous vision. The redistribution of verses in this translation is an attempt to separate the original visions.

man. Downward from what seemed to be his waist, there was fire; from his waist upward there seemed to be a brightness like the sheen of electrum. He stretched out what appeared to be a 8,4 hand and seized me by the hair of my head. . . .
I saw there the glory of the God of Israel, like the vision I had seen in the plain.

10

20 The cherubim were stationed to the right of the temple; these were the living creatures I had seen beneath the God of Israel by the river Chobar, whom I now recognized to be cheru-21 bim. Each had four faces and four wings; something like human 22 hands were under their wings. Their faces looked just like those I had seen by the river Chobar; each one went straight forward.
14 Each had four faces: the first face was that of an ox, the second that of a man, the third that of a lion, and the fourth that of an 15 eagle. Such were the living creatures I had seen by the river Chobar.

9 I also saw four wheels beside them, one wheel beside each cherub; the wheels appeared to have the luster of chrysolite 10 stone. All four of them seemed to be made the same, as though 11 there were a wheel within a wheel. When they moved, they went in any one of their four directions without veering as they moved; for in whichever direction they were faced, they went 12 straight toward it without veering as they moved. The rims of 13 the four wheels were full of eyes all around. I heard the wheels 16 given the name "wheelwork." When the cherubim moved, the wheels went beside them; when the cherubim lifted their wings to rise from the earth, even then the wheels did not leave their 17 sides. When they stood still, the wheels stood still; when they rose, the wheels rose with them; for the living creatures' spirit was in them.

1 I looked and saw in the firmament above the cherubim what appeared to be sapphire stone; something like a throne could be 2 seen upon it. He said to the man dressed in linen: Go within the wheelwork under the cherubim; fill both your hands with burning coals from among the cherubim, then scatter them over the city. As I looked on, he entered.

The glory of the God of Israel had gone up from the cherubim, 8, 2: The dots (head . . .) suppose the omission of some words describing the prophet's being transported in his vision to the court of the temple.

upon which it had been, to the threshold of the temple. As the man entered, the cloud filled the inner court, and the glory of the Lord rose from over the cherubim to the threshold of the temple; the temple was filled with the cloud, and all the court was bright with the glory of the Lord. The noise of the wings of the cherubim could be heard as far as the outer court; it was like the voice of God the Almighty when he speaks.

When he had commanded the man dressed in linen to take fire from within the wheelwork, among the cherubim, the man entered and stood by one of the wheels. Thereupon its cherub stretched out his hand toward the fire that was among the cherubim. He took up some of it and put it in the hands of the one dressed in linen, who took it and came out. [Something like human hands could be seen under the wings of the cherubim.]

Then the glory of the Lord left the threshold of the temple and rested upon the cherubim. These lifted their wings, and I saw them rise from the earth, the wheels rising along with them. They stood at the entrance of the eastern gate of the Lord's house, and the glory of the God of Israel was up above them.

Then the cherubim lifted their wings, and the wheels went along with them, while up above them was the glory of the God of Israel. And the glory of the Lord rose from the city and took a stand on the mountain which is to the east of the city.

Judgment of the Princes Spirit lifted me up and brought me to the east gate of the temple. At the entrance of the gate I saw twenty-five men, among whom were Jezonia, son of Azur, and Pheltia, son of Banaia, princes of the people. | The Lord said to me: Son of man, these are the men who are planning evil and giving wicked counsel in this city. "Shall we not," they say, "be building houses soon? The city is the kettle, and we are the meat." | Therefore prophesy against them, son of man, prophesy! Then the spirit of the Lord fell upon me, and he told me to say: Thus says the Lord: This is the way you talk, house of Israel, and what you are plotting I well know. You have slain many in this city and have filled its streets with your slain. | Therefore thus says the Lord God: Your slain whom you have 11, 23: The mountain: Mount of Olives.

11, 1-2: Ezechiel witnesses the guilty princes.

11, 3: The princes are so confident that the Babylonians will not succeed in their siege of Jerusalem that they say, "shall we not . . . be building houses soon?" They compare Jerusalem to an impregnable kettle protecting its inhabitants ("meat"). But the meaning is inverted in ch. 24. See 24, 3ff n.

placed within it, they are the meat, and the city is the kettle; but 8 you I will take out of it. You fear the sword, but the sword 9 will bring upon you, says the Lord God. I will bring you out of the city, and hand you over to foreigners, and inflict punish 10 ments upon you. By the sword you shall fall; at the boundaries of Israel I will judge you; thus you shall know that I am the 11 Lord. The city shall not be a kettle for you, nor shall you be the meat within it. At the boundaries of Israel I will judge you, 12 and you shall know that I am the Lord, by whose statutes you have not lived, and whose ordinances you have not kept; rather you have acted according to the ordinances of the nations around you.
13 While I was prophesying, Pheltia, the son of Banaia, died. I fell prone and cried out in a loud voice: "Alas, Lord God! will you utterly wipe out what remains of Israel?"

14 Restoration of the Exiles Thus the word of the Lord 15 came to me: Son of man, it is about your kinsmen, your fellow exiles, and the whole house of Israel that the inhabitants of Jerusalem say, "They are far away from the Lord; to us the 16 land of Israel has been given as our possession." Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: Though I have removed them far among the nations and scattered them over foreign countries—and was for a while their only sanctuary in the countries to 17 which they had gone—I will gather you from the nations and assemble you from the countries over which you have been scat-18 tered, and I will restore to you the land of Israel. They shall return to it and remove from it all its detestable abominations.
19 I will give them a new heart and put a new spirit within them;
I will remove the stony heart from their bodies, and replace it 20 with a natural heart, | so that they will live according to my statutes, and observe and carry out my ordinances; thus they 21 shall be my people and I will be their God. But as for those whose hearts are devoted to their detestable abominations, I will bring down their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

1 Acts Symbolic of the Exile Thus the word of the Lord 2 came to me: Son of man, you live in the midst of a rebellious

11, 13: As Ezechiel explains this vision to the exiles, news comes of Pheltia's death.

11, 14-21: The Judeans who will remain in Juda will not form the loyal remnant which will restore the nation anew, but the exiles will form that remnant. Jer 29 delivers the same message.

12, 1-16: The purpose of Ezechiel's silent symbolic act of imitating house; they have eyes to see but do not see, and ears to hear but 3 do not hear, for they are a rebellious house. Now, son of man, during the day while they are looking on, prepare your baggage as though for exile, and again while they are looking on, migrate from where you live to another place; perhaps they will 4 see that they are a rebellious house. You shall bring out your baggage like an exile in the daytime while they are looking on;

in the evening, again while they are looking on, you shall go out 5 like one of those driven into exile; while they look on, dig a hole 6 in the wall and pass through it; while they look on, shoulder the burden and set out in the darkness; cover your face that you may not see the land, for I have made you a sign for the house of Israel.
7 I did as I was told. During the day I brought out my baggage as though it were that of an exile, and at evening I dug a hole through the wall with my hand and, while they looked on, set out in the darkness, shouldering my burden.
8 Then, in the morning, the word of the Lord came to me:
9 Son of man, did not the house of Israel, that rebellious house, 10 ask you what you were doing? Tell them: Thus says the Lord God: This oracle concerns Jerusalem and the whole house of 11 Israel within it. I am a sign for you: as I have done, so shall it 12 be done to them; as captives they shall go into exile. The prince who is among them shall shoulder his burden and set out in darkness, going through a hole that he has dug in the wall, and 13 covering his face lest he be seen by anyone. But I will spread my net over him, and he shall be taken in my snare. I will bring him to Babylon, into the land of the Chaldeans—but he shall 14 not see it—and there he shall die. All his retinue, his aides, and the Jerusalem inhabitants' preparation for exile was to teach his fellow exiles of the imminent exile of the Jerusalemites. Ezechiel's fellow exiles were hoping for a divine intervention that would allow them to return home. They would not believe that Jerusalem would fall and another exile begin.

12, 3: To another place: it is not necessary to understand here that Ezechiel traveled to a nearby town.

12, 5: The digging of a hole in the wall of his own home signified either that the Jerusalem inhabitants will flee from the breaches of their ruined homes or city walls, or that they would escape in stealth at nightfall.

12, 10-16: The explanation of Ezechiel's symbolic acts. See vv. 3-7. Ezechiel had recovered the use of speech.

12, 12-13: King Sedecia ("prince") escaped at night through the breach in the Jerusalem wall (v. 12) but he was captured by the Babylonians and blinded ("he shall not see it") by Nabuchodonosor, before setting out for Babylon where he was to die (v. 13). For the whole account, see Jer 52, 7-11 or 4 Kgs 25, 4-7.

his troops I will scatter in every direction, and pursue them with 15 the sword. Then shall they know that I am the Lord, when disperse them among the nations and scatter them over foreign 16 lands. Yet I will leave a few of them to escape the sword famine and pestilence, so that they may tell of all their abomina tions among the nations to which they will come; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.
17.18 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, eat your bread trembling, and drink your water shaking with 19 anxiety. | Then say to the people of the land: Thus says the Lord God of the inhabitants of Jerusalem [to the land of Is rael]: They shall eat their bread in anxiety and drink their water in horror, that their land may be emptied of the violence 20 of all its inhabitants that now fills it. Inhabited cities shall be in ruins, and the land shall be a waste; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

21 Prophecy Ridiculed Thus the word of the Lord came to 22 me: Son of man, what is this proverb that you have in the land of Israel: "The days drag on, and no vision ever comes to any 23 thing"? | Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to this proverb; they shall never quote it again in Israel. Rather, say to them: The days are at hand, and also the 25 fulfillment of every vision. Whatever I speak is final; and it shall be done without further delay. In your days, rebellious house, whatever I speak I will bring about, says the Lord God.
24 There shall no longer be any false visions or deceitful divina tions within the house of Israel, because it is I, the Lord, who will speak.
26.27 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, listen to the house of Israel saying, "The vision he sees is a long way 28 off; he prophesies of the distant future!" Say to them therefore: Thus says the Lord God: None of my words shall be delayed any longer; whatever I speak is final, and it shall be done, says the Lord God.

13

1 Against the Prophets of Peace Thus the word of the 2 Lord came to me: Son of man, prophesy against the prophets of Israel, prophesy! Say to those who prophesy their own thought 12, 17-20: The exiles of Jerusalem were to be rationed to the bare minimum (bread and water).

12, 21-28: Ezechiel answers his mockers that his prophecies on Jerusalem's doom are about to materialize.

5 Hear the word of the Lord: You did not step into the breach, nor did you build a wall about the house of Israel that would 7 stand firm against attack on the day of the Lord. Was not the 8 vision you saw false, and your divination lying? Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have spoken falsehood and have seen lying visions, therefore see! I am coming at you, says
the Lord God.
10 For the very reason that they led my people astray, saying,
"Peace!" when there was no peace, and that, as one built a wall, 11 they would cover it with whitewash, | say then to the whitewashers: I will bring down a flooding rain; hailstones shall fall, 12 and a stormwind shall break out. And when the wall has fallen, will you not be asked: Where is the whitewash you spread on?
13 Therefore thus says the Lord God: In my fury I will let loose stormwinds; because of my anger there shall be a flooding rain, 14 and hailstones shall fall with destructive wrath. I will tear down the wall that you have whitewashed and level it to the ground, laying bare its foundations. When it falls, you shall be crushed 15 beneath it; thus you shall know that I am the Lord. When I have spent my fury on the wall and its whitewashers, I tell you 16 there shall be no wall, nor shall there be whitewashers— | those prophets of Israel who prophesied to Jerusalem and saw for it visions of peace when there was no peace, says the Lord God.

3 Against False Prophets in Chaldea Thus says the Lord God: Woe to those prophets who are fools, who follow their 4 own spirit and have seen no vision. Like foxes among ruins are 6 your prophets, O Israel! Their visions are false and their divination lying. They say, "Thus says the Lord!" though the Lord did not send them; then they wait for him to fulfill their word!
9 But I will stretch out my hand against the prophets who have false visions and who foretell lies. They shall not belong to the community of my people, nor be recorded in the register of the house of Israel, nor enter the land of Israel; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

17 Against False Prophetesses Now, son of man, turn toward the daughters of your people who prophesy their own thoughts; against these, prophesy: Thus says the Lord God: 22 Because you have disheartened the upright man with lies when I did not wish him grieved, and have encouraged the wicked 23 man not to turn from his evil conduct and save his life; there-13, 5: Note the frequent change of verse order in this chapter.

13, 8: I am coming at you: see 5, 8 n.

fore you shall no longer see false visions and practice divination, but I will rescue my people from your power. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

18 Against Sorceresses Woe to those who sew bands for everyone's wrists and make veils for every size of head so as to entrap their owners. Do you think to entrap the lives of my 19 people, yet keep yourselves alive? You dishonor me before my people with handfuls of barley and crumbs of bread, killing those who should not die and keeping alive those who should 20 not live, lying to my people who willingly hear lies. ¦ Therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at those bands of yours in which you entrap men's lives: I will tear them from 21 their arms and set free those you have caught. I will tear off your veils and rescue my people from your power, so that they shall no longer be prey to your hands. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Prophecy Useless for Idolaters When certain elders of 2 Israel came and sat down before me, the word of the Lord came 3 to me: Son of man, these men have the memory of their idols fresh in their hearts, and they keep the occasion of their sin before them. Why should I allow myself to be consulted by 4 them? Therefore speak with them, and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: If anyone of the house of Israel, holding the memory of his idols in his heart and keeping the occasion of his sin before him, has recourse to a prophet, I, the Lord, will be his 5 answer in person because of his many idols. Thus would I bring back to their senses the house of Israel, who have become estranged from me through all their idols.
6 Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: Return and be converted from your idols; turn yourselves 7 away from all your abominations. For if anyone of the house of Israel or any alien resident in Israel is estranged from me, and holds the memory of his idols in his heart and keeps the occasion of his sin before him, yet asks a prophet to consult me for him, I, 8 the Lord, will be his answer in person. I will turn against that man, and make of him an example and a byword. I will cut him 13, 18: Jewish sorceresses, adopting Babylonian practices, claimed powers over those on whom they put bands and veils.

13, 19: Barley and crumbs of bread: these were used by the sorceresses off from the midst of my people. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

9 As for the prophet, if he is beguiled into speaking a word, I, the Lord, shall have beguiled that prophet; I will stretch out my 10 hand against him and root him out of my people Israel. Each shall receive punishment for his sin, the inquirer and the prophet 11 shall be punished alike, | so that the house of Israel may no longer stray from me and may no longer be defiled by all their sins. Thus they shall be my people, and I will be their God, says the Lord God.

12 Personal Responsibility Thus the word of the Lord came 13 to me: Son of man, when a land sins against me by breaking faith, I stretch out my hand against it and break its staff of bread, I let famine loose upon it and cut off from it both man 14 and beast; and even if these three men were in it, Noe, Daniel, and Job, they could save only themselves by their virtue, says 15 the Lord God. If I were to cause wild beasts to prowl the land, depopulating it so that it became a waste, traversed by none 16 because of the wild beasts, | and these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, I swear they could save neither sons nor daughters; they alone would be saved, and the land would 17 be a waste. Or if I brought the sword upon this country, commanding the sword to pass through the land cutting off from 18 it man and beast, | and these three men were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, they would be unable to save either sons or 19 daughters; they alone would be saved. Or if I were to send pestilence into this land, pouring out upon it my bloodthirsty 20 fury, cutting off from it man and beast, | even if Noe, Daniel, and Job were in it, as I live, says the Lord God, I swear that they could save neither son nor daughter; they would save only themselves by their virtue.
21 Thus says the Lord God: Even though I send Jerusalem my four cruel punishments, the sword, famine, wild beasts, and 22 pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast, | still some survivors shall be left in it who will bring out sons and daughters;

14, 9: I, the Lord, shall have beguiled that prophet: the sacred writers attribute evil to God without distinguishing between what God wants and what God allows.

14, 12-23: This is one of the four texts in which Ezechiel stresses the doctrine of individual responsibility. See 18, 1-32 n.

14, 13: Staff of bread: see 4, 16 n.

14, 14: Noe, Daniel, and Job: the renowned Old Testament saints. "Daniel" here is not the "prophet" of Dn 1—12 but the "judge" of Dn 13, who in turn most likely comes from Phoenician mythology as shown in discovered clay tablets from Ugarit, Syria.

when they come out to you, you shall see their conduct and thei actions and be consoled regarding the evil I have brought on 23 Jerusalem [all that I have brought upon it]. They shall consol you when you see their conduct and actions, for you shall the know that it was not without reason that I did to it what I did says the Lord God.

1 Parable of the Vine Thus the word of the Lord came t 2 me: Son of man, what makes the wood of the vine better tha any other wood? That branch among the trees of the forest 3 Can you use its wood to make anything worthwhile? Can yo 4 make even a peg from it, to hang on it any kind of vessel? If yo throw it on the fire as fuel and the fire devours both ends an 5 even the middle is scorched, is it still good for anything? Why even when it was whole it was good for nothing; how muc less, when the fire has devoured and scorched it, can it be use 6 for anything! | Therefore, thus says the Lord God: Like th wood of the vine among the trees of the forest, which I hav destined as fuel for the fire, do I make the inhabitants of Jeru 7 salem. I will set my face against them; they have escaped fron the fire, but the fire shall devour them. Thus you shall know tha 8 I am the Lord, when I turn my face against them. I will mak the land a waste, because they have broken faith, says the Lor God.

16

1 The Faithless Spouse Thus the word of the Lord cam 2 to me: Son of man, make known to Jerusalem her abominations 3 Thus says the Lord God to Jerusalem: By origin and birth yo are of the land of Chanaan; your father was an Amorrite an 4 your mother a Hethite. As for your birth, the day you were born your navel cord was not cut; you were neither washed with water nor anointed, nor were you rubbed with salt, nor swathe 5 in swaddling clothes. No one looked on you with pity or com passion to do any of these things for you. Rather, you were thrown out on the ground as something loathsome, the day yo were born.

15, 7: Set my face: a popular phrase in Ezechiel.

16, 1-63: To warn the exiles of Jerusalem's imminent doom, Ezechie allegorically reinterprets the Sinaitic Covenant and the history of th Jews. He highlights the gratuity of God's love. G. B. Shaw's "Pygma lion" resembles this theme.

16, 3-4: The Judeans assimilated many pagan ideas and customs o the original inhabitants of Palestine.

6 Then I passed by and saw you weltering in your blood. I said 7 to you: Live in your blood | and grow like a plant in the field.
You grew and developed, you came to the age of puberty; your breasts were formed, your hair had grown, but you were still 8 stark naked. Again I passed by you and saw that you were now old enough for love. So I spread the corner of my cloak over you to cover your nakedness; I swore an oath to you and entered into a covenant with you; you became mine, says the Lord God.
9 Then I bathed you with water, washed away your blood, and 10 anointed you with oil. I clothed you with an embroidered gown, put sandals of fine leather on your feet; I gave you a fine linen 11 sash and silk robes to wear. I adorned you with jewelry: I put 12 bracelets on your arms, a necklace about your neck, | a ring in your nose, pendants in your ears, and a glorious diadem upon 13 your head. Thus you were adorned with gold and silver; your garments were of fine linen, silk, and embroidered cloth. Fine flour, honey, and oil were your food. You were exceedingly 14 beautiful, with the dignity of a queen. You were renowned among the nations for your beauty, perfect as it was, because of my splendor which I had bestowed on you, says the Lord God.
15 But you were captivated by your own beauty, you used your renown to make yourself a harlot, and you lavished your har-16 lotry on every passer-by, whose own you became. You took some of your gowns and made for yourself gaudy high places, where 17 you played the harlot. . . . You took the splendid gold and silver ornaments that I had given you and made for yourself male 18 images, with which also you played the harlot. You took your embroidered gowns to cover them; my oil and my incense you 19 set before them; | the food that I had given you, the fine flour, the oil, and the honey with which I fed you, you set before them 20 as an appeasing odor, says the Lord God. The sons and daughters you had borne me you took and offered as sacrifices to be devoured by them! Was it not enough that you had become a 21 harlot? You slaughtered and immolated my children to them, 22 making them pass through fire. And through all your abominations and harlotries you remembered nothing of when you were a girl, stark naked and weltering in your blood.
23 Then after all your evildoing—woe, woe to you! says the 16, 8: I spread the corner of my cloak over you to cover your nakedness: a proposal for marriage. See Ru 3, 9 n.

16, 16: Fine robes were used to cover a couch for harlotry. See Prv 7, 16-17. In this chapter, Ezechiel constantly uses the figure of harlotry to signify idolatry.

16, 20-21: Some Judean kings introduced human sacrifice. See 4 Kgs 16, 3.

24 Lord God— | you raised for yourself a platform and a dais in 25 every public place. At every street corner you built a dais for yourself to use your beauty obscenely, spreading your legs for 26 every passer-by, playing the harlot countless times. You played the harlot with the Egyptians, your lustful neighbors, so many 27 times that I was provoked to anger. Therefore I stretched out my hand against you, I diminished your allowance and delivered you over to the will of your enemies, the Philistines, who re-28 volted at your lewd conduct. You also played the harlot with the Assyrians, because you were not satisfied; and after playing 29 the harlot with them, you were still not satisfied. Again and again you played the harlot, now going to Chaldea, the land of the traders; but despite this, you were still not satisfied.
30 How wild your lust! says the Lord God, that you did all these 31 things, acting like a shameless prostitute, | building your platform at every street corner and erecting your dais in every public place! Yet you were unlike a prostitute, since you disdained 32 payment. The adulterous wife receives, instead of her husband, 33 payment. All harlots receive gifts. But you rather bestowed your gifts on all your lovers, bribing them to come to you from all 34 sides for your harlotry. Thus in your harlotry you were different from all other women. No one sought you out for prostitution.
Since you gave payment instead of receiving it, how different you were!
35.36 Therefore, harlot, hear the word of the Lord! Thus says the Lord God: Because you poured out your lust and revealed your nakedness in your harlotry with your lovers and abominable idols, and because you sacrificed the lifeblood of your 37 children to them, I will now gather together all your lovers whom you tried to please, whether you loved them or loved them not; I will gather them against you from all sides and ex-38 pose you naked for them to see. I will inflict on you the sentence of adulteresses and murderesses; I will wreak fury and 39 jealousy upon you. I will hand you over to them to tear down your platform and demolish your dais; they shall strip you of your garments and take away your splendid ornaments, leaving 40 you stark naked. They shall lead an assembly against you to 41 stone you and hack you with their swords. They shall burn your apartments with fire and inflict punishments on you while many women look on. Thus I will put an end to your harlotry, and 42 you shall never again give payment. When I have wreaked my fury upon you I will cease to be jealous of you, I will be quiet 16, 24: The Chanaanites' ritual prostitution, associated with "a platform and a dais," influenced the Israelites.

43 and no longer vexed. Because you did not remember what happened when you were a girl, but enraged me with all these things, therefore in return I am bringing down your conduct upon your head, says the Lord God. For did you not add lewdness to the rest of your abominable deeds?

44 See, everyone who is fond of proverbs will say of you, 'Like
45 mother, like daughter.' | Yes, you are the true daughter of the mother who spurned her husband and children, and you are a true sister to those who spurned their husbands and children—46 your mother was a Hethite and your father an Amorrite. Your elder sister was Samaria with her daughters, living to the north of you; and your younger sister, living to the south of you, was 47 Sodom with her daughters. Yet not only in their ways did you walk, and act as abominably as they did; in a very short time 48 you became more corrupt in all your ways than they. As I live, says the Lord God, I swear that your sister Sodom, with her daughters, has not done as you and your daughters have done!
49 And look at the guilt of your sister Sodom: she and her daughters were proud, sated with food, complacent in their pros-50 perity, and they gave no help to the poor and needy. Rather, they became haughty and committed abominable crimes in my pres-
51 ence; then, as you have seen, I removed them. | Samaria did not commit half your sins! You have done more abominable things than they, and have even made your sisters appear just,
52 with all the abominable deeds you have done. You, then, bear your shame; you are an argument in favor of your sisters! In view of your sinful deeds, more abominable than theirs, they appear just in comparison with you. Blush for shame, and bear the shame of having made your sisters appear just.

53 I will restore their fortunes, the fortune of Sodom and her daughters and of Samaria and her daughters [and I will restore 54 your fortune along with them], that you may bear your shame 55 and be disgraced for all the comfort you brought them. Yes, your sisters, Sodom and her daughters, Samaria and her daughters, shall return to their former state [you and your daughters 56 shall return to your former state]. Was not your sister Sodom kept in bad repute by you while you felt proud of yourself, 57 before your wickedness became evident? Now you are like her, reproached by the Edomites and all your neighbors, despised on 58 all sides by the Philistines. The penalty of your lewdness and your abominations—you must bear it all, says the Lord.

59 For thus speaks the Lord God: I will deal with you according to what you have done, you who despised your oath, breakin, 60 a covenant. Yet I will remember the covenant I made with yo when you were a girl, and I will set up an everlasting covenan 61 with you. Then you shall remember your conduct and b ashamed when I take your sisters, those older and younger tha you, and give them to you as daughters, even though I am no 62 bound by my covenant with you. For I will re-establish my cove 63 nant with you, that you may know that I am the Lord, | tha you may remember and be covered with confusion, and that yo may be utterly silenced for shame when I pardon you for al you have done, says the Lord God.

1 The Eagles and the Vine Thus the word of the Lor 2 came to me: Son of man, propose a riddle, and speak this prov 3 erb to the house of Israel: Thus speaks the Lord God:
The great eagle, with great wings, with long pinions, with thick plumage, many-hued, came to Lebanon. He took the crest 4 of the cedar, | tearing off its topmost branch, and brought it to 5 a land of tradesmen, set it in a city of merchants. | Then h took some seed of the land, and planted it in a seedbed; a shoo 6 by plentiful waters, like a willow he placed it, | to sprout an grow up a vine, dense and low-lying, its branches turned towar him, its roots lying under him. Thus it became a vine, produce branches and put forth shoots.
7 But there was another great eagle, great of wing, rich in plumage; to him this vine bent its roots, sent out its branches that he might water it more freely than the bed where it wa 8 planted. | In a fertile field by plentiful waters it was planted to grow branches, bear fruit, and become a majestic vine.
9 Say: Thus says the Lord God: Can it prosper? Will he no rather tear it out by the roots and strip off its fruit, so that al its green growth will wither when he pulls it up by the roots: 10 [No need of a mighty arm or many people to do this.] | True it is planted, but will it prosper? Will it not rather wither, when touched by the east wind, in the bed where it grew?
11.12 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, say now to the rebellious house: Do you not understand what this means? It is this: The king of Babylon came to Jerusalem and 17, 3-4: Eagle: Nabuchodonosor. Lebanon: Juda by poetic license Crest: Joachin. Of the cedar: the family of David. City of merchants Babylon.

17, 5: Nabuchodonosor enthrones Sedecia in Joachin's place.

17, 7: Another great eagle: Pharao Hophra.

17, 11-21: These verses explain the allegory of vv. 1-8.

took away its king and princes with him to Babylon. Then he selected a man of the royal line with whom he made a covenant, binding him under oath, while removing the nobles of the land, so that the kingdom would remain a modest one, without aspirations, and would keep his covenant and obey him. But this man rebelled against him, sending envoys to Egypt to obtain horses and a great army. Can he prosper? Can he who does such things escape? Can he break a covenant and still go free? | As I live, says the Lord God, in the home of the king who set him up to rule, whose oath he spurned, whose covenant with him he broke, there in Babylon I swear he shall die! When ramps are cast up and siege towers are built for the destruction of many lives, he shall not be saved in the conflict by Pharao with a great army and numerous troops. He spurned his oath, breaking his covenant. Though he gave his hand in pledge, he did all these things.
He shall not escape!

Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: As I live, my oath which he spurned, my covenant which he broke, I swear to bring down upon his head. I will spread my net over him, and he shall be taken in my snare. I will bring him to Babylon and enter into judgment with him there over his breaking faith with me. All the crack troops among his forces shall fall by the sword, and the survivors shall be scattered in every direction.
Thus you shall know that I, the Lord, have spoken.

Therefore say: Thus says the Lord God: I, too, will take from the crest of the cedar, from its topmost branches tear off a tender shoot, and plant it on a high and lofty mountain; | on the mountain heights of Israel I will plant it. It shall put forth branches and bear fruit, and become a majestic cedar.

17, 12: The king of Babylon: Nabuchodonosor dethroned Joachin and exiled him.

17, 13: Nabuchodonosor selected king Sedecia, uncle of Joachin ("a man of the royal line").

17, 15: This man rebelled: Sedecia was misguided by false prophets to seek an alliance with Pharao Hophra of Egypt. See 4 Kgs 24,10—25,7.

17, 22-23: In contrast with v. 3, Yahweh, too, will take a person ("crest" or "tender shoot") of the cedar (the House of David, or "topmost branches"). Ezechiel has been and still is speaking of the imminent fall of Jerusalem and of its Davidic dynasty. His message of hope is that it is not the end of David's line, nor of God's promises to protect it. The prophet's prediction is: the House of David will continue, for it will be planted "on the mountain heights of Israel" and "become a majestic cedar." Ezechiel is speaking literally and directly of a single future Davidic ruler and king, who fits comfortably in the royal Messianic strand. The future kingdom will encompass all peoples: "Birds of every kind . . . its boughs" (23). That this vague future ruler was to be Christ ruling His Church went beyond Ezechiel's highest hopes.

Birds of every kind shall dwell beneath it, every winged 24 thing in the shade of its boughs. | And all the trees of the field shall know that I, the Lord, bring low the high tree, lift high the lowly tree, wither up the green tree, and make the withered tree bloom.
As I, the Lord, have spoken, so will I do.

1 Personal Responsibility Thus the word of the Lord came 2 to me: Son of man, | what is the meaning of this proverb that you recite in the land of Israel: "Fathers have eaten green 3 grapes, thus their children's teeth are on edge"? | As I live, says the Lord God: I swear that there shall no longer be anyone 4 among you who will repeat this proverb in Israel. For all lives are mine; the life of the father is like the life of the son, both are mine; only the one who sins shall die.
5 If a man is virtuous—if he does what is right and just, | 6 if he does not eat on the mountains, nor raise his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel; if he does not defile his neighbor's wife, nor have relations with a woman in her menstrual period; 7 if he oppresses no one, gives back the pledge received for a debt, commits no robbery; if he gives food to the hungry and clothes 8 the naked; if he does not lend at interest nor exact usury; if he holds off from evildoing, judges fairly between a man and his 9 opponent; if he lives by my statutes and is careful to observe my ordinances, that man is virtuous—he shall surely live, says
the Lord God.
10 But if he begets a son who is a thief, a murderer, or who 11 does any of these things (though the father does none of them), a son who eats on the mountains, defiles the wife of his 12 neighbor, | oppresses the poor and needy, commits robbery, does not give back a pledge, raises his eyes to idols, does abomi-13 nable things, | lends at interest and exacts usury—this son certainly shall not live. Because he practiced all these abomi-

18, 1-32: The exiles believed themselves to be innocent, and put the blame for the exile with its attendant miseries on their predecessors. They epitomized this grievance in the proverb of v. 2. The same complaint is registered in Jer 31, 29. Ezechiel tells them here that they are individually and personally responsible for their own sins, which are also causing the present distress. He summarizes this teaching with fine precision in v. 20. Furthermore, even the past sins of an individual will not count, but his good actions of the present and future will be rewarded (vv. 21-23). Vice versa, even a virtuous past life will be of no avail if one lives evilly in the present and the future (vv. 24-28). For other major texts on individual responsibility, see 3, 17-21 n; 14, 12-23 n; 33, 1-20 n.

nations, he shall surely die; his death shall be his own fault.
14 On the other hand, if a man begets a son who, seeing all the sins his father commits, yet fears and does not imitate him; 15 a son who does not eat on the mountains, or raise his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, or defile his neighbor's wife; 16 who does not oppress anyone, or exact a pledge, or commit robbery; who gives his food to the hungry and clothes the 17 naked; who holds off from evildoing, accepts no interest or usury, but keeps my ordinances and lives by my statutes—this one shall not die for the sins of his father, but shall surely live.
18 Only the father, since he violated rights, and robbed, and did what was not good among his people, shall in truth die for his 19 sins. You ask: "Why is not the son charged with the guilt of his father?" Because the son has done what is right and just, and has been careful to observe all my statutes, he shall surely 20 live. | Only the one who sins shall die. The son shall not be charged with the guilt of his father, nor shall the father be charged with the guilt of his son. The virtuous man's virtue shall be his own, as the wicked man's wickedness shall be his.
21 But if the wicked man turns away from all the sins he committed, if he keeps all my statutes and does what is right 22 and just, he shall surely live, he shall not die. None of the crimes he committed shall be remembered against him; he shall 23 live because of the virtue he has practiced. Do I indeed derive any pleasure from the death of the wicked? says the Lord God.
Do I not rather rejoice when he turns from his evil way that he may live?
24 And if the virtuous man turns from the path of virtue to do evil, the same kind of abominable things that the wicked man does, can he do this and still live? None of his virtuous deeds shall be remembered, because he has broken faith and committed 25 sin; because of this, he shall die. You say, "The Lord's way is not fair!" Hear now, house of Israel: Is it my way that is unfair, 26 or rather, are not your ways unfair? When a virtuous man turns away from virtue to commit iniquity, and dies, it is because of 27 the iniquity he committed that he must die. But if a wicked man, turning from the wickedness he has committed, does what 28 is right and just, he shall preserve his life; since he has turned away from all the sins which he committed, he shall surely 29 live, he shall not die. And yet the house of Israel says, "The Lord's way is not fair!" Is it my way that is not fair, house of Israel, or rather, is it not that your ways are not fair?
30 Therefore I will judge you, house of Israel, each one according to his ways, says the Lord God. Turn and be converted from all your crimes, that they may be no cause of guilt for 31 you. Cast away from you all the crimes you have committed, and make for yourselves a new heart and a new spirit. Why 32 should you die, O house of Israel? | For I have no pleasure in the death of anyone who dies, says the Lord God. Return and live!

1 As for you, son of man, raise a lamentation over the prince of Israel:

2 Allegory of the Lions What a lioness was your mother, a lion of lions! Among young lions she couched to rear her whelps.
3 | One whelp she raised up, a young lion he became; he learned
4 to seize prey, men he devoured. | Then nations raised cries against him, in their pit he was caught; they took him away 5 with hooks to the land of Egypt. | Then she saw that in vain she had waited, her hope was destroyed. She took another of her 6 whelps, him she made a young lion. | He prowled among the lions, a young lion he became; he learned to seize prey, men he 7 devoured; | he ravaged their strongholds, their cities he wasted.
The land and all in it were appalled at the noise of his roar. |
8 Nations laid out against him snares all about him; they spread 9 their net to take him, in their pit he was caught. | They put him in a cage and took him away to the king of Babylon, so that his voice would not be heard on the mountains of Israel.

10 Allegory of the Vine Branch Your mother was like a vine planted by the water; fruitful and branchy was she because 11 of the abundant water. | One strong branch she put out as a royal scepter. Stately was her height amid the dense foliage; 12 notably tall was she with her many clusters. | But she was torn up in fury and flung to the ground; the east wind withered her up, her fruit was torn off; then her strong branch withered up, 13 fire devoured it. | So now she is planted in the desert, in a land

19, 2-9: Scholars admit that this is an allegory-dirge, and it is generally interpreted that the two young lions in this obscure poem are probably Joachaz and Joachin.

19, 2: A lioness: Juda.

19, 4: Pharao Necho, in 609, ended king Joachaz' three months' rule by exiling him to Egypt, where he died. See 4 Kings 23, 33-34.

19, 9: The second lion was Joachin, whom Nabuchodonosor exiled to Babylon. See 4 Kgs 24, 8-17.

19, 10-14: In this second allegory-dirge most scholars interpret the "mother" and "vine" as Juda and the "branch" and "scepter" as king Sedecia, who was first reigning gloriously and then came to an ignoble end. It is not a Messianic text.

14 dry and parched, | for fire came out of the branch and devoured her shoots; she is now without a strong branch, a ruler's scepter.

This is a lamentation and serves as a lamentation.

1 Israel's History of Infidelity In the seventh year, on the tenth day of the fifth month, some of the elders of Israel came 2 to consult the Lord and sat down before me. Then the word of 3 the Lord came to me: Son of man, speak with the elders of Israel and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: Have you come to consult me? As I live! I swear I will not allow myself to be consulted by you, says the Lord God.
4 Will you judge them? Will you judge, son of man? Make 5 known to them the abominations of their ancestors | in these words: Thus speaks the Lord God: The day I chose Israel, I swore to the descendants of the house of Jacob; in the land of Egypt I revealed myself to them and swore: I am the Lord, 6 your God. | That day I swore to bring them out of the land of Egypt to the land I had scouted for them, a land flowing with 7 milk and honey, a jewel among all lands. | Then I said to them:
Throw away, each of you, the detestable things that have held your eyes; do not defile yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the Lord, your God.
8 But they rebelled against me and refused to listen to me; none of them threw away the detestable things that had held their eyes, they did not abandon the idols of Egypt. Then I thought of pouring out my fury on them and spending my anger on 9 them there in the land of Egypt; | but I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations among whom they were, in whose presence I had made myself known to them, revealing that I would bring them out of the 10 land of Egypt. Therefore I led them out of the land of Egypt and 11 brought them into the desert. Then I gave them my statutes and made known to them my ordinances, which everyone must 12 keep, to have life through them. I also gave them my Sabbaths to be a sign between me and them, to show that it was I, the Lord, who made them holy.
13 But the house of Israel rebelled against me in the desert.
They did not observe my statutes, and they despised my ordi-20, 1-44: Ezechiel describes the history of Israel as a chain of infidelities of the people to God from Egypt to the present exiles in Babylon. However, God will save a remnant (vv. 37-38).

20, 1: August 14, 591 B.C.

nances that bring life to those who keep them. My Sabbaths, too, they desecrated grievously. Then I thought of pouring out 14 my fury on them in the desert to put an end to them, | but I acted for my name's sake, that it should not be profaned in the sight of the nations in whose presence I had brought them out.
15 Nevertheless I swore to them in the desert not to bring them to the land I had given them, a land flowing with milk and honey, 16 a jewel among all lands. So much were their hearts devoted to their idols, they had not lived by my statutes, but despised my 17 ordinances and desecrated my Sabbaths. But I looked on them with pity, not wanting to destroy them, so I did not put an end to them in the desert.
18 Then I said to their children in the desert: Do not observe the statutes of your parents or keep their ordinances; do not defile 19 yourselves with their idols. I am the Lord, your God: observe 20 my statutes and be careful to keep my ordinances; keep holy my Sabbaths, as a sign between me and you to show that I am 21 the Lord, your God. But their children rebelled against me: they did not observe my statutes or keep my ordinances that bring life to those who observe them, and my Sabbaths they desecrated. Then I thought of pouring out my fury on them, of 22 spending my anger on them in the desert; but I stayed my hand, acting for my name's sake, lest it be profaned in the sight of 23 the nations in whose presence I brought them out. Nevertheless I swore to them in the desert that I would disperse them among 24 the nations and scatter them over foreign lands; for they did not keep my ordinances, but despised my statutes and desecrated 25 my Sabbaths, with eyes only for the idols of their fathers. Therefore I gave them statutes that were not good, and ordinances 26 through which they could not live. I let them become defiled by their gifts, by their immolation of every first-born, so as to make them an object of horror.
27 Therefore speak to the house of Israel, son of man, and tell them: Thus says the Lord God: In this way also your fathers 28 blasphemed me, breaking faith with me: when I had brought them to the land I had sworn to give them, and they saw all its high hills and leafy trees, there they offered their sacrifices [there they brought their offensive offerings], there they sent up appeasing odors, and there they poured out their libations.
29 | I asked them: To what sort of high place do you betake your-

20, 25-26: I gave them statutes that were not good: the sacred writers attribute everything to God. We would say: the people performed pagan practices through God's permissive will.

selves?—and so they call it a high place even to the present day.
30 Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: will you defile yourselves like your fathers? Will you lust after 31 their detestable idols? By offering your gifts, by making your children pass through the fire, you defile yourselves with all your idols even to this day. Shall I let myself be consulted by you, house of Israel? As I live! says the Lord God: I swear I will not let myself be consulted by you.
32 What you are thinking of shall never happen: "We shall be like the nations, like the peoples of foreign lands, serving 33 wood and stone." As I live, says the Lord God, with a mighty hand and outstretched arm, with poured-out wrath, I swear 34 I will be king over you! With a mighty hand and outstretched arm, with poured-out wrath, I will bring you out from the nations and gather you from the countries over which you are 35 scattered; then I will lead you to the desert of the peoples, where 36 I will enter into judgment with you face to face. Just as I entered into judgment with your fathers in the desert of the land of Egypt, so I will enter into judgment with you, says the Lord 37 God. I will count you with the staff and bring back but a small 38 number. I will separate from you those who have rebelled and transgressed against me; from the land where they sojourned as aliens I will bring them out, but they shall not return to the land of Israel. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
39 As for you, house of Israel, thus says the Lord God: Come, each one of you, destroy your idols! Then listen to me, and never again profane my holy name with your gifts and your 40 idols. For on my holy mountain, on the mountain height of Israel, says the Lord God, there the whole house of Israel without exception shall worship me; there I will accept them, and there I will claim your tributes and the first fruits of your 41 offerings, and all that you dedicate. As a pleasing odor I will accept you, when I have brought you from among the nations and gathered you out of the countries over which you were scattered; and by means of you I will manifest my holiness in 42 the sight of the nations. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord, when I bring you back to the land of Israel, the land which 43 I swore to give to your fathers. There you shall recall your conduct and all the deeds by which you defiled yourselves; and you shall loathe yourselves because of all the evil things you 44 did. And you shall know that I am the Lord when I deal with you thus, for my name's sake, and not according to your evil conduct and corrupt actions, O house of Israel, says the Lord God.

1 The Sword of the Lord Thus the word of the Lord came 2 to me: Son of man, look southward, preach toward the south, 3 and prophesy against the forest of the southern land. Hear the word of the Lord! you shall say to the southern forest. Thus says the Lord God: See! I am kindling a fire in you that shall devour all trees, the green as well as the dry. The blazing flame shall not be quenched, but from south to north every face shall 4 be scorched by it. Everyone shall see that I, the Lord, have kindled it, and it shall not be quenched.
5 But I said, "Alas! Lord God, they say to me, 'Is not this the 6 one who is forever spinning parables?' " Then the word of the 7 Lord came to me: Son of man, look toward Jerusalem, preach against their sanctuary, and prophesy against the land of Israel, 8 saying to the land of Israel: Thus says the Lord: See! I am coming at you; I will draw my sword from its sheath and cut 9 off from you the virtuous and the wicked. Thus my sword shall 10 leave its sheath against everyone from south to north, and everyone shall know that I, the Lord, have drawn my sword from its sheath, and it shall not be sheathed again.

11 Act Symbolic of the City's Fall As for you, son of man, groan! with shattered strength groan bitterly while they look 12 on. And when they ask you, "Why are you groaning?", you shall say: Because of a report; when it comes every heart shall faii, every hand shall fall helpless, every spirit shall be daunted, and every knee shall run with water. See, it is coming, it is here! says the Lord God.

13 Song of the Sword Thus the word of the Lord came to 14 me: Son of man, prophesy! say: Thus says the Lord:
A sword, a sword has been sharpened, a sword, a sword has 15 been burnished: to work slaughter has it been sharpened, to flash lightning has it been burnished. Why should I now withdraw it? You have spurned the rod and every judgment!

21, 1-37: In several oracles against the Judeans and the Ammonites, Ezechiel describes forthcoming disaster under the symbol of Yahweh's sword.

21, 1-4: Forest of the southern land: the oracle is directed to the kingdom of the south, Juda. The catastrophe is likened to an imminent forest fire, a familiar prophetic image.

21, 8: The virtuous and the wicked: this may be understood as an expression of total destruction. Actually, in the historical fall of Jerusalem, both the just and the wicked were punished.

21, 12: A report: of Jerusalem's fall. See 33, 21-22.

16 I have given it over to the burnisher that he might hold it in his hand, a sword sharpened and burnished to be put in the hand 17 of a slayer. | Cry out and wail, son of man, for it is destined for my people; it is for all the princes of Israel, victims of the sword with my people.
18 Therefore, slap your thigh, | for the sword has been tested; and why should it not be so? says the Lord God, since you have spurned the rod.
19 As for you, son of man, prophesy, brushing one hand against the other: while the sword is doubled and tripled, this sword of slaughter, this great sword of slaughter which threatens all 20 around, | that every heart may tremble; for many will be the fallen. At all their gates I have appointed the sword for slaughter, fashioned to flash lightning, burnished for slaughter.
21 | Cleave to the right! destroy! to the left! wherever your edge is turned.
22 Then I, too, shall brush one hand against the other and wreak my fury. I, the Lord, have spoken.

23 Nabuchodonosor at the Crossroads Thus the word of 24 the Lord came to me: Son of man, make for yourself two roads over which the sword of the king of Babylon can come. Both roads shall lead out from the same land. Then put a signpost 25 at the head of each road, so that the sword can come to Rabbah 26 of the Ammonites or to Juda's capital, Jerusalem. For at the fork where the two roads divide stands the king of Babylon, divining; he has shaken the arrows, inquired of the teraphim, 27 inspected the liver. In his right hand is the divining arrow marked "Jerusalem," bidding him to give the order for slaying, to raise his voice in the battle cry, to post battering-rams at the 28 gates, to cast up a ramp, to build a siege tower. In their eyes this is but a lying oracle; yet they are bound by the oaths they have sworn, and the arrow taken in hand marks their guilt.
29 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because you have drawn attention to your guilt, with your crimes laid bare and your sinfulness in all your wicked deeds revealed (because attention

21, 16: The burnisher: the Babylonians.
21, 18: Slap your thigh: a gesture of mourning.
21, 22: A gesture repudiating responsibility. See 22, 13.
21, 26f: He has shaken the arrows: an arrow is chosen out of a sheath containing apparently two arrows, one marked Jerusalem and the other Rabbah, modern Amman, capital of Jordan (v. 25). The Arabs also used this form of divination. Teraphim: household gods in human form are consulted. Inspected the liver: the examination of the configuration of livers from freshly killed animals is called hepatoscopy.

30 has been drawn to you), you shall be taken in hand. And as for you, depraved and wicked prince of Israel, whose day is coming 31 when your life of crime will be ended, | thus says the Lord God: Off with the turban and away with the crown! Nothing shall be as it was! Up with the low and down with the high!
32 Twisted, twisted, twisted will I leave it; it shall not be the same until he comes who has the claim against the city; and to him I will hand it over.

33 Against the Ammonites As for you, son of man, prophesy: Thus says the Lord God against the Ammonites and their insults: A sword, a sword is drawn for slaughter, burnished to 34 consume and to flash lightning, because you planned with false visions and lying divinations to lay it on the necks of depraved and wicked men whose day has come when their 35 crimes are at an end. Return it to its sheath! In the place where you were created, in the land of your origin, I will judge you.
36 I will pour out my indignation upon you, breathing my fiery wrath upon you; I will hand you over to ravaging men, artisans 37 of destruction. You shall be fuel for the fire, your blood shall flow throughout the land. You shall not be remembered, for I, the Lord, have spoken.

1 Crimes of Jerusalem Thus the word of the Lord came 2 to me: You, son of man, would you judge, would you judge 3 the bloody city? Then make known all her abominations, | and say: Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the city which sheds blood within herself so that her time has come, and which 4 has made idols for her own defilement. By the blood which you shed you have been made guilty, and with the idols you made you have become defiled; you have brought on your day, so that the end of your years has come. Therefore I make you an object of scorn to the nations and a laughingstock to all foreign 5 lands. Those near you and those far off shall deride you because 6 of your foul reputation and your great perversity. See! the princes 7 of Israel, family by family, are in you only for bloodshed. Within you, father and mother are despised; in your midst, they extort from the resident alien; within you, they oppress orphans and 21, 30: Prince of Israel: Sedecia.

21, 32: Until he comes: a reference to the future Messia (Gn 49, 10) or a reference to Nabuchodonosor.

widows. What is holy to me you have spurned, and my Sabbaths you have desecrated. There are those in you who slander to cause bloodshed; within you are those who feast on the mountains; in your midst are those who do lewd things. In you are those who uncover the nakedness of their fathers, and in you those who coerce women in their menstrual period. There are those in you who do abominable things with the wives of their neighbors, men who defile their daughters-in-law by incest, men who coerce their sisters, the daughters of their own fathers.
There are those in you who take bribes to shed blood. You exact interest and usury; you despoil your neighbors violently;
and me you have forgotten, says the Lord God.
See, I am brushing one hand against the other because of the unjust profits you have made and because of the bloodshed in your midst. Can your heart remain firm, will your hands be strong, in the days when I deal with you? I, the Lord, have spoken, and I will act. | I will disperse you among the nations and scatter you over foreign lands, so that I may purge your uncleanness. In you I will allow myself to be profaned in the eyes of the nations; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
17.18 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, the house of Israel has become dross for me. All of them are bronze and tin, iron and lead [in the midst of a furnace]: dross from silver have they become. Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because all of you have become dross, therefore I must gather you together within Jerusalem. Just as silver, bronze, iron, lead, and tin are gathered into a furnace and smelted in the roaring flames, so I will gather you together in my furious wrath, put you in, and smelt you. When I have assembled you, I will blast you with the fire of my anger and smelt you with it. You shall be smelted by it just as silver is smelted in a furnace. Thus you shall know that I, the Lord, have poured out my fury on you.
23.24 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, say to her: You are a land unrained on [that is, not rained on] at the time of my fury. Her princes are like roaring lions that tear prey; they devour people, seizing their wealth and precious things, and make widows of many within her. Her priests violate my law and profane what is holy to me; they do not distinguish between the sacred and the profane, nor teach the difference between the unclean and the clean; they pay no

22, 9: Feast on the mountains: by partaking in idolatrous rites.
22, 10: Uncover the nakedness of their fathers: incest was forbidden by the Mosaic Law.

attention to my Sabbaths, so that I have been profaned in their 27 midst. Her nobles within her are like wolves that tear prey, 28 shedding blood and destroying lives to get unjust gain. Her prophets cover them with whitewash, pretending to visions that are false and performing lying divinations, saying, "Thus says 29 the Lord God," although the Lord has not spoken. The people of the land practice extortion and commit robbery; they afflict the poor and the needy, and oppress the resident alien without 30 justice. Thus I have searched among them for someone who could build a wall or stand in the breach before me to keep me 31 from destroying the land; but I found no one. Therefore I have poured out my fury upon them; with my fiery wrath I have consumed them; I have brought down their conduct upon their heads, says the Lord God.

1 The Two Sisters Thus the word of the Lord came to me:
2 Son of man, there were two women, daughters of the same 3 mother, who even as young girls played the harlot in Egypt. There the Egyptians caressed their bosoms and fondled their 4 virginal breasts. Oholа was the name of the elder, and the name of her sister was Oholiba. They became mine and bore sons and daughters. [As for their names: Samaria is Oholа, and 5 Jerusalem is Oholiba.] Oholа became a harlot faithless to me;
6 she lusted after her lovers, the Assyrians, warriors | dressed in purple, governors and officers, all of them attractive young men,
7 knights mounted on horses. Thus she gave herself as a harlot to them, to all the elite of the Assyrians, and she defiled herself

22, 30: Ezechiel may be referring to prophets and priests and to the leaders who should have been warning the people. See 13, 5 for the same thought.

23, 1-49: This allegory is one of the most realistic passages of the Old Testament. To show his raging disgust at his fatherland's constant sin of idolatry and its unwise political alliances with Egypt and Assyria, Ezechiel can think of nothing more revolting than the symbolism of adultery and prostitution. His audience did not regard this as a titillating piece of oratory or writing, but considered it a genuine interpretation of national idolatry as spiritual infidelity to Yahweh, which was a powerful insight into the nature of their apostasy. By contrast, the offended purity of their God appears all the more impressively.

23, 1-3: Using poetic license, Ezechiel speaks of the two kingdoms placing them in a time when the people were in Egypt before the Exodus.

23, 4: Oholа may mean "her own tent." This symbolic name may be a veiled reference to the illegal temple and cult of Samaria. Oholiba may mean "my tent is in her." This may allude to the true temple and cult of Jerusalem.

with all those for whom she lusted [with all their idols]. She did not give up the harlotry which she had begun in Egypt, when they had lain with her as a young girl, fondling her virginal breasts and pouring out their impurities on her. Therefore I handed her over to her lovers, the Assyrians for whom she had lusted. They exposed her nakedness, her sons and daughters they took away, and herself they slew with the sword. Thus she became a byword for women, for they punished her grievously.
Though her sister Oholiba saw all this, her lust was more depraved than her sister's, and she outdid her in harlotry. She too lusted after the Assyrians, governors and officers, warriors impeccably clothed, knights mounted on horses, all of them attractive young men. I saw that she had defiled herself. Both had gone down the same path, | yet she went further in her harlotry. When she saw men drawn on the wall, the images of Chaldeans drawn with vermillion, | with sashes girded about their waists, flowing turbans on their heads, all looking like chariot warriors, the portraits of Babylonians, natives of Chaldea, | she lusted for them; no sooner had she set eyes on them than she sent messengers to them in Chaldea. Then the Babylonians came to her, to the love couch, and defiled her with their intercourse. As soon as she was defiled by them, she became disgusted with them. Her harlotry was discovered and her shame was revealed, and I became disgusted with her as I had become disgusted with her sister. But she played the harlot all the more, recalling the days of her girlhood, when she had been a harlot in the land of Egypt. She lusted for the lechers of Egypt, whose members are like that of an ass, and whose heat is like that of stallions.
You yearned for the lewdness of your girlhood, when the Egyptians fondled your breasts, caressing your bosom. | Therefore, Oholiba, thus says the Lord God: I will now stir up your lovers against you, those with whom you are disgusted, and I will bring them against you from every side: the men of Babylon and all of Chaldea, Pecod, Shoa, and Coa, along with all those of Assyria, attractive young men, all of them governors and officers, charioteers and warriors, all of them horsemen.
They shall come against you from the north with chariots and wagons and many peoples. Shields, bucklers, and helmets they shall array against you everywhere. I will leave it to them to judge, and they will judge you by their own ordinances. I will let loose my jealousy against you, so that they shall deal with 23, 23: These are inhabitants of places in the vicinity of the Tigris river in Mesopotamia.

you in fury, cutting off your nose and ears; and what is left of you shall fall by the sword. They shall take away your sons and daughters, and what is left of you shall be devoured 26 by fire. They shall strip off your clothes and seize your splendid 27 ornaments. I will put an end to your lewdness and to the harlotry you began in Egypt; you shall no longer look toward it, nor shall you remember Egypt again.
28 For thus says the Lord God: I am now handing you over 29 to those whom you hate, to those who fill you with disgust. They shall deal with you in hatred, seizing all that you have worked for and leaving you stark naked, so that your indecent nakedness 30 is exposed. Your lewdness and harlotry have brought these things upon you, because you played the harlot with the nations by defiling yourself with their idols.
31 Because you followed in the path of your sister, I will hand 32 you her cup. Thus says the Lord God: The cup of your sister you shall drink, so wide and deep, which holds so much, 33 filled with destruction and grief, a cup of dismay, the cup of 34 your sister. You shall drain it dry, and gnaw at the very sherds of the cup, and you shall tear out your breasts; for I have 35 spoken, says the Lord God. Therefore thus says the Lord God:
Because you have forgotten me and cast me behind your back, it is for you to bear the penalty of your lewdness and harlotry.
36 Then the Lord said to me: Son of man, would you judge 37 Ohola and Oholiba? Then make known to them their abominations. For they committed adultery, and blood is on their hands.
They committed adultery with their idols; to feed them they immolated the children they had borne me. This, too, they did 38 to me: they defiled my sanctuary and desecrated my Sabbaths.
39 On the very day they slew their children for their idols, they entered my sanctuary to desecrate it. Thus they acted within 40 my house. Moreover, they sent for men who had to come from afar, to whom messengers were sent. And so they came—and for them you bathed yourself, painted your eyes, and put on 41 ornaments. You sat on a couch prepared for them, with a table spread before it, on which you had set my incense and 42 oil. Then was heard the shout of a carefree mob in the city, and these were men brought in from the desert, who put bracelets on the women's arms and splendid diadems on their heads.
43 So I said: "Oh, this woman jaded with adulteries! Now they 44 will commit whoredom with her, and as for her. . . ." And indeed they did come to her as men come to a harlot. Thus they 23, 40: Men who had to come from afar: Assyrian and Babylonian ambassadors whose alliances led to the adoption of pagan ways.

45 came to Ohola and Oholība, the lewd women. But just men shall punish them with the sentence meted out to adulteresses and murderesses, for they have committed adultery, and blood is on their hands.
46 Thus says the Lord God: Summon an assembly against 47 them, and deliver them over to terror and plunder. The assembly shall stone them and hack them to pieces with their swords.
They shall slay their sons and daughters, and burn their houses 48 with fire. Thus I will put an end to lewdness in the land, and all the women will be warned not to imitate your lewdness.
49 They shall inflict on you the penalty of your lewdness, and you shall pay for your sins of idolatry. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Allegory of the Pot On the tenth day of the tenth month, 2 in the ninth year, the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, write down this date today, for this very day the king of 3 Babylon has invested Jerusalem. Propose this parable to the rebellious house: Thus says the Lord God: 4 Set up the pot, set it up, then pour in some water. | Put in it pieces of meat, all good pieces: thigh and shoulder; fill it 5 with the choicest joints taken from the pick of the flock. | Then pile the wood beneath it; bring to a boil these pieces and the 6 joints that are in it. | Take out its pieces, one by one, without casting lots for it.
Therefore, thus says the Lord God: Woe to the bloody city, 7 a pot containing rust, whose rust has not been removed. For the blood she shed is in her midst: she poured it on the bare rock; she did not pour it out on the earth, to be covered with 8 dust. To work up my wrath, to excite my vengeance, she put 9 her blood on the bare rock, not to be covered. Therefore, thus 10 says the Lord God: I, too, will heap up a great bonfire, | piling

24, 1: January 15, 588 B.C. See 4 Kgs 25 for the same date in which "Nabuchodonosor . . . came . . . against Jerusalem and . . . raised works around about it."

24, 2: The reason for the divine command, according to many commentators, is that he may recall the date when later on official news comes, and therefore gain the confidence of his fellow exiles.

24, 3-14: The comparison of the Jerusalemites with the boiled meat symbolizes their punishment, not their protection as explained in 11, 3 n. Scholars in general do not try to identify the meaning of each item since the process becomes too problematic.

24, 7-8: According to Lv 17, 13f, blood was "the life of every living body" and therefore had to be covered with earth because the blood was sacred according to primitive ideas.

on wood and kindling the fire, till the meat has been cooked, til the broth has boiled.
11 Then I will set the pot empty on the coals till its meta glows red hot, till the impurities in it melt, and its rust dis 12 appears. Yet not even with fire will its great rust be removed 13 Because you have sullied yourself with lewdness when I woul have purified you, and you refused to be purified of you uncleanness, therefore you shall not be purified until I wreal 14 my fury on you. I, the Lord, have spoken; it is coming, for will bring it about without fail. I will not have pity nor repent By your conduct and your deeds you shall be judged, says th Lord God.

15 Symbol of the Destruction of the Temple Thus th 16 word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, by a sudden blow am taking away from you the delight of your eyes, but do n 17 mourn or weep or shed any tears. Groan in silence, make n lament for the dead, bind on your turban, put your sandals o your feet, do not cover your beard, and do not eat the customar 18 bread. That evening my wife died, and the next morning I di 19 as I had been commanded. Then the people asked me, "Wil you not tell us what all these things that you are doing mear 20 for us?" I therefore spoke to the people that morning, | sayin 21 to them: Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Say to th house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: I will now desecrat my sanctuary, the stronghold of your pride, the delight of you eyes, the desire of your soul. The sons and daughters you lef 24 behind shall fall by the sword. Ezechiel shall be a sign for you all that he did you shall do when it happens. Thus you shal 22 know that I am the Lord. You shall do as I have done, no 23 covering your beards nor eating the customary bread. You turbans shall remain on your heads, your sandals on your feet You shall not mourn or weep, but you shall rot away because of your sins and groan one to another.

25 End of Ezechiel's Dumbness As for you, son of man, truly, on the day I take away from them their bulwark, their glorious joy, the delight of their eyes, the desire of their soul, 26 and the pride of their hearts, their sons and daughters, | that

24, 15-23: The delight of your eyes: this expression (v. 16) means his wife as v. 18 specifies. Ezechiel is ordered not to mourn his wife's death nor to perform the customary mourning rites. Neither are the people to mourn when Jerusalem falls, but they must give themselves to interior remorse.

24, 21: In this verse, there are four expressions for the Jerusalem temple.

day the fugitive will come to you, that you may hear it for 27 yourself; that day your mouth shall be opened and you shall be dumb no longer. Thus you shall be a sign to them, and they shall know that I am the Lord.

III. PROPHECIES AGAINST FOREIGN NATIONS

1 Against Ammon Thus the word of the Lord came to me:
2 Son of man, turn toward the Ammonites and prophesy against 3 them. Say to the Ammonites: Hear the word of the Lord! Thus says the Lord God: Because you cried out your joy over the desecration of my sanctuary, the devastation of the land of 4 Israel, and the exile of the house of Juda, therefore I will deliver you into the possession of the Easterners. They shall set up their encampments among you and pitch their tents; they shall 5 eat your fruits and drink your milk. I will make Rabba a pasture for camels, and the villages of the Ammonites a resting place for flocks. Thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
6 For thus says the Lord God: Because you clapped your hands and stamped your feet, rejoicing most maliciously in your 7 heart over the land of Israel, therefore I will stretch out my hand against you. I will make you plunder for the nations, I will cut you off from the peoples, and remove you from the lands.
I will destroy you, and thus you shall know that I am the Lord.

8 Against Moab Thus says the Lord God: Because Moab 9 said, "See! the house of Juda is like all other nations," therefore I will clear the shoulder of Moab totally of its cities, the jewels of the land: Beth-Jesimoth, Baal-Maon, and Cariathaim.

24, 27: That day your mouth shall be opened: see 3, 25-26 n, and 33, 22.

25—32: Ezechiel, following the example of Isaia and Jeremia, places his oracles against the nations after those against Juda. Most of these oracles date from about 587. These nations will be punished for partaking in Juda's downfall either in action or in gladness of the fall, or simply because of their pride. See Am 1, 2 n on the basic meaning of oracles against nations.

25, 4: Easterners: desert tribes who roamed east of the Ammonites.

25, 5: Rabba: the same place as the "Rabbah of the Ammonites" in 21, 25.

25, 6: For the same gesture signifying grief, see 6, 11 n.

25, 7: Know that I am the Lord: notice this refrain at the end of the prophecies against the nations.

25, 9: The shoulder of Moab: the side of the mountain in northern Moab. The jewels: recent archeological studies show that the three fortified cities formed a line of defense.

10 I will hand her over, along with the Ammonites, into the possession of the Easterners, that she may not be remembered 11 among the peoples. Thus I will execute judgment upon Moab, that they may know that I am the Lord.

12 Against Edom Thus says the Lord God: Because Edom has taken vengeance on the house of Juda and has made itself 13 grievously guilty by taking vengeance on them, therefore thus says the Lord God: I will stretch out my hand against Edom and cut off from it man and beast. I will make it a waste from 14 Teman to Dedan; they shall fall by the sword. My vengeance upon Edom I will entrust to my people Israel, who will deal with Edom in accordance with my anger and my fury; thus they shall know my vengeance, says the Lord God.

15 Against the Philistines Thus says the Lord God: Because the Philistines have acted revengefully, and have taken vengeance with destructive malice in their hearts, with an undying 16 enmity, | therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am stretching out my hand against the Philistines; I will cut off the Cherethites 17 and wipe out the remnant on the seacoast. I will execute great acts of vengeance on them, punishing them furiously. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord, when I wreak my vengeance on them.

26

1 Against the City of Tyre On the first day of the . . .
month in the eleventh year, the word of the Lord came to me:
2 Son of man, because of what Tyre said of Jerusalem: "Aha!
it is broken, the gateway to the peoples; now that it is ruined, 3 its wealth reverts to me!" therefore thus says the Lord God:
See! I am coming at you, Tyre; I will churn up against you 4 many nations, even as the sea churns up its waves; they shall destroy the walls of Tyre and raze her towers. I will scrape the 5 ground from her and leave her a bare rock; | she shall be a drying place for nets in the midst of the sea.
I have spoken, says the Lord God: and she shall be booty for 25, 12-14: See another oracle against Edom in 35, 1ff. At least five prophets have an oracle against Edom, especially the prophet Abdia.

25, 16: Cherethites: this name seems to be used synonymously with "Philistines" in the same verse.

26, 1: The number of the month has been lost. Eleventh year: about 587 when Jerusalem fell.

26, 4-5: Bare rock . . . in the midst of the sea: Tyre was an island

6 the nations. | And her daughters on the mainland shall be slaughtered by the sword; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.
7 For thus says the Lord God: I am now bringing up against Tyre from the north Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon, the king of kings, with horses and chariots, with cavalry and a great and mighty army.
8 Your daughters on the mainland he shall slay with the sword; he shall place a siege tower against you, cast up a ramp about 9 you, and raise his shields against you. | He shall pound your walls with battering-rams and break down your towers with 10 his weapons. | The surge of his horses shall cover you with dust, amid the noise of steeds, of wheels and of chariots. Your walls shall shake as he enters your gates, even as one enters a 11 city that is breached. | With the hoofs of his horses he shall trample all your streets; your people he shall slay by the sword; 12 your mighty pillars he shall pull to the ground. | Your wealth shall be plundered, your merchandise pillaged; your walls shall be torn down, your precious houses demolished; your stones, 13 your timber, and your clay shall be cast into the sea. | I will put an end to the noise of your songs, and the sound of your 14 lyres shall be heard no more. | I will make you a bare rock;
a drying place for nets shall you be.
Never shall you be rebuilt, for I have spoken, says the Lord God.
15 Thus says the Lord God to Tyre: At the noise of your fall, at the groaning of the wounded, when the sword slays in your 16 midst, shall not the isles quake? All the princes of the sea shall step down from their thrones, lay aside their robes, and strip off their embroidered garments. They shall be clothed in mourning and, sitting on the ground, they shall tremble at every moment rock separated from continental Tyre, composed of "suburbian" colonies founded by Tyre and called "daughters on the mainland" (v. 6). It was only in the fourth century B.C., at the time of Alexander the Great, that a causeway connected Tyre with the mainland of Phoenicia. At the time of this prophecy (587) Nabuchodonosor began the siege of Tyre.

26, 14: Nabuchodonosor first conquered continental Tyre and then besieged the island fortress city for thirteen years between 587 and 574, but he never conquered it. Most likely the prophet himself did not know exactly when Tyre would fall definitely. This was characteristic of the limited way the prophets foretold the destruction of cities and countries. In the example of Tyre, Nabuchodonosor began its destruction, Alexander the Great continued it, and the Saracens ended it in 1291 A.D.

26, 15-16: Isles quake . . . princes of the sea: a poetic description of the repercussion on Tyre's colonies and dependencies at the news of her siege.

17 and be horrified at you. Then they shall utter a lament over you:
How have you perished, gone from the seas, city most prized!
Once she was mighty on the sea, she and her dwellers, who 18 spread terror into all that dwelt by the sea. | On this, the day of your fall, the islands quake!
The isles in the sea are terrified at your passing.
19 For thus says the Lord God: When I make you a city desolate like cities that are no longer inhabited, when I churn up the 20 abyss against you, and its mighty waters cover you, then I will thrust you down with those who descend into the pit, those of the bygone age; and I will make you dwell in the nether lands, in the everlasting ruins, with those who go down to the pit, so that you may never return to take your place in the land of the 21 living. I will make you a devastation, and you shall be no more; you shall be sought, but never again found, says the Lord God.

27

1 The Ship Tyre Thus the word of the Lord came to me:
2-3 As for you, son of man, utter a lament over Tyre, and say to Tyre that is situated at the approaches of the sea, that brought the trade of the peoples to many a coastland: Thus says the Lord God:
4 Tyre, you said, "I am a ship, perfect in beauty." | In the midst of the sea your builders placed you, perfected your beauty.
5 | With cypress from Sanir they built for you all of your decks;
6 cedar from Lebanon they took to make you a mast; | from the highest oaks of Basan they made your oars; your bridge they 7 made of cypress wood from the isles of Chetthim. | Fine embroidered linen from Egypt became your sail [to serve you as a banner]. Purple and scarlet from the isles of Elisa covered 8 your cabin. | Citizens of Sidon and Arad served as your oarsmen; skilled men of Samar were in you to be your mariners; | 9 the elders and experts of Gebal were in you to caulk your seams.
Every ship and sailor on the sea came to you to carry trade. | 10 Persia and Lud and Phut were in your army as warriors; shield and helmet they hung upon you, increasing your splendor.
11 The men of Arad were all about your walls, and the Gammadites were in your towers; they hung their bucklers all around 12 on your walls, and made perfect your beauty. Tharsis traded with you, so great was your wealth, exchanging silver, iron, 13 tin, and lead for your wares. Javan, Thubal, and Mosoch were also traders with you, exchanging slaves and articles of bronze 14 for your goods. From Beth-Thogorma horses, steeds, and mules 15 were exchanged for your wares. The Rodanites trafficked with you; many coastlands traded with you; ivory tusks and ebony 16 wood they gave you for payment. Edom traded with you, so many were your products, exchanging garnets, purple, em-17 broidered cloth, fine linen, coral, and rubies for your wares. Juda and the land of Israel trafficked with you, exchanging Mennith 18 wheat, figs, honey, oil, and balm for your goods. Damascus traded with you, so great was your wealth, exchanging Helbon 19 wine and Sahar wool. Javan exchanged wrought iron, cassia, 20 and aromatic cane from Uzal for your wares. Dedan traded 21 with you for riding gear. The trade of Arabia and of all the sheikhs of Cedar belonged to you; they dealt in lambs, rams, 22 and goats. The merchants of Saba and Regma also traded with you, exchanging for your wares the very choicest spices, all 23 kinds of precious stones, and gold. Haran, Chene, and Eden, the 24 merchants of Saba, Assur, and Chelmad | traded with you, marketing with you rich garments, violet mantles, embroidered 25 cloth, varicolored carpets, and firmly woven cords. Ships of Tharsis journeyed for you in your merchandising.

You were full and heavily laden in the heart of the sea. | 26 Through the deep waters your oarsmen brought you home, but 27 the east wind smashed you in the heart of the sea. | Your wealth, your goods, your wares, your sailors, and your crew, [the caulkers of your seams, those who traded for your goods, all your warriors who were in you, and all the great crowd within you] sank into the heart of the sea on the day of your shipwreck.

28 Hearing the shouts of your mariners, the shores begin to 29 quake. | Down from their ships come all who ply the oar; the 30 sailors, all the mariners of the sea, stand on the shore, | making their voice heard on your behalf, shouting bitter cries, strewing 31 dust on their heads, rolling in the ashes. | For you they shave their heads and put on sackcloth, for you they weep in anguish, 32 with bitter lament. | In their mourning they utter a lament over you; thus they wail over you: Who was ever destroyed like Tyre in the midst of the sea?

33 With your goods which you drew from the seas you filled many peoples; with your great wealth and merchandise you 34 enriched the kings of the earth. | Now you are wrecked in the sea, in the watery depths; your wares and all your crew have 35 gone down with you. | All who dwell on the coastlands are aghast over you, their kings are terrified, their faces convulsed.
36 | The traders among the peoples now hiss at you; you have become a horror, and you shall be no more.

1 The Prince of Tyre Thus the word of the Lord came to 2 me: | Son of man, say to the prince of Tyre: Thus says the Lord God:

Because you are haughty of heart, and say, "A god am I! I occupy a godly throne in the heart of the sea!"—And yet you are a man, and not a god, however you may think yourself like 3 a god. | Oh yes, you are wiser than Daniel, there is no secret
4 that is beyond you. | By your wisdom and your intelligence you have made riches for yourself; you have put gold and silver 5 into your treasuries. | By your great wisdom applied to your trading you have heaped up your riches; your heart has grown 6 haughty from your riches— | therefore thus says the Lord God:

Because you have thought yourself to have the mind of a god, 7 | therefore I will bring against you foreigners, the most barbarous of nations. They shall draw their swords against your beauteous wisdom, they shall run them through your splendid 8 apparel. | They shall thrust you down to the pit, there to die a 9 bloodied corpse, in the heart of the sea. | Will you then say,
"I am a god!" when you face your murderers? No, you are a 10 man, not a god, handed over to those who will slay you. | You shall die the death of the uncircumcised at the hands of foreigners, for I have spoken, says the Lord God.

11.12 Thus the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, utter 28, 2-10: A dirge on Tyre personified as a king, resembling the dirge on Babylon in Is 14, 4-23. Many brilliant Old Testament poems state the theme at the beginning; here the theme is: "you are a man and not a god" (v. 2). The theme is then repeated in the subsequent verses.

28, 12-19: Scholars commonly conjecture that just as the author of Genesis (see Gn 3, 2-6 n) did not know the precise historical sin of primitive man, but took a prevalent contemporary sin (what it was is disputed), so does Ezechiel here take another story of how man fell (a being in Eden, "of perfection . . . wisdom and perfect beauty" v. 2ff) and attached to it the prevalent sin of trafficking in the prophet's day (vv. 16 and 18).

a lament over the king of Tyre, saying to him: Thus says the Lord God:

You were stamped with the seal of perfection, of complete 13 wisdom and perfect beauty. | In Eden, the garden of God, you were, and every precious stone was your covering [carnelian, topaz, and beryl, chrysolite, onyx, and jasper, sapphire, garnet, and emerald]; of gold your pendants and jewels were made, on the day you were created.
14 With the Cherub I placed you; you were on the holy moun-
15 tain of God, walking among the fiery stones. | Blameless you were in your conduct from the day you were created, until evil
16 was found in you, | the result of your far-flung trade; violence was your business, and you sinned. Then I banned you from the mountain of God; the Cherub drove you from among the 17 fiery stones. | You became haughty of heart because of your beauty; for the sake of splendor you debased your wisdom. I cast you to the earth, so great was your guilt; I made you a spectacle in the sight of kings.
18 Because of your great guilt, your sinful trade, I have profaned your sanctuaries, and I have brought out fire from your midst which will devour you. I have reduced you to dust on 19 the earth in the sight of all who should see you. | Among the peoples, all who knew you stand aghast at you; you have become a horror, you shall be no more.

20 Against Sidon Thus the word of the Lord came to me:
21.22 Son of man, look toward Sidon, and prophesy against it: Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Sidon; I will be glorified in your midst. Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I inflict punishments upon it and use it to manifest my holiness.
23 Into it I will send pestilence, and blood shall flow in its streets. Within it shall fall those slain by the sword that comes against it from every side.
24 Thus they shall know that I am the Lord. | Sidon shall no longer be a tearing thorn for the house of Israel, a brier that scratches them more than all the others about them who despise them; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.
25 Thus says the Lord God: When I gather the house of Israel from the peoples among whom they are scattered, then I will manifest my holiness through them in the sight of the nations.

28, 14: Holy mountain of God: the abode of God. Fiery stones: in the Bible, fire frequently accompanies God's presence.
28, 24: Sidon's sin is vague.

Then they shall live on their land which I gave to my servant 26 Jacob; they shall live on it in security, building houses and planting vineyards. They shall dwell secure while I inflict punishments on all their neighbors who despised them; thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God.

1 Egypt the Crocodile On the twelfth day of the tenth 2 month in the tenth year, the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, set your face against Pharao, king of Egypt, and proph-3 esy against him and against all Egypt. Say this to him: Thus says the Lord God:

See! I am coming at you, Pharao, king of Egypt, great crouching monster amidst your Niles: who say, "The Niles are mine; it is I who made them!"

4 I will put hooks in your jaws and make the fish of your Niles stick to your scales, then draw you up from the midst of your Niles along with all the fish of your Niles sticking to your scales.
5 I will cast you into the desert, you and all the fish of your Niles; you shall fall upon the open field, you shall not be taken up or buried; to the beasts of the earth and the birds of the air 6 I give you as food, | that all who dwell in Egypt may know that I am the Lord. Because you have been a reed staff for the
7 house of Israel: | when they held you in hand, you splintered, throwing every shoulder out of joint; when they leaned on you,
8 you broke, bringing each one of them down headlong; | therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I will bring the sword against 9 you, and cut off from you both man and beast. The land of Egypt shall become a desolate waste; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

Because you said, "The Niles are mine; it is I who made 10 them," | therefore see! I am coming at you and against your Niles; I will make the land of Egypt a waste and a desolation 11 from Magdol to Syene, and even to the frontier of Ethiopia. No foot of man or beast shall pass through it; they shall not pass 12 through it, and it will be uninhabited for forty years. I will make the land of Egypt the most desolate of lands, and its cities shall be the most deserted of cities for forty years; and I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and strew them over foreign 13 lands. Yet thus says the Lord God. At the end of forty years I will gather the Egyptians from the peoples among whom they 14 are scattered, | and I will restore Egypt's fortune, bringing them back to the land of Phathures, the land of their origin, where it 15 will be the lowliest | of kingdoms, never more to set itself above the nations. I will make them few, that they may not dominate 16 the nations. No longer shall they be for the house of Israel to trust in, but the living reminder of its guilt for having turned to follow after them. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

17 The Wages of Nabuchodonosor On the first day of the first month in the twenty-seventh year, the word of the Lord 18 came to me: Son of man, Nabuchodonosor, the king of Babylon, has led his army in an exhausting campaign against Tyre. Their heads became bald and their shoulders were galled; but neither he nor his army received any wages from Tyre for the campaign 19 he led against it. Therefore thus says the Lord God: I am now giving the land of Egypt to Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon.
He shall carry off its riches, plundering and pillaging it for the 20 wages of his soldiers, who did it for me; as payment for his toil
I have given him the land of Egypt, says the Lord God.
21 On that day I will make a horn sprout for the house of Israel, and I will cause you to speak out in their midst; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

30 1 The Day of the Lord against Egypt Thus the word of 2 the Lord came to me: | Son of man, speak this prophecy: Thus 3 says the Lord God: Cry, Oh, the day! | for near is the day, near is the day of the Lord; a day of clouds, doomsday for the 4 nations shall it be. Then a sword shall come upon Egypt, and anguish shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain fall in Egypt, when 5 her riches are seized and her foundations are overthrown. Ethiopia, Phut, Lud, all Arabia, Libya, and people of the allied terri-6 tory shall fall by the sword with them. Those who support Egypt shall fall, and down shall come her proud strength; from 29, 14: The Egyptians were imagined to originate from southern Egypt ("Phathures").

29, 18: See 26, 14 n.

29, 19-21: The inspired prophet describes God giving His instrument, Nabuchodonosor, the conquest of Egypt (which took place 568) after the Babylonian failure to capture Tyre. "On that day" the Egyptian defeat will be a sign of new strength ("horn") "for the house of Israel" (v. 21). Scholars generally interpret this text as referring to the nation rather than to a Messianic figure.

Magdal to Syene they shall fall there by the sword, says the 7 Lord God. She shall be the most devastated of lands, and her 8 cities shall be the most desolate of all. Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I set fire to Egypt and when all who help 9 her are broken. On that day messengers shall hasten forth at my command to terrify unsuspecting Ethiopia; they shall be in anguish on the day of Egypt, which is surely coming.
10 Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to the throngs 11 of Egypt by the hand of Nabuchodonosor, king of Babylon. He and his people with him, the most ruthless of nations, shall be brought in to devastate the land. They shall draw their swords 12 against Egypt, and fill the land with the slain. I will turn the Niles into dry land and sell the land over to the power of the wicked. The land and everything in it I will hand over to foreigners to devastate. I, the Lord, have spoken.
13 Thus says the Lord God: I will put an end to the great ones of Memphis and the princes of the land of Egypt, that they may be no more. I will cast fear into the land of Egypt, and dev-14 astate Phathures. I will set fire to Tanis, and inflict punish-15 ments on Thebes. I will pour out my wrath on Pelusium, Egypt's 16 stronghold, and cut down the crowds in Memphis. I will set fire to Egypt; Syene shall writhe in anguish; Thebes shall be 17 breached and its walls shall be demolished. The young men of On and of Bubastis shall fall by the sword, and the cities them-18 selves shall go into captivity. In Tahpanhes the day shall be darkened when I break the scepter of Egypt. Her haughty pride shall cease from her, clouds shall cover her, and her daughters 19 shall go into captivity. Thus will I inflict punishments on Egypt, that they may know that I am the Lord.

20 Pharao's Broken Arm On the seventh day of the first month in the eleventh year, the word of the Lord came to me: 21 Son of man, I have broken the arm of Pharao, the king of Egypt, and see, it has not been bound up with bandages and healing remedies that it may be strong enough to hold the sword. | 22 Therefore thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at Pharao, the king of Egypt. I will break his strong arm, so that the sword 23 drops from his hand. I will scatter the Egyptians among the 24 nations and strew them over foreign lands. But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and put my sword in his hand, which he will bring against Egypt so as to plunder and pillage 25 it. [I will make the arms of the king of Babylon strong, but the arms of Pharao shall drop.] Then they shall know that I am the Lord, when I put my sword in the hand of the king of Babylon 26 for him to wield against the land of Egypt. [I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations and strew them over foreign lands.] Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Allegory of the Cypress On the first day of the third month in the eleventh year, the word of the Lord came to me:
2 Son of man, say to Pharao, the king of Egypt, and to his hordes:
What are you like in your greatness?
3 Behold, a cypress [cedar] in Lebanon, beautiful of branch, 4 lofty of stature, amid the very clouds lifted its crest. | Waters made it grow, the abyss made it flourish, sending its rivers round where it was planted, turning its streams to all the trees of the 5 field. | Thus it grew taller than every other tree of the field, 6 and longer of branch because of the abundant water. | In its boughs nested all the birds of the air, under its branches all beasts of the field gave birth, in its shade dwelt numerous peo-7 ples of every race. | It became beautiful and stately in its spread of foliage, for its roots were turned toward abundant water. | 8 The cedars in the garden of God were not its equal, nor could the fir trees match its boughs, neither were the plane trees like its branches; no tree in the garden of God matched its beauty. | 9 I made it beautiful, with much foliage, the envy of all Eden's trees in the garden of God.
10 Therefore thus says the Lord God: Because it became lofty in stature, raising its crest among the clouds, and because it be-11 came proud in heart at its height, I have handed it over to the mightiest of the nations, which has dealt with it in keeping with

---

31, 1-18: By reverting to many Old Testament images, Ezechiel hyperbolically compares the splendor of Egypt to a world-wide cypress tree so splendid as to make it "the envy of all Eden's trees" (v. 9), its crest lifted up amid the very clouds and its roots made to flourish by the abundant waters of the "abyss" (vv. 3-5).

31, 1: June 21, 587 B.C.

31, 10-12: From the sacred writer's theological point of view, it is because Egypt's achievements were not attributed to Yahweh, that God punished Egypt through His instrument, the Babylonians. This section continues the theme explained in 29, 19-21 n.

31, 10: Heart: the allegory suffers literarily at times, e.g., when the cypress is given a "heart," but the sense is clear.

12 its wickedness. I humiliated it. Foreigners, the most ruthless o the nations, cut it down and left it on the mountains. Its foliag was brought low in all the valleys, its branches lay broken i all the ravines of the land, and all the peoples of the land with drew from its shade, abandoning it.
13 On its fallen trunk rested all the birds of the air, and by it branches were all the beasts of the field.
14 Thus no tree may grow lofty in stature or raise its cres among the clouds; no tree fed by water may stand by itsel in its loftiness.
For all of them are destined for death, for the land below for the company of mortals, those who go down into the pit 15 Thus says the Lord God: On the day he went down to th nether world I made the abyss close up over him; I stopped it streams so that the deep waters were held back. I cast gloon over Lebanon because of him, so that all the trees in the lan 16 drooped on his account. At the crash of his fall I made the na tions rock, when I cast him down to the nether world with thos who go down into the pit. In the land below, all Eden's trees wer consoled, Lebanon's choice and best, all that were fed by water 17 They too have come down with him to the nether world, to thos slain by the sword; those who dwelt in his shade are dispersed 18 among the nations. Which was your equal in glory or siz among the trees of Eden? Yet you have been brought dow with the trees of Eden to the land below. You shall lie with th uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword. Such are Phara and all his hordes, says the Lord God.

1 Dirge over Pharao On the first day of the twelfth month 2 in the twelfth year, the word of the Lord came to me: Son o man, utter a lament over Pharao, the king of Egypt, saying t him: Lion of the nations, you are destroyed.
You were like a monster in the sea, spouting in your streams stirring the water with your feet and churning its streams.
3 Thus says the Lord God: I will spread my net over you [with 4 a host of many nations], and draw you up in my seine. | I wil

31, 15-16: Lamenting nature here poetically shares in the fall of the cypress, Egypt.

31, 17-18: There seems to be an allusion to a myth of all Eden's trees (v. 16) descending into the nether world after the sin of man.

32, 1: March 3, 585 B.C.

32, 1-8: This dirge is a literary companion piece to 29, 1-7. The allusion is again to the primeval dragon myth; the dragon was slain by the Babylonian god, Marduk.

leave you on the land; on the open field I will cast you. I will have all the birds of the air alight on you, and all the beasts of 5 the earth eat their fill of you. | I will leave your flesh on the 6 mountains, and fill the valleys with your carcass. | I will water the land with what flows from you, and the river beds shall be 7 filled with your blood. | When I snuff you out I will cover the heavens, and all their stars I will darken; the sun I will cover 8 with clouds, and the moon shall not give its light. | All the shining lights in the heavens I will darken on your account, and I will spread darkness over your land, says the Lord God.
9 I will grieve the hearts of many peoples when I lead you cap-10 tive among the nations, to lands which you do not know. Many peoples shall be appalled at you, and their kings shall shudder over you in horror when they see me brandish my sword, and on the day of your downfall every one of them shall con-11 tinuously tremble for his own life. | For thus says the Lord God: The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon you.
12 I will cut down your horde with the blades of warriors, all of them the most ruthless of the nations; they shall lay waste 13 the glory of Egypt, and all her hordes shall be destroyed. | I will have all of her animals perish beside her abundant waters;
the foot of man shall stir them no longer, nor shall the hoof of 14 beast disturb them. | Then will I make their waters clear, and their streams flow like oil, says the Lord God.
15 When I turn Egypt into a waste, the land shall be devastated of all that is in it; when I strike all who live there, they shall 16 know that I am the Lord. This is a dirge, and it shall be sung: the daughters of the nations shall chant it; over Egypt and all its hordes shall they chant it, says the Lord God.

17 Dirge over Egypt On the fifteenth day of the first month 18 in the twelfth year, the word of the Lord came to me: Son of man, lament over the throngs of Egypt, for the mighty nations have thrust them down to the bottom of the earth, with those 20 who go down into the pit. In the midst of those slain by the sword shall they fall, and place shall be made with them for all their hordes. Then from the midst of the nether world, the mighty 19 warriors shall speak to Egypt: "Whom do you excel in beauty?

32, 7-8: These cosmic disturbances are literary filigree, commonly used when God's intervention is described, as here in the downfall of Egypt.

32, 17: April 27, 585.

32, 20-30: The "mighty warriors" of history scornfully greet the newcomer, Egypt, and they themselves pass in review.

21 Come down, you and your allies, lie with the uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword." 22 There is Assyria with all her company, all of them slain, 23 whose graves have been made in the recesses of the pit; her company is around Egypt's grave, all of them slain, fallen by 24 the sword, who spread terror in the land of the living. There is Elam with all her throng about Egypt's grave, all of them slain, fallen by the sword: they have gone down uncircumcised to the bottom of the earth, who spread their terror in the land of the living, and they bear their disgrace with those who go down 25.26 into the pit; in the midst of the slain they are placed. There are Mosoch and Thubal and all their throng about her grave, all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword, for they spread their terror in the land of the living.
27 They do not lie with the mighty men fallen of old, who went down to the nether world with their weapons of war, whose swords were placed under their heads and whose shields were laid over their bones, though the mighty men caused terror in 28 the land of the living. But in the midst of the uncircumcised shall you lie, with those slain by the sword.
29 There are Edom, her kings, and all her princes, who despite their might have been placed with those slain by the sword; with the uncircumcised they lie, and with those who go down into the 30 pit. There are all the princes of the north and all the Sidonians, who have gone down with the slain, because of the terror their might inspired; they lie uncircumcised with those slain by the sword and bear their disgrace with those who go down to the 31 pit. When Pharao sees these, he shall be comforted for all his hordes slain by the sword—Pharao and all his army, says the 32 Lord God. Since he spread his terror in the land of the living, therefore is he laid to rest among the uncircumcised, with those slain by the sword—Pharao and all his hordes, says the Lord God.

IV. SALVATION FOR ISRAEL

1 The Prophet a Watchman Thus the word of the Lord 2 came to me: Son of man, speak thus to your countrymen: When I bring the sword against a country, and the people of this coun-

3 try select one of their number to be their watchman, | and the watchman, seeing the sword coming against the country, blows 4 the trumpet to warn the people, | anyone hearing but not heeding the warning of the trumpet and therefore slain by the sword that comes against him, shall be responsible for his own death.
5 He heard the trumpet blast yet refused to take warning; he is responsible for his own death, for had he taken warning he 6 would have escaped with his life. But if the watchman sees the sword coming and fails to blow the warning trumpet, so that the sword comes and takes anyone, I will hold the watchman responsible for that person's death, even though that person is taken because of his own sin.
7 You, son of man, I have appointed watchman for the house of Israel; when you hear me say anything, you shall warn them for 8 me. If I tell the wicked man that he shall surely die, and you do not speak out to dissuade the wicked man from his way, he [the wicked man] shall die for his guilt, but I will hold you 9 responsible for his death. But if you warn the wicked man, trying to turn him from his way, and he refuses to turn from his way, he shall die for his guilt, but you shall save yourself.

10 Individual Retribution As for you, son of man, speak to the house of Israel: You people say, "Our crimes and our sins weigh us down; we are rotting away because of them. How can 11 we survive?" | Answer them: As I live, says the Lord God, I swear I take no pleasure in the death of the wicked man, but rather in the wicked man's conversion, that he may live. Turn, turn from your evil ways! Why should you die, O house of Israel?
12 As for you, son of man, tell your countrymen: The virtue which a man has practiced will not save him on the day that he sins; neither will the wickedness that a man has done bring about his downfall on the day that he turns from his wickedness 13 [nor can the virtuous man, when he sins, remain alive]. Though I say to the virtuous man that he shall surely live, if he then presumes on his virtue and does wrong, none of his virtuous deeds shall be remembered; because of the wrong he has done, he shall 14 die. And though I say to the wicked man that he shall surely die, if he turns away from his sin and does what is right and just, | 15 giving back pledges, restoring stolen goods, living by the statutes that bring life, and doing no wrong, he shall surely live, he shall 16 not die. None of the sins he committed shall be held against him; he has done what is right and just, he shall surely live.
17 Yet your countrymen say, "The way of the Lord is not fair!"; 18 but it is their way that is not fair. When a virtuous man turns 19 away from what is right and does wrong, he shall die for it. But when a wicked man turns away from wickedness and does what 20 is right and just, because of this he shall live. | And still you say, "The way of the Lord is not fair!"? I will judge every one of you according to his ways, O house of Israel.

21 The Fugitive from Jerusalem On the fifth day of the tenth month, in the twelfth year of our exile, the fugitive came 22 to me from Jerusalem and said, "The city is taken!" The hand of the Lord had come upon me the evening before the fugitive arrived, and he opened my mouth when the fugitive reached me in the morning. My mouth was opened, and I was dumb no longer.

23 The Survivors in Juda Thus the word of the Lord came 24 to me: Son of man, they who live in the ruins on the land of Israel reason thus: "Abraham, though but a single individual, received possession of the land; we, therefore, being many, have as permanent possession the land that has been given to us." | 25 Give them this answer: Thus says the Lord God: You eat on the mountains, you raise your eyes to your idols, you shed blood—26 yet you would keep possession of the land? You rely on your sword, you do abominable things, each one of you defiles his neighbor's wife—yet you would keep possession of the land?
27 Tell them this: Thus says the Lord God: As I live, those who are in the ruins I swear shall fall by the sword; those who are in the open field I have given to the wild beasts for food; and those who are in fastnesses and in caves shall die by the 28 plague. I will make the land a desolate waste, so that its proud strength will come to an end, and the mountains of Israel shall 29 be so desolate that no one will cross them. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord, when I make the land a desolate waste because of all the abominable things they have done.

30 The Prophet's False Popularity As for you, son of man, your countrymen are talking about you along the walls and in 33, 21: January 585 B.C. (In Jer 39, 2 the date of Jerusalem's fall is July 587.) Twelfth year: some manuscripts read "eleventh" year (January 586). It ordinarily took four months to travel the five hundred fifty miles from Babylon to Jerusalem.

33, 22: The fugitive: this is the fugitive spoken of in 24, 26.

33, 23-29: On the occasion of the fugitive's arrival (v. 21), Ezechiel prophesies that the new Israel will belong to the exiles, not to those remaining in Juda. See 11, 14-21 for the same notion.

33, 30-33: The exiles believed Ezechiel more now that his prophecies the doorways of houses. They say to one another, "Come and 31 hear the latest word that comes from the Lord." My people come to you as people always do; they sit down before you and hear your words, but they will not obey them, for lies are 32 on their lips and their desires are fixed on dishonest gain. For them you are only a ballad singer, with a pleasant voice and a clever touch. They listen to your words, but they will not obey 33 them. But when it comes—and it is surely coming!—they shall know that there was a prophet among them.

1 Parable of the Shepherds Thus the word of the Lord 2 came to me: Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, in these words prophesy to them [to the shepherds]: Thus says the Lord God: Woe to the shepherds of Israel who have been pasturing themselves! Should not shepherds, rather, 3 pasture sheep? You have fed off their milk, worn their wool, and slaughtered the fatlings, but the sheep you have not pas-4 tured. You did not strengthen the weak nor heal the sick nor bind up the injured. You did not bring back the strayed nor seek the lost, but you lorded it over them harshly and brutally.
5 So they were scattered for lack of a shepherd, and became food 6 for all the wild beasts. My sheep were scattered | and wandered over all the mountains and high hills; my sheep were scattered over the whole earth, with no one to look after them or to search for them.
7.8 Therefore, shepherds, hear the word of the Lord: As I live, says the Lord God, because my sheep have been given over to pillage, and because my sheep have become food for every wild beast, for lack of a shepherd; because my shepherds did not look after my sheep, but pastured themselves and did not pasture my 9 sheep; because of this, shepherds, hear the word of the Lord: 10 Thus says the Lord God: I swear I am coming against these shepherds. I will claim my sheep from them and put a stop to their shepherding my sheep so that they may no longer pasture themselves. I will save my sheep, that they may no longer be food for their mouths.
11 For thus says the Lord God: I myself will look after and tend 12 my sheep. As a shepherd tends his flock when he finds himself of Jerusalem's fall had come true, but they still did not put into practice what he preached. They will learn only after the impenitent people will be punished.

34, 1-16: This passage is similar to Jer 23, 1ff.

34, 2: Shepherds: a common biblical and ancient Near Eastern term for leaders and kings of the people.

among his scattered sheep, so will I tend my sheep. I will rescue them from every place where they were scattered when it was 13 cloudy and dark. I will lead them out from among the peoples and gather them from the foreign lands; I will bring them back to their own country and pasture them upon the mountains of 14 Israel [in the land's ravines and all its inhabited places]. In good pastures will I pasture them, and on the mountain heights of Israel shall be their grazing ground. There they shall lie down on good grazing ground, and in rich pastures shall they be pas-15 tured on the mountains of Israel. I myself will pasture my sheep; 16 I myself will give them rest, says the Lord God. The lost I will seek out, the strayed I will bring back, the injured I will bind up, the sick I will heal [but the sleek and the strong I will destroy], shepherding them rightly.

17 Separation of the Sheep As for you, my sheep, says the Lord God, I will judge between one sheep and another, between 18 rams and goats. Was it not enough for you to graze on the best pasture, that you had to trample the rest of your pastures with your feet? Was is not enough for you to drink the clearest water, 19 that you had to foul the remainder with your feet? Thus my sheep had to graze on what your feet had trampled and drink 20 what your feet had fouled. | Therefore thus says the Lord 21 God: Now will I judge between the fat and the lean sheep. Because you push with side and shoulder, and butt all the weak 22 sheep with your horns until you have driven them out, I will save my sheep so that they may no longer be despoiled, and I 23 will judge between one sheep and another. I will appoint one shepherd over them to pasture them, my servant David; he 24 shall pasture them and be their shepherd. I, the Lord, will be their God, and my servant David shall be prince among them.
I, the Lord, have spoken.
25 I will make a covenant of peace with them, and rid the country of ravenous beasts, that they may dwell securely in the desert 26 and sleep in the forests. I will place them about my hill, sending 27 rain in due season, rains that shall be a blessing to them. The 34, 23-24: Ezechiel foretells a postexilic ruler in Israel's national restoration who will be a good shepherd and not like the kings of the past (34, 1ff). The new David will rule under God (see vv. 10ff) as in the days of the historical David. The actual fulfillment of this prophecy in Jesus, who was also God Himself, went beyond Ezechiel's thought.

34, 25-31: An ideal description of the new era of peace and prosperity. The peace is described as that existing in paradise before the fall, where animals and men lived in harmony as in Is 11, 6-9. All these were stylized descriptions of the Messianic era.

trees of the field shall bear their fruits, and the land its crops, and they shall dwell securely on their own soil. Thus they shall know that I am the Lord when I break the bonds of their yoke and free them from the power of those who en-28 slaved them. They shall no longer be despoiled by the nations or devoured by beasts of the earth, but shall dwell secure, with no 29 one to frighten them. I will prepare for them peaceful fields for planting; they shall no longer be carried off by famine in the 30 land, or bear the reproaches of the nations. Thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God, and they are my people, 31 the house of Israel, says the Lord God. [You, my sheep, you are the sheep of my pasture, and I am your God, says the Lord God.]

35

1 Against Edom Thus the word of the Lord came to me:
2 Son of man, set your face against Mount Seir, and prophesy 3 against it. Say to it: Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Mount Seir. I will stretch out my hand against you and 4 make you a desolate waste. Your cities I will turn into ruins, and you shall be a waste; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
5 Because you never let die your hatred for the Israelites, whom you delivered over to the power of the sword at the time of 6 their trouble, when their crimes came to an end, | therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, you have been guilty of blood, and 7 blood, I swear, shall pursue you. I will make Mount Seir a 8 desolate waste, and cut off from it any traveler. With the slain
I will fill your hills, your valleys, and all your ravines [in them 9 the slain shall fall by the sword]: desolate will I make you forever, and leave your cities without inhabitants; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
10 Because you said: The two nations and the two lands have become mine; we shall possess them—although the Lord was 11 there— | therefore, as I live, says the Lord God, I will deal with you according to your anger and your envy which you have exercised [in your hatred] against them. I will make myself 12 known among you when I judge you, and you shall know that I am the Lord.
I have heard all the contemptuous things you have uttered

35, 1-15: The Edomites, the age-old enemy of the Israelites, helped the Babylonians at the fall of Jerusalem and, after it, they encroached on Juda's southern territory. It is because of this context that the oracle against Edom is placed here.

35, 10: This may reflect Edom's unfulfilled desire of conquering the northern and southern kingdoms of Palestine.

against the mountains of Israel: "They are desolate, they have 13 been given us to devour." I have heard the insolent and wild 14 words you have spoken against me. Thus says the Lord God:
Just as you rejoiced over my land because it was desolate, so will 15 I do to you. In keeping with your glee over the devastation of the inheritance of the house of Israel, so will I treat you. A waste shall you be, Mount Seir, you and the whole of Edom.
Thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Regeneration of the Land As for you, son of man, prophesy to the mountains of Israel: Mountains of Israel, hear 2 the word of the Lord! Thus says the Lord God: Because the enemy has said of you, "Ha! the everlasting heights have be-3 come our possession" [therefore prophesy in these words: Thus says the Lord God:]; because you have been ridiculed and despised on all sides for having become a possession for the rest of the nations, and have become a byword and a popular jeer; 4 therefore, mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord: [Thus says the Lord God to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys, the desolate ruins and abandoned cities, which have been given over to the pillage and mockery of the remaining 5 nations round about; | therefore thus says the Lord God:] Truly, with burning jealousy I speak against the rest of the nations [and against all of Edom] who with wholehearted joy and utter contempt have considered my land their possession to 6 be delivered over to plunder. [Therefore, prophesy concerning the land of Israel, and say to the mountains and hills, the ravines and valleys: Thus says the Lord God:] With jealous fury I speak, because you have borne the reproach of the nations.
7 Therefore do I solemnly swear that your neighboring nations should bear their own reproach.
8 As for you, mountains of Israel, you shall grow branches and bear fruit for my people Israel, for they shall soon return.
9 See, I come to you, it is to you that I turn; you will be tilled 10 and sown, | and I will settle crowds of men upon you, the whole 11 house of Israel; cities shall be repeopled, and ruins rebuilt. I will settle crowds of men and beasts upon you, to multiply and be fruitful. I will repeople you as in the past, and be more generous to you than in the beginning; thus you shall know that I am the Lord.
12 [My people Israel are the ones whom I will have walk upon you; they shall take possession of you, and you shall be their heritage. Never again shall you rob them of their children.]

13 Thus says the Lord God: Because they have said of you, "You are a land that devours men, and you rob your people of their 14 children"; therefore, never again shall you devour men or rob 15 your people of their children, says the Lord God. No more will I permit you to hear the reproach of nations, or bear insults from peoples, or rob your people of their children, says the Lord God.

16 Regeneration of the People Thus the word of the Lord 17 came to me: Son of man, when the house of Israel lived in their land, they defiled it by their conduct and deeds. In my sight their conduct was like the defilement of a menstruous woman.
18 Therefore I poured out my fury upon them [because of the blood which they poured out on the ground, and because they 19 defiled it with idols]. I scattered them among the nations, dispersing them over foreign lands; according to their conduct and 20 deeds I judged them. But when they came among the nations [wherever they came], they served to profane my holy name, because it was said of them: "These are the people of the Lord, 21 yet they had to leave their land." So I have relented because of my holy name which the house of Israel profaned among the 22 nations where they came. Therefore say to the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord God: Not for your sakes do I act, house of Israel, but for the sake of my holy name, which you profaned 23 among the nations to which you came. I will prove the holiness of my great name, profaned among the nations, in whose midst you have profaned it. Thus the nations shall know that I am the Lord, says the Lord God, when in their sight I prove my holiness 24 through you. For I will take you away from among the nations, gather you from all the foreign lands, and bring you back to 25 your own land. I will sprinkle clean water upon you to cleanse you from all your impurities, and from all your idols I will 26 cleanse you. I will give you a new heart and place a new spirit within you, taking from your bodies your stony hearts and 27 giving you natural hearts. I will put my spirit within you and make you live by my statutes, careful to observe my decrees.
28 You shall live in the land I gave your fathers; you shall be my 29 people, and I will be your God. I will save you from all your impurities; I will order the grain to be abundant, and I will not 30 send famine against you. I will increase the fruit on your trees and the crops in your fields; thus you shall no longer bear 36, 13: A land that devours men: through internecine wars.

36, 23-26: Parts of this section on the rebirth of the nation are used in the Introit of the Vigil of Pentecost, and applied to the baptismal rebirth through water.

36, 26: A new heart: as in Jer 31, 33.

31 among the nations the reproach of famine. Then you shall remember your evil conduct, and that your deeds were not good;
you shall loathe yourselves for your sins and your abominations 32 Not for your sakes do I act, says the Lord God—let this be known to you! Be ashamed and abashed because of your conduct, O house of Israel.
33 Thus says the Lord God: When I purify you from all your crimes, I will repeople the cities, and the ruins shall be rebuilt; 34 the desolate land shall be tilled, which was formerly a waste-35 land exposed to the gaze of every passer-by. "This desolate land has been made into a garden of Eden," they shall say. "The cities that were in ruins, laid waste, and destroyed are now repeopled 36 and fortified." Thus the neighboring nations that remain shall know that I, the Lord, have rebuilt what was destroyed and replanted what was desolate. I, the Lord, have promised, and I will do it.
37 Thus says the Lord God: This also I will be persuaded to do 38 for the house of Israel: to multiply them like sheep. As with sacrificial sheep, the sheep of Jerusalem on its feast days, the cities which were in ruins shall be filled with flocks of men; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

1 Vision of the Dry Bones The hand of the Lord came upon me, and he led me out in the spirit of the Lord and set me 2 in the center of the plain, which was now filled with bones. He made me walk among them in every direction so that I saw how many they were on the surface of the plain. How dry they were!
3 | He asked me: Son of man, can these bones come to life? "Lord
4 God," I answered, "you alone know that." | Then he said to me: Prophesy over these bones, and say to them: Dry bones,
5 hear the word of the Lord! | Thus says the Lord God to these bones: See! I will bring spirit into you, that you may come to 6 life. I will put sinews upon you, make flesh grow over you, cover you with skin, and put spirit in you so that you may come to life

37, 1-14: Since the exiles were losing hope of returning to the fatherland, Ezechiel describes, in perhaps an imaginary vision, the graveyard of dead bones as symbolic of the national and political dead bones of Israel in exile. This hopeless task throws into relief the fact that nothing is impossible with God who will resurrect Israel to a new national life. Therefore this has nothing to do with a bodily resurrection at the end of the world.

Ezechiel's most impressive scene is found in the frescoes of a third century A.D. synagogue at Dura-Europos on the Euphrates River. The scene also influenced a famous Negro spiritual. Compare T. S. Eliot's "The Waste Land," which alludes to the scattered bones of the Ego.

7 and know that I am the Lord. I prophesied as I had been told, and even as I was prophesying I heard a noise; it was a rattling 8 as the bones came together, bone joining bone. I saw the sinews and the flesh come upon them, and the skin cover them, but 9 there was no spirit in them. Then he said to me: Prophesy to the spirit, prophesy, son of man, and say to the spirit: Thus says the Lord God: From the four winds come, O spirit, and breathe 10 into these slain that they may come to life. I prophesied as he told me, and the spirit came into them; they came alive and 11 stood upright, a vast army. | Then he said to me: Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. They have been saying, "Our bones are dried up, our hope is lost, and we are cut 12 off." | Therefore, prophesy and say to them: Thus says the Lord God: O my people, I will open your graves and have you 13 rise from them, and bring you back to the land of Israel. Then you shall know that I am the Lord, when I open your graves 14 and have you rise from them, O my people! I will put my spirit in you that you may live, and I will settle you upon your land; thus you shall know that I am the Lord. I have promised, and I will do it, says the Lord.

15 The Two Sticks Thus the word of the Lord came to me: 16 Now, son of man, take a single stick, and write on it: Juda and those Israelites who are associated with him. Then take another stick and write on it: Joseph [the stick of Ephraim] and all the 17 house of Israel associated with him. Then join the two sticks 18 together, so that they form one stick in your hand. | When your countrymen ask you, "Will you not tell us what you mean 19 by all this?", | answer them: Thus says the Lord God: [I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel associated with him, and I will join to it the stick of Juda, making them a single stick; they shall be one 20 in my hand. The sticks on which you write you shall hold up 21 before them to see. | Tell them: Thus speaks the Lord God:]
I will take the Israelites from among the nations to which they have come, and gather them from all sides to bring them back 22 to their land. I will make them one nation upon the land, in the mountains of Israel, and there shall be one prince for them all.

37, 15-28: The prophecy of the political reunion of the northern and southern kingdoms, as in David and Solomon's day, can hardly be said to have ever been fulfilled politically. The reunion may probably be explained as fulfilled in New Testament times in a spiritual reunion made available by the Church to all the Jews and to the rest of the world. This reunion went far beyond the dreams of all the prophets who foretold the reunion of the two kingdoms.

Never again shall they be two nations, and never again shall they be divided into two kingdoms.
23 No longer shall they defile themselves with their idols, their abominations, and all their transgressions. I will deliver them from all their sins of apostasy, and cleanse them so that they 24 may be my people and I may be their God. My servant David shall be prince over them, and there shall be one shepherd for them all; they shall live by my statutes and carefully observe my 25 decrees. They shall live on the land which I gave to my servant Jacob, the land where their fathers lived; they shall live on it forever, they, and their children, and their children's children, 26 with my servant David their prince forever. I will make with them a covenant of peace; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them, and I will multiply them, and put my sanctuary 27 among them forever. My dwelling shall be with them; I will be 28 their God, and they shall be my people. Thus the nations shall know that it is I, the Lord, who makes Israel holy, when my sanctuary shall be set up among them forever.

38

1 First Prophecy against Gog Thus the word of the Lord 2 came to me: Son of man, turn toward Gog [the land of Magog], the chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal, and prophesy against 3 him: Thus says the Lord God: See! I am coming at you, Gog, 37, 24-25: This Messianic text on "my servant David" means the same as the preceding one. See 34, 23-24 n.

37, 26: An everlasting covenant: this refers to the same new alliance as in Jer 31, 31-33.

38—39: Either during or after the Babylonian exile, the Jews were smarting under the loss of Yahweh's reputation ("name"). In the eyes of the neighboring pagan nations, Yahweh was powerless to prevent the exile and the subsequent loss of Jewish political independence. To console the Jews, this prophecy was written by Ezechiel or by another inspired prophet. It is also an incipient apocalypse as Is 24—27. The main question is: when will this consolation take place? Experts agree that chs. 38—39 suppose a peaceful postexilic restoration phase (38, 11f). But is the inspired writer speaking of a second complementary phase when God will make His people triumph over all the nations? If so, the meaning of triumph in this opinion would have strong political overtones. The New Testament times would make it clear that the triumph was a spiritual one. Or, does the second phase refer to the end of the world when the struggle between the forces of evil (Antichrist) will oppose God?

38, 2-6: Gog: scholars tend to think of Gog not as a definite historical person but as a symbolic name for all the forces of evil, a prototype of Antichrist. Mosoch and Thubal: these Black Sea countries, besides Gomer and Beth-Thogorma (v. 6) were known to the Hebrews as existing in the farthest "recesses of the north," the traditional origin of invasions.

4 chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal. I will lead you forth with all your army, horses and riders all handsomely outfitted, a great horde with bucklers and shields, all of them carrying 5 swords: Persia, Ethiopia, and Phut with them [all with shields 6 and helmets], | Gomer with all its troops, Beth-Thogorma from the recesses of the north with all its troops, many peoples with 7 you. Prepare yourself, be ready, you and all your horde assem-8 bled about you, and be at my disposal. After many days you will be mustered [in the last years you will come] against a nation which has survived the sword, which has been assembled from many peoples [on the mountains of Israel which were long a ruin], which has been brought forth from among the peoples 9 and all of whom now dwell in security. You shall come up like a sudden storm, advancing like a cloud to cover the earth, you and all your troops and the many peoples with you.
10 Thus says the Lord God: At that time thoughts shall arise 11 in your mind, and you shall devise an evil scheme: "I will go up against a land of open villages and attack the peaceful people who are living in security, all of them living without walls, 12 having neither bars nor gates, | to plunder and pillage, turning my hand against the ruins that were repeopled and against a people gathered from the nations, a people concerned with cattle 13 and goods, who dwell at the navel of the earth." Saba and Dedan, the merchants of Tharsis and all her young lions shall ask you: "Is it for plunder that you have come? Is it for pillage that you have summoned your horde, to carry off silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to seize much plunder?" 17 Thus says the Lord God: It is of you that I spoke in ancient times through my servants, the prophets of Israel, who proph-18 esied in those days that I would bring you against them. But on that day, the day when Gog invades the land of Israel, says the 19 Lord God, my fury shall be aroused. In my anger | and in my jealousy, in my fiery wrath, I swear: On that day there shall be a 20 great shaking upon the land of Israel. Before me shall tremble the fish of the sea and the birds of the air, the beasts of the field and all the reptiles that crawl upon the ground, and all men who are on the land. Mountains shall be overturned, and cliffs 21 shall tumble, and every wall shall fall to the ground. Against him I will summon every terror, says the Lord God, every man's sword against his brother. I will hold judgment with him in 22 pestilence and bloodshed; flooding rain and hailstones, fire and 38, 12: Many ancient peoples thought that they lived at the earth's center ("navel"). See 5, 5.

38, 13: Saba and Dedan: places in Arabia.

brimstone, I will rain upon him, upon his troops, and upon the 23 many peoples with him. I will prove my greatness and holiness and make myself known in the sight of many nations; thus they shall know that I am the Lord.

14 Second Prophecy against Gog Therefore prophesy, son of man, and say to Gog: Thus says the Lord God: When my people Israel are dwelling in security, will you not bestir your-15 self | and come from your home in the recesses of the north, you and many peoples with you, all mounted on horses, a great horde 16 and a mighty army? You shall come up against my people Israel like a cloud covering the land. In the last days I will bring you against my land, that the nations may know of me, when in their sight I prove my holiness through you, O Gog.

1 Third Prophecy against Gog Now, son of man, prophesy against Gog in these words: Thus says the Lord God: See! I 2 am coming at you, Gog, chief prince of Mosoch and Thubal. I will turn you about, I will urge you on, and I will make you come up from the recesses of the north; I will lead you against 3 the mountains of Israel. Then I will strike the bow from your 4 left hand, and make the arrows drop from your right. Upon the mountains of Israel you shall fall, you and all your troops and the peoples who are with you. To birds of prey of every kind 5 and to the wild beasts I am giving you to be eaten. On the open field you shall fall, for I have decreed it, says the Lord God.
6 I will send fire upon Magog and upon those who live securely 7 in the coastlands; thus they shall know that I am the Lord. I will make my holy name known among my people Israel; I will no longer allow my holy name to be profaned. Thus the nations 8 shall know that I am the Lord, the Holy One in Israel. Yes, it is coming and shall be fulfilled, says the Lord God. This is the day I have decreed.
9 Then shall those who live in the cities of Israel go out and burn weapons: [shields and bucklers,] bows and arrows, clubs and lances; for seven years they shall make fires with them.
10 They shall not have to bring in wood from the fields or cut it down in the forests, for they shall make fires with the weapons.
Thus they shall plunder those who plundered them and pillage those who pillaged them, says the Lord God.
11 On that day I will give Gog for his tomb a well-known place

39, 11: The valley of Abarim: mountains east of the Jordan River. Hamon-Gog: it means "the horde of God."

in Israel, the valley of Abarim east of the sea [it is blocked to travelers]. Gog shall be buried there with all his horde, and it 12 shall be named "Valley of Hamon-Gog." To purify the land, 13 the house of Israel shall need seven months to bury them. All the people of the land shall bury them and gain renown for it, 14 when I reveal my glory, says the Lord God. Men shall be permanently employed to pass through the land burying those who lie unburied, so as to purify the land. For seven months they 15 shall keep searching. When they pass through, should they see a human bone, let them put up a marker beside it, until others 16 have buried it in the Valley of Hamon-Gog. [Also the name of the city shall be Hamona.] Thus the land shall be purified.
17 As for you, son of man, says the Lord God, say to birds of every kind and to all the wild beasts: Come together, from all sides gather for the slaughter I am about to provide for you, a 18 great slaughter on the mountains of Israel: you shall have flesh to eat and blood to drink. You shall eat the flesh of warriors and drink the blood of the princes of the land [rams, lambs, 19 and goats, bullocks, fatlings of Basan, all of them]. From the slaughter which I will provide for you, you shall eat fat until 20 you are filled and drink blood until you are drunk. You shall be filled at my table with horses and riders, with warriors and soldiers of every kind, says the Lord God.

21 Israel's Return Thus I will display my glory among the nations, and all the nations shall see the judgment I have exe-22 cuted and the hand I have laid upon them. From that day forward the house of Israel shall know that I am the Lord, their 23 God. The nations shall know that because of its sins the house of Israel went into exile; for they transgressed against me, and I hid my face from them and handed them over to their foes, 24 so that all of them fell by the sword. According to their uncleanness and their transgressions I dealt with them, hiding my face from them.
25 Therefore, thus says the Lord God: Now I will restore the fortunes of Jacob and have pity on the whole house of Israel, 26 and I will be jealous for my holy name. They shall forget their disgrace and all the times they broke faith with me, when they 27 live in security on their land with no one to frighten them. When I bring them back from among the peoples, I will gather them from the lands of their enemies, and will prove my holiness 28 through them in the sight of many nations. Thus they shall know that I, the Lord, am their God, since I who exiled them among the nations, will gather them back on their land, not 29 leaving any of them behind. No longer will I hide my face from them, for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, says the Lord God.

V. THE NEW ISRAEL

THE NEW TEMPLE

40

1 The Man with a Measure On the tenth day of the month beginning the twenty-fifth year of our exile, fourteen years after the city was taken, that very day the hand of the Lord
2 came upon me and brought me | in divine visions to the land of Israel, where he set me down on a very high mountain. On 3 it there seemed to be a city being built before me. When he had brought me there, all at once I saw a man whose appearance was that of bronze; he was standing in the gate, holding a linen
4 cord and a measuring rod. | The man said to me, "Son of man, look carefully and listen intently, and pay strict attention to all that I will show you, for you have been brought here so that I might show it to you. Tell the house of Israel all that you see."
5 [Then I saw an outer wall that completely surrounded the temple. The man was holding a measuring rod six cubits long, each cubit being a cubit and a handbreadth; he measured the width and the height of the structure, each of which were found to be one rod.]

6 The East Gate Then he went to the gate which faced the east, climbed its steps, and measured the gate's threshold, which 7 was found to be a rod wide. The cells were a rod long and a rod wide, and the pilasters between the cells measured five cubits. The threshold of the gate adjoining the vestibule of the gate 8 toward the inside measured one rod. He measured the vestibule
9 of the gate, which was eight cubits, and its pilasters, which were two cubits. The vestibule of the gate was toward the inside. |

40—48: See 8-11 n. Here, too, it is difficult to determine whether this is a real vision or a literary one. The final part of Ezechiel's book is called the "Tora," i.e., the ideal program of sanctity as seen through Jewish spectacles. Most of the "vision" is allotted to the Jerusalem temple, but the ideal boundaries and other features of the postexilic utopian commonwealth are described. The fulfillment of "sanctity" as preached by Christ exceeded the noblest ideals of Ezechiel.

40, 1: April 28, 573 B.C.

40, 5: A cubit and a handbreadth: the "ordinary" cubit consisted of six handbreadths; the "great" cubit, of seven. In measuring the temple, a rod six great cubits long was used. The ordinary cubit was about one and a half feet, or, more exactly, 17.5 inches; the large cubit, 20.4 inches.

10 The cells of the east gate were three on either side, of equal size, 11 and the pilasters on either side were also of equal size. He measured the gate's entrance, which was ten cubits wide, while 12 the width of the gate's passage itself was thirteen cubits. The border before each of the cells on both sides was one cubit; the cells themselves were six cubits on either side, from opening to 13 opening. He measured the gate from the back wall of one cell to the back wall of the cell on the opposite side: the width was 14 twenty-five cubits. He measured the vestibule, which was twenty-five cubits. The pilasters adjoining the court on either 15 side were six cubits. The length of the gate from the front entrance to the front of the vestibule on the inside was fifty cubits.
16 Within the gateway on both sides there were splayed windows let into the cells [and into their pilasters]; likewise, within the vestibule on both sides there were windows. The pilasters were decorated with palms.

17 The Outer Court Then he brought me to the outer court, where there were chambers and a pavement. The pavement was laid all around the court, and the chambers, which were on the 18 pavement, were thirty in number. The pavement lay alongside the gates, as wide as the gates were long; this was the lower 19 pavement. He measured the width of the court from the front of the lower gate to the front of the inner gate; it was one hundred cubits between them.

20 The North Gate Then he proceeded north, | where, on the outer court, there was a gate facing north, whose length and 21 width he measured. Its cells, three on either side, its pilasters, and its vestibule had the same measurements as those of the first gate; it was fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide.
22 Its windows, the windows of its vestibule, and its palm decorations were of the same proportions as those of the gate facing the east. Seven steps led up to it, and its vestibule was toward 23 the inside. The inner court had a gate opposite the north gate, just as the east gate; he measured one hundred cubits from one gate to the other.

24 The South Gate Then he led me south, to where there was a southern gate, whose cells, pilasters, and vestibule he meas-25 ured; they were the same size as the others. The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides, like the other windows.

40, 17: The outer court: this refers to the court outside the temple area proper.

26 It was fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. It was ascended by seven steps; its vestibule was toward the inside; and 27 it was decorated with palms here and there on its pilasters. The inner court also had a southern gate; from gate to gate he measured one hundred cubits.

28 Gates of the Inner Court Then he brought me to the inner court by the south gate, where he measured the south 29 gate. Its dimensions were the same as the others; its cells, its pilasters, and its vestibule were the same size as the others. The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides; and it was 31 fifty cubits long and twenty-five cubits wide. But its vestibule was toward the outer court; palms were on its pilasters, and it 32 had a stairway of eight steps. Then he brought me to the gate facing the east, where he measured the gate, whose dimensions 33 were found to be the same. Its cells, its pilasters, and its vestibule were the same size as the others; the gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides; it was fifty cubits long and twenty-five 34 cubits wide. But its vestibule was toward the outer court; palms were on its pilasters here and there, and it had a stairway of 35 eight steps. Then he brought me to the north gate, where he 36 measured the dimensions | of its cells, its pilasters, and its vestibule, and found them the same. The gate and its vestibule had windows on both sides; it was fifty cubits long and twenty 37 five cubits wide. Its vestibule was toward the outer court; palms were on its pilasters here and there, and it had a stairway of eight steps.

38 Side Rooms There was a chamber opening off the vesti-39 bule of the gate, where the holocausts were rinsed. In the vestibule of the gate there were two tables on either side, on which 40 were slaughtered the sin offerings and guilt offerings. Along the wall of the vestibule, but outside, near the entrance of the north gate, were two tables, and on the other side of the vesti-41 bule of the gate there were two tables. There were four tables on either side of the gate [eight tables], on which the sacrifices 42 were slaughtered. There were four tables for holocausts, made of cut stone, one and a half cubits long, one and a half cubits 43 wide, and one cubit high. The ledges, a handbreadth wide, were set on the inside all around, and on them were laid the instruments with which the holocausts were slaughtered. On the tables 44 themselves the flesh was laid. He then led me to the inner court where there were two chambers, one beside the north gate, facing south, and the other beside the south gate, facing north.
45 He said to me, "This chamber which faces south is for the priests who have charge of the temple, and the chamber which 46 faces north is for the priests who have charge of the altar. These are the Sadocites, the only Levites who may come near to minis-47 ter to the Lord." Then he measured the court, which was a hundred cubits long and a hundred cubits wide, a perfect square.

The altar stood in front of the temple.

48 The Temple Building Then he brought me into the vestibule of the temple and measured the pilasters on each side, which were five cubits. The width of the doorway was fourteen cubits, and the side walls on either side of the door measured 49 three cubits. The vestibule was twenty cubits wide and twelve cubits deep; ten steps led up to it, and there were columns by the pilasters, one on either side.

41

1 Then he brought me to the nave and measured the pilasters, 2 which were six cubits thick on either side. The width of the entrance was ten cubits, and the walls at either side of it measured five cubits each. He measured the length of the nave, which was found to be forty cubits, while its width was twenty.
3 Then he went in beyond and measured the pilasters flanking that entrance, which were two cubits; the width of the entrance was six cubits, and the walls at either side of it extended seven 4 cubits each. He measured the space beyond the nave, twenty cubits long and twenty cubits wide, and said to me, "This is the holy of holies."
5 Then he measured the wall of the temple, which was six cubits thick; the side chambers, which extended all the way 6 around the temple, had a width of four cubits. There were thirty side chambers built one above the other in three stories, and there were offsets in the outside wall of the temple that enclosed the side chambers; these served as supports, so that there were 7 no supports in the temple wall proper. There was a broad circular passageway that led upward to the side chambers, for the temple was enclosed all the way around and all the way upward; therefore the temple had a broad way running upward so that one could pass from the lowest to the middle and the 8 highest story. About the temple was a raised pavement com pletely enclosing it—the foundations of the side chambers—9 full rod of six cubits in extent. The width of the outside wa which enclosed the side chambers was five cubits. Between th 10 side chambers of the temple | and the chambers of the cou was an open space twenty cubits wide going all around the tem 11 ple. The side chambers had entrances to the open space, one en trance on the north and another on the south. The width of th 12 wall surrounding the open space was five cubits. The buildin fronting the free area on the west side was seventy cubits fro to back; the wall of the building was five cubits thick all aroun 13 and it measured ninety cubits from side to side. He measure the temple, which was one hundred cubits long. The free are together with the building and its walls, was a hundred cubi 14 in length. The façade of the temple, along with the free area, o 15 the east side, was one hundred cubits wide. He measured th building which lay the length of the free area and behind i and together with its walls on both sides it was one hundre cubits.

Interior of the Temple The inner nave and the outer ves 16 tibule | were paneled with precious wood all around, covere from the ground to the windows. There were splayed window 17 with trellises about them [facing the threshold]. As high as th lintel of the door, even into the interior part of the temple a well as outside, on every wall on every side in both the inne 18 and outer rooms were carved | the figures of cherubim an palmtrees: a palmtree between every two cherubim. Each cheru 19 had two faces: | a man's face looking at a palmtree on on side, and a lion's face looking at a palmtree on the other; thu they were figured on every side throughout the whole temple 20 From the ground to the lintel of the door the cherubim an 21 palmtrees were carved on the walls. | The way into the nav was a square doorframe. In front of the holy place was some 22 thing that looked like | a wooden altar, three cubits in heigh two cubits long, and two cubits wide. It had corners, and it base and sides were of wood. He said to me, "This is the tabl 23 which is before the Lord." The nave had a double door, and als 24 the holy place had | a double door. Each door had two movabl leaves; two leaves were on one doorjamb and two on the othe building behind the temple.

41, 22: A wooden altar: the altar of incense, which stood at the en of the nave and at the entrance to the "holy of holies."

25 Carved upon them [on the doors of the nave] were cherubim and palmtrees, like those carved on the walls. Before the vesti-26 bule outside was a wooden lattice. | There were splayed windows [and palmtrees] on both side walls of the vestibule, and the side chambers of the temple. . . .

42

1 Other Structures Then he led me north to the outer court, bringing me to some chambers on the north that lay across the free area and which were also across from the building. Their length was a hundred cubits on the north side, and they were 3 fifty cubits wide. Across the twenty cubits of the inner court and the pavement of the outer court, there were three parallel 4 rows of them on different levels. In front of the chambers, to the inside, was a walk ten cubits broad and a wall of one cubit; 5 but the entrances of the chambers were on the north. The outermost chambers were the lowest, for the system of levels set them at a level lower than the closest chambers and those in between; 6 for they were in three rows and had no foundations to conform with the foundations of the courts, therefore they were on a lower terrace of the ground than the closest and the middle 7 chambers. On the far side there was a wall running parallel to the chambers along the outer court; its length before these 8 chambers was fifty cubits, for the length of the chambers belonging to the outer court was fifty cubits, but along its entire 9 length the wall measured one hundred cubits. Below these chambers there was the way in from the east, so that one could 10 enter from the outer court | where the wall of the court began.
To the south along the side of the free area and the building 11 there were also chambers, before which was a passage. These looked like the chambers to the north, just as long and just as 12 wide, with the same exits and plan and entrances. Below the chambers to the south there was an entrance at the beginning of the way which led to the back wall, by which one could 13 enter from the east. He said to me, "The north and south chambers which border on the free area are the sanctuary chambers; here the priests who draw near to the Lord shall eat the most sacred meals, and here they shall keep the most sacred offerings: cereal offerings, sin offerings, and guilt offerings; for 14 it is a holy place. When the priests have once entered, they shall not leave the holy place for the outer court until they have left 42, 5-6: The three rows of identical chambers, since they rested on different ground levels, necessarily had roofs on correspondingly different levels.

here the clothing in which they ministered, for it is holy. The shall put on other garments, and then approach the plac destined for the people."

13 Measuring the Outer Court When he had finished mea uring the inner temple area, he brought me out by way of th gate which faces east and measured all the limits of the court 16 He measured the east side: five hundred cubits by his measurin 17 rod. Then he turned | and measured the north side: five hun 18 dred cubits by the measuring rod. He turned | to the south an 19 measured five hundred cubits by the measuring rod. Then h turned to the west and measured five hundred cubits by th 20 measuring rod. Thus he measured it in the four directions, fiv hundred cubits long and five hundred cubits wide. It was sur rounded by a wall, to separate the sacred from the profane.

RESTORATION OF THE TEMPLE

43

1 The Return of the Lord Then he led me to the gat 2 which faces the east, and there I saw the glory of the God o Israel coming from the east. I heard a sound like the roaring o 3 many waters, and the earth shone with his glory. The visio was like that which I had seen when he came to destroy th city, and like that which I had seen by the river Chobar. I fel 4 prone | as the glory of the Lord entered the temple by way o 5 the gate which faces the east, but spirit lifted me up and brough me to the inner court. And I saw that the temple was fille 6 with the glory of the Lord. Then I heard someone speaking t 7 me from the temple, while the man stood beside me. | Th voice said to me: Son of man, this is where my throne shall be this is where I will set the soles of my feet; here I will dwel among the Israelites forever. Never again shall they and thei kings profane my holy name with their harlotries and with th 8 corpses of their kings [their high places]. When they place their threshold against my threshold and their doorpost next t mine, so that only a wall was between us, they profaned my holy name by their abominable deeds; therefore I consume

9 them in my wrath. From now on they shall put far from me their harlotry and the corpses of their kings, and I will dwell in their midst forever.

10 The Law of the Temple As for you, son of man, describe the temple to the house of Israel [that they may be ashamed of their sins], both its measurements and its design; 11 [and if they are ashamed of all that they have done,] make known to them the form and design of the temple, its exits and entrances, all its statutes and laws; write these down for them to see, that they may carefully observe all its laws and statutes.
12 This is the law of the temple: its whole surrounding area on the mountain top shall be most sacred.

13 The Altar These were the measurements of the altar in cubits of one cubit plus a handbreadth. Its base was one cubit high and one cubit deep, with a rim around its edge of one 14 span. The height of the altar itself was as follows: from its base at the bottom up to the lower ledge it was two cubits high, and this ledge was one cubit deep; from the lower to the upper ledge it was four cubits high, and this ledge also was one 15 cubit deep; the hearth of the altar was four cubits high, and extending from the top of the hearth were the four horns of the 16 altar. The hearth was a square: twelve cubits long and twelve 17 cubits wide. The upper ledge was also a square: fourteen cubits long and fourteen cubits wide. The lower ledge, likewise a square, was sixteen cubits long and sixteen cubits wide, with a half-cubit rim surrounding it. And there was a base of one cubit all around. The steps of the altar face the east.
18 Then he said to me: Son of man, thus says the Lord God:
These are the statutes for the altar when it is set up for the offering of holocausts upon it and for the sprinkling of blood 19 against it. Give a young bull as a sin offering to the priests, the Levites who are of the line of Sadoc, who draw near me to 20 minister to me, says the Lord God. Take some of its blood and put it on the four horns of the altar, and on the four corners of the ledge, and on the rim all around. Thus you shall purify it 21 and make atonement for it. Then take the bull of the sin offering, which is to be burnt in a designated part of the temple, 22 outside the sanctuary. On the second day present an unblemished 43, 13: The altar: of holocausts, in the inner court of the temple area.

43, 15: Four horns of the altar: Phoenicians, Arabs, and Greeks also had "horned" altars.

he-goat as a sin offering, to purify the altar as was done wit 23 the bull. When you have finished the purification, bring a unblemished young bull and an unblemished ram from the flock 24 | and present them before the Lord; the priests shall strew 25 salt on them and offer them to the Lord as holocausts. Dail for seven days you shall offer a he-goat as a sin offering, and young bull and a ram from the flock, all unblemished, shall b 26 offered | for seven days. Thus atonement shall be made for th 27 altar, and it shall be purified and dedicated. And when thes days are over, from the eighth day on, the priests shall offe your holocausts and peace offerings on the altar. Then I wi accept you, says the Lord God.

1 The Closed Gate Then he brought me back to the oute 2 gate of the sanctuary, facing the east; but it was closed. | H said to me: This gate is to remain closed; it is not to be opene for anyone to enter by it; since the Lord, the God of Israel, ha 3 entered by it, it shall remain closed. Only the prince may s down in it to eat his meal in the presence of the Lord. He mu enter by way of the vestibule of the gate, and leave by the sam way.

THE NEW LAW

4 Admission to the Temple Then he brought me by wa of the north gate to the façade of the temple, and when I looke
I saw the glory of the Lord filling the Lord's temple, and I fe 5 prone. Then he said to me: Son of man, pay strict attentio look carefully, and listen intently to all that I will tell yo about the statutes and laws of the Lord's temple; be attentiv in regard to those who are to be admitted to the temple and a 6 those who are to be excluded from the sanctuary. Say to thi rebellious house, the house of Israel: Thus says the Lord Goc Enough of all these abominations of yours, O house of Israe 7 You have admitted foreigners, uncircumcised both in heart an flesh, to my sanctuary to profane it when you offered me foo

44, 2: The closed outer gate on the eastern side means that Yahwe entered the temple once and for all and will not leave it again. Th Fathers of the Church accommodated this text to the perpetual virgini of Mary. The biblical text cannot be used as an argument in favor c Mary's perpetual virginity, but the testimony of the Fathers forms a vali argument of tradition in favor of Mary's perpetual virginity.

44, 7-9: In the new temple the Levites will execute humble servic which foreigners performed in the pre-exilic temple.

fat, and blood; thus you have broken my covenant by all your 8 abominations. Instead of caring for the service of my temple, you have appointed such as these to serve me in my sanctuary 9 in your stead. | Thus says the Lord God: No foreigners, uncircumcised in heart and in flesh, shall ever enter my sanctuary;
none of the foreigners who live among the Israelites.

10 Levites But as for the Levites who departed from me when Israel strayed from me to pursue their idols, they shall bear the 11 consequences of their sin. They shall serve in my sanctuary as gatekeepers and temple servants; they shall slaughter the holocausts and the sacrifices for the people, and they shall stand 12 before the people to minister for them. Because they used to minister for them before their idols, and became an occasion of sin to the house of Israel, therefore I have sworn an oath against them, says the Lord God: they shall bear the consequences of 13 their sin. They shall no longer draw near me to serve as my priests, nor shall they touch any of my sacred things, or the most sacred things. Thus they shall bear their disgrace because 14 of all their abominable deeds. But I will set them to the service of the temple, for all its work and for everything that is to be done in it.

15 Priests As for the Levitical priests, however, the Sadocites who cared for my sanctuary when the Israelites strayed from me, they shall draw near me to minister to me, and they shall stand before me to offer me fat and blood, says the Lord God.
16 It is they who shall enter my sanctuary, they who shall approach my table to minister to me, and they who shall carry out my 17 service. Whenever they enter the gates of the inner court, they shall wear linen garments; they shall not put on anything woolen when they minister at the gates of the inner court or within the 18 temple. They shall have linen turbans on their heads and linen drawers on their loins; they shall not gird themselves with any-19 thing that causes sweat. When they are to go out to the people in the outer court, they shall take off the garments in which they ministered and leave them in the chambers of the sanctuary, putting on other garments; thus they will not transmit holiness to the people with their garments.
20 They shall not shave their heads nor let their hair hang loose, 44, 10-14: In the new temple Levites were to be demoted to perform menial temple tasks in punishment for their participation in pagan practices at the sanctuaries throughout the land. This regulation was apparently carried out after the exile, because we learn from Esd 8, 15-20 that relatively few Levites wanted to return to Jerusalem.

21 but they shall keep their hair carefully trimmed. No priest shall 22 drink wine when he is to enter the inner court. They shall not take for their wives either widows or divorced women, but only virgins of the race of Israel; however, they may marry women 23 who are the widows of priests. They shall teach my people to distinguish between the sacred and the profane, and make known to them the difference between the clean and the unclean.
24 In capital cases they shall stand as judges, judging them according to my decrees. They shall observe my laws and statutes on all my festivals, and keep my Sabbaths holy.
25 They shall not make themselves unclean by coming near any dead person, unless it be their father, mother, son, daughter, brother, or maiden sister; for these they may make themselves 26 unclean. After a priest has been cleansed, he must wait an 27 additional seven days, and on the day he enters the inner court to minister in the sanctuary, he shall present his sin offering, 28 says the Lord God. They shall have no inheritance, for I am their inheritance; you shall give them no property in Israel, for 29 I am their property. They shall eat the cereal offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering; whatever is under the ban in 30 Israel shall be theirs. All the choicest first fruits of every kind, and all the best of your offerings of every kind, shall belong to the priests; likewise the best of your dough you shall give to the 31 priests to bring a blessing down upon your house. The priests shall not eat anything, whether flesh or fowl, that has died of itself or has been killed by wild beasts.

1 The Sacred Tract When you apportion the land into inheritances, you shall set apart a sacred tract of land for the Lord, twenty-five thousand cubits long and twenty thousand 2 wide; its whole area shall be sacred. Of this land a square plot, five hundred by five hundred cubits, surrounded by a free space 3 of fifty cubits, shall be assigned to the sanctuary. Also from this sector measure off a strip, twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide, within which shall be the sanctuary, the holy 4 of holies. This shall be the sacred part of the land belonging to the priests, the ministers of the sanctuary, who draw near to minister to the Lord; it shall be a place for their homes and 5 pasture land for their cattle. Also there shall be a strip twenty-five thousand cubits long and ten thousand wide as property for the Levites, the ministers of the temple, that they may have 6 cities to live in. As property of the City you shall designate a strip five thousand cubits wide and twenty-five thousand long, parallel to the sacred tract; this shall belong to the whole house 7 of Israel. The prince shall have a section bordering on both sides of the combined sacred tract and City property, extending westward on the western side and eastward on the eastern side, corresponding in length to one of the tribal portions from the 8 western boundary to the eastern boundary | of the land. This shall be his property in Israel, so that the princes of Israel will no longer oppress my people, but will leave the land to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

9 Weights and Measures Thus says the Lord God: Enough, you princes of Israel! Put away violence and oppression, and do what is right and just! Stop evicting my people! says the Lord 10 God. You shall have honest scales, an honest epha, and an 11 honest bath. The epha and the bath shall be of the same size: the bath equal to a tenth of a homor, and the epha equal to a tenth 12 of a homor; by the homor they shall be determined. The shekel shall be twenty geras. Twenty shekels, twenty-five shekels, plus fifteen shekels shall be your mina.

13 Offerings These are the offerings you shall make: one sixth of an epha from each homor of wheat, and one sixth of an epha 14 from each homor of barley. The regulation for oil: for every bath of oil, a tenth of a bath, computed by the kor of ten baths 15 [or a homor, for ten baths make a homor]. One sheep from the flock for every two hundred from the pasturage of Israel, for sacrifice—holocausts and peace offerings and atonement 16 sacrifices, says the Lord God. All the people of the land shall be 17 bound to this offering [for the prince in Israel]. It shall be the duty of the prince to provide the holocausts, cereal offerings, and libations on the feasts, new moons, and Sabbaths, on all the festivals of the house of Israel. He shall offer the sin offerings, cereal offerings, holocausts, and peace offerings, to make atonement on behalf of the house of Israel.

45, 10-12: Epha: a dry measure. Bath: a liquid measure; here they are standardized according to the "homor" (a dry measure of about ten bushels, or eighty gallons). In v. 12, reference is made to the change in value of the "mina"; before the exile it was valued at fifty shekels, but afterward, in imitation of Babylonian practice, the sixty-shekel mina was adopted. The shekel was a unit of weight slightly less than half an ounce. As a monetary unit, the value obviously differed greatly, depending on whether it was a gold or a silver shekel.

45, 14: Kor: both a liquid and a dry measure corresponding to the homor.

18 The Passover Thus says the Lord God: On the first day of the first month you shall use an unblemished young bull as 19 a sacrifice to purify the sanctuary. Then the priest shall take some of the blood from the sin offering and put it on the door-posts of the temple, on the four corners of the ledge of the altar, and on the doorposts of the gates of the inner court.
20 You shall repeat this on the first day of the seventh month for those who have sinned through inadvertence or ignorance; 21 thus you shall make atonement for the temple. On the fourteenth day of the first month you shall observe the feast of the 22 Passover; for seven days unleavened bread is to be eaten. On that day the prince shall offer on his own behalf, and on behalf 23 of all the people of the land, a bull as a sin offering. On each of the seven days of the feast he shall offer as a holocaust to the Lord seven bulls and seven rams without blemish, and as a sin 24 offering he shall offer one male goat each day. As a cereal offering he shall offer one epha for each bull and one epha for each ram; and he shall offer one hin of oil for each epha.

25 The Feast of Booths On the fifteenth day of the seventh month, the feast day, and for seven days, he shall perform the same rites, making the same sin offerings, the same holocausts, the same cereal offerings and offerings of oil.

1 Sabbaths Thus says the Lord God: The gate toward the east of the inner court shall remain closed throughout the six working days, but on the Sabbath and on the day of the new 2 moon it shall be open. The prince shall enter from outside by way of the vestibule of the gate and remain standing at the doorpost of the gate; then while the priests offer his holocausts and peace offerings, he shall worship at the threshold of the gate and then leave; the gate shall not be closed until evening.
3 The people of the land shall worship before the Lord at the 4 door of this gate on the Sabbaths and new moons. The holocausts which the prince presents to the Lord on the Sabbath shall consist of six unblemished lambs and an unblemished 5 ram, together with a cereal offering of one epha for the ram, whatever he pleases for the lambs, and a hin of oil for each 6 epha. On the day of the new moon he shall provide an unblemished young bull, also six lambs and a ram without blemish, 7 with a cereal offering of one epha for the bull and one for the 45, 24: Him: the sixth part of a bath.

ram, for the lambs as much as he has at hand, and for each epha a hin of oil.

8 Ritual Laws The prince shall always enter and depart by 9 the vestibule of the gate. When the people of the land enter the presence of the Lord to worship on the festivals, if they enter by the north gate they shall leave by the south gate, and if they enter by the south gate they shall leave by the north gate; no one shall return by the gate through which he has entered, but 10 he shall leave by the opposite gate. The prince shall be in their midst when they enter, and he shall also leave with them.
11 On the feasts and festivals the cereal offering shall be an epha for a bull, an epha for a ram, but for the lambs as much as one 12 pleases, and a hin of oil with each epha. When the prince makes a freewill offering to the Lord, whether holocausts or peace offerings, the eastern gate shall be opened for him, and he shall offer his holocausts or his peace offerings as on the Sabbath; then he shall leave, and the gate shall be closed after his 13 departure. He shall offer as a daily holocaust to the Lord an unblemished yearling lamb; this he shall offer every morning.
14 With it every morning he shall provide as a cereal offering one sixth of an epha, with a third of a hin of oil to moisten the fine flour. This cereal offering to the Lord is mandatory with the 15 established holocaust. The lamb, the cereal offering, and the oil are to be offered every morning as an established holocaust.

16 The Prince and the Land Thus says the Lord God: If the prince makes a gift of part of his inheritance to any of his sons, it shall belong to his sons; that property is theirs by in-17 heritance. But if he makes a gift of part of his inheritance to one of his servants, it shall belong to the latter only until the year of release, when it shall revert to the prince. Only the 18 inheritance given to his sons is permanent. | The prince shall not seize any part of the inheritance of the people by evicting them from their property. He shall provide an inheritance for his sons from his own property, so that none of my people will be driven from their property.

19 The Temple Kitchens Then he brought me by the entrance which is on the side of the gate to the chambers [of the sanctuary, reserved to the priests] which face the north. There, at 20 their west end, I saw a place, | concerning which he said to 46, 17: The year of release: the jubilee year.

46, 20: A repetition from 42, 13 regarding the use of these chambers.

me, "Here the priests cook the guilt offerings and the sin offerings, and bake the cereal offerings, so that they do not have to take them into the outer court at the risk of transmitting holiness 21 to the people." Then he led me into the outer court and had me pass around the four corners of the court, and I saw that in each 22 corner there was another court: in the four corners of the court minor courts, forty cubits long and thirty wide, all four of them 23 the same size. A wall of stones surrounded each of the four and hearths were built beneath the stones all the way around 24 | He said to me, "These are the kitchens where the temple ministers cook the sacrifices of the people."

47

1 The Wonderful Stream Then he brought me back to the entrance of the temple, and I saw water flowing out from beneath the threshold of the temple toward the east, for the façade of the temple was toward the east; the water flowed down from the southern side of the temple, south of the altar.
2 He led me outside by the north gate, and around to the outer gate facing the east, where I saw water trickling from the 3 southern side. Then when he had walked off to the east with a measuring cord in his hand, he measured off a thousand cubits and had me wade through the water, which was ankle-deep.
4 He measured off another thousand and once more had me wade through the water, which was now knee-deep. Again he measured off a thousand and had me wade; the water was up to 5 my waist. Once more he measured off a thousand, but there was now a river through which I could not wade; for the water had risen so high it had become a river that could not be crossed 6 except by swimming. | He asked me, "Have you seen this, son of man?" Then he brought me to the bank of the river, 7 where he had me sit. Along the bank of the river I saw very 8 many trees on both sides. | He said to me, "This water flows into the eastern district down upon the Araba, and empties
9 into the sea, the salt waters, which it makes fresh. Wherever the river flows, every sort of living creature that can multiply

47, 1-12: The stream flows from the temple and through the whole land. It gives life wherever it flows. The stream empties into the Dead Sea (v. 8) and fecundates it with the life and fishes of the Mediterranean Sea ("Great Sea" v. 10). This stream is a symbol of the life forces flowing from Yahweh in His temple to all the parts of His land. The motif of the life-giving river is seen also in Joel (see Jl 4, 18 n) and Ap 22, 1f.

47, 9: The formula for the Easter blessing of water in the Roman Liturgy is inspired from this text.

shall live, and there shall be abundant fish, for wherever this 10 water comes the sea shall be made fresh. Fisherman shall be standing along it from En-gaddi to En-gallim, spreading their nets there. Its kinds of fish shall be like those of the Great Sea, 11 very numerous. Only its marshes and swamps shall not be made 12 fresh; they shall be left for salt. Along both banks of the river, fruit trees of every kind shall grow; their leaves shall not fade, nor their fruit fail. Every month they shall bear fresh fruit, for they shall be watered by the flow from the sanctuary. Their fruit shall serve for food, and their leaves for medicine."

THE NEW ISRAEL

13 Boundaries of the Land Thus says the Lord God: These are the boundaries within which you shall apportion the land 14 among the twelve tribes of Israel [Joseph having two portions].
All of you shall have a like portion in this land which I swore to give to your fathers, that it might fall to you as your inherit-15 ance. This is the boundary of the land on the north side: from the Great Sea in the direction of Hethalon, past Labo of Hamath, 16 to Sedada, | Berotha, and Sabarim, along the frontiers of Hamath and Damascus, to Hasar-Enon which is on the border 17 of the Hauran. Thus the border shall extend from the sea to Hasar-Enon, with the frontier of Hamath and Damascus to 18 the north. This is the northern boundary. The eastern boundary: between the Hauran—toward Damascus—and Galaad on the one side, and the land of Israel on the other side, the Jordan shall form the boundary down to the eastern sea as far as 19 Thamar. This is the eastern boundary. | The southern boundary: from Thamar to the waters of Meribath-Cades, thence to the Wadi of Egypt, and on to the Great Sea. This is the south-20 ern boundary. The western boundary: the Great Sea forms the boundary up to a point parallel to Labo of Hamath. This is the western boundary.

21 The Northern Portions You shall distribute this land 22 among yourselves according to the tribes of Israel. You shall allot it as inheritances for yourselves and for the aliens resident in your midst who have bred children among you. The latter shall be to you like native Israelites; along with you they shall 47, 10: From En-gaddi: halfway down the western shore of the Dead Sea. To En-gallim: at the northern tip of the Dead Sea.

23 receive inheritances among the tribes of Israel. In whatever tribe the alien may be resident, there you shall assign him his inheritance, says the Lord God.

48

1 This is the list of the tribes. Dan: at the northern extremity, adjoining Hamath, all along from the approaches to Hethalon through Labo of Hamath to Hasar-Enon, on the northerly border with Damascus, with his possession reaching from the 2 eastern to the western boundary. Aser: on the frontier of Dan, 3 from the eastern to the western boundary. Nephthali: on the frontier of Aser, from the eastern to the western boundary.
4 Manasse: on the frontier of Nephthali, from the eastern to the 5 western boundary. Ephraim: on the frontier of Manasse, from 6 the eastern to the western boundary. Ruben: on the frontier of 7 Ephraim, from the eastern to the western boundary. Juda: on the frontier of Ruben, from the eastern to the western boundary.

8 The Sacred Tract On the frontier of Juda, from the eastern to the western boundary there shall be the tract which you shall set apart, twenty-five thousand cubits from north to south, and as wide as one of the tribal portions from the eastern to the western boundary. In the center of the tract shall be the 9 sanctuary. The tract that you set aside for the Lord shall be twenty-five thousand cubits across by twenty thousand north 10 and south. In this sacred tract the priests shall have twenty-five thousand cubits on the north, ten thousand on the west, ten thousand on the east, and twenty-five thousand on the south; 11 and the sanctuary of the Lord shall be in its center. The consecrated priests, the Sadocites, who fulfilled my service and did 12 not stray along with the Israelites as the Levites did, shall have within this tract of land their own most sacred domain, next to 13 the territory of the Levites. The Levites shall have a territory corresponding to that of the priests, twenty-five thousand cubits by ten thousand. The whole tract shall be twenty-five thousand 14 cubits across and twenty thousand north and south. They may not sell or exchange or alienate this, the best part of the land, 15 for it is sacred to the Lord. The remaining five thousand cubits along the twenty-five-thousand-cubit line are profane land, assigned to the City for dwellings and pasture; the City shall be 16 at their center. These are the dimensions of the City: the north cal or ideal, for it disregards geography and relative size of popula-side, forty-five hundred cubits; the south side, forty-five hundred cubits; the east side, forty-five hundred cubits; and the west side, 17 forty-five hundred cubits. The pasture lands of the City shall extend north two hundred and fifty cubits, south two hundred and fifty cubits, east two hundred and fifty cubits, and west 18 two hundred and fifty cubits. There shall remain an area along the sacred tract, ten thousand cubits to the east and ten thousand to the west, whose produce shall provide food for the workers 19 of the City. The workers in the City shall be taken from all the 20 tribes of Israel. The entire tract shall be twenty-five thousand by twenty-five thousand cubits; as a perfect square you shall set apart the sacred tract together with the City property.

21 The remainder shall belong to the prince: the land on both sides of the sacred tract and the City property, extending from along the twenty-five-thousand-cubit line eastward to the eastern boundary, and westward from along the twenty-five-thousand-cubit line to the western boundary, a territory parallel with the tribal portions for the prince. The sacred tract and the sanctuary 22 of the temple shall be in the middle. Thus, except for the property of the Levites and the City property, which lie in the midst of the prince's property, the territory between the portions of Juda and of Benjamin shall belong to the prince.

23 The Southern Portions These are the remaining tribes. Benjamin: from the eastern to the western boundary. Simeon: 24 on the frontier of Benjamin, from the eastern to the western 25 boundary. Issachar: on the frontier of Simeon, from the eastern 26 to the western boundary. Zabulon: on the frontier of Issachar, 27 from the eastern to the western boundary. Gad: on the frontier 28 of Zabulon, from the eastern to the western boundary. Along the frontier of Gad shall be the southern boundary, which shall extend from Thamar to the waters of Meribath-Cades, and from there to the Wadi of Egypt, and on to the Great Sea.
29 Such is the land which you shall apportion as inheritances among the tribes of Israel, and these are their portions, says the Lord God.

The Gates of the City These are the exits of the City, 30 | the gates of which are named after the tribes of Israel. On 31 the north side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, there shall be three gates: the gate of Ruben, the gate of Juda, and the gate 32 of Levi. On the east side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, there shall be three gates: the gate of Joseph, the gate of 33 Benjamin, and the gate of Dan. On the south side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, there shall be three gates: the gate of Simeon, the gate of Issachar, and the gate of Zabulon.

34 On the west side, measuring forty-five hundred cubits, there shall be three gates: the gate of Gad, the gate of Aser, and the 35 gate of Nephthali. The perimeter of the City is eighteen thousand cubits. The name of the City shall henceforth be "The Lord is here."

48, 35: The city's new name symbolizes its new importance and epitomizes the whole prophecy of the New Israel (chs. 40—48).

THE BOOK OF DANIEL

INTRODUCTION

The Book of Daniel takes its name from an unknown Jewish hero who lived in the Babylonian exile of the sixth century B.C. Actually, the book was written by an anonymous Jew who ascribed the book to the national hero, Daniel, according to the accepted literary device of pseudepigraphy. He may have found the stories about Daniel, or written them himself during the time of persecution by Antiochus IV Epiphanes, the Syrian king who was bent on Hellenizing the Jews. Since the author fails to mention the purification of the Jerusalem temple on December 25, 164 B.C., he must have written before that date. Hence, the date of the writing is often given as 167-164.

The narrations about Daniel's personal persecutions by different Babylonian kings (chs. 1—6) were intended to make persecuted Jews of the second century put themselves in Daniel's trying situations and draw encouragement from these stories. In the refusal of the youths to eat unclean food (ch. 1), in the refusal to adore Nabuchodonosor's statue (ch. 3) and in Daniel's refusal to stop adoring God (ch. 6), the miraculous escape from death was a symbol of reward promised to faithful followers. This lesson in the face of idolatry is applicable to persecuted Christians of any age.

Most modern authors describe chs. 1—6 as haggadoth, the technical Hebrew literary form known as edifying religious stories. They are often compared to stories of Christian martyrs. These stories were common in the Hellenistic world. The author enshrines an edifying lesson within an interesting folkloristic tale. Hence, in chs. 1—6 the stress is not on history but on monotheism and on courage in the face of apostasy.

A brief historical background to Daniel seems imperative. In 175 B.C., Antiochus IV Epiphanes usurped the Seleucid dynastic throne of Syria. As a man, he was gifted and cultured; as a ruler, capable. On the international scene, his main rival was the Egyptian empire ruled by the Ptolemies. The spreading power of Rome he sought to contain. To consolidate his heterogeneous empire, Antiochus wanted to Hellenize it. Hence, the more backward peoples were, the more should they conform to Greek ways. But the Jews subjected to him were divided. Many of the priests and aristocrats were sympathetic to Hellenization like their coreligionists living abroad. But the poorer classes, headed by the Hasidim of the Nehemias-Esdras strict traditions, opposed foreign influence of any sort as infidelity to the Mosaic Law.

The two books of Machabees show graphically how the Machabees and their followers answered with the sword the religious persecution of Antiochus (the first religious persecution in recorded history). The author of Daniel answered with the pen by exhortation to resistance through fidelity and, if necessary, even martyrdom. The second part of Daniel (chs. 7—12) is entirely different. It comprises four apocalyptic visions. Apocalyptic means revelatory of what God did in the past, is doing in the present, and will do in the future. Like the earlier prophets the apocalyptists claim to be communicating the will of God. Whereas the former were chiefly concerned with contemporary affairs, namely warning, condemning or consoling the men of their time, the latter lay far greater (not exclusive) stress on the future. They stress a catastrophe that will end the present state of things and inaugurate a new era, i.e. all the apocalypses are concerned with eschatology: a definitive end to the existing world order, and the establishment, in one form or another of the Kingdom of God. Thus, prophecy is the genus, apocalypse is its species. It concerns an end-time. A writer before the exile speaks of eschatological end-time, i.e., the restoration after the exile. A writer after the exile speaks of eschatological end-time, i.e., the Messianic era. The end of the world is a Greek, not a Hebrew, idea. Earlier specimens of this literary form are found in Ezechiel, e.g., chs. 38—39, and in the visions of Zacharia, chs. 1—8; in fact, the whole movement has its roots in the doctrine of the Day of Yahweh, which is already familiar to Amos (see Am 5, 18-20 n). But with Daniel, apocalyptic literature reaches its full development. No successor surpasses him till St. John's apocalypse.

Concerning chs. 7—12, the traditional view attributed this section to the sixth century Daniel predicting events from his day to the second century B.C. Nowadays moderns interpret these chapters as an apocalypse by a second century writer who impressively teaches past and present history in the literary dress of prophecies revealed by God. When speaking of the sixth century Babylonian era, he refers to customs of the late Persian and early Greek eras. He did not deceive his audience any more than a writer today were he to "prophesy" the events of World War I, II, and the Korean War, becoming more specific in the naming of men and places as he approaches his own time.

The following are some characteristics of an apocalypse:

1. Pseudonymity. (The New Testament Apocalypse is an exception.) The work has been put under the patronage of some great personage of the past: Adam, Moses, Daniel, etc. The course of history is then presented as a revelation made to the speaker (he is usually warned to keep it secret), and is followed down to the Judgment and the End-time now close at hand.

2. The vision form. In contrast to the Spirit of Yahweh speaking interiorly in a true prophecy, the "revelation" comes through a vision the meaning of which is then explained by an angel.

3. Extensive use of standardized symbols and numbers.

The popularity which the Book of Daniel enjoyed in the art of the catacombs and then in Renaissance art has found its manifestation in the Roman liturgy. Daniel's popularity today continues in the oratorios of Handel, Walton, and in the revival of the twelfth century Latin musical drama, "The Play of Daniel."

Main divisions of the Book of Daniel are:

1. Stories of Daniel and the Kings of Babylon, 1—6
2. Daniel's Visions, 7—12
3. Appendix: Susanna, Bel and the Dragon, 13—14

I. DANIEL AND THE KINGS OF BABYLON

1

1 The Food Test In the third year of the reign of Joakim, king of Juda, king Nabuchodonosor of Babylon came and laid 2 siege to Jerusalem. The Lord handed over to him Joakim, king of Juda, and some of the vessels of the temple of God, which he carried off to the land of Senaar, and placed in the temple treasury of his god.
3 The king told Asphenaz, his chief chamberlain, to bring in some of the Israelites of royal blood and of the nobility, | 4 young men without any defect, handsome, intelligent and wise, quick to learn, and prudent in judgment, such as could take their place in the king's palace; they were to be taught the 5 language and literature of the Chaldeans; after three years' training they were to enter the king's service. The king allotted them a daily portion of food and wine from the royal table.
6 Among these were men of Juda: Daniel, Anania, Misael, and 7 Azaria. The chief chamberlain changed their names: Daniel to Baltassar, Anania to Sidrach, Misael to Misach, and Azaria to Abdenago.
8 But Daniel was resolved not to defile himself with the king's food or wine; so he begged the chief chamberlain to spare him 9 this defilement. Though God had given Daniel the favor and 10 sympathy of the chief chamberlain, he nevertheless said to Daniel, "I am afraid of my lord the king; it is he who allotted your food and drink. If he sees that you look wretched by comparison with the other young men of your age, you will 11 endanger my life with the king." Then Daniel said to the

1, 1-21: The introductory story shows how Daniel received the gift of prophecy, which in the mentality of the second century B.C. is dream interpretation (v. 17), not deliverance of oracles as in the days of the older prophets.

1, 1: A reference to 4 Kgs 24, 1.

1, 2: Senaar: the second century author intentionally uses the ancient name for Babylonia.

1, 4-5: The importance given to physical qualities, intelligence, three-year training, etc., accord better in a Persian than in a Babylonian milieu. This anachronism shows that the author does not intend to write true history but an edifying story.

1, 7: The names are changed to denote subjection to Babylon.

1, 8: Defile himself with the king's food or wine: to a law-abiding Jew this fare, most likely including meat, was forbidden because the meat might have been offered to idols. Vegetables and water (v. 12) would be safe. The strict observance of dietary laws was not stressed at the time of the Babylonian exile, but later at the time of Esdras. This is another deliberate anachronism. See 1, 4-5 n.

steward whom the chief chamberlain had put in charge o 12 Daniel, Anania, Misael, and Azaria, | "Please test your servant for ten days. Give us vegetables to eat and water to drink 13 Then see how we look in comparison with the other young men who eat from the royal table, and treat your servant 14 according to what you see." He acceded to this request, and 15 tested them for ten days; after ten days they looked healthier and better fed than any of the young men who ate from the 16 royal table. So the steward continued to take away the food and wine they were to receive, and gave them vegetables.
17 To these four young men God gave knowledge and profi ciency in all literature and science, and to Daniel the under 18 standing of all visions and dreams. At the end of the time the king had specified for their preparation, the chief chamberlain 19 brought them before Nabuchodonosor. When the king had spoken with all of them, none was found equal to Daniel Anania, Misael, and Azaria; and so they entered the king's 20 service. In any question of wisdom or prudence which the king put to them, he found them ten times better than all the 21 magicians and enchanters in his kingdom. Daniel remained there until the first year of king Cyrus.

2

1 The King's Dream In the second year of his reign, king Nabuchodonosor had a dream which left his spirit no rest and 2 robbed him of his sleep. So he ordered that the magicians enchanters, sorcerers, and Chaldeans be summoned to interpret the dream for him. When they came and presented themselves 3 to the king, | he said to them, "I had a dream which will leave 4 my spirit no rest until I know what it means." The Chaldeans answered the king [Aramaic]: "O king, live forever! Tell your 5 servants the dream and we will give its meaning." The king answered the Chaldeans, "This is what I have decided: unless

1, 20: The author, in a clever apologetic way, tells those of his audience who are tempted to be fashionable with Greek ways that a strict observance of the Mosaic Law is not out-of-date, but is rewarded with "knowledge and proficiency in all literature and science . . . understanding of all visions and dreams" (v. 17).

1, 21: The first year of king Cyrus: 538 B.C.

2, 1-49: The inspired storyteller does not worry about chronological accuracy. The chronology of v. 1 conflicts with that of vv. 1 and 18 in ch. 1. In v. 25 Daniel seems to be introduced to the king for the first time.

2, 2: Chaldeans: probably astrologers.

2, 5: Since Ex 22, 17 decrees death to magicians, the author may be writing a veiled satire here by making the pagan king apply the Law of Moses.

you tell me the dream and its meaning, you shall be cut to 6 pieces and your houses destroyed. But if you tell me the dream and its meaning, you shall receive from me gifts and presents and great honors. Now tell me the dream and its meaning." 7 Again they answered, "Let the king tell his servants the 8 dream and we will give its meaning." But the king replied:
"I know for certain that you are bargaining for time, since you 9 know what I have decided. If you do not tell me the dream, there can be but one decree for you. You have framed a false and deceitful interpretation to present me with till the crisis is past. Tell me the dream, therefore, that I may be sure that you can also give its correct interpretation." 10 The Chaldeans answered the king: "There is not a man on earth who can do what you ask, O king; never has any king, however great and mighty, asked such a thing of any 11 magician, enchanter, or Chaldean. What you demand. O king, is too difficult; there is no one who can tell it to the king 12 except the gods who do not dwell among men." At this the king became violently angry and ordered all the wise men of 13 Babylon to be put to death. When the decree was issued that the wise men should be slain, Daniel and his companions were also sought out.
14 Then Daniel prudently took counsel with Arioch, the captain of the king's guard, who had set out to kill the wise men of 15 Babylon: "O officer of the king," he asked, "what is the reason for this harsh order from the king?" When Arioch told him, 16 Daniel went and asked for time from the king, that he might give him the interpretation.
17 Daniel went home and informed his companions Anania, 18 Misael, and Azaria, | that they might implore the mercy of the God of heaven in regard to this mystery, so that Daniel and his companions might not perish with the rest of the wise 19 men of Babylon. During the night the mystery was revealed to Daniel in a vision, and he blessed the God of heaven: 20 "Blessed be the name of God forever and ever, for wisdom 21 and power are his. | He causes the changes of the times and seasons, makes kings and unmakes them. He gives wisdom to 22 the wise and knowledge to those who understand. | He reveals deep and hidden things and knows what is in the darkness, for 23 the light dwells with him. | To you, O God of my fathers, I give thanks and praise, because you have given me wisdom and power. Now you have shown me what we asked of you, you have made known to us the king's dream." 24 So Daniel went to Arioch, whom the king had appointed to destroy the wise men of Babylon, and said to him, "Do not put the wise men of Babylon to death. Bring me before the king and I will tell him the interpretation of the dream." Arioch 25 quickly brought Daniel to the king and said, "I have found a man among the Judean captives who can give the interpretation 26 to the king." The king asked Daniel, whose name was Baltassar, "Can you tell me the dream that I had, and its meaning?" 27 In the king's presence Daniel made this reply:

"The mystery about which the king has inquired, the wise men, enchanters, magicians, and astrologers could not explain 28 to the king. But there is a God in heaven who reveals mysteries and he has shown king Nabuchodonosor what is to happen in days to come; this was the dream you saw as you lay in bed 29 To you in your bed there came thoughts about what should happen in the future, and he who reveals mysteries showed you 30 what is to be. To me also this mystery has been revealed; not that I am wiser than any other living person, but in order that its meaning may be made known to the king, that you may understand the thoughts in your own mind.
31 "In your vision, O king, you saw a statue, very large and exceedingly bright, terrifying in appearance as it stood before 32 you. The head of the statue was pure gold, its chest and arms 33 were silver, its belly and thighs bronze, | the legs iron, its feet 34 partly iron and partly tile. While you looked at the statue, a stone which was hewn from a mountain without a hand being put to it, struck its iron and tile feet, breaking them in pieces.
35 The iron, tile, bronze, silver, and gold all crumbled at once, fine as the chaff on the threshing floor in summer, and the wind blew them away without leaving a trace. But the stone that struck the statue became a great mountain and filled the whole earth.
36 "This was the dream; the interpretation we shall also give 37 in the king's presence. You, O king, are the king of kings; to you the God of heaven has given dominion and strength, power and 2, 31: Very tall statues, like the Colossus of Rhodes, were familiar to the author's audience.

2, 32-33: Statues of composite metals were familiar sights to Greeks and Romans. The gold head represents the Babylonian empire (v. 38) the silver chest and bronze belly and thighs represent the Medes and the Persians (8, 20). The iron legs represent the Hellenistic empire of Alexander the Great (8, 21), the iron and tile feet and toes represent the four empires which split from Alexander's empire after his death (8, 22).

THE STATUE 2, 32-33	THE FOUR BEASTS 7, 3-8	RAM AND GOAT 8, 3-12	IDENTIFICATIONS
Gold head	Lion		Babylonian Empire (2, 38)
Silver chest	Bear	Ram { 1st horn	Medes } (8, 20)
Bronze belly	Leopard	Ram { 2nd horn	Persians } (8, 20)
Iron legs	The fourth beast (vv. 7. 19)	He-Goat—1 horn	Alexander the Great (8, 21)
Iron–tile Feet (and toes)		4 horns	4 empires which split from Alexander's empire (8, 22)

	Little horn (vv. 8. 20)	little horn	Antiochus IV Epiphanes (8, 23)

The identifications given by the Inspired author are generally agreed upon by scholars as presented on the above chart. The central notion that permeates these stories is not history but theology, for Daniel's stories teach that empires will succeed one another, but in the end will come the Kingdom of God. In lasting splendor. (See Dn 2, 44-45.)

38 glory; men, wild beasts, and birds of the air, wherever they ma dwell, he has handed over to you, making you ruler over then 39 all; you are the head of gold. Another kingdom shall take you place, inferior to yours, then a third kingdom, of bronze, whicl 40 shall rule over the whole earth. There shall be a fourth kingdom strong as iron; it shall break in pieces and subdue all thes others, just as iron breaks in pieces and crushes everything else 41 The feet and toes you saw, partly of potter's tile and partly o iron, mean that it shall be a divided kingdom, but yet have som of the hardness of iron. As you saw the iron mixed with cla 42 tile, and the toes partly iron and partly tile, the kingdom shal 43 be partly strong and partly fragile. The iron mixed with cla tile means that they shall seal their alliances by intermarriage but they shall not stay united, any more than iron mixes witl 44 clay. In the lifetime of those kings the God of heaven will se up a kingdom that shall never be destroyed or delivered up t another people; rather, it shall break in pieces all these kingdom 45 and put an end to them, and it shall stand forever. That i the meaning of the stone you saw hewn from the mountai without a hand being put to it, which broke in pieces the tile iron, bronze, silver, and gold. The great God has revealed t the king what shall be in the future; this is exactly what yo dreamed, and its meaning is sure."

46 Then king Nabuchodonosor fell down and worshiped Danie 47 and ordered sacrifice and incense offered to him. | To Danie the king said, "Truly your God is the God of gods and Lord o kings and a revealer of mysteries; that is why you were able t 48 reveal this mystery." He advanced Daniel to a high post, gav him many generous presents, made him ruler of the whol province of Babylon and chief prefect over all the wise men o 49 Babylon. At Daniel's request the king made Sidrach, Misach and Abdenago administrators of the province of Babylon, whil Daniel himself remained at the king's court.

ordered the satraps, prefects, and governors, the counselors, treasurers, judges, magistrates and all the officials of the provinces to be summoned to the dedication of the statue which 3 he had set up. The satraps, prefects, and governors, the counselors, treasurers, judges, and magistrates and all the officials of the provinces, all these came together for the dedication and stood before the statue which king Nabuchodonosor had set 4 up. | A herald cried out: "Nations and peoples of every language, when you hear the sound of the trumpet, flute, lyre, harp, psaltery, bagpipe, and all the other musical instruments,
5 you are ordered to fall down and worship the golden statue 6 which king Nabuchodonosor has set up. Whoever does not fall down and worship shall be instantly cast into a white-hot 7 furnace." Therefore, as soon as they heard the sound of the trumpet, flute, lyre, harp, psaltery, bagpipe, and all the other musical instruments, the nations and peoples of every language all fell down and worshiped the golden statue which king Nabuchodonosor had set up.

8 At that point, some of the Chaldeans came and accused the 9 Jews | to king Nabuchodonosor: "O king, live forever! O 10 king, you issued a decree that everyone who heard the sound of the trumpet, flute, lyre, harp, psaltery, bagpipe, and all the other musical instruments should fall down and worship the 11 golden statue; whoever did not was to be cast into a white-hot 12 furnace. There are certain Jews whom you have made administrators of the province of Babylon: Sidrach, Misach, Abdenago; these men, O king, have paid no attention to you; they will not serve your god or worship the golden statue which you set up."

13 Nabuchodonosor flew into a rage and sent for Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, who were promptly brought before the 14 king. | King Nabuchodonosor questioned them: "Is it true, Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, that you will not serve my god, 15 or worship the golden statue that I set up? Be ready now to fall down and worship the statue I had made, whenever you hear the sound of the trumpet, flute, lyre, harp, psaltery, bagpipe, and all the other musical instruments; otherwise, you shall be instantly cast into the white-hot furnace; and who is the God

Abdenago answered king Nabuchodonosor, "There is no need 17 for us to defend ourselves before you in this matter. If our God, whom we serve, can save us from the white-hot furnace and 18 from your hands, O king, may he save us! But even if he will not, know, O king, that we will not serve your god or worship the golden statue which you set up." 19 Nabuchodonosor's face became livid with utter rage against Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago. He ordered the furnace to be 20 heated seven times more than usual | and had some of the strongest men in his army bind Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago 21 and cast them into the white-hot furnace. They were bound and cast into the white-hot furnace with their coats, hats, shoes 22 and other garments, | for the king's order was urgent. So huge a fire was kindled in the furnace that the flames devoured the 23 men who threw Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago into it. But these three fell, bound, into the midst of the white-hot furnace.
24 They walked about in the flames, singing to God and blessing 25 the Lord. In the fire Azaria stood up and prayed aloud: 26 "Blessed are you, and praiseworthy, O Lord, the God of our 27 fathers, and glorious forever is your name. | For you are just in all you have done; all your deeds are faultless, all your ways 28 right, and all your judgments proper. | You have executed proper judgments in all that you have brought upon us and upon Jerusalem, the holy city of our fathers. By a proper judg-29 ment you have done all this because of our sins; | for we have sinned and transgressed by departing from you, and we have 30 done every kind of evil. | Your commandments we have not heeded or observed, nor have we done as you ordered us for 31 our good. | Therefore all you have brought upon us, all you
32 have done to us, you have done by a proper judgment. | You have handed us over to our enemies, lawless and hateful rebels; 33 to an unjust king, the worst in all the world. | Now we cannot open our mouths; we, your servants, who revere you, have become a shame and a reproach.
34 For your name's sake, do not deliver us up forever, or make 35 void your covenant. | Do not take away your mercy from us, for the sake of Abraham, your beloved, Isaac your servant, and 36 Israel your holy one, | to whom you promised to multiply their offspring like the stars of heaven, or the sand on the shore 37 of the sea. | For we are reduced, O Lord, beyond any other nation, brought low everywhere in the world this day because 38 of our sins. | We have in our day no prince, prophet, or leader, no holocaust, sacrifice, oblation, or incense, no place to offer 39 first fruits, to find favor with you. | But with contrite heart and 40 humble spirit let us be received: | as though it were holocausts of rams and bullocks, or thousands of fat lambs, so let our sacrifice be in your presence today as we follow you unreservedly; 41 for those who trust in you cannot be put to shame. | And now we follow you with our whole heart, we fear you and we pray 42 to you. | Do not let us be put to shame, but deal with us in 43 your kindness and great mercy. | Deliver us by your wonders, 44 and bring glory to your name, O Lord: | let all those be routed who inflict evils on your servants; let them be shamed and 45 powerless, and their strength broken; | let them know that you alone are the Lord God, glorious over the whole world." 46 Now the king's men who had thrown them in continued to stroke the furnace with brimstone, pitch, tow, and faggots.

47.48 The flames rose forty-nine cubits above the furnace, and 49 spread out, burning the Chaldeans nearby. But the angel of the Lord went down into the furnace with Azaria and his 50 companions, drove the fiery flames out of the furnace, | and made the inside of the furnace as though a dew-laden breeze were blowing through it. The fire in no way touched them or 51 caused them pain or harm. Then these three in the furnace with one voice sang, glorifying and blessing God: 52 "Blessed are you, O Lord, the God of our fathers, praiseworthy and exalted above all forever; and blessed is your holy and glorious name, praiseworthy and exalted above all for all 53 ages. | Blessed are you in the temple of your holy glory, praise-54 worthy and glorious above all forever. | Blessed are you on the throne of your kingdom, praiseworthy and exalted above all 55 forever. | Blessed are you who look into the depths from your throne upon the cherubim, praiseworthy and exalted above all 56 forever. | Blessed are you in the firmament of heaven, praiseworthy and glorious forever.
57 Bless the Lord, all you works of the Lord, praise and exalt

Hearing them sing, and astonished at seeing them alive, |
91 king Nabuchodonosor rose in haste and asked his nobles, "Did we not cast three men bound into the fire?" "Assuredly, O king," 92 they answered. | "But," he replied, "I see four men unfettered and unhurt, walking in the fire, and the fourth looks like a son 93 of God." Then Nabuchodonosor came to the opening of the white-hot furnace and called to Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago: "Servants of the most high God, come out." Thereupon Sidrach, 94 Misach, and Abdenago came out of the fire. When the satraps, prefects, governors, and nobles of the king came together, they saw that the fire had had no power over the bodies of these men; not a hair of their heads had been singed, nor were their garments altered; there was not even a smell of fire about them.
95 Nabuchodonosor exclaimed, "Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago, who sent his angel to deliver the servants that trusted in him; they disobeyed the royal command and yielded their bodies rather than serve or worship any god except 96 their own God. Therefore I decree for nations and peoples of every language that whoever blasphemes the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago shall be cut to pieces and his house destroyed. For there is no other God who can rescue like this."
97 Then the king promoted Sidrach, Misach, and Abdenago in the province of Babylon.

98 Vision of the Great Tree King Nabuchodonosor to the nations and peoples of every language, wherever they dwell on 99 earth: abundant peace! It has seemed good to me to publish the signs and wonders which the most high God has accomplished in my regard.
100 How great are his signs, how mighty his wonders; his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion endures through all generations.

1 I, Nabuchodonosor, was at home in my palace, content and 2 prosperous. I had a terrifying dream as I lay in bed, and the 3, 92: A son of God: a frequent biblical term for angel.

3, 93: Most high God: this was the title used by Jews living abroad to differentiate between the one true God and pagan gods. On the lips of a pagan, it meant the name of one more god, the god of the Jews. It is used again in v. 99.

3, 98—4, 34: This passage resembles a letter from Nabuchodonosor to his subjects.

3 images and the visions of my mind frightened me. So I issued a decree that all the wise men of Babylon should be brought 4 before me to give the interpretation of the dream. When the magicians, enchanters, Chaldeans, and astrologers had come in,
I related the dream before them; but none of them could tell 5 me its meaning. Finally there came before me Daniel, whose name is Baltassar after the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy God. I repeated the dream to him: | 6 "Baltassar, chief of the magicians, I know that the spirit of the holy God is in you and no mystery is too difficult for you; tell me the meaning of the visions that I saw in my dream.
7 "These were the visions I saw while in bed: I saw a tree of 8 great height at the center of the world. It was large and strong, with its top touching the heavens, and it could be seen to the 9 ends of the earth. Its leaves were beautiful and its fruit abundant, providing food for all. Under it the wild beasts found shade, in its branches the birds of the air nested; all men 10 ate of it. In the vision I saw while in bed, a holy sentinel came 11 down from heaven, | and cried out:
" 'Cut down the tree and lop off its branches, strip off its leaves and scatter its fruit; let the beasts flee its shade, and the 12 birds its branches. | But leave in the earth its stump and roots, fettered with iron and bronze, in the grass of the field. Let him be bathed with the dew of heaven; his lot be to eat, among 13 beasts, the grass of the earth. | Let his mind be changed from the human; let him be given the sense of a beast, till seven years 14 pass over him. | By decree of the sentinels is this decided, by order of the holy ones, this sentence; that all who live may know that the Most High rules over the kingdom of men: he can give it to whom he will, or set over it the lowliest of men.' 15 "This is the dream that I, king Nabuchodonosor, had. Now, Baltassar, tell me its meaning. Although none of the wise men in my kingdom can tell me the meaning, you can, because the spirit of the holy God is in you." 16 Then Daniel, whose name was Baltassar, was appalled for a while, terrified by his thoughts. "Baltassar," the king said to 4, 4: The inspired author may again be satirizing the pagan magicians who never show up favorably in their own field of specialization. See 2, 10 n.

4, 5: See 1, 7 for the change of Daniel's name.

4, 10: A holy sentinel: the author makes him play the role of the angel of the Lord as in older biblical texts. In all the Bible this term is found only here.

4, 12: The sudden switch of images from "tree" to "him" is characteristic of apocalyptic style.

17 him, "let not the dream or its meaning terrify you." "My lord," Baltassar replied, "this dream should be for your enemies, and its meaning for your foes. The large, strong tree that you saw, with its top touching the heavens, that could be seen by the 18 whole earth, | which had beautiful foliage and abundant fruit, providing food for all, under which the wild beasts lived, and 19 in whose branches the birds of the air dwelt— | you are that tree, O king, large and strong! Your majesty has become so great as to touch the heavens, and your rule extends over the whole earth.
20 As for the king's vision of a holy sentinel that came down from heaven and proclaimed: 'Cut down the tree and destroy it, but leave in the earth its stump and roots, fettered with iron and bronze in the grass of the field; let him be bathed with the dew of heaven, and let his lot be among wild beasts till seven 21 years pass over him'—this is its meaning, O king; this is the sentence which the Most High has passed upon my lord king: 22 You shall be cast out from among men and dwell with wild beasts; you shall be given grass to eat like an ox and be bathed with the dew of heaven; seven years shall pass over you, until you know that the Most High rules over the kingdom of men 23 and gives it to whom he will. The command that the stump and roots of the tree are to be left means that your kingdom shall be preserved for you, once you have learned it is heaven 24 that rules. Therefore, O king, take my advice; atone for your sins by good deeds, and for your misdeeds by kindness to the poor; then your prosperity will be long." 25.26 All this happened to king Nabuchodonosor. Twelve months later, as he was walking on the roof of the royal palace 27 in Babylon, | the king said, "Babylon the great! Was it not I, with my great strength, who built it as a royal residence for 28 my splendor and majesty?" While these words were still on the king's lips, a voice spoke from heaven, "It has been decreed for you, king Nabuchodonosor, that your kingdom is taken from 29 you! You shall be cast out from among men, and shall dwell with wild beasts; you shall be given grass to eat like an ox, and 4, 22: The form of insanity, in consequence of which a person acts like a wolf, is called lycanthropy.

4, 29-33: It is historically certain that Nabuchodonosor was not mentally unbalanced. Perhaps the best explanation given by modern interpreters is this: the inspired storyteller intentionally identifies Nabuchodonosor with Nabonidus, the last Babylonian king. Even at the time of the writing of Daniel in the second century B.C., "ancient" enemies had, in inscriptions, discredited Nabonidus as an incompetent ruler of poor health. For instance, a "prayer of Nabonidus" was found among the Dead Sea Scrolls that speaks of an illness from which Nab-seven years shall pass over you, until you learn that the Most High rules over the kingdom of men and gives it to whom he 30 will." | At once this was fulfilled. Nabuchodonosor was cast out from among men, he ate grass like an ox, and his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until his hair grew like the feathers of an eagle, and his nails like the claws of a bird.

31 When this period was over, I, Nabuchodonosor, raised my eyes to heaven; my reason was restored to me, and I blessed the Most High, I praised and glorified him who lives forever.
His dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom 32 endures through all generations. | All who live on the earth are counted as nothing; he does as he pleases with the powers of heaven as well as with those who live on the earth. There is no one who can stay his hand or say to him, "What have you done?"
33 At the same time my reason returned to me, and for the glory of my kingdom, my majesty and my splendor returned to me. My nobles and lords sought me out; I was restored to 34 my kingdom, and became much greater than before. Therefore I Nabuchodonosor, now praise and exalt and glorify the King of heaven, because all his works are right and his ways just and those who walk in pride he is able to humble.

1 The Writing on the Wall King Belsassar gave a great banquet for a thousand of his lords, with whom he drank.
2 Under the influence of the wine, he ordered the gold and silver vessels which Nabuchodonosor, his father, had taken from the temple in Jerusalem, to be brought in so that the king, his lords, his wives and his entertainers might drink from them.
3 When the gold and silver vessels taken from the house of God in Jerusalem had been brought in, and while the king, his onidus had suffered for seven years in the Arabian oasis of Thema. However, according to recent studies it cannot be proven historically that Nabonidus suffered from a mental illness. The inspired author's story of the demented king may symbolize God's condemnation of Babylonian paganism.

4, 31: See Verdi's opera, Nabucco (i.e., Nabuchodonosor) which portray's the king's madness and cure.

5, 1-30: Dramatically, this is the best of the stories.

5, 1: King Belsassar: Belsassar was actually the crown prince and son of Nabonidus.

5, 2-3: The importance given to the sacred vessels here and in v. 23 is understandable in an edifying Jewish story.

5, 2: Nabuchodonosor, his father: historically, there were several kings of Babylon between Nabuchodonosor and Belsassar.

4 lords, his wives and his entertainers were drinking | wine from them, they praised their gods of gold and silver, bronze and iron, wood and stone.
5 Suddenly, opposite the lampstand, the fingers of a human hand appeared, writing on the plaster of the wall in the king's palace. When the king saw the wrist and hand that wrote, | 6 his face blanched; his thoughts terrified him, his hip joints 7 shook, and his knees knocked. The king shouted for the enchanters, Chaldeans, and astrologers to be brought in. "Whoever reads this writing and tells me what it means," he said to the wise men of Babylon, "shall be clothed in purple, wear a golden collar about his neck, and be third in the government of 8 the kingdom." But though all the king's men came in, none of them could either read the writing or tell the king what it 9 meant. Then king Belsassar was greatly terrified; his face went ashen, and his lords were thrown into confusion.
10 When the queen heard of the discussion between the king and his lords, she entered the banquet hall and said, "O king, 11 live forever! Be not troubled in mind, nor look so pale! There is a man in your kingdom in whom is the spirit of the holy God; during the lifetime of your father he was seen to have brilliant knowledge and god-like wisdom. In fact, king Nabuchodonosor, your father, made him chief of the magicians, enchanters, 12 Chaldeans, and astrologers, because of the extraordinary mind possessed by this Daniel, whom the king named Baltassar. He knew and understood how to interpret dreams, explain enigmas, and solve difficulties. Now therefore, summon Daniel to tell you what this means." 13 Then Daniel was brought into the presence of the king. The king asked him, "Are you the Daniel, the Jewish exile, whom 14 my father, the king, brought from Juda? I have heard that the spirit of God is in you, that you possess brilliant knowledge and 15 extraordinary wisdom. Now, the wise men and enchanters were brought in to me to read this writing and tell me its meaning, 16 but they could not say what the words meant. But I have heard that you can interpret dreams and solve difficulties; if you are able to read the writing and tell me what it means, you shall be clothed in purple, wear a gold collar about your neck, and be third in the government of the kingdom." 17 Daniel answered the king: "You may keep your gifts, or give

5, 4: The implication is that this was a blasphemous victory feast of the pagan gods over Yahweh. See Is 21, 5 n.

5, 10-13: Even though this scene is not meant historically, it does point up the importance given to the queen mother in oriental and Jewish circles.

your presents to someone else; but the writing I will read for 18 you, O king, and tell you what it means. The Most High God gave your father Nabuchodonosor a great kingdom and glorious 19 majesty. Because he made him so great, the nations and peoples of every language dreaded and feared him. Whomever he wished, he killed or let live; whomever he wished, he exalted or 20 humbled. But when his heart became proud and his spirit hardened by insolence, he was put down from his royal throne 21 and deprived of his glory; he was cast out from among men and was made insensate as a beast; he lived with wild asses, and ate grass like an ox; his body was bathed with the dew of heaven, until he learned that the Most High God rules over 22 the kingdom of men and appoints over it whom he will. You his son, Belsassar, have not humbled your heart, though you 23 knew all this; you have rebelled against the Lord of heaven.
You had the vessels of his temple brought before you, so that you and your nobles, your wives and your entertainers, might drink wine from them; and you praised the gods of silver and gold, bronze and iron, wood and stone, that neither see nor hear nor have intelligence. But the God in whose hand is your life-breath and the whole course of your life, you did not glorify 24 By him were the wrist and hand sent, and the writing set down.
25 "This is the writing that was inscribed: MENE, TEKEL, and 26 PERES. These words mean: | MENE, God has numbered your 27 kingdom and put an end to it; TEKEL, you have been weighed 28 on the scales and found wanting; PERES, your kingdom has been divided and given to the Medes and Persians." 29 Then by order of Belsassar they clothed Daniel in purple with a gold collar about his neck, and proclaimed him third in 30 the government of the kingdom. The same night Belsassar, the Chaldean king, was slain.

5, 18ff: This speech resembles an oracle of the older prophets against the nations insofar as it signifies that Yahweh has the right and power to punish even pagan monarchs.

5, 25: The mystery is heightened because of disconnected words in place of sentences.

5, 26: The author is not explaining literally the meaning of these Aramaic words of weights and money. He interprets them by a play on the words: Mene, connected with the verb meaning to number; Tekel with the verb meaning to weigh; Peres, with the verb meaning to divide.

5, 27: This idea resembles the Egyptian judgment scenes in which the soul of the deceased is "weighed" in the presence of the gods.

5, 28: The author's second century audience most likely understood that it was not Belsassar but Antiochus who would finally be struck down.

1 And Darius the Mede succeeded to the kingdom at the age of sixty-two.

2 In the Lions' Den Darius decided to appoint over his entire kingdom one hundred and twenty satraps, to safeguard 3 his interests; these were accountable to three supervisors, one 4 of whom was Daniel. Daniel outshone all the supervisors and satraps because an extraordinary spirit was in him, and the king thought of giving him authority over the entire kingdom.
5 Therefore the supervisors and satraps tried to find grounds for accusation against Daniel as regards the administration. But they could accuse him of no wrong-doing; because he was trustworthy, no fault of neglect or misconduct was to be found 6 in him. Then these men said to themselves, "We shall find no grounds for accusation against this Daniel unless by way of the 7 law of his God." So these supervisors and satraps went thronging to the king and said to him: "King Darius, live forever! | 8 All the supervisors of the kingdom, the prefects, satraps, nobles, and governors are agreed that the following prohibition ought to be put in force by royal decree: no one is to address any petition to god or man for thirty days, except to you, O king; 9 otherwise he shall be cast into a den of lions. Now, O king, issue the prohibition over your signature, immutable and irrevo-10 cable under Mede and Persian law." So king Darius signed the prohibition and made it law.
11 Even after Daniel heard that this law had been signed, he continued his custom of going home to kneel in prayer and give thanks to his God in the upper chamber three times a day, with 12 the windows open toward Jerusalem. So these men rushed in 13 and found Daniel praying and pleading before his God. Then they went to remind the king about the prohibition: "Did you not decree, O king, that no one is to address a petition to god or man for thirty days, except to you, O king; otherwise he shall be cast into a den of lions?" The king answered them, "The 6, 1: Darius the Mede: he is not known in secular history.

6, 2: It is historically true that Darius the Persian organized the administration of the Persian empire, but the empire never had one hundred and twenty, but from twenty to thirty satraps.

6, 8: Cast into a den of lions: the implied dreadful thought is that the privation of burial was disgraceful not only to Jews, but to other Orientals.

6, 9: Immutable and irrevocable: the idea is repeated in vv. 13 and 16; Est 1, 19; 8, 8.

6, 11: This informative verse says that Jewish prayer was offered while kneeling, "three times a day," and "toward Jerusalem."

decree is absolute, irrevocable under the Mede and Persian law." 14 | To this they replied, "Daniel, the Jewish exile, has paid no attention to you, O king, or to the decree you issued; three times 15 a day he offers his prayer." The king was deeply grieved at this news and he made up his mind to save Daniel; he worked till 16 sunset to rescue him. But these men insisted. "Keep in mind, O king," they said, "that under the Mede and Persian law every 17 royal prohibition or decree is irrevocable." So the king ordered Daniel to be brought and cast into the lions' den. To Daniel he said, "May your God, whom you serve so constantly, save you." 18 To forestall any tampering, the king sealed with his own ring and the rings of the lords the stone that had been brought to block the opening of the den.
19 Then the king returned to his palace for the night; he refused to eat and he dismissed the entertainers. Since sleep was im-20 possible for him, the king rose very early the next morning and 21 hastened to the lions' den. As he drew near, he cried out to Daniel sorrowfully, "Daniel, servant of the living God, has the God whom you serve so constantly been able to save you from 22 the lions?" Daniel answered the king: "O king, live forever!
23 | My God has sent his angel and closed the lions' mouths so that they have not hurt me. For I have been found innocent before him; neither to you have I done any harm, O king!" 24 This gave the king great joy. At his order Daniel was removed 25 from the den, unhurt because he trusted in his God. The king then ordered the men who had accused Daniel, along with their children and their wives, to be cast into the lions' den. Before they reached the bottom of the den, the lions overpowered them and crushed all their bones.
26 Then king Darius wrote to the nations and peoples of every language, wherever they dwell on the earth: "All peace to you!
27 I decree that throughout my royal domain the God of Daniel is to be reverenced and feared:

"For he is the living God, enduring forever; his kingdom shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be without end.
28 He is a deliverer and savior, working signs and wonders in 6, 17-18: The lions' den: a deep pit blocked with a stone.

6, 18: For the ring used as one's signature, see Gn 38, 18 n.

6, 23: This scene symbolically interprets the author's audience: it must have viewed Daniel as the personification of the Jewish people persecuted by Antiochus, but protected by Yahweh and finally declared innocent.

6, 25: Compare this with the Book of Esther where the anti-Semitic Persians are enmeshed by their own snares.

heaven and on earth, and he delivered Daniel from the lions' power." 29 So Daniel fared well during the reign of Darius and the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

II. DANIEL'S VISIONS

7 1 Vision of the Four Beasts In the first year of king Belsassar of Babylon, Daniel had a dream as he lay in bed, and was terrified by the visions of his mind. Then he wrote down 2 the dream; the account began: In the vision I saw during the night, suddenly the four winds of heaven stirred up the great 3 sea, | from which emerged four immense beasts, each different 4 from the others. The first was like a lion, but with eagle's wings.
While I watched, the wings were plucked; it was raised from the ground to stand on two feet like a man, and given a human 5 mind. The second was like a bear; it was raised up on one side, and among the teeth in its mouth were three tusks. It was given 6 the order, "Up, devour much flesh." | After this I looked and saw another beast, like a leopard; on its back were four wings like those of a bird, and it had four heads. To this beast 7 dominion was given. After this, in the visions of the night I saw the fourth beast, different from all the others, terrifying, horrible, and of extraordinary strength; it had great iron teeth with which it devoured and crushed, and what was left it 8 trampled with its feet. I was considering the ten horns it had, when suddenly another, a little horn, sprang out of their midst,

7—12: For a proper understanding of these "visions," see the Introduction to the Book of Daniel.

7, 3-8: The four beasts represent the four empires of the Babylonians, the Medes, the Persians, and the Greeks, as does the statue in ch. 2. See 2, 32-33 n.

7, 2: The great sea: according to primitive ideas, the ocean beneath the earth contained mythological creatures symbolizing chaos which God conquered. See Jb 7, 12 n.

7, 4: Lion, but with eagle's wings: a familiar symbol of the Babylonian empire.

7, 5: Three tusks: the symbolism is uncertain.

7, 7-8: Most biblical critics agree that the "fourth beast" with its ten horns is the Seleucid king of Syria, and that the "little horn" is Antiochus Epiphanes.

7, 8: "Horns" symbolized destructive power and, finally, divinity, which is why the decorative headgear of the Assyrian and Babylonian kings had horns. Three of the previous horns were torn away to make room for it: Antiochus does away with the last three kings prior to himself (see the interpretation in 7, 24 n). This horn had eyes . . . mouth: the horn is a part which stands for the whole beast.

and three of the previous horns were torn away to make room for it. This horn had eyes like a man, and a mouth that spoke arrogantly.
9 As I watched, thrones were set up and the Ancient One took his throne. His clothing was snow bright, and the hair on his head as white as wool; his throne was flames of fire, with 10 wheels of burning fire. | A surging stream of fire flowed out from where he sat; thousands upon thousands were ministering to him, and myriads upon myriads attended him.
11 The court was convened, and the books were opened.
I watched, then, from the first of the arrogant words which the horn spoke, until the beast was slain and its body thrown into 12 the fire to be burnt up. The other beasts, which also lost their dominion, were granted a prolongation of life for a time and a season.
13 As the visions during the night continued, I saw one like a son of man coming, on the clouds of heaven; when he reached 14 the Ancient One and was presented before him, | he received dominion, glory, and kingship; nations and peoples of every language serve him. His dominion is an everlasting dominion that shall not be taken away, his kingship shall not be destroyed.
15 I, Daniel, found my spirit anguished within its sheath of flesh 16 and I was terrified by the visions of my mind. I approached one of those present and asked him what all this meant in truth.
In answer, he made known to me the meaning of the things: 17 "These four great beasts stand for four kingdoms which shall 18 arise on the earth. But the holy ones of the Most High shall receive the kingship, to possess it forever and ever."

7, 9f: The Ancient One: God. Fire: common biblical symbol of judgment.

7, 11: Antiochus is slain.

7, 13f: Just as in ch. 2, 44-45, the kingdoms of this world are replaced by the Kingdom of God, which is here represented by a man "one like a son of man."

7, 16-18: Daniel approaches (v. 16) one of the ministers of v. 10. In v. 18 the author identifies the "one like a son of man" (of v. 13) as "the holy ones," i.e., an individual-collective figure. At the time of the Machabees, when the author of Daniel was writing, the hope for the continuity of Davidic kings from whom one king would emerge as the Messia was dying out. Hence, the author is looking ahead to the Messianic age when God Himself will be the Head of His Messianic Kingdom of saints. To convey this Messianic idea, the author takes his lead from the beasts who, coming from below, are individual-collective representatives (vv. 17 and 23). For this reason, the author makes the individual-collective Messianic figure come from above "on the clouds of heaven" (v. 13). See table: Prophetic and Apocalyptic Messianism, p. 1314.

19 But I wished to make certain about the fourth beast, so very terrible and different from the others, devouring and crushing with its iron teeth and bronze claws, and trampling with its 20 feet what was left; about the ten horns on its head, and the other one that sprang up, before which three horns fell; about the horn with the eyes and the mouth that spoke arrogantly, 21 which appeared greater than its fellows. For, as I watched, that horn made war against the holy ones and was victorious | 22 until the Ancient One arrived; judgment was pronounced in favor of the holy ones of the Most High, and the time came 23 when the holy ones possessed the kingdom. He answered me thus:

"The fourth beast shall be a fourth kingdom on earth, different from all the others; it shall devour the whole earth, 24 beat it down, and crush it. | The ten horns shall be ten kings rising out of that kingdom; another shall rise up after them, different from those before him, who shall lay low three kings. | 25 He shall speak against the Most High and oppress the holy ones of the Most High, thinking to change the feast days and the law. They shall be handed over to him for a year, two years, 26 and a half-year. | But when the court is convened, and his 27 power is taken away by final and absolute destruction, | then the kingship and dominion and majesty of all the kingdoms under the heavens shall be given to the holy people of the Most High, whose kingdom shall be everlasting: all dominions shall serve and obey him."

28 The report concluded: I, Daniel, was greatly terrified by my thoughts, and my face blanched, but I kept the matter to myself.

8

1 Vision of the Ram and He-goat After this first vision, I, Daniel, had another, in the third year of the reign of king

7, 19-23: See 7, 7-8 n.

7, 24: Seven "kings" preceded Antiochus. The three whom he ousted are probably his two nephews and Heliodorus. (See 2 Mc 3, 40 n.)

7, 25: This verse describes the persecution by Antiochus. See 1 Mc 1, 32-64. For a year, two years, and a half-year: three and one-half years. A round number, forecasting the length and end of the persecution by Antiochus. See 9, 27 n.

7, 27: The meaning of ch. 7 is: God condemns Antiochus, and the Jews will triumph ("holy people").

7, 28: This verse ends the Aramaic part of the Book of Daniel, begun in 2, 4.

8, 1-27: Instead of the dream of four beasts (ch. 7), here is a vision of only two, conveying the same doctrine in simpler form.

2 Belsassar. In my vision I saw myself in the fortress of Susa 3 in the province of Elam; I was beside the river Ulai. | I looked up and saw standing by the river a ram with two great horns, 4 the one larger and newer than the other. I saw the ram butting toward the west, north, and south. No beast could withstand it or be rescued from its power; it did what it pleased and became very powerful.
5 As I was reflecting, a he-goat with a prominent horn on its forehead suddenly came from the west across the whole earth 6 without touching the ground. It approached the two-horned ram I had seen standing by the river, and rushed toward it with 7 savage force. I saw it attack the ram with furious blows when they met, and break both its horns. It threw the ram, which had not the force to withstand it, to the ground, and trampled upon it; and no one could rescue it from its power.
8 The he-goat became very powerful, but at the height of its power the great horn was shattered, and in its place came up 9 four others, facing the four winds of heaven. Out of one of them came a little horn which kept growing toward the south 10 the east, and the glorious country. Its power extended to the host of heaven, so that it cast down to earth some of the host 11 and some of the stars and trampled on them. It boasted even against the prince of the host, from whom it removed the daily 12 sacrifice, and whose sanctuary it cast down, | as well as the host, while sin replaced the daily sacrifice. It cast truth to the ground, and was succeeding in its undertaking.
13 I heard a holy one speaking, and another said to whichever one it was that spoke, "How long shall the events of this vision last concerning the daily sacrifice, the desolating sin which is 14 placed there, the sanctuary, and the trampled host?" | He 8, 2: Fortress of Susa: the Persian royal palace in ancient Elam, east of Babylon.

8, 3: A ram with two great horns: the conquering empire of the Medes and Persians (v. 4).

8, 5-11: See explanation in vv. 20-22. A he-goat: the empire of Alexander (v. 21). The he-goat defeats the ram (the Medes and Persians; vv. 6-7). The shattered horn, broken into four pieces, represents the splitting up of the empire after Alexander's death (v. 8). The "little horn" is Antiochus Epiphanes; the "glorious country" is Palestine (v. 9). The "host" and their "casting down" are not clear (v. 10). The "prince" must be Yahweh Himself. The reference is to the abolition of the Jewish sacrifices (1 Mc 1, 45).

8, 12-14: These are obscure except that "the desolating sin" refers to the statue Antiochus placed in the temple (2 Mc 6, 2).

8, 14: Two thousand three hundred: scholars cannot decipher this enigma.

answered him, "For two thousand three hundred evenings and mornings; then the sanctuary shall be purified." 15 While I, Daniel, sought the meaning of the vision I had seen, 16 a manlike figure stood before me, | and on the Ulai I heard a human voice that cried out, "Gabriel, explain the vision to this 17 man." When he came near where I was standing, I fell prostrate in terror. But he said to me, "Understand, son of man, that the 18 vision refers to the end time." As he spoke to me, I fell forward 19 in a faint; he touched me and made me stand up. "I will show you," he said, "what is to happen later in the period of wrath; for at the appointed time, there will be an end.
20 "The two-horned ram you saw represents the kings of the 21 Medes and Persians. The he-goat is the king of the Greeks, 22 and the great horn on its forehead is the first king. The four that rose in its place when it was broken are four kingdoms that will issue from his nation, but without his strength.
23 "After their reign, when sinners have reached their measure, 24 there shall arise a king, impudent and skilled in intrigue. | He shall be strong and powerful, bring about fearful ruin, and suc-25 ceed in his undertaking. He shall destroy powerful peoples; | his cunning shall be against the holy ones, his treacherous conduct shall succeed. He shall be proud of heart and destroy many by stealth. But when he rises against the prince of princes, he 26 shall be broken without a hand being raised. | The vision of the evenings and the mornings is true, as spoken; do you, however, keep this vision undisclosed, because the days are to be many." 27 I, Daniel, was weak and ill for some days; then I arose and took care of the king's affairs. But I was appalled at the vision, which I could not understand.

1 Gabriel and the Seventy Weeks It was the first year that Darius, son of Xerxes, of the race of the Medes, reigned over 2 the kingdom of the Chaldeans; in the first year of his reign I, Daniel, tried to understand in the Scriptures the counting of the years of which the Lord spoke to the prophet Jeremia: that for the ruins of Jerusalem seventy years must be fulfilled.
3 I turned to the Lord God, pleading in earnest prayer, with 8, 16: Gabriel: the first mention of the angel in the Bible.

9, 1: Darius: See 6, 1 n.

9, 2: Seventy years: Jer 25, 11 n; 29, 10 predicted the span of the Babylonian exile in round numbers. Prophets hardly ever predict with mathematical precision.

9, 3-20: Daniel's prayer is like Azaria's (3, 26-45), a lament on "the sin of my people Israel" (v. 20).

4 fasting, sackcloth, and ashes. I prayed to the Lord, my God, and confessed, "Ah, Lord, great and awesome God, you who keep your merciful covenant toward those who love you and 5 observe your commandments! We have sinned, been wicked and done evil; we have rebelled and departed from your com-6 mandments and your laws. We have not obeyed your servants the prophets, who spoke in your name to our kings, our princes, 7 our fathers, and all the people of the land. Justice, O Lord, is on your side; we are shamefaced even to this day: the men of Juda, the residents of Jerusalem, and all Israel, near and far, in all the countries to which you have scattered them because of 8 their treachery toward you. O Lord, we are shamefaced, like our kings, our princes, and our fathers, for having sinned 9 against you. But yours, O Lord, our God, are compassion and 10 forgiveness! Yet we rebelled against you | and paid no heed to your command, O Lord, our God, to live by the law you gave 11 us through your servants the prophets. Because all Israel transgressed your law and went astray, not heeding your voice, the sworn malediction, recorded in the law of Moses, the servant of 12 God, was poured out over us for our sins. You carried out the threats you spoke against us and against those who governed us, by bringing upon us in Jerusalem the greatest calamity that 13 has ever occurred under heaven. As it is written in the law of Moses, this calamity came full upon us. As we did not appease the Lord, our God, by turning back from our wickedness and 14 recognizing his constancy, so the Lord kept watch over the calamity and brought it upon us. You, O Lord, our God, are just in all that you have done, for we did not listen to your voice.
15 "Now, O Lord, our God, who led your people out of the land of Egypt with a strong hand, and made a name for yourself 16 even to this day, we have sinned, we are guilty. O Lord, in keeping with all your just deeds, let your anger and your wrath be turned away from your city Jerusalem, your holy mountain.
On account of our sins and the crimes of our fathers, Jerusalem and your people have become the reproach of all our neighbors.
17 Hear, therefore, O God, the prayer and petition of your servant; and for your own sake, O Lord, let your face shine upon your 18 desolate sanctuary. Give ear, O my God, and listen; open your eyes and see our ruins and the city which bears your name.
When we present our petition before you, we rely not on our 19 just deeds, but on your great mercy. ! O Lord, hear! O Lord, 9, 13: As it is written: the first use of this expression in the Bible.

pardon! O Lord, be attentive and act without delay, for your own sake, O my God, because this city and your people bear your name!"
20 I was still occupied with my prayer, confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, presenting my petition to the Lord, 21 my God, on behalf of his holy mountain— | I was still occupied with this prayer, when Gabriel, the one whom I had seen before in vision, came to me in rapid flight at the time of the 22 evening sacrifice. He instructed me in these words: "Daniel, I 23 have now come to give you understanding. When you began your petition, an answer was given which I have come to announce, because you are beloved. Therefore, mark the answer and understand the vision.
24 "Seventy weeks are decreed for your people and for your holy city: then transgression will stop and sin will end, guilt will be expiated, everlasting justice will be introduced, vision and 25 prophecy ratified, and a most holy will be anointed. | Know and understand this: from the utterance of the word that Jerusalem was to be rebuilt until one who is anointed and a leader, there shall be seven weeks. During sixty-two weeks it shall be rebuilt, 26 with streets and trenches, in time of affliction. | After the sixty-two weeks an anointed shall be cut down when he does not possess the city; and the people of a leader who will come shall destroy the sanctuary. Then the end shall come like a torrent; until the end there shall be war, the desolation that is decreed.

9, 21: Gabriel . . . seen before in vision: refers to 8, 16. Evening sacrifice: about 3:00 to 4:00 P.M.

9, 24: Seventy weeks: because of the persecution of Antiochus, the author of Daniel figures that in a sense the exile of seventy years predicted by Jeremia (see 9, 2 n) is not over. It will end only with victory over Antiochus. Hence, he prolongs the seventy years of Jeremia to seventy weeks of years, i.e., four hundred ninety years. A most holy will be anointed: the "seventy weeks" period will end with the cessation of Antiochus' persecutions and with the reconsecration of the temple.

9, 25: From the utterance of the word . . . rebuilt . . . seven weeks: from Jeremia's prophecy of the length of the exile, which was forty-nine years, "seven weeks" of years. Until one who is anointed and a leader: Cyrus the Persian king who ended the exile, and allowed the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the temple. During sixty-two weeks: Jerusalem will remain rebuilt for "sixty-two weeks" of years, i.e., four hundred thirty-four years.

9, 26: An anointed shall be cut down: a reference to Onias III who was murdered in 171 (?) B.C. (2 Mc 4, 33ff). As the seventy years of Jeremia represented a round number, so do the "seventy weeks" of years. And the people of a leader: the followers of Antiochus who resemble a "torrent."

27 | For one week he shall make a firm compact with the many; half the week he shall abolish sacrifice and oblation; on the temple wing shall be the horrible abomination until the ruin that is decreed is poured out upon the horror."

1 Vision of the Hellenistic Wars In the third year of Cyrus, king of Persia, a revelation was given to Daniel, who had been named Baltassar. The revelation was certain: a great 2 war; he understood it from the vision. In those days, I, Daniel, 3 mourned three full weeks. I ate no savory food, I took no meat or wine, and I did not anoint myself at all until the end of the three weeks.
4 On the twenty-fourth day of the first month I was on the 5 bank of the great river, the Tigris. As I looked up, I saw a man 6 dressed in linen with a belt of fine gold around his waist. His body was like chrysolite, his face shone like lightning, his eyes were like fiery torches, his arms and feet looked like burnished 7 bronze, and his voice sounded like the roar of a multitude. I alone, Daniel, saw the vision; but great fear seized the men who were with me; they fled and hid themselves, although they 8 did not see the vision. | So I was left alone, seeing this great vision. No strength remained in me; I turned the color of death 9 and was powerless. When I heard the sound of his voice, I fell face forward in a faint.
10 But then a hand touched me, raising me to my hands and 11 knees. "Daniel, beloved," he said to me, "understand the words

9, 27: For one week: seven years. He: Antiochus. Shall make a firm compact with the many: many Jews shared the Hellenizing views of Antiochus (1 Mc 1, 30). Half the week: the last three and one-half years of the last seven years. Horrible abomination: a literal translation of what is traditionally translated as "the abomination of desolation." It is used also in 11, 31; 12, 11; 1 Mc 1, 57. It was either an altar or a statue of the god Zeus Ouranios ("lord of heaven") probably with the features of Antiochus himself. Until the ruin . . . upon the horror: the "abomination" will remain until Antiochus dies in 163. Of the more than one hundred theories to explain the prophecy of seventy weeks, the Machabean explanation presented above is the most prevalent. In a capsule, the author of Daniel says: once the historical events are verified (vv. 25-27), it will serve as a sign that the Messianic times will arrive (v. 24), i.e., some time after the end of the "seventy weeks." The author did not predict the date of Christ's birth, but the arrival of the Messianic community (see 7, 16-18 n), and this is corroborated by the fact that no New Testament writer ever quoted Daniel's text in this sense.

10—13: This fourth and last vision describes the kingdoms of the world from Cyrus to Antiochus.

10, 5-6: Most probably the same angel Gabriel of 9, 21.

which I am speaking to you; stand up, for my mission now is 12 to you." When he said this to me, I stood up trembling. "Fear not, Daniel," he continued; "from the first day you made up your mind to acquire understanding and humble yourself before God, your prayer was heard. Because of it I started out, 13 | but the prince of the kingdom of Persia stood in my way for twenty-one days, until finally Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me. I left him there with the prince of the kings 14 of Persia, | and came to make you understand what shall happen to your people in the days to come; for there is yet a vision concerning those days."

15 While he was speaking thus to me, I fell forward and kept 16 silent. Then something like a man's hand touched my lips;
I opened my mouth and said to the one facing me, "My lord, 17 I was seized with pangs at the vision and I was powerless. How can my lord's servant speak with you, my lord? For now no 18 strength or even breath is left in me." The one who looked like 19 a man touched me again and strengthened me, saying, "Fear 20 not, beloved, you are safe; take courage and be strong." When he spoke to me, I grew strong and said, "Speak, my lord, for you have strengthened me." "Do you know," he asked, "why I have come to you? Soon I must fight the prince of Persia again.
21 When I leave, the prince of Greece will come; but I shall tell you what is written in the truthful book.

11

"No one supports me against all these except Michael, your 1 prince, | standing as a reinforcement and a bulwark for me.
2 Now I shall tell you the truth.

"Three kings of Persia are yet to come; and a fourth shall acquire the greatest riches of all. Strengthened by his riches, 3 he shall rouse all the kingdom of Greece. But a powerful king 10, 12: Your prayer: Daniel was praying for his nation.

10, 13: The guardian angel ("the prince") of Persia was dutifully preventing the fall of Persia by obstructing Gabriel from delivering his message to Daniel till Michael, the guardian angel of Juda ("your prince" v. 21), cleared the way. The "twenty-one days" of prevention correspond to Daniel's "three weeks" of fast (v. 3).

10, 20: Soon I must fight the prince of Persia again: Gabriel will have sad news of the imminent fall of Persia and will therefore be resisted in delivering it. When I leave, the prince of Greece will come: then, the guardian angel of Greece will be happy because of Greece's victories over Persia. All this is explained further in 11, 2ff.

11, 2: Three kings of Persia are yet to come: after Cyrus. A fourth: most probably Xerxes I is meant.

11, 3: A powerful king: Alexander the Great destroyed the Persian empire at Issus in 333 B.C.

shall appear and rule with great might, doing as he pleases.
4 No sooner shall he appear than his kingdom shall be broken and divided in the four directions under heaven; but not among his descendants or in keeping with his mighty rule, for his kingdom shall be torn to pieces and belong to others than they.
5 "The king of the south shall grow strong, but one of his princes shall grow stronger still and govern a domain greater 6 than his. After some years they shall become allies: the daughter of the king of the south shall come to the king of the north in the interest of peace. But her bid for power shall fail: and her line shall not be recognized, and she shall be given up, together with those who brought her, her son and her husband. But 7 later | a descendant of her line shall succeed to his rank, and shall come against the rampart and enter the stronghold of the 8 king of the north, and conquer them. Even their gods, with their molten images and their precious vessels of silver and gold, he shall carry away as booty into Egypt. For years he shall have 9 nothing to do with the king of the north. Then the latter shall invade the land of the king of the south, and return to his own country.
10 "But his sons shall prepare and assemble a great armed host, which shall advance like a flood, then withdraw. When it re-11 turns and surges around the stronghold, | the king of the south, provoked, shall go out to fight against the king of the north, whose great host shall make a stand but shall be given 12 into his hand | and be carried off. In the pride of his heart, he 13 shall lay low tens of thousands, but he shall not triumph. For the king of the north shall raise another army, greater than before; after some years he shall attack with this large army and 14 great resources. In those times many shall resist the king of the south, and outlaws of your people shall rise up in fulfillment of 15 vision, but they shall fail. When the king of the north comes,

11, 4: After his death, Alexander's kingdom splintered into four minor kingdoms. The author focuses his interest on two only, namely, the kingdom of the Egyptian Ptolemies ("king of the south" v. 5), and the Seleucid dynasty of Syria ("king of the north" v. 7).

11, 5-9: This is a detailed history of the beginnings of the Seleucid dynasty. Seleucus, the general of Ptolemy I, eventually rules a larger empire than the Egyptian Ptolemies (v. 5).

11, 6: Antiochus II married Berenice, daughter of Ptolemy II.

11, 7-8: Ptolemy III plunders Syria.

11, 9: Seleucus II unsuccessfully invades Egypt.

11, 10-20: The author gives an account of the struggle for Palestine between the Ptolemies and the Seleucids, in which the latter are victors. The campaigns of Antiochus III the Great all over the Middle East are described in detail.

he shall set up siegeworks and take the fortified city by storm.
The power of the south shall not withstand him, and not even 16 his picked troops shall have the strength to resist. He shall attack him and do as he pleases, with no one to withstand him.
17 He shall stop in the glorious land, dealing destruction. He shall set himself to penetrate the entire strength of his kingdom. He shall conclude an agreement with him and give him a daughter in marriage in order to destroy the kingdom, but this shall not 18 succeed in his favor. He shall turn to the coastland and take many, but a leader shall put an end to his shameful conduct, so 19 that he cannot renew it against him. He shall turn to the strongholds of his own land, but shall stumble and fall, to be found 20 no more. In his stead one shall arise who will send a tax collector through the glorious kingdom, but he shall soon be destroyed, though not in conflict or in battle.
21 "There shall rise in his place a despicable person, to whom the royal insignia shall not be given. By stealth and fraud he 22 shall seize the kingdom. Armed might shall be completely overwhelmed by him and crushed, and even the prince of the cove-23 nant. After allying with him, he shall treacherously rise to power 24 with a small party. By stealth he shall enter prosperous provinces and do that which his fathers or grandfathers never did; he shall distribute spoil, booty, and riches among them and 25 devise plots against their strongholds; but only for a time. He shall call on his strength and cleverness to meet the king of the south with a great army; the king of the south shall prepare for battle with a very large and strong army, but he shall not 26 succeed because of the plots devised against him. Even his table companions shall seek to destroy him, his army shall be over-27 whelmed, and many shall fall slain. The two kings, resolved on evil, shall sit at table together and exchange lies, but they shall have no success, because the appointed end is not yet.
28 "He shall turn back toward his land with great riches, his mind set against the holy covenant; he shall arrange matters 29 and return to his land. At the time appointed he shall come 30 again to the south, but this time it shall not be as before. When ships of the Chetthim confront him, he shall lose heart and retreat. Then he shall direct his rage and energy against the 11, 30: Chetthim: the Romans.

holy covenant; those who forsake it he shall once more single 31 out. Armed forces shall move at his command and defile the sanctuary stronghold, abolishing the daily sacrifice and setting 32 up the horrible abomination. By his deceit he shall make some who were disloyal to the covenant apostatize; but those who 33 remain loyal to their God shall take strong action. The nation's wise men shall instruct the many; though for a time they will become victims of the sword, of flames, exile, and plunder.
34 When they fall, few people shall help them, but many shall 35 join them out of treachery. Of the wise men, some shall fall, so that the rest may be tested, refined, and purified, until the end time which is still appointed to come.
36 "The king shall do as he pleases, exalting himself and making himself greater than any god; he shall utter dreadful blas-phemies against the God of gods. He shall prosper only till divine wrath is ready, for what is determined must take place.
37 He shall have no regard for the gods of his ancestors or for the one in whom women delight; for no god shall he have re-38 gard, because he shall make himself greater than all. Instead he shall give glory to the god of strongholds; a god unknown to his fathers he shall glorify with gold, silver, precious stones 39 and other treasures. To defend the strongholds he shall station a people of a foreign god. Whoever acknowledges him he shall provide with abundant honor; he shall make them rule over the many and distribute the land as a reward.
40 "At the appointed time the king of the south shall come to grips with him, but the king of the north shall overwhelm him with chariots and horsemen and a great fleet, passing 41 through the countries like a flood. He shall enter the glorious land and many shall fall, except Edom, Moab, and the chief 42 part of Ammon, which shall escape from his power. He shall extend his power over the countries, and not even the land of 43 Egypt shall escape. He shall control the riches of gold and silver and all the treasures of Egypt; Libya and Ethiopia shall 44 be in his train. When news from the east and the north terrifies him, he shall set out with great fury to slay and to doom many.
45 He shall pitch the tents of his royal pavilion between the sea and the glorious holy mountain, but he shall come to his end with none to help him.

11, 45: In vv. 1-44, the inspired author described past history as veiled prophecy. He now describes Antiochus returning through Palestine, and dying between the Mediterranean "Sea" and the "holy mountain" of Jerusalem. This is a hope, not a prediction based on knowledge revealed by God. Historically, Antiochus died in Persia.

1 "At that time there shall arise Michael, the great prince, guardian of your people; it shall be a time unsurpassed in distress since nations began until that time. At that time your people shall escape, everyone who is found written in the book.
2 | Many of those who sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake;
some shall live forever, others shall be an everlasting horror 3 and disgrace. | But the wise shall shine brightly like the splendor of the firmament, and those who lead the many to justice shall be like the stars forever.
4 "As for you, Daniel, keep secret the message and seal the book until the end time; many shall fall away and evil shall increase."
5 I, Daniel, looked and saw two others, one standing on either 6 bank of the river. One of them said to the man clothed in linen, who was upstream, "How long shall it be to the end of these 7 appalling things?" The man clothed in linen, who was upstream, lifted his right and left hands to heaven; and I heard him swear by him who lives forever that it should be for a year, two years, a half-year; and that, when the power of the destroyer of the holy people was brought to an end, all these things should end.
8 I heard, but I did not understand; so I asked, "My lord, what 9 follows this?" "Go, Daniel," he said, "because the words are 10 to be kept secret and sealed until the end time. Many shall be refined, purified, and tested, but the wicked shall prove wicked; none of them shall have understanding, but the wise shall have 11 it. From the time that the daily sacrifice is abolished and the horrible abomination is set up, there shall be one thousand two 12 hundred and ninety days. Blessed is the man who has patience and perseveres until the one thousand three hundred and thirty-13 five days. Go, take your rest, you shall rise for your reward at the end of days."

12, 1: At that time: After the persecution and death of Antiochus, Michael will save those predestined ("found written in the book").

12, 2-3: This text is generally interpreted to mean the bodily resurrection of the saved. The dispute concerns whether it also teaches the bodily resurrection of the damned. See 2 Mc 7, 9 n on the resurrection.

12, 7: A year, two years, a half-year: Daniel's question, "How long shall it be to the end" (v. 6) is answered as previously. See 7, 25 n.

12, 11-12: One thousand two hundred and ninety days . . . one thousand three hundred and thirty-five days: scholars do not know the meaning of these numbers.

12, 13: The fourth vision crowns the characteristic Hebrew theology of history. History is a wild scramble for power among rivals who destroy men and things, and blaspheme God through pride and forgetfulness of God. God permits these struggles; then He steps on the

III. APPENDIX

1 Susanna's Virtue In Babylon there lived a man named 2 Joakim, who married a very beautiful and God-fearing woman 3 Susanna, the daughter of Helcia; her pious parents had trained 4 their daughter according to the law of Moses. Joakim was very rich; he had a garden near his house, and the Jews had recourse to him often because he was the most respected of them all.
5 That year, two elders of the people were appointed judges of whom the Lord said, "Wickedness has come out of Babylon from the elders who were to govern the people as judges." 6 These men, to whom all brought their cases, frequented the 7 house of Joakim. When the people left at noon, Susanna used 8 to enter her husband's garden for a walk. When the old men saw her enter every day for her walk, they began to lust for 9 her. They suppressed their consciences; they would not allow their eyes to look to heaven, and did not keep in mind just 10 judgments. Though both were enamored of her, they did not 11 tell each other their trouble, for they were ashamed to reveal 12 their lustful desire to have her. Day by day they watched eagerly 13 for her. | One day they said to each other, "Let us be off for 14 home, it is time for lunch." So they went out and parted; | but both turned back, and when they met again, they asked each other the reason. They admitted their lust, and then they agreed to look for an occasion when they could meet her alone.
15 One day, while they were waiting for the right moment, she entered the garden as usual, with two maids only. She decided 16 to bathe, for the weather was warm. Nobody else was there except the two elders, who had hidden themselves and were 17 watching her. "Bring me oil and soap," she said to the maids 18 "and shut the garden doors while I bathe." They did as she said; they shut the garden doors and left by the side gate to scene at a foreordained date to sweep them away and inaugurate His own everlasting Kingdom in which His faithful are honored.

13—14: These stories were written for the common folk; chs. 1—12 for the educated classes. The behavior of Daniel, laughing before the king (14, 7), is unheard of in chs. 1—6. The Church has always considered these chapters inspired, but the Jews and Protestants do not.

13, 1-64: The Jews transformed an eastern folktale into a religious tale. Most moderns agree it is not intended as history, but their opinions differ on the purpose. Was it written to show the evils of adultery and false testimony? Was it a Pharisee's condemnation of evil Sadducees ("the two wicked elders" of v. 28)? Regardless of the purpose, the focus of attention is not Susanna's temptation, but her victory and abandonment to God.

fetch what she had ordered, unaware that the elders were hidden inside.

19 As soon as the maids had left, the two old men got up and 20 hurried to her. "Look," they said, "the garden doors are shut, 21 and no one can see us; give in to our desire, and lie with us. If you refuse, we will testify against you that you dismissed your maids because a young man was here with you."

22 "I am completely trapped," Susanna groaned. "If I yield, 23 it will be my death; if I refuse, I cannot escape your power. Yet it is better for me to fall into your power without guilt than to 24 sin before the Lord." Then Susanna shrieked, and the old men 25 also shouted at her, as one of them ran to open the garden 26 doors. When the people in the house heard the cries from the garden, they rushed in by the side gate to see what had hap-27 pened to her. At the accusations by the old men, the servants felt very much ashamed, for never had any such thing been said about Susanna.

28 When the people came to her husband Joakim the next day, the two wicked elders also came, fully determined to put 29 Susanna to death. Before all the people they ordered: "Send for Susanna, the daughter of Helcia, the wife of Joakim."
30 When she was sent for, | she came with her parents, children
31 and all her relatives. Susanna, very delicate and beautiful, | 32 was veiled; but those wicked men ordered her to uncover her 33 face so as to sate themselves with her beauty. All her relatives and the onlookers were weeping.

34 In the midst of the people the two elders rose up and laid 35 their hands on her head. Through her tears she looked up to 36 heaven, for she trusted in the Lord wholeheartedly. | The elders made this accusation: "As we were walking in the garden alone, this woman entered with two girls and shut the doors 37 of the garden, dismissing the girls. A young man, who was 38 hidden there, came and lay with her. When we, in a corner of 39 the garden, saw this crime, we ran toward them. We saw them lying together, but the man we could not hold, because he was 40 stronger than we; he opened the doors and ran off. Then we 41 seized this one and asked who the young man was, | but she refused to tell us. We testify to this." The assembly believed them, since they were elders and judges of the people, and they condemned her to death.

42 But Susanna cried aloud: "O eternal God, you know what is hidden and are aware of all things before they come to be:
43 you know that they have testified falsely against me. Here I am about to die, though I have done none of the things with which these wicked men have charged me."

44.45 The Lord heard her prayer. As she was being led to execution, God stirred up the holy spirit of a young boy named 46 Daniel, | and he cried aloud: "I will have no part in the death 47 of this woman." All the people turned and asked him, "What 48 is this you are saying?" | He stood in their midst and continued, "Are you such fools, O Israelites! To condemn a woman of 49 Israel without examination and without clear evidence? Return to court, for they have testified falsely against her." 50 Then all the people returned in haste. To Daniel the elders said, "Come, sit with us and inform us, since God has given 51 you the prestige of old age." But he replied, "Separate these two far from one another that I may examine them." 52 After they were separated one from the other, he called one of them and said: "How you have grown evil with age! Now 53 have your past sins come to term: | passing unjust sentences, condemning the innocent, and freeing the guilty, although the Lord says, 'The innocent and the just you shall not put to 54 death.' Now, then, if you were a witness, tell me under what 55 tree you saw them together." "Under a mastic tree," he answered. "Your fine lie has cost you your head," said Daniel;
"for the angel of God shall receive the sentence from him and 56 split you in two." Putting him to one side, he ordered the other one to be brought. "Offspring of Chanaan, not of Juda," Daniel said to him, "beauty has seduced you, lust has subverted your 57 conscience. This is how you acted with the daughters of Israel, and in their fear they yielded to you; but a daughter of Juda did 58 not tolerate your wickedness. Now, then, tell me under what 59 tree you surprised them together." "Under an oak," he said.
"Your fine lie has cost you also your head," said Daniel; "for the angel of God waits with a sword to cut you in two so as to make an end of you both." 60 The whole assembly cried aloud, blessing God who saves 61 those that hope in him. They rose up against the two elders, for by their own words Daniel had convicted them of perjury.
According to the law of Moses, they inflicted on them the 62 penalty they had plotted to impose on their neighbor: | they put them to death. Thus was innocent blood spared that day.
63 Helcia and his wife praised God for their daughter Susanna, as did Joakim her husband and all her relatives, because she 64 was found innocent of any shameful deed. And from that day onward Daniel was greatly esteemed by the people.

1 Bel and the Dragon After king Astyages was gathered to his fathers, Cyrus the Persian succeeded to his kingdom.
2 Daniel was the king's favorite and was held in higher esteem 3 than any of the friends of the king. The Babylonians had an idol called Bel, and every day they provided for it six barrels 4 of fine flour, forty sheep, and six measures of wine. The king worshiped it and went every day to adore it; but Daniel adored 5 only his God. When the king asked him, | "Why do you not adore Bel?" Daniel replied, "Because I worship not idols made with hands, but only the living God who made heaven and 6 earth and has dominion over all mankind." | Then the king continued, "You do not think Bel is a living god? Do you not 7 see how much he eats and drinks every day?" Daniel began to laugh. "Do not be deceived, O king," he said; "it is only clay inside and bronze outside; it has never taken any food or drink." 8 Enraged, the king called his priests and said to them, "Unless you tell me who it is that consumes these provisions, you shall 9 die. But if you can show that Bel consumes them, Daniel shall die for blaspheming Bel." Daniel said to the king, "Let it be as 10 you say!" | There were seventy priests of Bel, besides their wives and children.

When the king went with Daniel into the temple of Bel, | 11 the priests of Bel said, "See, we are going to leave. Do you, O king, set out the food and prepare the wine; then shut the door 12 and seal it with your ring. If you do not find that Bel has eaten it all when you return in the morning, we are to die; otherwise 13 Daniel shall die for his lies against us." They were not per-the Saturday before the Fourth Sunday of Lent, paralleling the story of the woman taken in adultery from Jn 8. In both, it is a question of adultery, but in one the innocent woman is saved through justice, and in the other the guilty woman is saved through mercy.

14, 1-42: The story of Bel (vv. 1-22) and the dragon (vv. 23-42). These stories are naively disguised satires on the Egyptian religion.

14, 1: King Astyages: Cyrus the Persian defeated Astyages, the last Median king in 550 B.C.

14, 2: Another variant Greek reading is: "There was once a priest, Daniel by name, the son of Abal, a favorite of the king of Babylon." This may represent an earlier form of the story, before it was attached to the Book of Daniel.

14, 3: Bel: this was at first the name of the god of the city Nippur. Later, Bel became identified with Marduk, the supreme god of Babylon.

14, 6: Historically, king Cyrus and the pagans did not believe that idols ate and drank, but this is the final and foolish conclusion of pagan worship as seen through the eyes of an inspired Jewish writer.

turbed, because under the table they had made a secret entrance 14 through which they always came in to consume the food. After they departed the king set the food before Bel, while Daniel ordered his servants to bring some ashes, which they scattered through the whole temple; the king alone was present. Then they went outside, sealed the closed door with the king's ring, 15 and departed. The priests entered that night as usual, with their wives and children, and they ate and drank everything.
16 Early the next morning, the king came with Daniel. | 17 "Are the seals unbroken, Daniel?" he asked. And Daniel an-18 swered, "They are unbroken, O king." | As soon as he had opened the door, the king looked at the table and cried aloud, 19 "Great you are, O Bel; there is no trickery in you." But Daniel laughed and kept the king from entering. "Look at the floor," 20 he said; "whose footprints are these?" "I see the footprints of 21 men, women, and children!" said the king. The angry king arrested the priests, their wives, and their children. They showed him the secret door by which they used to enter to consume 22 what was on the table. He put them to death, and handed Bel over to Daniel, who destroyed it and its temple.

23 There was a great dragon which the Babylonians worshiped.
24 "Look!" said the king to Daniel, "you cannot deny that this 25 is a living god, so adore it." But Daniel answered, "I adore the 26 Lord, my God, for he is the living God. Give me permission, O king, and I will kill this dragon without sword or club." "I give 27 you permission," the king said. Then Daniel took some pitch, fat, and hair; these he boiled together and made into cakes. He put them into the mouth of the dragon, and when the dragon ate them, he burst asunder. "This," he said, "is what you worshiped."

28 When the Babylonians heard this, they were angry and turned against the king. "The king has become a Jew," they said; "he has destroyed Bel, killed the dragon, and put the 29 priests to death." They went to the king and demanded: "Hand 30 Daniel over to us, or we will kill you and your family." When he saw himself threatened with violence, the king was forced to 31 hand Daniel over to them. They threw Daniel into a lions' 32 den, where he remained six days. In the den were seven lions and two carcasses and two sheep had been given to them daily.
But now they were given nothing, so that they would devour Daniel.

14, 28-32: This is another version of Daniel in the lions' den as told in ch. 6.

33 In Judea there was a prophet, Habacuc; he mixed some bread in a bowl with the stew he had boiled, and was going to bring 34 it to the reapers in the field, when an angel of the Lord told him, "Take the lunch you have to Daniel in the lions' den at 35 Babylon." | But Habacuc answered, "Babylon, sir, I have 36 never seen, and I do not know the den!" The angel of the Lord seized him by the crown of his head and carried him by the hair; with the speed of the wind, he set him down in Babylon above 37 the den. "Daniel, Daniel," cried Habacuc, "take the lunch 38 God has sent you." "You have remembered me, O God," said 39 Daniel; "you have not forsaken those who love you." While Daniel began to eat, the angel of the Lord at once brought Habacuc back to his own place.
40 On the seventh day the king came to mourn for Daniel. As he came to the den and looked in, there was Daniel, sitting 41 there! | The king cried aloud, "You are great, O Lord, the 42 God of Daniel, and there is no other besides you!" Daniel he took out, but those who had tried to destroy him he threw into the den, and they were devoured in a moment before his eyes.

14, 33-39: This seems to be one of several Habacuc stories that were then in circulation.

THE BOOK OF OSEE

INTRODUCTION

Osee (or Hosea) preached about 750-725 B.C. This was just before the fall of Samaria and the northern kingdom of Israel in 722-21 B.C. The backdrop of Samaria's doomsday is briefly this: in 745 B.C. Tiglath Pileser III ascended the Assyrian throne. He was determined to conquer the whole Middle East. The harsh Assyrian rule was to last for over a century, until 612 B.C. In Israel, the death of Jeroboam II in 743(?) opened the doors to anarchy. Then Manahem taxed the people heavily to pay a tribute to Tiglath Pileser III in 738. Manahem's son ruled till Phacee assassinated him. The Assyrians annexed the northern fronts of Israel and deported people during the reign of Phacee (737-732 B.C.). Osee, the last king of Israel (the same name as the prophet), refused to pay the tribute. Hence, the new Assyrian king, Salmanasar V, besieged Samaria. Sargon II, his son and successor, presided over the fall of Samaria.

Osee was a northerner by birth, and perhaps a priest. His contemporary, Amos, was a Judean whose preaching went unheeded in Israel and Osee's was not to fare any better. Osee is called the prophet of divine love in contrast to Amos, the prophet of divine justice. Osee's emotional nature, which could swiftly pass from deepest affection (e.g., 11 1-4) to red hot ire (11, 5-7), made him a model choice to express God's love for man. Osee's task was to arouse a self-complacent people who were assured of God's material help because, so they thought, their exterior worship guaranteed it. This misunderstanding of God's love wounded deeply the prophet of divine pathos. Although the aristocracy was the main target of his preaching, he placed the blame of the people's ignorance of God's love at the doorstep of the prophets and especially the priests. To impress upon the people the genuine love God bear toward them, Osee resorts to the imagery of the father's love for his son (11, 1ff), to the love of husband for wife, but particularly to his own love for his unfaithful wife. Osee became the incarnation of his message. He was a lover pursuing his beloved, thus symbolizing God pursuing His beloved wayward people. This bold metaphor is perhaps the highest point of love of God for man in the Old Testament. It is appreciably surpassed only by love incarnate, Christ. But God's love is flouted, and the onslaught of the Assyrian hordes brings about the fall of Samaria. Yet a note of hope pulls down the curtain on the book: the hope of a better world under the aegis of the Davidic dynasty.

Osee's disciple(s)-editor most probably arranged his prophecies in Jerusalem after the fall of Samaria. The book is divided into two main sections, which may have originally been two separate collections. The arrangement is fragmentary. Scholars believe Osee himself wrote 3, 1-5 the hinge of the book's two parts. The text is probably the most poorly preserved in the entire Hebrew Bible. Some verses yield hardly any meaning. Small wonder that modern translations differ so widely. Yet the basic message of love is crystal clear.

Osee's analogy of husband and wife to express God's love for man has made an indelible impression on the Canticle of Canticles as well as on subsequent prophets (Jeremia, Ezechiel, Isaia), and in the New Testament it is applied by John and Paul to Christ and His Church. The Roman Liturgy uses thirty-nine verses of Osee, e.g., Os 6, 1-6, in the Mass of Good Friday. Christian mystics applied this analogy to Christ and the individual soul.

Main divisions of the Book of Osee are:

1. The Prophet's Marriage and Its Lesson, 1—3
2. The Prophet's Preaching of Israel's Guilt and Punishment, 4—14

I. THE PROPHET'S MARRIAGE AND ITS LESSON

1

1 Marriage with an Unfaithful Wife The word of the Lord that came to Osee, the son of Beeri, in the days of Ozia, Joatham, Achaz, Ezechia, kings of Juda, and in the days of Jero-2 boam, son of Joas, king of Israel. In the beginning of the Lord's speaking to Osee, the Lord said to Osee:

Go, take a harlot wife and harlot's children, for the land gives itself to harlotry, turning away from the Lord.

3 So he went and took Gomer, the daughter of Debelaim; and 4 she conceived and bore him a son. Then the Lord said to him:

Give him the name Jezrael, for in a little while I will punish the house of Jehu for the bloodshed at Jezrael and bring to an

1—3: In prophetic literature, this is one of the most discussed passages with ever so many divergent interpretations.

1, 1: See the historical background in the Introduction.

1, 2-9: This is an inspired writer's biographical account of Osee's marriage. The text does not necessarily mean that Gomer was a harlot before her marriage to Osee. A common interpretation of "take a harlot wife and harlot's children" (v. 2) is that Gomer becomes unfaithful after marriage, although Osee recognizes that her immoral tendencies had existed before marriage. This view is here based on the Hebrew expression for "harlot," which interprets harlot in its final results, i.e., she bears Osee three children fathered by another man. Osee gives them symbolic names. It need not necessarily mean that God directly ordered this marriage. Osee, years after, could have interpreted his marriage, through a divine inspiration, as something suited to the Divine Plan insofar as it symbolized God's relations to His people, namely: just as Osee pursues an unfaithful wife out of love, so does God pursue unfaithful Israel.

1, 4: Jezrael: Jehu exterminated the Omri dynasty in the valley of Jezrael in northern Israel about 841 B.C. (4 Kgs 9—10). I will punish the house of Jehu: this prophecy may be considered fulfilled in the murder of the last king of Jehu's dynasty (4 Kgs 15, 8-10). And bring to an end the kingdom of the house of Israel: this takes place in 722-21 B.C.

5 end the kingdom of the house of Israel; | on that day I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezrael.
6 When she conceived again and bore a daughter, the Lord said to him:
Give her the name Lo-ruhama; I no longer feel pity for the 7 house of Israel: rather, I abhor them utterly. | Yet for the house of Juda I feel pity; I will save them by the Lord, their God; but I will not save them by war, by sword or bow, by horses or horsemen.
8 After she weaned Lo-ruhama, she conceived and bore a 9 son. Then the Lord said: Give him the name Lo-ammi, for you are not my people and I will not be your God.

4 Israel's Punishment and Restoration Protest against your mother, protest! for she is not my wife, and I am not her husband. Let her remove her harlotry from before her, her 5 adultery from between her breasts, | or I will strip her naked leaving her as on the day of her birth; I will make her like the desert, reduce her to an arid land, and slay her with thirst.
6 I will have no pity on her children, for they are the children of 7 harlotry. | Yes, their mother has played the harlot; she that conceived them has acted shamefully. "I will go after my lovers," she said, "who give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, my oil and my drink."

1, 6: Lo-ruhama: "she is not pitied."

1, 7: An editor may have inserted this verse here after the fall of the northern kingdom in 722-21 when Osee's prophecies were being circulated in the southern kingdom of Juda. But I will not save them by war . . . horsemen: in a probable allusion to Jerusalem's deliverance from Sennacherib (4 Kgs 19, 35ff), the meaning is: God's power is self-sufficient and does not need human help.

1, 8: Lo-ammi: "not my people."

2, 4-25: The CCD (Confraternity of Christian Doctrine) translators have inserted 2, 1-3 after 3, 5. Osee has God apply here the example of the adulteress Gomer to God Himself and Israel. Just as Gomer deserted Osee so Israel, God's adulterous spouse, chases after the pagan gods. Because of this comparison or allegory, a minority view considers Osee's marriage to Gomer an allegory, not a true marriage. As in so many other scriptural passages, the essential point is the message, which remains the same whether it is true history or a figure of speech.

2, 5: There are documents of the era showing that this was the customary penalty for adultery.

2, 7: Osee has God say that the idolatrous Israelites attributed the produce of the land to their "lovers," the local fertility deities rather than to Him (v. 10).

10 Since she has not known that it was I who gave her the grain, the wine, and the oil, and her abundance of silver, and 11 of gold, which they used for Baal, | therefore I will take back my grain in its time, and my wine in its season; I will snatch away my wool and my flax, with which she covers her naked-12 ness. | So now I will lay bare her shame before the eyes of her 13 lovers, and no one can deliver her out of my hand. | I will bring an end to all her joy, her feasts, her new moons, her Sab-14 baths, and all her solemnities. | I will lay waste her vines and fig trees, of which she said, "These are the hire my lovers have given me"; I will turn them into rank growth and wild beasts 15 shall devour them. | I will punish her for the days of the Baals, for whom she burnt incense while she decked herself out with her rings and her jewels, and, in going after her lovers, forgot me, says the Lord.

8 Therefore, I will hedge in her way with thorns and erect a 9 wall against her, so that she cannot find her paths. | If she runs after her lovers, she shall not overtake them; if she looks for them she shall not find them. Then she shall say, "I will go back to my first husband, for it was better with me then than now."

16 So I will allure her; I will lead her into the desert and speak 17 to her heart. | From there I will give her the vineyards she had, and the valley of Achor as a door of hope. She shall respond there as in the days of her youth, when she came up from the land of Egypt.

18 On that day, says the Lord, she shall call me "My husband," 19 and never again "My baal." | Then will I remove from her mouth the names of the Baals, so that they shall no longer be 20 invoked. | I will make a covenant for them on that day, with the beasts of the field, with the birds of the air, and with the things that crawl on the ground. Bow and sword and war I

2, 15: Local shrine celebrations in honor of Baal.

2, 8-9: God sent the famine (vv. 11-14) to make Israel return to Him.

2, 16-17: Of all the history of the people, Osee considered the journey in the Sinai desert as the most faithful era of the people's history (see Jer 2, 2-7). Consequently, Osee uses this period as a symbol of reconciliation between God and His people. Because prosperity made Israel forget her God, the suffering of the exile will bring her back. This deep truth seems to be the threat in ch. 2 and in the whole book.

2, 18: My baal: the word means "lord, master." It was commonly used by women of their husbands, but it must be shunned as a title for the Lord because of its association with the pagan god Baal. Probably it had been so used by many Israelites, who saw little if any difference between the worship of the Lord and the worship of Baal.

2, 20: See 4, 3 n.

will destroy from the land, and I will let them take their rest in security.
21 I will espouse you to me forever: I will espouse you in right 22 and in justice, in love and in mercy; | I will espouse you in 23 fidelity, and you shall know the Lord. | On that day I will respond, says the Lord; I will respond to the heavens, and 24 they shall respond to the earth; | the earth shall respond to the grain, and wine, and oil, and these shall respond to 25 Jezrael. | I will sow him for myself in the land, and I will have pity on Lo-ruhama. I will say to Lo-ammi, "You are my people," and he shall say, "My God!"

1 Triumph of Love Again the Lord said to me: Give your love to a woman beloved of a paramour, an adulteress; even as the Lord loves the people of Israel, though they turn to other gods and are fond of raisin cakes.
2 So I brought her for fifteen pieces of silver and a homor and 3 a lethec of barley. Then I said to her:
"Many days you shall wait for me; you shall not play the harlot or belong to any man; I in turn will wait for you." | 4 For the people of Israel shall remain many days without king

2, 21: In right and in justice: two favorite terms of Amos and Osee, especially when the latter condemns social and legal injustice. The terms here mean correct conduct in general. Love: in Hebrew, hesed. This is the most characteristic idea of Osee's preaching. It refers to the exclusive covenant-love of Ex 34, 5-8 n. Mercy: this word brings out a mother's pity toward weak children, and forgiving love.

2, 22: And you shall know the Lord: another favorite expression used in 4, 1; 5, 4; 6, 3 and 6. To Osee, this expression means a total commitment to God. Fidelity: the bond of all the qualities of love in v. 21.

2, 23-24: God's promise of the fertility of the land is traced from God to the rain ("heavens"), to the earth, the produce, and finally to Jezrael, the valley representing all Israel.

2, 25: Him: Jezrael. The meaning of these names is opposite to that given them in 1, 4-9. Here they mean: God will favor His people once again.

3, 1-3: This is an autobiographical account of Osee's marriage: see 1, 2-9 n for the biographical account. (A minority view interprets 3, 1-3 as a repetition of 1, 2-9.) Gomer left Osee to become a slave prostitute at a pagan shrine. Osee brought her back, or he divorced her and then remarried her (against Dt 24, 1-4). He punished her by imposing a period of chaste living before reinstating her as his wife.

3, 1: Raisin cakes: offerings to the fertility goddess Ashera, the female counterpart of Baal.

3, 2: Homor: about ten bushels. Lethec: a half-homor.

3, 4: Sacred pillar: a stone, originally perhaps a phallic symbol, representing Baal. Ephod: an instrument used in consulting the deity.

or prince, without sacrifice or sacred pillar, without ephod or 5 household idols. | Then the people of Israel shall turn back and seek the Lord, their God, and David, their king; they shall come trembling to the Lord and to his bounty, in the last days.
2,1 The number of the Israelites shall be like the sand of the sea, which can be neither measured nor counted. Whereas they were called, "Lo-ammi," they shall be called, "Children of 2,2 the living God." | Then the people of Juda and of Israel shall be gathered together; they shall appoint for themselves one head and come up from other lands, for great shall be the day of 2,3 Jezrael. | Say to your brothers, "Ammi," and to your sisters,
"Ruhama."

II. ISRAEL'S GUILT AND PUNISHMENT

4

1 Crimes of Israel Hear the word of the Lord, O people of Israel, for the Lord has a grievance against the inhabitants of the land: there is no fidelity, no mercy, no knowledge of 2 God in the land. | False swearing, lying, murder, stealing and adultery! in their lawlessness, bloodshed follows bloodshed. | 3 Therefore the land mourns, and everything that dwells in it languishes: the beasts of the field, the birds of the air, and even the fish of the sea perish.

4 Guilt of the Priests But let no one protest, let no one com-5 plain; with you is my grievance, O priests! | You shall stumble in the day, and the prophets shall stumble with you at night;

Household idols: images regarded as the tutelary deities of the household.

2, 1-3: If Gomer will remain chaste, Osee will change the names of his children. Note the changed order of chapter and verses.

4—14: These disorderly fragmentary eleven chapters of reprimands and threats deal with various times when Osee preached. Hence, they are not assembled in the chronological order of his preaching. In sharp contrast to former times, the vast majority of scholars today believe that these are all from Osee's preaching ministry, and not additions by writers after Osee. All admit random editorial words and verses.

4, 1: Hear the word of the Lord: a familiar opening prophetic phrase.

4, 3: A typical biblical notion is the sympathy of nature with man's lot. See Am 8, 8 n for another example.

4, 4: O priests: the priests have led the kingdom of Israel away from Yahweh's law. Osee vents his anger on them.

4, 5: Your mother: probably means the priestly caste.

6 I will destroy your mother. | My people perish for want of knowledge! Since you have rejected knowledge, I will reject you from my priesthood; since you have ignored the law of 7 your God, I will also ignore your sons. | One and all they sin
8 against me, exchanging their glory for shame. | They feed on 9 the sin of my people, and are greedy for their guilt. | The priests shall fare no better than the people: I will punish them 10 for their ways, and repay them for their deeds. | They shall eat but not be satisfied, they shall play the harlot but not 11 increase, because they have abandoned the Lord | to practice harlotry.

Old wine and new deprive my people of understanding!
12 They consult their piece of wood, and their wand makes pronouncements for them, for the spirit of harlotry has led them 13 astray; they commit harlotry, forsaking their God. | On the mountaintops they offer sacrifice and on the hills they burn incense, beneath oak and poplar and terebinth, because of their pleasant shade. That is why your daughters play the harlot 14 and your daughters-in-law are adulteresses. | Am I then to punish your daughters for their harlotry, your daughters-in-law for their adultery? You yourselves consort with harlots and with prostitutes you offer sacrifice! So must a people without understanding come to ruin.

15 Though you play the harlot, O Israel, let not Juda become guilty! Come not to Galgal, nor up to Beth-Aven, to swear 16 "As the Lord lives!" For Israel is as stubborn as a heifer; will the Lord now give them broad pastures as though they were 17 lambs? | Ephraim is an associate of idols, let him alone
18 | When their carousing is over, they give themselves to harlotry

4, 7: Their glory: of the priesthood.

4, 8: A caustic verse.

4, 10: The general meaning of this obscure verse is that they will not be able to fulfill their desires.

4, 12: Wood . . . wand: an idol used in divination.

4, 14: You yourselves: the men in general. The persons addressed in vv. 11b-19 are the people in general since v. 11 states "my people." Osee says that the common sin of adultery committed by the women is not as disgusting as the ritual prostitution practiced by the men at Chanaanite shrines and introduced in sanctuaries of the Lord Himself.

4, 15: Let not Juda become guilty: a warning to Juda. Galgal: this is not the southern Galgal, but a sanctuary of prophets north of Bethel. Beth-Aven: translated literally, it means "house of iniquity." This was probably Osee's contemptuous epithet hurled at Bethel, a center for worship in opposition to the temple at Jerusalem (3 Kgs 12, 26-30).

4, 17: Ephraim: this was always the most important section of the northern kingdom, and during Osee's public life it was the only place in Israel not captured by the Assyrians.

19 in their arrogance they love shame. | The wind has bound them up in its pinions; they shall have only shame from their altars.

5

1 Guilt of the Leaders Hear this, O priests, pay attention, O house of Israel, O household of the king, give ear! It is you who are called to judgment. For you have become a snare at 2 Maspha, and a net spread upon Thabor. | In their perversity they have sunk into wickedness, and I am rejected by them all.
I know Ephraim, and Israel is not hidden from me; now 4 Ephraim has played the harlot, Israel is defiled. | Their deeds do not allow them to return to their God; for the spirit of harlotry is in them, and they do not recognize the Lord.
5 The arrogance of Israel bears witness against him; Ephraim 6 stumbles in his guilt, and Juda stumbles with them. | With their flocks and their herds they shall go to seek the Lord, but they shall not find him; he has withdrawn himself from them.
7 | They have been untrue to the Lord, for they have begotten illegitimate children; now shall the new moon devour them together with their fields.

8 Political Upheavals Blow the horn in Gabaa, the trumpet in Rama! Sound the alarm in Beth-Aven: "Look behind you, O 9 Benjamin." | Ephraim shall become a waste on the day of chastisement: against the tribes of Israel I announce what is 10 sure to be. | The princes of Juda have become like those that move a boundary line; upon them I will pour out my wrath like water.
11 Is Ephraim maltreated, his rights violated? No, he has will-

4, 19: When they will be blown away into exile, they will admit the futility of idolatrous sacrifices.

5, 1: Maspha: probably the Maspha in Jordan. Thabor: the mountain that dominates the valley of Jezrael.

5, 7: A pungent statement. Since the nation apostatized, their children are spiritually illegitimate. The new moon . . . fields: scholars differ in their translation because the verse is not clear in the original Hebrew.

5, 8-14: These verses refer to the Syro-Ephraimite war of 735-34 B.C. See 4 Kgs 16, 5-9. The Arameans and the Israelites attacked Juda. Assyria came to the aid of Juda and defeated her attackers. Osee blamed both Israel and Juda for the war.

5, 8: A poetic announcement of an invasion from Gabaa and Rama (of northern Juda) into Israel.

5, 10: This may allude to Juda's taking advantage of Israel's defeat by annexing some of Israel's southern territory.

5, 11-12: Gone after filth: by allying himself with Aram. Moth . . .

12 ingly gone after filth! | I am like a moth for Ephraim, like 13 maggots for the house of Juda. | When Ephraim saw his infirmity, and Juda his sore, Ephraim went to Assyria, and Juda sent to the great king. But he cannot heal you nor take 14 away your sore. | For I am like a lion to Ephraim, like a young lion to the house of Juda; it is I who rend the prey and depart, I carry it away and no one can save it from me.

15 Insincere Conversion I will go back to my place until they pay for their guilt and seek my presence.

1 In their affliction, they shall look for me: "Come, let us return to the Lord, for it is he who has rent, but he will heal 2 us; he has struck us, but he will bind our wounds. | He will revive us after two days; on the third day he will raise us up, 3 to live in his presence. | Let us know, let us strive to know the Lord; as certain as the dawn is his coming, and his judgment shines forth like the light of day! He will come to us like the rain, like spring rain that waters the earth." 4 What can I do with you, Ephraim? What can I do with you, Juda? Your piety is like a morning cloud, like the dew that 5 early passes away. | For this reason I smote them through 6 the prophets, I slew them by the words of my mouth; | for it is love that I desire, not sacrifice, and knowledge of God rather 7 than holocausts. | But they, in their land, violated the covenant; there they were untrue to me.
8.9 Galaad is a city of evildoers, tracked with blood. | As brigands ambush a man, a band of priests slay on the way to 10 Sichem, committing monstrous crime. | In the house of Israel
I have seen a horrible thing: there harlotry is found in Ephraim, 11 Israel is defiled. | For you also, O Juda, a harvest has been appointed.

maggots: internal corruption will be the Lord's punishment of Israel and Juda.

5, 13: Ephraim went . . . the great king: Israel's king Manahem, as a vassal of Tiglath Pileser III (4 Kgs 15, 19f), had to pay tribute to the Assyrian king in 738 B.C. Likewise, king Achaz, fearing an invasion by the Syro-Ephraimite alliance, placed himself under the protection of Tiglath Pileser (4 Kgs 16, 7-9). "The great king" was the title used by the Assyrian kings.

5, 15: The Lord is here pictured as withdrawing Himself from Israel in order to bring the nation to repentance.

6, 2: After two days; on the third day: after a short period of time.

6, 4: Piety: this same word is translated "love" in 2, 21 and in v. 6 of this chapter.

6, 11: Harvest: the time when Juda will gather in the fruits of its sins.

1 When I would bring about the restoration of my people, when I would heal Israel, the guilt of Ephraim stands out, the wickedness of Samaria; they practice falsehood, thieves break in,
2 bandits plunder abroad. | Yet they do not remind themselves that I remember all their wickedness. Even now their crimes surround them, present to my sight.

3 Failure of the Monarchy In their wickedness they regale 4 the king, the princes too, with their deceits. | They are all kindled to wrath like a blazing oven, whose fire the baker desists from stirring once the dough is kneaded until it has 5 risen. | On the day of our king, the princes are overcome with the heat of wine. He extends his hand among dissemblers; | 6 the plotters approach with hearts like ovens. All the night their anger sleeps; in the morning it flares like a blazing fire. | 7 They are all heated like ovens, and consume their rulers. All their kings have fallen; none of them calls upon me.

8 Foreign Alliances Ephraim mingles with the nations, 9 Ephraim is a hearth cake unturned. | Strangers have sapped his strength, but he takes no notice of it; of gray hairs, too, 10 there is a sprinkling, but he takes no notice of it. | The arrogance of Israel bears witness against him; yet they do not return to the Lord, their God, nor seek him, for all that.
11 Ephraim is like a dove, silly and senseless; they call upon 12 Egypt, they go to Assyria. | Even as they go I will spread my net around them, like birds in the air I will bring them down.
In an instant I will send them captive from their land.

13 Perversity of Israel Woe to them, they have strayed from me! Ruin to them, they have sinned against me! Though I 14 wished to redeem them, they spoke lies against me. | They have

7, 3-7: In about two decades between the death of Jeroboam II and the fall of Samaria, there were four dynasties on the throne of Israel. The nobles are compared to an overheated oven that burned and destroyed the nation instead of baking it into a finished product.

7, 3: Regale: with wine. See v. 5.

7, 6: As a fire will smoulder through the night, only to break out afresh in the morning, so too open rebellion breaks out on the strength of disgruntled plots and plans laid only the night before.

7, 8: A hearth cake unturned: Israel's foreign policy is as valuable as an unturned hearth cake, i.e., half-baked.

7, 14: They lacerated themselves: this form of entreaty to the divinities, although outlawed by the Jews (Dt 14, 1), was common among other oriental peoples (3 Kgs 18, 28).

not cried to me from their hearts when they wailed upon their beds; for wheat and wine they lacerated themselves, while they 15 rebelled against me. | Though I trained and strengthened their 16 arms, yet they devised evil against me. | They have again become useless, like a treacherous bow. Their princes shall fall by the sword because of the insolence of their tongues; thus they shall be mocked in the land of Egypt.

8

1 A trumpet to your lips, you who watch over the house of the Lord! Since they have violated my covenant, and sinned 2 against my law, | while to me they cry out, "O God of Israel, 3 we know you!" The men of Israel have thrown away what is good; the enemy shall pursue them.
4 They made kings, but not by my authority; they established princes, but without my approval. With their silver and gold 5 they made idols for themselves, to their own destruction. | Cast away your calf, O Samaria! my wrath is kindled against them;
how long will they be unable to attain innocence in Israel? | 6 The work of an artisan, no god at all, destined for the flames—such is the calf of Samaria!
7 When they sow the wind, they shall reap the whirlwind; the stalk of grain that forms no ear can yield no flour; even if 8 it could, strangers would swallow it. | Israel is swallowed up;
9 he is now among the nations a thing of no value. | They went up to Assyria—a wild ass off on its own—Ephraim bargained 10 for lovers. | Even though they bargain with the nations, I will now gather an army; king and princes shall shortly succumb under the burden.
11 When Ephraim made many altars to expiate sin, his altars

7, 16: Thus they shall be mocked in the land of Egypt: this may allude to Ephraim's unfruitful request for aid against Assyria.

8, 1-3: Yahweh commands that the alarm be sounded because the Assyrian ("enemy") will punish Israel as God's instrument for having broken the covenant.

8, 4-6: Israel's monarchy in opposition to the divinely approved Davidic dynasty, and establishment of her sanctuary separate from the temple in Jerusalem are both signs of her rebellion against Yahweh. The calf image set up by Jeroboam I in the royal shrines prevented Israel from attaining innocence (vv. 5f).

8, 7-10: The general sense is a repudiation of the alliances with Gentiles, because these alliances showed a lack of trust in God.

8, 9: Ephraim bargained for lovers: for the "nations" of v. 10.

8, 10: In spite of their foreign alliances, God will punish them.

8, 11: The numerous local Yahweh shrines were "Chanaanized," so that Yahweh was identified with the god Baal. Thus the invectives of the 12 became occasions of sin. | Though I write for him my many 13 ordinances, they are considered as a stranger's. | Though they offer sacrifice, immolate flesh and eat it, the Lord is not pleased with them. He shall still remember their guilt and punish their 14 sins; they shall return to Egypt. | Israel has forgotten his maker and built palaces. Juda, too, has fortified many cities; but I will send fire upon his cities, to devour their castles.

1 Exile without Worship Rejoice not, O Israel, exult not like the nations! For you have been unfaithful to your God, loving
2 a harlot's hire upon every threshing floor. | Threshing floor and wine press shall not nourish them, the new wine shall fail them.
3 They shall not dwell in the Lord's land; Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and in Assyria they shall eat unclean food. |
4 They shall not pour libations of wine to the Lord, or proffer their sacrifices before him. Theirs will be like mourners' bread, that makes unclean all who eat of it; such food as they have shall be for themselves; it cannot enter the house of the Lord.
5 What will you do on the festival day, the day of the Lord's 6 feast? | When they go from the ruins, Egypt shall gather them in, Memphis shall bury them. Weeds shall overgrow their silver treasures, and thorns invade their tents.

7 The Prophet Ridiculed They have come, the days of punishment! they have come, the days of recompense! Let Israel know it! "The prophet is a fool, the man of the spirit is mad!" Because your iniquity is great, great, too, is your hostility.
8 A prophet is Ephraim's watchmen with God, yet a fowler's snare is on all his ways, hostility in the house of his God. | prophets influenced the Deuteronomic writers to restrict the sacrifice to the one temple of Jerusalem.

8, 13: They shall return to Egypt: a threat of annulling the Covenant of Sinai.

9, 1: Upon every threshing floor: an allusion to harvest festivals in honor of Baal to whom the Israelites had attributed the fertility of the land (see 2, 7 n).

9, 3: See 8, 13 n, on the same idea.

9, 4: Mourner's bread: bread eaten at funeral rites.

9, 5: The Lord's feast: the autumn Feast of Booths, the most important of all the Israelite feasts.

9, 6: When they abandon their ruined homes, they will perish in Egypt while their treasures in Israel decay.

9, 7-9: The general meaning often given this obscure passage is that this is the people's verdict on Osee who is barred from preaching.

9 They have sunk to the depths of corruption, as in the days of Gabaa; he shall remember their iniquity and punish their sins.

10 Crime of Baal-Phogor Like grapes in the desert, I found Israel; like the first fruits of the fig tree in its prime, I considered your fathers. When they came to Baal-Phogor and consecrated themselves to the Shame, they became as abhorrent as the thing 11 they loved. | The glory of Ephraim flies away like a bird: no birth, no carrying in the womb, no conception. Were they to 12 bear children, I would slay the darlings of their womb. | Even though they bring up their children, I will make them childless, till not one is left. Woe to them when I turn away from them!
13 | Ephraim, as I saw, was like Tyre, planted in a beauteous spot;
14 but Ephraim shall bring out his children to the slayer. | Give them, O Lord! give them what? Give them an unfruitful womb, and dry breasts!

15 Crime of Galgal All their wickedness is in Galgal; yes, there they incurred my hatred. Because of their wicked deeds
I will drive them out of my house. I will love them no longer;
16 all their princes are rebels. | Ephraim is stricken, their root is dried up; they shall bear no fruit.
17 My God will disown them because they have not listened to him; they shall be wanderers among the nations.

10

1 Punishment of Idolatry Israel is a luxuriant vine whose fruit matches its growth. The more abundant his fruit, the more altars he built; the more productive his land, the more 2 sacred pillars he set up. | Their heart is false, now they pay for their guilt; God shall break down their altars and destroy 3 their sacred pillars. | If they would say, "We have no king"—

9, 9: The days of Gabaa: a reference to the crime committed at Gabaa. See Jgs 19, 22-30.

9, 10-14: God is represented as choosing His people with the same surprised joy as a nomad finding grapes and figs in the desert (v. 10a). The punishment of sterility (vv. 11-13), expressed as a curse (v. 14) is described as suitable to the crime of the "illicit relations with the Moabite women" (Nm 25, 1) committed at Baal-Phogor, where the Israelites consecrated themselves to Baal, called "Shame" (v. 10b).

9, 15-17: The rejection of the northern kingdom.

9, 15: Galgal: see 4, 15.

9, 17: They shall be wanderers among the nations: this may allude to the curse of Cain (Gn 4, 14).

10, 1: The richer the people grew, the more idolatrous they became. See 2, 16-17 n. Sacred pillars: see 3, 4 n.

since they do not fear the Lord, what can the king do for them?
4 | Nothing but make promises, swear false oaths, and make alliances, while justice grows wild like wormwood in a plowed field!
5 The inhabitants of Samaria fear for the calf of Beth-Aven; the people mourn for it and its priests wail over it, because the 6 glory has departed from it. | It too shall be carried to Assyria, as an offering to the great king. Ephraim shall be taken into captivity, Israel be shamed by his schemes.
7 The king of Samaria shall disappear, like foam upon the 8 waters. | The high places of Aven shall be destroyed, the sin of Israel; thorns and thistles shall overgrow their altars. Then they shall cry out to the mountains, "Cover us!" and to the hills, "Fall upon us!" 9 Since the days of Gabaa you have sinned, O Israel. There they took their stand; war was not to reach them in Gabaa. | 10 Against the wanton people I came and I chastised them; I gathered troops against them when I chastised them for their two crimes.

11 Time to Seek the Lord Ephraim was a trained heifer, willing to thresh; I myself laid a yoke upon her fair neck; Ephraim was to be harnessed. Juda was to plow, Jacob was to break his 12 furrows; | "Sow for yourselves justice, reap the fruit of piety; break up for yourselves a new field, for it is time to seek the 13 Lord, till he come and rain down justice upon you." | But you have cultivated wickedness, reaped perversity, and eaten the fruit of falsehood.
Because you have trusted in your chariots, and in your many 14 warriors, | turmoil shall break out among your tribes and all your fortresses shall be ravaged as Salman ravaged Beth-Arbel 15 in time of war, smashing mothers and their children. | So shall 10, 4: The last kings of Israel are here indicted for their unjust rule.

10, 5: Glory: a probable reference to the golden plating of the idol calf of Beth-Aven, mentioned in 4, 15. See 8, 4-6 n.
10, 6: Israel be shamed by: the inability of the god to save them from the Assyrians.
10, 10: Two crimes: a probable allusion to the introduction of kingship (1 Sm 10, 23f), and the immoral deed described in Jgs 19.
10, 11: This may allude to the first entrance into the Promised Land.
10, 14: As Salman ravaged Beth-Arbel: allusion to an invasion not otherwise mentioned in the Bible. Salman may have been the Moabite king of this name mentioned in an inscription of Tiglath Pileser III. There were several Beth-Arbels in Palestine; this was probably in Jordan.
10, 15: At dawn: at the beginning of the king's reign.

it be done to you, Bethel, because of your utter wickedness: at dawn the king of Israel shall perish utterly.

11

1 When Israel Was a Child When Israel was a child I 2 loved him, out of Egypt I called my son. | The more I called them, the farther they went from me, sacrificing to the Baals 3 and burning incense to idols. | Yet it was I who taught Ephraim 4 to walk, who took them in my arms; | I drew them with human cords, with bands of love; I fostered them like one who raises an infant to his cheeks; yet, though I stooped to feed my child they did not know that I was their healer.
5 He shall return to the land of Egypt, and Assyria shall be his 6 king; | the sword shall begin with his cities and end by consuming his solitudes. Because they refused to repent, their own 7 counsels shall devour them. | His people are in suspense about returning to him; and God, though in unison they cry out to him, shall not raise them up.

8 End of the Exile How could I give you up, O Ephraim or deliver you up, O Israel? How could I treat you as Adama or make you like Seboim? My heart is overwhelmed, my pity is 9 stirred. | I will not give vent to my blazing anger, I will not destroy Ephraim again; for I am God and not man, the Holy One present among you; I will not let the flames consume you.
10 They shall follow the Lord, who roars like a lion; when he

11, 1-4: It is a moot question whether God's love for man is expressed more profoundly in the Bible through the analogy of husband and wife, or father and son. Regardless, this is the most tender expression in the Bible of God's love as a father for his son, Israel. Behind the metaphor is the teaching of man's unmerited divine love and God's immutable love, even though man has rebuffed God from his youth.

11, 1: Out of Egypt I called my son: this could also mean a love of election, i.e., God called His people out of Egypt to the dignity of being His son. According to some, Mt 2, 15 quotes Osee's text in the typical sense of Jesus' exile-flight into Egypt.

11, 4: I drew them . . . with bands of love: not forcing them like draft animals.

11, 8-9: From his own experience as an offended lover, Osee knows that God is just and therefore He must punish sinners. Yet God, because of His everlasting love, will not exterminate His beloved people like "Adama and Seboim," the two cities destroyed with Sodom and Gomorra (Dt 29, 22).

11, 10-11: The roaring lion usually is a symbol of divine anger. It is here used to call the exiles home.

11, 10: From the west: some scholars omit this phrase.

11 roars, his sons shall come frightened from the west. | Out of Egypt they shall come trembling, like sparrows, from the land of Assyria, like doves; and I will resettle them in their homes, says the Lord.

1 Infidelity of Israel Ephraim has surrounded me with lies, the house of Israel, with deceit; Juda is still rebellious against 2 God, against the Holy One, who is faithful. | Ephraim chases the wind, ever pursuing the gale. His lies and falsehoods are many: he comes to terms with Assyria, and carries oil to Egypt.
3 The Lord has a grievance against Israel: he shall punish Jacob for his conduct, for his deeds he shall repay him. |
4 In the womb he supplanted his brother, and as a man he con-5 tended with God; | he contended with the angel and triumphed, entreating him with tears. At Bethel he met God and there he 6 spoke with him: | the Lord, the God of hosts, the Lord is his 7 name! | You shall return by the help of your God, if you remain loyal and do right and always hope in your God.
8 A merchant who holds a false balance, who loves to defraud!
9 | Though Ephraim says, "How rich I have become; I have made a fortune!" All his gain shall not suffice him for the guilt of 10 his sin. | I am the Lord, your God, since the land of Egypt; I will again have you live in tents, as in that appointed time. | 11 I granted many visions and spoke to the prophets, through 12 whom I set forth examples. | In Galaad is falsehood, they have come to nought, in Galgal they sacrifice to bullocks; their altars are like heaps of stones in the furrows of the field.
13 When Jacob fled to the land of Aram, he served for a wife; 14 for a wife Israel tended sheep. | By a prophet the Lord brought Israel out of Egypt, and by a prophet they were protected. | 15 Ephraim has exasperated his Lord; therefore he shall cast his blood-guilt upon him and repay him for his outrage.

13

1 Ephraim's word caused fear, for he was exalted in Israel; but he sinned through Baal and died.

12, 2: He comes . . . Egypt: allusion to the commercial and military pacts with the great powers.

12, 3-7: Contemporary Israel and the Israel represented by its ancestor Jacob (Israel) are here spoken of interchangeably. Osee's recall of the Jacob story as described in Genesis differs in some details.

12, 4: A reference to Gn 25, 26; 32, 25.

12, 13: Refers to Gn 28, 5; 29, 20.

12, 14: A prophet: Moses.

2 Punishment for Ingratitude Now they continue to sin, making for themselves molten images, silver idols according to their fancy, all of them the work of artisans. "To these," 3 they say, "offer sacrifice." Men kiss calves! | Therefore, they shall be like a morning cloud or like the dew that early passes away, like chaff storm-driven from the threshing floor or like smoke out of the window.
4 I am the Lord, your God, since the land of Egypt; you know
5 no God besides me, and there is no savior but me. | I fed you 6 in the desert, in the torrid land. | They ate their fill; when 7 filled, they became proud of heart and forgot me. | Therefore I will be like a lion to them, like a panther by the road I will 8 keep watch. | I will attack them like a bear robbed of its young and tear their hearts from their breasts; I will devour them on the spot like a lion, as though a wild beast were to rend them.
9 Your destruction, O Israel! who is there to help you?
10 Where now is your king, that he may rescue you in all your cities? And your rulers, of whom you said, "Give me a king 11 and princes"? | I give you a king in my anger, and I take him away in my wrath.
12 The guilt of Israel is wrapped up, his sin is stored away.
13 The birth pangs shall come for him, but he shall be an unwise child; for when it is time he shall not present himself where 14 children break forth. | Shall I deliver them from the power of the nether world? shall I redeem them from death? Where are your plagues, O death! where is your sting, O nether world!
My eyes are closed to compassion.
15 Though he be fruitful among his fellows, an east wind shall come, a wind from the Lord, rising from the desert, that shall dry up his spring, and leave his fountain dry. It shall loot his land of every precious thing.

14

1 Samaria shall expiate her guilt, for she has rebelled against her God. They shall fall by the sword, their little ones shall be dashed to pieces, their expectant mothers shall be ripped open.

2 Sincere Conversion Return, O Israel, to the Lord, your 3 God; you have collapsed through your guilt. | Take with you words, and return to the Lord; say to him, "Forgive all iniquity 13, 12-13: Israel deserves complete destruction (v. 12) because it refuses to repent. It will die prematurely (v. 13).

13, 14: A firm assertion of God's determination to destroy Israel and receive what is good, that we may render as offerings the 4 bullocks from our stalls. | Assyria will not save us, nor shall we have horses to mount; we shall say no more, 'Our god,' to the work of our hands; for in you the orphan finds compassion."

5 I will heal their defection, I will love them freely; for my 6 wrath is turned away from them. | I will be like the dew for Israel: he shall blossom like the lily; he shall strike root like the 7 Lebanon cedar, | and put forth his shoots. His splendor shall be like the olive tree and his fragrance like the Lebanon cedar. | 8 Again they shall dwell in his shade and raise grain; they shall blossom like the vine, and his fame shall be like the wine of Lebanon.
9 Ephraim! What more has he to do with idols? I have humbled him, but I will prosper him. "I am like a verdant cypress tree" —because of me you bear fruit!

* * *

0 Let him who is wise understand these things; let him who is prudent know them. Straight are the paths of the Lord, in them the just walk, but sinners stumble in them.

14, 10: A later addition in the style of the wisdom literature.

THE BOOK OF JOEL

INTRODUCTION

Many recent scholars date the Book of Joel after the sixth century exile, about 400-350 B.C. The unity of the book is more debated, but the majority's opinion is that Joel wrote all of it himself.

Commonly, the events described in chs. 1—2 are interpreted as a real plague of locusts (not a literary invention). A minority's belief is that chs. 1—2 were written as a liturgical piece for an end to the plague. On the occasion of the real plague, Joel calls for repentance and describes the Day of Yahweh in chs. 3—4. He reinterprets the real plague as a rehearsal, or symbol, of the world-wide catastrophe which will occur in the last days, i.e., at the Day of the Lord. Joel injects into these chapters all his beliefs concerning the last days.

Main divisions of the Book of Joel are:

1. The Land Invaded, 1, 1-12
2. Call to Penance, 1, 13-20
3. The Day of the Lord, 2, 1-17
4. Blessings for God's People, 2, 18—3, 5
5. Judgment upon the Nations, 4, 1-16
6. Salvation for God's Elect, 4, 17-21

1

1 The Land Invaded The word of the Lord which came to Joel, the son of Phathuel.
2 Hear this, you elders! Pay attention, all you who dwell in the land! Has the like of this happened in your days, or in the 3 days of your fathers? | Tell it to your children, and your children to their children, and their children to the next generation.
4 | What the cutter left, the locust swarm has eaten; what the locust swarm left, the grasshopper has eaten; and what the grasshopper left, the devourer has eaten.
5 Wake up, you drunkards, and weep; wail, all you drinkers of wine, because the juice of the grape will be withheld from 6 your mouths. | For a people has invaded my land, mighty and without number; his teeth are the teeth of a lion, and his 7 molars those of a lioness. | He has laid waste my vine, and blighted my fig tree; he has stripped it, sheared off its bark; its branches are made white.

1, 1: This is all we know of Joel's personal life.

1, 2-20: Locust plagues were common, but, on the occasion of an extraordinarily severe plague (2-12), Joel delivers his first sermon in which he calls for penance (13-20).

1, 4: Cutter . . . locust . . . grasshopper . . . devourer: these are approximate translations of various species of locusts.

1, 6: A people: the locusts.

8 Lament like a virgin girt with sackcloth for the spouse of her 9 youth. | Abolished are offering and libation from the house of the Lord; in mourning are the priests, the ministers of the Lord.
10 | The field is ravaged, the earth mourns, because the grain is ravaged, the must has failed, the oil languishes.
11 Be appalled, you husbandmen! wail, you vinedressers! Over the wheat and the barley, because the harvest of the field has 12 perished. | The vine has dried up, the fig tree is withered; the pomegranate, the date palm also, and the apple, all the trees of the field are dried up; yes, joy has withered away from among mankind.

13 Call to Penance Gird yourselves and weep, O priests! wail, O ministers of the altar! Come, spend the night in sackcloth, O ministers of my God! The house of your God is 14 deprived of offering and libation. | Proclaim a fast, call an assembly; gather the elders, all who dwell in the land, into the house of the Lord, your God, and cry to the Lord!
15 Alas, the day! for near is the day of the Lord, and it comes 16 as ruin from the Almighty. | From before our very eyes has not the food been cut off; and from the house of our God, joy and 17 gladness? | The casks rot away under their lids, the stores are destroyed, the barns are broken down, for the grain has failed.
18 | How the beasts groan! The herds of cattle are bewildered!
Because they have no pasturage, even the flocks of sheep have perished.
19 To you, O Lord, I cry! for fire has devoured the pastures of the plain, and flame has enkindled all the trees of the field. | 20 Even the beasts of the field cry out to you; for the streams of water are dried up, and fire has devoured the pastures of the plain.

2

1 The Day of the Lord Blow the trumpet in Sion, sound

1, 9: The locust plague is severe enough to stop sacrifices at the temple. See v. 13.

1, 14: Call an assembly: this corresponds to a proclamation of a national day of mourning in our days.

1, 15: The day of the Lord: in this context, the expression means the visitation of the Lord through a locust plague. See Am 5, 18-20 n.

1, 19: This refers to fires occasioned by dryness.

2, 1-17: Joel's second sermon deals with the Day of the Lord. The "day" is depicted as the Lord punishing His people while He leads the army of locusts (v. 11). See 1, 15 n. Though most scholars believe that Joel is describing the same plague as in ch. 1, some believe he speaks of the alarm on my holy mountain! Let all who dwell in the land 2 tremble, for the day of the Lord is coming; | yes, it is near, a day of darkness and of gloom, a day of clouds and somberness!

Like dawn spreading over the mountains, a people numerous and mighty! Their like has not been from of old, nor will it be 3 after them, even to the years of distant generations. | Before them a fire devours, and after them a flame enkindles; like the garden of Eden is the land before them, and after them a desert waste; from them there is no escape.
4 Their appearance is that of horses; like steeds they run. | 5 As with the rumble of chariots they leap on the mountaintops; as with the crackling of a fiery flame devouring stubble; like a 6 mighty people arrayed for battle. | Before them peoples are in torment, every face blanches.
7 Like warriors they run, like soldiers they scale the wall; they advance, each in his own lane, without swerving from their 8 paths. | No one crowds another, each advances in his own track; though they fall into the ditches, they are not checked.
9 They assault the city, they run upon the wall, they climb into 10 the houses; in at the windows they come like thieves. | Before them the earth trembles, the heavens shake; the sun and the moon are darkened, and the stars withhold their brightness.
11 The Lord raises his voice at the head of his army; for immense indeed is his camp, yes, mighty, and it does his bidding.
For great is the day of the Lord, and exceedingly terrible; who 12 can bear it? | Yet even now, says the Lord, return to me with your whole heart, with fasting, and weeping, and mourning; | 13 rend your hearts, not your garments, and return to the Lord, your God. For gracious and merciful is he, slow to anger, rich 14 in kindness, and relenting in punishment. | Perhaps he will again relent and leave behind him a blessing, offerings and libations for the Lord, your God.
15 Blow the trumpet in Sion! proclaim a fast, call an assembly; 16 | gather the people, notify the congregation; assemble the elders, gather the children and the infants at the breast; let the bride-17 groom quit his room, and the bride her chamber. | Between the a plague of locusts afar off in the first sermon (1, 2-20), and then of the locusts' invasion of the city itself in the second sermon (2, 1-17).

2, 1: Sion . . . holy mountain: Jerusalem.

2, 10: The influence of Ezechiel, Jeremia, Amos, Sophonia, Jona is seen in vv. 10, 11, 13, 14.

2, 12-17: On the occasion of the plague, the people are summoned to penance.

2, 13: Rend your hearts, not your garments: this verse is frequently used in the Roman Lenten liturgy.

2, 17: The priests stood in the open space between the outdoor porch and the altar let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep, and say, "Spare, O Lord, your people, and make not your heritage a reproach, with the nations ruling over them!

Why should they say among the peoples, 'Where is their God?' "

18 Blessings for God's People Then the Lord was stirred 19 to concern for his land and took pity on his people. The Lord answered and said to his people:

See, I will send you grain, and wine, and oil, and you shall be filled with them; no more will I make you a reproach among 20 the nations. | No, the northerner I will remove far from you, and drive him out into a land arid and waste, with his van toward the eastern sea, and his rear toward the western sea;
and his foulness shall go up, and his stench shall go up.
21 Fear not, O land! exult and rejoice! for the Lord has done 22 great things. | Fear not, beasts of the field! for the pastures of the plain are green; the tree bears its fruit, the fig tree and the vine give their yield.
23 And do you, O children of Sion, exult and rejoice in the Lord, your God! He has given you the teacher of justice: he has made the rain come down for you, the early and the late rain as before.
24 | The threshing floors shall be full of grain and the vats shall overflow with wine and oil.
25 And I will repay you for the years which the locust has eaten, the grasshopper, the devourer, and the cutter, my great army 26 which I sent among you. | You shall eat and be filled, and shall praise the name of the Lord, your God, because he has altar of holocausts and the temple building, facing the latter to thereby look toward God present in the Holy of Holies. This description held true for Solomon's temple also. See chart: The Temple of Solomon, p. 576.

2, 19: See, I will send you . . . among the nations: see 4, 1-2 n. Most scholars consider this verse the turning point of Joel's booklet: the pivot, turning from the sadness of the people to God's pity on them.

2, 20: The northerner: the locusts are compared to an invading army, which in Palestine came from the north. Eastern sea: the Dead Sea. Western sea: the Mediterranean.

2, 23: O children of Sion: the people of Jerusalem and of the rest of Judea. The teacher of justice: the rain sent by God to show fidelity to His promises, and to teach the people to be faithful to His commandments. See Dt 11, 14 and Jl 4, 1-2 n. There is also a pun between the Hebrew word moreh (teacher) and the Hebrew word yoreh (the early reign). This metaphorical expression does not refer to the founder of the Essene sect of Qumran (second century B.C.) who was known as the "teacher of justice." The early and the late rain: the autumn rain (October-November) and the spring rain (March-April). In Palestine the crops are planted in autumn and harvested in spring.

dealt wondrously with you; my people shall nevermore be put 27 to shame. | And you shall know that I am in the midst of Israel; I am the Lord, your God, and there is no other; my people shall nevermore be put to shame.

1 Then afterward I will pour out my spirit upon all mankind:
Your sons and daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall 2 dream dreams, your young men shall see visions; | even upon the servants and the handmaids, in those days, I will pour out my spirit.
3 And I will work wonders in the heavens and on the earth: 4 blood, fire, and columns of smoke; | the sun will be turned to darkness, and the moon to blood, at the coming of the Day of 5 the Lord, the great and terrible day. | Then everyone shall be rescued who calls on the name of the Lord; for on Mount Sion there shall be a remnant, as the Lord has said, and in Jerusalem survivors whom the Lord shall call.

1 Judgment upon the Nations Yes, in those days, and at 3—4: These two chapters are "apocalyptic." See Introduction to the Book of Daniel.

3, 1-5: On the occasion of the real locust plague of chs. 1—2, (see Introduction to the Book of Joel), the prophet peers into the hazy future and describes the Day of the Lord, when God will pour out His "spirit" abundantly. Joel dips back into history for the idea of spirit (Gn 1, 2—God's spirit creates; the spirit coming upon the judges and upon the Messia—Is 11, 2). The prophet has not given a photographic picture of Pentecost, but Peter, on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2, 17-21), interprets Joel's prediction as fulfilled in the abundant presence of the Spirit Himself, a phenomenon far beyond Joel's wildest expectations. From this description of the Day of the Lord, and from the rest of chs. 3—4, it is clear that Joel's Day of the Lord is not a soul-searching day as in Amos, but a day of restoring glory to the Chosen People and of punishing the pagans.

3, 3-4: Joel does not really mean that these cosmic disturbances will accompany the effusion of the spirit in the future Day of the Lord. He and the prophets before him use these customary figures of speech because they constitute part of the dramatic machinery to accompany a great intervention of God in history, and on the Day of the Lord. In this context, God will intervene with "the spirit." Peter understood this well, for he proclaims Joel's day fulfilled even though there were no such cataclysmic phenomena on Pentecost.

3, 5: Joel continues the former prophetic doctrine of the remnant (see Am 5, 15 n), namely, on the Day of the Lord there will be a group remaining loyal to Yahweh.

4, 1-2: In this and many similar Old Testament passages, the prophet and the people may have hoped for a restoration of the material that time, when I would restore the fortunes of Juda and 2 Jerusalem, | I will assemble all the nations and bring them down to the Valley of Josaphat, and I will enter into judgment with them there on behalf of my people and my inheritance, Israel; because they have scattered them among the nations, 3 and divided my land. | Upon my people they have cast lots; they gave a boy for a harlot, and sold a girl for the wine they drank.

4 Moreover, what are you to me, Tyre and Sidon, and all the regions of Philistia? Would you take vengeance upon me by some action? But if you do take action against me, swiftly, 5 speedily, I will return your deed upon your own head. You took my silver and my gold, and brought my precious treasures into 6 your temples! You sold the people of Juda and Jerusalem to the 7 Greeks, removing them far from their own country! See, I will rouse them from the place into which you have sold them, and 8 I will return your deed upon your own head. I will sell your sons and your daughters to the people of Juda, who shall sell them to the Sabeans, a nation far off. Indeed, the Lord has spoken.
9 Declare this among the nations: proclaim a war, rouse the warriors to arms! Let all the soldiers report and march! | 10 Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak man say, "I am a warrior!" 11 Hasten and come, all you neighboring peoples, assemble 12 there! [Bring down, O Lord, your warriors!] | Let the nations bestir themselves and come up to the Valley of Josaphat; for and political pre-eminence of the nation. In the New Testament times, however, it became clear that these blessings were to be interpreted as spiritual blessings of the Messianic age. Valley of Josaphat: Joel has God symbolically convoke a last judgment where He will reprove the Gentile nations for the invasions of Palestine and the cruel treatment of His people (vv. 3-8). Josaphat means "Yahweh judges." The prophet is not speaking of a real place here, but of a symbolic "valley of decision" (v. 14). The popular fallacious notion understands this as the Valley of Cedron in Jerusalem as the site for the Last Judgment at the end of the world.

4, 5: This is a general reference to the plundering Phoenicians and Philistines who hoarded their booty in their own temples, the treasury buildings of antiquity.

4, 6: Scholars can only guess at this historical slave trading incident, in which the Phoenicians and Philistines (v. 4) sold Judeans to the Greeks. See Am 1, 6 and 9 for a similar accusation of selling slaves.

4, 8: Sabeans: a famous commercial people of southern Arabia.

4, 9-12: God ironically orders His herald to tell the nation to proclaim war on Him (v. 9) in the "Valley of Josaphat" (v. 12). V. 10 uses this imagery for war, whereas Is 2, 4 and Mi 4, 3 use it for peace.

4, 11: Warriors: the angels.

there will I sit in judgment upon all the neighboring nations.
13 Apply the sickle, for the harvest is ripe; come and tread, for the wine press is full; the vats overflow, for great is their 14 malice. | Crowd upon crowd in the valley of decision; for near 15 is the day of the Lord in the valley of decision. | Sun and
moon are darkened, and the stars withhold their brightness. | 16 The Lord roars from Sion, and from Jerusalem raises his voice; the heavens and the earth quake, but the Lord is a refuge to his people, a stronghold to the men of Israel.

17 Salvation for God's Elect Then shall you know that I, the Lord, am your God, dwelling on Sion, my holy mountain; Jerusalem shall be holy, and strangers shall pass through her no more.
18 And then, on that day, the mountains shall drip new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk; and the channels of Juda shall flow with water: a fountain shall issue from the house of 19 the Lord; to water the Valley of Sattim. | Egypt shall be a waste, and Edom a desert waste, because of violence done to the people of Juda, because they shed innocent blood in their 20 land. | But Juda shall abide forever, and Jerusalem for all 21 generations. | I will avenge their blood, and not leave it unpunished. The Lord dwells in Sion.

4, 13-16: The use of warlike weapons against Juda's enemies on the Day of the Lord is likened to an attack on the fields and vines at harvest time.

4, 15: See 3, 3-4 n.

4, 16: The idealized Valley (v. 12) designated for "war" is in Jerusalem.

4, 17: Strangers: invaders. See 4, 1-2 n.

4, 18: Am 9, 13-14 has a similar imagery of future prosperity. See Jl 4, 1-2 n for the interpretation. A fountain: this may be an allusion to Ezechiel and Zacharia. See Ez 47, 1-12 n; Za 14, 8. Valley of Sattim: Joel is probably thinking of a part of the Cedron Valley in Jerusalem, but he means an ideal valley like the Valley of Josaphat.

4, 19: This may be interpreted as an unknown episode(s) of Egyptians and Edomites massacring exiled Judeans.

4, 20: Since the eternity of Jerusalem and Juda is contrasted with the destruction of Egypt and Edom, it may mean that Juda will ultimately triumph over her enemies.

THE BOOK OF AMOS

INTRODUCTION

Amos, the gloomy shepherd who was "all business" about the oracles of Yahweh, came from Thecua six miles south of Bethlehem in Judea. The prophet resembles a typical modern Bedouin; he is fiery and, though uneducated, eloquent and intelligent. He preached during the second half of the reign of Jeroboam II (783-743?), ruler of the northern kingdom of Israel.

Israel enjoyed economic prosperity and political prestige because it had regained the extent of the kingdom as it was in the time of David and Solomon. This territorial expansion marked the last time Israel reached this peak of glory. The distinction between the wealthy landowners and the poor exploited tenant farmers was outrageous. The clergy of the northern kingdom (dissociated from the Jerusalem temple liturgy) was associated with the wealthy. Both the clergy and the wealthy relied on the external observance of religion for God's protection.

Amos, from the southern kingdom of Juda, preached in the northern kingdom. What we now have is a partially disordered collection of some of his preaching written up by his disciple(s), in rustic Hebrew, reflecting the pastoral background of the prophet. From his anthology of speeches the prophet's message rings out clearly. It shows him as the prophet of justice. This does not mean that he preached a social justice attempting to organize the poor against the rich. What was uppermost in Amos' mind in preaching was: just as God treated us mercifully, as persons, in giving us the Mosaic Law with its "Covenant-love," so must we treat each other as persons. Now when evil men (not because they are rich but because they are unjust) exploit or oppress the poor, they are not treating the latter as persons. Therefore, the justice that Amos preached meant fidelity to God's law, which connoted more than external formal sacrificing. The prophet preached that punishment would be meted out to the nation because of its widespread sins of "injustice." Therefore, Amos' perennial message is: social justice has its roots in God Himself. The wealthy must live up to their responsibilities. Worship devoid of "justice" is not pleasing to God. Amos' justice was an explication of the Code of the Covenant. See Ex 20, 22—23, 19 n.

Main divisions of the Book of Amos are:

1. Judgment of the Nations, 1—2
2. Words and Woes for Israel, 3—6
3. Symbolic Visions: Threats and Promises, 7, 1—9, 8a
4. Epilogue: Messianic Perspective, 9, 8b-15

I. JUDGMENT OF THE NATIONS

1

1 The words of Amos, a shepherd from Thecua, which he received in vision concerning Israel, in the days of Ozia, king of Juda, and in the days of Jeroboam, son of Joas, king of Israel, two years before the earthquake:

2 The Lord will roar from Sion, and from Jerusalem raise his voice: the pastures of the shepherds will languish, and the summit of Carmel wither.

3 Aram Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Damascus, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because they threshed
4 Galaad with sledges of iron, | I will send fire upon the house
5 of Hazael, to devour the castles of Benadad. | I will break the bar of Damascus; I will root out those who live in the Valley of Aven, and the sceptered ruler of Beth-Eden; the people of Aram shall be exiled to Kir, says the Lord.

6 Philistia Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Gaza, and

1, 1: This superscription was probably added by an editor after Amos to state the prophet's native village, occupation, and date of his preaching. Earthquake: several centuries later Zacharia (14, 5) refers to it.

1, 2: The key image of the book is the depiction of God as a lion roaring from His Jerusalem temple. His anger is represented through drought.

The eight speeches that follow v. 2 are examples of oracles against the nations. These oracles denounce crimes performed by the pagans. The prophet preached them to show that Yahweh is also the God of the pagans and that He punishes all men for all crimes. Here He is punishing His people through the Assyrian armies. Since these oracles were not preached to the Gentile nations, the prophet does not say how the pagans were responsible to God for their crimes. After Amos' oracles against the nations became a popular type of sermon among other subsequent prophets.

1, 3: Thus says the Lord: the standard opening formula. For three crimes . . . four: a familiar Hebraism, borrowed by former Israelite poets from the Chanaanites, meaning "Because of many crimes." I will not revoke my word: God will not withdraw His threat of punishment against each of these nations. They threshed Galaad: the people of Aram under king Hazael had devastated Galaad (see 4 Kgs, 10, 32f).

1, 4: Hazael . . . Benadad: kings of the Arameans whose capital was Damascus (v. 5); they fought against Israel (4 Kgs 13, 3), and had long occupied the region of Galaad (v. 3).

1, 5: Bar of Damascus: the beam securing the main gate of the city against invaders, symbol of its defenses. Valley of Aven . . . Beth-Eden: Aramean territory from southwest to northeast.

1, 6: Took captive . . . to Edom: this may refer to the Philistines selling slaves to the Edomites.

for four, I will not revoke my word; because they took captive 7 whole groups to hand over to Edom, | I will send fire upon the wall of Gaza, to devour her castles; I will root out those who live in Azotus, and the sceptered ruler of Ascalon; | 8 I will turn my hand against Accaron, and the last of the Philistines shall perish, says the Lord God.

9 Tyre Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Tyre, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because they delivered whole groups captive to Edom, and did not remember the pact of 10 brotherhood, | I will send fire upon the wall of Tyre, to devour her castles.

11 Edom Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Edom, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because he pursued his brother with the sword, choking up all pity; because he per-12 sisted in his anger and kept his wrath to the end, | I will send fire upon Theman, and it will devour the castles of Bosra.

13 Ammon Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of the Am-monites, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because they ripped open expectant mothers in Galaad, while extending 14 their territory, | I will kindle a fire upon the wall of Rabba, and it will devour her castles amid clamor on the day of battle 15 and stormwind in a time of tempest. | Their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes with him, says the Lord.

1 Moab Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Moab, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because he burned to 2 ashes the bones of Edom's king, | I will send fire upon Moab, to devour the castles of Carioth; Moab shall meet death amid 3 uproar and shouts and trumpet blasts. | I will root out the judge from her midst, and her princes I will slay with him, says the Lord.

1, 9: Pact of brotherhood: Hiram of Tyre had made a pact with Solomon and called him brother (3 Kgs 5, 12).

1, 11-12: For the age-old rivalry between Edom and Juda, see the whole prophecy of Abdia.

1, 12: Theman . . . Bosra: two of the chief cities in Edom.

1, 13: A reference to the cruelty in warfare (4 Kgs 8, 12).

2, 1: Here the prophet stresses the gravity of Moab's violation of the Semitic custom of providing honorable burial for the dead.

4 Juda Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Juda, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because they spurned the law of the Lord, and did not keep his statutes; because the lies 5 which their fathers followed have led them astray, | I will send fire upon Juda, to devour the castles of Jerusalem.

6 Israel Thus says the Lord: For three crimes of Israel, and for four, I will not revoke my word; because they sell the just man for silver, and the poor man for a pair of sandals.
7 They trample the heads of the weak into the dust of the earth and force the lowly out of the way. Son and father go to the 8 same prostitute, profaning my holy name. | Upon garments taken in pledge they recline beside any altar; and the wine of those who have been fined they drink in the house of their god.
9 Yet it was I who destroyed the Amorrites before them, who were as tall as the cedars, and as strong as the oak trees.
10 destroyed their fruit above, and their roots beneath. | It was who brought you up from the land of Egypt, and who led you through the desert for forty years, to occupy the land of the 11 Amorrites; | I who raised up prophets among your sons, and Nazirites among your young men. Is this not so, O men of 12 Israel? says the Lord. | But you gave the Nazirites wine to drink, and commanded the prophets not to prophesy.
13 Beware, I will crush you into the ground as a wagon 14 crushes when laden with sheaves. | Flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong man shall not retain his strength; the 15 warrior shall not save his life, | nor the bowman stand his ground; the swift of foot shall not escape, nor the horseman

2, 4-5: Nowadays, the majority view is that Amos authored all the speeches in chs. 1—2 except this one against Juda, which was added later.

2, 4: The lies: false gods. Juda's crimes are infidelity and idolatry.

2, 6-16: The prophetic books usually have oracles against the Chosen People, and then the oracles against the nations. Amos is almost unique in placing the oracles against the nations first. See 3, 1-5 n. His purpose is to cast in bolder relief the guilt of the Chosen People who should have known better because God gave them more.

2, 8: Upon garments . . . any altar: usurers kept the garment taken as pledges from the poor; but instead of restoring them to the owners before nightfall (Ex 22, 25), they used them in idolatrous worship. Wine . . . their god: under the guise of a religious ceremony they drink the wine obtained through unjust fines.

2, 9: A reference to Nm 21, 24.

2, 10: A reference to Ex 14, 21.

2, 12: Nazirites: they vowed to abstain from wine. See Nm 6, 1ff.

16 save his life. | And the most stouthearted of warriors shall flee naked on that day, says the Lord.

II. WORDS AND WOES FOR ISRAEL

1 First Word Hear this word, O men of Israel, that the Lord pronounces over you, over the whole family that I brought up from the land of Egypt:
2 You alone have I favored, more than all the families of the earth; therefore I will punish you for all your crimes.
3,4 Do two walk together unless they have agreed? | Does a lion roar in the forest when it has no prey? Does a young lion 5 cry out from its den unless it has seized something? | Is a bird brought to earth by a snare when there is no lure for it? Does a snare spring up from the ground without catching anything?
6 | If the trumpet sounds in a city, will the people not be frightened? If evil befalls a city, has not the Lord caused it? | 7 Indeed, the Lord God does nothing without revealing his plan to his servants, the prophets.
8 The lion roars—who will not be afraid! The Lord God speaks —who will not prophesy!
9 Proclaim this in the castles of Azotus, in the castles of the land of Egypt: "Gather about the mountain of Samaria, and see the great disorders within her, the oppression in her midst." | 10 For they know not how to do what is right, says the Lord, storing up in their castles what they have extorted and robbed. | 11 Therefore, thus says the Lord God: An enemy shall surround the land, and strip you of your strength, and pillage your castles.
12 Thus says the Lord: As the shepherd snatches from the mouth of the lion a pair of legs or the tip of an ear of his sheep, so the Israelites who dwell in Samaria shall escape with the corner of a couch or a piece of a cot.

2, 16: On that day: the Day of the Lord. See 5, 18-20 n.

3, 1—6, 14: These words and woes for Israel are more threats than definite predictions. They were spoken in different places and on different occasions. It is a hopeless task to arrange them chronologically.

3, 6: In attributing everything to God, the sacred writers never distinguished between God causing something directly and allowing something to happen, e.g., evil.

3, 8: The key image of the book, Yahweh as the angry roaring lion, is repeated here. See 1, 2 n.

3, 9: The prophet invites the Philistines ("Azotus") and the Egyptians to witness the sins of God's people, Israel.

3, 11: An enemy: the enemy here, as throughout the book, is Assyria.

13 Hear and bear witness against the house of Jacob, says the Lord God, the God of hosts:
14 On the day when I punish Israel for his crimes, I will visit also the altars of Bethel: the horns of the altar shall be broken 15 off and fall to the ground. | Then will I strike the winter house and the summer house; the ivory apartments shall be ruined and their many rooms shall be no more, says the Lord.

1 Second Word Hear this word, women of the mountain of Samaria, you cows of Basan, you who oppress the weak and abuse the needy; who say to your lords, "Bring drink for us!" 2 | The Lord God has sworn by his holiness: Truly the days are coming upon you when they shall drag you away with hooks 3 the last of you with fishhooks; | you shall go out through the breached walls each by the most direct way, and you shall be cast into the mire, says the Lord.
4 Come to Bethel and sin, to Galgal, and sin the more; each morning bring your sacrifices, every third day, your tithes; 5 burn leavened food as a thanksgiving sacrifice, proclaim publicly your freewill offerings, for so you love to do, O men of Israel, says the Lord God.
6 Though I have made your teeth clean of food in all your cities, and have made bread scarce in all your dwellings, yet you returned not to me, says the Lord.
7 Though I also withheld the rain from you when the harvest was still three months away; I sent rain upon one city but not upon another; one field was watered by rain, but another with-8 out rain dried up; | though two or three cities staggered to one city for water that did not quench their thirst; yet you returned not to me, says the Lord.
9 I struck you with blight and searing wind; your many gardens and vineyards, your fig trees and olive trees the locust devoured; yet you returned not to me, says the Lord.
10 I sent upon you a pestilence like that of Egypt, and with the sword I slew your young men; your horses I let be captured

3, 15: Ivory apartments: rooms containing furniture inlaid in ivory similar to the pieces discovered in the excavations at Samaria.

4, 1: Basan: the region east of the Sea of Galilee, famous for its rich pasture and fattened herds, to which Amos likens the indolent women of Samaria.

4, 4-5: This invitation to the sanctuaries of the northern kingdom is ironical, because of what took place there, as described in 5, 21-24.

4, 6: Though I . . . your cities: in spite of the famine.

4, 10: Stench of your camps: caused by the unburied bodies.

to your nostrils I brought the stench of your camps; yet you returned not to me, says the Lord.
11 I brought upon you such upheaval as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorra: you were like a brand plucked from the fire; yet you returned not to me, says the Lord.
12 So now I will deal with you in my own way, O Israel! and since I will deal thus with you, prepare to meet your God, O 13 Israel: | him who formed the mountains, and created the wind, and declares to man his thoughts; who made the dawn and the darkness, and strides upon the heights of the earth: the Lord, the God of hosts by name.

1 Third Word Hear this word which I utter over you, a 2 lament, O house of Israel: | she is fallen, to rise no more, the virgin Israel; she lies abandoned upon her land, with no one to raise her up.
3 For thus says the Lord God: The city that marched out with a thousand shall be left with a hundred, another that marched out with a hundred shall be left with ten, of the house of Israel.
4 For thus says the Lord to the house of Israel: Seek me, that 5 you may live, | but do not seek Bethel; do not come to Galgal, and do not cross to Bersabee. For Galgal shall be led into exile, 6 and Bethel shall become nought. | Seek the Lord, that you may live, lest he come upon the house of Joseph like a fire that shall 8 consume, with none to quench it for the house of Israel: | he who made the Pleiades and Orion, who turns darkness into dawn, and darkens day into night; who summons the waters of the sea, and pours them out upon the surface of the earth; | 9 who flashes destruction upon the strong, and brings ruin upon the fortress; whose name is Lord.

7 First Woe Woe to those who turn judgment to worm-10 wood and cast justice to the ground! | They hate him who reproves at the gate and abhor him who speaks the truth. |

5, 2: The virgin Israel: the nation is personified for the first time as a virgin who dies so young that she does not experience the joys of marriage.
5, 4: Seek me: see 5, 6 n.
5, 5: See 4, 4-5 n.
5, 6: Seek the Lord: a Hebraic way of saying: "do the will of God." See Wis 1, 1 n. House of Joseph: the kingdom of Israel or northern kingdom, the chief tribes of which were descended from Ephraim and Manasse, the sons of Joseph.
5, 10: At the gate: in the court of justice, carried out in the space inside the city gate. See vv. 12 and 15.

11 Therefore, because you have trampled upon the weak and exacted of them levies of grain, though you have built houses of hewn stone, you shall not live in them! Though you have 12 planted choice vineyards, you shall not drink their wine! | Yes, I know how many are your crimes, how grievous your sins:
oppressing the just, accepting bribes, repelling the needy at the 13 gate! | Therefore the prudent man is silent at this time, for it is an evil time.
14 Seek good and not evil, that you may live; then truly will the 15 Lord, the God of hosts, be with you as you claim! | Hate evil and love good, and let justice prevail at the gate; then it may be that the Lord, the God of hosts, will have pity on the remnant of Joseph.
16 Therefore, thus says the Lord, the God of hosts, the Lord:
In every square there shall be lamentation, and in every stree they shall cry, Alas! Alas! They shall summon the farmers t 17 wail and professional mourners to lament, | and in every vineyard there shall be lamentation when I pass through you midst, says the Lord.

18 Second Woe Woe to those who yearn for the day of the Lord! What will this day of the Lord mean for you? Darknes 19 and not light! | As if a man were to flee from a lion, and a bea should meet him; or as if on entering his house he were to res

5, 15: The remnant of Joseph: the northern kingdom. Althoug this is the first mention of the remnant in the prophets, it is used a though it was an old and known doctrine. The basic meaning of th doctrine is that a loyal group of Yahweh's followers in each cr escapes the contemporary danger. The subsequent prophets, when usin this term remnant, will specify the danger of their age. In other word there will always be a faithful remnant to carry on God's law an promises to the remnant of Messianic times.

5, 17: When I pass through your midst: when your destructio comes. See Ex 12, 12.

5, 18-20: Day of the Lord: the prosperous times probably heightene the popular notion, perhaps originating in Dt 7, 6-8 (God elects th nation) that some day in the Utopian future God will political establish the Israelites over all other nations. Thus, before the time o Amos, that "day" was awaited as a day of joy. Amos rocked the natio when he preached, and he perhaps coined the phrase that "the Da of the Lord" will manifest Him by His punishing them through th exile of 722-21 B.C. for oppressing the poor. Therefore, althoug the basic meaning of this technical expression, "the Day of the Lord was God's intervention, it was always interpreted as a joyful interve tion until Amos came who interpreted it as a day of punishment. Th prophets after Amos kept this basic meaning, but with varying interpr tations suited to the problem of their historical situation.

20 his hand against the wall, and a snake should bite him. | Will not the day of the Lord be darkness and not light, gloom without any brightness?
21 I hate, I spurn your feasts, I take no pleasure in your solem-22 nities; | your cereal offerings I will not accept, nor consider 23 your stall-fed peace offerings. | Away with your noisy songs! I will not listen to the melodies of your harps. But if you would 24 offer me holocausts, | then let justice surge like water, and 25 goodness like an unfailing stream. | Did you bring me sacrifices and offerings for forty years in the desert, O house of Israel? | 26 You will carry away Sakkuth, your king, and Kaiwan, your 27 star god, the images that you have made for yourselves; | for I will exile you beyond Damascus, say I, the Lord, the God of hosts by name.

1 Third Woe Woe to the complacent in Sion, to the overconfident on the mount of Samaria, leaders of a nation favored from the first, to whom the people of Israel have recourse! | 2 Pass over to Chalane and see, go from there to Hamath the great, and down to Geth of the Philistines! Are you better than 3 these kingdoms, or is your territory wider than theirs? | You would put off the evil day, yet you hasten the reign of violence!
4 Lying upon beds of ivory, stretched comfortably on their couches, they eat lambs taken from the flock, and calves from 5 the stall! | Improvising to the music of the harp, like David,

5, 21-27: Amos is not condemning ritual worship as such. He is most probably condemning the belief that ritual worship, if correctly carried out, will oblige Yahweh to keep His Covenant promises of prosperity. The Israelites may have been influenced by the neighboring pagans who "controlled" their local gods through proper ritual. This fundamental misunderstanding of the Covenant may have been at the root of the materialistic interpretation of the "Day of the Lord."

5, 25: One interpretation is that during the forty years' wandering in the desert, the simple, rudimentary worship of God was accompanied by the practice of justice, in contrast to the elaborate ritual unaccompanied by works of justice in the prophet's time.

5, 26: Sakkuth . . . star god: although the text is uncertain, it seems quite probable that reference is made to the Assyrian deities, Sakkuth, god of war and light, and Kaiwan, the planet Saturn. The people will go into exile, from which these gods have been unable to save them.

6, 1-7: The luxury of the people in Samaria will be punished by exile. They fail to learn the lesson from Chalane, Hamath, and Geth at the approach of the powerful and warlike Assyrians.

6, 1: The complacent in Sion . . . the overconfident . . . of Samaria: the proud and self-interested rulers of Juda and Israel.

6 they devise their own accompaniment. | They drink wine from bowls and anoint themselves with the best oils; yet they are not 7 made ill by the collapse of Joseph! | Therefore, now they shall be the first to go into exile, and their wanton revelry shall be done away with.
8 The Lord God has sworn by his very self, say I, the Lord, the God of hosts: I abhor the pride of Jacob, I hate his castles, 9 and I give over the city with everything in it; | should there 10 remain ten men in a single house, these shall die. | Only a few shall be left to carry the dead out of the houses; if one says to a man inside a house, "Is anyone with you?" and he answers, "No one," then he shall say, "Silence!" for no one must mention the 11 name of the Lord. | Indeed, the Lord has given the command to shatter the great house to bits, and reduce the small house to rubble.
12 Can horses run across a cliff? or can one plow the sea with oxen? Yet you have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit 13 of justice into wormwood. | You rejoice in Lodebar, and say,
"Have we not, by our own strength, seized for ourselves 14 Carnaim?" | Beware, I am raising up against you, O house of Israel, say I, the Lord, the God of hosts, a nation that shall oppress you from Labo of Hamath even to the Wadi Araba.

III. SYMBOLIC VISIONS: THREATS AND PROMISES

1 Vision of Locusts This is what the Lord God showed me:
He was forming a locust swarm when the late growth began to 2 come up (the late growth after the king's mowing). While they were eating all the grass in the land, I said: Forgive, O Lord 3 God! How can Jacob stand? He is so small! | And the Lord repented of this. "It shall not be," said the Lord God.

6, 6: Yet they are not made ill by the collapse of Joseph: they should be worried about the imminent disaster of the fall of Israel.

6, 10: For no one must mention the name of the Lord: perhaps or of fear that the mention of the Lord's name, which was forbidden, would cause more deaths.

6, 12: Just as the two examples show that you cannot change nature, neither can you change justice into injustice.

6, 13: Lodebar . . . Carnaim: in Jordan. The cities had been captured by the Israelites.

6, 14: A nation: Assyria. From Labo of Hamath even to the Wadi Araba: from your most northern border to your most southern.

7, 1: The king's mowing: the first mowing, a portion of which was payable to the king as a tax.

4 Vision of Fire Then the Lord God showed me this: he called for a judgment by fire. It had devoured the great abyss, 5 and was consuming the land, | when I said: Cease, O Lord
6 God! How can Jacob stand? He is so small! | The Lord repented of this. "This also shall not be," said the Lord God.

7 Vision of the Plummet Then the Lord God showed me 8 this: he was standing by a wall, plummet in hand. | The Lord asked me, "What do you see, Amos?" And when I answered, "A plummet," the Lord said: See, I will lay the plummet in the 9 midst of my people Israel; I will forgive them no longer. | The high places of Isaac shall be laid waste, and the sanctuaries of Israel made desolate; I will attack the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

10 Amos and Amasia Amasia, the priest of Bethel, sent word to Jeroboam, king of Israel: "Amos has conspired against you here within Israel; the country cannot endure all his words.
11 For this is what Amos says: Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be exiled from its land." 12 To Amos, Amasia said: "Off with you, visionary, flee to the 13 land of Juda! There earn your bread by prophesying, | but never again prophesy in Bethel; for it is the king's sanctuary and a 14 royal temple." Amos answered Amasia, "I was no prophet, nor have I belonged to a company of prophets; I was a shepherd 15 and a dresser of sycamores. The Lord took me from following

---

7, 4: Fire: understood by many as a burning drought. Abyss: the primeval "Deep" as described in Gn 1, 2.

7, 7: Plummet in hand: signifying that God is about to withdraw His mercy from His people and that the nation is to be measured for destruction.

7, 9: Amos' prayers stayed God's punishment in the first two visions, but not in this one nor in the next two visions. The main thrust of Amos' message here is: since you did not learn your lesson from the two natural punishments (the first two visions of the locusts and drought), God will proceed to your total destruction (three other visions). Scholars dispute whether these five visions are literary or true visions. If true visions, they may be understood as explained, according to the modern opinion, in the Introduction to the Prophetical Books.

7, 10: Bethel: Jeroboam I also set up a rival sanctuary at Dan, to keep his northerners from going to the Jerusalem temple, thereby indirectly fostering ties of political reunion with Juda (3 Kgs 12, 29).

7, 12-15: Amasia thought Amos was a nabi, a class of prophets who tailor-made prophecies to suit their clients, and so he tells him to go and preach in his own country, Juda. In fact, the evils Amos saw in Israel were also thriving in Juda. But Amos simply answers that God sent him to preach in Israel.

16 the flock, and said to me, | Go, prophesy to my people Israel.
Now hear the word of the Lord!"
You say: prophesy not against Israel, preach not against the 17 house of Isaac. | Now thus says the Lord: Your wife shall be made a harlot in the city, and your sons and daughters shall fall by the sword; your land shall be divided by measuring line, and you yourself shall die in an unclean land; Israel shall be exiled far from its land.

8

1 Vision of the Fruit Basket This is what the Lord God
2 showed me: a basket of ripe fruit. | "What do you see, Amos?"
he asked. I answered, "A basket of ripe fruit." Then the Lord said to me: The time is ripe to have done with my people Israel 3 I will forgive them no longer. | The temple songs shall become wailings on that day, says the Lord God. Many shall be the corpses, strewn everywhere.—Silence!

4 Against Greed Hear this, you who trample upon the 5 needy and destroy the poor of the land! | "When will the New Moon be over," you ask, "that we may sell our grain, and the Sabbath, that we may display the wheat? We will diminish the epha, add to the shekel, and fix our scales for 6 cheating! | We will buy the lowly man for silver, and the poor man for a pair of sandals; even the refuse of the wheat we will sell!"
7 The Lord has sworn by the pride of Jacob: Never will 8 forget a thing they have done! | Shall not the land tremble because of this, and all who dwell in it mourn, while it rises up and tosses like the Nile, and settles back like the river of Egypt 9 On that day, says the Lord God, I will make the sun set at midday and cover the earth with darkness in broad daylight.
10 I will turn your feasts into mourning and all your songs into 7, 17: Your wife shall be made a harlot in the city: to earn her living.

Unclean land: soiled by idols.

8, 4-14: There is no adequate explanation for the position of these verses which interrupt the narrative of the visions.

8, 5: Epha: a standard of measure, about 45 pounds.

8, 7: The pride of Jacob: the sinful pride detested by God (6, 8), in contrast to God Himself who is the true pride of Jacob.

8, 8: According to the characteristic biblical manner of making nature sympathize with the lot of man, the prophet says that the land, because of its unfair treatment of the poor, tosses about like the Nile at its annual flood.

8, 9-10: On that day: it is also repeated in v. 13. See Day of the Lord 5. 18-20 n.

lamentations. I will cover the loins of all with sackcloth and make every head bald. I will make them mourn as for an only son, and bring their day to a bitter end.

11 Yes, days are coming, says the Lord God, when I will send famine upon the land: not a famine of bread, or thirst for 12 water, but for hearing the word of the Lord. | Then shall they wander from sea to sea and rove from the north to the east in search of the word of the Lord, but they shall not find it.
13 On that day, fair virgins and young men shall faint from 14 thirst; | those who swear by the shameful idol of Samaria, "By the life of your god, O Dan!" "By the life of your love, O Bersabee!" those shall fall, never to rise again.

1 Vision of the Altar I saw the Lord standing beside the altar, and he said:

Strike the bases, so that the doorjambs totter till you break them off on the heads of them all! Those who are left I will slay with the sword; not one shall flee, no survivor shall escape.

2 Though they break through to the nether world, even from there my hand shall bring them out; though they climb to the 3 heavens, I will bring them down; | though they hide on the summit of Carmel, there too I will hunt them out and take them away; though they hide from my gaze in the bottom of the 4 sea, I will command the serpent there to bite them; | though they are led into captivity by their enemies, there will I command the sword to slay them. I will fix my gaze upon them for 5 evil, and not for good, I, the Lord God of hosts.

I melt the earth with my touch, so that all who dwell on it mourn, while it all rises up like the Nile, and settles back like 6 the river of Egypt; | I have built heaven, my upper chamber, and established my vault over the earth; I summon the waters of the sea and pour them out upon the surface of the earth, I, the Lord by name.

7 Are you not like the Ethiopians to me, O men of Israel, says the Lord? Did I not bring the Israelites from the land of Egypt

8, 11-12: The famine of God's prophetic word and directions.

8, 14: Dan . . . Bersabee: the extreme northern and southern limits of the country where idolatrous worship was offered.

9, 1-8: There will be no escape from God's punishment, symbolized here by the destruction of a building, probably the schismatic temple at Bethel.

9, 3: Serpent: an allusion to God conquering a legendary sea monster, a figure expressing His creation. See explanation in Jb 7, 12 n.

9, 7: The Ethiopians . . . the Philistines . . . the Arameans: by nature Israel is not different from any other nation. It was not because as I brought the Philistines from Caphtor and the Arameans 8 from Kir? | The eyes of the Lord God are on this sinful kingdom: I will destroy it from off the face of the earth.

Epilogue: Messianic Perspective But I will not destroy 9 the house of Jacob completely, says the Lord. | For see, I have given the command to sift the house of Israel among all the nations, as one sifts with a sieve, letting no pebble fall to the 10 ground. | By the sword shall all sinners among my people die, 11 those who say, "Evil will not reach or overtake us." | On that day I will raise up the fallen hut of David; I will wall up its breaches, raise up its ruins, and rebuild it as in the days of old, | 12 that they may conquer what is left of Edom and all the nations that shall bear my name, say I, the Lord, who will do this.
13 Yes, days are coming, says the Lord, when the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the vintager, him who sows the seed; the juice of grapes shall drip down the mountains, and 14 all the hills shall run with it. | I will bring about the restoration of my people Israel; they shall rebuild and inhabit their ruined of any merit on Israel's part that God delivered them from Egypt. Caphtor: Crete. Kir: uncertain place.

9, 8: This sinful kingdom: Israel and Juda. The house of Jacob completely: the previous eight passages speaking of total destruction are here (and in 3, 12; 5, 3 and 15 "the remnant of Joseph") modified to the salvation of a remnant of Israel, the northern kingdom.

9, 9: The pebbles remaining in the sieve represent the saved remnant.

9, 11: On that day: a vague day of Utopia for Israel, the northern kingdom. I will raise up the fallen hut of David: the more common opinion teaches that this section, 9, 8-15, was not preached by Amos in the eighth century when Juda was rather strong and far from a fallen kingdom, but by a later inspired editor at the time of the Babylonian exile of 587-538, which is after Amos' prediction of the fall of both kingdoms. This kind of salvation oracle is rare before the exile, but common after it. Hence, the advocators of this view translate "fallen," i.e., the Davidic dynasty fell. A less common opinion translates it: the "tottering" hut of David, and says Amos himself preached this prophecy which refers to 734-732 B.C., when the northern kingdom lost to the Assyrian armies all its territory except Ephraim and western Manasse, and many important persons went into exile according to 4 Kgs 15, 29. The southern kingdom would be included in the "hut of David" because of the Assyrian threats at this time. This opinion sees no difficulty in including the northern kingdom in the "hut of David." James in Acts 15, 16-18 applies this text (v. 12 is quoted according to the Septuagint and, therefore, differs slightly) to the conversion of the Gentiles. I will wall up . . . days of old: a metaphorical reference to the greatest extent of the united monarchy under David.

9, 13-14: Jl 4, 18 and other prophets used similar stereotyped expressions to signify material prosperity, especially agricultural fer-cities, plant vineyards and drink the wine, set out gardens and 15 eat the fruits. | I will plant them upon their own ground; never again shall they be plucked from the land I have given them, say I, the Lord, your God.

tility. In New Testament times this must have been interpreted as spiritual blessings of the Messianic age.

9, 15: The country shall never again fall under foreign domination. Yet, in 70 A.D., the Jewish nation ended. Hence, this v. 15 can be interpreted to mean that the people were not worthy of God's promises.

THE BOOK OF ABDIA

INTRODUCTION

This book is a vigorous cry for vengeance made in the name of Juda against its lifelong enemy, Edom. Most scholars admit that the historical background to this cry in the Book of Abdia (or Obadiah) is the fall of Jerusalem in 587 B.C. The Edomites saw that the neo-Babylonian masters, after having devastated Judea, did not transport people there as the Assyrians did in the northern kingdom. Hence, with or without the approval of the neo-Baylonians, the Edomites began to bite into the southern territory of defenseless Judea.

This twenty-one verse prophecy, the shortest book in the Old Testament, is now commonly held to have been written between 580 to 450 B.C. This period extends from the time of the Babylonian exile to the difficult period when the repatriates were rebuilding their nation.

A scholarly debate is trying to clear these questions: did Abdia borrow about ten verses from Jeremia (Jer 49, 7-22), or did Jeremia borrow them from Abdia, or did both depend on a common source? No sufficiently established opinion exists.

The unity of the book is disputed. Some experts believe that the book resulted from the work of several authors, each of whom wrote in a different era and each of whom contributed a few verses. According to this opinion, Abdia was the author of only a portion of the book. Others maintain that it was written all in one piece, except the conclusion (vv. 15-21), which is believed to be a later addition.

The unchristian tone of vengeance against Edom is better understood if we recall this: the Jews had not yet received the revelation of eternal punishment. They still knew only temporal punishment. Behind the wish for vengeance was a deep faith in a just God who punishes, according to the law of retaliation, the evils of all nations. It is this rock-bottom theology which differentiates the cry of these monotheists from the cry of nationalistic polytheists.

Main divisions of the Book of Abdia are:

1. Title and Theme, 1, 1
2. Edom Shall Perish, 1, 2-9
3. The Cause of Edom's Fall, 1, 10-14
4. Judgment upon the Nations, 1, 15-16
5. Juda Shall Be Restored, 1, 17-21

[1] Title and Theme The vision of Abdia. [Thus says the Lord God:] Of Edom we have heard a message from the Lord,

---

1, 1: The vision: this term is used here as a synonym for the whole booklet of Abdia. Abdia: nothing is known about his life. This verse is paralleled in Jer 49, 14. Message: this refers to all that follows, namely, vv. 2-21. A herald . . . against him: God is poetically described as summoning the peoples of the world to wage war on Edom.

and a herald has been sent among the nations: "Up! let us go to war against him!"

2 Edom Shall Perish See, I make you small among the 3 nations; you are held in dire contempt. | The pride of your heart has deceived you: you who dwell in the clefts of the rock, whose abode is in the heights, who say in your heart, "Who will
4 bring me down to earth?" | Though you go as high as the eagle, and your nest be set among the stars, from there will
5 I bring you down, says the Lord. | If thieves came to you, if robbers by night—how are you ravaged!—would they not steal till they had enough? If vintagers came to you, would they not
6 leave some gleanings? | How they search Esau, seek out his
7 hiding places! | To the border they drive you—all your allies; they deceive you, they overpower you—those at peace with you; those who eat your bread lay snares beneath you: there is no
8 understanding in him! | Shall I not, says the Lord, on that day make the wise men disappear from Edom, and understanding
9 from the mount of Esau? | Your warriors, O Theman, shall be crushed, till all on Mount Esau are destroyed.

10 The Cause Because of violence to your brother Jacob, dis-11 grace shall cover you and you shall be destroyed forever. | On

1, 2: This is a forecast of Edom's disgrace in v. 10.

1, 3-4: Clefts . . . heights: part of Edom was the one hundred mile mountainous chain between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba. The Edomites were proud of living in a mountainous fortress-like kingdom of interlaced grottoes and canyons. Petra, the hilly capital of roseate sandstone, was and still is a sight of rare natural beauty. "Who will bring me down to earth?": the sacred writer expresses the Edomites' pride in this poetic flight which continues in v. 4.

1, 5: The sense is: God is more thorough in a devastating punishment than robbers and vintagers can ever be.

1, 6: Esau: the ancestor's name is used for his descendants, the Edomites. This verse wants to show the thoroughness in the pillage of Edom down to the dark corners of its cavernous "hiding places."

1, 7-8: Your own allies evict you from your land. There is no understanding in him!: the writer makes the allies say that Edom is not intelligent enough to defend itself adequately. There is a tone of sarcasm here and in v. 8 because the wisdom of the Edomites was proverbial.

1, 9: O Theman: one of Edom's principal cities is poetically made to represent the entire country. Mount Esau: a synonym for Edom. See 1, 6 n.

1, 10: Because of violence: see vv. 11-14. To your brother Jacob: Esau, also called Edom, and Jacob, the father of Juda, were the sons of Isaac (Gn 25, 24ff). Disgrace . . . destroyed forever: eventually Edom was destroyed.

1, 11-14: The Edomites joined the neo-Babylonians in the sack of the day when you stood by, on the day when aliens carried off his possessions, and strangers entered his gates and cast lots 12 over Jerusalem, you too were one of them. | Gaze not upon the day of your brother, the day of his disaster; exult not over the children of Juda on the day of their ruin; speak not 13 haughtily on the day of distress! | Enter not the gate of my people on the day of their calamity; gaze not, you at least, upon his misfortune on the day of his calamity; lay not hands upon 14 his possessions on the day of his calamity! | Stand not at the crossroads to slay his refugees; betray not his fugitives on the day of distress!

15 Judgment upon the Nations For near is the day of the Lord for all the nations! As you have done, so shall it be done 16 to you, your deed shall come back upon your own head; | as you have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the nations drink continually. Yes, they shall drink and swallow, and shall become as though they had not been.

17 Juda Shall Be Restored But on Mount Sion there shall be a portion saved; the mountain shall be holy, and the house of Jacob shall take possession of those that dispossessed them.
18 The house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame; the house of Esau shall be stubble, and they shall set them ablaze and devour them; then none shall survive of the 19 house of Esau, for the Lord has spoken. | They shall occupy the Negeb, the mount of Esau, and the foothills of the Philistines; and they shall occupy the lands of Ephraim and the lands of 20 Samaria, and Benjamin shall occupy Galaad. | The captives of

Jerusalem and then invaded Juda's southern territory, the Negeb (see Introduction).

1, 15: Day of the Lord: this famous biblical expression means here the imminent day of punishment. The sense is that God will punish all the Gentile countries deserving punishment, and Edom also.

1, 16: Under the familiar biblical metaphor of drinking from the goblet of God's wrath, God, addressing the Jerusalemites and the people of Juda, says: "Just as you were punished so will the other nations be punished." Holy mountain: Jerusalem.

1, 17-20: "Mount Sion," "mountain," "house of Jacob," are synonyms for the Jews. In spite of centuries of wars a "portion" or remnant of the Jews will remain. Shall take possession of those that dispossessed them: the Jews will reconquer Edom (v. 18), and the southern part of Judea, including the Negeb which the Edomites invaded, as well as the rest of Chanaan taken by other enemies (19-20).

1, 18: The house of Jacob: the southern kingdom of Juda will be destroying "fire" as regards Edom. The house of Joseph: the northern kingdom.

this host of the children of Israel shall occupy the Chanaanite land as far as Sarephta, and the captives of Jerusalem who are 21 in Sepharad shall occupy the cities of the Negeb. | And saviors shall ascend Mount Sion to rule the mount of Esau, and the kingship shall be the Lord's.

1, 21: The victorious remnant (or "portion" in v. 17) will symbolically rule Edom (who will not even have a remnant, as v. 18 says) from Jerusalem under God as king. Whenever God Himself (not His Messia) is represented as ruling in the final days, as in this text, scholars label this strand "Messianism without a Messia." The term also has other meanings.

THE BOOK OF JONA

INTRODUCTION

A long standing interpretation asserts that Jona wrote the book that bears his name. This, according to Jona's prophecy of the victories of king Jeroboam II (4 Kgs 14, 25), would date the work from the eighth century. All details, or at least many of them, are interpreted historically—even Jona's miraculous sojourn in the belly of the large fish for three days and three nights supposedly happened as such; the conversion of docile, pagan Ninive, which took Jona three days to traverse, is interpreted as instantaneous and miraculous.

The Book of Jona has been interpreted by Catholic scholars for the last twenty-five years as a parable. The reason for this interpretation is not the reluctance to admit miracles, it is rather the convergence of indications, none of which, considered singly, would suffice to prove the non-historicity of the work. However, if all are considered together, a great probability exists that the Holy Spirit and the sacred writer mean this work as a parable. Here are some of the arguments advanced by these modern scholars:

1. Unlike the other prophets, Jona never appears as the author, but he is always cited in the third person. How different from the direct and frequent "thus says the Lord" of the other prophets!

2. Ninive, the Assyrian capital, was at the apex of its power at the time of king Jeroboam II (783-743? B.C.) but the author seems to speak of the city in a reminiscent tone: "Now Ninive was an enormously large city. . . ." Ninive is so much in the distant past that in the eyes of the author it assumes colossal proportions, which are historically most unlikely: "It took three days to go through it" (3, 3). After its fall in 612 B.C., Ninive disappeared completely. (Its site was not found until 1160 A.D.) Popular imagination had embroidered upon the proportions of the city, and the author of the Book of Jona seems to reflect this tradition, which would date the composition of it after 612 B.C. (in contradistinction to the eighth-century date mentioned above).

3. The main argument is: the Hebrew language of the Book of Jona reveals an era after the sixth century exile, but before the Greek era (which began in the fourth century), because there is no Greek influence in the text. When all the linguistic indications are examined, the fifth century B.C. seems a most likely date.

4. The author's sympathy for the pagans and his polemic attitude are most conveniently explained in this fifth-century context when universalism and nationalism were at loggerheads. Narrow-minded Jews were contending that God wanted to save only the Jews (nationalism); but others, as the author of the Book of Jona, asserted: God wants to save all men, even the worst pagan enemies of the Jews, namely, the Assyrians (universalism).

5. After the exile, the sacred writers were fond of teaching under the guise of "history" to make their doctrine more attractive. (The Book of Daniel, for instance.)

6. The accumulation of unlikely ordinary things. Among these the following are mentioned:

a) An aquatic monster brings Jona safely to the shore (2, 11).

b) None of the Lord's prophets ever received a mission to go among the pagans.

It is incongruous to perceive an eighth-century Hebrew prophet appearing suddenly as a threatening preacher ("Forty days more and Ninive shall be destroyed!" [3, 4]) in the market place of Ninive whose haughty population ruled the world!

c) If a miraculous conversion of that extent (3, 5-10) really happened, how could one explain that it left no trace in the Bible, nor in the Assyrian annals?

The sudden conversion of "more than 120,000 persons . . ." (4, 11) in one mighty sweep reaches that ideal which the prophets never achieved in Israel. Reflect for a moment: the Jewish prophets had been preaching for centuries to the Jews and had been rejected for centuries—Amos and Osee at Bethel's sanctuary, Isaia and Jeremia in Jerusalem. Then comes a rebel prophet, very unholy when compared with the other prophets, who, in a flash, converts a pagan nation with no previous knowledge of Yahweh!

On the other hand, the proponents of the historicity of Jona's book claim that our Lord quoted, and meant, the conversion of the Ninivites to be as historically true as the visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon (Mt 12, 39-42). This claim is not cogent. Jesus uses the accounts of Jona's plight and deliverance figuratively in referring to His own burial and resurrection: "For even as Jona was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights, so will the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Furthermore, Jesus contrasts the conversion of the Ninivites with the condemnation of the incredulous Jews: "The men of Ninive will rise up in the judgment with this generation and will condemn it; for they repented at the preaching of Jona. . . ." Therefore, the meaning given by Jesus did not necessitate the historical interpretation of Jona's story.

In fine, the less strained interpretation is: a fifth century author taught, by means of a satirical parable, that God desires to save all men.

Main divisions of the Book of Jona are:

1. The First Mission, 1, 1—2, 2
2. Psalm of Thanksgiving, 2, 3-11
3. Conversion of Ninive, 3, 1-10
4. Jona's Anger: God's Reproof, 4, 1-11

1 The First Mission This is the word of the Lord that came 2 to Jona, son of Amathi: "Set out for the great city of Ninive, and preach against it; their wickedness has come up before me." But Jona made ready to flee to Tharsis away from the Lord. He went down to Joppe, found a ship going to Tharsis, paid the fare, and went aboard to journey with them to Tharsis, away from the Lord.

4 The Lord, however, hurled a violent wind upon the sea, and in the furious tempest that arose the ship was on the point 5 of breaking up. Then the mariners became frightened and each one cried to his god. To lighten the ship for themselves, they threw its cargo into the sea. Meanwhile, Jona had gone down 6 into the hold of the ship, and lay there fast asleep. | The captain came to him and said, "What are you doing asleep?
Rise up, call upon your God! Perhaps God will be mindful of us so that we may not perish." 7 Then they said to one another, "Come, let us cast lots to find out on whose account we have met with this misfortune." 8 So they cast lots, and thus singled out Jona. | "Tell us," they said, "what is your business? Where do you come from? What is 9 your country, and to what people do you belong?" "I am a Hebrew," Jona answered them; "I worship the Lord, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land." 10 Now the men were seized with great fear and said to him:
"How could you do such a thing!"—They knew that he was 11 fleeing from the Lord, because he had told them.—"What shall we do with you," they asked, "that the sea may quiet down 12 for us?" For the sea was growing more and more turbulent the author presents Jona as a prophet whom God sends on a mission. Jona: in Hebrew "dove," which was a symbol of Israel. This technique blends well with a parable, for the content shows Jona as the personification of the bitter nationalistic Jews (see Introduction). Son of Amathi: the author artistically refers to the historical prophet in 2 Kgs 14, 25.

1, 3: Tharsis: any of several places in the Mediterranean basin. Joppe: modern Jaffa. The only seaport of ancient Palestine on the Mediterranean coastline. The author already adumbrates the parabolic nature of his work in that he introduces his readers to a prophet who disobeys his missionary call to Ninive in the East by sailing in the exact opposite direction to the West. Moreover, the author begins here to show Jona's poor knowledge of God because a flight from Israel is not a flight from God; if God were not in pagan Tharsis, why would he be in pagan Ninive? Jona's flight has its modern parallel in Francis Thompson's "Hound of Heaven." For the lesson of obedience in Jonah see the "Sermon on Jonas" in Melville's "Moby Dick."

1, 5-6: With a dash of satire, the author has a pagan captain command a sleeping monotheistic Jew to join his crew in fervent prayer.

1, 12-14: The satirical element here is that only a pagan would offer himself to be thrown overboard to placate God (v. 12). This contrasts sharply with the delicate and hesitating conscience of pagans in carrying out Jona's wish (vv. 13-14).

Jona said to them, "Pick me up and throw me into the sea, that it may quiet down for you; since I know it is because of me that this violent storm has come upon you." 13 Still the men rowed hard to regain the land, but they could 14 not, for the sea grew ever more turbulent. Then they cried to the Lord: "We beseech you, O Lord, let us not perish for taking this man's life; do not charge us with shedding innocent blood, 15 for you, Lord, have done as you saw fit." Then they took Jona 16 and threw him into the sea, and the sea's raging abated. Struck with great fear of the Lord, the men offered sacrifice and made vows to him.

1 But the Lord sent a large fish, that swallowed Jona; and he remained in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.
2 From the belly of the fish Jona said this prayer to the Lord, his God:

3 Psalm of Thanksgiving Out of my distress I called to the Lord, and he answered me; from the midst of the nether 4 world I cried for help, and you heard my voice. | For you cast me into the deep, into the heart of the sea, and the flood enveloped me; all your breakers and your billows passed over me.
5 Then I said, "I am banished from your sight! yet would I 6 again look upon your holy temple." | The waters swirled about me, threatening my life; the abyss enveloped me; sea-7 weed clung about my head. | Down I went to the roots of the 1, 15: The sea's raging abated: the artificiality of the sudden tempest (v. 4), its increasing tempo, and its abating after the human (Jona's) sacrifice form part of the machinery of a parable.

2, 1: A large fish: in spite of the popular idea, the Hebrew words literally say "a large fish," and not a "whale." It is useless to try to classify it according to known species. Unhappily, the three verses on the "whale" are more popularly known than the teaching of the entire book. Those who interpret Jona as history try to find in real life examples of sea monsters who swallowed and expelled a person alive. Of all the stories told, of a great fish swallowing people alive from classical Greco-Roman times through the Middle Ages, it is doubted if one has ever been proven. Three days and three nights: this expression when used in the Bible is not to be interpreted strictly.

2, 3-10: This psalm is a cento or mosaic of snatches of about twelve different psalms. The psalm is cast in the mold of a thanksgiving psalm for an escape from danger: here the danger was drowning. There are other examples in the Bible, e.g., the song of king Ezechia in Is 38, 10-20.

2, 7: Roots of the mountains: according to the ideas of the day, the mountains; the bars of the nether world were closing behind me forever, but you brought up my life from the pit, O Lord, my God.

8 When my soul fainted within me, I remembered the Lord:
9 my prayer reached you in your temple. | Those who worship
10 vain idols forsake their source of mercy. | But I, with resounding praise, will sacrifice to you; what I have vowed I will pay.
Deliverance is from the Lord.
11 Then the Lord commanded the fish to spew Jona upon the shore.

3

1 Conversion of Ninive The word of the Lord came to Jona 2 a second time: "Set out for the great city of Ninive, and 3 announce to it the message that I will tell you." So Jona made ready and went to Ninive, according to the Lord's bidding.
Now Ninive was an enormously large city; it took three days 4 to go through it. Jona began his journey through the city, and had gone but a single day's walk announcing, "Forty days more 5 and Ninive shall be destroyed," | when the people of Ninive believed God; they proclaimed a fast and all of them, great and small, put on sackcloth.
6 When the news reached the king of Ninive, he rose from his throne, laid aside his robe, covered himself with sackcloth 7 and sat in the ashes. Then he had this proclaimed throughout Ninive, by decree of the king and his nobles: "Neither man nor beast, neither cattle nor sheep, shall taste anything; they shall 8 not eat, nor shall they drink water. Man and beast shall be covered with sackcloth and call loudly to God; every man shall turn from his evil way and from the violence he has in hand.
9 Who knows, God may relent and forgive, and withhold his 10 blazing wrath, so that we shall not perish." When God saw by their actions how they turned from their evil way, he repented earth floated on the watery "abyss" (v. 6). A plunge would eventually sink one to the deepest extremities of the mountains of the earth.

2, 11: To the advocates of the parabolic interpretation, this miracle is the most artificial in the book.

3, 3-4: Ninive was an enormously large city: see Introduction on the exaggeration of its size. Excavations of Ninive show it was about three miles long and about one and one-half miles wide.

3, 5-10: The sudden conversion of Ninive is the climax of the story and the apex of all the unlikeliboods, for an unknown foreign prophet converts over "120,000 persons" (4, 11), from the king to the pauper. All perform extraordinary penances. See Introduction for more reasons why this is not seriously intended as a miraculous conversion.

of the evil that he had threatened to do to them; he did not carry it out.

1 Jona's Anger: God's Reproof But this was greatly dis-2 pleasing to Jona, and he became angry. "I beseech you, Lord," he prayed, "is not this what I said while I was still in my own country? This is why I fled at first to Tharsis. I knew that you are a gracious and merciful God, slow to anger, rich in clemency, 3 loathe to punish. And now, Lord, please take my life from me;
4 for it is better for me to die than to live." | But the Lord asked, "Have you reason to be angry?"

5 Jona then left the city for a place to the east of it, where he built himself a hut and waited under it in the shade, to see what 6 would happen to the city. And when the Lord God provided a gourd plant, that grew up over Jona's head, giving shade that relieved him of any discomfort, Jona was very happy over the 7 plant. But the next morning at dawn God sent a worm which 8 attacked the plant, so that it withered. And when the sun arose, God sent a burning east wind; and the sun beat upon Jona's head till he became faint. Then he asked for death, saying, "I would be better off dead than alive."

9 But God said to Jona, "Have you reason to be angry over the plant?" "I have reason to be angry," Jona answered, "angry
10 enough to die." | Then the Lord said, "You are concerned over the plant which cost you no labor and which you did not raise;
11 it came up in one night and in one night it perished. And should I not be concerned over Ninive, the great city, in which there are more than a hundred and twenty thousand persons who cannot distinguish their right hand from their left, not to mention the many cattle?"

4, 1-4: Jona here represents the narrow nationalism of many Jews of his day, against whom the author penned this parable (see Introduction).

4, 6: Gourd plant: the Hebrew word means a wide-leafed plant of the cucumber or castor-bean variety.

4, 10-11: The author satirically contrasts Jona's whimpering over the discomforting loss of a plant's shade and his simultaneous sulking because God will not exterminate Ninive. To state it a bit differently, the writer says: If God is kind enough to provide Jona with a little shade, how much more disposed is He to forgive all men when they repent even the detestable masters of history, the Assyrians. Persons who cannot . . . left: children. Cattle: with a pungent master stroke of wit, the writer of universalism shows that God is solicitous, not only about human beings but even about animals. We may well ask if it is conceivable that the historical Jona would have composed such a caustic caricature of himself.

THE BOOK OF MICHEA

INTRODUCTION

Michea, a contemporary of Isaia, came from the southwestern Judean village of Moreseth. His name means, "Who is like Yahweh" (7, 18). A shepherd prophet of blunt speech, he resembles Amos with whom he also shares a deep concern for social questions rather than interest in domestic and foreign policies.

Michea preached "in the days of Joatham, Achaz and Ezechia, king of Juda" (1, 1), which is roughly the second half of the eighth century B.C. According to Jer 26, 18f, Michea influenced the religious reforms of king Ezechia of Juda who, after the fall of the northern kingdom of Israel, destroyed the idolatrous places of worship. See 4 Kgs 18, 4 ff.

An editor assembled Michea's prophecies into three separate sections. (After Osee's book, these oracles may well be the most poorly preserved text in the Hebrew Bible.)

Main divisions of the Book of Michea are:

1. Punishment of Israel's Sins: Prophecies of Doom, especially for Social Crimes, 1—3
2. The New Israel and the Destruction of Its Enemies, 4—5
3. Admonition: Prophecies of Doom against Israel and Juda 6—7

I. PUNISHMENT OF ISRAEL'S SINS

1 Divine Judgment The word of the Lord which came to Michea of Moreseth in the days of Joatham, Achaz, and Ezechia, kings of Juda: that is, the vision he received concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

2 Hear, O peoples, all of you, give heed, O earth, and all that fills you! Let the Lord God be witness against you, the Lord from his holy temple!

3 For see, the Lord comes forth from his place, he descends and 4 treads upon the heights of the earth. | The mountains melt under him and the valleys split open, like wax before the fire, like water poured down a slope.

5 For the crime of Jacob all this comes to pass, and for the 1—3: Scholars have always attributed the substance of these three chapters to Michea, except 2, 12-13. The prophet most probably delivered these three chapters just before the fall of Samaria 722-21 B.C.

1, 1: See Introduction.

1, 2-6: Michea has God call Juda and Israel to a court trial. God is represented as coming from His heavenly temple (vv. 2-4) to punish Samaria and Jerusalem (vv. 5-6).

sins of the house of Israel. What is the crime of Jacob? Is it not Samaria? And what is the sin of the house of Juda? Is it not 6 Jerusalem? | I will make Samaria a stone heap in the field, a place to plant for vineyards; I will throw down into the valley 7 her stones, and lay bare her foundations. | All her idols shall be broken to pieces, all her wages shall be burned in the fire, and all her statues I will destroy. As the wages of a harlot they were gathered, and to the wages of a harlot shall they return.
8 For this reason I lament and wail, I go barefoot and naked; I utter lamentation like the jackals, and mourning like the 9 ostriches. | There is no remedy for the blow she has been struck; rather, it has come even to Juda, it reaches to the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.
10 Publish it not in Geth, weep not at all; in Beth-aphra roll in 11 the dust. | Pass by, you who dwell in Saphir! The inhabitants of Saanan come not forth from their city. The lamentation of 12 Beth-esel finds in you its grounds. | How can the inhabitants of Maroth hope for good? For evil has come down from the Lord to the gate of Jerusalem.
13 Harness steeds to the chariots, O inhabitants of Lachis; Lachis, the beginning of sin for daughter Sion, because there 14 were in you the crimes of Israel. | Therefore you shall give parting gifts to Moreseth-Geth; Beth-achzib is a deception to the 15 kings of Israel. | Yet must I bring to you the conqueror, O inhabitants of Maresa; even to Odollam shall go the glory of Israel.
16 Make yourself bald, pluck out your hair, for the children whom you cherish; let your baldness be as the eagle's, because they are exiled from you.

2

1 Social Evils Woe to those who plan iniquity, and work out evil on their couches; in the morning light they accomplish it 2 when it lies within their power. | They covet fields, and seize

1, 7: Samaria is compared to a prostitute because of her idolatry before her fall.

1, 8-9: Some believe that this prophecy was delivered after Sennacherib's invasion of Juda in 701 B.C.

1, 10-15: To express that the Assyrian hammer blows against Samaria will affect her sister kingdom of Juda, Michea represents his country's future punishment by selecting eleven familiar Judean cities near home. These cities, four of which are unknown, lie in the plain between the mountains of Juda in the east, and Philistia on the Mediterranean coast. There is much play on words in the names of these cities. The text is obscure in part.

1, 16: Shaving the head was a biblical sign of mourning.

2, 2: Juda was chronically plagued by landowners who enriched them; houses, and they take them; they cheat an owner 3 his house, a man of his inheritance. | Therefore thus says th Lord: Behold, I am planning against this race an evil fro which you shall not withdraw your necks; nor shall you wa with head high, for it will be a time of evil.

4 On that day a satire shall be sung over you, and there sha be a plaintive chant: "Our ruin is complete, our fields are pc tioned out among our captors, the fields of my people a 5 measured out, and no one can get them back!" | Thus you sha have no one to mark out boundaries by lot in the assembly
the Lord.
6 "Preach not," they preach, "let them not preach of the 7 things!" The shame will not withdraw. | How can it be sai O house of Jacob, "Is the Lord short of patience, or are such l deeds?" Do not my words promise good to him who wal uprightly?
8 But of late my people has risen up as an enemy: you ha stripped off the mantle covering the tunic of those who go th 9 way in confidence, as though it were spoils of war. | The wom of my people you drive out from their pleasant houses; fro their children you take away forever the honor I gave them 10 "Up! Be off, this is no place to rest"; for any trifle you ex a crippling pledge.
11 If one, acting on impulse, should make the futile claim: pour you wine and strong drink as my prophecy," then he wo 12 be the prophet of this people. | I will gather you, O Jacob, ea and every one, I will assemble all the remnant of Israel; I w group them like a flock in the fold, like a herd in the midst of 13 corral; they shall not be thrown into panic by men. | With themselves fraudulently by taking land from the poorer people. I this reason the ancestral property ("inheritance") was supposed to inviolate. See the story of Naboth in 3 Kgs 21, 1-4.

2, 4: The fitting penalty for greedy landowners will be the irrevoca loss of their property to their enemies.

2, 5: To mark out boundaries by lot: an allusion to Jos 13—namely, the distribution of the land of Palestine to the twelve trib

2, 6-7: The words in quotes are the protests of the people agai Michea's predictions of doom.

2, 8: Jews rob other Jews after the manner of non-Jewish enem

2, 9-10: Creditors harshly evict widows, and their children l their freedom ("honor"). A crippling pledge: an unobserved Mos Law forbade oppressive pledges for loans. See Ex 22, 25f.

2, 11: This people desires a prophet who would prophesy w pleased them, provided they supply him with drink.

2, 12-13: Many critics do not attribute these verses to Michea. Th dom ("Jacob") and the northern kingdom ("Israel").

leader to break the path they shall burst open the gate and go out through it; their king shall go through before them, and the Lord at their head.

3

1 Downfall of Present Leaders And I said: Hear, you leaders of Jacob, rulers of the house of Israel! Is it not your duty to 2 know what is right, | you who hate what is good, and love evil?
you who tear their skin from them, and their flesh from their 3 bones! | They eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from them, and break their bones. They chop them in pieces like flesh 4 in a kettle, and like meat in a caldron. | When they cry to the Lord, he shall not answer them; rather shall he hide his face from them at that time, because of the evil they have done.
5 Thus says the Lord regarding the prophets who lead my people astray; who, when their teeth have something to bite, announce peace, but when one fails to put something in their 6 mouth, proclaim war against him. | Therefore you shall have night, not vision, darkness, not divination; the sun shall go down upon the prophets, and the day shall be dark for them. | 7 Then shall the seers be put to shame, and the diviners confounded; they shall cover their lips, all of them, because there 8 is no answer from God. | But as for me, I am filled with power, with the spirit of the Lord, with authority and with might;
to declare to Jacob his crimes and to Israel his sins.
9 Hear this, you leaders of the house of Jacob, you rulers of the house of Israel! You who abhor what is just, and pervert all 10 that is right; | who build up Sion with bloodshed, and Jerusa-
11 lem with wickedness! | Her leaders render judgment for a bribe, her priests give decisions for a salary, her prophets divine for money, while they rely on the Lord, saying, "Is not the Lord 12 in the midst of us? No evil can come upon us!" | Therefore, because of you, Sion shall be plowed like a field, and Jerusalem reduced to rubble, and the mount of the temple to a forest ridge.

II. THE NEW ISRAEL

1 The People to Be Restored In days to come the mount of the Lord's house shall be established higher than the 3, 5-8: Almost all the prophets denounced false prophets.

3, 12: This is the first time that a prophet verbally assaults Jerusalem and its temple. See Jer 26, 18.

4—5: Scholars are divided in their opinion on the authenticity of these two chapters. Some believe that they came from Michea in the mountains; it shall rise high above the hills, and peoples sha 2 stream to it: | many nations shall come, and say, "Come, l us climb the mount of the Lord, to the house of the God c Jacob, that he may instruct us in his ways, that we may walk i his paths." For from Sion shall go forth instruction, and th 3 word of the Lord from Jerusalem. | He shall judge betwee many peoples and impose terms on strong and distant nation they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spea into pruning hooks; one nation shall not raise the sword again 4 another, nor shall they train for war again. | Every man sha sit under his own vine or under his own fig tree, undisturbe 5 for the mouth of the Lord of hosts has spoken. | For all th peoples walk each in the name of its god, but we will walk in th name of the Lord, our God, forever and ever.

6 On that day, says the Lord, I will gather the lame, and I wi 7 assemble the outcasts, and those whom I have afflicted. | I wi make of the lame a remnant, and of those driven far off a stror nation; and the Lord shall be king over them on Mount Sio 8 from now on forever. | And you, O Magdal-eder, hillock daughter Sion! Unto you shall it come: the former dominic shall be restored, the kingdom of daughter Jerusalem.
9 Now why do you cry out so? Are you without a king? C has your counselor perished, that you are seized with pains lil 10 a woman in travail? | Writhe in pain, grow faint, O daught Sion, like a woman in travail; for now shall you go forth fro the city and dwell in the fields; to Babylon shall you go, the shall you be rescued. There shall the Lord redeem you from th hand of your enemies.
11 How many nations are gathered against you! They say, "L 12 her be profaned, let our eyes see Sion's downfall!" | But the know not the thoughts of the Lord, nor understand his counse when he has gathered them like sheaves on the threshing floor.

eighth century, and others that they came from a later hand in exil or postexilic time. It is with these two opinions in mind that we are understand the background of Michea's oracles.

4, 1-3: See Is 2, 3-4 n for the same verses.

4, 6-8: Whether this prophecy be exilic or postexilic, it express a hope that the expatriated will return to form one united nation aga with Jerusalem as its capital. Some believe this oracle was delivered encourage the Jerusalemites under the threat of Sennacherib's siege 701 B.C.

4, 8: Magdal-eder: literally, "tower of the flock," a symbolic nam for Jerusalem.

4, 10: For now . . . your enemies: even those who hold chs. 4—5 be from the eighth century tend to make an exception in regard to th verse, viewing it as a postexilic reference to the Babylonian exile.

13 Arise and thresh, O daughter Sion; your horn I will make iron and your hoofs bronze, that you may crush many peoples; you shall devote their spoils to the Lord, and their riches to the Lord of the whole earth.

14 Restoration through the Messia Now fence yourself in, Bat-gader! "They have laid siege against us!" With the rod they strike on the cheek the ruler of Israel.

1 But you, Bethlehem-Ephratha too small to be among the clans of Juda, from you shall come forth for me one who is to be ruler in Israel; whose origin is from of old, from ancient 2 times. | (Therefore the Lord will give them up, until the time when she who is to give birth has borne, and the rest of his 3 brethren shall return to the children of Israel.) | He shall stand firm and shepherd his flock by the strength of the Lord, in the majestic name of the Lord, his God; and they shall remain, for 4 now his greatness shall reach to the ends of the earth; | he shall be peace.

4, 14: Bat-gader: literally, "house of the fenced-in place," another symbolic name for Jerusalem.

5, 1: This is a Messianic text, no matter whether it dates from the eighth century Michea or from a later hand. One modern opinion is: in contrast to king Ezechia of Jerusalem, besieged in 701 by Sennacherib (4, 14), the prophet points to a future king of the Davidic dynasty. In other words, this is a Messianic text on the dynasty, not on one specific person of the dynasty. Bethlehem: the Hebrew text does not have this word. Ephratha, too small . . . of Juda: in contrast with the other Judean clans, Ephratha is "small" politically and territorially. At first, Ephratha was the name of a clan around Bethlehem, then it meant the name of the city of Bethlehem. David was not from this clan, but from the city of Bethlehem, which received its name from the clan. For me: to do my will. From you shall come forth . . . from ancient times: Michea is most likely not predicting that the Messia will be born in Bethlehem nor that He will be divine because of the words "whose origin is from of old, from ancient times." This latter phrase does not mean eternity but refers to the antiquity, even in those days, of David's dynasty. The Messianic element of this passage is that Michea foresees the continuation of the Davidic dynasty, which originated in Ephratha insofar as David (and his ancestors?) came from there. When Mt 2, 6 quoted Mi 5, 1, the evangelist did not interpret Michea as predicting that Jesus was to be born at Bethlehem. Matthew merely reflects the opinion of his day that Jesus' birth at Bethlehem was connected with Michea's prophecy.

5, 2: Some experts believe that Michea is referring to Isaia (see Is 7, 14 n). Others hold that each of the two prophets speaks independently, but from a common background of Messianic ideas.

5, 3: Shepherd: a kind ruler.

5, 4-5: Peace: means harmony with God and man. Seven shepherds,

If Assyria invades our country and treads upon our land, we shall raise against it seven shepherds, eight men of royal rank; 5 and they shall tend the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nemrod with the drawn sword; and we shall be delivered from Assyria, if it invades our land and treads upon our borders.
6 The remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people like dew coming from the Lord, like raindrops on the grass 7 which wait for no man, nor tarry for the sons of men. | And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the nations, in the midst of many peoples, like a lion among beasts of the forest, like a young lion among flocks of sheep; when it passes through, 8 tramples and tears, and there is none to deliver. | Your hand shall be lifted above your foes, and all your enemies shall be destroyed.
9 On that day, says the Lord, I will destroy the horses from 10 your midst and ruin your chariots; | I will demolish the cities
11 of your land and tear down all your fortresses. | I will abolish the means of divination from your use, and there shall no 12 longer be soothsayers among you. | I will abolish your carved images and the sacred pillars from your midst; and you shall no 13 longer adore the works of your hands. | I will tear out the 14 sacred poles from your midst, and destroy your cities. | I will wreak vengeance in anger and wrath upon the nations that have not hearkened.

III. ADMONITION

1 Accusation and Answer Hear, then, what the Lord says:
Arise, present your plea before the mountains, and let the hills
2 hear your voice! | Hear, O mountains, the plea of the Lord eight men of royal rank: the numerical progression from seven to eight is a biblical figure for an indefinite number (Am 1, 3), but the two groups are identical.

5, 5: Nemrod: Assyria.

5, 6-7: It is through God's power, not man's, that the remnant will triumph over the Gentiles.

5, 9-13: The restoration will remove the causes that led the people away from God, mainly idolatrous objects and armaments in which idolaters trusted.

6—7: Nowadays the attitude is to regard these two chapters as substantially Michea's, and as coming from the latter part of the eighth century as do chs. 1—3.

6, 1-5: Yahweh lists His gifts and asks His people to explain their ingratitude.

pay attention, O foundations of the earth! For the Lord has a plea against his people, and he enters into trial with Israel.
3 O my people, what have I done to you, or how have I wearied 4 you? Answer me! | For I brought you up from the land of Egypt, from the place of slavery I released you; and I sent 5 before you Moses, Aaron, and Miriam. | My people, what Moab's king Balac planned, and how Balaam, the son of Beor, answered him . . . from Sattim to Galgal, that you may know the just deeds of the Lord.
6 With what shall I come before the Lord, and bow before God most high? Shall I come before him with holocausts, with 7 calves a year old? | Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, with myriad streams of oil? Shall I give my first-born for 8 my crime, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul? | You have been told, O man, what is good, and what the Lord requires of you: only to do the right and to love goodness, and to walk humbly with your God.
9 Hark! the Lord cries to the city. [It is wisdom to fear your 2 name!] Hear, O tribe and city council, | you whose rich men are full of violence, whose inhabitants speak falsehood with 10 deceitful tongues in their heads! | Am I to bear any longer 11 criminal hoarding and the meager epha that is accursed? | Shall I acquit criminal balances, bags of false weights?
13 Rather I will begin to strike you with devastation because of 15 your sins. | You shall sow, yet not reap, tread out the olive,
14 yet pour no oil, and the grapes, yet drink no wine. | You shall

6, 3: This verse and "For I brought you up from the land of Egypt" (v. 4) are appropriately reactualized as a refrain ten times in the Reproaches during the adoration of the cross in the Mass of Good Friday.

6, 5: From Sattim to Galgal: a reference to Jos 3—5. Although the text is defective, it is evident that this verse continues to recount God's saving actions from the Exodus (v. 4) to the conquest of Palestine.

6, 6-7: Michea has a faithful subject answer God (in this court trial) by asking what He wants as a sign of gratitude; the faithful subject even offers to sacrifice his oldest son.

6, 8: Michea, as the spokesman for Yahweh, answers the faithful subject to observe the traditional prophetic teaching, namely, "do the right," i.e., justice (Am 5, 24), "love goodness," i.e., charity, e.g., Ds 6, 6, and "walk humbly with your God," e.g., Is 2, 9-19. This verse is often singled out from prophetic literature as one of the most personal and practical guides of religion in opposition to the popular exterior notion of religion (vv. 6-7).

6, 9-16: In this oracle, Michea attacks the unfair practices of the Jerusalem merchants.

6, 9: It is natural for a country prophet like Michea to select the big city of Jerusalem as the symbol of all the crimes of the people.

6, 10: Epha: a dry measure.

eat, without being satisfied, food that will leave you empty.
what you acquire, you cannot save; what you do save, I wil 16 deliver up to the sword. | You have kept the decrees of Amri and all the works of the house of Achab, and you have walke in their counsels; therefore I will deliver you up to ruin, an your citizens to derision; and you shall bear the reproach of th nations.

wrath of the Lord I will endure because I have sinned again him, until he takes up my cause, and establishes my right. H

my enemy sees this, shame shall cover her: she who said to m
"Where is the Lord, your God?" My eyes shall see her downfall now shall she be trampled underfoot, like the mire in the street

6, 16: Amri . . . Achab: Juda continued the misguided worshi but especially the social injustice of the northern kingdom as embodie in these two northern kings (3 Kgs 16, 25-34).

7, 1-7: Michea sees sin widespread and feels alone, like Diogenes.

7, 4: The Hebrew is obscure. Watchmen: on the city walls.

7, 6: Quoted by Jesus. See Mt 10, 35f.

7, 8-10: This seems to be an exilic oracle against the "enemy," perhaps the Edomites or the Babylonians.

7, 8: I sit in darkness: of the exile. The Lord is my light: the Lor is my "day" of freedom.

11 It is the day for building your walls; on that day the bound-12 ary shall be taken away. | It is the day; and they shall come to you from Assyria and from Egypt, from Tyre even to the River, 13 from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain; | and the land shall be a waste because of its citizens, as a result of their deeds.
14 Shepherd your people with your staff, the flock of your inheritance, that dwells apart in a woodland, in the midst of Carmel. Let them feed in Basan and Galaad, as in the days of 15 old; | as in the days when you came from the land of Egypt, show us wonderful signs.
16 The nations shall behold and be put to shame, in spite of all their strength; they shall put their hands over their mouths; 17 their ears shall become deaf. | They shall lick the dust like the serpent, like reptiles on the ground; they shall come quaking from their fastnesses, trembling in fear of you [the Lord, our God].
18 Who is there like you, the God who removes guilt and pardons sin for the remnant of his inheritance; who does not 19 persist in anger forever, but delights rather in clemency, | and will again have compassion on us, treading underfoot our guilt?
20 You will cast into the depths of the sea all our sins; | you will show faithfulness to Jacob, and grace to Abraham, as you have sworn to our fathers from days of old.

7, 11-13: An oracle of restoration, most likely originating from the time of the exile. The River: Euphrates.

7, 14-17: This is most likely a postexilic psalm-prayer to Yahweh.

7, 16: Put their hands over their mouths: a biblical sign of respectful silence.

7, 18-20: A conclusion to the prayer (vv. 14-17) and to the book.

THE BOOK OF NAHUM

INTRODUCTION

The signal flashed for the beginning of the end of the mighty Assyria empire when its great king, Ashurbanipal, died in 632 B.C. Vassa countries gradually struck out for independence. Even Juda felt freer Finally, the neo-Babylonians and the Medes destroyed the Assyria capital of Ninive in July-August, 612 B.C. Three years later the la attempt of Assyria to regain her crumbling empire ended at Haran Syria.

The prophecy of Nahum is a prolonged triumphal cry over the declin and fall of Ninive. The prophet echoed the joy felt from Egypt to th Persian Gulf, for the Assyrians were reputedly the most cruel rulers o antiquity.

The long standing and still the majority opinions claim that Nahum' prophecies date from either 626-25 or 613-12 B.C. Many non Catholic critics who previously believed this to be a "prophecy" writte after the fall of Ninive, regard it now as a true prophecy. The hypothesi however, that Nahum's prophecy is a liturgical text composed eithe before the fall of Ninive, requesting a fast fall, or after it, in happ celebration, is rejected by most scholars, but it is generally admitted tha there are liturgical motifs strewn in throughout the work.

The prophet interprets Assyria's downfall as God's punishment o the wicked Assyrian oppression. Nahum sees the fall as a hopeful sig of a just and peaceful future. He simultaneously depicts God as the Lor of history, i.e., He rules Assyria as well as Juda (see 2, 14). Uniquel different from the other prophets, Nahum does not denounce th people of Yahweh nor issue a clarion call for repentance and reform This holds true only of his booklet, but in his life he may very easil have preached reform.

Main divisions of the Book of Nahum are:

1. The Title, 1, 1
2. The Lord's Coming in Judgment, 1, 2—2, 3
3. The Fall of Ninive, 2, 2-14
4. Ruin Imminent and Inevitable, 3, 1-19

2 The Lord's Coming in Judgment A jealous and aveng ing God is the Lord, an avenger is the Lord, and angry; th Lord brings vengeance on his adversaries, and lays up wrath

---

1, 1: Nahum: it may mean "The Comforter." Of Elcos: experts ca only guess that the site of Nahum's home town is in Galilee, Judi Negeb. As to the place of his death, a sixteenth century A.D. legen places his tomb at a place near Ninive.

1, 2-8: The style of this psalm is alphabetic, i.e., each verse begin

3 for his enemies; | the Lord is slow to anger, yet great in power, and the Lord never leaves the guilty unpunished. In hurricane and tempest is his path, and clouds are the dust at his feet; | 4 he rebukes the sea and leaves it dry, and all the rivers he dries up. Withered are Basan and Carmel, and the bloom of Lebanon 5 fades; | the mountains quake before him, and the hills dissolve;
the earth is laid waste before him, the world and all who dwell 6 in it. | Before his wrath, who can stand firm, and who can face his blazing anger? His fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks 7 are rent asunder before him. | The Lord is good, a refuge on the day of distress; he takes care of those who have recourse tangle of thornbushes is set aflame, like dry stubble, they shall and so vigorous, still they shall be mown down and disappear.

13 Though I have humbled you, I will humble you no more. | Now will I break his yoke from off you, and burst asunder your 11 bonds. | From you he came who devised evil against the Lord, the scoundrel planner;

with the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Only eleven of the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used in the eight verses that remained preserved of this poem. It ranks among the paeans of praise, albeit picturing Yahweh, in allusions to the creation and the Exodus events, as an angry conquering God. The psalm sets the stage for a religious view of Ninive's downfall.

1, 2: A jealous . . . God: for explanation, see Ex 20, 5 n.

1, 4: Basan, Carmel . . . Lebanon: places famous for their forests.

1, 6-7: The coming of God in judgment has two aspects: to those who oppose Him it will be unbearable; to "those who have recourse to Him" it will bring strength and consolation.

1, 9-2 and v. 3: These verses probably contain five fragments of longer oracles.

1, 9-10: Nahum's question to the Judeans, who are discouraged because of the Assyrian domination, means that they are minimizing God's power. He assures them of the contrary: "It is He who will make an end."

1, 12-13: This fragmentary oracle addressed to Juda must be understood as vv. 9-10 above.

1, 12: They: the enemies of Juda. You: Juda.

1, 13: His yoke: the dominion of the Assyrian king over Juda.

1, 11: Note the transposition of verses by the translators. This fragmentary prophecy is addressed to Ninive. From you: Ninive. He came . . . planner: many believe this unnamed Assyrian king is Sennacherib who besieged Jerusalem 701 B.C. (4 Kgs 18—19).

14 The Lord has commanded regarding you: no descendant shall come to bear your name; from your temple I will abolish the carved and the molten image; I will make your grave a mockery.

1 See, upon the mountains there advances the bearer of good news, announcing peace! Celebrate your feasts, O Juda, fulfill your vows! For nevermore shall you be invaded by the scoun-3 drel; he is completely destroyed. | The Lord will restore the vine of Jacob, the pride of Israel, though ravagers have ravaged them and ruined the tendrils.

2 The Fall of Ninive The hammer comes up against you; guard the rampart, keep watch on the road, gird your loins, 4 marshal all your strength! | The shields of his warriors are crimsoned, the soldiers colored in scarlet; fiery steel are the chariots on the day of his mustering. The horses are frenzied; | 5 the chariots dash madly through the streets and wheel in the squares, looking like firebrands, flashing like lightning bolts. | 6 His picked troops are called, ranks break at their charge; to the 7 wall they rush, the mantelet is set up. | The river gates are 8 opened, the palace shudders, | its mistress is led forth captive, and her handmaids, under guard, moaning like doves, beating

1, 14: This fragmentary prophecy is addressed to the Assyrian king at the time of Nahum.

2, 1 and 3: This fragmentary prophecy is addressed to Juda. Since the herald announces the news of peace (compare the same imagery in Is 52, 7), due to freedom from Assyrian domination, a religious revival will take place (v. 1). Nahum may have believed that the fall of Assyria would pave the way for a reunion of the northern ("Israel") and southern ("Jacob") kingdoms.

2, 2-4a: A description of the Ninivites.

2, 2: The hammer comes up against you: the enemy is about to crush Ninive. The entire text of chs. 2—3 is acknowledged as one of the peaks of Old Testament poetry because of their staccato effect, dramatic color, and power. Scholars like to compare Nahum as a martial poet with the poet of the Song of Debora (Jgs 5).

2, 4b: Fiery steel are the chariots: from here on the description shifts from the Ninivites to the attackers.

2, 5: Streets . . . squares: these may be outside the city walls proper.

2, 6: Mantelet: a movable siege engine with a built-in shelter to protect the besiegers as they advance against the city walls. The best example is seen on Assyrian bas-reliefs.

2, 7: The attackers pour into the city.

2, 8: Mistress . . . and her handmaids: either the queen of Ninive with the ladies of her court, or the statue of Ishtar, Ninive's chief goddess, with her temple prostitutes. See 3, 4.

9 their breasts. | Ninive is like a pool whose waters escape; "Stop!
10 Stop!" but none turns back. | "Plunder the silver, plunder the gold!" There is no end to the treasure, to their wealth in precious things of every kind!
11 Emptiness, desolation, waste; melting hearts and trembling
12 knees, writhing in every frame, every face blanched! | Where is the lions' cave, the young lions' den, where the lion went in 13 and out, and the cub, with no one to disturb them? | The lion snatched enough for his cubs, and strangled for his lionesses; he filled his dens with prey, and his caves with plunder. |
14 I come against you, says the Lord of hosts; I will consume in smoke your chariots, and the sword shall devour your young lions; your preying on the land I will bring to an end, the cry of your lionesses shall be heard no more.

1 Ruin Imminent and Inevitable Woe to the bloody city, 2 all lies, full of plunder, whose looting never stops! | The crack of the whip, the rumbling sound of wheels; horses a-gallop,
3 chariots bounding, cavalry charging, the flame of the sword, the flash of the spear, the many slain, the heaping corpses,
4 the endless bodies to stumble upon! | For the many debaucheries of the harlot, fair and charming, a mistress of witchcraft, who enslaved nations with her harlotries, and peoples by
5 her witchcraft: | I am come against you, and I will strip your skirt from you; I will show your nakedness to the na-
6 tions, to the kingdoms your shame! | I will cast filth upon
7 you, disgrace you and put you to shame; | till everyone who sees you runs from you, saying, "Ninive is destroyed; who can pity her? Where can one find any to console her?"
8 Are you better than No-Amon that was set among the streams, surrounded by waters, with the flood for her rampart
9 and water her wall? | Ethiopia was her strength, and Egypt, and others without end; Phut and the Libyans were her auxil-
10 iaries. | Yet even she went captive into exile, even her little ones were dashed to pieces at the corner of every street; for her

2, 12: The lion: the king of Assyria.

3, 1-19: This chapter contains another description of the fall of Ninive within the same poem of 2, 2—3, 19.

3, 5-6: The punishment of adulteresses.

3, 8: No-Amon: "No" was the Egyptian name of the capital of Upper Egypt, called Thebes by the Greeks; its tutelary deity was Amon. The great city was destroyed by the Assyrian king, Ashurbanipal in 663 B.C.

3, 9: Her: refers to No-Amon (Thebes). Phut: perhaps modern Somaliland on the Red Sea.

nobles they cast lots, and all her great men were put into 11 chains. | You, too, shall drink of this till you faint away; you, 12 too, shall seek a refuge from the foe. | All your fortresses are but fig trees, bearing early figs that fall, when shaken, into the 13 hungry mouth. | See, the troops are women in your midst; to your foes the gates of your land are open wide, fire has con-14 sumed their bars. | Draw water for the siege, strengthen your fortresses; go down into the mud and tread the clay, take hold 15 of the brick mold! | There the fire shall consume you, the sword shall cut you down.

Multiply like the grasshoppers, multiply like the locusts! | 16.17 Make your couriers more numerous than the stars, your garrisons as many as grasshoppers, and your scribes as locust swarms gathered on the rubble fences on a cold day! Yet when the sun warms them, the grasshoppers will spread their wings and fly, and vanish, no one knows where.

18 Alas! how your shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria, your nobles have gone to rest; your people are scattered upon the 19 mountains, with none to gather them. | There is no healing for your hurt, your wound is mortal. All who hear this news of you clap their hands over you; for who has not been overwhelmed, steadily, by your malice?

3, 11: You: Nineve is here warned of a similar destruction. Intoxication from drinking the cup of God's wrath is a biblical figure of divine condemnation.

3, 14: An ironic exhortation to prepare the city for a futile defense. Go down . . . brick mold: make bricks for the city walls.

3, 18-19: A satirical dirge.

THE BOOK OF HABACUC

INTRODUCTION

A minority of commentators believe that in the original text it did not read "Chaldea" (1, 6) and, therefore, depending on their substitutions, the historical background becomes the Persian period, the Greek period, or even the Machabean period.

The more common opinion reads "Chaldea," i.e., neo-Babylon. Hence, the background is briefly this: Chaldea was a state in southern Babylonia. Nabopolassar the Chaldean broke Babylonia away from Assyria by 626 B.C. The neo-Babylonians and the Medes captured Ninive, the Assyrian capital in 612 B.C. At the battle of Carchemish in 605 B.C. the neo-Babylonians definitively defeated the Assyrians and their allies, the Egyptians. With the Assyrian empire now a glory of the past, the victors undertook the invasion of Syria and Palestine. Hence, the prophecy of Habacuc was composed between 605 and 597 B.C.

Scholars at present hold that Habacuc wrote all of chapters one and two, but the authenticity of chapter three is contested. Because of the superscription (3, 1) and postscript (3, 19) a long standing opinion held that it belonged to a liturgical collection and was later incorporated in the Book of Habacuc. A modern minority opinion reverses the process. This opinion says that the liturgy borrowed and lengthened Habacuc's hymn (ch. 3) because it was general enough in meaning to be adapted to liturgical use. One of the Dead Sea Scrolls, discovered 1947-48 in Cave 1, dating from about the time of Christ, is a pesher (commentary) on Hb 1—2. It does not follow that Hb 3, the canticle, was not originally a part of the work. It may simply mean that the Dead Sea commentators did not want to comment on it.

Habacuc, interested in the problem of evil, asked how God could be just if He allowed an unholy nation, Juda, to be punished by a still more unholy nation, Babylon.

The prophet found this answer: the just will be saved (see 2, 4 n), and, in later history, the Babylonians will be punished. In theological language, Habacuc's answer was faith. To him, no matter what the calamity was, it meant: he who believes in God will be victorious. This faith was the essence of living religiously. Hence, the answer remained on the plane of earthly retribution. The answer of eternal retribution was to come later.

Main divisions of the Book of Habacuc are:

1. Title, 1, 1
2. The Prophet's Complaint and the Lord's Answer, 1. 2—2, 20
3. Canticle, 3, 1-19

1

1 The oracle which Habacuc the prophet received in vision.

2 The Prophet's Complaint and Its Answer How long, O Lord? I cry for help but you do not listen! I cry out to you, 3 "Violence!" but you do not intervene. | Why do you let me see ruin; why must I look at misery? Destruction and violence are 4 before me; there is strife, and clamorous discord. | This is why the law is benumbed, and judgment is never rendered: because the wicked circumvent the just; this is why judgment comes forth perverted.
5 Look over the nations and see, and be utterly amazed! For a work is being done in your days that you would not have 6 believed, were it told. | For see, I am raising up Chaldea, that bitter and unruly people, that marches the breadth of the land to take dwellings not his own.
7 Terrible and dreadful is he, from himself derive his law and 8 his majesty. | Swifter than leopards are his horses, and keener than wolves at evening. His horses prance, his horsemen come 9 from afar: they fly like the eagle hastening to devour; | each comes for the rapine, their combined onset is that of a storm-10 wind that heaps up captives like sand. | He scoffs at kings, and princes are his laughingstock; he laughs at any fortress, heaps 11 up a ramp, and conquers it. | Then he veers like the wind and is gone—this culprit who makes his own strength his god!
12 Are you not from eternity, O Lord, my holy God, immortal?
O Lord, you have marked him for judgment, O Rock, you have 13 set him up for punishment! | Too pure are your eyes to look

1, 1: The oracle: a threatening speech. Habacuc: nothing is known of him except legends which arose about him after his day. Vision: literary or true vision? See Am 7, 9 n.

1, 2-4: Habacuc's first complaint is the failure of justice. The prophet, in a dialogue with God, complains about God not stopping the catastrophes inflicted by the Babylonians' invasion of Juda.

1, 5-11: God's first reply is that the Babylonians are His instruments in punishing sinful men. This is a frequent idea among prophets before the Babylonian exile.

1, 8: Wolves at evening: the wolves are considered more vicious in the evening when setting out for prey.

1, 11: Veers like the wind: the conquests in the ancient Near East were mainly raiding expeditions to collect tribute.

1, 12-17: Habacuc's second complaint is against the destructive Babylonians.

1, 12: O Rock: an ancient title praising God's power.

1, 13: The prophet asks: Why does the immortal (v. 12) and pure God gaze silently while the faithless and wicked Babylonians kill the Judeans who are more just than they (v. 13)?

upon evil, and the sight of misery you cannot endure. Why, then, do you gaze on the faithless in silence while the wicked 14 man devours one more just than himself? | You have made man like the fish of the sea, like creeping things without a 15 master. | He brings them all up with his hook, he hauls them away with his net, he gathers them in his seine; and so he re-16 joices and exults. | Therefore he sacrifices to his net, and burns incense to his seine; for thanks to them his portion is generous, 17 and his repast sumptuous. | Shall he, then, keep on brandishing his sword to slay peoples without mercy?

1 I will stand at my guard post, and station myself upon the rampart, and keep watch to see what he will say to me, and what answer he will give to my complaint.
2 Then the Lord answered me and said: Write down the vision 3 clearly upon the tablets, so that one can read it readily. | For the vision still has its time, presses on to fulfillment, and will not disappoint; if it delays, wait for it, it will surely come, it will 4 not be late. | The rash man has no integrity; but the just man, because of his faith, shall live. Wealth, too, is treacherous: the 5 proud, unstable man— | he who opens wide his throat like the nether world, and is insatiable as death, who gathers to himself

1, 14-15: To illustrate the cruelty of the Babylonians, the prophet compares them to fishermen, joyfully capturing their prey, the Judeans.

1, 16: This may be meant figuratively or it may allude to a Babylonian sacrifice of war weapons after the manner of Scythians, who offered sacrifice to a sword, which symbolized their god of war, Ares.

2, 1: Habacuc's soliloquy. Keep watch: a prophet often considered himself a watchman. What he will say: what God will say.

2, 2-4a: God's second reply.

2, 3: The sense is: the vision will come at God's appointed time and therefore it cannot be rushed nor delayed.

2, 4: The more common opinion understands the answer as a contrast between the Judeans ("the just man") and the Babylonians ("the rash man"), rather than a contrast between the just Judeans and the rash Judeans. The just man will live because he trusts in and lives by God's law. The rash man, who does not live trustfully, is devoid of integrity. Hence, according to the more common opinion: Juda will survive, Babylon will vanish. This verse, one of the most popular in the Old Testament, is the answer to Habacuc's whole problem of evil (see Introduction). V. 4 is quoted in Rom 1, 17; Gal 3, 11; Heb 10, 38 to buttress the teaching that man is justified through faith in Christ.

2, 4b-5: The prelude to the five woes. Since Habacuc knows that Babylon will be chastised, he preaches five maledictions against the oppressor. Rich Babylon is as greedy for land as the nether world is for dead victims.

all the nations, and rallies to himself all the peoples— | shall not all these take up a taunt against him, satire and epigrams about him, to say:
Woe to him who stores up what is not his: how long can it last! he loads himself down with debts. | Shall not your creditors rise suddenly? Shall not they who make you tremble awake?
You shall become their spoil! | Because you despoiled many peoples all the rest of the nations shall despoil you; because of men's blood shed, and violence done to the land, to the city and to all who dwell in it.
Woe to him who pursues evil gain for his household, setting his nest on high to escape the reach of misfortune! | You have devised shame for your household, cutting off many peoples, forfeiting your own life: | for the stone in the wall shall cry out, and the beam in the woodwork shall answer it!
Woe to him who builds a city by bloodshed, and establishes a town by wickedness! | Is not this from the Lord of hosts:
peoples toil for the flames, and nations grow weary for nought! |
But the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the Lord's glory as water covers the sea.
Woe to you who give your neighbors a flood of your wrath to drink, and make them drunk, till their nakedness is seen! |
You are filled with shame instead of glory; drink, you too, and stagger! On you shall revert the cup from the Lord's right hand, and utter shame on your glory. | For the violence done to Lebanon shall cover you, and the destruction of the beasts shall terrify you; because of men's blood shed, and violence done to the land, to the city and to all who dwell in it.
Woe to him who says to wood, "Awake!" to dumb stone,

2, 6b-8: The first woe is the crime of plundering. The Babylonians will be repaid in coin according to the law of retaliation.

2, 9-11: The second woe is Babylon's ("household") crime of evilly acquiring an empire.

2, 11: The empire, built at the cost of injustice, will call down vengeance on its builders.

2, 12-14: The third woe is the crime of cruelty.

2, 13: Peoples toil for the flames: peoples build only to have fire consume their work. Maybe this alludes to the Babylonians whose empire will soon perish.

2, 14: A quotation from Is 11, 9.

2, 15-17: The fourth woe is the crime of the harshness with which the Babylonians treated conquered cities. But these cities will retaliate.

2, 16: The cup from the Lord's right hand: the cup of God's anger.

2, 17: The violence done to Lebanon: the spoliation of the cedar forests of Lebanon, used in lavish building projects by the conquerors. The destruction of the beasts: the killing of the wild animals through excessive hunting by the conquerors.

"Arise!" Can such a thing give oracles? See, it is overlaid with 18 gold and silver, but there is no life-breath in it. | Of what avail is the carved image, that its maker should carve it? Or the molten image and lying oracle, that its very maker should trust 20 in it, and make dumb idols? | But the Lord is in his holy temple; silence before him, all the earth!

Canticle

1 Prayer of Habacuc, the prophet. To a plaintive tune.
2 O Lord, I have heard your renown, and feared, O Lord, your work. In the course of the years revive it, in the course of the years make it known; in your wrath remember compassion!
3 God comes from Theman, the Holy One from Mount Pharan.
Covered are the heavens with his glory, and with his praise the 4 earth is filled. | His splendor spreads like the light; rays shine
5 forth from beside him, where his power is concealed. | Before 6 him goes pestilence, and the plague follows in his steps. | He pauses to survey the earth; his look makes the nations tremble.
The eternal mountains are shattered, the age-old hills bow low 7 along his ancient ways. | I see the tents of Chusan collapse; trembling are the pavilions of the land of Madian.
8 Is your anger against the streams, O Lord? Is your wrath against the streams, your rage against the sea, that you drive the 9 steeds of your victorious chariot? | Bared and ready is your bow, filled with arrows is your quiver. Into streams you split the 10 earth; | at sight of you the mountains tremble. A torrent of rain descends; the ocean gives forth its roar. The sun forgets to rise, 11 | the moon remains in its shelter, at the light of your flying arrows, at the gleam of your flashing spear.

2, 18-20: The fifth woe is the crime of idolatrous worship, here illustrated as folly by contrasting idols (vv. 19-18) with God (v. 20).

3, 1-19: In the context of chs. 1—2 (and especially 2, 4) this psalm expresses the author's confidence that Yahweh will wage war victoriously against the Babylonians. The just Judeans have merely to wait for God's intervention.

3, 1: A later liturgical rubric, as is also the end of v. 19 (see Introduction).

3, 2: Revive it: your wondrous deeds of the past.

3, 3-15: Conventional language is employed to describe the appearance of the Lord, as in Ex 19, 16-19.

3, 3: The Lord is represented as coming from Sinai, where He had appeared to Moses and given Israel the Covenant and the Law.

3, 5: This may be an influence from Chanaan whose gods were believed to spread diseases. In the subsequent verses there are several similar parallels from ancient Chanaanite literature.

3, 7: Chusan: Ethiopia or a land close to Edom and Madian.

12 In wrath you bestride the earth, in fury you trample the 13 nations. | You come forth to save your people, to save your anointed one. You crush the heads of the wicked, you lay bare 14 their bases at the neck. | You pierce with your shafts the heads of their princes whose boast would be of devouring the wretched 15 in their lair. | You tread the sea with your steeds amid the churning of the deep waters.
16 I hear, and my body trembles; at the sound, my lips quiver.
Decay invades my bones, my legs tremble beneath me. I await the day of distress that will come upon the people who attack 17 us. | For though the fig tree blossom not nor fruit be on the vines, though the yield of the olive fail and the terraces produce no nourishment, though the flocks disappear from the fold and 18 there be no herd in the stalls, | yet will I rejoice in the Lord and 19 exult in my saving God. | God, my Lord, is my strength; he makes my feet swift as those of hinds and enables me to go upon the heights.

For the leader; with stringed instruments.

3, 13: Anointed one: the king.
3, 15: A poetic figure manifesting God's power over the seas.

THE BOOK OF SOPHONIA

INTRODUCTION

Sophonia (or Zephaniah) delivered his oracles "in the days of Josia, . . . king of Juda" (1, 1), who reigned 640-609 B.C. It is generally held that the prophet preached from 640 to 630, the eve of Jeremia's appearance as a preaching prophet.

On the historical and political scene, Assyria's stern and glorious hegemony all over the Middle East began to weaken, especially from 632 when the last great monarch Ashurbanipal died. The Scythians were devastating Syria about 630. The Assyrian colossus fell 612 with the capture of Ninive.

Taking advantage of Assyria's waning power, king Josia begins to sweep the nation of its religious syncretism and finally launches a full religious reform in 622. Hence, Sophonia sketches the setting before the religious reform. Through the eyes of the prophet, we see Juda plagued with Assyrian, Ammonite, Chanaanite forms of worship, social injustice, and false prophets. The bright side of the nation was the faithful remnant which was to be the soul of the forthcoming reform.

The Book of Sophonia as we now read it in the Hebrew Bible comes from after the Babylonian exile of 538 B.C., but the bulk of the oracles is admitted nowadays by most commentators to come from the prophet.

Main divisions of the Book of Sophonia are:

1. The Day of the Lord: A Day of Doom, 1, 2-18
2. The Day of the Lord: A Day of Judgment of the Nation, 2, 1-15
3. Reproach and Promise for Jerusalem, 3, 1-20

1, 1: The word of the Lord: a synonym for oracle or prophecy. Sophonia: the name means literally "Yahweh has treasured." The son of Hezecia: scholars dispute whether this refers to the Judean king by that name which would make Sophonia come from royal blood.

1, 2-18: Continuing to picture the Day of Yahweh as one of punishment (see Am 5, 18-20 n), Sophonia applies the "Day" to Jerusalem and Juda (v. 4), but he has nature "punished" in sympathy with man's sin, a frequent biblical characteristic (vv. 2, 3, 18). It remains disputed whether Sophonia's "Day" here was inspired by the Scythians' invasion of Palestine a few years before this oracle.

the birds of the sky, and the fishes of the sea. I will overthrow the wicked; I will destroy mankind from the face of the earth, against all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; I will destroy from this place the last vestige of Baal, the very names of his priests, | 5 and those who adore the host of heaven on the roofs, with those 6 who adore the Lord but swear by Melchom; | and those who have fallen away from the Lord, and those who do not seek the Lord.

7 Silence in the presence of the Lord God! for near is the day of the Lord, yes, the Lord has prepared a slaughter feast, he has 8 consecrated his guests. | On the day of the Lord's slaughter feast I will punish the princes, and the king's sons, and all that 9 dress in foreign apparel. | I will punish, on that day, all who leap over the threshold, who fill the house of their master with 10 violence and deceit. | On that day, says the Lord, a cry will be heard from the Fish Gate, a wail from the New Quarter, loud 11 crashing from the hills. | Wail, O inhabitants of the Mortar!
for all the merchants will be destroyed, all who weigh out silver, 12 done away with. | At that time I will explore Jerusalem with lamps; I will punish the men who thicken on their lees, who say in their hearts, "Neither good nor evil can the Lord do." |

1, 4-6: Sophonia denounces the Judeans for practicing religious syncretism.

1, 5: Host of heaven on the roofs: the Assyrian astral cult was practiced in Juda. Melchom: the god of the Ammonites who demanded human sacrifices.

1, 7-9: The Day of the Lord applied to Juda.

1, 8: King's sons: the court officials who wielded power during the minority of king Josia. Foreign apparel: the court ministers aped the ways of the Assyrians.

1, 9: All who leap over the threshold: for one meaning of this uncertain expression, see 1 Sm 5, 5 n. Who fill the house . . . deceit: an allusion to social injustice practiced by the court ministers of the royal palace ("house").

1, 10-11: Fish Gate . . . New Quarter . . . Mortar: well known sections of northern Jerusalem which would usually suffer the first impact of invaders. The hills: surrounding Jerusalem. These two verses are an indictment of the Jerusalem merchants.

1, 12: Men who thicken on their lees: Sophonia uses the figure of undisturbed lees at the bottom of a bottle of wine to illustrate lazy men—perhaps the most graphic expression in the book. The "lamp" metaphor shows that no one will escape God's punishment. The representation in art of Sophonia with a lamp derives from this verse. Neither good nor evil can the Lord do: God does not interfere with the world.

1, 13: Sophonia probably borrowed this verse from Am 5, 11.

devastation; they will build houses, but shall not dwell in them, 14 plant vineyards, but not drink their wine. | Near is the great day of the Lord, near and very swiftly coming; hark, the day of 15 the Lord! bitter, then, the warrior's cry. | A day of wrath is that day, a day of anguish and distress, a day of destruction and desolation, a day of darkness and gloom, a day of thick black 16 clouds, | a day of trumpet blasts and battle alarm against forti-
17 fied cities, against battlements on high. | I will hem men in till they walk like the blind, because they have sinned against the Lord; and their blood shall be poured out like dust, and their 18 brains like dung. | Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to save them on the day of the Lord's wrath, when in the fire of his jealousy all the earth shall be consumed. For he shall make an end, yes, a sudden end, of all who live on the earth.

1 The Day of the Lord: A Day of Judgment Gather, 2 gather yourselves together, O nation without shame! | Before you are driven away, like chaff that passes on; before there comes upon you the blazing anger of the Lord: before there 3 comes upon you the day of the Lord's anger. | Seek the Lord, all you humble of the earth, who have observed his law; seek justice, seek humility; perhaps you may be sheltered on the day

1, 15-16: These upheavals are not intended literally, but as part of the accepted prophetic description of the Day of the Lord as in Jl 3, 3-4.

1, 15: A day of wrath is that day: the Dies irae dies illa comes directly from this line. This chapter has influenced the medieval hymn, Dies irae (Day of wrath), which is used in the Mass for the Dead in the Roman Liturgy. The Dies Irae in Verdi's "Requiem" is a most vivid translation in music of what Sophonia meant by God's day of wrath.

1, 16: A day of trumpet blasts: almost literally translated into the hymn Dies irae. Compare Handel's "Messiah."

1, 18—2, 2: Among the discoveries of the Dead Sea Scrolls is a commentary (pesher) on these verses.

2, 1-3: Sophonia summons Juda ("nation without shame") to escape the Day of the Lord, but the prophet addresses especially the "humble."

2, 3: Humble . . . seek humility: before the time of Sophonia the Hebrew word anawim ("the poor people"), and a few cognate Hebrew words, meant both the economically and socially poor. Sophonia begins to give this word religious connotations. It developed into an ever richer spiritual meaning down to New Testament times. The poor become those who accept their poverty without rebelling against God. In Sophonia, poverty begins to take on the connotations of obedience ("who have observed his law") and holiness ("seek justice") and confidence in God ("who shall take refuge in the name of the Lord" 3, 12).

THE SPIRITUALITY OF THE POOR FOLK: Its Origin and Growth

A STUDY IN BIBLICAL THEOLOGY

Sophonia is usually considered by scholars as the first who began injecting heavy spiritual overtones into anawim, the Hebrew word for "the poor people." Until his time this word meant the socially and economically poor (see So 2, 3 n). Throughout the centuries it took on the connotations of different virtues as shown on the chart. Gradually, the poor people assume a discernible spiritual physiognomy in spite of much overlapping and repetition of virtues. The chart illustrates only some key writings on poor folk spirituality. It follows for the most part the use of the Hebrew word anawim. The method of word study does not exclude poor folk spirituality in those parts of the Bible where this spirituality is found even though the word anawim is not. Job is an eminent example of the "poor man" although that Hebrew word is not used in Job 42, 6. Yet in this text Job expresses contrition and surrender for having questioned God on why the poor suffer and the unjust prosper. These are typical virtues of the poor folk's attitude.

One notable feature of this biblical theological study is the disregard for chronology in revelation. Messianism is a prime example. To our amazement, God did not reveal the most sublime qualities of the Messia and His kingdom at the end of the Old Testament period but much earlier. Likewise, we would expect that this spirituality of the poor grew richer with time. But, instead, we find that its apex is reached early in the Old Testament: it is the Suffering Servant Song addressed to the sixth century exiles. The spiritual note therein is expiatory death. This note is unique in the Old Testament. Doctrinally, not chronologically, this expiatory idea hovers about the threshold of the New Testament's teaching on expiation. The remaining Old Testament examples of poor folk spirituality have been charted evenly because the decision concerning which virtues were higher than others would be too subjective.

In New Testament times the poor folk spirituality reaches another peak in the Magnificat of Mary (Luke 1, 46-55). The pivot of this New Testament song of the poor folk is: "He . . . has exalted the lowly" (v. 52). The Greek word from which "lowly" is translated is the counterpart of the Hebrew word for the poor. Mary contrasts the poor folk with the proud (v. 51), the mighty (v. 52), and the rich (v. 53). Mary was the living synthesis of the Old Testament poor folk spirituality.

The poor folk spirituality of the Magnificat is enhanced by Christ's teaching in His first beatitude: "Blessed are the poor in spirit" (Mt 5, 3). He repeats the Old Testament teaching on poverty but sets it more squarely on its foundation, which is: reliance upon God. Jesus teaches the dignity of the poor (Mt 25, 34-40) who are to prolong His own life which was the poor man's supreme model. Mary and Jesus are the two New Testament peaks not because of having added richer, and essential doctrinal content to the Old Testament poor folk spirituality but because they lived it.

4 of the Lord's anger. | For Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ascalon shall be a waste, Azotus they shall drive out at midday, and 5 Accaron shall be uprooted. | Woe to you who dwell by the sea-coast, to the Cretan folk! The word of the Lord is against you, I will humble you, land of the Philistines, and leave you to 6 perish without an inhabitant! | The coastland of the Cretans 7 shall become fields for shepherds, and folds for flocks. | The coast shall belong to the remnant of the house of Juda; by the sea they shall pasture. In the houses of Ascalon at evening they shall couch their flocks, for the Lord their God shall visit them, and bring about their restoration.
8 I have heard the revilings uttered by Moab, and the insults of the Ammonites, when they reviled my people and made 9 boasts against their territory. | Therefore, as I live, says the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel, Moab shall become like Sodom, the land of Ammon like Gomorra: a field of nettles and a salt pit and a waste forever. The remnant of my people shall plunder 10 them, the survivors of my nation dispossess them. | Such shall be the requital of their pride, because they reviled and boasted 11 against the people of the Lord of hosts. | The Lord shall inspire them with fear when he makes all the gods of earth to waste away; then, each from its own place, all the coastlands of the nations shall adore him.
12 You too, O Chusites, shall be slain by the sword of the Lord.
13 He will stretch out his hand against the north, to destroy 14 Assyria; he will make Ninive a waste, dry as the desert. | In her midst shall settle in droves all the wild life of the hollows the screech owl and the desert owl shall roost in her columns

2, 4-15: These are oracles against the nations, for the meaning of which see Am 1, 2 n. In this section there may be random additions (vv. 7, 10, 11) by a hand after the exile, because Jewish editors often edi torialized prophetic oracles against the Gentiles.

2, 4: Gaza . . . Ascalon . . . Azotus . . . Accaron: four of the five cities of the Philistine confederation. The fifth city, Geth, is omitted. perhaps because it was already destroyed.

2, 5: Cretan folk: the Philistines who came from Crete.

2, 7: See 2, 9 n.

2, 8-9: There are different educated guesses to identify the his torical incidents regarding the Moabites and Ammonites alluded to here.

2, 9: The remnant . . . survivors: some believe that the remnan here and in v. 7 are a postexilic addition of hope for the restoration of former times. See the basic meaning of remnant in Am 5, 15 n.

2, 11: The coastlands: the islands of the Mediterranean Basin.

2, 12: Chusites: at this time the Egyptians were called Chusites be cause they were being ruled by an Ethiopian dynasty. This may be a fragmentary oracle against Egypt.

2, 13-15: See the whole prophecy of Nahum on the fall of Ninive their call shall resound from the window, the raven's croak 15 from the doorway. | Is this the exultant city that dwelt secure; that told herself, "There is no other than I!" How has she become a waste, a lair for wild beasts? Whoever passes by her hisses, and shakes his fist!

1 Reproach and Promise for Jerusalem Woe to the city, rebellious and polluted, to the tyrannical city! | She hears no voice, accepts no correction; in the Lord she has not trusted, to 3 her God she has not drawn near. | Her princes in her midst are roaring lions; her judges are wolves of the night that have 4 had no bones to gnaw by morning. | Her prophets are insolent, treacherous men; her priests profane what is holy, and do vio-5 lence to the Law. | The Lord within her is just, who does no wrong; morning after morning he renders judgment unfailingly, at dawn.
6 I have destroyed nations, their battlements are laid waste;
I have made their streets deserted, with no one passing through;
their cities are devastated, with no man dwelling in them. | 7 I said, "Surely now you will fear me, you will accept correction"; she should not fail to see all I have visited upon her. Yet all the 8 more eagerly have they done all their corrupt deeds. | Therefore, wait for me, says the Lord, against the day when I arise as accuser; for it is my decision to gather together the nations, to assemble the kingdoms, in order to pour out upon them my wrath, all my blazing anger; for in the fire of my jealousy shall all the earth be consumed.
9 For then I will change and purify the lips of the peoples, that they may call upon the name of the Lord, to serve him with one 10 accord; | from beyond the rivers of Ethiopia and as far as the recesses of the North, they shall bring me offerings.
11 On that day you need not be ashamed of all your deeds, your

2, 15: The exultant city: Ninive.

3, 1-5: Oracles against Jerusalem ("the city"). Most probably the oracles against the nations (2, 4-15) preceded the oracles against Jerusalem to serve as a warning to the latter. See Am, 2, 6-16 n which follows the same order.

3, 3: That have had no bones to gnaw by morning: the Hebrew is obscure here.

3, 6-7: The people did not profit from Yahweh's destruction of the Gentiles.

3, 9-10: God will purify the lips of the pagans so that they will be able to praise God and be converted.

3, 11-13: On that day: the poor and humble remnant will be saved. See 2, 3 n.

rebellious actions against me; for then will I remove from your midst the proud braggarts, and you shall no longer exalt your-12 self on my holy mountain. | But I will leave as a remnant in your midst a people humble and lowly, who shall take refuge 13 in the name of the Lord: | the remnant of Israel. They shall do no wrong and speak no lies; nor shall there be found in their mouths a deceitful tongue; they shall pasture and couch their flocks with none to disturb them.
14 Shout for joy, O daughter Sion! sing joyfully, O Israel! Be glad and exult with all your heart, O daughter Jerusalem! | 15 The Lord has removed the judgment against you, he has turned away your enemies; the King of Israel, the Lord, is in your 16 midst, you have no further misfortune to fear. | On that day, it shall be said to Jerusalem: Fear not, O Sion, be not dis-17 couraged! | The Lord, your God, is in your midst, a mighty savior; he will rejoice over you with gladness, and renew you in 18 his love, he will sing joyfully because of you, | as one sings at festivals.
I will remove disaster from among you, so that none may 19 recount your disgrace. | Yes, at that time I will deal with all who oppress you: I will save the lame, and assemble the outcasts; I will give them praise and renown in all the earth, when 20 I bring about their restoration. | At that time I will bring you home, and at that time I will gather you; for I will give you renown and praise, among all the peoples of the earth, when I bring about your restoration before your very eyes, says the Lord.

3, 14-20: It is a song of hope and joy in which Juda will celebrate her victory over enemies (v. 15), God will be soldier and king (vv. 15 and 17); and the expatriated will be repatriated (v. 20). Many believe this to be postexilic.

THE BOOK OF AGGAI

INTRODUCTION

As the books of Esdras and Nehemias inform us, among the various obstacles which the repatriated Jews faced in the reconstruction of the fatherland was the Samaritan conspiracy to obstruct the rebuilding of the Jerusalem temple. After Darius ascended the Persian throne in 522 B.C., permission was granted to proceed with the temple reconstruction. In 520 B.C., when the people were still discouraged, the two prophets Aggai (Haggai) and Zacharia (Zechariah) exhorted the people to rebuild the temple. These two men returned from Babylon with Zorobabel. Nothing else is known of Aggai, not even his age, which is disputed among scholars; some make him old and others, young. The theme of the temple reconstruction permeates the five oracles or prophecies of Aggai. In historical fact, he preached more than these five oracles. Because of the use of the third person, and because of other reasons, scholars believe that even if these are not his exact words as we have them, they are certainly his thoughts written shortly afterward. Esd 5—6 give the historical background in which these two prophets preached, and Esd 5, 1; 6, 14 refer to their preaching by name.

Main divisions of the Book of Aggai are:

1. Exhortation to Rebuild the Temple of the Lord, 1, 1-15
2. Future Glory of the New Temple, 2, 1-9
3. Offerings of the Unclean Rejected, 2, 10-14
4. Promise of Immediate Blessings, 2, 15-19
5. Pledge to Zorobabel, 2, 20-23

1

1 Exhortation to Rebuild the Temple of the Lord On the first day of the sixth month in the second year of king Darius, the word of the Lord came through the prophet Aggai to the governor of Juda, Zorobabel, son of Salathiel, and to the high priest Josue, son of Josedec:

2 Thus says the Lord of hosts: This people says: "Not now 3 has the time come to rebuild the house of the Lord." (Then this 4 word of the Lord came through Aggai, the prophet:) Is it time

---

1, 1: On the first day . . . second year: August-September in 520 B.C. Each prophecy was orally delivered in the second half of the second year of Darius I, i.e., 520 B.C. Aggai addresses the governor and the high priest.

1, 2-11: The five sayings of Aggai's preaching assembled here, because of their kindred subject matter, are: vv. 2, 4, 5-6, 7-8, 9-11.

1, 2: The Lord of hosts: used fourteen times by Aggai.

1, 4: The second saying, as the first, is a reprimand to the leaders, for you to dwell in your own paneled houses, while this house lies in ruins?

5 Now thus says the Lord of hosts: Consider your ways! | 6 You have sown much, but have brought in little; you have eaten, but have not been satisfied; you have drunk, but have not been exhilarated; have clothed yourselves, but not been warmed; and he who earned wages earned them for a bag with holes in it.
7.8 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Consider your ways! | Go up into the hill country; bring timber, and build the house that I may take pleasure in it and receive my glory, says the Lord. | 9 You expected much, but it came to little; and what you brought home, I blew away. For what cause? says the Lord of hosts.
Because my house lies in ruins, while each of you hurries to his 10 own house. | Therefore the heavens withheld from you their 11 dew, and the earth her crops. | And I called for a drought upon the land and upon the mountains; upon the grain, and upon the wine, and upon the oil, and upon all that the ground brings forth; upon men and upon beasts, and upon all that is produced by hand.
12 Then Zorobabel, son of Salathiel, and the high priest Josue, son of Josedec, and all the remnant of the people listened to the voice of the Lord, their God, and to the words of the prophet Aggai, because the Lord, their God, had sent him, and the 13 people feared because of the Lord. And the Lord's messenger, Aggai, proclaimed to the people as the message of the Lord:
I am with you, says the Lord.
14 Then the Lord stirred up the spirit of the governor of Juda, and through them to the people, that they live in luxurious homes ("paneled") while God's temple remains in ruins.

1, 5: Consider your ways: a favorite expression used, at least equivalently, in v. 7; 2, 15.18.

1, 6: Aggai sees the following misfortunes as a punishment from God: insufficient harvest, food, drink, clothing, and wages. A bag with holes in it: this is perhaps the first allusion in the Bible to coined money.

1, 9: This enigmatic verse probably means that God rejected ("blew away") the sacrifices which they brought to the altar of the ruined temple ("home") because they let the temple stay in ruins while they enjoyed their own homes. In the Bible, breathing (blowing) on something, or someone, can be salutary or harmful. This notion survives in the Middle East.

1, 10-11: The drought and famine are interpreted as the result of not building the temple. Grain . . . wine . . . oil: the familiar Old Testament trio of staple products in Palestine.

1, 12-15: Aggai's speech to the leaders and to the people was well received. The remnant of the people: scholars dispute whether Aggai exhorted only the repatriated Jews to rebuild the temple, or whether he included those Judeans who had not gone into exile.

Zorobabel, son of Salathiel, and the spirit of the high priest Josue, son of Josedec, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people, so that they came and set to work on the house of the 15 Lord of hosts, their God, on the twenty-fourth day of the sixth month.

Future Glory of the New Temple In the second year
1 of king Darius, | on the twenty-first day of the seventh month,
2 the word of the Lord came through the prophet Aggai: Tell this to the governor of Juda, Zorobabel, son of Salathiel, and to the high priest Josue, son of Josedec, and to the remnant of the people:
3 Who is left among you that saw this house in its former glory? And how do you see it now? Does it not seem like
4 nothing in your eyes? | But now take courage, Zorobabel, says the Lord, and take courage, Josue, high priest, son of Josedec, and take courage, all you people of the land says the Lord, and
5 work! For I am with you, says the Lord of hosts. | This is the pact that I made with you when you came out of Egypt, and my spirit continues in your midst; do not fear!
6 For thus says the Lord of hosts: One moment yet, a little while, and I will shake the heavens and the earth, the sea and 7 the dry land. | I will shake all the nations, and the treasures of all the nations will come in, and I will fill this house with 8 glory, says the Lord of hosts. | Mine is the silver and mine the 9 gold says the Lord of hosts. | Greater will be the future glory

2, 1: October 520 B.C.

2, 3-5: Since it was only one month (1, 1) from the laying of the foundation stones, Aggai is comparing Solomon's temple ("this house" v. 3) with a disorderly foundation site (not a finished temple which later, upon completion, would be smaller and less beautiful than Solomon's). In spite of this unfavorable comparison, Aggai encourages them to work.

2, 6: One moment yet, a little while: some time in the future. I will shake the heavens . . . dry land: the cosmic disturbances are a literary device to signify here the inauguration of the new Messianic era.

2, 7-9: The "treasures" are specified as "silver" and "gold." The Gentiles ("nations") bringing treasures to Jerusalem is a symbolic way of saying that they will be converted. Aggai's message is: work with encouragement because our temple will be superior to Solomon's insofar as it will usher in the future glorious age when the Gentiles will be converted. Hence, the Hebrew text foretells a universal kingdom (symbolized by the temple), but this text must not be understood as fulfilled when king Herod embellished the temple, nor when Jesus walked into it. The Hebrew words say nothing about Jesus. The Latin Vg translation insinuates that the Hebrew text spoke about the coming of Christ the Messia. The Advent liturgy follows the Vg.

of this house than the former, says the Lord of hosts; and in this place I will give peace, says the Lord of hosts!

10 Offerings of the Unclean Rejected On the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, in the second year of king Darius, the word of the Lord came to the prophet Aggai: Thus 11.12 says the Lord of hosts: | Ask the priests for a decision: If a man carries sanctified flesh in the fold of his garment and the fold touches bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any other food, do they become sanctified? "No," the priests answered.
13 | Then Aggai said: If a person unclean from contact with a corpse touches any of these, do they become unclean? The 14 priests answered, "They become unclean." | Then Aggai continued:

So is this people, and so is this nation in my sight, says the Lord: and so are all the works of their hands; and what they offer there is unclean.

15 Promise of Immediate Blessings But now, consider from this day forward. Before there was a stone laid upon a 16 stone in the temple of the Lord, how did you fare?

When one went to a heap of grain for twenty measures, it would yield but ten; when another went to the vat to draw 17 fifty measures, there would be but twenty. | I struck you in all the works of your hands with blight, searing wind, and hail yet you did not return to me, says the Lord.

18 [Consider from this day forward: from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month. From the day on which the temple of the Lord was founded, consider!]

2, 10: Ninth month, in the second year: November-December in 520 B.C.

2, 11: Decision: the Hebrew word torah here means an oral instruction.

2, 12-13: Holiness is not contagious (v. 12), but uncleanness is (v. 13).

2, 14: The application may mean: insofar as the people were unclean, their offerings became unclean (even though the temple was now rebuilt, offerings were made on the altar since its reconstruction in 538 B.C.). Or the application may refer to the Samaritans who volunteered to help in rebuilding the temple (Esd 4, 3 n). Far from being sanctified by the holy work, the Samaritans would most likely "infect" the Jews with uncleanness.

2, 15-19: This section may have originally followed 1, 15. The meaning is about the same as explained in 1, 6 n.

2, 18: The ninth month: the ordinal "ninth" has been copied incorrectly from 2, 10. This note clearly concerns the "twenty-fourth day of the sixth month, on which the temple of the Lord was founded" (1, 15).

19 Indeed, the seed has not sprouted, nor have the vine, the fig, the pomegranate and the olive tree yet borne. From this day, I will bless!

20 Pledge to Zorobabel The message of the Lord came a second time to Aggai on the twenty-fourth day of the month: 21 Tell this to Zorobabel, the governor of Juda:
22 I will shake the heavens and the earth; | I will overthrow the thrones of kingdoms, destroy the power of the kingdoms of the nations. I will overthrow the chariots and their riders, and the riders with their horses shall go down by one another's sword.
23 | On that day, says the Lord of hosts, I will take you, Zorobabel, son of Salathiel, my servant, says the Lord, and I will set you as a signet ring; for I have chosen you, says the Lord of hosts.

2, 20: The month: probably again the sixth month, as in 1, 15; see also 2, 18 n.

2, 19: From this day, I will bless: God will bless the people from the time they begin to reconstruct the temple.

2, 21: I will shake the heavens and the earth: see 2, 6 n.

2, 22: To encourage Zorobabel in the reconstruction of the temple, Aggai says that God is powerful enough to overthrow kingdoms and armies.

2, 23: Aggai says: Zorobabel is solemnly promised divine protection and is extraordinarily honored as God's signet ring, i.e., as God's representative. (The signet ring, being one's own seal to sign documents, was naturally a most precious possession. See Gn 38, 18 n). By using "signet ring," Aggai alludes to Zorobabel's grandfather, Conia, son of king Joakim, who was rejected as God's signet ring. See Jer 22, 24. In other words, the prophet sees Zorobabel as continuing the royal promises made to David and his successors. The words "take," "servant," "chosen" are found in Messianic contexts in other biblical passages.

THE BOOK OF ZACHARIA

INTRODUCTION

The prophet-priest Zacharia (or Zechariah), whose name means "Yahweh remembers," was a younger contemporary of the prophet Aggai with whom he shared the zeal for the rebuilding of the temple (Esd 5, 1; 6, 14). Both men also shared the view that its reconstruction was to precede God's approaching kingdom. A true conversion of heart, in the practice of justice and charity, must accompany the reconstruction. This notion of conversion comes from prophets older than Zacharia.

The first eight chapters, dated 520-518 B.C., contain literary visions which all scholars admit to come from Zacharia. The theme throughout is the exhortation to the returned exiles to rebuild the Jerusalem temple.

Zacharia follows several important ideas of Ezechiel, e.g., the stress on God's transcendence and the role of the priesthood in the Messianic era. Zacharia's symbolic visions show the influence of Ezechiel, to whom he is inferior. After the time of Zacharia, this symbolic imagery was to develop into full-blown apocalyptic literature, as in the Book of Daniel.

According to most commentators, half of the book, called Second Zacharia (9—14), was not written by the author of Za 1—8. There are cogent literary and historical reasons for this opinion. For instance, there is no longer any talk on the rebuilding of the temple. The dispute rages over the number of authors of chs. 9—14 and the general time of their writing. Often proposed is the end of the fourth century B.C. The New Testament quotes parts of Za 9—14 six times.

Main divisions of the Book of Zacharia are:

1. Eight Visions with the Theme of Rebuilding the Temple, 1, 1—6, 8
2. The Coronation of Zorobabel, 6, 9-15
3. The Problem of Fasting, 7—8
4. The Invasion of the Lord, 9, 1-8
5. Restoration, 9, 9-17
6. The New Order of Things, 10, 1—11, 3
7. Allegory of the Shepherds, 11, 4-17
8. Messianic Jerusalem, 12
9. The End of Falsehood, 13
10. The Fight for Jerusalem, 14

1 Necessity of Conversion In the second year of Darius, in the eighth month, the word of the Lord came to the prophet 2 Zacharia, son of Barachia, son of Addo: The Lord was indeed angry with your fathers. . . . | and say to them: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Return to me, says the Lord of hosts, and I will return to you, says the Lord of hosts. Be not like your fathers whom the former prophets warned: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Turn from your evil ways and from your wicked deeds. But they would not listen or pay attention to me, says the Lord. Your fathers, where are they? And the prophets, can they live forever? | But my words and my decrees, which I entrusted to my servants the prophets, did not these overtake your fathers? Then they repented and admitted: "The Lord of hosts has treated us according to our ways and deeds, just as he had determined he would."

The Four Horsemen In the second year of Darius, on the twenty-fourth day of Sabat, the eleventh month, the word of the Lord came to the prophet Zacharia, son of Barachia, son of Addo, in the following way: I had a vision during the night.
There appeared the driver of a red horse, standing among myrtle trees in a shady place, and behind him were red, sorrel, and white horses. | Then I asked, "What are these, my lord?";
and the angel who spoke with me answered me, "I will show you what these are." | The man who was standing among the myrtle trees spoke up and said, "These are they whom the Lord has sent to patrol the earth." And they answered the angel of the Lord who was standing among the myrtle trees and said, "We have patrolled the earth, see, the whole earth is tranquil and at rest!"
Then the angel of the Lord spoke out and said, "O Lord

1, 5-6: The people and the prophets die, but God's word lives forever. Has treated us . . . as he had determined he would: the people admitted that God's threats against their ancestors had been fulfilled.

1, 7—6, 8: The eight sermons preached in the form of literary visions occur in the same night (1, 7f). Scholars find the meaning of the symbolism difficult and sometimes impossible to decipher.

1, 7-17: In the first vision of the horsemen patrolling the world, Zacharia has an angel intercede. God consolingly encourages the people to look for better times in the future, even though the Persian empire was not yet overthrown and Jerusalem was not yet made the capital of the world.

1, 7: The second year . . . eleventh month: January-February, 519 B.C.

1, 8-11: The driver of a red horse: apparently distinct from the man or "angel of the Lord . . . standing among the myrtle trees," who spoke with the prophet. The four horsemen are sent by God to the four corners of the earth (2, 10) to see if the whole earth is at peace.

1, 8: Red, sorrel, and white horses: that they had riders may be implied.

1, 12: These seventy years: a round number for the Babylonian exile.

of hosts, how long will you be without mercy for Jerusalem and the cities of Juda that have felt your anger these seventy 13 years?" To the angel who spoke with me, the Lord replied with comforting words.
14 And the angel who spoke with me said to me, Proclaim: Thus says the Lord of hosts: I am deeply moved for the sake of 15 Jerusalem and Sion, and I am exceedingly angry with the complacent nations; whereas I was but a little angry, they 16 added to the harm. Therefore, says the Lord: I will turn to Jerusalem in mercy; my house shall be built in it, says the Lord of hosts, and a measuring line shall be stretched over Jeru-17 salem. | Proclaim further: Thus says the Lord of hosts: My cities shall again overflow with prosperity; the Lord will again comfort Sion, and again choose Jerusalem.

1 Four Horns and Four Blacksmiths I raised my eyes and 2 looked: there were four horns. Then I asked the angel who spoke with me what these were. He answered me, "These are the horns that scattered Juda and Israel and Jerusalem." 3 Then the Lord showed me four blacksmiths. And I asked, 4 "What are these coming to do?" And he said, "Here are the horns that scattered Juda, so that no man raised his head any more; but these have come to terrify them: to cast down the horns of the nations that raised their horns to scatter the land of Juda."

5 The New Jerusalem Again I raised my eyes and looked: 6 there was a man with a measuring line in his hand. "Where are you going?" I asked. "To measure Jerusalem," he answered;
"to see how great is its width and how great its length." 7 Then the angel who spoke with me advanced, and another 8 angel came out to meet him and said to him, "Run, tell this to that young man: People will live in Jerusalem as though in 1, 15: The complacent nations: the neighbors of Juda.

1, 16: A measuring line: to be used for reconstruction.

2, 1-4: This second vision of the four horns symbolizes the enemies who "scattered Juda" out of her country. The four blacksmiths symbolize the power that God will use to overpower Juda's enemies.

2, 5-17: The third vision is the "man with a measuring line" who will rebuild the new Jerusalem. The meaning is: the exiles will come home and the pagans will be converted.

2, 8-9: There is no need of a wall because Jerusalem will be overpopulated. Moreover, God will be the city's encircling protection.

2, 8: That young man: the angel or "man with a measuring line" of v. 5.

open country, because of the multitude of men and beasts in 9 her midst. But I will be for her an encircling wall of fire, says the Lord, and I will be the glory in her midst." 10 Up, up! Flee from the land of the north, says the Lord; for I had scattered you to the four winds of heaven, says the Lord.
11 | Up, O Sion! Escape, you who dwell with daughter Babylon.
12 For thus says the Lord of hosts [after, glory, he has sent me] concerning the nations that have plundered you: Whoever 13 touches you touches the apple of my eye. See, I wave my hand over them; they become plunder for their slaves. Thus you shall know that the Lord of hosts has sent me.
14 Sing and rejoice, O daughter Sion! See, I am coming to 15 dwell among you, says the Lord. Many nations shall join themselves to the Lord on that day, and they shall be his people, and he will dwell among you, and you shall know that the 16 Lord of hosts has sent me to you. The Lord will possess Juda as his portion in the holy land, and he will again choose Jeru-17 salem. Silence, all mankind, in the presence of the Lord! for he stirs forth from his holy dwelling.

3

1 Josue the High Priest Then he showed me Josue the high priest standing before the angel of the Lord, while Satan 2 stood at his right hand to accuse him. And the angel of the Lord said to Satan, "May the Lord rebuke you, Satan; may the Lord who has chosen Jerusalem rebuke you! Is not this man a brand snatched from the fire?" 3 Now Josue was standing before the angel clad in filthy 4 garments. He spoke and said to those who were standing before him, "Take off his filthy garments, and clothe him 5 in festal garments." | He also said, "Put a clean miter on his head." And they put a clean miter on his head and clothed

2, 10: The land of the north: Babylonia (v. 11).
2, 15-16: The conversion of the Gentiles, with Jerusalem as the religious capital. Holy land: the first biblical use of this phrase.
3, 1-10: The fourth vision is that of Josue, the high priest of Zacharia's day, who perhaps here represents all the people. The charges of Satan that Josue (people) is guilty are dismissed (vv. 4-5). Josue can now become the mediator between God and His people (v. 7).
3, 1: The angel of the Lord: Zacharia uses this expression for the Lord Himself. Satan: he appears here as the enemy of man but not of God.
3, 2: Who has chosen Jerusalem: see 2, 15-16 n. A brand snatched from the fire: one saved from exile.
3, 3: Filthy garments: a symbol of guilt.
3, 4-5: See 3, 1-10 n.

him with the garments. Then the angel of the Lord, standing, said, "See, I have taken away your guilt." 6 The angel of the Lord then gave Josue this assurance: | 7 "Thus says the Lord of hosts: If you walk in my ways and heed my charge, you shall judge my house and keep my courts, 8 and I will give you access among these standing here. | Listen, O Josue, high priest! You and your associates who sit before you are men of good omen. Yes, I will bring my servant the 9 Shoot. Look at the stone that I have placed before Josue, one stone with seven facets. I will engrave its inscription, says the Lord of hosts, and I will take away the guilt of the land in one 10 day. On that day, says the Lord of hosts, you will invite one another under your vines and fig trees."

4

4 Then I said to the angel who spoke with me, "What are 5 these things, my lord?" And the angel who spoke with me replied, "Do you not know what these things are?" "No, my 6 lord," I answered. | Then he said to me, "This is the Lord's message to Zorobabel: Not by an army, nor by might, but by 7 my spirit, says the Lord of hosts. What are you, O great mountain? Before Zorobabel you are but a plain. He shall bring out the capstone amid exclamations of 'Hail, Hail' to it." 8.9 This word of the Lord then came to me: The hands of Zorobabel have laid the foundations of this house, and his hands shall finish it; then you shall know that the Lord of 10 hosts has sent me to you. For even they who are scornful on 3, 8: Men of good omen: the good standing and restoration of Josue and his fellow priests are a symbol of happy Messianic times to come. My servant the Shoot: Messianic term for Zorobabel. See 6, 11 n.

3, 9-10: The general sense is that, ideally, sin will disappear and peace will reign in Messianic times.

3, 9: The stone . . . placed before Josue: most likely a precious gem for Josue's forehead. The stone is the same as the "select stone" of 4, 10. Stone with seven facets: a symbol of God's care of all the world as explained in 4, 10.

3, 10: Invite . . . vines and fig trees: the biblical figure for peace.

4, 4ff: Whenever the numbering of the verses is not consecutive, i.e., 1, 2, 3, etc., it means that the original order of lines was accidentally disturbed in the transmission of the text. The verse numbers given in such cases are always those of the current Hebrew text, though the arrangement differs. Hence, e.g., in the present ch. 4, the CCD translators rearranged the verses to what they believed to be the original order, namely: ch. 4, vv. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 1, 2, 3, 11, 12, 13, 14.

4, 6-7: The sense of the "message" is that God's power will prevail in rebuilding the temple through Zorobabel in spite of obstacles ("great mountain").

4, 10: See 3, 9 n.

that day of small beginnings shall rejoice to see the select stone in the hands of Zorobabel. These seven facets are the eyes of the Lord that range over the whole earth.

1 The Lampstand Then the angel who spoke with me returned and awakened me, like a man awakened from his sleep.
2 "What do you see?" he asked me. "I see a lampstand all of gold, with a bowl at the top," I replied; "on it are seven lamps 3 with their tubes, | and beside it are two olive trees, one on the 11 right and the other on the left." I then asked him, "What are 12 these two olive trees at each side of the lampstand?" | And again I asked, "What are the two olive tufts which freely pour 13 out fresh oil through the two golden channels?" "Do you not know what these are?" he said to me. "No, my lord," I 14 answered him. | He said, "These are the two anointed who stand by the Lord of the whole earth."

1 The Flying Scroll Then I raised my eyes again and saw 2 a scroll flying. "What do you see?" he asked me. I answered, "I see a scroll flying; it is twenty cubits long and ten cubits 3 wide." Then he said to me: "This is the curse which is to go forth over the whole earth; in accordance with it shall every thief be swept away, and in accordance with it shall every 4 perjurer be expelled from here. I will send it forth, says the Lord of hosts, and it shall come into the house of the thief, or into the house of him who perjures himself with my name; it shall lodge within his house, consuming it, timber and stones."

4, 1ff: See 4, 4ff n. The fifth vision of the lampstand between two olive trees means that God will work out His plans through Josue, the religious leader (one olive tree), and Zorobabel, the civil leader (the other olive tree).

4, 2: Lampstand: the "bowl" seems to disqualify the lampstand as a figure of the seven-branched lampstand. Regardless of the picture Zacharia had in mind, what does the lampstand represent? God? The temple of the future Messianic age?

5, 1-4: In the sixth vision, the flying scroll, Zacharia preaches that God will purify the land of thieves and perjurers (who perhaps typify social evildoers). The underlying idea of this and the following vision of the flying bushel (5, 5-11) is that sin must be eradicated before the Messianic age dawns (see 3, 9-10 n).

5, 2: Twenty cubits long and ten cubits wide: thirty feet by fifteen (the dimensions of Solomon's temple as given in 3 Kgs 6, 3).

5, 3-4: The curse: presumably the "curse" is written on this lengthy scroll (v. 3) and falls upon the houses of the evildoers (v. 4).

5 The Flying Bushel Then the angel who spoke with me came forward and said to me, "Raise your eyes and see what 6 this is that comes forth." | "What is it?" I asked. And he answered, "This is a bushel container coming. This is their 7 guilt in all the land." Then a leaden cover was lifted, and there 8 was a woman sitting inside the bushel. "This is Wickedness," he said; and he thrust her inside the bushel, pushing the leaden 9 cover into the opening. Then I raised my eyes and saw two women coming forth with a wind ruffling their wings, for they had wings like the wings of a stork. As they lifted up the bushel 10 into the air, | I said to the angel who spoke with me, "Where 11 are they taking the bushel?" | He replied, "To build a temple for it in the land of Senaar; when the temple is ready, they will deposit it there in its place."

6

1 Four Chariots Again I raised my eyes and saw four char-iots coming out from between two mountains; and the moun-2 tains were of bronze. The first chariot had red horses, the 3 second chariot black horses, the third chariot white horses, and the fourth chariot spotted horses—all of them strong 4 horses. I asked the angel who spoke with me, "What are 5 these, my lord?" | The angel said to me in reply, "These are the four winds of the heavens, which are coming forth after 6 being reviewed by the Lord of all the earth." The chariot with the black horses was turning toward the land of the north, the red and the white horses went after them, and the spotted ones 7 went toward the land of the south. As these strong horses emerged, eager to set about patrolling the earth, he said, "Go, 8 patrol the earth!" Then, as they patrolled the earth, | he called out to me and said, "See, they that go forth to the land of the north will make my spirit rest in the land of the north."

9 The Coronation This word of the Lord then came to me:
10 Take from the returned captives Holdai, Tobia, Idaia; and go

5, 5-11: In the seventh vision, the woman sealed in the bushel is a figure of the general corruption of the people of Juda. She is removed from the Holy Land and transported to Babylonia ("Senaar") where a dwelling is being prepared for her; this is a symbol of the reign of wickedness in pagan lands, contrasted with the reign of holiness in the Lord's dwelling on Mount Sinai.

6, 1-8: In the eighth vision, the four patrolling chariots, the meaning may be that God's anger ("spirit") flares up against Babylon ("land of the north") and, therefore, these are war chariots; or, the "spirit" lights upon the Babylonian exiles to stir them to return home to Juda and, thus, the chariots are messengers.

the same day to the house of Josia, son of Sophonia (these had 11 come from Babylon). Silver and gold you shall take, and make a crown; place it on the head of [Josue, son of Josedec, the 12 high priest] Zorobabel. And say to him: Thus says the Lord of hosts: Here is a man whose name is Shoot, and where he is 13 he shall sprout, and he shall build the temple of the Lord. Yes, he shall build the temple of the Lord, and taking up the royal insignia, he shall sit as ruler upon his throne. The priest shall be at his right hand, and between the two of them there shall be 14 friendly understanding. The crown itself shall be a memorial offering in the temple of the Lord in favor of Holdai, Tobia, 15 Idaia, and the son of Sophonia. And they who are from afar shall come and build the temple of the Lord, and you shall know that the Lord of hosts has sent me to you. And if you heed carefully the voice of the Lord your God. . . .

1 True Fasting In the fourth year of Darius the king [the word of the Lord came to Zacharia], on the fourth day of 2 Casleu, the ninth month, | Bethel-Sarasar sent Rogammelech 3 and his men to implore favor of the Lord | and to ask the priests of the house of the Lord of hosts, and the prophets, "Must I mourn and abstain in the fifth month as I have been 4 doing these many years?" Thereupon this word of the Lord of 6, 11: Make a crown; place it on the head of [Josue, son of Josedec, the high priest] Zorobabel: according to the current Hebrew text, Josue the high priest is to be crowned. However, since the crown is a sign of royalty, the original text must have had the name of Zerobabel here, not that of Josue. In 3, 8 Josue is a different man from the one called the Shoot, and in 6, 12 it is upon the Shoot that the crown is to be placed. Zacharia carried out God's command and crowned Zorobabel king, in a ceremony symbolic of the future when God would intervene and Juda would be allowed to have its king back. Even though Zorobabel was a descendant of David, Zacharia did not actually make him king here. "Shoot" as the key Messianic word in this passage and 3, 8 are accepted royal Messianic texts. These texts speak of a future single king who will restore the disappearing dynasty. In this sense, Zorobabel is a type of the Messia. However, neither this text nor 4, 1ff say that the Messia will be both priest and king.

7—8: The problem of fasting.

7, 1: The fourth year of Darius . . . the fourth day of Casleu, the ninth month: November, 518 B.C.

7, 2-3: A question of conscience was asked of the prophets and priests whether the anniversary of mourning and fasting ("fifth month"), in commemoration of the temple destruction in 587 B.C., should be observed although the temple was in the process of reconstruction.

7, 4-14: Zacharia takes advantage of the question (7, 2-3) to give a sermon on how in the past fasting and celebrating were considered

5 hosts came to me: Say to all the people of the land and to the priests: When you fasted and mourned in the fifth and in the seventh month these seventy years, was it really for me that you 6 fasted? And when you were eating and drinking, was it not for yourselves that you ate, and for yourselves that you drank?
7 Were not these the words which the Lord spoke through the former prophets, when Jerusalem and the surrounding cities were inhabited and at peace, when the Negeb and the foothills 8 were inhabited? [This word of the Lord came to Zacharia: |
9 Thus says the Lord of hosts:] Render true judgment, and show 10 kindness and compassion toward each other. Do not oppress the widow or the orphan, the alien or the poor; do not plot 11 evil against one another in your hearts. But they refused to listen; they stubbornly turned their backs and stopped their 12 ears so as not to hear. And they made their hearts diamond-hard so as not to hear the teaching and the message that the Lord of hosts had sent by his spirit through the former prophets.
13 Then the Lord of hosts in his great anger said that, as they had not listened when he called, so he would not listen when 14 they called, but would scatter them with a whirlwind among all the nations that they did not know. Thus the land was left desolate after them with no one traveling to and fro; they made the pleasant land into a desert.

1 In the Days of the Messia This word of the Lord of hosts came: Thus says the Lord of hosts: 2 I am intensely jealous for Sion, stirred to jealous wrath for 3 her. | Thus says the Lord: I will return to Sion, and I will dwell within Jerusalem; Jerusalem shall be called the faithful city, and the mountain of the Lord of hosts, the holy mountain.
4 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Old men and old women, each with staff in hand because of old age, shall again sit in the 5 streets of Jerusalem. The city shall be filled with boys and girls 6 playing in her streets. Thus says the Lord of hosts: Even if this should seem impossible in the eyes of the remnant of this more important than keeping God's laws. Since their forefathers did not observe the laws of God, He punished them through the exile.

7, 5: Seventh month: most likely a reference to the murder of Godoliah "whom the king of Babylon had made ruler" of Juda, Jer 41, 1-3. Seventy years: round number for the duration of the Babylonian exile.

8, 1-23: This is a group of ten oracles on the peace, prosperity, conversion and joys of the Messianic age. Many ideas contained in chs. 1—7 are repeated here. There are abundant allusions to other prophets, especially Aggai. Zacharia considers the days of the temple reconstruction as the inauguration of the Messianic age.

people, shall it in those days be impossible in my eyes also, says 7 the Lord of hosts? Thus says the Lord of hosts: Lo, I will rescue my people from the land of the rising sun, and from 8 the land of the setting sun. I will bring them back to dwell within Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I will be their God, with faithfulness and justice.
9 Thus says the Lord of hosts: Let your hands be strong, you who in these days hear these words spoken by the prophets on the day when the foundation of the house of the Lord of hosts 10 was laid for the building of the temple. For before those days there were no wages for men, or hire for beasts; those who came and went had no security from the enemy, for I set every 11 man against his neighbor. But now I will not deal with the remnant of this people as in former days, says the Lord of 12 hosts, | for it is the seedtime of peace: the vine shall yield its fruit, the land shall bear its crops, and the heavens shall give their dew; all these things I will have the remnant of the 13 people possess. Just as you were a curse among the nations, O house of Juda and house of Israel, so will I save you that you may be a blessing: do not fear, but let your hands be strong.
14 Thus says the Lord of hosts: As I determined to harm you when your fathers provoked me to wrath, says the Lord of 15 hosts, and I did not relent, | so again in these days I have determined to favor Jerusalem and the house of Juda; do not 16 fear! These then are the things you should do: Speak the truth to one another; let there be honesty and peace in the judgments 17 at your gates, and let none of you plot evil against another in his heart, nor love a false oath. For all these things I hate, says the Lord.
18.19 This word of the Lord of hosts came to me: Thus says the Lord of hosts: The fast days of the fourth, the fifth, the seventh, and the tenth months shall become occasions of joy and gladness, cheerful festivals for the house of Juda; only love 20 faithfulness and peace. Thus says the Lord of hosts: There 21 shall yet come peoples, the inhabitants of many cities; and the inhabitants of one city shall approach those of another, and say, "Come! let us go to implore the favor of the Lord"; and, 22 "I too will go to seek the Lord." Many peoples and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem and 8, 19: Zacharia finally answers the question of 7, 3. The fast day of the "fourth month" commemorated the ruin of Jerusalem in June 587 B.C.; the fast of the "fifth month," the burning of the temple in July 587; that of the "seventh month," the murder of Godolia in September 587; and that of the "tenth month," the beginning of the last phase of Jerusalem's siege in January 588 B.C.

23 to implore the favor of the Lord. | Thus says the Lord of hosts: In those days ten men of every nationality, speaking different tongues, shall take hold, yes, take hold of every Jew by the edge of his garment and say, "Let us go with you, for we have heard that God is with you."

9

1 Invasion by the Lord A burden: The word of the Lord is upon the land of Hadrach, and Damascus is its resting place for the cities of Aram are the Lord's, as are all the tribes of 2 Israel, | Hamath also, on its border, Tyre too, and Sidon, however wise they be.
3 Tyre built herself a stronghold, and heaped up silver like 4 dust, and gold like the mire of the streets. | Lo, the Lord will strip her of her possessions, and smite her power on the sea and she shall be devoured by fire.
5 Ascalon shall see it and be afraid; Gaza also: she shall be in great anguish; Accaron too, for her hope shall come to nought. The king shall disappear from Gaza, and Ascalon shall 6 not be inhabited, | and the baseborn shall occupy Azotus. I will 7 destroy the pride of the Philistine | and take from his mouth his bloody meat, and his abominations from between his teeth: he also shall become a remnant for our God, and shall be like a family in Juda, and Accaron shall be like the Jebusites 8 I will encamp by my house as a guard that none may pass to and fro; no oppressor shall pass over them again, for now have regard for their affliction.

9 Restoration under the Messia Rejoice heartily, O daughter Sion, shout for joy, O daughter Jerusalem! See, your kin, 9—14: See Introduction on Second Zacharia.

9, 1-8: The unknown author of this oracle has God conquer the land from Damascus down the Mediterranean coast, and establish Juda as the conqueror. Some give the time of the Assyrians as the date of this oracle, and others the time of the Greeks.

9, 1: Hadrach: a city north of Damascus.

9, 6: The baseborn: people of mixed ancestry.

9, 7: Bloody meat, and his abominations from between his teeth meats forbidden to Jews. Remnant: in the books of Zacharia and Aggeus this term is used for the repatriated Jews. Jebusites: the pre-Israelite inhabitants of Jerusalem, conquered by David, and incorporated into Israel.

9, 8: My house: the temple or Holy Land.

9, 9-10: An unknown prophet on an unknown historical occasion invites Jerusalem to rejoice over the future royal Messia whose main trait is here described as peacefulness— "riding on an ass," an animal of peace (not poverty) as opposed to a horse of war in v. 10. "His Do-shall come to you; a just savior is he, meek, and riding on an 10 ass, on a colt, the foal of an ass. | He shall banish the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem; the warrior's bow shall be banished, and he shall proclaim peace to the nations. His dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth.

11 As for you, for the blood of your covenant with me, I will 12 bring forth your prisoners from the dungeon. | In the return to the fortress of the waiting prisoners, this very day, I will return 13 you double for your exile. | For I will bend Juda as my bow,
I will arm myself with Ephraim; I will arouse your sons, O Sion, [against your sons, O Yavan,] and I will use you as a warrior's sword.
14 The Lord shall appear over them, and his arrow shall shoot forth as lightning; the Lord God shall sound the trumpet, and 15 come in a storm from the south. | The Lord of hosts shall be a shield over them, they shall overcome sling stones and trample them underfoot; they shall drink blood like wine, till they are filled with it like libation bowls, like the corners of the altar. | 16 And the Lord, their God, shall save them on that day, his people, like a flock. For they are the jewels in a crown raised 17 aloft over his land. | For what wealth is theirs, and what beauty! grain that makes the youths flourish, and new wine, the maidens!

1 The New Order of Things Ask of the Lord rain in the spring season! It is the Lord who makes the storm clouds, and minion" shall be universal. The Messia will be "meek" like the remnant in So 3, 12 and a "just savior," i.e., God will lavish His protection upon the Messia. Modern scripture scholars say that even if Christ did not deliberately materially fulfill this prophecy (see Mt 21, 4f and parallel passages) by riding on an ass, He would have fulfilled it because of His peacefulness. These moderns do not hold that the Old Testament prophet is giving a photographic picture of this scene: the scene went beyond what the prophet envisioned.

9, 11-17: An idealistic restoration and return of God's people from exile.

9, 11: The blood of your covenant with me: the covenant between the Lord and Israel sealed with sacrificial blood (Ex 24, 8).

9, 12: The waiting prisoners: the exiles awaiting the return to their country, where they will receive a double compensation for the double punishment they had suffered.

9, 13: "Ephraim" will be the arrow that God will use for the bow of Juda. Yavan: Greece.

10, 1-2: This oracle may have been composed when people were

2 sends men the pouring rain; for everyone, grassy fields. | For the teraphim speak nonsense, the diviners have false visions: deceitful dreams they tell, empty comfort they offer. This is why they wander like sheep, wretched: they have no shepherd.
3 | My wrath is kindled against the shepherds, and I will punish the leaders; for the Lord of hosts will visit his flock, the house of Juda, and make them his stately war horse.
4 From him shall come leader and chief, from him warrior's 5 bow and every officer. | They shall all be warriors, trampling the mire of the streets in battle; they shall wage war because the Lord is with them, and shall put the horsemen to rout.
6 I will strengthen the house of Juda, the house of Joseph I will save; I will bring them back, because I have mercy on them;
they shall be as though I had never cast them off, for I am 7 the Lord, their God, and I will hear them. | Then Ephraim shall be valiant men, and their hearts shall be cheered as by wine. Their children shall see it and be glad, their hearts shall rejoice in the Lord.
8 I will whistle for them to come together, and when I redeem
9 them they will be as numerous as before. | I sowed them among the nations, yet in distant lands they remember me: 10 they shall rear their children and return. | I will bring them back from the land of Egypt, and gather them from Assyria. I will bring them into Galaad and into Lebanon, but these shall 11 not suffice them; | I will cross over to Egypt and smite the waves of the sea and all the depths of the Nile shall be dried up. The pride of Assyria shall be cast down, and the scepter 12 of Egypt taken away. | I will strengthen them in the Lord, and they shall walk in his name, says the Lord.

1 Open your doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour your 2 cedars! | Wail, you cypress trees, for the cedars are fallen, the praying for rain during a drought, and were tempted to use pagan means to obtain rain.

10, 2: Teraphim: a frequent biblical name for household idols used for divination.

10, 3-12: This oracle is by an unknown prophet, at an unknown date and on an unknown historical circumstance, who has God describe through a new Exodus (v. 11) a time of restoration of the people's land and prosperity.

10, 3: Shepherds . . . leaders: perhaps foreign rulers.

10, 10: I will bring them into Galaad and into Lebanon: an allusion to the extent of David's kingdom.

11, 1-3: Scholars can only guess whether the names Lebanon, Basan and Jordan in this mocking song are intended as symbols of Israel's mighty have been despoiled. Wail, you oaks of Basan, for the 3 impenetrable forest is cut down! | Hark! the wailing of the shepherds, their glory has been ruined. Hark! the roaring of the young lions, the jungle of the Jordan is laid waste.

4 Allegory of the Shepherds Thus said the Lord, my God: 5 Shepherd the flock to be slaughtered. For they who buy them slay them with impunity; while those who sell them say,
"Blessed be the Lord, I have become rich!" Even their own 6 shepherds do not feel for them. (Nor shall I spare the inhabitants of the earth any more, says the Lord. Yes, I will deliver each of them into the power of his neighbor, or into the power of his king; they shall crush the earth, and I will not deliver it out of their power.) 7 So I became the shepherd of the flock to be slaughtered for the sheep merchants. I took two staffs, one of which I called "Favor," and the other, "Bonds," and I fed the flock.
8 In a single month I did away with the three shepherds. I 9 wearied of them, and they behaved badly toward me. | "I will not feed you," I said. "What is to die, let it die; what is to perish, let it perish, and let those that are left devour one another's flesh."
10 Then I took my staff "Favor" and snapped it asunder, breaking off the covenant which I had made with all peoples; that 11 day it was broken off. The sheep merchants who were watching 12 me understood that this was the word of the Lord. | I said to them, "If it seems good to you, give me my wages; but if not, let it go." And they counted out my wages, thirty pieces of 13 silver. But the Lord said to me, "Throw it in the treasury, the foreign enemies, or whether this song is an allusion to the leaders ("shepherds") who caused Juda's downfall.

11, 4-17: The general meaning of this most obscure allegory is that God tries to govern His people who are being exploited, but the people rebel against Him. There are over thirty scholarly guesses on the identity of the "three shepherds" (v. 8) exploiting the people. The meaning of each detail is highly disputed, including the identity of the shepherd of the flock (vv. 4 and 7). Most commentators agree that the allegory refers to a definite historical situation either in the Ptolemaic or Machabean period, preferably the former.

11, 11-13: The shepherd (prophet) tenders his resignation from the hopeless task as God's guardian of the people. His owners pay him "thirty pieces of silver." The contempt of the wages is not in the amount but in the allusion to Ex 21, 32 as the price of a slave. The prophet deposits the money in the temple, thus symbolizing that God (not the prophet) is being rebuffed by the people and their rulers. Mt 26, 15 accommodates these wages to the amount Judas received for his betrayal of Christ.

handsome price at which they valued me." So I took the thirty pieces of silver and threw them into the treasury in the house of the Lord.
14 Then I snapped asunder my other staff, "Bonds," breaking 15 off the brotherhood between Juda and Israel. | The Lord said 16 to me: This time take the gear of a foolish shepherd. For I will raise up a shepherd in the land who will take no note of those that perish, nor seek the strays, nor heal the injured, nor feed what survives—he will eat the flesh of the fat ones and tear off their hoofs!
17 Woe to my foolish shepherd who forsakes the flock! May the sword fall upon his arm and upon his right eye; let his arm wither away entirely, and his right eye be blind forever!

12

1 Jerusalem God's Instrument A burden: the word of the Lord concerning Israel. Thus says the Lord, who spreads out the heavens, lays the foundations of the earth, and forms the 2 spirit of man within him: See, I will make Jerusalem a bowl to stupefy all peoples round about. [Juda will be besieged, even 3 Jerusalem.] | On that day I will make Jerusalem a weighty stone for all peoples. All who attempt to lift it shall injure themselves badly, and all the nations of the earth shall be 4 gathered against her. On that day, says the Lord, I will strike every horse with fright, and its rider with madness. I will strike blind all the horses of the peoples, but upon the house 5 of Juda I will open my eyes, and the princes of Juda shall say to themselves, "The inhabitants of Jerusalem have their strength 6 in the Lord of hosts, their God." On that day I will make the princes of Juda like a brazier of fire in the woodland, and like a burning torch among sheaves, and they shall devour right and left all the surrounding peoples; but Jerusalem shall still 7 abide on its own site. The Lord shall save the tents of Juda first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the 8 inhabitants of Jerusalem may not be exalted over Juda. On that day, the Lord will shield the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and the weakling among them shall be like David on that day, and the house of David godlike, like an angel of the Lord before 9 them. On that day I will seek the destruction of all nations that come against Jerusalem.

12, 1-14: An oracle on the victory of Jerusalem over attackers, and on the restoration of the Davidic dynasty. This oracle is too vague to attach to a known historical situation.

10 Messianic Jerusalem I will pour out on the house of David and on the inhabitants of Jerusalem a spirit of grace and petition; and they shall look on him whom they have thrust through, and they shall mourn for him as one mourns for an only son, and they shall grieve over him as one grieves over a first-born.
11 On that day the mourning in Jerusalem shall be as great as the mourning of Adadremmon in the plain of Mageddon.
12 And the land shall mourn, each family apart: | the family of the house of David, and their wives; the family of the 13 house of Nathan, and their wives; the family of the house of Levi, and their wives; the family of Semei, and their wives; 14 and all the rest of the families, each family apart, and the wives apart.

1 The End of Falsehood On that day there shall be open to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, a 2 fountain to purify from sin and uncleanness. On that day, says the Lord of hosts, I will destroy the names of the idols from the land, so that they shall be mentioned no more; I will also take away the prophets and the spirit of uncleanness from the 3 land. If a man still prophesies, his parents, father and mother, shall say to him, "You shall not live, because you have spoken a lie in the name of the Lord." When he prophesies, his parents, father and mother, shall thrust him through.

12, 10: A spirit of grace and petition: God's blessings. They shall look on him whom they have thrust through: the prophet, speaking of an end-time, says that the nation will mourn one who died from deep suffering. The text is obscure, so that scholars do not know the nature of the implicit crime committed, nor who this mysterious person is. There are many opinions as to the historical person at the time of the writing. He is very similar to the suffering servant of Is 52, 13—53, 12. Jn 19, 37 interprets Zacharia 12, 10 as a prophecy of Christ's passion.

12, 11: The mourning of the pierced victim in Jerusalem is compared to a lamentation "in the plain of Mageddon" apparently over a certain personage called "Adadremmon." The reference is no longer clear. Both "Adad" (Hadad) and "Remmon" were names of the Semitic storm god, often identified with the god Baal. Some see here a reference to the annual mourning of the pagans over the death of the fertility god. According to others, "Adadremmon" is the name of a place near Mageddon, and the reference would then be to the mourning over the death of king Josia, who was killed in battle there. See 2 Par 35, 22-25.

13, 1-6: In this oracle, God purifies the Holy Land of its idolatry and false prophets.

13, 1: A fountain to purify from sin: in contrast to the lustral water used in ritual purification.

4 On that day, every prophet shall be ashamed to prophesy his vision, neither shall he assume the hairy mantle to mislead 5 but he shall say, "I am no prophet, I am a tiller of the soil, for 6 I have owned land since my youth." And if anyone asks him, "What are these wounds on your chest?" he shall answer,
"With these I was wounded in the house of my dear ones."

7 The Song of the Sword Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, against the man who is my associate, says the Lord of hosts. Strike the shepherd that the sheep may be dispersed, and 8 I will turn my hand against the little ones. ¶ In all the land, says the Lord, two thirds of them shall be cut off and perish, and 9 one third shall be left. ¶ I will bring the one third through fire and I will refine them as silver is refined, and I will test them as gold is tested. They shall call upon my name, and I will hear them. I will say, "They are my people," and they shall say, "The Lord is my God."

14

1 The Fight for Jerusalem Lo, a day shall come for the Lord 2 when the spoils shall be divided in your midst. And I will gather all the nations against Jerusalem for battle: the city shall be taken, houses plundered, women ravished; half of the city shall go into exile, but the rest of the people shall not be removed 3 from the city. Then the Lord shall go forth and fight against 4 those nations, fighting as on a day of battle. That day his feet shall rest upon the Mount of Olives, which is opposite Jerusalem to the east. The Mount of Olives shall be cleft in two from east to west by a very deep valley, and half of the mountain 5 shall move to the north and half of it to the south. And the valley of the Lord's mountain shall be filled up when the valley

13, 4: Hairy mantle: worn by prophets as a mark of their calling. See 4 Kgs 1, 8.

13, 6: Wounds on your chest . . . dear ones: experts differ on the translation here and on the meaning of the whole passage (vv. 3-6). The general meaning seems to be that in the ideal future there will no be any need of even true prophets.

13, 7-9: The Lord will purify the land until only the remnant faithful to Him, is left.

13, 7: When the shepherd is killed, the sheep are scattered. Mt 26 31 quotes this verse, in somewhat different form: "I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock will be scattered."

14, 1-21: By alluding to many Old Testament passages, the author of this chapter describes a battle at an end-time, weaving into the battle-description verses on the restoration of the Holy Land and on the conversion of the Gentiles, who will go to Jerusalem for the Feast of Tabernacles. The details are not meant literally.

of those two mountains reaches its edge; it shall be filled up as it was filled up by the earthquake in the days of king Ozia of Juda. Then the Lord, my God, shall come, and all his holy ones with him.
6.7 On that day there shall no longer be cold or frost. There shall be one continuous day, known to the Lord, not day and night, for in the evening time there shall be light.
8 On that day, living waters shall flow from Jerusalem, half to the eastern sea, and half to the western sea, and it shall be so in 9 summer and in winter. The Lord shall become King over the whole earth; on that day the Lord shall be the only one, and his name the only one.
10 And from Geba to Rimmon in the Negeb, all the land shall turn into a plain; but Jerusalem shall remain exalted in its place. From the Gate of Benjamin to the place of the First Gate, to the Corner Gate; and from the Tower of Hananeel to the 11 king's wine presses, they shall occupy her. Never again shall she be doomed; Jerusalem shall abide in security.
12 And this shall be the plague with which the Lord shall strike all the nations that have fought against Jerusalem: their flesh shall rot while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall rot in their sockets, and their tongues shall rot in their mouths.
13 On that day there shall be among them a great tumult from the Lord: every man shall seize the hand of his neighbor, and the hand of each shall be raised against that of his neighbor. | 14 Juda also shall fight against Jerusalem. The riches of all the surrounding nations shall be gathered together, gold, silver, and garments, in great abundance.
15 Similar to this plague shall be the plague upon the horses, mules, camels, asses, and upon all the beasts that are in those camps.
16 All who are left of all the nations that came against Jerusalem shall come up year after year to worship the King, the 17 Lord of hosts, and to celebrate the feast of Tabernacles. If any of the families of the earth does not come up to Jerusalem to worship the King, the Lord of hosts, no rain shall fall upon 18 them. And if the family of Egypt does not come up, or enter, upon them shall fall the plague which the Lord will inflict upon all the nations that do not come up to celebrate the feast of 19 Tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all the nations that do not come up to celebrate the feast of Tabernacles.

14, 8: Living waters shall flow from Jerusalem: see almost the same image in Jl 4, 18.

20 On that day there shall be upon the bells of the horses, "Holy to the Lord." The pots in the house of the Lord shall be as the 21 libation bowls before the altar. And every pot in Jerusalem and in Juda shall be holy to the Lord of hosts; and all who come to sacrifice shall take them and cook in them. On that day there shall no longer be any merchant in the house of the Lord of hosts.

THE BOOK OF MALACHIA

INTRODUCTION

The last of the prophetical authors, whose name means "My Messenger," is unknown but for this book. Yet he must have been well known to his contemporaries because his whole book is a heated reprimand against the religious indifference of the priests and people in offering the proper sacrifices. He rebukes the priests for not instructing the people, and the people for divorces and mixed marriages. All these reprimands are cast in dialogues comprising assertions by Yahweh or Malachia, which the priests or people oppose, but Yahweh and Malachia repeat the assertions usually in a threatening tone. Malachia's purpose in preaching was to have the people honor God fittingly by performing the temple liturgy properly as in the days of old.

From the criticism against the temple liturgy, scholars deduce that the time of Malachia's activities must have been after the exile and deep in the Persian period when the religious fervor of rebuilding the temple at Jerusalem in 515 B.C. was long past. Hence, the prophecy written or spoken is generally agreed to come from about 450 B.C. The date shows that Malachia was preparing the way for the reforms of Esdras and Nehemias.

Main divisions of the Book of Malachia are:

1. The Title, 1, 1
2. Israel Preferred to Edom, 1, 2-5
3. Sins of the Priests and Levites, 1, 6—2, 9
4. Sins of the People, 2, 10-17
5. The Messenger of the Covenant, 3, 1-24

1 An oracle. The word of the Lord to Israel through Malachia.

2 Israel Preferred to Edom I have loved you, says the Lord;

brother? says the Lord: yet I loved Jacob, but hated Esau; I

1, 1: Israel: although this term usually designates the northern kingdom, in this context it refers to the southern kingdom of the Jews.

1, 2-5: This introduction of God's love for Israel (vv. 2-5) is meant to highlight the ingratitude of Juda who had disobeyed God's laws as explained in the rest of the booklet.

1, 2: Since the underlying supposition here is the traditional Old Testament theme that God loves through bestowing material prosperity, the Jews ask how God can be said to love them when they are so poor economically, and politically miserable under the Persian heel.

1, 3: Esau is used for the Edomites, since he was their ancestor; Jacob is used for the Jews, since he was their ancestor. Yet I loved Jacob, but hated Esau: this Hebraic figure of speech really means: I preferred Jacob to Esau. It alludes to the rivalry between the two an-

I will tear down, and they shall be called the land of guilt, 5 the people with whom the Lord is angry forever. Your own eye shall see it, and you will say, "Great is the Lord, even beyond th land of Israel."

6 Sins of the Priests and Levites A son honors his father and a servant fears his master; if then I am a father, where i the honor due to me? And if I am a master, where is th reverence due to me?—So says the Lord of hosts to you, C you implore God for mercy on us, when you have done the like will he welcome any of you? says the Lord of hosts.

cestors, which was perpetuated in their descendants (see Gn 25, 21ff and the whole prophecy of Abdia). It is not odd in Semitic thinking t prove God's love (for the Jews) by replying that He dealt more harshl (through the natural course of history) with Edom, a sister nation a that, than with Juda. See Rom 9, 13. I made his mountains a waste . . . a desert for jackals: an allusion to the destruction of Edom, perhaps by the Nabateans.

1, 4: In spite of the determination of the Edomites to rebuild their nation, God will not favor them any more in the future than He did in the past (see v. 3 n).

1, 6: God is not given the honor and reverence due to Him.

1, 8: The offering in sacrifice of a lame, sick or blind animal was forbidden. See Lv 22, 17-25.

1, 10-11: God rejects the unworthy sacrifices of the Jerusalem priests (v. 10). He prefers a sacrifice "from the rising of the sun, ever to its setting" (v. 11). This is a geographical expression meaning: all over the world. Which is this other universal sacrifice? Some scholars claim that Malachia is directly foretelling the future sacrifice to be offered by the Messia (without mentioning the nature of the sacrifice). Others claim that the prophet is directly speaking of a contemporary sacrifice for which there are four explanations, the best being this: the words "pure offering" (v. 11) allude to the Persian or Zoroastrian worship of the "God of Heaven." This expression was often adopted as a title of Yahweh in Esd, Neh, and Dn, e.g., Esd 5, 11. The prophet would, then, have considered this sacrifice in honor of Persian kings as being really

11 from your hands, | for from the rising of the sun, even to its setting, my name is great among the nations; and everywhere they bring sacrifice to my name, and a pure offering; for great 12 is my name among the nations, says the Lord of hosts. | But you behave profanely toward me by thinking the Lord's table 13 and its offering may be polluted, and its food slighted. | You also say, "What a burden!" and you scorn it, says the Lord of hosts; you bring in what you seize, or the lame, or the sick; yes, you bring it as a sacrifice. Shall I accept it from your hands?
14 says the Lord. | Cursed is the deceiver, who has in his flock a male, but under his vow sacrifices to the Lord a gelding; for a great King am I, says the Lord of hosts, and my name will be feared among the nations.

1 And now, O priests, this commandment is for you: If you do 2 not listen, and if you do not lay it to heart, to give glory to my name, says the Lord of hosts, I will send a curse upon you and of your blessing I will make a curse. Yes, I have already cursed 3 it, because you do not lay it to heart. | Lo, I will deprive you of the shoulder and I will strew dung in your faces, the dung of 4 your feasts, and you will be carried off with it. | Then you will know that I sent you this commandment because I have a cove-5 nant with Levi, says the Lord of hosts. | My covenant with him was one of life and peace; fear I put in him, and he feared me, and stood in awe of my name.
6 True doctrine was in his mouth, and no dishonesty was found upon his lips; he walked with me in integrity and uprightness, 7 and turned many away from evil. | For the lips of the priest are to keep knowledge, and instruction is to be sought from his 8 mouth, because he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts. | But you have turned aside from the way, and have caused many offered to Yahweh, the one true God, even though the pagans did not realize it. As far as referring this text to the future sacrifice of the Mass is concerned, the Council of Trent's interpretation is this: Malachia's text is to be understood as either the direct literal meaning of the prophet, or as his reference to a contemporaneous sacrifice of the type of the later New Testament sacrifice of the Mass. (This is one of the half dozen texts which is often quoted as claiming the moral unanimity of the Fathers.)

1, 11: This verse is used in the Tract of the votive Mass of the Eucharist.

2, 3: I will deprive you of the shoulder: this part of a sacrificial animal, allotted by the Law (Dt 18, 3) to the priests, will be withheld from them.

keep my ways, but show partiality in your decisions.

10 Sins of the People Have we not all the one Father? H not the one God created us? Why then do we break faith wi coming? And who can stand when he appears? For he is like 3 the refiner's fire, or like the fuller's lye. | He will sit refining and purifying [silver], and he will purify the sons of Levi, refining them like gold or like silver that they may offer due sacrifice to 4 the Lord. | Then the sacrifice of Juda and Jerusalem will please draw near to you for judgment, and I will be swift to bear witness against the sorcerers, adulterers, and perjurers, those who defraud the hired man of his wages, against those who defraud widows and orphans; those who turn aside the stranger, and those who do not fear me, says the Lord of hosts.

from my statutes, and have not kept them. Return to me, and I will return to you, says the Lord of hosts. Yet you say, "How 8 must we return?" | Dare a man rob God? Yet you are robbing me! And you say, "How do we rob you?" In tithes and in offer-food in my house, and try me in this, says the Lord of hosts: shall I not open for you the floodgates of heaven, to pour down blessyou blessed, for you will be a delightful land, says the Lord of hosts.

THE FIRST BOOK OF MACHABEES

INTRODUCTION

Since the First and Second Book of Machabees are closely connected, it would be easy to assume that the second book continues from the point in history where the first book ended. However, each book autonomously treats the Jewish war of independence against the Syrian masters who tried to stamp out the Jewish way of life.

The first book spans the period from 175 to 135 B.C.; the second from 175 to 161 B.C. The principal leader of the revolt in both books is Judas Machabee. The other common feature of the two books is that the Church considers them inspired, but the Jews and Protestants do not.

The first book was most probably written in Hebrew, but the original text was lost very early. It is known in a Greek translation. An educated anonymous Jerusalem Jew must have written the entire book at about 100 B.C. His sources include many documents and letters which the scholars believe to be authentic, except perhaps 12, 20-23. He may have used other sources such as a "Life of Judas Machabee." The sources are already an indication of the author's type of history writing. Although he does not write like a modern historian, his book contains generally historical truth, with chronological and topographical precision, set comfortably within the framework of contemporaneous Near Eastern history as known from extrabiblical sources. Yet, he writes "propagandistic history." The propaganda is all in favor of the Machabean dynasty because the Machabees fought for and preached the observance of the Mosaic Law and the traditional customs. (For the attempt to Hellenize the Jews, see Introduction to Daniel.) The revolt is pictured as a world-shattering event. All opposition is blanketed under "children of the devil." The author puts speeches on the lips of Judas and his brother Jonathan which extol the legitimacy and necessity of the revolutionary war. The numbers of the enemy soldiers are blown up to depict in relief the heroism of the divinely protected Machabean armies whose victories are heightened and whose defeats are softened (e.g., 6, 48-54).

The lack of religious teaching in the book is striking. Just as in the shorter (Hebrew) text of Esther, the name of God has never been mentioned. His name is referred to by "him" (e.g., 2, 61), or "heaven" (e.g., 3, 50), perhaps out of an exaggerated respect typical of the era to avoid the name of God (see 1, 51 n).

The main religious thrust of the book is that observance of the Mosaic Law leads to temporal happiness (see 14, 4-15). This is a doctrine frequently found in the Old Testament.

Main divisions of the First Book of Machabees are:

1. The Background to the Revolt of the Machabees, 1—2
2. The Battles of Judas Machabee, 3, 1—9, 22
3. Jonathan Machabee, 9, 23—12, 54
4. Simon Machabee, 13—16

1 Alexander Divides His Kingdom Now it came to pass after that Alexander the son of Philip the Macedonian, who first reigned in Greece, coming out of the land of Cethim, had 2 overthrown Darius king of the Persians and Medes. | He fought many battles and took the strongholds of all and slew the kings 3 of the earth. | And he went through even to the ends of the earth and took the spoils of many nations. And the earth was 4 quiet before him. | And he gathered a power and a very strong 5 army: and his heart was exalted and lifted up. | And he subdued countries of nations, and princes: and they became tribu-6 taries to him. | And after these things, he fell down upon his 7 bed and knew that he should die. | And he called his servants the nobles that were brought up with him from his youth: and he divided his kingdom among them while he was yet alive. |
8.9 And Alexander reigned twelve years: and he died. | And his 10 servants made themselves kings every one in his place. | And they all put crowns upon themselves after his death, and their sons after them many years, and evils were multiplied in the earth.

11 Persecution Begins And there came out of them a wicked root, Antiochus the Illustrious, the son of king Antiochus who had been a hostage at Rome: and he reigned in the hundred 12 and thirty-seventh year of the kingdom of the Greeks. | In those days there went out of Israel wicked men and they persuaded many, saying: Let us go and make a covenant with the heathens that are round about us, for since we departed from 13 them many evils have befallen us. | And the word seemed good

1, 1-10: The purpose of the sketch of Alexander the Great (356-323 B.C.) and his conquests is to introduce Antiochus in v. 11.

1, 1: Cethim: Greece. Darius: Alexander defeated Darius III at Granica, Issus, and Arbela.

1, 3: And he went through even to the ends of the earth: from Egypt to India.

1, 8: Alexander died on June 13, 323 B.C. in Babylon.

1, 10: Alexander's empire splintered into four minor empires, two of which interest the history of the Jews, namely, the kingdom of the Lagids of Egypt and that of the Seleucids of Asia Minor (modern Turkey). The two kingdoms disputed the mastery of Palestine.

1, 11: Antiochus the Illustrious: it should read Antiochus Epiphanes. He seized the throne of Syria in 175 B.C. Antiochus III the Great in 198 B.C. had taken Syria and Palestine away from the Egyptian Lagids and annexed it to his own Seleucid empire.

1, 12-14: A faction of the Jews cooperated with Antiochus to Grecize or, better, Hellenize their own Jewish nation.

14 in their eyes. | And some of the people determined to do this and went to the king; and he gave them license to do after the 15 ordinances of the heathens. | And they built a place of exer-16 cise in Jerusalem, according to the laws of the nations. | And they made themselves prepuces and departed from the holy covenant and joined themselves to the heathens and were sold to do evil.

17 And the kingdom was established before Antiochus: and he had a mind to reign over the land of Egypt, that he might reign 18 over two kingdoms. | And he entered into Egypt with a great multitude, with chariots and elephants and horsemen and a 19 great number of ships. | And he made war against Ptolemee king of Egypt: but Ptolemee was afraid at his presence and fled, 20 and many were wounded unto death. | And he took the strong cities in the land of Egypt, and he took the spoils of the land of Egypt.

21 Antiochus Profanes the Temple And after Antiochus had ravaged Egypt in the hundred and forty-third year, he returned 22 and went up against Israel. | And he went up to Jerusalem with 23 a great multitude. | And he proudly entered into the sanctuary, and took away the golden altar and the candlestick of light, and all the vessels thereof and the table of proposition and the pouring vessels, and the vials and the little mortars of gold, and the veil and the crowns, and the golden ornament that was 24 before the temple: and he broke them all in pieces. | And he took the silver and gold, and the precious vessels, and he took the hidden treasures which he found. And when he had taken 25 all away he departed into his own country. | And he made a great slaughter of men and spoke very proudly.

26 And there was great mourning in Israel and in every place 27 where they were. And the princes and the ancients mourned, and the virgins and the young men were made feeble, and the 28 beauty of the women was changed. | Every bridegroom took up lamentation: and the bride that sat in the marriage bed, 29 mourned. | And the land was moved for the inhabitants thereof, and all the house of Jacob was covered with confusion.

1, 15: Place of exercise: the gymnasium.

1, 16: And they made themselves prepuces: they removed the marks of their circumcision. Were sold to do evil: a Hebraism for "were prostituted."

1, 17-21: Antiochus IV took advantage of the sixteen-year old Ptolemy VI Philometor till Rome halted the former in 168 B.C.

30 Jerusalem Despoiled And after two full years the king sent the chief collector of his tributes to the cities of Juda, and
31 he came to Jerusalem with a great multitude. | And he spoke to them peaceable words in deceit: and they believed him. |
32 And he fell upon the city suddenly and struck it with a great 33 slaughter and destroyed much people in Israel. | And he took the spoils of the city and burned it with fire, and threw down the
34 houses thereof and the walls thereof round about. | And they took the women captive, and the children and the cattle they
35 possessed. | And they built the city of David with a great and strong wall and with strong towers and made it a fortress for
36 them. | And they placed there a sinful nation, wicked men, and they fortified themselves therein. And they stored up armor and victuals and gathered together the spoils of Jerusalem, |
37.38 and laid them up there: and they became a great snare. | And this was a place to lie in wait against the sanctuary, and an evil
39 devil in Israel. | And they shed innocent blood round about the 40 sanctuary and defiled the holy place. | And the inhabitants of Jerusalem fled away by reason of them, and the city was made the habitation of strangers: and she became a stranger to her
41 own seed and her children forsook her. | Her sanctuary was desolate like a wilderness, her festival days were turned into mourning, her sabbaths into reproach, her honors were brought
42 to nothing. | Her dishonor was increased according to her glory and her excellency was turned into mourning.

43 The Edict of Antiochus And king Antiochus wrote to all his kingdom that all the people should be one and every one
44 should leave his own law. | And all nations consented accord-
45 ing to the word of king Antiochus. | And many of Israel consented to his service, and they sacrificed to idols and profaned
46 the sabbath. | And the king sent letters by the hands of messengers to Jerusalem and to all the cities of Juda: that they 47 should follow the law of the nations of the earth, | and should forbid holocausts and sacrifices and atonements to be made in 48 the temple of God, | and should prohibit the sabbath and the

JERUSALEM OF THE MACHABEES

The Syrian Fortress ("Castle," "Citadel," in Greek "Akra") is often mentioned in 1, 2 Mc. At this time in history it was known as "The City of David" (1 Mc 1,35; 14, 36). It was the beehive of espionage since it sheltered Hellenistic Jews. From it were launched forays against the patriotic Jerusalemites (A less probable opinion situates the fortress at X).

49 festival days to be celebrated. | And he commanded the hol
50 places to be profaned and the holy people of Israel. | And h commanded altars to be built, and temples and idols and swine' 51 flesh to be immolated, and unclean beasts. | And that the should leave their children uncircumcised and let their souls b defiled with all uncleannesses and abominations to the end tha they should forget the law and should change all the justifica 52 tions of God. | And that whosoever would not do according t the word of king Antiochus should be put to death.
53 According to all these words he wrote to his whole kingdom and he appointed rulers over the people that should force then 54 to do these things. | And they commanded the cities of Juda t
55 sacrifice. | Then many of the people were gathered to them tha had forsaken the law of the Lord: and they committed evils i 56 the land. | And they drove away the people of Israel into lurk
57 ing holes and into the secret places of fugitives. | On the fif teenth day of the month Casleu, in the hundred and forty-fift year, king Antiochus set up the abominable idol of desolatio upon the altar of God, and they built altars throughout all th 58 cities of Juda round about. | And they burned incense an 59 sacrificed at the doors of the houses and in the streets. | An they cut in pieces and burned with fire the books of the law o 60 God. | And every one with whom the books of the testamen of the Lord were found and whosoever observed the law of th Lord, they put to death, according to the edict of the king.
61 Thus by their power did they deal with the people of Israe 62 that were found in the cities, month after month. | And on tin five and twentieth day of the month they sacrificed upon th 63 altar of the idol that was opposite the altar of God. | Now the women that circumcised their children were slain according 64 to the commandment of king Antiochus. | And they hanged th children about their necks in all their houses, and those that ha 65 circumcised them, they put to death. | And many of the peopl of Israel determined with themselves that they would not ea unclean things: and they chose rather to die than to be defile 66 with unclean meats. | And they would not break the holy law
67 of God, and they were put to death. | And there was very grea wrath upon the people.

1 Mathathias and His Sons In those days arose Mathathias the son of John, the son of Simeon, a priest of the sons of Joarib, from Jerusalem, and he abode in the mountain of Modin.
2 | And he had five sons: John who was surnamed Gaddis; |
3-4 and Simon who was surnamed Thasi: | and Judas who was 5 called Machabeus; | and Eleazar who was surnamed Abaron;
6 and Jonathan who was surnamed Apphus. | These saw the evils that were done in the people of Juda and in Jerusalem. | And Mathathias said: Woe to me! Wherefore was I born to see the ruin of my people and the ruin of the holy city, and to dwell 8 there, when it is given into the hands of the enemies? | The holy places have come into the hands of strangers: her temple 9 has become as a man without honor. | The vessels of her glory are carried away captive; her old men are murdered in the streets and her young men have fallen by the sword of the 10 enemies. | What nation has not inherited her kingdom and got 11 rich of her spoils? | All her ornaments are taken away. She that 12 was free is made a slave. | And behold our sanctuary and our beauty and our glory is laid waste: and the Gentiles have 13 defiled them. | To what end then should we live any longer?
14 And Mathathias and his sons rent their garments, and they covered themselves with haircloth and made great lamentation.
15 | And they that were sent from king Antiochus came there to compel them that had fled into the city of Modin to sacrifice 16 and to burn incense and to depart from the law of God. | And many of the people of Israel consented and came to them: but 17 Mathathias and his sons stood firm. | And they that were sent from Antiochus, answering, said to Mathathias: You are a ruler and an honorable and great man in this city and adorned 18 with sons and brethren. | Therefore, come you first and obey the king's commandment, as all nations have done, and the men of Juda and they that remain in Jerusalem: and you and your sons shall be in the number of the king's friends and enriched with gold and silver and many presents.

19 Mathathias Revolts Then Mathathias answered and said with a loud voice: Although all nations obey king Antiochus, so as to depart every man from the service of the law of his 20 fathers and consent to his commandments, | I and my sons and 21 my brethren will obey the law of our fathers. ¦ God be merciful unto us. It is not profitable for us to forsake the law and 22 the justices of God. | We will not hearken to the words of king Antiochus, neither will we sacrifice and transgress the commandments of our law, to go another way.

23 Now as he left off speaking these words, there came a certain Jew in the sight of all to sacrifice to the idols upon the altar in the city of Modin, according to the king's commandment. |
24 And Mathathias saw and was grieved, and his reins trembled, and his wrath was kindled according to the judgment of the law: and running upon him he slew him upon the altar. |
25 Moreover the man whom king Antiochus had sent, who compelled them to sacrifice, he slew at the same time: and pulled 26 down the altar, ¦ and showed zeal for the law, as Phinees did 27 by Zamri the son of Salomi. ¦ And Mathathias cried out in the city with a loud voice, saying: Every one that has zeal for the 28 law and maintains the testament, let him follow me. ' So he and his sons fled into the mountains and left all that they had in the city.
29 Then many that sought after judgment and justice went 30 down into the desert. ¦ And they abode there, they and their children and their wives and their cattle: because afflictions
31 increased upon them. | And it was told to the king's men and to the army that was in Jerusalem in the city of David, that certain men who had broken the king's commandment had gone away into the secret places in the wilderness and that many followed them.

32 The Battle on the Sabbath And forthwith they went out toward them and made war against them on the sabbath day.
33 | And they said to them: Do you still resist? Come forth and do according to the edict of king Antiochus, and you shall live.
34 And they said: We will not come forth, neither will we obey 35 the king's edict, to profane the sabbath day. ¦ And they made 36 haste to give them battle. ¦ But they answered them not, neither did they cast a stone at them nor stopped up the secret places, 37 | saying: Let us all die in our innocency: and heaven and earth shall be witnesses for us, that you put us to death wrongfully.

2, 21: Justices of God: prescriptions of God.
2, 24: Reins: heart.
2, 26: A reference to Nm 25, 7-8.
2, 28-29: Mountains . . . desert: southwest of Jerusalem.
2, 36: The secret places: where they were hiding.

38 | So they gave them battle on the sabbath: and they were slain with their wives and their children and their cattle, to the number of a thousand persons.
39 And Mathathias and his friends heard of it, and they 40 mourned for them exceedingly. | And every man said to his neighbor: If we shall do as our brethren have done and not fight against the heathens for our lives and our justifications, 41 they will now quickly root us out of the earth. | And they determined in that day, saying: Whosoever shall come up against us to fight on the sabbath day, we will fight against him. And we will not all die, as our brethren that were slain in the secret places.

42 The Zeal and Success of Mathathias Then was assembled to them the congregation of the Assideans, the stoutest of 43 Israel, every one that had a good will for the law. | And all they that fled from the evils joined themselves to them and 44 were a support to them. | And they gathered an army and slew the sinners in their wrath and the wicked men in their 45 indignation: and the rest fled to the nations for safety. | And Mathathias and his friends went round about, and they threw 46 down the altars, | and they circumcised all the children whom they found in the confines of Israel that were uncircumcised:
47 and they did valiantly. | And they pursued after the children 48 of pride, and the work prospered in their hands. | And they recovered the law out of the hands of the nations and out of the hands of the kings: and they yielded not the horn to the 49 sinner. | Now the days drew near that Mathathias should die, and he said to his sons: Now has pride and chastisement got strength, and the time of destruction and the wrath of indignation.

50 Mathathias Exhorts His Sons; His Death Now therefore O my sons, be zealous for the law and give your lives for the 51 covenant of your fathers. | And call to remembrance the works of the fathers which they have done in their generations:

2, 40: Every man said to his neighbor: a Hebraism.

2, 42: Assideans: or Hasideans, were religious observers of the law, not a political group of men who joined Mathathias. They were the spiritual ancestors of the Essenes and of the Pharisees in the Gospels.

2, 44: Sinners . . . wicked men: Jews who took on Greek ways. Nations: Gentiles.

2, 47: Children of pride: the Syrians.

2, 48: They yielded not the horn to the sinner: a Hebraism for "they did not allow the sinners to triumph."

and you shall receive your glory and an everlasting name. | 52 Was not Abraham found faithful in temptation, and it was 53 reputed to him unto justice? | Joseph in the time of his distress kept the commandment and he was made lord of Egypt. | 54 Phinees our father, by being fervent in the zeal of God, received 55 the covenant of an everlasting priesthood. | Jesus, while he 56 fulfilled the word, was made ruler in Israel. | Caleb, for bearing witness before the congregation, received an inheritance. | 57 David by his mercy obtained the throne of an everlasting king-58 dom. | Elias, while he was full of zeal for the law, was taken
59 up into heaven. | Ananias and Azarias and Misael by believing 60 were delivered out of the flame. | Daniel in his innocency was 61 delivered out of the mouth of the lions. | And thus consider through all generations that none that trust in him fail in 62 strength. | And fear not the words of a sinful man, for his 63 glory is dung and worms. Today he is lifted up, and tomorrow he shall not be found, because he has returned into his earth and his thought has come to nothing.
64 You, therefore, my sons, take courage and behave manfully 65 in the law: for by it you shall be glorious. | And behold, I know that your brother Simon is a man of counsel: give ear to him 66 always, and he shall be a father to you. | And Judas Machabeus who is valiant and strong from his youth up, let him be the leader of your army, and he shall manage the war of the 67 people. | And you shall take to you all that observe the law:
68 and revenge the wrong of your people. | Render to the Gentiles
69 their reward, and take heed to the precepts of the law. | And 70 he blessed them and was joined to his fathers. | And he died in the hundred and forty-six year: and he was buried by his sons in the sepulchers of his fathers in Modin. And all Israel mourned for him with great mourning.

1 Judas Machabeus Then his son Judas, called Machabeus, 2 rose up in his stead. | And all his brethren helped him, and all they that had joined themselves to his father, and they 3 fought with cheerfulness the battle of Israel. | And he got his people great honor and put on a breastplate as a giant and girt his warlike armor about him in battles and protected the camp 4 with his sword. | In his acts he was like a lion and like a lion's 5 whelp roaring for his prey. | And he pursued the wicked and sought them out, and them that troubled his people he burned 6 with fire. | And his enemies were driven away for fear of him, and all the workers of iniquity were troubled: and salvation 7 prospered in his hand. | And he grieved many kings and made Jacob glad with his works, and his memory is blessed for ever.

8 | And he went through the cities of Juda and destroyed the wicked out of them and turned away wrath from Israel. | 9 And he was renowned even to the utmost part of the earth, and he gathered them that were perishing.

10 Judas Overthrows Apollonius and Seron And Apollonius gathered together the Gentiles and a numerous and great army 11 from Samaria, to make war against Israel. | And Judas understood it and went forth to meet him: and he overthrew him and killed him, and many fell down slain, and the rest fled away. | 12 And he took their spoils, and Judas took the sword of Apol-13 lonius and fought with it all his lifetime. | And Seron captain of the army of Syria heard that Judas had assembled a company 14 of the faithful and a congregation with him, | and he said:
I will get me a name and will be glorified in the kingdom and will overthrow Judas and those that are with him that have 15 despised the edict of the king. | And he made himself ready:
and the host of the wicked went up with him, strong succors, 16 to be revenged of the children of Israel. | And they approached even as far as Bethoron: and Judas went forth to meet him 17 with a small company. | But when they saw the army coming to meet them they said to Judas: How shall we, being few, be able to fight against so great a multitude and so strong, and 18 we are ready to faint with fasting today? | And Judas said:
It is an easy matter for many to be shut up in the hands of a few: and there is no difference in the sight of the God of heaven to deliver with a great multitude or with a small company. | 19 For the success of war is not in the multitude of the army, but 20 strength comes from heaven. | They come against us with an insolent multitude, and with pride, to destroy us and our wive 21 and our children and to take our spoils. | But we will fight fo

22 our lives and our laws: | and the Lord himself will overthrow 23 them before our face. But as for you, fear them not. | And a soon as he had made an end of speaking, he rushed suddenl upon them: and Seron and his host were overthrown befor 24 him. | And he pursued him by the descent of Bethoron eve to the plain, and there fell of them eight hundred men. And th 25 rest fled into the land of the Philistines. | And the fear of Juda and of his brethren and the dread of them fell upon all th 26 nations round about them. | And his fame came to the king and all nations told of the battles of Judas.

27 A Great Army Sent against Judas from Syria Now when king Antiochus heard these words, he was angry in hi mind, and he sent and gathered the forces of all his kingdom 28 an exceeding strong army. | And he opened his treasury an gave out pay to the army for a year: and he commanded them 29 that they should be ready for all things. | And he perceive that the money of his treasures failed and that the tributes c the country were small because of the dissension and the ev that he had brought upon the land, that he might take awa 30 the laws of old times. | And he feared that he should not hav as formerly enough for charges and gifts, which he had give before with a liberal hand: for he had abounded more than th 31 kings that had been before him. | And he was greatly perplexe in mind and purposed to go into Persia and to take tributes c the countries and to gather much money.
32 And he left Lysias, a nobleman of the blood royal, to overse the affairs of the kingdom, from the river Euphrates even t 33 the river of Egypt, | and to bring up his son Antiochus till h
34 came again. | And he delivered to him half the army and th elephants, and he gave him charge concerning all that he woul have done and concerning the inhabitants of Judea, and Jeru 35 salem; and that he should send an army against them, to de stroy and root out the strength of Israel and the remnan of Jerusalem and to take away the memory of them from thi 36 place; | and that he should settle strangers to dwell in all the 37 coasts and divide their land by lot. | So the king took the ha of the army that remained and went forth from Antioch the chief city of his kingdom, in the hundred and forty-seventh year: and he passed over the river Euphrates and went through the higher countries.

38 Then Lysias chose Ptolemee, the son of Dorymenus, and 39 Nicanor and Gorgias, mighty men of the king's friends. | And he sent with them forty thousand men and seven thousand horsemen, to go into the land of Juda and to destroy it accord-
40 ing to the king's orders. | So they went forth with all their power and came and pitched near Emmaus in the plain coun-
41 try. | And the merchants of the countries heard the fame of them and they took silver and gold in abundance and servants: and they came into the camp, to buy the children of Israel for slaves. And there were joined to them the forces of Syria and of the land of the strangers.

42 And Judas and his brethren saw that evils were multiplied and that the armies approached to their borders: and they knew the orders the king had given to destroy the people and utterly 43 abolish them. | And they said every man to his neighbor: Let us raise up the low condition of our people and let us fight for
44 our people and our sanctuary. | And the assembly was gathered that they might be ready for battle, and that they might pray
45 and ask mercy and compassion. | Now Jerusalem was not inhabited but was like a desert. There was none of her children that went in or out, and the sanctuary was trodden down, and the children of strangers were in the castle. There was the habitation of the Gentiles, and joy was taken away from Jacob, and the pipe and harp ceased there.

46 Judas and His Men Fast and Pray And they assembled together and came to Maspha opposite Jerusalem: for in 47 Maspha was a place of prayer heretofore in Israel. | And they fasted that day and put on haircloth and put ashes upon their
48 heads, and they rent their garments. | And they laid open the books of the law in which the Gentiles searched for the like-
49 ness of their idols. | And they brought the priestly ornaments and the firstfruits and tithes, and stirred up the Nazarites that

50 had fulfilled their days. ¶ And they cried with a loud voice toward heaven, saying: What shall we do with these, and 51 whither shall we carry them? ¶ For your holies are trodden down and are profaned, and your priests are in mourning and 52 are brought low. ¶ And behold the nations have come together against us to destroy us: you know what they intend against us.
53 ¶ How shall we be able to stand before their face unless you ( 54 God, help us? ¶ Then they sounded with trumpets and cried out with a loud voice.

55 And after this Judas appointed captains over the people, over thousands, and over hundreds, and over fifties, and over 56 tens. ¶ And he said to them that were building houses, or had betrothed wives or were planting vineyards or were fearful, that they should return every man to his house, according to 57 the law. ¶ So they removed the camp and pitched on the south 58 side of Emmaus. ¶ And Judas said: Gird yourselves and be valiant men and be ready early in the morning, that you may fight with these nations that are assembled against us to destroy 59 us and our sanctuary. For it is better for us to die in battle 60 than to see the evils of our nation and of the holies. Nevertheless as it shall be the will of God in heaven so be it done.

1 Judas Routs the King's Army Then Gorgias took five thousand men and a thousand of the best horsemen, and they 2 removed out of the camp by night, that they might come upon the camp of the Jews and strike them suddenly. And the 3 men that were of the castle were their guides. And Judas heard of it and rose up, he and the valiant men, to attack the 4 king's forces that were in Emmaus. ¶ For as yet the army was 5 dispersed from the camp. And Gorgias came by night into the camp of Judas and found no man, and he sought them in the 6 mountains, for he said: These men flee from us. And when it was day, Judas showed himself in the plain with three thou-7 sand men only who neither had armor nor swords. And they saw the camp of the Gentiles that it was strong, and the men in breastplates and the horsemen round about them: and they 8 were trained up to war. ¶ And Judas said to the men that were with him: Fear not their multitude, neither be afraid of their 9 assault. ¶ Remember in what manner our fathers were saved in the Red Sea when Pharao pursued them with a great army. | 10 And now let us cry to heaven: and the Lord will have mercy on us and will remember the covenant of our fathers and will 11 destroy this army before our face this day. | And all nations shall know that there is one that redeems and delivers Israel.

12 And the strangers lifted up their eyes and saw them coming 13 against them. | And they went out of the camp to battle, and 14 they that were with Judas sounded the trumpet. | And they joined battle: and the Gentiles were routed and fled into the 15 plain. | But all the hindmost of them fell by the sword, and they pursued them as far as Gezeron, and even to the plains of Idumea and of Azotus and of Jamnia: and there fell of them
16 to the number of three thousand men. | And Judas returned 17 again with his army that followed him, | and he said to the people: Be not greedy of the spoils, for there is war before us, 18 | and Gorgias and his army are near us in the mountain: but stand now against our enemies and overthrow them, and you 19 shall take the spoils afterward with safety. | And as Judas was speaking these words, behold part of them appeared looking forth from the mountain.

20 Gorgias' Forces Put to Flight And Gorgias saw that his men were put to flight and that they had set fire to the camp, 21 for the smoke that was seen declared what was done. | And when they had seen this, they were seized with great fear, seeing at the same time Judas and his army in the plain ready to fight.
22.23 | So they all fled away into the land of the strangers. | And Judas returned to take the spoils of the camp, and they got much gold and silver and blue silk and purple of the sea and 24 great riches. | And returning home they sang a hymn and blessed God in heaven, because he is good, because his mercy 25 endures for ever. | So Israel had a great deliverance that day 26 And such of the strangers as escaped went and told Lysias 27 all that had happened. | And when he heard these things, he was amazed and discouraged, because things had not succeeded in Israel according to his mind and as the king had commanded.

28 The Troops of Lysias Defeated So the year following Lysias gathered together threescore thousand chosen men and 29 five thousand horsemen, that he might subdue them. | And they came into Judea and pitched their tents in Bethoron, and 4, 22: Land of the strangers: land of the Philistines.

30 Judas met them with ten thousand men. | And they saw that the army was strong, and he prayed and said: Blessed are you, O Savior of Israel, who broke the violence of the mighty by the hand of your servant David and delivered up the camp of the strangers into the hands of Jonathan the son of Saul and of his 31 armorbearer. | Shut up this army in the hands of your people Israel: and let them be confounded in their host and their horse-32 men. | Strike them with fear and cause the boldness of their strength to languish, and let them quake at their own destruc-33 tion. | Cast them down with the sword of them that love you, and let all that know your name praise you with hymns. | 34 And they joined battle: and there fell of the army of Lysias five 35 thousand men. | And when Lysias saw that his men were put to flight and how bold the Jews were, and that they were ready either to live or die manfully, he went to Antioch and chose soldiers that they might come again into Judea with greater numbers.

36 Judas Cleanses the Temple Then Judas, and his brethren said: Behold our enemies are discomfited. Let us go now to 37 cleanse the holy places and to repair them. | And all the army 38 assembled together; and they went up into mount Sion. | And they saw the sanctuary desolate, and the altar profaned, and the gates burned, and shrubs growing up in the courts as in a forest or on the mountains, and the chambers joining to the tem-39 ple thrown down. | And they rent their garments and made 40 great lamentation and put ashes on their heads. | And they fell down to the ground on their faces, and they sounded with the trumpets of alarm, and they cried toward heaven.
41 Then Judas appointed men to fight against them that were in 42 the castle, till they had cleansed the holy places. | And he chose priests without blemish, whose will was set upon the law 43 of God. | And they cleansed the holy places, and took away 44 the stones that had been defiled into an unclean place. | And he considered about the altar of holocausts that had been pro-45 faned, what he should do with it. | And a good counsel came into their minds, to pull it down: lest it should be a reproach to them, because the Gentiles had defiled it. So they threw it 46 down. | And they laid up the stones in the mountain of the temple in a convenient place, till there should come a prophet and give answer concerning them.

47 A New Altar Is Built And they took whole stones accord-

4, 41: See 4, 2 n.

ing to the law and built a new altar according to the former. | 48 And they built up the holy places and the things that were within the temple: and they sanctified the temple and the courts.
49 | And they made new holy vessels and brought in the candlestick and the altar of incense and the table into the temple. | 50 And they put incense upon the altar and lighted up the lamps that were upon the candlestick, and they gave light in the 51 temple. | And they set the loaves upon the table and hung up the veils and finished all the works that they had begun to 52 make. | And they arose before the morning on the five and twentieth day of the ninth month (which is the month of 53 Casleu) in the hundred and forty-eighth year. | And they offered sacrifice according to the law upon the new altar of 54 holocausts which they had made. | According to the time and according to the day wherein the heathens had defiled it, in the same was it dedicated anew with canticles and harps and lutes 55 and cymbals. | And all the people fell upon their faces and adored and blessed up to heaven him that had prospered them.
56 | And they kept the dedication of the altar eight days: and they offered holocausts with joy and sacrifices of salvation and of praise.
57 And they adorned the front of the temple with crowns of gold and escutcheons, and they renewed the gates and the cham-58 bers and fastened doors upon them. | And there was exceeding great joy among the people, and the reproach of the Gentiles 59 was turned away. | And Judas and his brethren and all the church of Israel decreed that the day of the dedication of the altar should be kept in its season from year to year for eight days, from the five and twentieth day of the month of Casleu, 60 with joy and gladness. | They built up also at that time mount Sion, with high walls and strong towers round about, lest the Gentiles should at any time come and tread it down as they 61 did before. | And he placed a garrison there to keep it: and 4, 59: The Feast of Dedication or Purification of the temple, also called Feast of Lights because of the lamps placed at the entrance of the homes to symbolize the Mosaic Law. The feast was celebrated three years to the day after the erection of the "abominable idol of desolation" in 1, 57. See 2 Mc 10, 1-8, for the parallel passage where similarities with the Feast of Tabernacles are noted. The feast of dedication is mentioned in Jn 10, 22. The Jews still celebrate it annually in December January as the Feast of Hanukka. The Talmud, in post-biblical days attributes the eight days of the feast to a miracle. The flask of consecrated oil, hidden in the wall by the priests at the profanation of the temple was found intact. The one-day supply of the flask "miraculously" lasted eight days. See 2 Mc 1, 18-33 n.

he fortified it to secure Bethsura that the people might have a defense against Idumea.

1 Judas and His Brethren Save the Persecuted Now it came to pass, when the nations round about heard that the altar and the sanctuary were built up as before, that they were 2 exceeding angry. | And they thought to destroy the generation of Jacob that were among them: and they began to kill some of 3 the people and to persecute them. | Then Judas fought against the children of Esau in Idumea and them that were in Acrabathane, because they beset the Israelites round about: and he 4 made a great slaughter of them. | And he remembered the malice of the children of Bean, who were a snare and a stumbling-block to the people by lying in wait for them in the 5 way. | And they were shut up by him in towers, and he set upon them and devoted them to utter destruction, and burned 6 their towers with fire and all that were in them. | Then he passed over to the children of Ammon, where he found a mighty power and much people, and Timotheus was their 7 captain. | And he fought many battles with them, and they 8 were discomfited in their sight: and he smote them. | And he took the city of Gazer and her towns and returned into Judea.

9 And the Gentiles that were in Galaad assembled themselves together against the Israelites that were in their quarters to destroy them: and they fled into the fortress of Datheman. | 10 And they sent letters to Judas and his brethren, saying: The heathens that are round about are gathered together against us, 11 to destroy us. | And they are preparing to come and take the fortress into which we have fled. And Timotheus is the captain 12 of their host. | Now therefore come, and deliver us out of their 13 hands, for many of us are slain. | And all our brethren that were in the places of Tubin are killed, and they carried away their wives and their children, captives, and took their spoils. And they have slain there almost a thousand men.

14 And while they were yet reading these letters, behold there came other messengers out of Galilee with their garments rent, 15 who related according to these words, saying: that they of Ptolemais and of Tyre and of Sidon were assembled against them. And all Galilee is filled with strangers, in order to con-16 sume us. | Now when Judas and the people heard these words, a great assembly met together to consider what they should do for their brethren that were in trouble and were assaulted by 17 them. | And Judas said to Simon his brother: Choose your men and go and deliver your brethren in Galilee. And I and my 18 brother Jonathan will go into the country of Galaad. | And he left Joseph, the son of Zacharias, and Azarias, captains of the 19 people, with the remnant of the army in Judea to keep it. | And he commanded them, saying: Take charge of this people, but 20 make no war against the heathens till we return. | Now three thousand men were allotted to Simon to go into Galilee: and 21 eight thousand to Judas to go into the land of Galaad. | And Simon went into Galilee and fought many battles with the heathens. And the heathens were discomfited before his face: 22 and he pursued them even to the gate of Ptolemais. | And there fell of the heathens almost three thousand men: and he took 23 the spoils of them, | and he took with him those that were in Galilee and in Arbatis with their wives and children and all that they had, and he brought them into Judea with great joy.

24 The Victories of Judas And Judas Machabeus and Jonathan his brother passed over the Jordan and went three days' 25 journey through the desert. | And the Nabutheans met them and received them in a peaceable manner and told them all that 26 happened to their brethren in the land of Galaad: and that many of them were shut up in Barasa and in Bosor and in Alima and in Casphor and in Mageth and in Carnaim, all 27 these strong and great cities. | Yea, and that they were kept shut up in the rest of the cities of Galaad, and that they had appointed to bring their army on the morrow near to these cities and to take them and to destroy them all in one day. | 28 Then Judas and his army suddenly turned their march into the desert to Bosor and took the city: and he slew every male by the edge of the sword and took all their spoils and burned it 29 with fire. | And they removed from thence by night and went 30 till they came to the fortress. | And it came to pass that early in the morning, when they lifted up their eyes, behold there were people without number, carrying ladders and engines to 31 take the fortress and assault them. | And Judas saw that the fight had begun: and the cry of the battle went up to heaven 32 like a trumpet, and a great cry out of the city. | And he said to 5, 17: The country of Galaad: east of the Jordan river.

33 his host: Fight today for your brethren. | And he came with three companies behind them, and they sounded their trumpets 34 and cried out in prayer. | And the host of Timotheus understood that it was Machabeus, and they fled away before his face: and they made a great slaughter of them, and there fell 35 of them in that day almost eight thousand men. | And Judas turned aside to Maspha and assaulted and took it: and he slew every male thereof and took the spoils thereof and burned it 36 with fire. | From there he marched and took Casbon and Mageth and Bosor, and the rest of the cities of Galaad.
37 But after this Timotheus gathered another army and camped 38 opposite Raphon beyond the torrent. | And Judas sent men to view the army, and they brought him word, saying: All the nations, that are round about us, have assembled unto him an 39 army exceeding great. | And they have hired the Arabians to help them, and they have pitched their tents beyond the torrent, ready to come to fight against you. And Judas went to meet 40 them. | And Timotheus said to the captains of his army: When Judas and his army come near the torrent of water, if he pass over unto us first, we shall not be able to withstand him, for 41 he will certainly prevail over us. | But if he be afraid to pass over and camp on the other side of the river, we will pass over 42 to them and shall prevail against him. | Now when Judas came near the torrent of water, he set the scribes of the people by the torrent and commanded them, saying: Suffer no man 43 to stay behind, but let all come to the battle. | And he passed over to them first, and all the people after him, and all the heathens were discomfited before them. And they threw away their weapons and fled to the temple that was in Carnaim. | 44 And he took that city, and the temple he burned with fire, with all things that were therein: and Carnaim was subdued and could not stand against the face of Judas.
45 And Judas gathered together all the Israelites that were in the land of Galaad, from the least even to the greatest, and their wives and children, and an army exceeding great, to come 46 into the land of Juda. | And they came as far as Ephron. Now this was a great city situated in the way, strongly fortified, and there was no means to turn from it on the right hand or on the 47 left, but the way was through the midst of it. | And they that were in the city shut themselves in and stopped up the gates with stones: and Judas sent to them with peaceable words, | 48 saying: Let us pass through your land, to go into our country:
and no man shall hurt you. We will only pass through on foot.
49 But they would not open to them. | Then Judas commanded proclamation to be made in the camp that they should make an 30 assault, every man in the place where he was. | And the men of the army drew near: and he assaulted that city all the day and all the night: and the city was delivered into his hands. | 31 And they slew every male with the edge of the sword: and he razed the city and took the spoils thereof and passed through 32 all the city over them that were slain. | Then they passed over the Jordan to the great plain that is opposite Bethsan. | 33 And Judas gathered together the hindmost: and he exhorted the people all the way through, till they came into the land of 34 Juda. | And they went up to mount Sion with joy and gladness and offered holocausts, because not one of them was slain till they had returned in peace.

35 Joseph and Azarias Disobey and Are Defeated Now in the days that Judas and Jonathan were in the land of Galaad, 36 and Simon his brother in Galilee before Ptolemais, | Joseph, the son of Zacharias, and Azarias, captain of the soldiers, heard 37 of the good success and the battles that were fought. | And he said: Let us also get us a name, and let us go fight against the 38 Gentiles that are round about us. | And he gave charge to them
39 that were in his army, and they went toward Jamnia. | And Gorgias and his men went out of the city to give them battle. | 60 And Joseph and Azarias were put to flight and were pursued unto the borders of Judea. And there fell, on that day, of the people of Israel about two thousand men, and there was a great 61 overthrow of the people: | because they did not hearken to Judas and his brethren, thinking that they should do manfully.
62 | But they were not of the seed of those men by whom salvation was brought to Israel.
63 And the men of Juda were magnified exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and of all the nations where their name was heard.
64 | And people assembled to them with joyful acclamations. | 65 Then Judas and his brethren went forth and attacked the children of Esau, in the land toward the south. And he took Chebron and her towns, and he burned the walls thereof and the 66 towers all round it. | And he removed his camp to go into the 67 land of the aliens, and he went through Samaria. | In that day some priests fell in battle: for, while desiring to do manfully, 68 they went out unadvisedly to fight. | And Judas turned to Azotus into the land of the strangers, and he threw down their altars, and he burned the statues of their gods with fire: and he took the spoils of the cities and returned into the land of Juda.

1 Repentance and Death of Antiochus Now king Antiochus was going through the higher countries, and he heard that the city of Elymais in Persia was greatly renowned and abound-2 ing in silver and gold. | And that there was in it a temple exceeding rich: and coverings of gold and breastplates and shields which king Alexander, son of Philip the Macedonian that 3 reigned first in Greece, had left there. | Lo, he came and sought to take the city and to pillage it but he was not able, because 4 the design was known to them that were in the city. | And they rose up against him in battle, and he fled away, departing with great sadness, and returned toward Babylonia.
5 And while he was in Persia, there came one that told him how the armies that were in the land of Juda were put to flight.
6 | And that Lysias went with a very great power and was put to flight before the face of the Jews, and that they had grown strong by the armor and power and store of spoils which they
7 had gotten out of the camps which they had destroyed. | And that they had thrown down the abomination which he had set up upon the altar in Jerusalem, and that they had compassed about the sanctuary with high walls as before, and Bethsura also, his city.
8 And it came to pass when the king heard these words that he was struck with fear and exceedingly moved. And he laid himself down upon his bed and fell sick for grief, because it had
9 not fallen out to him as he imagined. | And he remained there many days, for great grief came more and more upon him, and
10 he made account that he should die. | And he called for all his friends and said to them: Sleep has gone from my eyes, and I have fallen away, and my heart is cast down for anxiety. |
11 And I said in my heart: Into how much tribulation have I come, and what floods of sorrow I am in now, I that was pleasant and 12 beloved in my power! | But now I remember the evils that I have done in Jerusalem, from where I took away all the spoils of gold and of silver that were in it, and where I sent to destroy
13 the inhabitants of Juda without cause. | I know therefore that for this cause these evils have found me: and behold I perish
14 with great grief in a strange land. | Then he called Philip, one of his friends, and he made him regent over all his kingdom. | 15 And he gave him the crown and his robe and his ring, that he should go to Antiochus his son and should bring him up for 6, 1: Elymais: Elam.

16 the kingdom. | So king Antiochus died there in the year one hundred and forty-nine.

17 Antiochus the Younger And Lysias understood that the king was dead, and he set up Antiochus his son to reign, whom 18 he brought up young: and he called his name Eupator. | Now they that were in the castle had shut up the Israelites round about the holy places: and they were continually seeking their 19 hurt and to strengthen the Gentiles. | And Judas purposed to destroy them, and he called together all the people, to besiege 20 them. | And they came together and besieged them in the year one hundred and fifty: and they made battering slings and en-21 gines. | And some of the besieged got out, and some wicked
22 men of Israel joined themselves unto them. | And they went to the king and said: How long do you delay to execute the 23 judgment and to revenge our brethren? | We determined to serve your father and to do according to his orders and obey 24 his edicts. | And for this they of our nation are alienated from us and have slain as many of us as they could find and have 25 spoiled our inheritances. | Neither have they put forth their 26 hand against us only, but also against all our borders. | And behold they have approached this day to the castle of Jerusalem to take it, and they have fortified the stronghold of 27 Bethsura. | And unless you speedily prevent them, they will do greater things than these, and you shall not be able to subdue 28 them. | Now when the king heard this, he was angry, and he called together all his friends and the captains of his army and 29 them that were over the horsemen. | There came also to him from other realms and from the islands of the sea hired troops.

30 The Strong Army of the New King And the number of his army was an hundred thousand footmen and twenty thousand horsemen and thirty-two elephants, trained to bat-31 tle. | And they went through Idumea and approached to Beth-sura and fought many days, and they made engines. But they sallied forth and burned them with fire and fought manfully 32 | And Judas departed from the castle and removed the camp
33 to Bethzacharam, opposite the king's camp. | And the king rose before it was light and made his troops march on fiercely toward the way of Bethzacharam. And the armies made themselves ready for the battle, and they sounded the trumpets, 34 and they showed the elephants the blood of grapes and mul-35 berries, to provoke them to fight. | And they distributed the beasts by the legions, and there stood by every elephant a thousand men in coats of mail and with helmets of brass on their heads: and five hundred horsemen set in order were chosen for 36 every beast, | these before the time: wherever the beast was, they were there: and wherever it went they went, and they de-

37 parted not from it. | And upon the beast there were strong wooden towers which covered every one of them, and engines upon them; and upon every one thirty-two valiant men, who
38 fought from above, and an Indian to rule the beast. | And the rest of the horsemen he placed on this side and on that side at the two wings, with trumpets to stir up the army and to hasten them forward that stood thick together in the legions thereof. |
39 Now when the sun shone upon the shields of gold and of brass, the mountains glittered therewith: and they shone like lamps
40 of fire. | And part of the king's army was distinguished by the high mountains, and the other part by the low places: and they
41 marched on warily and orderly. | And all the inhabitants of the land were moved at the noise of their multitude and the marching of the company and the rattling of the armor: for the army
42 was exceeding great and strong. | And Judas and his army drew near for battle: and there fell of the king's army six hundred men.

43 The Valiancy of Eleazar And Eleazar the son of Saura saw one of the beasts harnessed with the king's harness; and it was higher than the other beasts, and it seemed to him that the 44 king was on it. | And he exposed himself to deliver his people
45 and to get himself an everlasting name. | And he ran up to it boldly in the midst of the legion, killing on the right hand and on the left: and they fell by him on this side and that side. | 46 And he went between the feet of the elephant and put himself under it and slew it; and it fell to the ground upon him, and he died there.

47 Then they, seeing the strength of the king and the fierceness
48 of his army, turned away from them. | But the king's army went up against them to Jerusalem: and the king's army pitched
49 their tents against Judea and mount Sion. | And he made peace with them that were in Bethsura: and they came forth out of the city, because they had no victuals, being shut up there,
50 for it was the year of rest to the land. | And the king took Bethsura, and he placed there a garrison to keep it.

51 Jerusalem Besieged And he turned his army against the sanctuary for many days: and he set up there battering sling and engines and instruments to cast fire and engines to cas stones and javelins and pieces to shoot arrows, and slings.

52 And they also made engines against their engines, and the 53 fought for many days. | But there were no victuals in the city because it was the seventh year: and such as had stayed it Judea of them that came from among the nations had eater 54 the residue of all that which had been stored up. | And there remained in the holy places but a few, for the famine had pre vailed over them: and they were dispersed every man to hi own place.
55 Now Lysias heard that Philip, whom king Antiochus whil he lived had appointed to bring up his son Antiochus, and t 56 reign, to be king, | had returned from Persia and Media, with the army that went with him and that he sought to take upo 57 him the affairs of the kingdom. | Wherefore he made haste t go and say to the king and to the captains of the army: W decay daily and our provision of victuals is small and the plac that we lay siege to is strong, and it lies upon us to take ord 58 for the affairs of the kingdom. | Now therefore let us come t an agreement with these men and make peace with them an 59 with all their nation. | And let us covenant with them th they may live according to their own laws as before: for b cause of our despising their laws, they have been provoked ar 60 have done all these things. | And the proposal was acceptah in the sight of the king and of the princes, and he sent to the 61 to make peace: and they accepted it. | And the king and th princes swore to them: and they came out of the stronghol 62 | Then the king entered into mount Sion and saw the streng of the place, and he quickly broke the oath that he had tak and gave commandment to throw down the wall round abo found Philip master of the city: and he fought against him a

1 Demetrius Is Made King In the hundred and fifty-fi year, Demetrius the son of Seleucus departed from the city Rome and came up with a few men into a city of the seaco

7, 1: In 161 B.C. Demetrius I, son of Seleucus IV, Philopator, caped from Rome where he was sent as a hostage for his uncle Antioch Epiphanes. Polybius the Historian helped him to escape. He landed Tripolis, Syria.

and reigned there. | And it came to pass, as he entered into the house of the kingdom of his fathers, that the army seized upon Antiochus and Lysias, to bring them unto him. | And when he knew it, he said: Let me not see their face. | So the army slew them. And Demetrius sat upon the throne of his kingdom.
And there came to him the wicked and ungodly men of Israel: and Alcimus was at the head of them, who desired to be made high priest. | And they accused the people to the king, saying: Judas and his brethren have destroyed all your friends, and he has driven us out of our land. | Now therefore send some man whom you trust, and let him go and see all the havoc he has made among us and in the king's lands: and let him punish all his friends and their helpers.

Bacchides and Alcimus Betray Judas Then the king chose Bacchides, one of his friends that ruled beyond the great river in the kingdom, and was faithful to the king: and he sent him | to see the havoc that Judas had made. And the wicked Alcimus he made high priest and commanded him to take revenge upon the children of Israel. | And they arose and came with a great army into the land of Juda: and they sent messengers and spoke to Judas and his brethren with peaceable words deceitfully. | But they gave no heed to their words, for they saw that they had come with a great army. | Then there assembled to Alcimus and Bacchides a company of the scribes, to require things that are just. | First the Assideans that were among the children of Israel; and they sought peace of them, | for they said: One that is a priest of the seed of Aaron has come, he will not deceive us. | And he spoke to them peaceably, and swore to them, saying: We will do you no harm, nor your friends. | And they believed him. And he took threescore of them and slew them in one day, according to the word that is written: | The flesh of your saints and the blood of them they have shed round about Jerusalem, and there was none to bury them. | Then fear and trembling fell upon all the people, and they said: There is no truth nor justice among them: for they have broken the covenant and the oath which they made. | And Bacchides removed the camp from Jerusalem and pitched in Bethzecha: and he sent and took many of them that had fled away from him, and some of the people he killed, and threw them into a great pit. | Then he committed the country to Alcimus and left with him troops to help him. So Bacchid 21 went away to the king. | But Alcimus did what he could 22 maintain his chief priesthood. | And they that disturbed th people resorted to him, and they got the land of Juda into the power and did much hurt in Israel.

23 And Judas saw all the evils that Alcimus and they that wer with him did to the children of Israel, much more than the Gen 24 tiles. | And he went out into all the coasts of Judea roun about, and took vengeance upon the men that had revolte 25 and they ceased to go forth any more into the country. | An Alcimus saw that Judas and they that were with him pr vailed: and he knew that he could not stand against them, an he went back to the king and accused them of many crime

26 Nicanor Sent to Jerusalem And the king sent Nicano one of his principal lords, who was a great enemy to Israe 27 and he commanded him to destroy the people. | And Nicano came to Jerusalem with a great army, and he sent to Judas an 28 his brethren deceitfully with friendly words, | saying: Let ther be no fighting between me and you. I will come with a fe 29 men to see your faces with peace. | And he came to Judas an they saluted one another peaceably, but the enemies were pr 30 pared to take away Judas by force. | And the thing was know to Judas that he had come to him with deceit: and he wa much afraid of him and would not see his face any more.
31 And Nicanor knew that his counsel was discovered: and h 32 went out to fight against Judas near Capharsalama. | And ther fell of Nicanor's army almost five thousand men, and they fle 33 into the city of David. | And after this Nicanor went up int mount Sion, and some of the priests and the people came ou to salute him peaceably and to show him the holocausts tha 34 were offered for the king. | But he mocked and despised ther
35 and abused them, and he spoke proudly, | and swore in ange saying: Unless Judas and his army be delivered into my hand as soon as ever I return in peace, I will burn this house. An 36 he went out in a great rage. | And the priests went in an stood before the face of the altar and the temple, and weepin 37 they said: | You, O Lord, have chosen this house for your nam to be called upon therein, that it might be a house of praye 38 and supplication for your people. | Be avenged of this ma and his army, and let them fall by the sword. Remember the blasphemies and suffer them not to continue any longer.

7, 31: Capharsalama: unknown site.

39 Then Nicanor went out from Jerusalem and encamped near 40 to Bethoron: and an army of Syria joined him. | But Judas pitched in Adarsa with three thousand men. And Judas prayed, 41 and said: | O Lord, when they that were sent by king Sennacherib blasphemed you, an angel went out and slew of them 42 a hundred and eighty-five thousand. | Even so destroy this army in our sight today and let the rest know that he has spoken ill against your sanctuary: and judge him according to his wickedness.

43 Judas Defeats Nicanor And the armies joined battle on the thirteenth day of the month Adar: and the army of Nicanor 44 was defeated, and he himself was first slain in the battle. | And when his army saw that Nicanor was slain, they threw away 45 their weapons and fled. | And they pursued after them one day's journey from Adazer, even till you come to Gazara: and 46 they sounded the trumpets after them with signals. | And they went forth out of all the towns of Judea round about, and they pushed them with the horns and they turned again to them: and they were all slain with the sword and there was not 47 left of them so much as one. | And they took the spoils of them for a booty, and they cut off Nicanor's head and his right hand which he had proudly stretched out, and they brought it and 48 hung it up over against Jerusalem. | And the people rejoiced 49 exceedingly and they spent that day with great joy. | And he ordained that this day should be kept every year, being the 50 thirteenth of the month of Adar. | And the land of Juda was quiet for a short time.

1 Judas Hears of the Romans' Fame Now Judas heard of the fame of the Romans, that they are powerful and strong and willingly agree to all things that are requested of them, and that they have made amity with all who have come to them, 2 and that they are mighty in power. | And they heard of their battles and their noble acts, which they had done in Galatia:
how they had conquered them and brought them under tribute.
3 | And how great things they had done in the land of Spain, and that they had brought under their power the mines of silver and of gold that are there, and had come into possession of all 4 the place by their counsel and patience. | And that they had conquered places that were very far off from them, and kings that came against them from the ends of the earth and had overthrown them with great slaughter: and the rest pay tribute 5 to them every year. | And that they had defeated in battle Philip, and Perses the king of the Ceteans, and the rest that had 6 borne arms against them, and had conquered them: | and how Antiochus the great king of Asia, who went to fight against them, having a hundred and twenty elephants with horsemen 7 and chariots and a very great army, was routed by them; | and how they took him alive and appointed to him that both he and they that should reign after him should pay a great tribute, and that he should give hostages and that which was agreed 8 upon; | and the country of the Indians and of the Medes and of the Lydians, some of their best provinces, and those which 9 they had taken from them they gave to king Eumenes. | And that they who were in Greece had a mind to go and to destroy 10 them: and they had knowledge thereof. | And they sent a general against them and fought with them, and many of them were slain, and they carried away their wives and their children captives and spoiled them, and took possession of their land and threw down their walls, and brought them to be their servants unto this day.

11 And the other kingdoms and islands that at any time had resisted them, they had destroyed and brought under their 12 power. | But with their friends and such as relied upon them they kept amity, and had conquered kingdoms that were near and that were far off: for all that heard their name were afraid 13 of them. | That whom they had a mind to help to a kingdom, those reigned; and whom they would, they deposed from the kingdom: and they were greatly exalted.

8, 9-10: This may refer to the Roman general, M. Fulvius Nobilior, in the Aetolian war of 191-188 B.C.

14 And none of all these wore a crown or was clothed in pur-15 ple, to be magnified thereby. | And that they had made themselves a senate house and consulted daily three hundred and twenty men that sat in council always for the people, that they
16 might do the things that were right. | And that they committed their government to one man every year, to rule over all their country, and they all obey one, and there is no envy, nor jealousy among them.

17 The Treaty with Rome So Judas chose Eupolemus the son of John, the son of Jacob, and Jason the son of Eleazar, and he sent them to Rome to make a league of amity and con-
18 federacy with them. | And that they might take off from them the yoke of the Grecians, for they saw that they oppressed the
19 kingdom of Israel with servitude. | And they went to Rome, a very long journey, and they entered into the senate house and
20 said: | Judas Machabeus and his brethren and the people of the Jews have sent us to you, to make alliance and peace with you, and that we may be registered your confederates and
21-22 friends. | And the proposal was pleasing in their sight. | And this is the copy of the writing that they wrote back again, graven in tables of brass, and sent to Jerusalem, that it might be with them there for a memorial of the peace and alliance.
23 GOOD SUCCESS BE TO THE ROMANS, and to the people of the Jews, by sea and by land for ever and far be the sword and 24 enemy from them. | But if there come first any war upon the Romans or any of their confederates, in all their dominions: |
25 the nation of the Jews shall help them according as the time
26 shall direct, with all their heart. | Neither shall they give them, while they are fighting, or furnish them with wheat or arms or money or ships, as it has seemed good to the Romans: and they shall obey their orders, without taking anything of them. |
27 In like manner also if war shall come first upon the nation of the Jews, the Romans shall help them with all their heart, ac-
28 cording as the time shall permit them. | And there shall not be given to them that come to their aid either wheat or arms or money or ships, as it has seemed good to the Romans: and they
29 shall observe their orders without deceit. | According to these articles did the Romans covenant with the people of the Jews. |

8, 15: Consulted daily: the senate did not convene every day.
8, 16: To one man: there were two consuls.
8, 23-30: In this alliance of 161 B.C., not found among Roman historians, the Jews gained nothing.

30 And if after this one party or the other shall have a mind to add to these articles or take away anything, they may do it at their pleasure: and whatsoever they shall add or take away shall be 31 ratified. | Moreover, concerning the evils that Demetrius the king has done against them, we have written to him, saying: Why have you made your yoke heavy upon our friends and 32 allies, the Jews? | If therefore they come again to us complaining of you, we will do them justice and will make war against you by sea and land.

1 Bacchides and Alcimus Sent again into Judea In the meantime, when Demetrius heard that Nicanor and his army had fallen in battle, he sent again Bacchides and Alcimus into 2 Judea; and the right wing of his army with them. | And they took the road that leads to Galgal and they encamped in Masa-loth, which is in Arabella: and they made themselves masters of 3 it and slew many people. | In the first month of the hundred 4 and fifty-second year they brought the army to Jerusalem: and they arose and went to Berea with twenty thousand men and 5 two thousand horsemen. | Now Judas had pitched his tents in 6 Laisa, and three thousand chosen men with him. | And they saw the multitude of the army that they were many, and they were seized with great fear. And many withdrew themselves out of the camp, and there remained of them no more than 7 eight hundred men. | And Judas saw that his army slipped away and the battle pressed upon him, and his heart was cast down: because he had not time to gather them together, and he 8 was discouraged. | Then he said to them that remained: Let us arise and go against our enemies, if we may be able to fight 9 against them. | But they dissuaded him, saying: We shall not be able, but let us save our lives now and return to our brethren 10 and then we will fight against them, for we are but few. | Then Judas said: God forbid we should do this thing and flee away from them: But if our time be come, let us die manfully for our brethren, and let us not stain our glory.

11 Defeat and Death of Judas And the army removed out of the camp, and they stood over against them. And the horsemen were divided into two troops, and the slingers and the archers went before the army, and they that were in the front 2 were all men of valor. | And Bacchides was in the right wing, and the legion drew near on two sides, and they sounded the

3 trumpets. | And they also that were on Judas' side, even they also cried out, and the earth shook at the noise of the armies. And the battle was fought from morning even unto the eve-
4 ning. | And Judas perceived that the stronger part of the army of Bacchides was on the right side, and all the stout of heart
5 came together with him; and the right wing was discomfited
6 by them, and he pursued them even to the mount Azotus. | And they that were in the left wing saw that the right wing was dis-
7 comfited, and they followed after Judas and them that were with him, at their back. | And the battle was hard fought, and there fell many wounded of the one side and of the other. | 8 And Judas was slain and the rest fled away.

9 And Jonathan and Simon took Judas their brother and buried him in the sepulcher of their fathers in the city of Modin. |
10 And all the people of Israel bewailed him with great lamenta-11 tion, and they mourned for him many days, | and said: How is 12 the mighty man fallen that saved the people of Israel! | But the rest of the words of the wars of Judas and of the noble acts that he did and of his greatness are not written: for they were very many.

13 And it came to pass after the death of Judas that the wicked began to put forth their heads in all the confines of Israel, and 14 all the workers of iniquity rose up. | In those days there was a very great famine, and they and all their country yielded to
15 Bacchides. | And Bacchides chose the wicked men and made
16 them lords of the country. | And they sought out and made diligent search after the friends of Judas and brought them to Bacchides and he took vengeance of them and abused them. |
17 And there was a great tribulation in Israel, such as was not since the day that there was no prophet seen in Israel.

18 Jonathan Succeeds His Brother Judas And all the friends
19 of Judas came together and said to Jonathan: | Since your brother Judas died there is not a man like him to go forth against our enemies, Bacchides and them that are the enemies
20 of our nation. | Now therefore we have chosen you this day to be our prince and captain in his stead to fight our battle. |

9, 23: The wicked: the renegades or Grecized Jews.

31 So Jonathan took upon him the government at that time and 32 rose up in the place of Judas his brother. | And Bacchides had 33 knowledge of it and sought to kill him. | And Jonathan and Simon his brother knew it, and all that were with them: and they fled into the desert of Thecua and they pitched by the 34 water of the lake Asphar. | And Bacchides understood it, and he came himself with all his army over the Jordan on the sabbath day.

35 And Jonathan sent his brother, a captain of the people, to desire the Nabutheans, his friends, that they would lend them 36 their equipage which was copious. | And the children of Jambri came forth out of Madaba and took John and all that he had 37 and went away with them. | After this it was told Jonathan and Simon his brother that the children of Jambri made a great marriage and were bringing the bride out of Madaba, the daughter of one of the great princes of Chanaan, with great pomp.
38 And they remembered the blood of John their brother: and they went up and hid themselves under the covert of the moun-39 tain. | And they lifted up their eyes and saw: and behold a tumult and great preparation, and the bridegroom came forth and his friends and his brethren to meet them with timbrels 40 and musical instruments and many weapons. | And they rose up against them from the place where they lay in ambush and slew them, and there fell many wounded, and the rest fled into 41 the mountains; and they took all their spoils, | and the marriage was turned into mourning, and the noise of their musical 42 instruments into lamentation. | And they took revenge for the blood of their brother, and they returned to the bank of the Jordan.

43 And Bacchides heard it, and he came on the sabbath day 44 even to the bank of the Jordan with a great power. | And Jonathan said to his company: Let us arise and fight against our 45 enemies, for it is not now as yesterday and the day before: | for behold the battle is before us, and the water of the Jordan on this side and on that side, and banks and marshes and wood 46 and there is no place for us to turn aside. | Now therefore cry to heaven, that you may be delivered from the hand of 47 your enemies. And they joined battle. | And Jonathan stretched forth his hand to strike Bacchides, but he turned away from 48 him backward. | And Jonathan and they that were with him leaped into the Jordan and swam over the Jordan to them.
49 And there fell of Bacchides' side that day a thousand men: and they returned to Jerusalem.

50 And they built strong cities in Judea, the fortress that was

Jericho, and in Ammaus and in Bethoron and in Bethel and Thamnata and Phara and Thopo, with high walls and gates 1 and bars. | And he placed garrisons in them that they might
2 wage war against Israel. | And he fortified the city of Bethsura and Gazara and the castle, and set garrisons in them and pro-
3 visions of victuals. | And he took the sons of the chief men of the country for hostages and put them in the castle in Jeru-salem in custody.

4 Alcimus Stricken with Palsy Now in the year one hundred and fifty-three, the second month, Alcimus commanded the walls of the inner court of the sanctuary to be thrown down 5 and the works of the prophets to be destroyed: and he began 6 to destroy. | At that time Alcimus was struck: and his works were hindered and his mouth was stopped and he was taken 7 with a palsy, so that he could no more speak a word nor give 8 order concerning his house. | And Alcimus died at that time 9 in great torment.

And Bacchides saw that Alcimus was dead: and he returned 10 to the king, and the land was quiet for two years. And all the wicked held a council, saying: Behold Jonathan and they that 11 are with him dwell at ease and without fear. Now therefore let us bring Bacchides here again, and he shall take them all in one
12.60 night. | So they went and gave him counsel. | And he arose
13 to come with a great army; and he sent secretly letters to his adherents that were in Judea to seize upon Jonathan and them 14 that were with him, but they could not, for their design was 15 known to them. | And he apprehended of the men of the country that were the principal authors of the mischief, fifty men
16 and slew them. | And Jonathan and Simon and they that were with him retired into Bethbessen, which is in the desert: and 17 he repaired the breaches thereof, and they fortified it.

And when Bacchides knew it, he gathered together all his 18 multitude, and sent word to them that were of Judea. | And 19 he came and camped above Bethbessen and fought against it many days and made engines. | But Jonathan left his brother Simon in the city and went forth into the country and came with
20 a number of men. | And he struck Odares and his brethren and the children of Phaseron in their tents: and he began to 21 slay and to increase in forces. | But Simon and they that were with him sallied out of the city and burned the engines.

9, 66: Jonathan attacked Odares and the other allies of Bacchides.

68 Bacchides, Defeated, Accepts a Peace Treaty And the fought against Bacchides, and he was discomfited by them and they afflicted him exceedingly, for his counsel and his enter 69 prise were in vain. | And he was angry with the wicked men tha had given him counsel to come into their country, and he slew many of them: and he purposed to return with the rest into 70 their country. | And Jonathan had knowledge of it, and he sen ambassadors to him to make peace with him and to restore t 71 him the prisoners. | And he accepted it willingly and did ac cording to his words and swore that he would do him no harm 72 all the days of his life. | And he restored to him the prisoner which he before had taken out of the land of Juda. And he re turned and went away into his own country, and he came n 73 more into their borders. | So the sword ceased from Israe and Jonathan dwelt in Machmas: and Jonathan began there t judge the people, and he destroyed the wicked out of Israel.

1 Rivalry of Alexander and Demetrius Now in the hun dred and sixtieth year, Alexander the son of Antiochus, surname the Illustrious, came up and took Ptolemais: and they receive 2 him and he reigned there. | And king Demetrius heard of and gathered together an exceeding great army and went fort 3 against him to fight. | And Demetrius sent a letter to Jonatha
4 with peaceable words, to magnify him. | For he said: Let u first make a peace with him before he make one with Alexande 5 against us: | for he will remember all the evils that we hav done against him and against his brother and against his natio 6 | And he gave him authority to gather together an army and t make arms and that he should be his confederate: and th hostages that were in the castle, he commanded to be delivere to him.
7 And Jonathan came to Jerusalem and read the letters in th hearing of all the people and of them that were in the castle.
8 And they were filled with great fear, because they heard tha the king had given him authority to gather together an army.
9 And the hostages were delivered to Jonathan, and he restore 10 them to their parents. | And Jonathan dwelt in Jerusalem an 11 began to build and to repair the city. | And he ordered work men to build the walls and mount Sion round about wit

12 square stones for fortification: and so they did. | And the strangers that were in the strongholds, which Bacchides had
13 built, fled away. | And every man left his place and departed
14 into his own country. | Only in Bethsura there remained some of them that had forsaken the law and the commandments of God: for this was a place of refuge for them.
15 And king Alexander heard of the promises that Demetrius had made Jonathan. And they told him of the battles and the worthy acts that he and his brethren had done and the labors 16 that they had endured, | and he said: Shall we find such another man? Now therefore we will make him our friend and our confederate.

17 The Two Kings Seek Jonathan's Friendship So he wrote a letter and sent it to him according to these words, saying: |
18.19 King Alexander to his brother Jonathan, greeting. | We have heard of you that you are a man of great power and
20 fit to be our friend. | Now therefore we make you this day high priest of your nation and that you be called the king's friend (and he sent him a purple robe and a crown of gold), and that you be of one mind with us in our affairs and keep friendship
21 with us. | Then Jonathan put on the holy vestment in the seventh month, in the year one hundred and threescore, at the feast day of the tabernacles: and he gathered together an army and made a great number of arms.
22 And Demetrius heard these words and was exceeding sorry
23 and said: | What is this that we have done that Alexander has prevented us to gain the friendship of the Jews to strengthen
24 himself? | I also will write to them words of request and offer
25 dignities and gifts that they may be with me to aid me. | And he wrote to them in these words: King Demetrius to the nation
26 of the Jews, greeting. | Whereas you have kept covenant with us and have continued in our friendship and have not joined
27 with our enemies, we have heard of it and are glad. | Wherefore now continue still to keep fidelity toward us and we will reward you with good things for what you have done in our
28 behalf. | And we will remit to you many charges and will give you gifts.
29 And now I free you and all the Jews from tributes, and I release you from the customs of salt and remit the crowns and 30 the thirds of the seed. | And the half of the fruit of trees, which is my share, I leave to you from this day forward, so that it shall not be taken of the land of Juda and of the three cities that are added thereto out of Samaria and Galilee, from this 31 day forth and for ever. | And let Jerusalem be holy and free, with the borders thereof, and let the tenths and tributes be for

32 itself. | I yield up also the power of the castle that is in Jerusalem, and I give it to the high priest to place therein such men
33 as he shall choose to keep it. | And every soul of the Jews that has been carried captive from the land of Juda in all my kingdom, I set at liberty freely, that all be discharged from tributes
34 even of their cattle. | And I will that all the feasts and the sabbaths and the new moons and the days appointed, and three days before the solemn day and three days after the solemn day be all days of immunity and freedom for all the
35 Jews that are in my kingdom. | And no man shall have power to do any thing against them or to molest any of them in any
36 cause. | And let there be enrolled in the king's army to the number of thirty thousand of the Jews: and allowance shall be made them as is due to all the king's forces, and certain of them shall be appointed to be in the fortresses of the great king. |
37 And some of them shall be set over the affairs of the kingdom that are of trust, and let the governors be taken from among themselves and let them walk in their own laws, as the king
38 has commanded in the land of Juda. | And the three cities that are added to Judea out of the country of Samaria, let them be accounted with Judea: that they may be under one and obey no other authority but that of the high priest.

39 Ptolemais, and the confines thereof, I give as a free gift to the holy places that are in Jerusalem, for the necessary charges
40 of the holy things. | And I give every year fifteen thousand sicles of silver out of the king's accounts, of what belongs to
41 me. | And all that is above, which they that were over the affairs the years before had not paid, from this time they shall
42 give it to the works of the house. | Moreover the five thousand sicles of silver which they received from the account of the holy places every year shall also belong to the priests that execute the
43 ministry. | And whosoever shall flee into the temple that is in Jerusalem and in all the borders thereof, being indebted to the king for any matter, let them be set at liberty, and all that they
44 have in my kingdom, let them have it free. | For the building also or repairing the works of the holy places, the charges shall

45 be given out of the king's revenues. | For the building also of the walls of Jerusalem and the fortifying thereof round about, the charges shall be given out of the king's account, as also for the building of the walls in Judea.
46 Now when Jonathan, and the people heard these words they gave no credit to them nor received them: because they remembered the great evil that he had done in Israel, for he had 47 afflicted them exceedingly. | And their inclinations were toward Alexander, because he had been the chief promoter of peace in their regard, and him they always helped.

48 Demetrius Slain in Battle And king Alexander gathered together a great army and moved his camp near to Demetrius. | 49 And the two kings joined battle and the army of Demetrius fled away, and Alexander pursued after him and pressed them close.
50 | And the battle was hard fought till the sun went down: and Demetrius was slain that day.
51 And Alexander sent ambassadors to Ptolemee, king of Egypt, 52 with words to this effect, saying: | Forasmuch as I am returned into my kingdom and am set in the throne of my ancestors and have got the dominion and have overthrown Demetrius and 53 possessed our country, | and have joined battle with him, and both he and his army have been destroyed by us, and we are 54 placed in the throne of his kingdom: | now therefore let us make friendship one with another. And give me now your daughter to wife and I will be your son-in-law and I will give 55 both you and her gifts worthy of you. | And king Ptolemee answered, saying: Happy is this day of your return to the land 56 of your fathers and to the throne of their kingdom. | And now I will do to you as you have written: but meet me at Ptolemais that we may see one another and I may give her to you as you 57 have said. | So Ptolemee went out of Egypt, with Cleopatra his daughter, and he came to Ptolemais in the hundred and sixty-58 second year. | And king Alexander met him and he gave him his daughter, Cleopatra: and he celebrated her marriage at Ptolemais with great glory, after the manner of kings.

59 Jonathan Honored by Alexander And king Alexander 60 wrote to Jonathan that he should come and meet him. | And he went honorably to Ptolemais and he met there the two kings and he gave them much silver, and gold, and presents: and he

61 found favor in their sight. | And some pestilent men of Israel, men of a wicked life, assembled themselves against him to 62 accuse him: and the king gave no heed to them. | And he commanded that Jonathan's garments should be taken off and that he should be clothed with purple: and they did so. And the 63 king made him sit by himself. | And he said to his princes:
Go out with him into the midst of the city and make proclamation that no man complain against him of any matter and 64 that no man trouble him for any manner of cause. | So when his accusers saw his glory proclaimed and him clothed with 65 purple they all fled away. | And the king magnified him and enrolled him among his chief friends and made him governor 66 and partaker of his dominion. | And Jonathan returned into Jerusalem with peace and joy.

67 The Son of Demetrius Claims the Throne In the year one hundred and sixty-five, Demetrius the son of Demetrius, 68 came from Crete into the land of his fathers. | And king Alexander heard of it and was much troubled and returned to 69 Antioch. | And king Demetrius made Apollonius his general, who was governor of Celesyria; and he gathered together a great army and came to Jamnia, and he sent to Jonathan the 70 high priest, | saying: You alone stand against us and I am laughed at and reproached, because you show your power 71 against us in the mountains. | Now therefore, if you trust in your forces, come down to us into the plain, and there let us try 72 one another: for with me is the strength of war. | Ask and learn who I am and the rest that help me, who also say that your foot cannot stand before our face, for your fathers have 73 twice been put to flight in their own land. | And now how will you be able to abide the horsemen and so great an army in the plain, where there is no stone nor rock nor place to flee to?
74 Now when Jonathan heard the words of Apollonius he was moved in his mind: and he chose ten thousand men and went out of Jerusalem, and Simon his brother met him to help him.
75 And they pitched their tents near Joppe, but they shut him out of the city: because a garrison of Apollonius was in Joppe, and 76 he laid siege to it. | And they that were in the city, being 77 afraid, opened the gates to him: so Jonathan took Joppe. | And Apollonius heard of it, and he took three thousand horsemen 78 and a great army: | and he went to Azotus as one that was making a journey, and immediately he went forth into the plain,

10, 67: In the year one hundred and sixty-five: 147 B.C.

because he had a great number of horsemen and he trusted in them. And Jonathan followed after him to Azotus, and they 79 joined battle. | And Apollonius left privately in the camp a
80 thousand horsemen behind them. | And Jonathan knew that there was an ambush behind him, and they surrounded his army and cast darts at the people from morning till evening.

81 Jonathan's Victory over Apollonius But the people stood still, as Jonathan had commanded them: and so their 82 horses were fatigued. | Then Simon drew forth his army and attacked the legion: for the horsemen were wearied, and they
83 were discomfited by him and fled. | And they that were scattered about the plain fled into Azotus and went into Beth-
84 dagon their idol's temple, there to save themselves. | But Jonathan set fire to Azotus and the cities that were round about it, and took the spoils of them and the temple of Dagon: and all
85 them that had fled into it, he burned with fire. | So they that were slain by the sword, with them that were burned, were
86 almost eight thousand men. | And Jonathan removed his army from thence and camped against Ascalon: and they went out of the city to meet him with great honor.
87 And Jonathan returned into Jerusalem with his people, hav-
88 ing many spoils. | And it came to pass, when Alexander the king heard these words, that he honored Jonathan yet more. |
89 And he sent him a buckle of gold, as the custom is, to be given to such as are of the royal blood. And he gave him Accaron and all the borders thereof in possession.

1 Ptolemee Invades Alexander's Kingdom And the king of Egypt gathered together an army, like the sand that lies upon the seashore, and many ships: and he sought to get the kingdom of Alexander by deceit and join it to his own kingdom.
2 | And he went out into Syria with peaceable words, and they opened to him the cities and met him. For king Alexander had ordered them to go forth to meet him, because he was his
3 father-in-law. | Now when Ptolemee entered into the cities he
4 put garrisons of soldiers in every city. | And when he came near to Azotus, they showed him the temple of Dagon that was burned with fire and Azotus and the suburbs thereof that were destroyed and the bodies that were cast abroad and the graves of them that were slain in the battle which they had made near 5 the way. | And they told the king that Jonathan had done these 6 things, to make him odious: but the king held his peace. | And

Jonathan came to meet the king at Joppe with glory, and they 7 saluted one another and they lodged there. | And Jonathan went with the king as far as the river called Eleutherus: and he returned into Jerusalem.
8 And king Ptolemee got the dominion of the cities by the seaside, even to Seleucia: and he devised evil designs against 9 Alexander. | And he sent ambassadors to Demetrius, saying:
Come, let us make a league between us and I will give you my daughter whom Alexander has: and you shall reign in the 10 kingdom of your father. | For I repent that I have given him
11 my daughter because he has sought to kill me. | And he slan-12 dered him, because he coveted his kingdom. | And he took away his daughter and gave her to Demetrius and alienated himself from Alexander: and his enmities were made manifest.
13 | And Ptolemee entered into Antioch and set two crowns upon 14 his head, that of Egypt and that of Asia. | Now king Alexander was in Cilicia at that time: because they that were in those 15 places had rebelled. | And when Alexander heard of it he came to give him battle, and king Ptolemee brought forth his army and met him with a strong power and put him to flight. | 16 And Alexander fled into Arabia, there to be protected: and king 17 Ptolemee was exalted. | And Zabdiel the Arabian took off
18 Alexander's head and sent it to Ptolemee. | And king Ptolemee died the third day after: and they that were in the strongholds 19 were destroyed by them that were within the camp. | And Demetrius reigned in the hundred and sixty-seventh year.
20 In those days Jonathan gathered together them that were in Judea, to take the castle that was in Jerusalem: and they made 21 many engines of war against it. | Then some wicked men that hated their own nation went away to king Demetrius and told 22 him that Jonathan was besieging the castle. | And when he heard it he was angry: and forthwith he came to Ptolemais and wrote to Jonathan that he should not besiege the castle but 23 should come to him in haste and speak to him. | But when Jonathan heard this he bade them besiege it still: and he chose some of the ancients of Israel and of the priests and put himself 24 in danger. | And he took gold and silver and raiment, and many other presents, and went to the king to Ptolemais: and he 11, 7: Eleutherus: north of Tripolis, Syria. For Jonathan to accompany the king was to gain prestige in the eyes of his subjects, besides paying respect to a powerful monarch.

found favor in his sight. | And certain wicked men of his nation made complaints against him.

Demetrius Honors Jonathan But the king treated him as his predecessors had done before: and he exalted him in the sight of all his friends. | And he confirmed him in the high priesthood and all the honors he had before: and he made him the chief of his friends.

And Jonathan requested of the king that he would make Judea free from tribute, and the three governments and Samaria and the confines thereof: and he promised him three hundred talents. | And the king consented, and he wrote letters to Jonathan of all these things to this effect: | King Demetrius to his brother Jonathan and to the nation of the Jews, greeting. | We sent you here a copy of the letter which we have written to Lasthenes our parent, concerning you, that you might know it. | King Demetrius to Lasthenes his parent, greeting. | We have determined to do good to the nation of the Jews who are our friends and keep the things that are just with us, for their good will which they bear toward us. | We have ratified therefore unto them all the borders of Judea and the three cities, Apherema, Lydda and Ramatha, which are added to Judea, out of Samaria, and all their confines, to be set apart to all them who sacrifice in Jerusalem, instead of the payments which the king received of them every year, and for the fruits of the land and of the trees. | And as for other things that belonged to us of the tithes and of the tributes, from this time we discharge them of them; the saltpans also and the crowns that were presented to us. | We give all to them, and nothing hereof shall be revoked from this time forth and for ever. | Now therefore see that you make a copy of these things: and let it be given to Jonathan and set upon the holy mountain, in a conspicuous place.

And king Demetrius, seeing that the land was quiet before him and nothing resisted him, sent away all his forces, every man to his own place, except the foreign army which he had drawn together from the islands of the nations: so all the troops of his fathers hated him. | Now there was one Tryphon who had been of Alexander's party before. Seeing that all the army murmured against Demetrius, he went to Emalchuel the Arabian who had brought up Antiochus the son of Alexander. |

11, 31: Lasthenes: a Cretan relative (not "parent") who supported Demetrius.

40 And he pressed him much to deliver him to him that he might be king in his father's place: and he told him all that Demetrius had done and how his soldiers hated him. And he remained there many days.

41 And Jonathan sent to king Demetrius, desiring that he would cast out them that were in the castle in Jerusalem and those that were in the strongholds: because they fought against 42 Israel. | And Demetrius sent to Jonathan, saying: I will not only do this for you and for your people, but I will greatly honor you and your nation, when opportunity shall serve. |
43 Now therefore you shall do well if you send me men to help me: for all my army has gone from me.

44 Jonathan Assists Demetrius And Jonathan sent him three thousand valiant men to Antioch: and they came to the king, 45 and the king was very glad of their coming. | And they that were of the city assembled themselves together, to the number of a hundred and twenty thousand men, and would have killed
46 the king. | And the king fled into the palace, and they of the 47 city kept the passages of the city and began to fight. | And the king called the Jews to his assistance: and they came to him all at once, and they all dispersed themselves through the city. |
48 And they slew in that day a hundred thousand men and they set fire to the city and got many spoils that day and delivered
49 the king. | And they that were of the city saw that the Jews had got the city as they would; and they were discouraged in their mind and cried to the king, making supplication and
50 saying: | Grant us peace, and let the Jews cease from assaulting
51 us and the city. | And they threw down their arms and made peace, and the Jews were glorified in the sight of the king and in the sight of all that were in his realm and were renowned throughout the kingdom and returned to Jerusalem with many spoils.

52 So king Demetrius sat in the throne of his kingdom: and the 53 land was quiet before him. | And he falsified everything that he had said and alienated himself from Jonathan and did not reward him according to the benefits he had received from him
54 but gave him great trouble. | And after this, Tryphon returned, and with him Antiochus the young boy who was made
55 king, and put on the diadem. | And there assembled unto him all the hands which Demetrius had sent away, and they fought
56 against Demetrius, who turned his back and fled. | And Tryphon took the elephants and made himself master of Antioch.

57 Antiochus the Younger Favors Jonathan And young Antiochus wrote to Jonathan, saying: I confirm you in the high priesthood and I appoint you ruler over the four cities and to 58 be one of the king's friends. | And he sent him vessels of gold for his service, and he gave him leave to drink in gold and to
59 be clothed in purple and to wear a golden buckle. | And he made his brother Simon governor from the borders of Tyre even to the confines of Egypt.
60 Then Jonathan went forth and passed through the cities beyond the river: and all the forces of Syria gathered themselves to him to help him. And he came to Ascalon, and they 61 met him honorably out of the city. | And he went from there to Gaza, and they that were in Gaza shut him out: and he besieged it and burned all the suburbs round about and took
62 the spoils. | And the men of Gaza made supplication to Jonathan, and he gave them the right hand. And he took their sons for hostages and sent them to Jerusalem: and he went through
63 the country as far as Damascus. | And Jonathan heard that the generals of Demetrius had come treacherously to Cades, which is in Galilee, with a great army, purposing to remove 64 him from the affairs of the kingdom. | And he went against them, but left his brother Simon in the country.
65 And Simon encamped against Bethsura and assaulted it 66 many days and shut them up. | And they desired him to make peace, and he granted it them. And he cast them out from the
67 city and took it and placed a garrison in it. | And Jonathan and his army encamped by the water of Genesar: and before
68 it was light they were ready in the plain of Asor. | And behold the army of the strangers met him in the plain, and they laid an ambush for him in the mountains but he went out against
69 them. | And they that lay in ambush rose out of their places
70 and joined battle. | And all that were on Jonathan's side fled, and none was left of them but Mathathias the son of Absalom
71 and Judas the son of Calphi, chief captain of the army. | And Jonathan rent his garments and cast earth upon his head and
72 prayed. | And Jonathan turned again to them to battle: and he
73 put them to flight, and they fought. | And they of his part that fled saw this and they turned again to him; and they all with him pursued the enemies even to Cades to their own camp, and
74 they came even thither. | And there fell of the aliens in that day three thousand men: and Jonathan returned to Jerusalem.

1 Jonathan's League with Rome and Sparta And Jonathan saw that the time served him. So he chose certain men and sent them to Rome, to confirm and to renew the amity 2 with them. | And he sent letters to the Spartans and to other
3 places according to the same form. | And they went to Rome and entered into the senate house and said: Jonathan the high priest and the nation of the Jews have sent us to renew the 4 amity and alliance as it was before. | And they gave them letters to their governors in every place, to conduct them into the land of Juda with peace.

5 And this is a copy of the letters which Jonathan wrote to 6 the Spartans: | Jonathan the high priest, and the ancients of the nation, and the priests and the rest of the people of the 7 Jews to the Spartans, their brethren, greeting. | There were letters sent long ago to Onias the high priest from Arius who reigned then among you, to signify that you are our brethren, 8 as the copy here underwritten specifies. | And Onias received the ambassador with honor, and received the letters wherein 9 there was mention made of the alliance and amity. | We, though we needed none of these things, having for our com-10 fort the holy books that are in our hands, | chose rather to send to you to renew the brotherhood and friendship, lest we should become strangers to you altogether: for a long time has 11 passed since you sent to us. | We, therefore, at all times without ceasing, both in our festivals and other days wherein it is convenient, remember you in the sacrifices that we offer and in our observances, as it is meet and becoming to remember 12.13 brethren. | And we rejoice at your glory. | But we have had many troubles and wars on every side, and the kings that are 14 round about us, have fought against us. | But we would not be troublesome to you, nor to the rest of our allies and friends in 15 these wars. | For we have had help from heaven and we have 16 been delivered, and our enemies are humbled. | We have chosen therefore Numenius the son of Antiochus, and Antipater the son of Jason, and have sent them to the Romans to renew with 17 them the former amity and alliance. | And we have commanded them to go also to you and to salute you and to deliver you our letters concerning the renewing of our brotherhood. |

18 And now you shall do well to give us an answer hereto.
19 And this is the copy of the letter which he had sent to Onias:
20 | Arius king of the Spartans to Onias the high priest, greeting. |
21 It is found in writing concerning the Spartans and the Jews, that they are brethren and that they are of the stock of Abraham.
22 | And now since this has come to our knowledge, you do well
23 to write to us of your prosperity. | And we also have written back to you: that our cattle, and our possessions are yours, and yours ours. We, therefore, have commanded that these things should be told you.

24 Jonathan Pursues the Forces of Demetrius Now Jonathan heard that the generals of Demetrius came again with a 25 greater army than before to fight against him. | So he went out from Jerusalem and met them in the land of Amath: for he
26 gave them no time to enter into his country. | And he sent spies into their camp, and they came back and brought him word
27 that they designed to come upon them in the night. | And when the sun was set, Jonathan commanded his men to watch and to be in arms all night long ready to fight: and he set sentinels
28 round about the camp. | And the enemies heard that Jonathan and his men were ready for battle, and they were struck with fear and dread in their heart: and they kindled fires in their
29 camp. | But Jonathan and they that were with him knew it not 30 till the morning, for they saw the lights burning. | And Jonathan pursued after them but overtook them not: for they had 31 passed the river Eleutherus. | And Jonathan turned upon the Arabians that are called Zabadeans, and he defeated them and
32 took the spoils of them. | And he went forward and came to 33 Damascus and passed through all that country. | Simon also went forth and came as far as Ascalon and the neighboring fortresses, and he turned aside to Joppe and took possession of 34 it, | (for he heard that they designed to deliver the hold to them that took part with Demetrius): and he put a garrison there to keep it.
35 And Jonathan came back and called together the ancients of the people: and he took a resolution with them to build for-36 tresses in Judea, | and to build up walls in Jerusalem and raise a mount between the castle and the city, to separate it from the city: that so it might have no communication, and that they 37 might neither buy nor sell. | And they came together to build up the city, for the wall that was upon the brook toward the east was broken down; and he repaired that which is called 38 Caphetetha. | And Simon built Adiada in Sephela and fortified it and set up gates and bars.

39 Now when Tryphon had conceived a design to make himself king of Asia and to take the crown and to stretch out his hand 40 against king Antiochus, fearing lest Jonathan would not suffer him but would fight against him: he sought to seize upon him 41 and to kill him. So he rose up and came to Bethsan. | And Jonathan went out to meet him with forty thousand men chosen for battle and came to Bethsan.

42 Tryphon Deceives Jonathan and Captures Him Now when Tryphon saw that Jonathan came with a great army, he 43 dared not stretch forth his hand against him, | but received him with honor and commended him to all his friends and gave him presents; and he commanded his troops to obey him as 44 himself. | And he said to Jonathan: Why have you troubled all 45 the people, when we have no war? | Now therefore send them back to their own houses and choose yourself a few men that may be with you and come with me to Ptolemais, and I will deliver it to you, and the rest of the strongholds and the army and all that have any charge. And I will return and go away, for this 46 is the cause of my coming. | And Jonathan believed him and did as he said and sent away his army: and they departed into 47 the land of Juda. | But he kept with him three thousand men, of whom he sent two thousand into Galilee, and one thousand went with him.
48 Now as soon as Jonathan entered into Ptolemais, they of Ptolemais shut the gates of the city and took him: and all them
49 that came in with him they slew with the sword. | Then Tryphon sent an army and horsemen into Galilee and into the 50 great plain to destroy all Jonathan's company. | But they, when they understood that Jonathan and all that were with him were taken and slain, encouraged one another and went out ready for 51 battle. | Then they that had come after them, seeing that they 52 stood for their lives, returned back. | Whereupon, they all came 12, 37: Caphetetha: the part of the wall facing the Brook of Cedron (Kedron) and the Mount of Olives east of Jerusalem.

peaceably into the land of Juda. And they bewailed Jonathan and them who had been with him, exceedingly: and Israel 53 mourned with great lamentation. | Then all the heathens that were round about them sought to destroy them. For they said: | 54 They have no prince nor any to help them. Now therefore let us make war upon them and take away the memory of them from among men.

1 Simon Is Chosen in Place of His Brother Now Simon heard that Tryphon was gathering a very great army, to invade
2 the land of Juda and to destroy it. | And seeing that the people were in dread and in fear, he went up to Jerusalem and assem-
3 bled the people, | and exhorted them, saying: You know what great battles I and my brethren and the house of my father have fought for the laws and the sanctuary and the distresses
4 that we have seen. | By reason whereof all my brethren have
5 lost their lives for Israel's sake and I am left alone. | And now far be it from me to spare my life in any time of trouble: for I
6 am not better than my brethren. | I will avenge then my nation and the sanctuary and our children and wives: for all the heathens are gathered together to destroy us out of mere malice.
7 | And the spirit of the people was enkindled as soon as they 8 heard these words. | And they answered with a loud voice, saying: You are our leader in the place of Judas and Jonathan
9 your brother. | Fight you our battles: and we will do whatsoever you shall say to us.
10 So gathering together all the men of war, he made haste to finish all the walls of Jerusalem: and he fortified it round about.
11 | And he sent Jonathan the son of Absalom, and with him a new army, into Joppe: and he cast out them that were in it and
12 himself remained there. | And Tryphon removed from Ptolemais with a great army, to invade the land of Juda: and Jona-
13 than was with him in custody. | But Simon pitched in Addus,
14 across the plain. | And when Tryphon understood that Simon had risen up in the place of his brother Jonathan and that he meant to join battle with him he sent messengers to him,
15 | saying: We have detained your brother Jonathan for the money that he owed in the king's account by reason of the 16 affairs which he had the management of. | But now send a hundred talents of silver, and his two sons for hostages, that when he is set at liberty he may not revolt from us, and we will 17 release him. | Now Simon knew that he spoke deceitfully to him. Nevertheless he ordered the money and the children to be sent, lest he should bring upon himself a great hatred of the 18 people of Israel, who might have said: | Because he sent not the 19 money and the children, therefore is Jonathan lost. | So he sent the children and the hundred talents: and he lied and did not let Jonathan go.

20 And after this Tryphon entered within the country to destroy it, and they went about by the way that leads to Ador: and Simon and his army marched to all places wherever they went. | 21 And they that were in the castle sent messengers to Tryphon that he should make haste to come through the desert and send 22 them victuals. | And Tryphon made ready all his horsemen to come that night: but there fell a very great snow, and he came not into the country of Galaad.

23 Tryphon Slays Jonathan And when he approached to 24 Bascama, he slew Jonathan and his sons there. | And Tryphon 25 returned and went into his own country. | And Simon sent and took the bones of Jonathan his brother and buried them in 26 Modin, in the city of his fathers. | And all Israel bewailed him with great lamentation: and they mourned for him many days.
27 | And Simon built over the sepulcher of his father and of his brethren a building lofty to the sight, of polished stone behind 28 and before. | And he set up seven pyramids one against another for his father and his mother and his four brethren. | 29 And round about these he set great pillars, and upon the pillars arms for a perpetual memory; and by the arms ships carved, 30 which might be seen by all that sailed on the sea. | This is the sepulcher he made in Modin that may be seen even unto this day.
31 But Tryphon when he was upon a journey with the young 32 king Antiochus treacherously slew him. | And he reigned in his place and put on the crown of Asia and brought great evils upon the land.
33 And Simon built up the strongholds of Judea, fortifying them with high towers and great walls and gates and bars: and 34 he stored up victuals in the fortresses. | And Simon chose men and sent to king Demetrius, to the end that he should grant an immunity to the land: for all that Tryphon did was to spoil. | 35 And king Demetrius, in answer to this request, wrote a letter 36 in this manner: | King Demetrius to Simon, the high priest and friend of kings, and to the ancients and to the nation of the 37 Jews, greeting. | The golden crown and the palm which you sent we have received: and we are ready to make a firm peace with you and to write to the king's chief officers to release you 38 the things that we have released. | For all that we have decreed in your favor shall stand in force. The strongholds that you 39 have built shall be your own. | And as for any oversight or fault committed unto this day, we forgive it and the crown which you owed: and if any other thing were taxed in Jeru-40 salem, now let it not be taxed. | And if any of you be fit to be enrolled among ours, let them be enrolled: and let there be peace between us.

41 In the year one hundred and seventy the yoke of the Gentiles 42 was taken off from Israel. | And the people of Israel began to write in the instruments and public records: the first year under Simon the high priest, the great captain and prince of the Jews.

43 Simon Takes Gaza and the Castle of Jerusalem In those days Simon besieged Gaza and camped round about it; and he made engines, and set them to the city, and he struck one 44 tower, and took it. | And they that were within the engine leaped into the city: and there was a great uproar in the city. | 45 And they that were in the city went up with their wives and children upon the wall, with their garments rent, and they cried with 46 a loud voice, beseeching Simon to grant them peace. | And they said: Deal not with us according to our evil deeds, but accord-47 ing to your mercy. | And Simon being moved did not destroy them: but yet he cast them out of the city and cleansed the houses wherein there had been idols, and then he entered into it 48 with hymns, blessing the Lord. | And having cast out of it all uncleanness, he placed in it men that should observe the law:
and he fortified it and made it his habitation.
49 But they that were in the castle of Jerusalem were hindered from going out and coming into the country and from buying and selling, and they were straitened with hunger, and many of 50 them perished through famine. | And they cried to Simon for peace, and he granted it to them: and he cast them out from 51 the castle and cleansed it from uncleanness. | And they entered into it the three and twentieth day of the second month, in the year one hundred and seventy-one, with thanksgiving and branches of palm trees and harps and cymbals, and psalteries and hymns and canticles: because the great enemy was de-

53 be kept every year with gladness. | And he fortified the mountain of the temple that was near the castle, and he dwelt there,
54 himself and they that were with him. | And Simon saw that John his son was a valiant man for war, and he made him captain of all the forces; and he dwelt in Gazara.

1 Judea Flourishes under Simon's Government In the year one hundred and seventy-two, king Demetrius assembled his army and went into Media to get him succors to fight against
2 Tryphon. | And Arsaces, the king of Persia and Media, heard that Demetrius had entered within his borders: and he sent one of his princes to take him alive and bring him to him. |
3 And he went and defeated the army of Demetrius; and took him and brought him to Arsaces; and he put him into custody.
4 And all the land of Juda was at rest all the days of Simon. And he sought the good of his nation, and his power and his 5 glory pleased them well all his days. | And with all his glory he took Joppe for a haven and made an entrance to the isles of
6 the sea. | And he enlarged the bounds of his nation and made
7 himself master of the country. | And he gathered together a great number of captives and had the dominion of Gazara and of Bethsura and of the castle, and took away all uncleanness
8 out of it: and there was none that resisted him. | And every man tilled his land with peace: and the land of Juda yielded
9 her increase, and the trees of the fields their fruit. | The ancient men sat all in the streets and treated together of the good things of the land, and the young men put on them glory and the 10 robes of war. | And he provided victuals for the cities, and he appointed that they should be furnished with ammunition, so that the fame of his glory was renowned even to the end of the 11 earth. | He made peace in the land, and Israel rejoiced with 12 great joy. | And every man sat under his vine and under his 13 fig tree: and there was none to make them afraid. | There was none left in the land to fight against them. Kings were dis-
14 comfited in those days. | And he strengthened all those of his people that were brought low and he sought the law and took

16 Renewal of the Alliance with Sparta And it was heard at Rome and as far as Sparta that Jonathan was dead: and 17 they were very sorry. | But when they heard that Simon his brother was made high priest in his place and was possessed of 18 all the country and the cities therein, | they wrote to him in tables of brass, to renew the friendship and alliance which they 19 had made with Judas and with Jonathan his brethren. | And they were read before the assembly in Jerusalem. And this is 20 the copy of the letters that the Spartans sent. | The princes and the cities of the Spartans to Simon the high priest and to the ancients and the priests and the rest of the people of the Jews 21 their brethren, greeting. | The ambassadors that were sent to our people have told us of your glory and honor and joy, and 22 we rejoiced at their coming. | And we registered what was said by them in the councils of the people in this manner: Numenius the son of Antiochus and Antipater the son of Jason, ambassadors of the Jews, came to us to renew the former friendship 23 with us. | And it pleased the people to receive the men honorably and to put a copy of their words in the public records, to be a memorial to the people of the Spartans. And we have written a copy of them to Simon the high priest.

24 The League with Rome also Renewed And after this Simon sent Numenius to Rome, with a great shield of gold, of the weight of a thousand pounds, to confirm the league with 25 them. And when the people of Rome had heard | these words, they said: What thanks shall we give to Simon and his sons? | 26 For he has restored his brethren and has driven away in fight the enemies of Israel from them: and they decreed him liberty and registered it in tables of brass and set it upon pillars in 27 mount Sion. | And this is a copy of the writing: The eighteenth day of the month Elul, in the year one hundred and seventy-two, being the third year under Simon the high priest at 28 Asaramel, | in a great assembly of the priests and of the people, and the princes of the nation, and the ancients of the country, these things were notified: As often as there have been wars 29 in our country, | Simon, the son of Mathathias of the children of Jarib, and his brethren have put themselves in danger and resisted the enemies of their nation, for the maintenance of 14, 27: September, 140 B.C.

their holy places and the law, and have raised their nation to 30 great glory. | And Jonathan gathered together his nation and was made their high priest, and he was laid to his people. | 31 And their enemies desired to tread down and destroy their country and to stretch forth their hands against their holy 32 places. | Then Simon resisted and fought for his nation and laid out much of his money and armed the valiant men of his 33 nation and gave them wages; | and he fortified the cities of Judea, and Bethsura that lies in the borders of Judea, where the armor of the enemies was before; and he placed there a 34 garrison of Jews: | and he fortified Joppe which lies by the sea and Gazara, which borders upon Azotus, wherein the enemies dwelt before, and he placed Jews here and furnished them with all the things convenient for their reparation.
35 And the people seeing the acts of Simon and to what glory he meant to bring his nation, made him their prince and high priest, because he had done all these things, and for the justice and faith which he kept to his nation, and for that he sought 36 by all means to advance his people. | And in his days things prospered in his hands, so that the heathens were taken away out of their country, and they also that were in the city of David in Jerusalem in the castle, out of which they issued forth and profaned all places round about the sanctuary and did much 37 evil to its purity. | And he placed therein Jews for the defense of the country and of the city, and he raised up the walls of Jerusalem.

38 Demetrius Confirms Simon as High Priest And king 39 Demetrius confirmed him in the high priesthood. | According to these things he made him his friend and glorified him with 40 great glory, | for he had heard that the Romans had called the Jews their friends and confederates and brethren and that they 41 had received Simon's ambassadors with honor. | And that the Jews and their priests had consented that he should be their prince and high priest for ever, till there should arise a faithful 42 prophet; | and that he should be chief over them and that he should have the charge of the sanctuary and that he should appoint rulers over their works and over the country and over 43 the armor and over the strongholds. | And that he should have care of the holy places, and that he should be obeyed by all, and that all the writings in the country should be made in his name, 44 and that he should be clothed with purple and gold. | And that it should not be lawful for any of the people or of the priests to disannul any of these things or to gainsay his words or to call together an assembly in the country without him, or 45 to be clothed with purple or to wear a buckle of gold. | And whosoever shall do otherwise or shall make void any of these things shall be punished.

46 And it pleased all the people to establish Simon and to do 47 according to these words. | And Simon accepted thereof and was well pleased to execute the office of the high priesthood, and to be captain and prince of the nation of the Jews and of 48 the priests and to be chief over all. | And they commanded that this writing should be put in tables of brass and that they should be set up within the compass of the sanctuary, in a 49 conspicuous place, | and that a copy thereof should be put in the treasury, that Simon and his sons may have it.

1 The Letter of Antiochus to Simon And king Antiochus the son of Demetrius sent letters from the isles of the sea to Simon the priest and prince of the nation of the Jews and to 2 all the people. | And the contents were these: King Antiochus to Simon the high priest and to the nation of the Jews, greeting.
3 | Forasmuch as certain pestilent men have usurped the kingdom of our fathers, and my purpose is to challenge the kingdom and to restore it to its former estate, I have chosen a great 4 army and have built ships of war. | And I design to go through the country that I may take revenge of them that have destroyed our country and that have made many cities desolate in my 5 realm. | Now therefore I confirm unto you all the oblations which all the kings before me remitted to you and whatever 6 other gifts they remitted to you. | And I give you leave to coin 7 your own money in your country. | And let Jerusalem be holy and free: and all the armor that has been made, and the fortresses which you have built and which you keep in your hands, 8 let them remain to you. | And all that is due to the king and what should be the king's hereafter, from this present and for 9 ever, is forgiven you. | And when we shall have recovered our kingdom, we will glorify you and your nation and temple with great glory, so that your glory shall be made manifest in all the earth.
10 In the year one hundred and seventy-four Antiochus entered into the land of his fathers, and all the forces assembled to him, 11 so that few were left with Tryphon. | And king Antiochus pursued after him, and he fled along by the seacoast and came to 12 Dora: for he perceived that evils were gathered together upon 13 him, and his troops had forsaken him. | And Antiochus camped above Dora with a hundred and twenty thousand men of war 14 and eight thousand horsemen. | And he invested the city, and the ships drew near by sea: and they annoyed the city by land and by sea and suffered none to come in or to go out.

15 The Letter of the Romans And Numenius, and they that had been with him, came from the city of Rome, having letters written to the kings and countries, the contents whereof were 16 these: | Lucius, the consul of the Romans, to king Ptolemee, 17 greeting. | The ambassadors of the Jews, our friends, came to us, to renew the former friendship and alliance, being sent from 18 Simon the high priest and the people of the Jews. | And they 19 brought also a shield of gold of a thousand pounds. | It has seemed good therefore to us to write to the kings and countries, that they should do them no harm nor fight against them, their cities or countries, and that they should give no aid to them 20 that fight against them. | And it has seemed good to us to re-21 ceive the shield of them. | If therefore any pestilent men have fled out of their country to you, deliver them to Simon the high priest, that he may punish them according to their law.
22 These same things were written to king Demetrius and to 23 Attalus and to Ariarathes and to Arsaces, | and to all the countries; and to Lampsacus and to the Spartans and to Delus and Myndus and Sicyon and Caria and Samus and Pamphylia and Lycia and Alicarnassus and Cos and Side and Aradus and Rhodes and Phaselis and Gortyna and Gnidus and Cyprus 24 and Cyrene. | And they wrote a copy thereof to Simon the high priest and to the people of the Jews.
25 But king Antiochus moved his camp to Dora the second time, assaulting it continually and making engines: and he shut up 26 Tryphon, that he could not go out. | And Simon sent to him two thousand chosen men to aid him, silver also and gold and 27 abundance of furniture. | And he would not receive them but broke all the covenant that he had made with him before and alienated himself from him.

28 Antiochus Hostile to Simon And he sent to him Athenobius, one of his friends, to treat with him, saying: You hold Joppe and Gazara, and the castle that is in Jerusalem, which 29 are cities of my kingdom. | Their borders you have wasted, and you have made great havoc in the land and have got the do-30 minion of many places in my kingdom. | Now therefore deliver up the cities that you have taken and the tributes of the places whereof you have got the dominion outside the borders of 31 Judea. | But if not, give me for them five hundred talents of silver, and for the havoc that you have made and the tributes of the cities, other five hundred talents: or else we will come 32 and fight against you. | So Athenobius the king's friend came to Jerusalem and saw the glory of Simon and his magnificence in gold and silver and his great equipage; and he was astonished and told him the king's words.
33 And Simon answered him, and said to him: We have neither taken other men's land, neither do we hold that which is other men's, but the inheritance of our fathers, which was for some 34 time unjustly possessed by our enemies. | But we having op-35 portunity claim the inheritance of our fathers. | And as to your complaints concerning Joppe and Gazara, they did great harm to the people and to our country, yet for these we will give a hundred talents. And Athenobius answered him not a word | 36 but returning in a rage to the king, made report to him of these words, and of the glory of Simon and of all that he had seen.
And the king was exceeding angry.
37.38 And Tryphon fled away by ship to Orthosias. | And the king appointed Cendebeus captain of the seacoast and gave 39 him an army of footmen and horsemen. | And he commanded him to march with his army toward Judea; and he commanded him to build up Gedor and to fortify the gates of the city and to war against the people. But the king himself pursued after 40 Tryphon. | And Cendebeus came to Jamnia and began to provoke the people and to ravage Judea and to take the people

15, 27: After Antiochus blockaded Tryphon (v. 25), he no longer needed Simon's support. This confidence emboldened Antiochus to ask for all "reparations," which Simon refuses.

41 prisoners and to kill them, and to build Gedor. | And he placed there horsemen and an army that they might issue forth and make incursions upon the ways of Judea, as the king had commanded him.

1 Simon's Sons Defeat the Enemy Then John came up from Gazara and told Simon his father what Cendebeus had 2 done against their people. | And Simon called his two eldest sons, Judas and John, and said to them: I and my brethren and my father's house have fought against the enemies of Israel from your youth even to this day. And things have prospered so well in our hands that we have delivered Israel oftentimes. |
3 And now I am old, but be you instead of me and my brethren. And go out and fight for our nation: and the help from heaven be with you.
4 Then he chose out of the country twenty thousand fighting men and horsemen; and they went forth against Cendebeus,
5 and they rested in Modin. | And they arose in the morning and went into the plain: and behold a very great army of footmen and horsemen came against them, and there was a running
6 river between them. | And he and his people pitched their camp over against them. And he saw that the people were afraid to go over the river, so he went over first: then the men seeing
7 him passed over after him. | And he divided the people and set the horsemen in the midst of the footmen; but the horsemen of
8 the enemies were very numerous. | And they sounded the holy trumpets, and Cendebeus and his army were put to flight: and there fell many of them wounded, and the rest fled into the
9 stronghold. | At that time Judas, John's brother, was wounded: but John pursued after them, till he came to Cedron, which he
10 had built. | And they fled even to the towers that were in the fields of Azotus, and he burned them with fire. And there fell of them two thousand men: and he returned into Judea in peace.
11 Now Ptolemee the son of Abobus was appointed captain in the plain of Jericho; and he had abundance of silver and gold, |
12.13 for he was son-in-law of the high priest. | And his heart was lifted up and he designed to make himself master of the country: and he purposed treachery against Simon, and his sons, to 14 destroy them. | Now Simon, as he was going through the cities

16, 4: Horsemen: this is the first time we are told that the Jews used cavalry.

that were in the country of Judea and taking care for the good ordering of them, went down to Jericho, he and Mathathias and Judas his sons, in the year one hundred and seventy-seven, the eleventh month, the same is the month Sabath.

15 Simon and Two of His Sons Are Slain And the son of Abobus received them deceitfully into a little fortress that is called Doch, which he had built, and he made them a great
16 feast and hid men there. | And when Simon and his sons had drunken plentifully, Ptolemee and his men rose up and took their weapons and entered into the banqueting place and slew him
17 and his two sons and some of his servants. | And he committed a great treachery in Israel and rendered evil for good. |
18 And Ptolemee wrote these things, and sent to the king that he should send him an army to aid him, and he would deliver him 19 the country and their cities and tributes. | And he sent others to Gazara to kill John. And to the tribunes he sent letters to come to him, and that he would give them silver and gold and
20 gifts. | And he sent others to take Jerusalem and the mountain
21 of the temple. | Now one running before told John in Gazara that his father and his brethren were slain and that Ptolemee
22 had sent men to kill him also. | And when he heard it he was exceedingly afraid; and he apprehended the men that came to kill him and he put them to death: for he knew that they sought to kill him.

23 And as concerning the rest of the acts of John and his wars and the worthy deeds which he bravely achieved, and the building of the walls which he made and the things that he did: | 24 behold these are written in the book of the days of his priesthood, from the time that he was made high priest after his father.

16, 18: Ptolemy betrayed his country to king Antiochus.

16, 19: To kill John: see v. 21.

16, 24: The book of the days of his priesthood: this may not be a real book, but the author's way of imitating the manner of recording the end of each reign in the books of Kings. He was made high priest after his father: this is the famous John Hyrcanus (134-104 B.C.), who was to continue the war of independence.

THE SECOND BOOK OF MACHABEES

INTRODUCTION

Sometime after 124 B.C., an anonymous author, perhaps in Alexandria, Egypt, wrote the Second Book of Machabees in Greek. The work is an abridgment of a five volume history (2, 24), also written in Greek by Jason of Cyrene, Libya. The small parts which the unknown inspired author wrote himself are too difficult to discern from the work of Jason. The latter used oral sources and seven letters.

Chapters 1—2 of this book contain two letters from Palestinian Jews to Egyptian Jews, and the author's preface. The rest of the book covers fifteen years of the Machabean revolt. It corresponds to the first seven chapters in the First Book of Machabees. This second book is often classified as "pathetic history," a popular literary form in the Greek world of its day. The work bears the stamp of an orator who appeals to what is dramatic and what edifies. The oratorical historian inflates numbers, and the Jews never seem to suffer a casualty. The author transforms the then current Greek literary device of the apparition of gods to help warriors in battle into the celestial apparition. See 2, 22 n. In spite of the idealization of history, the book contains true history even though it is not as historical as the First Book of Machabees.

Besides edifying his readers the author most probably wanted to divert the worship of the Egyptian Jews from the temple of Leontopolis, Egypt, to the temple of Jerusalem. The religious tone is far more pronounced than in the First Book of Machabees. A loving God constantly intervenes in history. Moreover, important dogmatic truths are taught, such as the efficacy of prayer and sacrifice on the part of the living for the faithful departed, the intercession of the saints, and the resurrection of the dead. Small wonder that the Roman Liturgy uses the Second Book of Machabees more extensively than the first one.

Main divisions of the Second Book of Machabees are:

1. Two Letters to the Egyptian Jews, and the Author's Preface, 1—2
2. Persecution and Revolt under Judas Machabee, 3, 1—10, 9
3. The Battles of Judas Machabee, 10, 10—15, 40

1 First Letter from Jerusalem to the Jews in Egypt To the brethren, the Jews that are throughout Egypt, the brethren,

---

1, 1—2, 19: The traditional opinion is still supported by the majority that there are two, not one or three, letters in this section, namely: the first letter in 1, 1-9 and the second in 1, 10—2, 19.

1, 1-5: These verses form the Epistle of the votive Mass for peace.

1, 1: The Jews are throughout Egypt: successive waves of Jews emigrated to Egypt, especially after Nabuchodonosor's capture of Jeruthe Jews that are in Jerusalem and in the land of Judea, send 1 2 health and good peace. | May God be gracious to you and remember his covenant that he made with Abraham and Isaac

1 3 and Jacob, his faithful servants, | and give you all a heart to worship him and to do his will with a great heart and a willing
1 4 mind. | May he open your heart in his law and in his com-
1 5 mandments and send you peace. | May he hear your prayers and be reconciled unto you and never forsake you in time of
6,7 evil. | And now here we are praying for you. | When Demetrius reigned, in the year one hundred and sixty-nine, we Jews wrote to you in the trouble and violence that came upon us in those years, after Jason withdrew himself from the holy
1 8 land and from the kingdom. | They burned the gate and shed innocent blood. Then we prayed to the Lord and were heard, and we offered sacrifices and fine flour, and lighted the lamps
1 9 and set forth the loaves. | And now celebrate you the days of Scenopegia in the month of Casleu.

10 The Second Letter In the year one hundred and eighty-eight, the people that is at Jerusalem and in Judea, and the senate, and Judas, to Aristobolus, the preceptor of king Ptolemee, who is of the stock of the anointed priests, and to the salem in 587 B.C., and after Alexander's (the Great) conquests in the fourth century B.C. Besides Alexandria, which was the most famous colony of Jews in Egypt, there were other Jewish colonies, both military, in Elephantine and Leontopolis. At the time of the Machabees, the temple in Elephantine had long ceased to exist, but the temple at Leontopolis was quite active. About 170 B.C. the son of the high priest of Jerusalem, Onias IV, built the temple at Leontopolis, about eighteen miles northeast of Cairo.

1, 7: This is a reference to a letter sent during the reign of Demetrius II, king of Syria. Jason was the puppet-high priest of the Syrian king, Antiochus IV Epiphanes. See 4, 7-13.

1, 8: They burned the gate: this alludes to 1 Mc 4, 38 where the same expression signifies the destruction of the Jerusalem temple. The rest of the verse alludes to the temple's reconsecration in 1 Mc 4, 50-53.

1, 9: The purpose of the letter is to invite the Egyptian Jews to commemorate the purification of the temple by Judas Machabee.

1, 10—2, 19: The second letter. See 1, 1—2, 19 n.

1, 10: In the year one hundred and eighty-eight: in 124 B.C. The senate, and Judas: the senders of the letter are the ruling body of the elders and Judas Machabee. Aristobolus: the writer of an allegorical interpretation of the Pentateuch dedicated to Ptolemy VI, Philometor. Aristobolus was a relative of Onias IV, the high priest and builder of the temple at Leontopolis. Since Aristobolus enjoyed so much prestige, the Jews in the homeland wrote to him to be certain of reaching the Egyptian Jews.

11 Jews that are in Egypt, health and welfare. | Having been delivered by God out of great dangers, we give him great thanks 12 forasmuch as we have been in war with such a king. | For he made numbers of men swarm out of Persia that have fought 13 against us and the holy city: for when the leader himself was in Persia, and with him a very great army, he fell in the temple of Nanea, being deceived by the counsel of the priests of 14 Nanea. | For Antiochus with his friends came to the place, as though he would marry her, and that he might receive great 15 sums of money under the title of a dowry. | And when the priests of Nanea had set it forth, and he with a small company had entered into the compass of the temple, they shut the tem-16 ple | when Antiochus had come in. And, opening a secret entrance of the temple, they cast stones and slew the leader and them that were with him and hewed them in pieces, and cut 17 ting off their heads they threw them forth. | Blessed be God in 18 all things, who has delivered up the wicked. | Therefore, whereas we purpose to keep the purification of the temple on the five and twentieth day of the month of Casleu, we thought it necessary to signify it to you: that you also may keep the day of Scenopegia and the day of the fire that was given when Nehemias offered sacrifice, after the temple and the altar were 19 built. | For when our fathers were led into Persia, the priests that then were worshipers of God took privately the fire from the altar and hid it in a valley where there was a deep pit without water: and there they kept it safe, so that the place 20 was unknown to all men. | But when many years had passed

1, 11: The Jews were victorious over the king, who is called Antiochus in v. 14.

1, 12: Read instead: For he (God) drove away those that fought against us and the holy city (Jerusalem).

1, 13-16: The author does not intend to separate fact from fiction in the popular legend of his day on the death of Antiochus Epiphanes. Moreover, most commentators say it is the death of the same Antiochus Epiphanes, but in different versions in 9, 1-29 and 1 Mc 6, 1-14. For another account of his death, see Dn 11, 45 n.

1, 17: The sacred author interprets the king's death as a punishment from God as the account in 9, 1-29 clearly shows.

1, 18-33: The purpose of the letter is the same as that of the first letter (see 1, 9 n), namely, to commemorate the purification of the temple and to join to this anniversary, as modern Jews still do, the remembrances of the "miraculous" recovery of the sacred fire. According to Lv 6, 5-6, the fire must never be extinguished. The reason for this anecdote may have been to show that the Jerusalem temple was superior to that of Leontopolis. See 1 Mc 4, 59 n for the Talmud's version of the "miracle."

1, 19: Persia: Babylonia is here called Persia.

and it pleased God that Nehemias should be sent by the king of Persia, he sent some of the posterity of those priests that had hid it, to seek for the fire: and as they told us, they found 21 no fire, but thick water. | Then he bade them draw it up and bring it to him; and the priest Nehemias commanded the sacrifices that were laid on to be sprinkled with the same water,
22 both the wood, and the things that were laid upon it. | And when this was done and the time came that the sun shone out, which before was in a cloud, there was a great fire kindled, so
23 that all wondered. | And all the priests made prayer while the sacrifice was consuming, Jonathan beginning and the rest answering.

24 The Prayer of Nehemias And the prayer of Nehemias was after this manner: O Lord God, Creator of all things, dreadful and strong, just and merciful, who alone are the good 25 king, | who alone are gracious, who alone are just and almighty and eternal, who delivered Israel from all evil, who chose the
26 fathers and sanctified them: | receive the sacrifice for all your people Israel, and preserve your own portion, and sanctify it. | 27 Gather together our scattered people: deliver them that are slaves to the Gentiles, and look upon them that are despised and abhorred so that the Gentiles may know that you are our 28 God. | Punish them that oppress us and that treat us in-29 juriously with pride. | Establish your people in your holy place, as Moses has spoken.
30 And the priests sang hymns till the sacrifice was consumed. |
31 And when the sacrifice was consumed, Nehemias commanded the water that was left to be poured out upon the great stones. |
32 Which being done, there was kindled a flame from them: but 33 it was consumed by the light that shone from the altar. | And when this matter became public, it was told to the king of Persia that, in the place where the priests that were led away had hidden the fire, there appeared water with which Nehemias
34 and they that were with him had purified the sacrifices. | And the king, considering and diligently examining the matter, made
35 a temple for it that he might prove what had happened. | And when he had proved it, he gave the priests many goods and divers presents and he took and distributed them to them with 36 his own hand. | And Nehemias called this place Nephthar, which is interpreted purification. But many call it Nephi.

1, 34: A temple: an enclosure.

1 Jeremias Hides the Ark Now it is found in the descriptions of Jeremias the prophet that he commanded them that went into captivity to take the fire, as it has been signified, and how he gave charge to them that were carried away into cap-
2 tivity. | And how he gave them the law that they should not forget the commandments of the Lord and that they should not err in their minds, seeing the idols of gold and silver and the
3 ornaments of them. | And with other such like speeches he exhorted them that they would not remove the law from their
4 heart. | It was also contained in the same writing, how the prophet, being warned by God, commanded that the tabernacle and the ark should accompany him, till he came forth to the mountain where Moses went up and saw the inheritance of God.
5 | And when Jeremias came there he found a hollow cave, and he carried into it the tabernacle and the ark and the altar of in-
6 cense and so stopped the door. | Then some of them that followed him came up to mark the place; but they could not find
7 it. | And when Jeremias perceived it, he blamed them, saying: The place shall be unknown till God gathers together the con-
8 gregation of the people and shows mercy. | And then the Lord will show these things, and the majesty of the Lord shall appear and there shall be a cloud, as it was also shown to Moses, and he showed it when Solomon prayed that the place might be
9 sanctified to the great God. | For he treated wisdom in a magnificent manner: and, like a wise man, he offered the sacrifice
10 of the dedication and of the finishing of the temple. | And as Moses prayed to the Lord and fire came down from heaven and consumed the holocaust: so Solomon also prayed and fire
11 came down from heaven and consumed the holocaust. | And Moses said: Because the sin offering was not eaten, it was con-
12 sumed. | So Solomon also celebrated the dedication eight days.
13 And these same things were set down in the memoirs and commentaries of Nehemias: and how he made a library and gathered together out of the countries the books both of the prophets and of David and the epistles of the kings and con-

2, 1-12: The purpose of the sacred writer in using this apocryphal story, which contains many historical anachronisms, is probably to assert the continuity of the true cult from Moses' tabernacle-tent down to Solomon's temple and on to the temple purified by Judas Machabee.

2, 1: Descriptions: memoirs now lost.

2, 13-14: Judas' purification of the temple included the reassembling of the temple library left by Nehemias and his successors.

cerning the holy gifts. | And in like manner Judas also gathered together all such things as were lost by the war we had; and they are in our possession. | Wherefore if you want these things, send some that may fetch them to you. | As we are then about to celebrate the purification, we have written unto you: and you shall do well, if you keep the same days. | And we hope that God who has delivered his people and has rendered to all the inheritance and the kingdom and the priesthood and the sanctuary, | as he promised in the law, will shortly have mercy upon us and will gather us together from every land under heaven into the holy place: | for he has delivered us out of great perils and has cleansed the place. | Now as concerning Judas Machabeus and his brethren and the purification of the great temple and the dedication of the altar, | as also the wars against Antiochus the Illustrious and his son Eupator, | and the manifestations that came from heaven to them that behaved themselves manfully on the behalf of the Jews, so that, being but a few, they made themselves masters of the whole country and put to flight the barbarous multitude: | and recovered again the most renowned temple in all the world and delivered the city and restored the laws that were abolished, the Lord with all clemency showing mercy to them.

The Author's Preface And all such things as have been comprised in five books by Jason of Cyrene, we have attempted to abridge in one book. | For, considering the multitude of books, and the difficulty that they find who desire to undertake the narrations of histories, because of the multitude of the matter, | we have taken care for those indeed who are willing to read that it might be a pleasure of mind: and for the studious that they may more easily commit to memory, and that all who read might receive profit. | And as to ourselves indeed, in undertaking this work of abridging, we have taken in hand no easy task, yea rather a business full of watching and sweat. | But, as they who prepare a feast and seek to satisfy

2, 19: The place: the temple.

2, 20-33: In his preface which is oddly placed here, the author informs the readers about his abridgment of Jason's five books.

2, 21: Antiochus the Illustrious: he is known in history as Antiochus V Epiphanes. Eupator was Antiochus V.

2, 22: And the manifestations that came from heaven: examples of such heavenly apparitions are in 3, 25; 10, 29-30; 11, 8.

2, 27: A business full of watching and sweat: this is a classical example used in manuals to teach that the sacred writers were not necessarily aware of being inspired.

the will of others for the sake of many, we willingly undergo 29 the labor, | leaving to the authors the exact handling of every particular; and as for ourselves, according to the plan pro-30 posed, studying to be brief: | for, as the master builder of a new house must have care of the whole building, but he who takes care to paint it must seek out fit things for the adorning 31 of it, so must it be judged for us. | For to collect all that is to be known, to put the discourse in order and curiously to discuss every particular point, is the duty of the author of a history.
32 | But to pursue brevity of speech and to avoid nice declarations of things is to be granted to him who makes an abridgment. | 33 Here then we will begin the narration: let this be enough by way of a preface. For it is a foolish thing to make a long prologue and to be short in the story itself.

1 Heliodorus Sent to Rob the Temple Therefore when the holy city was inhabited with all peace and the laws as yet were very well kept, because of the godliness of Onias the high 2 priest and the hatred his soul had of evil, | it came to pass that even the kings themselves and the princes esteemed the place worthy of the highest honor and glorified the temple with very 3 great gifts: | so that Seleucus king of Asia allowed out of his revenues all the charges belonging to the ministry of the sacri-4 fices. | But one Simon of the tribe of Benjamin, who was appointed overseer of the temple, strove in opposition to the high 5 priest to bring about some unjust thing in the city. | And when he could not overcome Onias he went to Apollonius the son of Tharseas, who at that time was governor of Celesyria and 6 Phoenicia, | and told him that the treasury in Jerusalem was full of immense sums of money, and the common store was infinite, which did not belong to the account of the sacrifices, and that it was possible to bring all into the king's hands.
7 Now when Apollonius had given the king notice concerning the money that he was told of, he called for Heliodorus, who 3, 1: Judea was enjoying peace because it was not under the Syrians, and Egypt no longer fought to conquer her after 199 B.C. Onias: this is Onias III. For his son, Onias IV, see 1, 10—2, 19 n.

3, 3: Seleucus king of Asia: Seleucus IV of Syria, elder brother of Antiochus Epiphanes, paid for the expenses of the cult.

3, 4: Overseer of the temple: Simon, a layman, in charge of the temporal administration of the temple, also wanted to control the business life of Jerusalem (i.e., fix prices, control weights and measures, and inspect merchandise). These were the typical functions of the Agoranomos of the Greek cities.

had the charge over his affairs, and sent him with commission 8 to bring him the foresaid money. | So Heliodorus forthwith began his journey, with the pretext of visiting the cities of Celesyria and Phoenicia, but indeed to fulfill the king's pur-9 pose. | And when he came to Jerusalem and was courteously received in the city by the high priest, he told him what information had been given concerning the money and declared the cause for which he had come and asked if these things were 10 so indeed. | Then the high priest told him that these were sums deposited and provisions for the subsistence of the widows and 11 the fatherless, | and that some part of that which wicked Simon had given intelligence of belonged to Hircanus son of Tobias, a man of great dignity; and that the whole was four hundred 12 talents of silver and two hundred of gold: | but that to deceive them who had trusted to the place and temple which is honored throughout the whole world, for the reverence and holiness of it, was a thing which could not by any means be done. | 13 But he, by reason of the orders he had received from the king, said that by all means the money must be carried to the king.

14 The Anguish of the Priests and People So on the day he had appointed, Heliodorus entered in to order this matter.
15 But there was no small terror throughout the whole city. | And the priests prostrated themselves before the altar in their priests' vestments, and called upon him from heaven who made the law concerning things given to be kept, that he would preserve them 16 safe for them that had deposited them. | Now whosoever saw the countenance of the high priest was wounded in heart: for his face and the changing of his color declared the inward 17 sorrow of his mind. | For the man was so compassed with sadness and horror that it was manifest to them that beheld him 18 what sorrow he had in his heart. | Others also came flocking together out of their houses, praying and making public supplication, because the place was like to come into contempt. | 19 And the women, girded with haircloth about their breasts, came together in the streets. And the virgins also that were confined indoors came forth, some to Onias, and some to the walls, 20 and others looked out of the windows. | And all, holding up 21 their hands toward heaven, made supplication. | For the expectation of the mixed multitude and of the high priest who 22 was in an agony, would have moved any one to pity. | And

3, 11: Some of the money in the temple about which Simon spoke belonged to Hyrcanus.

these indeed called upon almighty God to preserve the things that had been committed to them, safe and sure for those that 23 had committed them. | But Heliodorus executed that which he had resolved on, himself being present in the same place with his guard about the treasury.

24 Heliodorus Is Punished But the spirit of the almighty God gave a great evidence of his presence, so that all that had presumed to obey him, falling down by the power of God, were 25 struck with fainting and dread. | For there appeared to them a horse with a terrible rider upon him, adorned with a very rich covering: and he ran fiercely and struck Heliodorus with his fore feet, and he that sat upon him seemed to have armor of
26 gold. | Moreover there appeared two other young men, beautiful and strong, bright and glorious, and in comely apparel, who stood by him on either side and scourged him without
27 ceasing with many stripes. | And Heliodorus suddenly fell to the ground, and they took him up covered with great darkness;
28 having put him into a litter they carried him out. | So he that came with many servants and all his guard into the aforesaid treasury was carried out, no one being able to help him,
29 the manifest power of God being known. | And he indeed by the power of God lay speechless and without all hope of re-
30 covery. | But they praised the Lord because he had glorified his place. And the temple, that a little before was full of fear and trouble when the almighty Lord appeared, was filled with joy and gladness.

31 The Prayer of Onias Saves Heliodorus Then some of the friends of Heliodorus forthwith begged of Onias that he would call upon the Most High to grant him his life, who was 32 ready to give up the ghost. | So the high priest, considering that the king might perhaps suspect that some mischief had been done to Heliodorus by the Jews, offered a sacrifice of health
33 for the recovery of the man. | And when the high priest was praying, the same young men in the same clothing stood by Heliodorus and said to him: Give thanks to Onias the priest,
34 because for his sake the Lord has granted you life. | And you, having been scourged by God, declare unto all men the great works and the power of God. And having spoken thus, they appeared no more.

15 So Heliodorus, after he had offered a sacrifice to God and made great vows to him that had granted him life and given thanks to Onias, taking his troops with him, returned to the 16 king, | and he testified to all men the works of the great God,
17 which he had seen with his own eyes. | And when the king asked Heliodorus who might be a fit man to be sent yet once
18 more to Jerusalem, he said: | If you have any enemy or traitor to your kingdom, send him there, and you shall receive him again scourged, if he escapes: for there is undoubtedly in that
19 place a certain power of God. | For he that has his dwelling in the heavens is the visitor and protector of that place: and he
20 strikes and destroys them that come to do evil to it. | And the things concerning Heliodorus and the keeping of the treasury fell out in this manner.

1 Jason's Wickedness But Simon, of whom we spoke before, who was the betrayer of the money and of his country, spoke ill of Onias, as though he had incited Heliodorus to do these 2 things and had been the promoter of evils. | And he presumed to call him a traitor to the kingdom, who provided for the city and defended his nation and was zealous for the law of God. |
3 But when the enmities proceeded so far that murders were also 4 committed by some of Simon's friends, | Onias, considering the danger of this contention and that Apollonius, who was the governor of Celesyria and Phoenicia, was outrageous, which
5 increased the malice of Simon, went to the king: | not to be an accuser of his countrymen, but with a view to the common good
6 of all the people. | For he saw that, except the king took care, it was impossible that matters should be settled in peace or that Simon would cease from his folly.

7 But after the death of Seleucus, when Antiochus, who was called the Illustrious, had taken possession of the kingdom, Jason the brother of Onias ambitiously sought the high priest-8 hood. And he went to the king, promising him three hundred and sixty talents of silver and, out of other revenues, fourscore talents.

3, 40: Inscriptions and a statue of Heliodorus have been found on ie island of Delos. From extrabiblical sources we know that Heliodorus as behind the murder of king Seleucus, but he did not succeed in resting the throne from the legitimate heir, Antiochus Epiphanes. See

9 Abominable Foreign Customs Introduced Besides this, he promised also a hundred and fifty more, if he might have license to set him up a place for exercise and a place for youth, and to entitle them that were at Jerusalem, Antiochians. |
10 Which when the king had granted and he had gotten the rule into his hands, forthwith he began to bring over his country-
11 men to the fashion of the heathens. | And abolishing those things, which had been decreed of special favor by the kings in behalf of the Jews by the means of John the father of that Eupolemus who went ambassador to Rome to make amity and alliance, he disannulled the lawful ordinances of the citizens
12 and brought in fashions that were perverse. | For he had the boldness to set up, under the very castle, a place of exercise and
13 to put all the choicest youths in brothel houses. | Now this was not the beginning but an increase and progress of heathenish and foreign manners, through the abominable and unheard of
14 wickedness of Jason, that impious wretch and no priest. | Insomuch that the priests were not now occupied about the offices of the altar, but, despising the temple and neglecting the sacrifices, hastened to be partakers of the games and of the unlawful
15 allowance thereof and of the exercise of the discus. | And setting nought by the honors of their fathers, they esteemed the
16 Grecian glories as the best, | for the sake of which they incurred a dangerous contention and followed earnestly their ordinances, and in all things they coveted to be like them who were their enemies and murderers.
17 But acting wickedly against the laws of God does not pass 18 unpunished: and this the time following will declare. | Now when the game that was used every fifth year was kept at Tyre,
19 the king being present, | the wicked Jason sent from Jerusalem sinful men to carry three hundred didrachmas of silver for the sacrifice of Hercules. But the bearers thereof desired it might not be bestowed on the sacrifices, because it was not necessary,
20 but might be deputed for other charges. | So the money was appointed by him who sent it to the sacrifice of Hercules: but because of them that carried it, it was employed for the making of galleys.

4, 18-20: The representatives of Jerusalem at Tyre gave the money toward the construction of galleys.

21 Now when Apollonius the son of Mnestheus was sent into Egypt to treat with the nobles of king Philometor, and Antiochus understood that he was wholly excluded from the affairs of the kingdom, consulting his own interest, he went on 22 to Joppe, and from there to Jerusalem, | where he was received in a magnificent manner by Jason and the city, and came in with torch lights and with praises: and from there he returned with his army into Phoenicia.

23 Menelaus Becomes High Priest Three years afterward, Jason sent Menelaus, brother of the aforesaid Simon, to carry money to the king and to bring answers from him concerning
24 certain necessary affairs. | But he being recommended to the king, when he had magnified the appearance of his power, got the high priesthood for himself, by offering more than Jason
25 by three hundred talents of silver. | So having received the king's mandate, he returned, bringing nothing worthy of the high priesthood: but having the mind of a cruel tyrant and the
26 rage of a savage beast. | Then Jason, who had undermined his own brother, being himself undermined, was driven out a
27 fugitive into the country of the Ammonites. | So Menelaus got the principality; but as for the money he had promised to the king, he took no care, when Sostratus the governor of the castle
28 called for it. | For to him appertained the gathering of the 29 taxes: wherefore they were both called before the king. | And Menelaus was removed from the priesthood, Lysimachus his brother succeeding; and Sostratus was made governor of the Cyprians.

30 When these things were in doing, it fell out that they of Tharsus and Mallos raised a sedition, because they were given
31 for a gift to Antiochis, the king's concubine. | The king therefore went in all haste to appease them, leaving Andronicus, one
32 of his nobles, for his deputy. | Then Menelaus, supposing that he had found a convenient time, having stolen certain vessels of gold out of the temple, gave them to Andronicus: and others 33 he had sold at Tyre and in the neighboring cities. | Which when Onias understood, most certainly he reproved him, keeping himself in a safe place at Antioch beside Daphne.

34 The Death of Onias Whereupon Menelaus, coming to Andronicus, desired him to kill Onias. And he went to Onias and gave him his right hand with an oath, and (though he was suspected by him) persuaded him to come forth out of the sanctuary and immediately slew him, without any regard to 35 justice. | For which cause not only the Jews but also the other nations conceived indignation, and were much grieved for the
36 unjust murder of so great a man. | And when the king returned from the places of Cilicia, the Jews that were at Antioch, and also the Greeks, went to him, complaining of the unjust murder
37 of Onias. | Antiochus therefore was grieved in his mind for Onias and, being moved to pity, shed tears, remembering the sobriety and modesty of the deceased.

38 Punishment of Andronicus and Lysimachus And being inflamed to anger, he commanded Andronicus to be stripped of his purple and to be led about through all the city, and that in the same place wherein he had committed the impiety against Onias, the sacrilegious wretch should be put to death, the 39 Lord repaying him his deserved punishment. | Now when many sacrileges had been committed by Lysimachus in the temple by the counsel of Menelaus, and the rumor of it was spread abroad, the multitude gathered themselves together against Lysimachus, a great quantity of gold being already
40 carried away. | Wherefore the multitude making an insurrection, and their minds being filled with anger, Lysimachus armed about three thousand men and began to use violence, one Tyrannus being captain, a man far gone both in age and in
41 madness. | But when they perceived the attempt of Lysimachus some caught up stones, some strong clubs, and some threw ashes
42 upon Lysimachus. | And many of them were wounded and some struck down to the ground, but all were put to flight: and as for the sacrilegious fellow himself, they slew him beside the treasury.

43 Menelaus Acquitted Now concerning these matters, an 44 accusation was laid against Menelaus. | And when the king had come to Tyre, three men were sent from the ancients to
45 plead the cause before him. | But Menelaus, being convicted, promised Ptolemee to give him much money to persuade the
46 king to favor him. | So Ptolemee went to the king in a certain court where he was, as it were to cool himself, and brought him
47 to be of another mind. | So Menelaus who was guilty of all the evil was acquitted by him of the accusations; and those poor men, who, if they had pleaded their cause even before Scythians, should have been judged innocent, were condemned to death. | 48 Thus they who prosecuted the cause for the city and for the people and the sacred vessels did soon suffer unjust punish-
49 ment. | Wherefore even the Tyrians being moved with indigna-
50 tion were liberal toward their burial. | And so through the covetousness of them that were in power, Menelaus continued in authority, increasing in malice to the betraying of the citizens.

1 Wonderful Signs Are Seen in the Air At the same time,
2 Antiochus prepared for a second journey into Egypt. | And it came to pass that through the whole city of Jerusalem for the space of forty days there were seen horsemen running in the air, in gilded raiment and armed with spears, like bands of
3 soldiers. | And horses set in order by ranks, running one against another, with the shakings of shields, and a multitude of men in helmets, with drawn swords, and casting of darts, and glittering
4 of golden armor and of harnesses of all sorts. | Wherefore all men prayed that these prodigies might turn to good.

4, 45: The "Ptolemee" here is the son of Dorymenus, a favorite of king Antiochus mentioned in 1 Mc 3, 38.

5, 1: The majority of scholars teach that Antiochus made two expeditions to Egypt, but it is impossible to specify the exact date of the "second journey" in this text.

5, 2-4: There are examples in ancient and modern times of similar celestial phenomena which could be caused by reflections in the clouds of troops marching on land. The author here may be using this apparition as a literary device to indicate that important things concerning the temple were about to happen. See "pathetic history" in the Introduction. Compare the portents of "Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds" (Julius Caesar, II, 2).

5 Now when a false rumor went abroad as though Antiochus had died, Jason, taking with him no fewer than a thousand men, suddenly assaulted the city: and though the citizens ran together to the wall, the city at length was taken and Menelaus
6 fled into the castle. | But Jason slew his countrymen without mercy, not considering that prosperity against one's own kindred is a very great evil, thinking they had been enemies and not
7 citizens whom he conquered. | Yet he did not get the principality, but received confusion, at the end, for the reward of his treachery: and fled again into the country of the Ammonites.

8 Jason's End At the last, having been shut up by Aretas the king of the Arabians because of the destruction he had wrought, flying from city to city, hated by all men as a forsaker of the laws and execrable as an enemy of his country and countrymen,
9 he was thrust out into Egypt. | And he that had driven many out of their country perished in a strange land, going to Lacedemon,
10 as if for kindred sake he should have refuge there. | But he that had cast out many unburied, was himself cast forth both unlamented and unburied, neither having foreign burial, nor being partaker of the sepulcher of his fathers.

11 Antiochus Takes Jerusalem Now when these things were done, the king suspected that the Jews would forsake the alliance. Whereupon, departing out of Egypt with a furious
12 mind, he took the city by force of arms. | And commanded the soldiers to kill and not to spare any that came in their way and
13 to go up into the houses to slay. | Thus there was a slaughter of young and old, a destruction of women and children, and kill-
14 ing of virgins and infants. | And there were slain in the space of three whole days fourscore thousand, forty thousand were
15 made prisoners, and as many sold. | But this was not enough: he presumed also to enter into the temple, the most holy in all the world, Menelaus, that traitor to the laws and to his country, being his guide.

16 The Temple Profaned and Plundered And taking in his wicked hands the holy vessels which were given by other kings and cities for the ornament and the glory of the place, he 17 unworthily handled and profaned them. | Thus Antiochus,

5, 11-20: This expands the parallel passage in 1 Mc 1, 20-24.
5, 11: The city: Jerusalem.

going astray in mind, did not consider that God was angry for a while because of the sins of the inhabitants of the city: and 18 therefore this contempt had happened to the place. | Otherwise had they not been involved in many sins, as Heliodorus, who was sent by king Seleucus to rob the treasury, so this man also, as soon as he had come, had been forthwith scourged and 19 put back from his presumption. | But God did not choose the people for the place's sake, but the place for the people's sake.
20 | And therefore the place also itself was made partaker of the evils of the people, but afterward shall communicate in the good things thereof: and as it was forsaken in the wrath of almighty God, shall be exalted again with great glory when the great Lord shall be reconciled.

21 So when Antiochus had taken away out of the temple a thousand and eight hundred talents he went back in all haste to Antioch, thinking through pride that he might now make the land navigable and the sea passable on foot: such was the 22 haughtiness of his mind. | He left also governors to afflict the people. At Jerusalem, Philip, a Phrygian by birth, but in man-23 ners more barbarous than he that set him there. | And in Gazarim, Andronicus and Menelaus, who bore a more heavy 24 hand upon the citizens than the rest. | And whereas he was set against the Jews, he sent that hateful prince Apollonius with an army of two and twenty thousand men, commanding him to kill all that were of perfect age and to sell the women and the 25 younger sort. | Who when he came to Jerusalem, pretending peace, rested till the holy day of the sabbath: and then, the Jews keeping holiday, he commanded his men to take arms. | 26 And he slew all that had come forth to celebrate: and, running through the city with armed men, he destroyed a very great multitude.

27 But Judas Machabeus, who was the tenth, had withdrawn himself into a desert place, and there lived among wild beasts in the mountains with his company: and they continued feeding on herbs that they might not be partakers of the pollution.

sent a certain old man of Antioch to compel the Jews to depar 2 from the laws of their fathers and of God, | and to defile th temple that was in Jerusalem and to call it the temple of Jupite Olympius, and that in Gazarim of Jupiter Hospitalis, accordin
3 as they were that inhabited the place. | And very bad was thi
4 invasion of evils and grievous to all. | For the temple was ful of the riot and revellings of the Gentiles and of men lying wit lewd women. And women thrust themselves of their accord int the holy places and brought in things that were not lawful.
5 The altar also was filled with unlawful things, which were for 6 bidden by the laws. | And neither were the sabbaths kept, no the solemn days of the fathers observed; neither did any man 7 plainly profess himself to be a Jew. | But they were led b bitter constraint on the king's birthday to the sacrifices; an when the feast of Bacchus was kept, they were compelled t 8 go about crowned with ivy in honor of Bacchus. | And ther went out a decree into the neighboring cities of the Gentiles, b the suggestion of the Ptolemeans, that they also should act i 9 like manner against the Jews, to oblige them to sacrifice, an whosoever would not conform themselves to the ways of th Gentiles should be put to death. Then was misery to be seen: 10 for two women, accused to have circumcised their childre whom, when they had openly led about through the city wit the infants hanging at their breasts, they threw down headlon 11 from the walls. | And others that had met together in cave that were near and were keeping the sabbath day privatel being discovered by Philip, were burned with fire, because the made a conscience to help themselves with their hands, by rea son of the religious observance of the day.
12 Now I beseech those that shall read this book that they l not shocked at these calamities, but that they consider the thing that happened, not as being for the destruction but for the co 13 rection of our nation. | For it is a token of great goodness whe sinners are not suffered to go on in their ways for a long time 14 but are presently punished. | For, not as with other nation

ment shall come he may punish them in the fullness of their sins), | does he also deal with us, so as to suffer our sins to come to their height and then take vengeance on us. | And therefore he never withdraws his mercy from us, but though he chastises his people with adversity, he forsakes them not. | But let this suffice in a few words for a warning to the readers. And now we must come to the narration:

The Heroic Death of Eleazar Eleazar, one of the chief of the scribes, a man advanced in years and of a comely countenance, was pressed to open his mouth to eat swine's flesh. | But he, choosing rather a most glorious death than a hateful life, went forward voluntarily to the torment. | And considering in what manner he was to suffer it, patiently bearing, he determined not to do any unlawful things for the love of life. | But they that stood by, being moved with wrongful pity, for the old friendship they had with the man, taking him aside, desired that flesh might be brought which it was lawful for him to eat, that he might make as if he had eaten, as the king had commanded of the flesh of the sacrifice: | that by so doing he might be delivered from death. And for the sake of their old friendship with the man they did him this courtesy. | But he began to consider the dignity of his age and his ancient years and the inbred honor of his gray head and his good life and conversation from a child: and he answered without delay, according to the ordinances of the holy law made by God, saying that he would rather be sent into the other world. | For it does not become our age, said he, to dissemble: because many young persons might think that Eleazar, at the age of fourscore and ten years, has gone over to the life of the heathens. | And so, they, through my dissimulation and for a little time of a corruptible life, should be deceived, and hereby I should bring a stain and a curse upon my old age. | For, though for the present time I should be delivered from the punishments of men, I should yet not escape the hand of the Almighty, neither alive nor dead. | Wherefore by departing manfully out of this life, I shall show myself worthy of my old age, and I shall leave an example of fortitude to young men, if with a ready mind and constancy I suffer an honorable death for the most venerable and most holy laws. And having spoken thus, he was forthwith carried to execution.

6, 21: Wrongful pity: their pity was wrongful because they wanted to save his life by dissimulation.

29 And they that led him, and had been a little before more mild, were changed to wrath for the words he had spoken, which 30 they thought were uttered out of arrogancy. | But when he was now ready to die with the stripes, he groaned and said: O Lord, in your holy knowledge, you know manifestly that, whereas I might be delivered from death, I suffer grievous pains in body: but in soul I am well content to suffer these because 31 I fear you. | Thus did this man die, leaving not only to young men, but also to the whole nation, the memory of his death for an example of virtue and fortitude.

1 The Martyrdom of Seven Brothers It came to pass also that seven brethren, together with their mother, were apprehended and compelled by the king to eat swine's flesh against the law, for which end they were tormented with whips and 2 scourges. | But one of them, who was the eldest, said thus:
What would you ask, or learn of us? We are ready to die rather than to transgress the laws of God, received from our 3 fathers. | Then the king, being angry, commanded frying pans and brazen caldrons to be made hot. As they were being heated, 4 | he commanded to cut out the tongue of him that had spoken first, and the skin of his head being drawn off, to chop off also the extremities of his hands and feet, the rest of his brethren 5 and his mother looking on. | And when he was now maimed in all parts, he commanded him, being yet alive, to be brought to the fire and to be fried in the frying pan. And while he was suffering therein long torments, the rest, together with the 6 mother, exhorted one another to die manfully, | saying: The Lord God will look upon the truth and will take pleasure in us, as Moses declared in the profession of the canticle: and in his servants he will take pleasure.
7 So, when the first was dead after this manner, they brought the next to make him a mocking stock. And, when they had pulled off the skin of his head with the hair, they asked him if he would eat before he was punished throughout the whole 8 body in every limb. | But he answered in his own language and said: I will not do it. Wherefore, he also in the next place

9 received the torments of the first. | And when he was at the last gasp, he said thus: You indeed, O most wicked man, destroy us out of this present life; but the King of the world will raise us up, who die for his laws, in the resurrection of eternal life.

10 After him the third was made a mocking stock, and when he was required, he quickly put forth his tongue and courageously 11 stretched out his hands, | and said with confidence: These I have from heaven, but because of the laws of God I now despise 12 them, for I hope to receive them again from him. | So that the king and they that were with him wondered at the young man's 13 courage, because he esteemed the torments as nothing. | And after he was thus dead, they tormented the fourth in the like 14 manner. | And when he was now ready to die he spoke thus:
It is better, being put to death, by men, to look for hope from God, to be raised up again by him: for, as to you, you shall have 15 no resurrection unto life. | And when they had brought the fifth, they tormented him. But he looking upon the king, | said:
Whereas you have power among men, though you are corruptible, you do what you will: but think not that our nation is forsaken by God. | But stay patiently a while and you shall see his great power, in what manner he will torment you and your seed. | After him they brought the sixth. And he, being ready to die, spoke thus: Be not deceived without cause, for we suffer these things for ourselves, having sinned against our God, and things worthy of admiration are done to us. | But do not think that you shall escape unpunished for having attempted to fight against God.

Their Mother's Faith and Courage Now the mother was to be admired above measure and worthy to be remembered by good men, who beheld her seven sons slain in the space of one day and bore it with a good courage, for the hope that she had in God. | And she bravely exhorted every one of them in her own language, being filled with wisdom. And joining a man's heart to a woman's thought, | she said to them: I know not how you were formed in my womb; for I neither gave you breath, nor soul, nor life, neither did I frame the limbs of every

23 one of you. | But the Creator of the world that formed the nativity of man and that found out the origin of all, he will restore to you again in his mercy, both breath and life, as now you despise yourselves for the sake of his laws.

24 Now Antiochus, thinking himself despised and withal despising the voice of the upbraider, when the youngest was yet alive, did not only exhort him by words, but also assured him with an oath that he would make him a rich and a happy man, and, if he would turn from the laws of his fathers, would take 25 him for a friend and furnish him with things necessary. | But when the young man was not moved with these things, the king called the mother and counseled her to deal with the young 26 man to save his life. | And when he had exhorted her with 27 many words, she promised that she would counsel her son. | So bending herself toward him, mocking the cruel tyrant, she said in her own language: My son, have pity upon me that bore you nine months in my womb and gave you suck three years 28 and nourished you and brought you up unto this age. | I beseech you, my son, look upon heaven and earth and all that is in them, and consider that God made them out of nothing, and 29 mankind also: | so you shall not fear this tormentor, but being made a worthy partner with your brethren, receive death, that in that mercy I may receive you again with your brethren.

30 Steadfastness of the Youngest While she was yet speaking these words, the young man said: For whom do you stay? I will not obey the commandment of the king, but the com- 31 mandment of the law which was given us by Moses. | But you that has been the author of all mischief against the Hebrews 32 shall not escape the hand of God. | For we suffer thus for our 33 sins. | And though the Lord our God is angry with us a little while for our chastisement and correction, yet he will be re- 34 onciled again to his servants. | But you, O wicked and of all men most flagitious, be not lifted up without cause with vain 35 hopes, while you are raging against his servants. | For you have not yet escaped the judgment of the almighty God who beholds 36 all things. | For my brethren, having now undergone a short pain, are under the covenant of eternal life, but you by the judgment of God shall receive just punishment for your pride.

7, 28: God made them out of nothing: the Greek text says literally: "not from existing things did God make these things." This is the closest biblical text to the philosophical notion of "nothing" meaning absolute nothingness.

But I, like my brethren, offer up my life and my body for the laws of our fathers, calling upon God to be speedily merciful to our nation, and that you by torments and stripes may confess that he alone is God. | But in me and in my brethren the wrath of the Almighty, which has justly been brought upon all our nation, shall cease.

Then the king, being incensed with anger, raged against him more cruelly than all the rest, taking it grievously that he was mocked. | So this man also died undefiled, wholly trusting in the Lord. | And last of all, after the sons, the mother also was consumed.

But now there is enough said of the sacrifices and of the excessive cruelties.

Judas Gathers an Army But Judas Machabeus and they that were with him went privately into the towns: and calling together their kinsmen and friends and taking unto them such as continued in the Jews' religion, they assembled six thousand men. | And they called upon the Lord that he would look upon his people that was trodden down by all and would have pity on the temple that was defiled by the wicked. | That he would have pity also upon the city that was destroyed, that was ready to be made even with the ground, and would hear the voice of the blood that cried to him. | That he would remember also the most unjust deaths of innocent children and the blasphemies offered to his name and would show his indignation on this occasion.

Now when Machabeus had gathered a multitude, he could not be withstood by the heathens: for the wrath of the Lord had turned into mercy. | So coming unawares upon the towns and cities, he set them on fire and, taking possession of the most commodious places, he made no small slaughter of the enemies. | And especially in the nights he went upon these expeditions, and the fame of his valor was spread abroad everywhere. |Then Philip, seeing that the man gained ground by little and little, and that things for the most part succeeded prosperously with how they, being in all but six thousand, when it came to the point, and the Macedonians their companions were at a stand, slew a hundred and twenty thousand, because of the help they had from heaven and for this they received many favors. | With these words they were greatly encouraged and disposed even to die for the laws and their country. | So he appointed his brethren captains over each division of his army, Simon and Joseph and Jonathan, giving to each one fifteen hundred men. | And after the holy book had been read to them by Esdras and he had given them for a watchword, The help of God: himself leading the first band, he joined battle with Nicanor.

Judas Defeats Nicanor And the Almighty being their helper, they slew above nine thousand men; and having wounded and disabled the greater part of Nicanor's army, they obliged them to flee. | And they took the money of them that came to buy them, and they pursued them on every side. | But they came back for want of time: for it was the day before the sabbath and therefore they did not continue the pursuit. | But when they had gathered together their arms and their spoils, they kept the sabbath, blessing the Lord who had delivered them that day, distilling the beginning of mercy upon them. | Then after the sabbath they divided the spoils to the feeble and the orphans and the widows: and the rest they took for themselves and their servants. | When this was done and they had all made a common supplication, they besought the merciful Lord to be reconciled to his servants unto the end.

Other Victories of Judas Moreover, they slew above twenty thousand of them that were with Timotheus and Bacchides who fought against them, and they made themselves masters of the high strongholds. And they divided among them many spoils, giving equal portions to the feeble, the fatherless and the widows, yea and the aged also. | And when they had carefully gathered together their arms, they laid them all up in convenient places and the residue of their spoils they carried to Jerusalem. | They slew also Philarches who was with Timotheus, a wicked man, who had in many ways afflicted the Jews. | And when they kept the feast of the victory at Jerusalem, they burned Callisthenes, that had set fire to the holy gates, who had taken refuge in a certain house, rendering to him a worthy reward for his impieties. | But as for that most wicked man Nicanor, who had brought a thousand merchants to the sale

1 The Punishment of Antiochus At that time Antiochu
2 returned with dishonor out of Persia. | For he had entered int the city called Persepolis and attempted to rob the temple an to oppress the city, but the multitude, running together to arm put them to flight: and so it fell out that Antiochus being pu 3 to flight returned with disgrace. | Now when he reached E batana, he received the news of what had happened to Nicanc 4 and Timotheus. | And swelling with anger he thought to r venge upon the Jews the injury done by them that had pu him to flight. And therefore he commanded his chariot to b driven without stopping in his journey, the judgment of heave urging him forward, because he had spoken so proudly, that h would come to Jerusalem and make it a common burying pla of the Jews.

5 But the Lord, the God of Israel, that sees all things, struc him with an incurable and an invisible plague. For as soon he had ended these words, a dreadful pain in his bowels cam 6 upon him and bitter torments of the inner parts. | And indee very justly, seeing he had tormented the bowels of others wit many and new torments, albeit he by no means ceased from h 7 malice. | Moreover, being filled with pride, breathing out fi in his rage against the Jews and commanding the matter to b hastened, it happened as he was going with violence that h fell from the chariot, so that his limbs were much pained by 8 grievous bruising of the body. | Thus he that seemed to himsc to command even the waves of the sea, being proud above th condition of man, and to weigh the heights of the mountair in a balance, now being cast down to the ground, was carri in a litter, bearing witness to the manifest power of God in 9 himself: | so that worms swarmed out of the body of this man, and while he lived in sorrow and pain, his flesh fell off and the 10 filthiness of his smell was noisome to the army. | And the man that thought a little before he could reach to the stars of heaven, no man could endure to carry, for the intolerable stench. | 11 And by this means, being brought from his great pride, he began to come to the knowledge of himself, being admonished by the 12 scourge of God, his pains increasing every moment. | And when he himself could not now abide his own stench, he spoke thus: It is just to be subject to God and that a mortal man 13 should not equal himself to God. | Then this wicked man prayed to the Lord, of whom he was not like to obtain mercy.

14 | And the city to which he was going in haste to lay it even with the ground and to make it a common burying place, he 15 now desired to make free. | And the Jews whom he said he would not account worthy to be so much as buried, but would give them up to be devoured by the birds and wild beasts, and would utterly destroy them with their children, he now prom-16 ised to make equal with the Athenians. | The holy temple also which before he had spoiled, he promised to adorn with goodly gifts and to multiply the holy vessels and to allow out of his 17 revenues the charges pertaining to the sacrifices. | Yea, also, that he would become a Jew himself and would go through every place of the earth and declare the power of God.

18 The Letter of Antiochus But his pains not ceasing (for the just judgment of God had come upon him), despairing of life, he wrote to the Jews in the manner of a supplication a 19 letter in these words: | To his very good subjects, the Jews, Antiochus, king and ruler, wishes much health and welfare and 20 happiness. | If you and your children are well and if all matters 21 go with you to your mind, we give very great thanks. | As for me, being infirm, but yet kindly remembering you, returning out of the places of Persia, and being taken with a grievous disease, I thought it necessary to take care for the common 22 good: | not distrusting my life, but having great hopes to escape 23 the sickness. | But considering that my father also, at what time he led an army into the higher countries, appointed who 24 should reign after him, | to the end that if anything contrary to expectation should fall out, or any bad tidings should be 9, 13: He was not like to obtain mercy: because he was not truly sorry.

brought, they that were in the countries, knowing to whom the 25 whole government was left, might not be troubled. | Moreover, considering that neighboring princes and borderers wait for opportunities and expect what shall be the event, I have appointed my son Antiochus king, whom I often recommended to many of you when I went into the higher provinces. And I
26 have written to him what I have joined here below. | I pray you therefore and request of you, that, remembering favors both public and private, you will every man of you continue to
27 be faithful to me and to my son. | For I trust that he will behave with moderation and humanity, and following my intentions, will be gracious unto you.
28 Thus the murderer and blasphemer, being grievously struck down, as he himself had treated others, died a miserable death in 29 a strange country among the mountains. | But Philip that was brought up with him carried away his body: and out of fear of the son of Antiochus, went into Egypt to Ptolemee Philometor.

1 The Purification of the Temple But Machabeus and they that were with him, by the protection of the Lord, recovered the
2 temple and the city again. | And he threw down the altars which the heathens had set up in the streets, as also the temples
3 of the idols. | And having purified the temple, they made another altar: and taking fire out of the fiery stones, they offered sacrifices after two years and set forth incense and lamps and
4 the loaves of proposition. | And when they had done these things, they besought the Lord, lying prostrate on the ground, that they might no more fall into such evils: but if they should at any time sin, that they might be chastised by him more gently, and not be delivered up to barbarians and blasphemous
5 men. | Now upon the same day that the temple had been polluted by the strangers, on the very same day it was cleansed again, to wit, on the five and twentieth day of the month of
6 Casleu. | And they kept eight days with joy, after the manner of the feast of the tabernacles, remembering that not long before they had kept the feast of the tabernacles when they were in
7 the mountains and in dens, like wild beasts. | Therefore they now carried boughs and green branches and palms for him who

10, 1-8: This section is expanded in 1 Mc 4, 36-59. See 1 Mc 4, 59 n. The purification of the temple occurred in December 164 B.C. and therefore preceded Antiochus' death in the spring of 163 B.C.

8 had given them good success in cleansing his place. | And they ordained by a common statute and decree that all the nation of the Jews should keep those days every year.

9 And this was the end of Antiochus that was called the Il-10 lustrious. | But now we will relate the acts of Eupator, the son of that wicked Antiochus, abridging the account of the 11 evils that happened in the wars. | For when he acceded to the crown, he appointed over the affairs of his realm one Lysias,
1 general of the army of Phoenicia and Syria. | For Ptolemee that was called Macer, was determined to be strictly just to the Jews, and especially by reason of the wrong that had been done
3 them, and to deal peaceably with them. | But being accused for this to Eupator by his friends and being oftentimes called traitor, because he had left Cyprus which Philometor had committed to him, and coming over to Antiochus the Illustrious had revolted also from him, he put an end to his life by poison. |
4 But Gorgias who was governor of the district, taking with him
5 the strangers, often fought against the Jews. | And the Jews that occupied the most commodious stronghold received those that were driven out of Jerusalem and attempted to make war.

6 Judas Takes the Strongholds of the Idumeans Then they that were with Machabeus, beseeching the Lord by prayers to be their helper, made a strong attack upon the strongholds
7 of the Idumeans: | and assaulting them with great force, won the strongholds, killed them that came in the way and slew al-
8 together no fewer than twenty thousand. | And whereas some had fled into very strong towers, having all manner of pro-
9 vision to sustain a siege, | Machabeus left Şimon and Joseph and Zacheus and those that were with them in sufficient number to continue the siege, and departed to those expeditions
10 which urged more. | Now they that were with Simon, being led with covetousness, were persuaded for the sake of money by some that were in the towers: and taking seventy thousand
11 didrachmas, let some of them escape. | But when it was told Machabeus what was done, he assembled the rulers of the people and accused those men that they had sold their brethren
12 for money, having let their adversaries escape. | So he put these traitors to death and forthwith took the two towers. |
13 And having good success in arms and in all things he took in hand, he slew more than twenty thousand in the two strongholds.

10, 13: Philometor: Ptolemy VI of Egypt.
10, 14: The strangers: mercenaries.

24 Judas Defeats Timotheus But Timotheus who before had been overcome by the Jews, having called together a multitude of foreign troops and assembled horsemen out of Asia, came as though he would take Judea by force of arms. | 25 But Machabeus and they that were with him, when he drew near, prayed to the Lord, sprinkling earth upon their heads and 26 girding their loins with haircloth, | and lying prostrate at the foot of the altar besought him to be merciful to them, and to be an enemy to their enemies and an adversary to their ad-27 versaries, as the law says. | And so after prayer taking their arms, they went forth further from the city, and when they had 28 come very near the enemies they rested. | But as soon as the sun had risen both sides joined battle: the one part having with their valor the Lord for a surety of victory and success, but the 29 other side making their rage their leader in battle. | But when they were in the heat of the engagement, there appeared to the enemies from heaven five men upon horses, comely, with golden 30 bridles, conducting the Jews: | two of whom took Machabeus between them and covered him on every side with their arms and kept him safe, but cast darts and fireballs against the enemy, so that they fell down, being both confounded with blindness 31 and filled with trouble. | And there were slain twenty thousand five hundred, and six hundred horsemen.
32 But Timotheus fled into Gazara, a stronghold where Chereas 33 was governor. | Then Machabeus and they that were with him, 34 cheerfully laid siege to the fortress four days. | But they that were within, trusting to the strength of the place, blasphemed 35 exceedingly and cast forth abominable words. | But when the fifth day appeared, twenty young men of them that were with Machabeus, inflamed in their minds because of the blasphemy, approached manfully to the wall and, pushing forward with 36 fierce courage, got up upon it. | Moreover, others also getting up after them went to set fire to the towers and the gates and 37 to burn the blasphemers alive. | And having for two days together pillaged and sacked the fortress, they killed Timotheus, who was found hidden in a certain place: they slew also his 38 brother Chereas and Apollophanes. | And when this was done, they blessed the Lord with hymns and thanksgiving, who had done great things in Israel and given them the victory.

1 Lysias Is Overthrown by Judas A short time after this, Lysias, the king's lieutenant and cousin, and who had chief charge over all the affairs, being greatly displeased with what 2 had happened, | gathered together fourscore thousand men and all the horsemen, and came against the Jews, thinking to 3 take the city and make it a habitation of the Gentiles, | and to make a gain of the temple, as of the other temples of the Gen-4 tiles, and to set the high priesthood to sale every year: | never considering the power of God, but puffed up in mind and trusting in the multitude of his foot soldiers and the thousands of 5 his horsemen and his fourscore elephants. | So he came into Judea and, approaching to Bethsura, which was in a narrow place, the space of five furlongs from Jerusalem, he laid siege to that fortress.

6 But when Machabeus and they that were with him understood that the strongholds were besieged, they and all the people besought the Lord with lamentations and tears that he would 7 send a good angel to save Israel. | Then Machabeus himself, first taking his arms, exhorted the rest to expose themselves together with him to the danger and to succor their brethren. | 8 And when they were going forth together with a willing mind, there appeared at Jerusalem a horseman going before them in 9 white clothing, with golden armor, shaking a spear. | Then they all together blessed the merciful Lord and took great courage, being ready to break through not only men but also the 10 fiercest beasts and walls of iron. | So they went on courageously, having a helper from heaven and the Lord who showed 11 mercy to them. | And rushing violently upon the enemy, like lions, they slew of them eleven thousand footmen and one thou-12 sand six hundred horsemen, | and put all the rest to flight.
And many of them being wounded, escaped naked: yea and Lysias himself fled away shamefully and escaped.

13 Lysias Appeals for Peace And as he was a man of understanding, considering with himself the loss he had suffered and perceiving that the Hebrews could not be overcome, because they relied upon the help of the almighty God, he sent to them, 14 | and promised that he would agree to all things that are just,

15 and that he would persuade the king to be their friend. | Then Machabeus consented to the request of Lysias, providing for the common good in all things, and whatsoever Machabeus wrote to Lysias concerning the Jews, the king allowed of.
16 For there were letters written to the Jews from Lysias, to this 17 effect: Lysias to the people of the Jews, greeting. | John and Abesalom who were sent from you, delivering your writings, requested that I would accomplish those things which were sig 18 nified by them. | Therefore, whatsoever things could be reported to the king I have represented to him, and he has granted 19 as much as the matter permitted. | If therefore you will keep yourselves loyal in affairs, hereafter also I will endeavor to be 20 a means of your good. | But as concerning other particulars, I have given orders by word, both to these and to them that 21 are sent by me, to commune with you. | Farewell. In the year one hundred and forty-eight, the four and twentieth day of the month of Dioscorus.

22 The Letters of King Antiochus But the king's letter contained these words: King Antiochus to Lysias his brother, 23 greeting. | Our father being translated among the gods, we are desirous that they that are in our realm should live quietly and 24 apply themselves diligently to their own concerns. | And we have heard that the Jews would not consent to my father to turn to the rites of the Greeks, but that they would keep to their own manner of living, and therefore that they request us to 25 allow them to live after their own laws. | Wherefore, being desirous that this nation also should be at rest, we have ordained and decreed that the temple should be restored to them and that they may live according to the custom of their an-26 cestors. | You shall do well therefore to send to them and grant them peace, that, our pleasure being known, they may be of good comfort and look to their own affairs.
27 But the king's letter to the Jews was in this manner: King Antiochus to the senate of the Jews and to the rest of the Jews.
28 greeting. | If you are well, you are as we desire. We ourselves
29 also are well. | Menelaus came to us, saying that you desired
30 to come down to your countrymen that are with us. | We grant therefore a safe conduct to all that come and go, until the thir-31 tieth day of the month of Xanthicus: | that the Jews may use their own kind of meats and their own laws as before and that none of them any manner of ways be molested for things which 11, 21: The spring of 164 B.C.

have been done by ignorance. | And we have sent also Menelaus to speak to you. | Farewell. In the year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth day of the month of Xanthicus.

The Letter of the Romans The Romans also sent them a letter, to this effect: Quintus Memmius and Titus Manilius, ambassadors of the Romans, to the people of the Jews, greeting. | Whatsoever Lysias the king's cousin has granted you, we also have granted. | But touching such things as he thought should be referred to the king, after you have diligently conferred among yourselves, send someone forthwith, that we may decree as it is convenient for you, for we are going to Antioch. | And therefore make haste to write back, that we may know of what mind you are. | Farewell. In the year one hundred and forty-eight, the fifteenth day of the month of Xanthicus.

Judas Overcomes the Treacherous Neighbors When these covenants were made, Lysias went to the king and the Jews gave themselves to husbandry. | But they that were behind, namely, Timotheus and Apollonius the son of Genneus, also Hieronymus and Demophon, and besides them Nicanor, the governor of Cyprus, would not suffer them to live in peace and to be quiet. | The men of Joppe also were guilty of this kind of wickedness. They desired the Jews who dwelt among them to go with their wives and children into the boats which they had prepared, as though they had no enmity to them. | Which they consented to, according to the common decree of the city, suspecting nothing because of the peace: but when they were gone forth into the deep, they drowned no fewer than two hundred of them. | As soon as Judas heard of this cruelty done to his countrymen, he commanded the men that were with him, and after having called upon God the just judge, | he came against those murderers of his brethren and set the haven on fire in the night, burned the boats and slew with the sword them that escaped from the fire. | And when he had done these things in this manner, he departed as if he would return again and root out all the Joppites. | But when he understood that the men of Jamnia also designed to do in like manner to the Jews that dwelt among them, | he came upon the Jamnites also by night and set the haven on fire with the ships, so that the light of the fire was seen at Jerusalem, two hundred and forty furlongs off.

10 And when they were now gone from there nine furlongs, and were marching toward Timotheus, five thousand footmen and five thousand horsemen of the Arabians set upon them. |
11 And after a hard fight in which by the help of God they got the victory, the rest of the Arabians, being overcome, besought Judas for peace, promising to give him pastures and to assist
12 him in other things. | And Judas thinking that they might be profitable indeed in many things, promised them peace: and after having joined hands, they departed to their tents.

13 Further Campaigns of Judas He also laid siege to a certain strong city, encompassed with bridges and walls, and inhabited by multitudes of different nations, the name of which 14 is Casphin. | But they that were within it, trusting in the strength of the walls and the provision of the victuals, behaved in a more negligent manner and provoked Judas with railing and blaspheming and uttering such words as were not to be
15 spoken. | But Machabeus, calling upon the great Lord of the world who without any rams or engines of war threw down the walls of Jericho in the time of Josue, fiercely assaulted the 16 walls. | And having taken the city by the will of the Lord, he made an unspeakable slaughter, so that a pool adjoining it, of two furlongs broad, seemed to run with the blood of the slain
17 From there they went seven hundred and fifty furlongs, and 18 came to Characa to the Jews that are called Tubianites. | But as for Timotheus, they found him not in those places, for before he had accomplished anything he went back, having left a very
19 strong garrison in a certain hold. | But Dositheus, and Sosipater, who were captains with Machabeus, slew them that were left by Timotheus in the hold, to the number of ten thousand
20 men. | And Machabeus, having set in order about him six thousand men and divided them by bands, went forth against Timotheus, who had with him a hundred and twenty thousand
21 footmen and two thousand five hundred horsemen. | Now when Timotheus had knowledge of the coming of Judas, he sent the women and children and the other baggage before him into a fortress called Carnion: for it was impregnable and hard

22 to come at, by reason of the straitness of the places. | But when the first band of Judas came in sight, the enemies were struck with fear, by the presence of God who sees all things: and they were put to flight one from another, so that they were often thrown down by their own companions and wounded 23 with the strokes of their own swords. | But Judas was vehemently earnest in punishing the profane, of whom he slew thirty 24 thousand men. | And Timotheus himself fell into the hands of the band of Dositheus and Sosipater; and with many prayers he besought them to let him go with his life, because he had the parents and brethren of many of the Jews, who, by his 25 death might happen to be deceived. | And when he had given his faith that he would restore them according to the agreement, they let him go without hurt, for the saving of their brethren.

26 Then Judas went away to Carnion, where he slew five and 27 twenty thousand persons. | And after he had put to flight and destroyed these, he removed his army to Ephron, a strong city, wherein there dwelt a multitude of divers nations; and stout young men standing upon the walls made a vigorous resistance.
And in this place there were many engines of war and a provi-28 sion of darts. | But when they had invocated the Almighty, who with his power breaks the strength of the enemies, they took the city and slew five and twenty thousand of them that 29 were within. | From there they departed to Scythopolis, which 30 lies six hundred furlongs from Jerusalem. | But the Jews that were among the Scythopolitans, testified that they were used kindly by them and that even in the times of their adversity they 31 had treated them with humanity. | So they gave them thanks, exhorting them to be still friendly to their nation, and they came to Jerusalem, the feast of the weeks being at hand.

32 Defeat of Gorgias And after Pentecost they marched 33 against Gorgias, the governor of Idumea. | And he came out with three thousand footmen and four hundred horsemen. | 34 And when they had joined battle, it happened that a few of the 35 Jews were slain. | But Dositheus, a horseman, one of Bacenor's band, a valiant man, took hold of Gorgias: and when he would have taken him alive, a certain horseman of the Thracians

12, 24: Because he had the parents and brethren . . . deceived: if they killed Timotheus, the parents and brethren of the Jews under his control would be punished or executed.

came upon him and cut off his shoulder: and so Gorgias escaped 36 to Maresa. | But when they that were with Esdrin had fought long, and were weary, Judas called upon the Lord to be their 37 helper, and leader of the battle. | Then beginning in his own language and singing hymns with a loud voice, he put Gorgias' soldiers to flight.
38 So Judas, having gathered together his army, came into the city of Odollam: and when the seventh day came, they purified themselves according to the custom and kept the sabbath in the 39 same place. | And the day following, Judas came with his company to take away the bodies of them that were slain and to bury them with their kinsmen in the sepulchers of their fathers.
40 | And they found under the coats of the slain some of the donaries of the idols of Jamnia, which the law forbids to the Jews: so that all plainly saw that for this cause they were slain.
41 | Then they all blessed the just judgment of the Lord, who had 42 discovered the things that were hidden. | And so betaking themselves to prayers they besought him that the sin which had been committed might be forgotten. But the most valiant Judas exhorted the people to keep themselves from sin, forasmuch as they saw before their eyes what had happened because of the sins of those that were slain.

43 Prayers for the Dead And making a gathering, he sent twelve thousand drachmas of silver to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the dead, thinking well and reli-44 giously concerning the resurrection. | For if he had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed 12, 38: The city of Odollam: southwest of Jerusalem.

12, 40: The sin of these dead soldiers in carrying amulets ("donaries") was perhaps the violation of the prohibition (see Dt 7, 25) which forbade taking the gold and silver of pagan idols for self enrichment. For this cause they were slain: the sacred writer, in typical Old Testament tradition, attributes the cause of death to their sin.

12, 42-46: This famous dogmatic passage most fittingly is incorporated into the Epistle of the anniversary Mass for the Dead (vv. 43-46), and the Epistle of the second Mass of All Soul's Day. It is better to follow the Greek text which says: "And if he was thinking that a splendid reward was reserved for those who had fallen asleep in godliness, it was a holy and pious thought (v. 45). Therefore he had a sacrifice of atonement made for the dead that they might be freed from their sin" (v. 46). By "reward" in v 45, the sacred writer means the resurrection spoken of in v. 44. Vv. 42-46 comprise the only Old Testament passage teaching an intermediate state of the dead during which the faithful on earth could intercede for them through their prayers (v. 42) and sacrifice (v. 43). This state is called purgatory in modern terminology.

45 superfluous and vain to pray for the dead. | And because he considered that they who had fallen asleep with godliness had 46 great grace laid up for them. | It is therefore a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, that they may be loosed from sins.

1 Menelaus Is Put to Death In the year one hundred and forty-nine, Judas understood that Antiochus Eupator was com-2 ing with a multitude against Judea, | and with him Lysias the regent, who had charge over the affairs of the realm, having with him a hundred and ten thousand footmen, five thousand horsemen, twenty-two elephants and three hundred chariots 3 armed with hooks. | Menelaus also joined himself with them:
and with great deceitfulness besought Antiochus, not for the welfare of his country but in hopes that he should be appointed 4 chief ruler. | But the King of kings stirred up the mind of Antiochus against the sinner, and upon Lysias suggesting that he was the cause of all the evils, he commanded (as the custom is with them) that he should be apprehended and put to death 5 in the same place. | Now there was in that place a tower fifty cubits high, having a heap of ashes on every side. This had a 6 prospect steep down. | From there he commanded the sacrile-gious wretch to be thrown down into the ashes, all men thrust-7 ing him forward unto death. | And by such a law it happened that Menelaus the transgressor of the law was put to death: 8 not having so much as burial in the earth. | And indeed very justly, for insomuch as he had committed many sins against the altar of God, the fire and ashes of which were holy, he was condemned to die in ashes.

9 Judea again Attacked But the king, with his mind full of rage, came on to show himself worse to the Jews than his 10 father was. | Which, when Judas understood, he commanded the people to call upon the Lord day and night that, as he had 11 always done, so now also he would help them: | because they were afraid to be deprived of the law and of their country and of the holy temple; and that he would not suffer the people that had of late taken breath for a little while to be again in sub-12 jection to blasphemous nations. | So when they had all done this together and had craved mercy of the Lord with weeping and fasting, lying prostrate on the ground for three days con-13 tinually, Judas exhorted them to make themselves ready. | But he with the ancients determined, before the king should bring his army into Judea and make himself master of the city, to go out and to commit the event of the thing to the judgment of the 14 Lord. | So committing all to God, the creator of the world, and having exhorted his people to fight manfully and to stand up even to death for the laws, the temple, the city, their country

15 and citizens, he placed his army about Modin. | And having given his company for a watchword, The Victory of God, with most valiant chosen young men he set upon the king's quarter by night and slew four thousand men in the camp, and the greatest of the elephants with them that had been upon him |
16 And having filled the camp of the enemies with exceeding great fear and tumult, they went off with good success.
17 Now this was done at the break of day, by the protection and 18 help of the Lord. | But the king, having taken a taste of the hardiness of the Jews, attempted to take the strong places by 19 policy. | And he marched with his army to Bethsura, which was a stronghold of the Jews: but he was repulsed, he failed,
20 he lost his men. | Now Judas sent necessaries to them that were 21 within. | But Rhodocus, one of the Jews' army, disclosed the secrets to the enemies, so he was sought out and taken up and
22 put in prison. | Again the king treated with them that were in Bethsura: gave his right hand, took theirs, and went away.

23 Antiochus Makes Peace He fought with Judas and was overcome. And when he understood that Philip, who had been left over the affairs, had rebelled at Antioch, he was in a consternation of mind and, entreating the Jews and yielding to them, he swore to all things that seemed reasonable, and, being reconciled, offered sacrifices, honored the temple and left gifts.
24 | He embraced Machabeus and made him governor and prince
25 from Ptolemais unto the Gerrenians. | But when he came to Ptolemais, the men of that city were much displeased with the conditions of the peace, being angry for fear they should break
26 the covenant. | Then Lysias went up to the judgment seat and set forth the reason and appeased the people and returned to Antioch. And thus matters went with regard to the king's coming and his return.

13, 24: The Greek reads: and left Hegemonides as governor in command from Ptolemais to Gerar.

1 The Treachery of Alcimus But after the space of three years, Judas and they that were with him understood that Demetrius the son of Seleucus had come with a great power and a navy by the haven of Tripolis, to places proper for his
2 purpose, | and had made himself master of the countries, against Antiochus and his general Lysias.
3 Now one Alcimus, who had been chief priest, but had wilfully defiled himself in the time of mingling with the heathens, seeing that there was no safety for him, nor access to the altar, |
4 came to king Demetrius in the year one hundred and fifty, presenting unto him a crown of gold and a palm, and besides these some boughs which seemed to belong to the temple. And that
5 day indeed he held his peace. | But having gotten a convenient time to further his madness, being called to counsel by Demetrius and asked what the Jews relied upon and what were their
6 counsels, | he answered: They among the Jews that are called Assideans, of whom Judas Machabeus is captain, nourish wars and raise seditions and will not suffer the realm to be in peace. |
7 For I also, being deprived of my ancestors' glory (I mean of 8 the high priesthood), have now come hither, | principally indeed out of fidelity to the king's interests, but in the next place also to provide for the good of my countrymen: for all our nation suffers much from the evil proceedings of those men. |
9 Wherefore, O king, now that you know all these things, take care, I beseech you, both of the country and of our nation,
10 according to your humanity which is known to all men: | for, as long as Judas lives, it is not possible that the state should be
11 quiet. | Now when this man had spoken to this effect, the rest also of the king's friends, who were enemies of Judas, incensed Demetrius against him.

12 Demetrius Sends Nicanor into Judea And forthwith he sent Nicanor, the commander over the elephants, governor into 13 Judea, | giving him in charge to take Judas himself and disperse all them that were with him and to make Alcimus the 14 high priest of the great temple. | Then the Gentiles who had fled out of Judea from Judas came to Nicanor by flocks, thinking the miseries and calamities of the Jews to be the welfare of 15 their affairs. | Now when the Jews heard of Nicanor's coming 14, 1-10: This is parallel to 1 Mc 7, 1-21.

14, 4: In the year one hundred and fifty: 162 B.C.

and that the nations were assembled against them, they cast earth upon their heads and made supplication to him who chose his people to keep them for ever and who protected his portion 16 by evident signs. | Then at the commandment of their captain, they forthwith removed from the place where they were and
17 went to the town of Dessau to meet them. | Now Simon, the brother of Judas, had joined battle with Nicanor, but was
18 frightened with the sudden coming of the adversaries. | Nevertheless, Nicanor hearing of the valor of Judas' companions and the greatness of courage with which they fought for their
19 country, was afraid to try the matter by the sword. | Wherefore he sent Posidonius and Theodotius and Matthias before to present and receive the right hands.

20 Nicanor's Pact of Friendship Accepted And when there had been a consultation thereupon and the captain had acquainted the multitude with it, they were all of one mind to 21 consent to covenants. | So they appointed a day upon which they might commune together by themselves; and seats were
22 brought out and set for each one. | But Judas ordered men to be ready in convenient places, lest some mischief might be suddenly practiced by the enemies: so they made an agreeable
23 conference. | And Nicanor abode in Jerusalem and did no wrong, but sent away the flocks of the multitudes that had been 24 gathered together. | And Judas was always dear to him from 25 the heart, and he was well affected to the man. | And he desired him to marry a wife and to have children. So he married. He lived quietly and they lived in common.
26 But Alcimus, seeing the love they had one to another, and the covenants, came to Demetrius and told him that Nicanor assented to the foreign interest, for that he meant to make
27 Judas, who was a traitor to the kingdom, his successor. | Then the king, being in a rage and provoked with this man's wicked accusations, wrote to Nicanor, signifying that he was greatly displeased with the covenant of friendship and that he commanded him nevertheless to send Machabeus prisoner in all
28 haste to Antioch. | When this was made known to him, Nicanor was in a consternation and took it grievously that he should make void the articles that were agreed upon, having received no injury from the man.

29 Nicanor Ordered to Break the Pact But because he 14, 23-31: This passage of the friendship between Nicanor and Judas is an expansion of a terse allusion to their friendship in 1 Mc 7, 28-29.

could not oppose the king, he watched an opportunity to 10 comply with the orders. | But when Machabeus perceived that Nicanor was more stern to him and that when they met together as usual he behaved himself in a rough manner, he sensed that this rough behavior came not of good; and he gathered together 11 a few of his men and hid himself from Nicanor. | But he, finding himself notably prevented by the man, came to the great and holy temple and commanded the priests that were offering 12 the accustomed sacrifices to deliver him the man. | And when they swore unto him that they knew not where the man was 13 whom he sought, he stretched out his hand to the temple | and swore, saying: Unless you deliver Judas prisoner to me, I will 14 lay this temple of God even with the ground and will beat down the altar and I will dedicate this temple to Bacchus. | And when he had spoken thus he departed. But the priests, stretching forth their hands to heaven, called upon him that was ever 15 the defender of their nation, saying in this manner: | You, O Lord of all things, who want nothing, were pleased that the 16 temple of your habitation should be among us. | Therefore now, O Lord, the Holy of all Holies, keep this house for ever undefiled, which was lately cleansed.

17 The Death of Razias Now Razias, one of the ancients of Jerusalem, a man that was a lover of the city and of good report and who for his affection was called the father of the 18 Jews, was accused to Nicanor. | Razias had for a long time, held fast his purpose of keeping himself pure in the Jews' religion and was ready to expose his body and life that he 19 might persevere therein. | So Nicanor, being willing to declare the hatred that he bore the Jews, sent five hundred soldiers 20 to take him. | For he thought by insnaring him to hurt the Jews 21 very much. | Now as the multitude sought to rush into his house and to break open the door and to set fire to it, when he was ready to be taken, he struck himself with his sword: | 22 choosing to die nobly rather than to fall into the hands of the 23 wicked and to suffer abuses unbecoming his noble birth. | But whereas through haste he missed of giving himself a sure wound, and the crowd was breaking into the doors, he ran boldly to the wall and manfully threw himself down to the 14, 41-46: Although Razias' suicidal act was objectively wrong, he apparently thought he was acting correctly by taking his life lest he fall into apostasy. The sacred author seems noncommittal on the matter of the suicidal act. This text has often been quoted erroneously as an argument in favor of suicide and, also erroneously, as proof of the non-inspiration of the book.

44 crowd. | But they quickly making room for his fall, he came
45 upon the midst of the neck. | And as he had yet breath in him, being inflamed in mind, he arose and while his blood ran down with a great stream and he was grievously wounded, he ran 46 through the crowd: and standing upon a steep rock, when he was now almost without blood, grasping his bowels with both hands, he cast them upon the throng, calling upon the Lord of life and spirit to restore these to him again. And so he departed this life.

1 The Vision of Judas and His Prayer But when Nicanor understood that Judas was in the places of Samaria, he purposed to set upon him with all violence on the sabbath day. |
2 And when the Jews that were constrained to follow him, said: Do not act so fiercely and barbarously, but give honor to the day that is sanctified and reverence him that beholds all things:
3 that unhappy man asked if there were a mighty One in heaven
4 that had commanded the sabbath day to be kept. | And when they answered: There is the living Lord himself in heaven, the mighty One, that commanded the seventh day to be kept, |
5 then he said: And I am mighty upon the earth and I command to take arms and to do the king's business. Nevertheless he prevailed not to accomplish his design.
6 So Nicanor, being puffed up with exceeding great pride, thought to set up a public monument of his victory over Judas.
7 | But Machabeus ever trusted with all hope that God would 8 help them. | And he exhorted his people not to fear the coming of the nations, but to remember the help they had before received from heaven, and now to hope for victory from the
9 Almighty. | And speaking to them out of the law and the prophets, and withal putting them in mind of the battles they
10 had fought before, he made them more cheerful. | Then after he had encouraged them, he showed withal the falsehood of the 11 Gentiles and their breach of oaths. | So he armed every one of them, not with defense of shield and spear, but with very good speeches and exhortations, and told them a dream worthy to be believed, whereby he rejoiced them all.
12 Now the vision was in this manner: Onias who had been high priest, a good and virtuous man, modest in his looks, gentle 14, 44: He came upon the midst of the neck: he fell in the open place.

14, 46: Notice his belief in the resurrection.
15, 8: The nations: the pagans.
15, 12-16: The dream exemplifies how the people of the Old Testament called upon their "saints" as Christians call upon theirs.

in his manners and graceful in his speech, and who from a child was exercised in virtues, holding up his hands, prayed for all 13 the people of the Jews. | After this, there appeared also another man, admirable for age and glory, and environed with
14 great beauty and majesty. | Then Onias answering, said: This is a lover of his brethren and of the people of Israel. This is he that prays much for the people and for all the holy city:
15 Jeremias, the prophet of God. | Whereupon Jeremias stretched forth his right hand and gave to Judas a sword of gold, saying:
16 | Take this holy sword, a gift from God, wherewith you shall overthrow the adversaries of my people Israel.

17 Thus being exhorted with the words of Judas, which were very good and proper to stir up the courage and strengthen the hearts of the young men, they resolved to fight and set upon them manfully: that valor might decide the matter, because the 18 holy city and the temple were in danger. | For their concern was less for their wives and children and for their brethren and kinsfolk: but their greatest and principal fear was for the holi-
19 ness of the temple. | And they also that were in the city had no little concern for them that were to be engaged in battle. |
20 And now when all expected what judgment would be given, and the enemies were at hand, and the army was set in array, the beasts and the horsemen ranged in convenient places, |
21 Machabeus, considering the coming of the multitude and the divers preparations of armor and the fierceness of the beasts, stretching out his hands to heaven, called upon the Lord who works wonders, who gives victory to them that are worthy, not according to the power of their arms, but according as it seems
22 good to him. | And in his prayer he said after this manner: You, O Lord, who did send your angel in the time of Ezechias
23 king of Juda, and did kill a hundred and eighty-five thousand of the army of Sennacherib, | send now also, O Lord of heaven, your good angel before us, for the fear and dread of the great-
24 ness of your arm: | that they may be afraid, who come with blasphemy against your holy people. And thus he concluded his prayer.

25 But Nicanor and they that were with him came forward, 26 with trumpets and songs. | But Judas and they that were with him encountered them, calling upon God by prayers.

27 Nicanor Defeated and Slain So, fighting with their hands but praying to the Lord with their hearts, they slew no less than five and thirty thousand, being greatly cheered with the presence

15, 22: A reference to 4 Kgs 19, 35.

28 of God. | And when the battle was over and they were returning with joy, they understood that Nicanor was slain in his 29 armor. | Then making a shout and a great noise, they blessed 30 the almighty Lord in their own language. | And Judas, who was altogether ready, in body and mind, to die for his countrymen, commanded that Nicanor's head and his hand with the 31 shoulder should be cut off and carried to Jerusalem. | And when he had arrived there, he called together his countrymen and the priests to the altar, and sent also for them that were 32 in the castle, | and showing them the head of Nicanor and the wicked hand which he had stretched out, with proud boasts, 33 against the holy house of the almighty God, | he commanded also that the tongue of the wicked Nicanor should be cut out and given by pieces to birds, and the hand of the furious man 34 to be hanged up over against the temple. | Then all blessed the Lord of heaven, saying: Blessed be he that has kept his own 35 place undefiled. | And he hung up Nicanor's head in the top of the castle, that it might be an evident and manifest sign of the help of God.

36 The Conclusion And they all ordained by a common decree, by no means to let this day pass without solemnity, | 37 but to celebrate the thirteenth day of the month of Adar, in the Syrian language called the day before Mardochias' day.
38 So these things being done with relation to Nicanor, and from that time the city being possessed by the Hebrews, I also 39 will here make an end of my narration. | Which if I have done well, and as it becomes the history, it is what I desired: but if 40 not so perfectly, it must be pardoned me. | For as it is hurtful to drink always wine or always water, but pleasant to use sometimes the one and sometimes the other: so if the speech be always nicely framed, it will not be grateful to the readers.
But here it shall be ended.

15, 30: Compare: "He bears the vaunter's head and hand, That threaten'd desolation to the land." (Part III of Handel's oratorio, Judas Maccabeus.)

15, 37: Syrian language: Aramaic language. Mardochias' day: this is another name for the feast of Purim, which was also celebrated on the fourteenth of Adar but only by the Jews who lived "in towns not walled . . ." (Est 9, 19). See Est 9, 21 n for the two different dates of celebration.
